FOREWORD

Marion County, Mississippi, was established December 9, 1811, and named for General Francis Marion of South Carolina, the "Swamp Fox" of Revolutionary days. The original limits were defined as "Beginning on the line of demarcation, where the fourth range of townships east of Pearl River intersects said line, thence west with said line of demarcation, to the sixty mile post east of the Mississippi, being the first range of townships west of Tansopiho, thence north on said line of townships to the Choctaw boundary line to the fourth range of townships east of Pearl River, thence with said range to the beginning". It was formed from parts of the old counties of Wayne, Franklin, and Amite. The counties of Pike and Lawrence, and parts of Covington, Lincoln, and Lamar were originally embraced within its limits.

John Ford, George H. Nixon, William Whitehead, Stephen Noble, and John Graves were commissioned to establish the seat of government. This was located on the east bank of Pearl River and called "Columbia". Pearl River with numerous tributaries including Holliday's creek, Little River, Lower Little River, Abolochitto River, Black Creek, and Ten Mile Creek, constitute the principal water courses.

David Dickson was the county's first state senator. Dougal McLaughlin, a native of South Carolina, and John Ford, represented the county in the Constitutional Convention in 1817. Early civil officers included Charles M. Norton, Reese Perkins, William Lott, Benjamin Lee, Isaac Brakefield, Henry Henninger, Benjamin Youngblood, David Ford, John H. Norton, John Regan, Ransom M. Collins, Justices of the Quorum; Simeon Duke, Ranger and Sheriff; Jephthah Duke, William Mellon, John Alexander, Treasurer; James Phillips, David Ford, William Roach, Hector McNeal, Surveyors; Jacob Tomlinson, William Graham, Robert Stacy, William Phillips, James Rawls, Thomas Collins, Hope H. Lenoir, Justices of the Peace; Hugh McGowan and William Spencer, Probate Judges.

The Circuit Clerk is custodian of the marriage records and appreciation is extended the present incumbent and his predecessor for their courtesy during the time this compilation was in progress. The date on which the license was issued is shown in some instances, but in most instances, the date listed is that on which the ceremony was performed or the date of the return.

This compilation was originally planned as a joint project in cooperation with Mrs. Boyd C. Edwards but family illness precluded her participation. Credit is due Mrs. Edwards for her cooperation and interest in this and other historical records and her contribution to the preservation of such records.
