PREFACE.

---

The settlement of Elizabethtown was the first within the bounds of New Jersey made by New England people. The Purchase of the land from the Indians was made by John Baily, Daniel Denton and Luke Watson of Jamaica, L. I., October 28, 1664, and the Patent granted by Gov. Nicolls to Capt. John Baker, John Ogden, John Baily, Luke Watson "and their associates," confirming the Indian deed, bears date December 1, 1664. John Ogden of Northampton had bought out Denton's interest, and Capt. John Baker of New York was probably allowed an interest in consideration of his services as interpreter. Gov. Nicolls when he signed this patent was no doubt ignorant of the deed from the Duke of York to Berkley and Carteret made on the 24th day of June previous. Dr. Hatfield in his history of Elizabeth, thinks it probable that a formal occupation was made upon the land between October and December 1664, and that occupation by actual settlers soon followed. Mr. William A. Whitehead, in his last edition of East Jersey under the Proprietors, gives proof that when Gov. Philip Carteret arrived in 1665, but four English-speaking families were to be found in New Jersey, pioneers of the Jamaica Colony. The patent granted by Governor Nicolls and the Indian purchase were relied upon in after years by the citizens as giving them a good title independent of that of Berkley and Carteret, but the latter grant was prior to the Nicolls patent and a vast amount of litigation was caused by these conflicting grants, lasting until the Revolutionary war put an end to it.

The first meeting house was of wood and of a very humble style of architecture. It was replaced by a new church in 1724, fifty-eight feet in length and forty-two feet in width. An addition in the rear of sixteen feet was made in 1766. On the night of January 25, 1780, a party of British troops and refugees, numbering nearly four hundred, crossed on the ice from Staten Island to Trembly's Point and were led by three Elizabethtown Tories by the nearest and most retired route to the town. Here they secured a few prisoners, plundered many of the inhabitants, burned the Court House and Meeting House, and retreated with haste by way of De Hart's Point without loss. Washington spoke of this event a day or two after as "the late misfortune and disgrace of Elizabeth Town." The erection of a new church was commenced in 1784, and completed in 1789. It forms a part of the present edifice, and was extended and improved many times before it reached its present dimensions.

Dr. Kempshall in his historical discourse, delivered January 25, 1880, in celebrating the Centennial Anniversary of the burning of the church says:

"The lot on which the house was built included the present burying-ground, and extended on the west to the river (so called), and contained about eight acres. When the church property was surveyed in 1766, the Trustees affirmed 'that the first purchasers and associates did give the aforesaid tract of land for the use of the Presbyterian Church, the record of which, 'on or about the year 1719, was either lost or destroyed.' This statement was admitted by the Town Committee, and has constituted the only title of record to the present church property for over a century and a half. The meeting-house occupied part of the site of the present church, but, as it was much smaller, it did not cover much, if any, more than the front half, the other half containing the graves of most of the first settlers. Graves were sometimes dug under the floor of the church, a custom familiar to the early settlers and made dear by association with the habits of their ancestors in England, so that nearly the whole area of this church in which we are now gathered, is probably occupied with the dust which awaits the archangel's trump, of the first two or three generations of the people of the town."

Some of the headstones, removed to give room for the additions to the church, were set in the walls, where they can still be seen. Among them are two old headstones bearing the date 1687, erected to the memory of two sons of the widow of Captain Lawrence, who married, as her second husband, Governor Philip Carteret. Dr. Kempshall says of the lands on which the church is built—

"It is probable that for a long time the church and adjoining burial-ground was not enclosed, or if at all, only in a rude way. In 1762, immediately after the settlement of Rev. Mr. Caldwell, it was voted by the Trustees that 'the burial-ground be enclosed with a close, cedar-board fence; also agreed that a neat pale-fence be built to enclose a court-yard in the front and south end of the church.'"

In this old churchyard lie the forefathers of Elizabeth, and of many whose names are known throughout the State. Here are buried Rev. Jonathan Dickinson, Dr. John McDowell, Rev. James Caldwell, Hon. Elias Boudinot, Robert Ogden, 1st, Gen. Matthias Ogden, Gov. Aaron Ogden, Dr. Nicholas Murray, Shepard Kollock and many others prominent in the history of the country. Many of the headstones are crumbling with age and their lettering will soon become illegible. It was with a view to preserve, as well as to place in a form more convenient to the historian and genealogist, these inscriptions, that the authors of this work caused copies to be carefully made and this book to be printed. The order of location, rather than that of the alphabet has been observed, believing that the "directions to the Sexton," made in 1766, that he is "carefully to observe in the burial of the Dead, to keep the Bodies of the Respective particular Families of the Congregation together as much as possibly can be done," has been generally observed and that relationship may in many cases be indicated by situation.

St. John's Church is nearly as ancient as the First Presbyterian. The corner stone of the first building was laid on St. John the Baptist's day, 1706, on ground given by Col. Richard Townley. This building was enlarged and re-consecrated in 1841, and in 1857 the corner stone of the present handsome structure was laid. In this church yard are buried many of the earliest inhabitants of the town, and copies of the inscriptions on the headstones and monuments were necessary to complete the work proposed by the authors.

She's pass'd the waves of trouble here,
We trust beyond the reach of fear ;
She hears no more the Gospel sound,
But lies here mouldering under

Her dust and ruins that remain,
The Saviour will unite again ;
Before the universe his power display,
At the great rising, glorious day.

All you who read this monument,
Behold here seal'd your last account ;
For 'tis decreed: to dust you must

Aged 25 years.The victory now is obtain'd ;
She's gone her dear Saviour to see ;
Her wishes she fully has gain'd—
She's now where she longed to be.The coffin, the shroud, and the grave
To her were no objects of dread,
On him who is mighty to save
Her soul was with confidence stay'd.

The tear of sorrow scarcely dry,
 Shed for a brother, only son,

Before is felt a heavier sigh
 And tears of deeper sorrow run.

Ah ! why is our last pillar broke !

Says a lone family, in grief—
 Tis God inflicts the painful stroke ;
 Begone ye clouds of unbelief.

The Lord is good ; we bless his name

 That we shall quickly meet again,

DONINGTON

died April 14th 1850:

Aged 8 years & 10 days

She faded, not like sunlight gone,
From out the west at even;
Her smile was yet the smile of morn,
'Twas quenched in morning's heaven.

Soft shadows wooed her youthful bloom

And folded it to rest;
But left the dwelling dark with gloom
Which late her presence blessed.

Thy way is in the sea and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known.

The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice

Our flesh shall rest in hope. It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor it is raised in glory

This corruptible must put on Incorruption

and this mortal shall put on immortality

Then shall be brought to pass the saying, Death is swallowed up in victory.

Clos'd are those eyes in endless night
No more to beam with fond delight,
Or with affection roll.
Eternal silence seals that tongue
Where sence and soft persuasion hung
To captivate the soul
that
Oh, she was all thought can paint
The mortal rising to the saint

In every deed of life
 At once the fatal arrows end
 the
 The fondest child kindest Friend
 And most endearing Wife
 Fair as the break of opening day
 Calm as the summers evening ray
 Truth, virtue, was her guide
 When Sister Spirits call'd her hence
 Obedience bow'd at life's expence
 She sigh'd, she sunk, she dy'd
 Immortal saint supremely bright
 Look down through skies of purest Light
 And bid afflictions cease
 Oh, smooth thy Husbands lonely bed
 In visions hover round his head
 And hush his mind to peace
