INTRODUCTION.

SMALL as this book is, it is yet much larger, and has called for much more labor and inquiry, than it was supposed would be necessary in order to complete a pretty full register of the descendants of Deacon John Bridge.

I have been helped in my work in unlooked-for ways, and to an unexpected extent. Now and then, too, I have been baffled in securing information which I had thought easily attainable. Grateful to many, whom I may not mention, for their aid and interest, I must particularly express my indebtedness to a few, for important services necessary to any approach towards completeness which I may have been able to make in some branches.

In the line of the second Matthew, helped by the energetic kindness of Mrs. E. I. Lovett, and of Miss Anne M. Kilham, we have a nearly complete genealogy. One great trouble has been in tracing the line of Nathaniel the Teacher. But even here the good services of Mrs. Waldo Adams, and of Mr. S. J. Bridge, have finally availed to make the tale, for the most part, tolerably perfect.

The study of the line of Joseph has been perplexing, and the results more defective than I had reason to hope. Many of his descendants have shown a hearty wish to help me, but no one could furnish much other desired matter than what facts each could tell about his own family.

Of this line I am indebted to Mr. Charles A. Bridge of Boston for his active interest in the work, which led him to suggest the issue of circulars of inquiry among the descendants of Deacon John Bridge, and for his kind offer to attend to the printing of these circulars. The Rev. William D. Bridge of New Haven, also of this line, seemed eager, by the issue of circulars and otherwise, to give me efficient aid.

Several members of this family early strayed widely from home. George, one of the grandsons, may have settled in Madison County, in Central New York. If so, a register of many of his posterity might be made. But that this was the fact was not evident enough, nor was the account of the New York family precise and full enough, to determine me to follow out his line.

Mr. Charles Bridge of Albany has furnished a large part of the matter concerning the children of Ebenezer, son of John, and has introduced me to a correspondence which has enabled us to trace most of that line. The interest of Mr. Guy Sylvester Bridge in his family line has been of good service to us both.

For an account of the posterity of Franklin Bridge, a grandson of Samuel, I am indebted to Mr. Edward C. Lowe of Water-ville, Me.

To Miss Hannah E. North I am very grateful for several items of information with regard to Samuel's descendants, and for the opportunity to examine the Bible owned by the first Matthew, and to study the results of large labors in England; though, as these labors seemed to me to lead to no certain conclusion, I have not thought it well to present any digest of them here.

Beside the important help he has rendered in tracing many of the descendants of Matthew and of John, I am indebted to Mr. Samuel J. Bridge for invaluable services, both direct and indirect, in my study of his own branch, — that of the descendants of Samuel. Indeed, a large part of the merit of this genealogy, whatever that merit may be, is due to him who moved me to undertake it, and who has continually been eager to do all in his power, by inquiry and otherwise, to render it full and free from imperfections.

WILLIAM F. BRIDGE.

FOSTER'S CROSSING, OHIO,
Jan., 1884.

I have sometimes had occasion to change the dates which I have found in books or manuscripts to make them correspond with transcripts from town records, or from the registers of family Bibles. I cannot, of course, hope that I have fallen into no errors in this matter of dates. I can only say that I have been as cautious and careful as possible.

THE

DEACON JOHN BRIDGE.

JOHN BRIDGE, whose descendants we are to trace, was born, we may with reason take for granted, in Essex County, England, about the year 1578.

His parentage seems undiscoverable. All that we know suggests or favors the conclusion that he was near of kin, cousin, or, perhaps, brother, of William Bridge, the steadfast and respected Nonconformist divine of Norwich, who was a prominent member of the Westminster Assembly, and author of discourses that are still read and prized.

John, undoubtedly, was a Franklin, a good representative of a class whose character is depicted by a writer of that time as "One whose outside is an ancient yeoman of England, though his inside may give arms with the best gentleman and never see the herald. He is lord paramount within himself; and, to end all, he cares not when his end comes. He needs not fear his audit, for his quietus is in Heaven."

That he was of a lineage respectable for character is clear, not only from what we know of himself, but from whatever mention we can find of those of his name in that generation. Conscientiousness, self-respect, and a special regard to religious obligation, seems to mark them all.

They were intelligent, sincere Puritans. And HE was a man deserving all honor. A man of the people, in earnest, without pretense, without putting himself forward, before he left England, he had won, by his integrity, energy, and intelligence, the confidence and regard of those of higher social rank; and, from the day he joined the colony in the New World, he was evidently a trusted and efficient leader.

He came to New England with the Braintree Company, or with the Hooker Company, as it was indifferently called. This company reached Mount Wollaston, and was assigned to Cambridge in 1632.

This was the year before that in which Hooker himself came. John was probably from Chelmsford, Braintree, or that neighborhood. Various circumstances lead to this conclusion. Among others, his intimacy, which seems to have been close, with Hooker and with Shepherd.

Hooker had not been here eight months, when, on May 14, 1634, many of the Newtown people asked leave of the General Court to look out for "enlargement or removal."

"Without understanding their plan," says Palfrey, "leave was granted." In the following September, Hooker, with others, proposed a removal to the Connecticut Valley. He urged, among other reasons, their poverty, their inability to support their minister, their being crowded, and the strong bent of spirit thither.

It seems not improbable that Hooker's dissatisfaction with his position at Cambridge, conceived so soon after his arrival here, was the occasion of John Bridge's urging Shepherd to come over, to which reference has been so often made; with the assurance, as Shepherd says, of finding a place in the colony for him.

However that may be, we know that after a previous unsuccessful attempt to leave England, Shepherd did reach our shores in Oct., 1635. And in the following June Hooker started with his large company for the west.

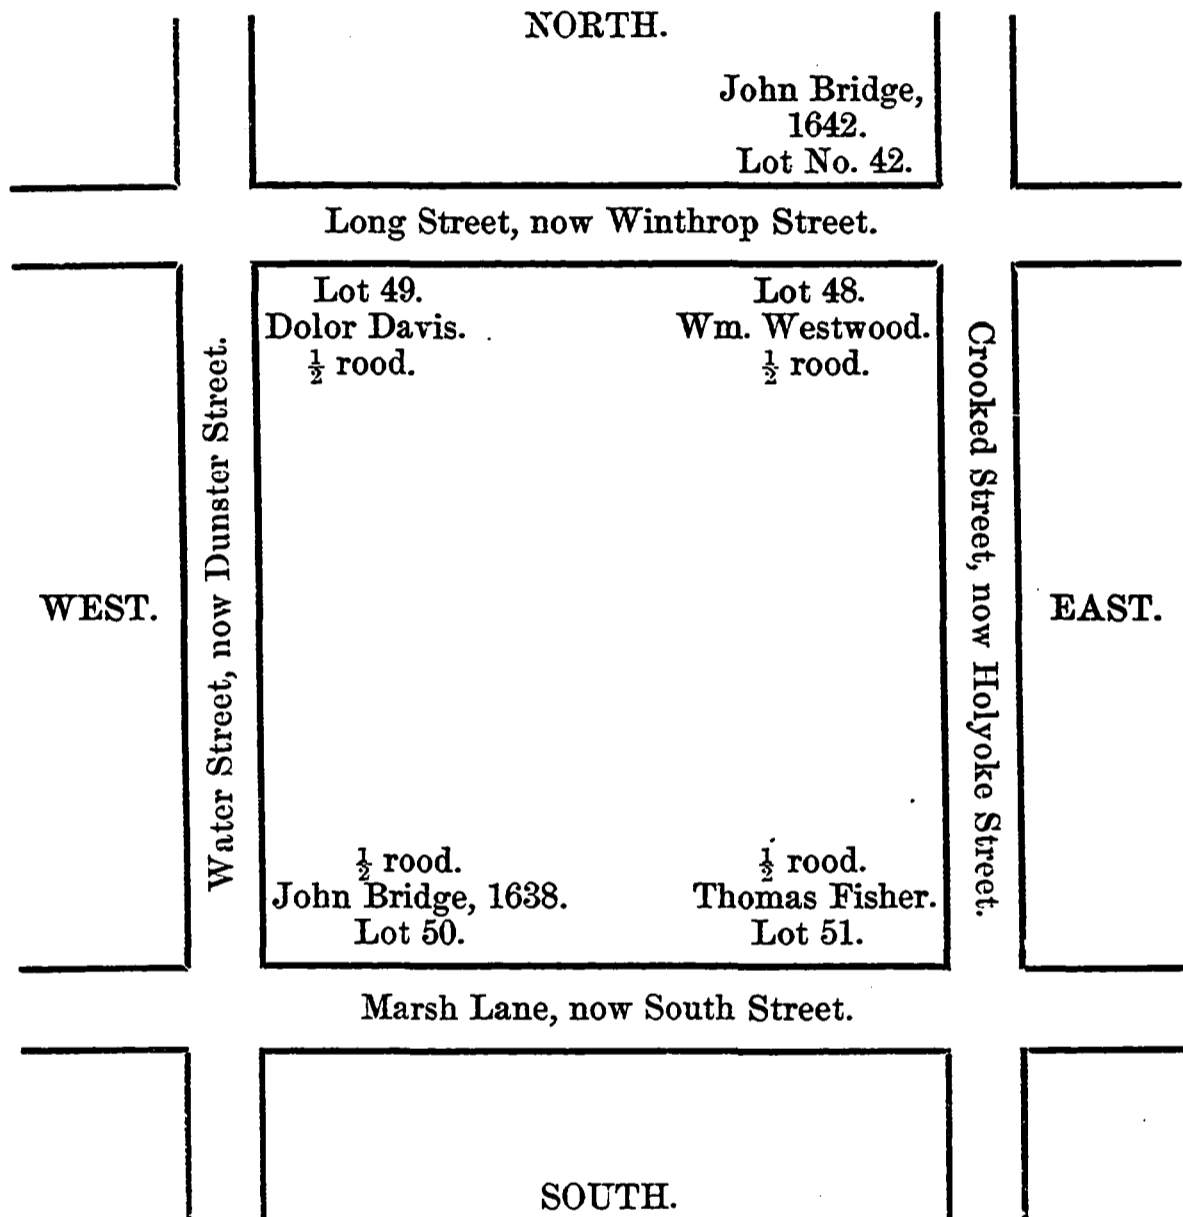

Hooker drew off with him to the banks of the Connecticut a large portion of the early settlers of Cambridge. Bridge, however, had evidently, from the first, determined to establish himself permanently in the New Towne. Accordingly, on the August after the June when the dissatisfied Cambridge men first asked leave to go elsewhere, one hundred acres of land on the west side of Charles River are granted to Symon Willard, seventy-five acres to John Bridge, and twenty-five to Dollard Davis.

And the next year, the Proprietor's Records tell of the grant of land just mentioned, and, beside, describe in the following manner his house-lot in connection with others.

"Grant to Dollard Davis, June 4, 1635 one house-lot of half a rood more or less; Water Street northwest John Bridg southwest, William Andrews northeast, William Westwood east."

I copy from Mr. Horace Davis's sketch of his ancestor, Dolor Davis, the above quotation. The place of John's first house at Cambridge is marked in the map which Mr. Paige has prefixed to his history of the town according to the plan herewith given. It will be observed that in the re-distribution of the lots in 1642, after the departure of Hooker and his company, John had disposed of his lot (50) and took Lot 42, on the northeast corner of Winthrop (Long) and of Holyoke (Crooked) Street.

But we have no reason to suppose John ever lived on Lot No. 42. On the contrary, about 1638, he owned a house and about twelve acres of land on Brattle Street, where was his permanent home. Mr. S. J. Bridge has ascertained, beyond a doubt on his part, that the Craigie House, Washington's Headquarters, the home of Longfellow, now stands on this land.

As his friend Shepherd, whom he had helped to draw from England, refused the solicitations of Hooker to follow that pioneer, so our ancestor was bound all the more to remain at Cambridge to be the constant assistant and supporter of his pastor and friend.

John Bridge was a man of "deeds, not words," so we have but little but the record of what he did, or was called to do, handed down by which to judge of him. But these things he was set to do, so numerous, so important for the service of the infant colony, prove him to have been of good common sense, of sound, roundabout judgment, of unbending integrity, and of an unwearied energy. He made these qualities serve for a liberal education and for a high descent.

And therefore it was because of these well trained and exercised faculties of his that he is made of use in all sorts of public service from the start.

The town is to be organized; he is put upon the first Board of "Townsmen," as its selectmen were then called, men to whom the general oversight of all town affairs was to be entrusted. And he continues so to serve for at least twelve years, almost consecutively, while the new office, peculiar to New England, and established in Cambridge, among the first towns to adopt it, is getting its work defined and is taking its character.

It was not till 1634 that ecclesiastical and civil affairs began to be regarded as belonging to separate provinces in the Colony. Naturally, — almost, or quite of necessity, — men of intelligent earnestness, who regarded their religious obligations their most important, their all-including, obligations, and who left a cherished home very reluctantly, and only at the call of an imperative duty, solely because they were hindered in their fidelity to those obligations, — such men, in the circumstances of the Puritan Fathers, would not conceive of the idea of a government for themselves apart from their church.

But very soon experience taught that some distinction must be made. Connected with the dawning of the idea of such a distinction was the plan adopted of sending representatives to a general court, which should have management of civil affairs. Hitherto, all freemen, that is, all church members, took direct part in the government. It was not till 1636 that representation was first roughly apportioned, allowing no representative to a town of less than ten freemen, one representative to twenty freemen or less, two to forty, and to no town more than three. And the next year, and for the three following years, John Bridge must find leisure from church and town affairs, for a time, to go to the infant Legislature, where he is immediately put upon committees of diverse kinds, to run town lines, to lay out lands, to do whatever seems most important for the forming State.

The church at New Towne is organized in 1635. He is chosen at its start its deacon, — chosen, that is, to the most honored office a layman could then hold, an office which implied its holder was recognized as a head man in the community not less than in the church. The church, indeed, was the community, or stood for it. In this Commonwealth, where church members were the only citizens to whom the franchises belonged, the officers of the church discharged very many of the duties of the magistrates even when the distinction between civil and ecclesiastical affairs had long been recognized. And they received a deference greater than the magistrates, as such, could ordinarily claim. All grants of lands, for example, were then certified by a committee consisting of ministers and deacons.

The school is started in 1636. In 1642, it is directed that, “according to the Order of Court for Townsmen to see to Education of Children, John Bridge shall take care of all families on the side of the highway his house is on.”

Thus, as townsman and statesman, and as one interested in the intellectual, moral, and religious welfare of the infant colony, our ancestor wrought his disinterested, modest, faithful, busy, honorable life into the life of the Commonwealth for more than thirty years. To bless his posterity, there is left on our early Colony State Papers the record of his useful activity in the varied important work bidden him to do. For his undoubted fidelity, let his posterity pronounce him, too, blessed, and honor his name by cherishing a like fidelity, and a like modest, hearty, intelligent, carefully-trained consecration of themselves to the common weal; that they may be ready in their lot, as he was in his, to do the efficient, beneficent service for which the State will ever have abundant occasion to call.

FIRST GENERATION.

(1) 1. JOHN BRIDGE came from England, a widower. His sister Elizabeth, wife of John Betts, whose house stood on the site of Dane Hall, may have come at the same time. John m. Nov. 30, 1658, his second wife, Mrs. Elizabeth, widow of Martin Saunders, and d. circa Sept., 1665.

His only children of whom we have any knowledge were two sons, who were born in England and came over with their father.

2. 1. Matthew (2).

3. 2. Thomas (3).

SECOND GENERATION.

(2) Matthew Bridge (2. 1), b. in England circa 1615, seems to have done, in good part, the service for Lexington which his father rendered to Cambridge.

Crowded as almost from the first the New Towne settlers felt themselves, with Charlestown, Boston, and Watertown pressing so close upon three sides of them, the Cambridge Proprietors soon looked for new lands toward their northwest.

As early as 1643, John Bridge cut grass on a lot he owned at Vine Brook, at Cambridge Farms, as Lexington was then called. These lots were bounded, we are told, by other earlier improved lands of his. This fact leads Mr. Hudson to suppose that even so early Matthew had gone to the Farms to live. But Mr. Paige's opinion seems more trustworthy, — that he lived, probably till about 1668, at the corner of Main and Brattle Streets in Cambridge, on land which he bought in 1657, and which he sold to Captain Pyam Blowers in 1672. At this last date, certainly, he had left it, as it was at that time occupied by Reuben Luxford.

At the time of his probable removal to Lexington, Matthew was one of the largest landholders of the precinct. As early as 1648, he owned at least four hundred acres there.

In 1683, he sold his father's homestead to John Marrett, and thus cut the last strong material tie that bound him to the old home. For fifteen or twenty years before that time, he had energetically served the new settlement. And when the town was organized in 1692, he helped in its organization, as, before, when the meeting-house was built, he contributed as largely as any to build that, — more largely than any but three.

RESIDENCE OF DEACON JOHN BRIDGE, CAMBRIDGE, 1638.

When the first parish tax was laid, we find the four leading taxpayers to have been Samuel Stone, William Munroe, Benjamin Muzzay, and Matthew Bridge.

It is noteworthy that the community at Cambridge was, from its general intelligence, for which it was distinguished, or on some other account, but little troubled by presumed cases of witchcraft; and that, in perhaps the only important instance of supposed possession, the victims were declared innocent. Two certificates to the Christian character of Winnefret Holman, and to her evident freedom from all signs of possession are presented, which we may suppose released her from her danger. These are now valuable witnesses of the good sense and intelligence of John Palfrey and of Matthew Bridge, who are prominent signers of the one, and of Anne (Danforth) Bridge, Elizabeth Bridge, and John Bridge, who signed the other.

In 1643, Matthew became a member of the Artillery Company. In the same year, he m. Anne, dau. of Nicholas and Elizabeth (Symmes) Danforth.

Nicholas Danforth, son of Thomas, and grandson of Thomas, father of a distinguished line, and himself an honored man, came from Framingham, County of Suffolk, Eng., in 1634. His wife, Elizabeth Symmes, d. at her English home on Feb. 22, 1629. She was the dau. of Rev. William Symmes, whose father, William, with his wife, suffered during Queen Mary's reign. Her brother, Rev. Zechariah Symmes, came over in 1634, and was settled in Charlestown. For these facts concerning Mrs. Danforth, I am indebted to the editors of a forthcoming book of the Danforth family, that all descendants of John Bridge must eagerly look for.

Anne Danforth was born circa 1620; was bap. Nov. 3, 1622, and d. Dec. 2, 1704. Matthew d. Dec. 28, 1700.

4. 1. John, b. June 15, 1645; d. in Boston, 1672.
5. 2. Anne, b. in 1646; m. June 4, 1668, Samuel, son of John and Grace Livermore of Watertown. March 10, 1681, John Livermore conveys by deed to his son Samuel, "as a recompense of that dutiful obedience that the said Samuel hath yielded to, and thereby hath been, through God's blessing, a comfort and a support to the said John and family," his homestead, 34 acres, with a dwelling-house, etc. Also 20 acres of woodland. See Bond's Watertown, Livermore, 20. Anne was ancestress of many distinguished persons, especially in the church.
6. 3. Martha, b. Jan. 14, 1649; d. Jan. 15, 1650.
7. 4. Matthew (4).
8. 5. Samuel, b. Feb. 17, 1653; d. Feb. 25, 1673.
9. 6. Thomas, b. June 1, 1655; d. March 28, 1673.

10. 7. Elizabeth, b. Aug. 17, 1659; m. Jan. 19, 1678, Captain Benjamin, son of Edward Garfield, jr., and of Rebecca, his first wife. See Bond, Garfield, 5. 17. From Elizabeth descended in the seventh generation James Abram Garfield, the late President. For the President's line of descent, see Appendix I. For Elizabeth's children, see Bond, pp. 232 seq., Benjamin, d. Nov. 28, 1717, and Elizabeth, m. her second husband Oct. 25, 1720, Daniel, son of Robert and Susanna (George) Harrington.

(3) Thomas Bridge (3. 2) was b. in England. He early engaged in business in Boston. He became a member of the Artillery Company in 1643, and was made freeman in 1648. He d., says Paige, before Nov. 28, 1654, but perhaps not till 1656, at about the same time with his wife. Her name was Dorcas. We can trace only one child to Thomas and Dorcas Bridge.

11. 1. Dorcas, b. Feb. 16, 1649. After the decease of her parents, she lived with her grandfather, John, who was her guardian. She m. Jan. 14, 1666, Captain Daniel, son of ruling elder Richard and Jane Champney. Daniel was b. March 9, 1645, and d. Nov. 19, 1691. Dorcas d. Feb. 7, 1684.

1. Dorcas, b. Aug. 22, 1667.
2. Daniel, b. Dec. 14, 1669.
3. Thomas, b. Sept. 12, 1673.
4. Noah, b. Sept. 27, 1677.
5. Downing, b. June 1, 1680; d. June 27, 1705.
6. Abigail, b. April 26, 1683.

Dorcas Champney m. May 6, 1690, Nicholas Bowes, whose son, Rev. Nicholas Bowes, of Bedford, m. Lucy, dau. of Rev. Thomas Hancock of Lexington. The dau. of Rev. Nicholas and Lucy (Hancock) Bowes, also named Lucy, m. Rev. Jonas Clark of Lexington, whose dau. Mary was wife of Rev. Henry Ware, sen., D.D. A grandson of Dr. Ware, and so a descendant of the first deacon of the Cambridge Church, and of its early ruling elder, — Rev. Edward Henry Hall, — is now pastor of the First Parish Church in Cambridge.

THIRD GENERATION.

(4) Matthew Bridge (7. 4) was b. in Cambridge, May 5, 1650. As the only surviving son, he inherited a large part of his father's estate, and he seems to have given himself to the service of his neighborhood with even more than his father's energy.

Beside serving the town of Lexington on its incorporation as its Selectman and its Clerk, and for many years as its Treasurer, he discharged his duty as a soldier in King Philip's War and in the Canadian Expedition of 1690. He was also a prominent member of the church.

He m., in 1687, Abigail, dau. of Joseph and Mary (Belcher) Russel of Cambridge, who was b. May 12, 1668, and d. Dec. 14, 1722. Matthew d. May 29, 1738. Joseph was the son of William and Martha Russell, and came with his parents from England. Mary was dau. of Jeremy and Mary (Lockwood) Belcher of Ipswich.

12. 1. Mary, b. June 19, 1688; m. circa 1714, Captain William Russell, who d. Nov. 25, 1731, æt. 46. Mary d. Dec. 31, 1716.

1. William, H. C. 1735, M.D., who left two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth, mentioned in their Aunt Martha's will.

13. 2. Anne, b. Sept. 12, 1691; m. March 22, 1720, Isaac, son of Abraham and Mary (Butterfield) Watson. They lived in Waltham. Isaac d. Feb. 27, 1741. Mary d. Aug. 19, 1718.

1. Abraham, b. Aug. 20, 1712.

2. Isaac, b. Feb. 18, 1714.

14. 3. Matthew (a).

15. 4. Abigail, b. April 1, 1696; m. in 1730, Benjamin, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Lawrence) Whitney of Marlborough. She was his second wife. Their children were:—

1. Abigail, b. May 13, 1731; m. Samuel Austin, a leading and patriotic citizen of Boston. She was his second wife, and d., a widow and childless, May, 1793.

2. Benjamin, b. May 9, 1732; d. March 22, 1751.

3. George, b. March 25, 1733; d. Dec. 26, 1751.

4. Samuel, b. Sept. 5, 1734. Descendants.

5. Anna, b. Oct. 27, 1736; m. William Bowes, Dec. 22, 1761; d. Jan. 2, 1762.

16. 5. Joseph (b).

17. 6. John (c).

18. 7. Elizabeth, b. Nov. 3, 1703; d. in Boston, Jan. 19, 1751.

19. 8. Samuel (d).

20. 9. Martha, b. Sept. 20, 1707; d. in Boston, April 20, 1752.

Elizabeth and Martha lived, after their father's decease, with their energetic and faithful sister Abigail, who, early deprived of her husband, continued his business with the success she deserved, and wisely and well conducted the education of her children. See "Account of Descendants of John and Elinor Whitney," and especially "Incidents in the Life of Samuel Whitney, and Account of his Descendants," by Henry Austin Whitney, Esq., which last is "privately printed."

Matthew Bridge is said to have divided his main farm of four hundred acres, which lay compactly, into four parts, of one hundred acres each, and, on the marriage of each son, he saw to the erection of a substantial dwelling-house of two stories, in the best style of the time, for the Home of the new family. These four houses are still standing "in a good state of preservation." Here the four brothers lived through their lives, in harmony, "provoking each other" only "to good works" of social and civil service. They were men of mark in the community, dividing among themselves a very large share of the town business.

FOURTH GENERATION.

(a) THE FAMILY OF MATTHEW BRIDGE.

Captain Matthew Bridge (14. 3), who was the oldest son of Matthew Bridge, jr., was b. in Lexington, March 1, 1694. "Gentleman," is his title in the records of his day. He, too, like his father, served his native town as Selectman, Town-Clerk, Assessor, and Treasurer, doing the duties of one or more of these offices almost every year from 1732 to 1749.

In 1751, he was set off, with his farm, to Waltham. We find an entry that in that year he "gave to the town of Waltham, £1 6s. 8d., in consideration of his congregating with them." He had bought in 1722, from the Bowman family, the large property at the corner of Forest and Trapelo Streets.

He m., March 22, 1720, Abigail, dau. of Nathaniel and Anne (Barnard) Bowman, and d. March 25, 1761. Abigail d. June 15, 1785, æt. 86. See Bond, p. 89.

1. 1. Matthew (1).

2. 2. Anne, b. Sept. 21, 1723; m. April 7, 1743, Asa Brooks of Concord.

1. Asa.

3. 3. Nathaniel (2)

4. Sarah, b. Sept. 30, 1728; m. April 4, 1753, Jonas, son of Jonas and Abigail (Comee) Pierce; she d. Sept. 17, 1772. Cf. Bond, p. 397.

1. Jonas, b. Feb. 18, 1759.
2. Asa, b. Jan. 25, 1762.
3. Thaddeus, b. May 10, 1764.
4. Mary, b. Feb. 11, 1767.
5. Anna, b. May 31, 1769.

FIFTH GENERATION.

(1) Rev. Matthew Bridge (1. 1) was b. July 18, 1721; H. C. 1741; ordained at Framingham, Feb. 19, 1746; m. in 1747, Anne, dan. of Rev. Daniel (H. C. 1717) and Anne (Foster) Perkins of West Bridgewater. She, after Matthew's decease, m. April 11, 1780, in Sudbury, Rev. Timothy Harrington of Lancaster, and d. in Framingham, May 12, 1805.

On his very ordination day began the discipline which set forth and helped develop his character. A protest against his ordination was made by members of his church to the council, because he did not, it was urged, believe in the Five Points of Calvin then held by so many Congregational Churches to belong to the very essence of Christianity. Underneath the protest lay, too, the feeling that the minister elect favored the opposition of a large part of his church members to the methods of the "Great Awakening," as the revival preaching started by Edwards and Whitfield was called.

The opposition grew, so that, the next spring, a new society was formed. It was doubtless owing, in large part, to the good sense of their minister, to his substantial merits, to his character, that this persistent opposition was finally overcome, — was overcome, notwithstanding the excellent qualities of mind and heart of the pastor of the dissentients; so that, after thirteen years, their society made up their mind to disband, and many of them returned to the welcome of the mother church.

And the quiet, persistent, straightforward holding on and holding out, in what seemed to him to be the path of duty, implied in the manner in which he met this first opposition, seems to have been characteristic of his whole life. He was not a great preacher. He was something better than that, — a good pastor, and an excellent man.

He was after the type of some of the best country ministers of his day, serviceable to his people as a shrewd adviser in their material concern; settling disputes, making wills, conveying property, doing the work of a chamber counsellor with the good will of a minister.

“Good himself, he wished everybody else so,” and thus, “because of his extremely benevolent feelings, he became much beloved by his people and esteemed by those of other towns.”

And, as is necessary to the energetic promoter of good will, there was the spirit of the Hero in him. On the breaking out of the war, he knew that where the encounter could not be avoided, save by the surrender of manhood, there was a place for the minister of peace even on the field of battle. He was one of the first chaplains to volunteer, and had his place assigned him by the side of Washington under the Great Elm at Cambridge. He bore so close a resemblance to the commander-in-chief, “that, upon horseback especially, it was difficult to tell them apart.”

“He was over six feet in height, with very black hair, that fell in curls over his coat collar. He had piercing black eyes and an erect form.” He had so fine a presence when a young man that, “when he brought his wife into the church on the first Sunday after his marriage, the congregation rose at one impulse, as an involuntary tribute to the striking dignity of this man and of this woman.”

And as he was first, or among the first, of his profession to offer his services to his country during the war, so he was one of the first martyrs of the contest. A disease contracted by camp exposure forced him home, to die, on the 2d of September, 1775.

It surely would not be amiss for Framingham to raise to his memory the monument which the town voted in 1779, and which it again contemplated in 1801.

5. 1. Matthew, b. Aug. 16, 1748; d. young.

6. 2. Anne, b. Sept. 11, 1749; d. young.

7. 3. Daniel (3).

8. 4. Sarah, b. July 9, 1753; m. May 27, 1781, by Rev. Josiah Bridge, Rev. David Kellogg, her father's successor in the Framingham parish. Dr. Kellogg was b. in Amherst, Nov. 10, 1755, son of Daniel and Esther (Smith) Kellogg. D. C. 1775. D.D. at Dart., 1824. A scholarly and excellent man. Ordained at Framingham, Jan. 10, 1781; d. Aug. 13, 1843. Sarah d. Feb. 14, 1826.

1. Mary, b. Feb. 25, 1782; m. July 19, 1801, John Ball Kittredge, M.D., who d. Feb. 29, 1848. Mary d. Aug., 1836. One daughter.

2. Sarah, b. Sept. 28, 1783; m. May 9, 1805, Dea. William Brown, jr., of Hollis Street Church, Boston, who was b. Aug. 7, 1780. See Bond, p. 138.

1. William Kellogg, b. July 8, 1806, M.D., D. C. 1829; m. (first wife) Eliza, dau. of the Nathaniel Hooper who m. for his second wife Sarah, dau. of Eleanor (Bridge) Ingersoll (9. 5. 2).
2. Charles Ingersoll, b. Sept. 26, 1813; d. March 29, 1840.
3. Henry I., b. Sept. 8, 1815; d. May 23, 1850; m.

Mary was b. July 1, 1734, and d. March 1, 1818. A copy of papers now before me, the main part of them originally furnished by the head of the Bartlet (Bartletot) family, now living in England, seems to trace clearly her descent from one at least of the followers of William the Conqueror. The descent is through Ensign Thomas Bartlett, Watertown, 1635, an original proprietor, whose youngest dau. Abial m. Deacon Jonathan Saunderson. Their son Edward was father of Mary (Saunderson) Fiske. See Bond, pp. 18 and 417.

Cornet Nathaniel was selectman in 1767 and afterwards. He was known by the title "Friend of Washington," whom "he used to entertain at his home while the army was in the neighborhood of Cambridge," — "A True Friend of Liberty."

“John Danforth was hit just in Lexington Street,
John Bridge at that lane where you cross Beaver Falls,”

“I took Bridge on my knee, but he said, ‘Don’t mind me :
Fill your horn from mine — let me lie where I be.
Our Fathers,’ says he, ‘that their Sons might be free,
Left their King on his Throne and came over the Sea;
And that man is a knave or a fool who, to save
His life, for a Minute would live like a Slave.’”

He was a trusted soldier and a wise adviser in the Committee of Safety. Afterwards, he did good service in civil life, was Selectman, had charge of the schools, and was in special favor as Justice of the Peace.

Josiah was ordained at East Sudbury, now Wayland, Nov. 4, 1761, and d. June 19, 1801. Graduating from college while still eighteen years of age, and called to the charge of a parish before he was twenty-two, "he soon distinguished himself." "Endowed with a strong mind and a sound judgment and being a good scholar he possessed eminent talents as a preacher." "Beside a good personal appearance he had a pleasantness, a solemnity and dignity in his voice, style, and address which seldom concentrate in any man."

"Wherever he went to preach, his appearance gave pleasure; he was heard with avidity, and his people were considered happy, and almost envied, in having such a minister. He presided at Councils with meekness and dignity. He was continually in request at ordinations and other public occasions. He preached an Election Sermon and a Convention Sermon, and read at the University the Dupleian Lecture. All these honors together were then very rarely conferred on one Minister."

"Among his brethren he was greatly beloved and esteemed. To the association of which he was a member, he was an unspeakable loss. Ministers, Churches, and Societies, involved in trouble, sought his advice and influence as Peacemaker and Judge." "He was enjoyed by all before him while they lived, and by all who were after him while he lived." "The praise of Bridge," says McKeen, fourteen years after his decease, "a goodly man and faithful, is still in all the Churches."

He, too, as were most of his profession in that generation, and as have been very many of his name, was earnestly interested in education. One of the first Academies started in Massachusetts, — institutions which did such eminently good work in the last century, — was that at Framingham. It was very prosperous. He was one of its original Trustees, and continued in its service as such till his decease.

FIFTH GENERATION.

(1) Edmund Bridge (2.2), b. Aug. 6, 1739. At the age of twenty-one he left his father's house to find a new place for himself in some unsettled region. He was drawn to Maine, — to that part of Pownalborough on the lower Kennebec now called Dresden. There he worked for three years, clearing the land and preparing for a home. He then returned to Lexington, and m. Sept. 6, 1764, his cousin Phoebe, dau. of Joseph and Thankful (Forbush) Bowman. She was b. May 7, 1747, and d. July 24, 1828.

The energy which impelled him also, as well as his ancestors of the first and second generations, to be a pioneer, soon made him conspicuous as a servant of the common weal. He was first made Clerk of the Town, then a Justice of the Peace, when, so to serve, gave quite large distinction. Then came on the quarrel with England, and he knew where to place himself and what to do. He was "active in sustaining the Revolutionary Government, and was put on the Committees of Safety and Correspondence."

Before peace was proclaimed, in 1782, he was made High Sheriff of Lincoln County, and served as such for more than thirty years. The office at that time conferred marked distinction. He d. Sept. 10, 1785.

He was, we are told, of middle height, compactly built, with an open, expressive countenance, showing kind benevolence. No man was more esteemed and beloved by all classes. Giving the careful heed of an exemplary parent to the education of his own children, he earnestly and judiciously sought to promote the intellectual, moral, and religious education of all the children in his neighborhood.

In North's History of Augusta, in Willis's Lawyers and Law Courts of Maine, and in the Appendix to Willis, giving sketches of this family by Hon. John H. Shepherd, are interesting accounts of himself and of his descendants.

His wife was tall and of large frame. She was an excellent woman, firm, energetic, and persevering, and doing her full part in exercising the large-hearted, almost unlimited, hospitality of the house. Twenty-five saddles, belonging to the different guests that they entertained, who had chanced to come together the evening before, she counted on one morning in her kitchen. Tallyrand and Louis Phillippe were among their foreign visitors. No American of distinction seems to have found his way to their neighborhood, whether drawn thither by the fame of their attractions or from other causes, who did not meet with a cordial reception from them and a home with them while he could stay.

15. 2. Martha, b. April, 1768; m. Colonel Arthur, son of Colonel William and Sarah (Noble) Lithgow. He was the first Sheriff of Kennebec County. "Popular, hospitable, genial." SIXTH GENERATION.

(6) Hon. James Bridge (14. 1), b. Sept. 21, 1765, H. C. 1787. He read law with Hon. Theophilus Parsons, along with his classmate and chum, John Quincy Adams. In 1790, he opened a law office in Hallowell. Circumstances favored "his conceded ability" and his energy, so that he early acquired a large and profitable practice. His quickness of parts, and his comparatively easy circumstances, were not allowed to be his excuse from persevering industry. He was tall and imposing in form, and an accomplished and graceful speaker.

In 1799, he was chosen as Representative to the Massachusetts Legislature. In 1800, he became Judge of Probate for Kennebec County. He was a member of the Executive Council in 1818, and a leading member of the Convention to revise the State Constitution in 1819.

His refined literary taste, his great industry, and his inflexible and firmly-rooted principles, joined to a commanding and attractive personal appearance, made him always prominent. He was a diligent reader, especially of theology, history, and classical English literature. Dr. Johnson was a special favorite. He used often to repeat the doctor's maxim, evidently regarding it as a fundamental principle, that, "to be happy at home is the ultimate end of all ambition."

I derive this account of Judge Bridge from North's History of Augusta. The interesting narrative in that book should be read in detail. The promised sketch of his life by his second son and namesake, to appear in the Encyclopedia of Biography, makes further account of him here superfluous.

APPENDIX I.

THE GARFIELD FAMILY.

The line of President Garfield's descent from Elizabeth (Bridge) Garfield (see Dea. John Bridge, 10.7) is as follows :—

I. Capt. Benjamin Garfield was the third son and fourth child of Edward and Rebecca Garfield. Edward was the son of Edward Garfield, who was b. in England in 1575. He came to this country with his son Edward, in company, probably, with Winthrop, in 1630. The two Edwards settled in Watertown, where the younger became Freeman in 1635, was Selectman in 1638, and at least twice after. Benjamin was b. in 1643. He was a helpful and respected citizen of his native town, serving her at least nine times as her Representative, and filling various other town offices. Elizabeth Bridge was his second wife, and mother of six of his eight children.

II. Their oldest son was Lieut. Thomas of Weston, b. Dec. 12, 1680. He m. Jan. 10, 1707, Mercy, dau. of Joshua and Elizabeth (Flagg) Bigelow. See Bond, Bigelow and Flagg, pp. 31 and 220. Mercy was b. in 1686, and d. Feb. 28, 1745. Thomas d. Feb. 4, 1752.

III. Their oldest son was Thomas, b. Feb., 1713 ; d. Jan. 3, 1774 ; m. Oct. 21, 1742, Rebecca, dau. of Dea. Samuel and Rebecca Johnson of Lunenburg, who was b. Nov. 2, 1719, and d. Feb. 3, 1763.

IV. Their oldest son was Solomon, who was b. July 18, 1743 ; m. Aug. 22, 1769, Sarah Stimpson of Sudbury, and settled in Westminster. They afterwards removed to Cherry Valley, Otsego County, New York.

V. Their oldest son Thomas, b. in 1775, m. Asenath Hill of Sharon, N.Y.

VI. They had Abram, b. Dec. 28, 1799, their third child. Abram m. Eliza, dau. of James and Mehitabel (Ingals) Ballou. She was fifth in descent from Maturin Ballou, a Huguenot, who, at the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, sought refuge in Cumberland, R.I. Her father removed his family from Richmond, N.H., to Worcester in Otsego County.

VII. James Abram Garfield was b. to Abram and Eliza (Ballou) Garfield, Nov. 19, 1831; Williams Col. 1856; LL.D.; admitted to the Bar, 1861; member of Ohio Senate, 1860, 1861; Representative to Congress from 1863 to 1880; Lieutenant-Colonel of Ohio Volunteers, Forty-Second Regiment, Sept. 19, 1861; Colonel of Ohio Volunteers, Forty-Second Regiment, Nov. 27, 1861; Brigadier-General, Jan. 11, 1862; Major-General, Sept. 19, 1862; chosen to U.S. Senate, 1880; President United States, 1881; d. Sept. 19, 1881.

He m. Nov. 11, 1838, Lucretia, dau. of Zebulon and Arabella (Mason) Rudolph.

6. Abram, b. Nov. 21, 1872.
7. Edward, b. Dec. 26, 1874; d. Oct. 25, 1876.

APPENDIX II.

THE LITHGOW FAMILY.

(1) Col. William Lithgow, the father of the husband of Martha (Bridge) Lithgow, see (d) Samuel Bridge, 15. 2, was the son of Robert Lithgow of Boston.

Robert was a Scotchman, who emigrated from Ireland, whither his ancestors had fled at the time of the Rebellion. He probably came to this country in one of the ships chartered by Robert Temple, with his son William, then about three years of age. He went from Boston, perhaps, to Temple's Settlement, near Merrymeeting Bay, at the mouth of the Kennebec.

William was b. circa 1715. He was early in command at Fort Richmond on the Kennebec. In Sept., 1754, Fort Halifax was established near the junction of the Sebasticot and Kennebec Rivers. Capt. Lithgow was put in command of it. He had at that time, he says, been in the service for twenty years. He was therefore attached to the Garrison of St. George's Fort in 1734, æt. 19.

At the organization of Lincoln County in 1760, he was made a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. This office he continued to hold through the Revolutionary period.

He was a cultivated and courteous gentleman, as well as an energetic and faithful officer. He d. Dec. 20, 1798. See North's Augusta, and especially the interesting memorial of him in the eighth volume of the Collections of the Maine Historical Society, Art. V., "Fort Halifax."

He m. before 1746, Sarah, dau. of Col. Arthur Noble of Georgetown, near the mouth of the Kennebec. Sarah was b. in 1725.

Col. Noble is said to have been b. in Enniskillen, Ulster, Ireland. He came to America, perhaps with, or certainly not many years after, Robert Lithgow. He was commissioned Lieutenant-Colonel of Col. Waldo's Regiment to be raised for the expedition to reduce Louisburg. That fort was the strongest on our continent. The French cruisers, whom it protected, were a sad annoyance to our fishing vessels.

Within fifty-six days, the Provinces raised forty-three hundred men for the reduction. Waldo was made Brigadier-General, and gave about a fourth of his command in charge to Col. Noble.

The fall of Louisburg, June 17, 1745, excited the fears of the French lest they should lose all Canada. They accordingly sent out from Brest, in the following year, the most powerful fleet that had been raised for North America. They intended with this fleet to retake Louisburg, then to capture Annapolis, to destroy Boston, and to lay waste as much as possible of the coast as it proceeded to the West Indies. But a tedious voyage of ninety days, a severe storm that destroyed many a ship, sickness, the lateness of the season, the death of the commander, followed by that of the vice-admiral, all conspired to force them to give up their plan of recapture.

In Nov., 1746, Gov. Shirley of Massachusetts, who had in charge the management of Nova Scotia, was induced to send out a thousand New England troops to quarter in Acadia, and so to harass the inhabitants that they should find it convenient, taking their families with them, to abandon the Province. This was nine years before the expulsion which is celebrated by Mr. Longfellow in his Evangeline.

That Col. Noble had done yeoman service in the taking of Louisburg in the previous year is shown otherwise, and by his appointment to lead this expedition in the heart of winter, for it was a peculiarly laborious and perilous enterprise.

He sailed in December, and conducted his little army by land, heroically and wisely, over ridges and through deep snows, along the border of the Bay of Fundy and of the basin of Minas, one hundred and fifty miles up from the entrance of the bay. The tides here are prodigious. Spring tides are of seventy feet height. "With the large volume of water from nineteen rivers, and the monstrous fall of the tide, the current at half tide is fearful. The great fall loosens any ice formed at the mouth of the rivers, and these ice floes grow continually heavier from the excessive cold, as they drive up and down the bay, for, by the time the wind has driven them down to the entrance of the ocean, the tide bears them back again." So no enemy was to be feared by sea, nor in their rear.

And the appearance of a foe by land from the North and Prince Edward's Island, through snow two or three feet deep on the level for more than a hundred miles, seemed as little to be feared, especially at the time of a driving storm that had lasted thirty hours.

But the attack came in this latter way, by land, and from Prince Edward's Island. On Jan. 31, 1747, Col. Noble was at Grand Pré with a detachment of five hundred men. At two o'clock in the morning, the officers' quarters were nearly all surrounded at the same time, the troops being quartered in houses scattered over a space of a mile and a quarter's length. Seventy were killed, sixty taken prisoners. Several were wounded. Noble's quarters were the first attacked. He had received two wounds, but, after that, he returned three times the enemy's fire, in his shirt, before he was shot dead. Bravery and self-possession characterized his death, as fidelity and resolute perseverance and endurance had marked his life.

See, for an account of this "heroic" man, "whose history has been neglected," Collections of the Maine Historical Society, Vol. VIII., Art. II.

THIRD GENERATION

FROM COL. WILLIAM LITHGOW.

(4) Washington Lithgow was b. in Puerto Plata, July 4, 1840. In 1865, he, then living in Charlestown, Mass., was chosen to serve on the School Committee. Through the war, he had done, young as he was, efficient service to the country. In 1880, he was President of the Republican State Convention of New Jersey, has been Consul-General from Santo Domingo at New York, and Vice-Consul of the United States in Puerto Plata. He is now Consul-General of Hayti in Puerto Plata. With his brother William, he owns one of the largest central sugar factories in the world, having the capacity of eight thousand tons. He owns also the first railway built on the island.

He m. in Charlestown, Mass., June 17, 1863, Ellen Prentiss Pierce of Andover.

19. 4. Mary, b. Nov. 12, 1878.

(5) Frederic Lithgow (10. 4), b. April 10, 1842. When the Dominicans rose against the Spanish rule, his sympathies were with them in their desire for independence. He enlisted in the country's service as a volunteer. Fidelity and energy soon raised him to a Colonel's rank. Thence he was passed to the honor of General of Division, the highest office in the Dominican Army. He has also been Minister of Foreign Affairs, and for years has been Military and Civil Governor of the District of Puerto Plata. In 1880, he was nominated for President of Santo Domingo, but declined the honor. He has always been a leader in the Liberal and Reform Party. He m. Sofia Arzeno.

20. 1. Maria Altagracia, b. April 12, 1876.

21. 2. Ana Gertrudes, b. April 7, 1880; d. Dec. 8, 1880.

- 27. 6. Pablo, b. June 28, 1880.

(7) William Lithgow (13. 7), b. March 24, 1847. At his father's death, though he was only twenty-one years old, William was appointed Vice-Consul of U.S. This place he has continued to hold except for two years. His home, as well as the Consulate, was always open, during the frequent revolutions incident to the forming republic, as an asylum to the proscribed. At the risk of his life he has saved many eminent men by the protection of the American flag. He organized the First National Bank of Santo Domingo, and has continued from the first its President. For three years he was Judge of the Court of Commerce. He is the partner of his brother Washington in their very extensive sugar works.

He m., I., March 24, 1847, Ana Luisa Allonzo, who d. July 26, 1879; m., II., May 27, 1882, Amelia Arzeno.
