THE approaching celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims will be of special interest, since descendants of the passengers on the "Mayflower" are now living, scattered throughout the Union. While they must be many hundred thousand in number, there are but few who have preserved the record of descent through ten generations. A common misapprehension suggests that one may not claim such descent, unless his original ancestor in the direct male line was on board; while, in fact, several of the passengers had daughters only. The lists following have been compiled to show the extent to which the children of the Mayflower company intermarried with other early Colonial families, and it is hoped that the names will arouse the interest of many who were not aware of their Mayflower descent. The lists are far from complete; and the co-operation of other Societies and descendants is invited in the effort to add to our knowledge. The migratory spirit was prevalent in the earliest days; so that even the children of passengers spread into territory now comprising four States other than Massachusetts, and their grandchildren into several more. The compiler will appreciate corrections and additional names from any source.
