Plate No. VI. Northern Circumpolar Map for Each Month of the year. Hartford, Published by F.J. Huntington 1835. Entered according to act of Congress Sept^{r} 1st 1832 by F.J. Huntington of the State of Connecticut.

Scale of magnitude: 8 pointed star - 1; 6 pointed star - 2; 4 pointed star - 3; 3 pointed star - 4; 5 pointed star - 5; + sign - 6; closely dotted area - Cl^{r}; shaded area - Neb.

In May of 1850 Nathan H. and Peace Bottum visited his sister Caroline Spencer and her family in Lockport, New York. The following January he wrote her a long delayed letter full of family news. He closed with, "Mrs. B. joins me in sending love to all our Lockport friends, especially to your little daughters, whose presence contributed not a little to make our short visit to L so very pleasant. I shall not forget that pleasant walk with them across the meadow. A letter from the oldest would be very acceptable." Among the family treasures is an 18 page textbook, yellowed, water-stained, mended and with ragged edges, inscribed with the name of "the oldest",

Abby E. Spencer, Lockport, March 30, 1851

As the subject of the book is one that was dear to Nathan, it is easy to suppose that, during their walk and in an exchange of letters, uncle and niece had talked about astronomy and that he had sent her the book for her 12th birthday. The book contains eight large plates, or maps, of the heavens and, on the heavy paper cover, the title and authority - ATLAS, designed to illustrate the GEOGRAPHY OF THE HEAVENS, BY Elijah H. Burritt. A New Edition, Revised and Corrected, by Hiram Mattison, professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy in the Fally Seminary, author of Primary Astronomy, Elementary Astronomy, Astronomical Maps, Etc., Etc. New York: Huntington and Savage, and Mason and Law, 216 Pearl Street. H.W. Derby and Company, Cincinnati. Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1850, by Huntington & Savage in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

PREFACE

A family history which limits itself to an accurate record of dates and the names of people and places is useful but not very interesting. In this book about the Bottum family we have tried to attract the attention of the present generation to an appreciation of some of the forgotten but permanent things in their heritage. We have tried to fit our ancestors into the history of their times; to find the people behind the names and the dates, what they looked like and what qualities of character they possessed; and to learn something about the places where they settled. At the same time we have been careful to obtain as full and accurate a record as possible of available genealogical facts of all branches of the family down to the latest members. Fortunately, this family has long had a sense of continuity and some of them in each generation over the last one hundred and fifty years have felt an obligation to record it.

On June 18, 1813, while a student at Middlebury Academy in Middlebury, Vermont, young Nathan Huntington[5] Bottum [#14] began writing a journal whose final entry was made at some time after November of 1813. His first object in writing the journal, he stated, was to remember his parentage and to set down, as near as he was able, the origins of his father's family, together with their names, their ages &c. This he did, going back to his great grandfather who > " . . . lived in Norwich, Connecticut when the country was new. His name was Daniel Long Bottum or Long Botham, and my grandfather and his family continued to write their names in this way till about the time they removed to Shaftsbury, Vermont which was in the year of our Lord 1768. Since that time the first syllable of the surname has been omitted."

He then recorded the names and dates of the descendants of his grandparents, Elijah [#6] and Dolly Bottum. Of his father, Simon Bottum [#9], he wrote,

> "My father taught his children how to work on the farm as soon as they were old enough, but he never did this to the neglect of sending them to school. He was foremost in supporting schools and all his children have felt the happy effects of his generosity in obtaining able teachers and in sending us to school."

He filled many pages telling of his life as a child and as he grew up with his brothers and sisters, of his hopes, desires, failures and successes, and of the agonizing experience of his conversion. At Middlebury his studies were Astronomy, Logic and Geography. He wrote,

> "In the former I took peculiar satisfaction and enjoyment. To > become acquainted with the various causes of the phenomna which nature exhibits to our view; to contemplate the beauty, order and harmony of the laws by which the planetary system is regulated; to know with a degree of certainty the annual and diurnal motions of the different planets, their distance from us, their dimensions, the number and motions of the satellites which revolve around them; . . . afford pleasing and innocent entertainment for the rational mind. The study of astronomy serves to elevate & ennoble the mind of man and raise his thought to the contemplation of a Supreme Being, who is the author and governor of all. Surely, 'an undevout astronomer is mad.' . . . 'The proper study of mankind is man', and logic teaches us to become acquainted with the extent and capacity of the human mind, to observe the progress of our knowledge from our earliest perceptions until we arrive at reason, the great boundary by which man is distinguished from the other creatures of animal creation."

The journal ends with an expression of wisdom which many modern educators seem to overlook.

> "It (logic) also shows the operations of the understanding in its search after truth, & by what means these operations may be properly exerted & employed with advantage in arriving at truth & detecting error. To excite genius when it is wanting or to instruct in originating new ideas, is not the province of any science; but to direct genius into its proper channel, prune it of its excresences and to aid the understanding in the exercise of its remembering and reasoning faculties on objects, is worthy of much care, study and observation and by these, no doubt, the capacities of the mind may be increased and human reason carried on to a degree of perfection."

This is part of the heritage of the Bottum descendants of today. May it challenge us when sentimentality seeks to dictate! Seventy-five years after Nathan H. Bottum had written his journal, a grandson and a great-nephew collaborated for several years in an effort to compile a history of the Bottum family. Frank M.[7] Bottum [#22-ii] was a lawyer in Rochester, N.Y. His lineage is recorded in Munsell's American Ancestry, Vol. 29. Calvin Huntington[7] Bottum [#26-ii] was a banker in Lincoln, Nebraska. They did research on the descendants of Elijah[3] (Daniel[2&1]) Longbottom, their ancestor, and also obtained data from descendants of James[2], John[2], and David[2] Longbottom. Theirs was an unselfish labor for neither left children. They accumulated a great deal of material but never published a book. Their work, with other records and original documents of the Vermont branch of the family, are now in the possession of Ruth Barrett Lacy.

Before and after the work of Frank and Calvin Bottum, other descendants of Elijah Bottum, the pioneer from Norwich, Connecticut to Shaftsbury, Vermont in 1767, preserved family records of various kinds through the years. By the early 1900's, most of these had come into the hands of Norman Dunlap[8] Bottum [#46] of Williamstown, Massachusetts, great-grandson of Nathan H. Bottum. He became interested and compiled an orderly outline of the lineages of the Vermont Bottum families.

In the 1930's Theodore Perrin[7] Bottum of Hartford, Connecticut, great-grandson of Daniel[4] Bottum [#10], started work on a Bottum genealogy. After compiling a great deal of data on other branches of the family, especially the descendants of Daniel[3] (Daniel [2&1]), his ancestor, and of David[2] Longbottom, he became acquainted with Norman D. Bottum and visited him in Williamstown. They exchanged their material and Theodore had his collection typed. A few members of his family received a copy and he gave a copy to the Connecticut State Library and one to Norman. The New York City Public Library had a microfilm made.

In the late 1940's, intrigued by old family letters of my great-grandmother, Caroline (Bottum) Spencer, many of them having been written by her brother, Nathan H. Bottum, and by other members of the Vermont families, I began working with Theodore P. Bottum, searching out lost lines and bringing others up to date. He visualized a properly published book and I worked with this in view. In 1954 Theodore, at age 80, died. I returned to teaching school and to writing a book about my husband's mother's family (Cleland Cousins, published in 1962) and the Bottum book rested for 10 years. About this time I had the good fortune to find my distant cousin, Ruth Barrett Lacy of Ithaca, New York, a great-great granddaughter of Nathan H. Bottum, who had inherited the Vermont treasure-trove of Bottum documents from her uncle, Norman D. Bottum. This put new life into my desire to finish the book, especially when Ruth's interest went beyond lending her material to actively participating by doing historical research and writing much of the biographical and historical portions of the book. Her sense of history and her real genius in getting a broad view of the various related families and in bringing them into focus with each other and with the history of their times have been most valuable contributions.

As this book is not strictly a Bottum genealogy but a history of the descendants of Daniel and Elizabeth (Lamb) Longbottom of Norwich, Connecticut, the maternal lines have been extended in many instances to considerable length. The work of compiling the book has led from the dry bones of official records and documented sources to correspondence and meeting with many of today's Bottum kin. Their interested response to appeals for accurate family data has been rewarding and gratifying. Their contributions have brought the book up to date and they all have our thanks.

Finally, I want to acknowledge the help given me by my family - my husband Glenn Oliver, who never complains when vacations always end at court houses and strange doors, and our son and publisher Kelly Oliver, who has given encouragement and unmeasured time and talent.

So we offer you the fruit of the labor and dedication of all those of the past five generations who have gathered, preserved and compiled for posterity a true story of this historic American family. We hope that in reading it you will experience, to some degree, the pleasure which has been ours in bringing it to you.

A NOTE ON NUMBERING AND ARRANGEMENT

The book is divided into nine parts. Part I contains introductory chapters and the record of Daniel[1] Longbottom [#1]. Parts II, III, IV, and V are devoted, respectively, to the four sons of Daniel[1] Longbottom who had male grandsons: Daniel[2] [#2]; James[2] [#3]; John[2] [#4]; and David[2] [#5]. The records of daughters are found in the same chapters in which they are listed or, in some instances, in Part VI which contains chapters on some of the more closely related families. Part VII is devoted to several interested, but so far unrelated, Longbottom and Bottom families. Part VIII contains addenda and errata. Any contribution to this Part will be welcomed. Part IX is a comprehensive index of names.

The numbering system is very easy to understand and to follow. It provides the reader with a device by which ancestors and descendants may be located readily in the book without constant reference to the index. The slightly elevated number immediately following the given name of a person indicates his generation in America. Each child in every family is given a lower case Roman number to designate his place in the individual family. Each child whose line is carried forward is given an Arabic number before his name in the left hand margin which remains his alone throughout the book within his particular family name. Further information about him may be located by his number, indented, in the chapter devoted to his generation in the "Part" of the book in which his name appears as a child. The numbering of grandchildren and great grandchildren is self-explanatory. Some families in Parts VI and VII have a slightly different type of numbering for obvious reasons.

Throughout the body of the book a cross reference of names assists the reader in placing individuals. A number enclosed in brackets refers to the number given each child whose line is carried forward. These numbers refer to the Bottum name unless (a) a different name is in the bracket with the number or the bracketed number directly follows a different surname, or unless (b) the bracketed number is found in material on a related family. In these cases the reference is obvious.

A NOTE ON REFERENCES

Many of the documents treasured through the past 150 years by the Vermont branch of the family, now mostly in the possession of Ruth Barrett Lacy, other old family papers, and findings of recent research have been copied and incorporated in what we have called the Bottum Collection. This book of 139 typewritten pages was indexed for reference while writing the Bottum (Longbottom) Family Album. Copies have been given to the DAR National Library and the DAC National Library, both in Washington, D.C.; the Syracuse Public Library, Syracuse, New York; the Connecticut State Library, Hartford, Connecticut; the Bennington Historical Museum Library, Bennington, Vermont; and the Newberry Library, Chicago, Illinois.

The location or owner of each document and the location or source of abstracted data are noted in the Bottum Collection. For the most part the old family records and documents are copied in full. Abstracts only are given of records from research - court houses, offices of town clerks, federal and state census, tombstones, the Canadian research, published sources, etc. As much of the detail in this collected material has not been used in the Bottum (Longbottom) Family Album it was thought that it might be a valuable aid to researchers working on collateral lines as well as an interesting reference book in connection with the Album.

Theodore Perrin Bottum's manuscript, Longbottom-Bottum Genealogy, was the springboard of our enterprise, providing much early data and pointing out places for further research. His references to Connecticut vital records were checked in most instances and proved accurate with few exceptions. Many who had sent him family records are now deceased. Descendants, if they could be located, have brought their records up-to-date. Many lines which he had been unable to pick up have been researched and included. Sources for this data are supplied or are self-evident. References to his work is given under the abbreviated "T.P.B.'s MS", the paging being that of the copy lent to R.D.O. by his granddaughter, Luella Mae (Bottom) Raymond, presumably the same paging as that of the copy given to the Connecticut State Library.

It would take a miracle to compile without errors a genealogy which includes so many generations and so many allied families and which covers the length and breadth of the country. We beg your indulgence and trust that the mistakes you find are minor ones and few in number.

CHAPTER I

THEIR PLACE IN AMERICAN HISTORY

Where does the Bottum (Longbottom) family fit into the history of the New World? Dates by themselves mean little unless they illumine human events. As an instance, the year 1660 has no significance in this story until it is realized that James Longbottom in that year was buying land of an Indian chief; asking confirmation of the deed from the widow of another chief; and from the only white man in the area, an Indian trader, asking help of the twenty year old Rhode Island Colony in pacifying the area and settling the Westerly lands; coping with wolves and Indians; and finally having to give up the settlement and return to Newport during the war with King Philip, the Indian chief who had united all the New England Indians against the colonists.

As early as 1607 the French had attempted to establish colonies in Canada, and the Spanish in Florida. Three ships had brought Englishmen to Jamestown in Virginia and other Englishmen had failed to endure the winters of Maine. Another winter colony there on the Kennebec in 1616 had also failed, but they had shown that men could survive there. In 1620 the Pilgrims had returned to England from Leyden, Holland in order to take ship for the New World. Of the 102 who embarked on the Mayflower, half died the first winter. Of the 18 women who came only 5 survived it. Soon after the settlement of Plymouth the Dutch established a trading post at the mouth of the Hudson River. In 1630 the Winthrop fleet of 10 ships arrived at Salem, Massachusetts where there were at that time only 10 families, and in the decade that followed there came a flood of 1500-1700 settlers from England.

The rock-bound coast impelled the expanding numbers of colonists to sail around Cape Cod to the more fertile coasts of southern New England, to Long Island, and up the Connecticut River. The first Rhode Island settlement was made in 1636 by Roger Williams who had been expelled from Massachusetts because of his liberal beliefs. The first white man to establish a trading post in Westerly, Rhode Island was Robert Stanton in 1649. Ten years later Westerly, Rhode Island and Norwich, Connecticut, twenty miles away, were being settled by our Longbottom and Huntington ancestors.

LONGBOTTOM ORIGINS

The Longbottom name appears in three areas of New England about 1660. It is a name that Englishmen readily identify as characteristic of the north of England. The bitter civil war in England had ended by this time with the death of Cromwell, but many Englishmen had escaped the repression of his regime by taking ship for the New World.

In 1665 Jacob Longbottom was one of the first settlers in Setauket on the north shore of Long Island, an area then under the protection of Connecticut. Two years later the name of Joseph Longbottom, his brother or his son, appears there, and in 1859 Jacob's daughter Joanna arrives with her husband Thomas Smith.

There was a Thomas Longbottom listed as a resident of Salem, Massachusetts in 1662/3 [Essex Instutute, Vol. 40, p. 275] and he is also recorded as a debtor there in 1671 [Probate Records of Essex Co., Vol. 2].

James Longbottom of Newport, Rhode Island bought land in nearby Westerly in 1660, which was sold in 1694 and 1714 by Daniel Longbottom of Norwich, Connecticut twenty miles away where he, our first proven Longbottom ancestor, had first appeared in 1690. These land transactions suggest that James was the father of Daniel. No proof of relationship to the Longbottoms of Setauket or Salem has been found, but it cannot be ruled out since Setauket was only sixty miles by water from Norwich and since a Thomas Longbottom of the next generation is found in Norwich, who is not the son of Daniel and whose relationship to him, if any, is unknown.

LONGBOTTOMS OF SETAUKET, TOWN OF BROOKHAVEN, LONG ISLAND

The first white men to come to the shores of Long Island were with Henry Hudson on 1609. Brooklyn was settled by the Dutch in 1636, and the first settlements on the eastern end of the island were made in 1640 at Southhampton and Southold. (The Halsey House, built in 1648, is still preserved at Southampton with its shingles so weatherbeaten that they are V-shaped, not unlike rows of hanging icicles.) In 1650 the island was divided, with the Dutch having control of the western half and the English the eastern half. These English settlers were from the Boston area, glad to escape the severity of the Puritan regime and to find more fertile lands along the coast of the southern part of New England.

Brookhaven is the large township that straddles the central part of Long Island - 15 miles from shore to shore. Its 250 square miles include 70 square miles of bays, 24 miles of ocean shore line on the south and 19 miles of shore line on the Sound in the north. Setauket, where the Longbottoms were first settlers in 1655, is on the north shore and is named for the Setatcoet Indians whose people had lived there for 3000 years. Six white men, scouting for the location of a new settlement, bought 30 square miles of land there on April 14, 1655 from 14 Indians who signed the deed with their marks. The purchase price was 10 coats, 12 hoes, 12 hatchets, 50 muxes (axes?), 100 needles, 6 kettles, 10 fathoms of wampum, 7 chests of powder, a pair of child's stockings, 10 pounds of lead, and 1 dozen knives - not the bargain that the island of Manhattan was.

That same year a group of 55 settlers arrived in Setauket, mostly from the Boston area, among whom were Jacob Longbottom and Henry Perrin who later married Jacob's widow, Hannah. In 1657 the list of residents includes the name of Joseph Longbottom. Jacob's children are named in Henry Perrin's will, made in 1671 and probated in 1674, in which he leaves his water mill and land to his "sons-in-law" (step-sons), Joseph and Jacob, and names their brother Jonathan and their sisters Joanna Longbottom Smith and Judith, and his own daughter Hannah Perrin, saying that all three women are to go to the mill "tole free" (no charge).

Joanna Longbottom had married Thomas Smith in 1637/8 and they had come to Setauket in 1659 with his father Arthur Smith four years after the arrival there of her parents. Thomas was a wheelwright, or black-smith, and is listed as a proprietor in Brookhaven. His will also names his wife as the daughter of Jacob and Hannah Longbottom of Setauket. The place of their marriage is unknown but its date would indicate that Jacob and Hannah must have been born in England before 1600. A daughter of Robert Ackerly married Jacob Longbottom's son Jacob. Robert Ackerly appears in Southold in 1651 and in Setauket in 1657 where he owned much land.

The name appears many times in this area, usually spelled Longbottom, but also as Longbothem, Longbottomes, and Longboton. The "old Longbottom home" in Setauket is known as the Seabury house. It was built about 1760 and is located just south of the village of Stony Brook which adjoins Setauket on the west. It is a large house on a high knoll surrounded by trees, and is across from the Hawkins-Mount house which was the home of the artist, William Sidney Mount. Mrs. Seabury was Mr. Mount's sister. It was once a part of a large farm and, at one time, pianos were manufactured in the big barn on the property. It is on the south side of the "T" intersection where Rt. 25A (the Post Road coming from New York City, also called the Long Hill Road) makes a right turn to the east.

There is a private "Longbothum" graveyard on the south side of Rt. 25 (Middle County Road) at nearby Selden, and Longbothum graves are found in Coram village cemetery and in the Caroline Episcopal Churchyard in Setauket. This is the oldest church still standing on Long Island, having been built in 1729. The dates on the gravestones are in the 1700's.

There are more than 35 references to the Longbothum family in Brookhaven Town Records, Vol. 1, 1662-1679, 1670-1756, found in the Riverhead Historical Museum at Riverhead, the county seat of Suffolk County. The earliest wills in Riverhead begin in 1787. Records before that are filed in New York City. Burial records are found in Bayshore, which is the location of the Brookhaven town clerk's office. Another source is Pelletreau's Early Long Island Wills, Suffolk County, 1691-1703.

Setauket is some sixty miles by water from Norwich, Connecticut where our first proven ancestor, Daniel Longbottom, lived. It should be noted that in 1659 the first settlers of Setauket, fearing the Dutch to the west and the increasing numbers of English to the east and south of them on the Island, put themselves under the protection of Connecticut ten miles away across the Sound. Lacking water power they sent their flour to Connecticut to be ground for many years. Neighboring Smithtown received a Connecticut charter from Charles II in 1662, but in 1664 it was granted to the Duke of York, and thus Long Island eventually became a part of New York State. The ties with Connecticut were close. When a group of "adventurers of good intent to the colony", of which James Longbottom was one, set out from Newport they were provided with "a boat to go to survey Westerly and to Long Island".

JAMES LONGBOTTOM OF NEWPORT AND WESTERLY, RHODE ISLAND 1660

The name of James Longbottom is found in the following documents:

1660 June 29 — He was one of six men from Newport who purchased land in Westerly by two deeds from the Indian chief Sosoa (Socho). Eleven Indians also signed the deed, one a woman, Wawaloom, the widow of Chief Miantonomy. (Records of the Coloney of Rhode Island, Vol. 1, 1636-63) The original deed to Socho was confirmed by the Indian Pessicus on June 24, 1661. This tract was claimed by Chief Ninigret but his nephew Pessicus denied his right to it. (Arnold's History of Rhode Island, Vol. 1, p. 276.

1661 Mar. 21 — The articles of agreement of the Westerly Company assigned to him lot #55 in the village of Westerly.

June 25 — The deed to Westerly was affirmed by Wawaloom. The land had been given as a reward for services rendered in 1635 by Sosoa who was a renegade Pequot. (R. Is. Hist. Coll., Vol. 3, p. 251; R. Is. Collected Records, Vol. 1, p. 450)

Aug. 27 — The Rhode Island Colony was petitioned for assistance in the settlement of the Westerly lands.

1662/3 Mar 4 — The deed was affirmed by Thomas Stanton, the first settler and Indian trader at Westerly. (Westerly Town Meeting Records 1661-1706, Book 1, p. 22)

On the two dates below land was sold which was described as "part of the land Sosa's purchase and part of the land called Longbottom's share."

1694 June 21 — 50 acres by "Daniel Longbottom, Norwich, Connecticoke Colloney, grantor."

1714 Oct. 18 — 50 acres by "Daniel Longbottom, Norwich, Colloney Connecticoke, grantor." (Westerly Town Meeting Records 1661-1706, Book 1, p. 73; Land Evidence 1707-1717 Book 1, p. 24)

OTHER LONGBOTTOMS IN CONNECTICUT

In 1718 Thomas Longbottom, farmer and Surveyor, was a member of the first church in Norwich. In 1725 he joined the Newent Church, the same year that Daniel joined - but he was not one of Daniel's children.

Eleanor Longbottom of Pomfret, Connecticut was married before 1728 to Isaac Adams and had 14 children by him. (A descendant is Mrs. Richard L. Schuster (Katherine Fassett), 456 Chenango St., Binghamton, N.Y. 13901.) On Feb. 5, 1748 she married (2) Lt. Benjamin Fassett and had 1 child by him. (Denison, Westerly and its Witnesses) No record has been found to show that she was a daughter of Daniel. Interesting questions arise to which we would like to have the answers. Is the above Thomas her father? Is he the son of Thomas of Salem? What is their relation, if any, to Daniel? Others named Longbottom are also found in the 18th and early 19th century Connecticut records whose relationship to Daniel Longbottom or his descendants cannot be found.

RESEARCH ON LONGBOTTOMS IN ENGLAND

Longbottom is a name typical of the north of England and is still found in Yorkshire. By tradition it originated in the family which built the ships for the invasion of England by William of Normandy. When the land holdings of England were recorded in the Domesday Book in 1086 the name was adopted by this family as descriptive of the ships they built.

In 1886 Mrs. R.H. Buckhout of 604 S. Burdick St., Kalamazoo, Mich. sent Calvin[7] Bottum (Horace[6]. Lemuel[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]) a list of 69 Longbottoms in Yorkshire (1609-1699) that noted dates of birth, fathers' names, and places of residence. Mrs. Buckout's father was George Jackson Longbottom who had come from Liverpool, England in 1844. He had apparently copied the list since his name appears at the end followed by "Surgeon and Chemist, 183 Vauxhaul Road and 143 Great Howard St." The source of the list is not given. In her accompanying letter she states that "these are some of my father's ancestors", that the first part of the list and the last two pages had been destroyed, and that it was very dilapidated. She also gives three generations of her own lineage thus:

John[4] Longbottom of North Shields, Northumberland had 5 children: Joseph[3], Andrew Porvis, John Shields, Adeline and Bridget.

Joseph[3] Longbottom married Elizabeth Isabella Beau and had 2 children: George Jackson[2] Longbottom and Joseph James.

George Jackson[3] Longbottom married Isabella Gregson of Liverpool; moved to Kalamazoo from England in 1844 with two sons; three more children were born to them in America, of whom she was the youngest, and all of whom were living in Kalamazoo in 1864 when their father died.

_____[4] Longbottom, Mrs. R. H. Buckhout.

The letter continued. "The list was headed by The Longbottom do not know his name but he was Earl of Helwick and owned a large estate there. He shot his valet in a passion and was obliged to flee the country and it was never known where he went as he was never heard of after that and his estate was confiscated to the crown." . . . "Our ancestors . . . of later years than this list resided in Yorkshire, Scarborough, and Helwick."

Calvin Bottum copied the list and returned it as it was the original list made out by her father and she had requested its return. Her letter and Calvin's copy of the list are in the possession of Ruth B. Lacy.

The list begins

"1609 Oct. 8 Ellen Daughter of Samuel or Earl Longbottom

"Children of Samuel, Earl of Helwick

"Ellen born Oct. 8, 1609
Jane born July 17, 1614
Samuel born Jan. 23, 1622
Robert born Jan. 23, 1624
Edward born Sept. 2, 1627"

Samuel Longbothem of Helweeke is mentioned as a debtor of Isabel Marshall in 1611 and is named in wills and inventories in the Wills of York Registry until 1641. If he fled to America at that time his sons would have been 19, 17, 14 and he presumably would have been around 50 as his oldest daughter would have been 32 in 1641. A study of the 140 names of children and fathers on this list reveals no one named James, Jacob, or Daniel, and only one Joseph born much later in 1683. Names used many times in this family were Samuel, Richard, Robert, John, and Abraham. More suggestive - the three sons of Samuel, Earl of Helwick, have no descendants recorded on this list. Is it possible that the father, followed by his sons, went to America and kept the family name but took new (non-family) given names to disguise their identities?

The places mentioned on this list are West Riding, Yorkshire, Helwick, Timpamick, Morton (north and west of Bingley, Bradford, and Leeds), East Morton, Gilstead (a hamlet of Bingley), Twolocks, Helwicklock, West Moun, Cragge Val (border of Halifax), and Wilston. These are small hamlets. Helwick does not appear on a map today so it has apparently become merged with a larger place and lost its identity. There is an Eldwick near Bingley which may now be the place that was formerly Helwick. A Thomas Longbottom on the Buckhout list, born May 15, 1642, son of Abraham of East Morton, may be the Thomas found in Salem in 1662/3 and 1671. He, too, has no descendants on this list.

There are many references to members of the Longbottom family in this part of England. Research commissioned in 1951 by Theodore P.[7] Bottum [#42] was done by the Society of Genealogists in London but a search of York, Halifax, and other North Country wills yielded only the 1611-1641 references to Samuel Longbothem noted above. Search of the Bingley and neighboring parish registers contained many Longbottom names but no references to a Daniel or a James. No earldom of Helwick or coat-of-arms was found. Marriages in the area, 1660 back to 1640, were also searched with the same negative results.

It is reasonable to believe that our Longbottom ancestors came from this part of England. Just who they were or what they were we do not know. This we do know - they came to America and they played responsible parts in its history for generation after generation.

Isobel Cole of Shaftsbury, Vt., whose genealogical records and writings are in the Bennington Museum Library at Bennington, Vt., stated in a letter written to Norman D. Bottum of Williamstown, Mass. in 1948 that she had found a record of a Longbottom in Newport, Rhode Island in 1638. To date, her source has not been found.

Mrs. Alfred H. Boutwell, genealogist and life long resident of Stony Brook, Long Island, identified the "old Longbottom home" in Setauket in 1950 for Ruth B. Lacy.

CHAPTER II

WESTERLY, RHODE ISLAND

The first white man to lay eyes on the shores of Rhode Island and Connecticut was a Florentine exployer for the French, John Verrazzano, for whom the great new bridge over the narrows in New York Harbor is named. In 1524 he anchored in what is now Newport Harbor and found friendly Indians there. As far as is known the next European ship to arrive was under the command of Dutch Captain Block in 1614, nearly a hundred years later. He established trading relations between the Dutch and the Indians and is remembered as the man for whom Block Island is named.

In 1606 King James I of England had divided the land claimed in the New World into two parts extending from coast to coast, the southern half going to the London Company and the northern half to the Plymouth Company, to the latter of which a patent was granted in 1620. The following year Edward Winslow and Stephen Hopkins of the Plymouth Colony were the first white men to explore lower Rhode Island, known as Narragansett Land, then inhabited by the Narragansetts and the Niantics under Chief Massasoit of the tribe of Misquamicut, which means "a place for taking salmon". These Indians had cleared the land for eight miles in from the sea for raising their crops.

Roger Williams[1], banished in 1634 from Massachusetts Bay Colony for his unorthodox religious ard political teachings, purchased land by treaties with several Indian chiefs and established Providence, Rhode Island in 1636. He found the Niantic Indians friendly, welcoming trade with the white man and earning their living by hunting, fishing and providing corn for the settlers in the Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay colonies. He reported that they had an advanced civilization with morals much the same as, and better practiced than those of the white man, and noted also that the Indians believed in religious freedom. He learned the Indian languages and was called "friend" by all the neighboring sachems.

In March of 1637 eighteen men are listed as taking up residence in Portsmouth and Newport on Aquednick Island in Narragansett Bay. Richard Smith made the first settlement at Narragansett on the mainland to the west in 1639. In 1649 Thomas Stanton established a trading post and his home at the mouth of the Pawcatuck River, which site subsequently became the town of Westerly, and the name of his family continued in the records there for many years. He also learned the Indian languages and he became the interpreter-general of the New England colonies.

1 Roger Williams was an ancestor of Seneca Salisbury Spencer, husband of Caroline Bottum, daughter of Simon [#9] Bottum.

On June 29, 1660 the first proprietors of Westerly: William Vaughan, Robert Stanton who was thought to be the son of Thomas, Hugh Mosher, John Fairfield, and James Longbottom, were named in two deeds as purchasers of the land from Chief Sosoa. They were reported as from Newport, east of Narragansett Bay. These lands were the most westerly in the colony, hence the name. They encompassed an area of 153.4 square miles, which territory now belongs to the four towns of Westerly, Hopkinton, Charlestown and Richmond. Their purchase was bounded on the south by the sea and on the west by the Pawcatuck River, the future boundary of Rhode Island and Connecticut at this point, and extended northeast for twenty-five miles. The land was first held by these five men and one other, Shubal Painter, in six equal shares, each share valued at seven pounds. These were divided and sold to others so that on March 21, 1661 there were listed eighty members of the settlement company which drew up and subscribed to twelve articles of agreement. The deeds and other writings were kept in the house of William Vaughan who apparently was their leader. A board of trustees was later formed and a division of eighteen shares of land was listed, each of the six original owners receiving a full share. Land in the village of Westerly itself was also divided among the members and lot #55, 12 x 30 rods in size, was assigned to James Longbottom. At this point Longbottom owned part of his original share of the first division, his share of the second division, and a town lot.

The cruel Pequot Indians from the Upper Hudson Valley had invaded the Narragansett land in 1632, seizing the rich river valleys south to the ocean, and were overthrown in 1637 by the Narragansetts under Captain John Mason. Because the Pequots had captured land as far east as ten miles beyond the Pawcatuck River, the site of Westerly, the ownership of that land was contested from 1632 for over a hundred years. Since Massachusetts had helped Connecticut in this war and had demanded one half of Rhode Island in return, the jurisdiction of Westerly was bitterly disputed. The purchasers were sustained not only by the Sosoa deeds but also by the royal charter of the colony, obtained by Roger Williams who had gone to England himself for that purpose. In spite of these difficulties few of the purchasers were deterred from settling on their land. On May 14, 1669 Westerly was incorporated the 5th town of the colony and the 1st in King's Province. From 1669 to 1674 it was the largest town in the colony, excepting Providence. By this time the records there no longer showed the name of Longbottom and, of the original six men, only the names of John Fairfield and Shubal Painter occur again in Westerly's history.

Life was indescribably hard and there were wolves as well as Indians to contend with. Queen Anne's Road to New London, Connecticut, 20 miles west, was not built until 1667. Livestock of any kind was difficult to obtain and to keep. Then King Philip, the son of Massasoit, whose grievances even Roger Williams could not arbitrate, in 1674 united all the tribes to fight the white men, and his bloody war forced the settlers back to Newport. For five years there were no deputies from Westerly in the General Assembly of the colony.

A possible explanation of the disappearance of the name of James Longbottom from further records might be that, due to the controversies over the jurisdiction of this area and the disruption caused by King Philip's War, he moved over into the more settled and secure town of Norwich, Connecticut, some 20 miles northeast, as the later transactions involving his Westerly lands are recorded there. The name of Daniel Longbottom, our first proven ancestor, appears in Norwich in 1690 where the records show that 4 years later, and again in 1714, he sold Westerly lands designated each time as "part of Sosoa's purchase and part of Longbottom's share". The deed transferring the land to Daniel may be lying still undiscovered in some courthouse of Connecticut, Rhode Island or even Massachusetts. It is assumed that Daniel inherited these 100 acres from James Longbottom and this assumption leads to another - that Daniel was the son of James. No other proof for this assumption has been found. However, it is interesting to note that the second son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Lamb) Longbottom was given the name of James, their first son being named for his father.

CHAPTER III THE SEED-BED OF OUR ANCESTORS

NORWICH, CONNECTICUT

The settlement of Connecticut began in 1633 when the inhabitants of three Massachusetts towns, acting separately, simply pulled up stakes and walked into the wild country to the south and established new towns. The exodus, for the most part, was in response to the unbending rule of the Massachusetts theocracy. Population increased rapidly and the settlers acquired generous amounts of land. By 1650 there were several prospering towns: Hartford and Wethersfield just below Windsor which was some fifty miles up the Connecticut River to the northwest of the future site of Norwich; New London at the mouth of the Nyantic River (now the Thames), fifteen miles south; and Saybrook at the mouth of the Connecticut River, ten miles west of New London. The settlers had fought the unfriendly Indians, the French and the Dutch, forcing the latter to abandon all claims to New England. They were also crossing the Sound to Long Island, to which land Connecticut made claim as late as 1664.

The area that is now Norwich, Connecticut was claimed by both the Mohegan Indians and the Narragansetts. In 1653 a group who were members of Elder James Fitch's church in Saybrook formed a company "for the settlement of a plantation". Captain John Mason, Commander of the Saybrook fort, had been a friend and advisor of the Mohegan Indians for twenty years.[1] In 1659, in return for the payment of 70 pounds, the Mohegan chief Uncas and two other sachems signed a deed granting the company a 9 mile square of their land located at the intersection of three rivers fifteen miles north of New London, up the Nyantic.[2] The town was called Mohegan for the first two years. There were no other settlements in the area and the Mohegans (2000 in all including 400 warriors) helped to protect the settlement. Many years later some of the Indians were still living on the edges of Norwich and were then considered somewhat too friendly! But the community was never attacked by Indians even during King Philip's War in 1675 when all the Indian tribes united to fight against the white men. It was a stable town, unlike some of the settlements having dissident members, since it had been agreed that no one would sell or transfer his land without the approval of the group. Of the thirty-five

1. John Mason, born in England in 1599, died in Norwich on January 30, 1672. He lived for 12 years at Fort Saybrook, founded in 1635, and was a leader in settling Norwich and the Connecticut River Valley. He later became governor of the colony. He also was a member of the Council of New England, all royalty and gentlemen of England, who in 1623 had divided between themselves all the land from Cape Cod to the Bay of Fundy!

2. Uncas was "the last of the Mohicans" in James Fenimore Cooper's novel of that name. The name of Christopher Huntington, our ancestor, appears on this deed.

proprietors' names, only eight signatures were made by their marks. In spite of the deed signed by the Indian sachems, their claim to the Norwich lands was disputed until 1745 by the Mohegans.

Several farms were laid out in Norwich in 1659 and a temporary church built. For security each proprietor was given a home lot and pasture near the "meeting house plain" or village common[1], as was the New England custom. Most of the houses were one story and the few with two sloped to one in the rear. Fireplaces were from six to eight feet wide and from two to four feet deep. A permanent church building was erected on the summit of the hill in 1673, and in 1680 a school was built. Communications between settlements were by "paths" and land travel was mostly by foot. In 1667 Queen Anne's Road from Westerly along the coast to New London was built. The main highway used by the coastline colonies was the ocean.

The name of the town was changed from Mohegan to Norwich after the city in England which was the place of origin of the Huntington brothers, Christopher and Simon, who were leaders of the community from the first. Christopher and Ruth (Rockwell) Huntington, ancestors of the Vermont Longbottom branch, were the parents of the first male white child, born there on November 1, 1660. Their home was on the east side of the village common near his brother Simon's Inn. During King Philip's War his house was fortified, as were three or four others, by putting holes in the stone walls of the first story through which to fire upon attackers. Simon's home was the first "place of entertainment" in the town. In 1665 the will of Chief Uncas named Captain John Mason, Simon Huntington, Thomas Tracy, William Hyde and Hugh Calkins of Norwich to receive land west of Appaquoque Pond.[2]

Thomas Tracy was an ancestor of some of the Vermont Bottums. His g-granddaughter, Elizabeth, daughter of Jeremiah Tracy, married Isaac Andrus. Their daughter Ruth married Elijah[4] Bottum [#8], the son of Elijah and Dorothy (Williams) Bottum, and their granddaughter, Abia Andrus, married Lemuel [#15] Bottum, the son of Simon and Elizabeth (Huntington) Bottum. [Chapter XXX] William Hyde was an ancestor of Elizabeth Hyde who married Daniel [#10] Bottum of Woodstock, Connecticut and of their g-grandson, Theodore Perrin [#42] Bottum of Hartford, Connecticut.

By 1680 Norwich found itself the center of several newer, flourishing towns. Preston, across the river on the east, became the home of the Matthew Huntingtons, the Clarks, the Galushas and the Browns, descendants of all of whom migrated to Vermont.

1 A map of these lots and pictures of homes and gravestones are found in F.M. Caulkin's History of Norwich, 1660-1845.

2 The homes of their sons still stand on these locations today. They are pictured in Norwich Historic Homes and Families, Society of Founders of Norwich, Pequot Press 1967.

After its first hundred years Norwich had a population of 7,321 with 901 dwellings and 1024 families. In 1786 there was a division of the town which was then composed of eight "societies", and Hanover, Newent and a part of Long Society were set apart to form a new town, Lisbon, which is now again merged with Norwich. A detailed map of the area shows only a Lisbon school and a Lisbon country club.

"YE CROTCH OF YE RIVERS"

It is recorded that Daniel Longbottom was an inhabitant of Newent in "ye Crotch of ye Rivers", the area between the Shetauket, Little, and Quinneboug Rivers, which became a society of Norwich in 1690. In 1692 he married Elizabeth Lamb, daughter of John and Ann Lamb of Groton. Their oldest child, the second Daniel, was born there on March 19, 1694, the same year of the birth of the second Christopher Huntington.

In 1694 and '95 Captain James Fitch, Jr. sold a grant of 1800 acres "lying between the crotch of the rivers Shetucket and Quinebaug" to Joseph Safford, Richard Smith, Meshach Farley, Matthew Perkins and Samuel Bishop, all from Ipswich, Massachusetts. In 1695 Joseph and Jacob Perkins, also of Ipswich, purchased a tract in this area and subsequently bought also a part of the 1800 acre tract from the former purchasers. Settlement commenced immediately. In 1718 the following sixteen persons were listed as inhabitants of Newent: Samuel Bishop, Samuel Coy, Eleázer Jewett, David Knight, Daniel Longbottom, Samuel Lothrop, Jabez Perkins, Joseph Perkins, Josiah Read, Josiah Read, Jr., Joseph Read, John Read, William Read, Samuel Rood, Samuel Rood, Jr., and Henry Wallbridge. As would be expected, here again are names of men whose descendants married Bottum men and women. In his Journal 1813 Nathan H. Bottum of Shaftsbury, Vermont wrote that his great great grandfather's (the first Daniel) "relations were pretty numerous in Norwich, and there were so many of the name in a certain part of town that it was called Bottumtown".

THE NEWENT CHURCH

The names of several generations of Longbottom are found in the registers of the Church of Newent. And it may be suggested that the fortunes of the church and its members, in some degree, determined the direction of the lives of many of the Longbottom family. Congregational from its inception and at present affiliated with the Congregational Diocese of Connecticut, the Newent Church grew out of the church in Norwich Town which became the mother church of several "societies", which settlements comprised the Town of Norwich. The sixteen men, named above, petitioned the Colonial Assembly in May of 1718 for permission to establish and build a church. This was granted and the Town of Norwich appropriated sixty acres of land for the use of the first pastor that should settle there.

The church was organized in 1723 and it and the community became known as Newent. Beside the men from Ipswich, a number of the settlers were from Rowley, Massachusetts and Saybrook, Connecticut. The Massachusetts Puritan theocracy held a tight rein over its settlers and even claimed control over all the New England colonies. However it had failed to maintain jurisdiction over Rhode Island, and the Saybrook (Conn.) Platform of 1708 led to the liberalization of the church of Connecticut by allowing dissent and permitting each member to worship according to his conscience - tenets of Roger Williams which had been practiced in Rhode Island since 1636.

The original Newent Church building was used for many years but it deteriorated from lack of repairs and in due time was razed. In 1770 it was replaced by a smaller ediface on a new location which served its members until 1857 when the present structure was erected. Except for the years 1782-1790 the Newent Church was never without a pastor. Those who served the church during three generations of Longbottom membership were the Rev. Daniel Kirkland 1723-52, the Rev. Peter Powers 1752-64, the Rev. Dr. Joel Benedick 1764-82 and the Rev. David Hale 1790-1803. In 1943 when the church was visited by Theodore P. Bottum it was still in service.

During the term of the first pastor the congregation was disrupted by internal disputes. A group left the church and built another meeting house and formed a Separatist congregation. After being served by two pastors the church broke up. It seems that the friction simmered on into years. It may have been a contributing factor in the migration of some of the families to other places for it was due to loss of membership and insufficient funds that the church was forced to dismiss the Rev. Dr. Joel Benedick. Joseph Safford, husband of Ann Longbottom [Chap. XXXIX], was one of the founders of a Separatist Church in Bennington, Vermont. Elijah Bottum [#6] took his family to Shaftsbury where they became Baptists. Some of the other families also went to Vermont.

CHAPTER IV THE FIRST GENERATION

DANIEL[1] LONGBOTTOM (-1732) OF NORWICH TOWN

Daniel[1] Longbottom was admitted an inhabitant of Newent, a "society" of Norwich, Connecticut in 1692 and was one of the farmers who were assigned land there at that time. There seems to be no previous information about him, but it is assumed that he was the son of James Longbottom of Newport and Westerly, Rhode Island. [Chapters I, II & III] He married in Norwich on Feb. 15, 1692 Elizabeth Lamb, the daughter of John and Ann Lamb of Groton, Ct. [Chapter XXXVI] He died on Nov. 18, 1732 and she on May 22, 1757. It is believed that they are buried in old Kingsman Cemetery on the west side of Norwich. The house in which Daniel Longbottom and his family lived was situated not far from the old brick school house which stood in the old part of town known as Newent on a section of the road which was by-passed when the road from Canterbury to Newent was straightened. It has been gone for many years. In 1716 he became a member of the First Congregational Church of Norwich when he and his six younger children were baptised on September 14th of that year. In 1718 he was one of the petitioners for the establishment of the Newent Church which was organized on Dec. 10, 1723. On Feb. 28, 1725 both he and his wife Elizabeth were admitted members. Little else is known about him except that he was chosen Town Surveyor in 1702.

1. Daniel[1] and Elizabeth (Lamb) Longbottom had 9 children:

2 . i. Daniel[2] Longbottom, Jr., born Mar. 19, 1694/5 - died Apr. 27, 1758. [Chapter V] ii. Elizabeth, born Mar. 9, 1697/8, bapt. in the Newent Church Apr. 27, 1728 - died Jan. 11, 1773; married Apr. 27, 1724 Benjamin Baldwin. They had 5 children:

BALDWIN

1a. Theophilus Baldwin, born Apr. 10, 1725.
2a. Edith Baldwin, bapt. Nov. 26, 1726.
3a. Benjamin Baldwin, born Dec. 30, 1733.
4a. Elizabeth Baldwin, born Oct. 22, 1727.
5a. Ebeneza Baldwin, born Feb. 5, 1735.

iii. Mary Longbottom, born Aug. 1, 1701; married on Aug. 20, 1722 Nathaniel Baker of Franklin, Ct. They had 8 children:

BAKER

1a. Simon Baker, born June 1, 1723.
2a. Ann Baker, born Apr. 23, 1725.
3a. Elizabeth Baker, born Oct. 1727.

4a. Abigail Baker, born Nov. 25, 1729.
5a. Daniel Baker, born Sep. 30, 1732.
6a. Benjamin Baker, born June 17, 1735; m. Nov. 25, 1773 Lucy Longbottom, daughter of David[2] [#5, Chapter XXIII] and Lucy (Read) Longbottom.
7a. John Baker, born May 20, 1739.
8a. Hannah Baker, born July 25, 1742; married Samuel Gurley, born June 30, 1717 at Mansfield, Ct.

3 iv. James[2] Longbottom, born Jan. 15, 1702/3 [Chapter XVII].

v. Abigail Longbottom, born Oct. 21, 1705 - died Mar. 17, 1770; m. May 3, 1726 by the Rev. Daniel Kirtland in Newent Church Jonathan Knight, son of David Knight, died Mar. 7, 1770.

4 vi. John[2] Longbottom, born Aug. 4, 1708 [Chapter XXII].

vii. Ann Longbottom, born May 3, 1711; married Nov. 5, 1729 SAFFORD Joseph Safford, born Jan. 18, 1705 [Chapter XXXIX].

viii. Jacob[2] Longbottom, born June 4, 1714 - died July 14, 1748; married Oct. 31, 1745 in the Newent Church Lydia Kimball. After his death she married (2) Jacob Read [Read Family, Chapter VI]. Jacob and Lydia (Kimball) Longbottom had 2 children:

1a. Lydia Longbottom, born Sep. 8, 1746; m. Oct. 6, 1765
WATERS William Waters, born Apr. 20, 1745, the son of Daniel and Abigail (King) Waters. They had 8 children: Jacob, b. 1766; Levi, b. 1768, m. 1795 Hannah Bottum; Elijah, b. 1771; William, Jr., b. 1773, m. Sarah Hyde, daughter of Lee and Lucy (Bottum) Hyde [Hyde Family, Chapter IX]; Elizabeth, b. 1775; Lydia, b. 1778; Josiah, b. 1780; Charles, b. 1784.

2a. Jacob[3] Longbottom, Jr., b. Mar. 18, 1747/8; married Dec. 2, 1773
Prudence Heberd of Windham, Ct. He lived in Norwich until just before his marriage when he moved to East Windham, Ct. They had 1 child:
1b. Lydia L. Bottum, b. Sep. 15, 1774.

PART II DESCENDANTS OF DANIEL[2] LONGBOTTOM (1694-1758)

CHAPTER V DANIEL LONGBOTTOM, JR.

2. Daniel[2] Longbottom, born Mar. 19, 1694 at Norwich, Ct. - died there on Apr. 27, 1758, the son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Lamb) Longbottom; married on Nov. 12, 1723 at Griswold, Ct. Mercy (Mary) Caswell. Both were baptized in the Newent Church on Apr. 27, 1728. After Daniel's death his widow married Mr. Fred Bishop[1]. Daniel's will, dated Feb. 1, 1753 and probated Nov. 6, 1758, names his wife Mercy and their 6 children:

6 i. Elijah[3], born Aug. 27, 1724; married Dorothy Williams.

ii. Elizabeth, born May 30, 1726 - died Aug. 29, 1803; married PALMER John Palmer. (Palmer, below)

iii. Judith, born May 6, 1729; married LAMB David Lamb. [Lamb Family, Chapter XXXVI]

CHAPTER VI THIRD GENERATION FROM DANIEL[1] LONGBOTTOM

ELIJAH[3] LONGBOTTOM

6. Elijah[3] Longbottom was the eldest child of Daniel[2] and Mercy (Caswell) Longbottom, born Aug. 27, 1724, baptized in Newent Church Apr. 27, 1728 - died at Shaftsbury, Vt. Mar. 4, 1809. On Jan. 14, 1747/8 he was married by the Rev. Daniel Kirkland in Newent to Dorothy Williams, born Dec. 26, 1726, birthplace unknown - died June 18, 1809, the daughter of Joseph and Mary Williams.[1] They are both buried in the cemetery of Center Shaftsbury Baptist Church. They had 6 children, all born in Norwich, Ct., the births recorded there in the books of the town clerk.

i. Dorothy Bottum, born Sep. 26, 1749 - died in 1816; married MERWIN Elnathan Merwin. Their home was in Arlington, Vt. where she died. They had a large family:

Mary died Sep. 28, 1773, age 1 yr. 5 mo. & 7 da.
Israel died Feb. 18, 1780, age 2 yr. & 4 mo. They are buried in the Arlington cemetery.
Elijah, Daniel, and Simon moved to Ohio.
Sherwood moved to Upper Canada.
Anna, Diana, Remma, Maria, and Dolly were living in Arlington in 1813. In 1857 Dolly was with her brother Sherwood in Canada.

ii. Judith, born Sep. 20, 1752 - died in Jericho, Vt. on Sep. 17, 1832; married on Oct. 20, 1772
READ Jedidiah Read. (Read, below)

iii. Sarah, born Mar. 1, 1755 - died at Montreal, Canada on Aug.18, 1819; married
SHERWOOD Justus Sherwood. [Sherwood, Chapter VIII]

8 iv. Elijah[4], born 1757 - died 1825. [Bottum, Chapter VIII]

1 The birth places of Joseph and Mary Williams and their children are unknown. On Sep. 25, 1750 Joseph recorded the birthdates of their children with the town clerk of Norwich: Moses, Jan. 29, 1724; Dorothy, Dec. 26, 1726; Joseph, June 2, 1729; Elijah, Dec. 6, 1730; Priscilla, Sep. 25, 1732; Sarah, Apr. 22, 1734; Mary, May 26, 1736; Anne, July 22, 1739; Sibel, Apr. 8, 1741; Asa, Apr. 6, 1744; Hannah, Apr. 7, 1746.

9 v. Simon[4], born Aug. 23, 1759 - died Feb. 7, 1822. [Chapter IX]

vi. Lemuel[4] Bottum, born Mar. 4, 1762 - died in 1815; married a Miss French. They had a daughter who married a Mr. Miller. Both wife and daughter died in 1813 or 1814 at the time of the epidemic called "spotted fever" which had started at a soldiers' encampment on Lake Champlain, causing the deaths of 6000 people in Vermont. Lemuel Bottum had fought for the American cause during the Revolutionary War while his brother, Elijah, had remained loyal to King George. In 1786 he settled in Williston, Vermont and the 1790 Census shows him in Burlington, with 3 males and 2 females in the household. He became a community leader in Williston, holding many important town and county offices. In 1812 he was one of the five surveyors of the town and one of a commission of three to investigate conflicting claims. His home was a landmark around the turn of the century. He was a representative to the state legislature from 1798 to 1801 and is listed as serving on committees there eleven times. His will, probated Mar. 2, 1815, left a farm to Henry Miller, son of Solomon Miller. This suggests that Henry was his son-in-law. He left another farm to his nephew, Elijah B. Read, son of his sister Judith; $400.00 to Henry Miller's sister Maria; $1000.00 to be paid in cattle and oxen to his nephew Lemuel Bottum, son of his brother Simon; 50 acres of pine land to David French, son of Jeremiah French; $40.00 a year for life to his sister Dolly Bottum Merwin of Arlington; and the residue of the estate, aside from a few small bequests, to Theodore F. French and Solomon S. Miller who were executors with Jeremiah French. This suggests that Jeremiah and Theodore F. French were brothers of Lemuel's wife.

THE EMIGRATION TO SHAFTSBURY, VERMONT

The 1760s were critical times for the American colonists. Political events were shaping the destiny of the future nation and religious controversy was still testing the conscience of many of its citizens. In 1760 the French surrendered Canada to Great Britain. The Stamp Act was imposed upon the colonies in 1765 and, the following year, repealed. The Townsend Import duties of 1767 poured fuel upon the inflamed tempers of the people, taught to expect all the right of Englishmen and denied their inheritance. The subsequent repeal of these duties - except for that on tea - served only to strengthen their resolution to resist all taxation imposed upon them by Parliament, a policy which eventually exploded in the Boston Tea Party. The first Continental Congress met in 1774 and in an amazingly short time, considering the communications of the period, the colonies were united in their stubborn stand. The Declaration of Independence followed and war proved inevitable.

The influence of Jonathan Edwards and other religious leaders continued to be felt. The Congregational Church was torn with reform and the intellectual power and democratic doctrine of the Baptists were gaining strength. There are no records to show why Elijah Bottum chose to migrate to Vermont in 1767 but it is possible that the political and religious situations contributed to this decision. And, although he inherited and owned land in Norwich, the fertile lands and forests of the New Hampshire grants in the newly opened Vermont territory must have been alluring. He went first without his family, bought 100 acres of land, cleared one acre of it, planted wheat between the stumps, and built a cabin.[1] At that time there were no settlements in Vermont north of the next town, Arlington - only wolves and a few Indians. He returned to his family in Norwich and brought them back with him the following year. Elijah was then 44 and his wife Dolly was 42. Their children ranged in age from 6 to 19.[2] The site of their cabin was across the road from the large home built by their son Simon soon after his marriage in 1790. [Shaftsbury Homes, Chapter X]

Although the Baptist Church was not established in Connecticut before 1770, Elijah Bottum helped to establish the first Baptist Church in Vermont in the first year of his arrival in Shaftsbury. Throughout the years the Bottum family have been active supporters of this church and many of them are buried in its beautiful little cemetery.

In his Journal of 1813 Nathan H. Bottum [#14] gives an account of the migration of his grandfather's family to their new home.

> "My Grandfather with all his family removed to Shaftsbury, Vermont in the year 1768, when the country was very new, and the roads so bad and their goods so few that they carried them on horseback and on foot, except a few articles of iron were sent in a neighbor's cart. He purchased an hundred acres of land, which now lies two miles north of the meeting house or center of Shaftsbury. The country was then exceedingly fertile, producing large crops of wheat and all other kinds of grain, so that in a few years they were in a situation to live considerably comfortable. My Grandfather lived at Shaftsbury with my father until the time of his death, which happened on the 4th day of March A.D. 1809 in the eighty-fifth year of his age. My Grandmother followed him just three months afterwards. My Grandfather was a professor of religion & belonged to the Baptist Church."

It was during Elijah's generation that many of the Longbottom name dropped the "Long" and became known as "Bottum". The names of Elijah's children are listed in the vital records of Norwich, Ct. under the full name. In 1786 he signed his name to several deeds in Norwich as Elijah Bottum.

When the settlers first came to Vermont they tried living on the mountains as they feared there would be maleria in the lowlands. The winters on the mountain side proved unendurable and the valleys were found quite safe. A hundred and forty years after this first winter a great grandson of Elijah Bottum showed his two small granddaughters the traces on the mountainside left by this road made by the pioneers. Great trees were growing in what had been the middle of the road.

1. Family records show that Elijah added to his original purchase of 100 acres; that he owned 500 acres wihh his son Simon; and that in 1803 he raised what was in those days a record crop of 800 bushels of wheat on 40 acres.

2. This story of Elijah's first trip to Vermont is found in a letter from the widow of H. Merle Bottum [#35] to T.P. Bottum Dec. 29, 1943.

The only reference to the earliest Bottums found in the official Vermont records is a letter addressed by Governor Thomas Chittenden in 1778 to "Mr. Bottum of Shaftsbury" in regard to some sheep. Lewis Cass Aldrich refers to the "ancestors of the present highly respected families bearing the surname of Bottum" in his History of Bennington (1889) and continues,

> "The present family is noted for the fine grade of sheep which they raise in Shaftsbury. There be no better found in the country and not only in raising sheep and cattle are the representatives of this family prominent, for within the township there are no citizens more public spirited or progressive, whether in public or private life, than those now bearing the family name of Bottum."

READ - REED FAMILY

1. William[1] Read and wife Susannah (Hayme) came from Batcombe Co., of Somerset, England with the company of the Rev. Joseph Hill, and settled in Weymouth, Massachusetts Bay Colony in July of 1635. He married twice and was the father of 17 children. About 1672 he moved to New London, Connecticut. His son,

2. Josiah[2] Read, born about 1643 - died at Norwich in 1717; married at Marshfield, Massachusetts in 1666
Grace Holloway, born about 1648 - died at Norwich in 1727. They settled in Newent. They had 8 children. Their son,

3. Josiah[3] Read, Jr. married in 1697
Elizabeth Amsden, (prob.) daughter of Isaac Amsden of Cambridge, Massachusetts. They had 6 children, all born in Newent. Their son,

4. Jacob[4] Read married in 1728
(1) Sarah Gale and had children. He married in 1739
(2) Esther ? and had son Jacob and daughter Esther.
In Scotland, Ct. on Jan. 30, 1749/50, he married
(3) Lydia Longbottom, nee Kimball and widow of Jacob [#1-viii] Longbottom. On Jan. 25, 1773, Jacob and Lydia Read had their church membership transferred from Newent to the church of East Windham, Ct. They had 6 children:

5 i. Jedidiah[5] Read, born Oct. 27, 1750; married Oct. 20, 1772 Judith Bottum, born Sep. 20, 1752, daughter of Elijah [#6] and Dorothy (Williams) Bottum.
ii. Silas Read, born Oct. 21, 1752.
iii. Josiah Read, born July 11, 1754.
iv. Phillip Read, born July 11, 1756.
v. Esther Read, born June 27, 1758.
vi. Jacob Read, born Apr. 27, 1761.

5. Jedidiah[5], born in 1750 at Norwich - died at Jericho, Vt. on Mar. 25, 1831. He married on Oct. 20, 1772
Judith Bottum, born Sep. 20, 1752 at Norwich - died at Jericho on Sep. 17, 1832, the daughter of Elijah [#6] and Dorothy (Williams) Bottum. This marriage is recorded in Norwich but, as it took place 2 years after Jedidiah came to Vermont and 4 years after Elijah had brought his family to Shaftsbury, it is most likely that they were married in Vermont. Jedidiah and Judith settled first in Pawlet, Vt. on a farm which still bears his name and where most of his children were born. He was a patriot during the Revolutionary War, serving in Ira Allen's regiment of Vermont militia, and was a trusted member of the Council of Safety. Late in life they left their farm and went to live in Jericho with their son Lyman. They had 4 children:

i. Jedediah[6] Reed, Jr., born (prob.) 1777 - died at Monkton, Vt. on Jan. 11, 1849, buried in Ridge Cemetery, Monkton.

ii. Lyman[6] Reed, born 1782 - died at Jericho, Vt. 1870; married Parthania Galusha, born 1785 - died 1865, the daughter of Jacob[5] and Parthania (Hard) Galusha. [Galusha, #8-iii] Lyman was called "Squire" and was a great teller of stories. They had 7 children: Jacob, Laura G., Harriet S., Eunice, Elijah, Lyman, Jr., and Myron.

6 iii. Elijah B.[6] Reed, born 1785/6

iv. A daughter.

6. Elijah B.[6] Reed, born at Pawlet, Vt. in 1785/6 - died at Orwell, Vt. on May 5, 1828 and is buried in the Village Cemetery there. He married about 1811

Polly Morton, daughter of Diodate (Isaac[3], John[2], William[1]) Morton. He inherited a farm from his uncle, Lemuel Bottum [#6-vi]. After Elijah's death his widow married (2) on June 8, 1832 Horatio Gates Taylor. Elijah and Polly Reed had 3 children:

i. Henry[7] Reed, born 1812/3 - died near Marysville, Yuba Co., Cal. on Aug. 7, 1867. He never married. He went to California during the gold rush of 1849 and amassed a fortune before his death. His will names his mother, Mrs. Polly Taylor of Chittenden Co., Vt; his sister, Caroline E. Chittenden; his niece, Elizabeth Chittenden; his brother, George M. Reed; his brother-in-law, Nelson H. Chittenden; and his nephew, Giles E. Chittenden, all of Genessee Co., Mich.

ii. Caroline Elizabeth Reed, born (prob.) Williston, Chittenden Co., Vt. on Oct. 20, 1816 - died at Santa Clara Co., Cal. on Aug. 2, 1879: married at Williston on Oct. 20, 1837 Nelson Harvey[7] Chittenden, son of Giles and Mary (Hawley) Chittenden. [Chittenden, #7, Part VI]

CHAPTER VII VERMONT HERITAGE

> "I love Vermont because of her hills and valleys, her scenery and invigorating climate, but most of all because of her indomitable people."
> Calvin Coolidge

TRAVAIL TO STATEHOOD

The Green Mountain State was the last of the New England states to be settled. Not one of the original thirteen states, but the fourteenth, it joined the Union in 1791 after governing itself as an independent republic from 1770 to 1790.

The earliest permanent settlement was in 1724 at Ft. Dummer, two miles below Brattleboro on the Connecticut River. In 1749 a fort was established at Bennington. Ten years later, the construction of a military road from the area of Springfield, Vermont, on the Connecticut, across the Green Mountains to Crown Point on Lake Champlain, marked a turning point in the French and Indian Wars. Following the Rogers Expedition to Canada in 1760-1763 France ceded the Vermont territory to the King of England, but there were scarcely any settlements north of Bennington before 1770. The total populatoon in 1775 was only 20,000.

After Benning Wentworth succeeded in separating the lands of New Hampshire from Massachusetts he became its first governor and decided that the wilderness west of the Connecticut River should also belong to New Hampshire. He proceeded to carve up the area which is now Vermont into six mile square townships, disregarding the fact that New York also laid claim to this territory under a grant from the British crown. Between 1749 and 1764 he signed away a whole state of 131 towns - at considerable profit to himself.

The Green Mountain Boys, under Ethan Allen, were first organized as a voluntary, unofficial, military association to resist New York's claims to the Vermont lands, the land which Governor Wentworth had sold to the settlers. With the coming of the war they employed their strength on the side of the American patriots and were instrumental in turning the tide of the Revolutionary War. The defeat of the British at the battles of Bennington and Saratoga severed their supply lines and led to the surrender of Burgoyne, thus preventing New England from being cut off from the other colonies. The Green Mountain Boys not only served in the field of battle but also were largely responsible for the activity against the many influential Tories. Without this organization Vermont might not have been a party to the Revolution.

During the Revolutionary War Vermont had been divided by the conflicting loyalties of her people. Afterwards she refused to join the Union until the controversy over the land was finally settled, and she remained an independent republic till 1790. From 1777 until she was admitted a state, Vermont ran her own postal service, coined her own money, naturalized the citizens of other states and countries, and conducted her own negotiations with other states and countries. Some officials seriously considered joining Vermont to Canada since many landowners believed that the titles to their lands would be more secure under the protection of the crown than they would be in the hands of a new, untried federal government. Justus Sherwood [Chapter VIII], son-in-law of Elijah[3] Bottum [#6], was agent for the crown in these abortive nrgotiations.

Vermont has several notable firsts to her credit. In 1777 her constitution provided for the first prohibition of human slavery in history. A Colonization Society for Negroes was formed and Jonas Galusha [Part VI] was its president in Bennington County. Vermont was also the first state to provide universal male suffrage regardless of property and income. In 1790 the first U.S. patent from Washington, D.C. was issued to Samuel Hopkins of Burlington, Vermont for a method of making potash. The first canal in the United States was begun in 1792 at Bellows Falls where nine locks raised barges, rafts, and small steamers.

Vermont was settled by Americans typical of this era - industrious men and women of strong political and religious convictions whose main purpose was to build homes on their own land - and the stony yet fertile soil, forested mountains and rigorous climate that they found there nurtured the independent spirit of these frugal and responsible people. From the earliest days Vermonters were concerned with the functioning of their government and the town meeting has continued to flourish there as no where else in America. Each township elects a member to the State Assembly and each county a State Senator so, over the years, a great many families have participated directly in their own state government. Vermonters always have demonstrated their high regard for education, and the state has produced many people of national fame, influence and leadership - men and women such as Horace Greeley, Stephen A. Douglas, Calvin Coolidge and Dorothy Canfield Fisher.

SHAFTSBURY

The long-lasting French and Indian Wars had brought many men from the coastal colonies to the Green Mountain area and this virgin land, with its clear streams and narrow valleys, drew them back to it. Shaftsbury, settled in 1763 in the southwest corner of Vermont, was a post town on the road to Montreal from New York City. Its charter, dated 1765, is still kept in the vault of the town clerk's office.

Elijah Bottum [#6] moved his family from Norwich, Connecticut to Shaftsbury in 1768. The next year Amos Huntington, a great grandson of one of the original proprietors of Norwich, brought his family. [Part VI] In 1775, when war was breaking out in Lexington and Concord, Jonas Galusha also left Norwich to settle in Shaftsbury, accompanied by his father's large family. [Chapter XXXIV] Inevitably these family histories became intermingled.

During the few years of its existence prior to the outbreak of the Revolutionary War, Shaftsbury had grown to be an important town. Throughout the war it supplied men and material in surprising quantities for its size. Besides leather for soldiers' shoes and moccasins, produced in the local tanyard, records reveal that in 1780 householders shared in a quota for the town of 12,559 pounds of flour, 4,186 pounds of beef, 2,093 pounds of salt pork, 350 bushels of corn, and 177 bushels of rye.

In 1782 the Governor of Vermont and his Council met at David Galusha's house in Shaftsbury to hear and discuss the report from Continental Congress regarding the admission of Vermont into the confederated states, but it was nine years later and after the new Constitution had created the United States of America that she became the fourteenth state of the Union. This house in Shaftsbury witnessed other historic meetings, one occurring during Shays' Rebellion in 1787.

By 1841 Shaftsbury had 2 stores, 2 taverns, 2 grist mills, 12 sawmills and paper mills, 1 woolen factory, some iron ore mining and quarrying of marble. During the Civil War, with a population of less than 2000, Shaftsbury supplied 147 soldiers. Several homes, among them the Jonas Galusha house and, by tradition, the oldest Bottum house, were stations for the underground railway. The town was halfway between Montreal and New York City and the highest point on the way. Tally-hos traveling this historic route were still a familiar sight there up until 1890.

THE SHAFTSBURY CHURCH

The first church in Vermont was the Congregational Church in Bennington founded by the Separatists from Massachusetts in 1762, two years after the first settlement there. When Ft. Dummer had been established at Brattleboro in 1724 the Rev. David Dwight (ancestor of the president of Yale University) was the chaplain for the soldiers, and he was the only minister in Vermont for the forty years preceding the founding of Bennington Church.

The Shaftsbury Charter was granted in 1761 and the first settlers arrived in 1763. Of the 66 shares of 200 acres each in the town, four were set aside as done in all Vermont towns. One share was for the propagation of the Gospel in foriegn parts, one for the established church (the Church of England or the Congregational Church), one for support of a school, and one for the first settled minister, the latter being a great help in attracting a pastor to these frontier settlements.

The second church in Vermont was the First Baptist Church, organized in Shaftsbury in 1768. The Congregational Church was the state religion in New England and its ministers were paid through a clerical tax on everyone - whatever his beliefs or unbeliefs - and fines were levied for not attending church. The laws forbade "separate companies in private homes" and there was a fine of ten pounds and public whippings for anyone not a lawful minister who administered religious ordinances. The Baptists were persecuted in New England for their belief that a person should be free to worship as he pleased. The previous year six men who had refused to pay the clerical tax had their property siezed and had been put in jail in Hartford, Connecticut. In 1770 eight men were likewise imprisoned in Norwich, Connecticut, whence had recently come the Galushas, Bottums, Clarks, and the Huntingtons.

Between 1740 and 1760 the influence of George Whitfield and Jonathan Edwards had inspired the New Light or Separatist movement which opposed infant baptism and automatic church membership for everyone and insisted on a spiritual church whose members were only those who had experienced a new birth. These same ideas had caused the expulsion of Roger Williams from the Massachusetts Bay Colony one hundred years before and had provided a congenial atmosphere for the establishment of the Baptist Church in Rhode Island. These two movements joined in many places and many of the Separatist churches in New England became Baptist in time. Samuel Robinson of Bennington is credited with the peaceful solution of differences in the new Vermont settlements by personally directing newcomers inclined to Baptist beliefs to Shaftsbury, and later to Pownal, the Episcopalians to Arlington, and the Congregationalists to settle in his town.[1]

Shaftsbury was a center or source of liberal Christianity in the state from the beginning. The Baptists held their meetings near the cemetery a mile north of North Bennington in the southwestern part of Shaftsbury. Thomas Matteson, who had come from Rhode Island in 1766, was a leader of the group, and Cyprian Downer served for many years as a lay preacher as did Bliss Willoughby. For twelve years there was no ordained minister and there were many conflicts of individual beliefs. By 1774 there were 39 members, 21 of whom were men. A store of supplies was kept by the church to help members in need. The early records, still extant, reveal how deeply disturbing was the controversy with the New York government over the titles to their lands. In its first fifteen years this church became the parent of three other Baptist churches in Shaftsbury. In 1780 Cyprian Downer, Gideon Slye, Peleg Matteson (cousin of Thomas), and other members of the First Church requested permission to establish the Second Church, in fellowship with the mother church, at Maple Hill in the northeastern part of town - citing the distance from their homes to the meeting place of the First Church. This was "constituted from the house of Thomas Matteson". Another source says that it was organized in his barn, probably for lack of room in the small homes of the first settlers. It had a membership of 34 and was called "the Rhode Island Church" since so many of its members had come from there. These two churches were also known as East and West churches. This second church existed for forty years and never had a settled pastor or a church building. In 1827 it had 55 members and 24 more were added in 1831 by a revival, but by 1841 the numbers were diminished as many people moved westward into New York State and beyond. The church was disbanded and its members joined with the First Church now located at Shaftsbury Center.

1. By 1790 there were in Vermont 46 Congregational, 35 Baptist, 8 Episcopal, and a few Quaker churches.

In the meantime in 1782 the Third Church had been formed by a group who opposed the ordination of John Millington as Pastor of the First Church. It met during the final days of the Revolution in a building, which is still standing, back of the house which Harlow Huntington later built - the house with the one pillar. [Chapter X] During the Battle of Bennington the wives of the soldiers met there to pray. This splinter group lasted for seventeen years, until the "great reformation" revival in 1799 at which time they reunited themselves with the mother church.

On Aug. 19, 1783, the year after the Third Church broke away, the Fourth Church, the Center Shaftsbury Church, was constituted in Bennington. There were 24 members in 1787 subscribing to its articles of faith which were very similar to the ones that have been kept through the years:

1. baptism required to be admitted to communion;
2. no trespass or offence of members without proof, and private steps taken before being brought to church consideration;
3. attendance required except for reasonable excuse;
4. no brother to go to law against another brother.

Meetings were held in Bennington the first two years and were then moved to Shaftsbury Center. In 1786 a meeting house was erected on the present site and a revival added many new members. In 1788 Caleb Blood became the first pastor, continuing there for twenty years. He was an eloquent preacher and inspiring leader. During the "great reformation" there were added to the church 175 members including the 20 from the Third Church. Elder Blood was the father of the Shaftsbury Association and of the later missionary society. When the University of Vermont was established in 1891 he became one of the first trustees. The following year he preached "the election sermon" before the governor and the state legislature. In 1803 and in 1804 he made missionary tours to western New York and Upper Canada, recording the historical accounts of his experiences.

In the meantime the First Church had also flourished. During the soul awakening days of 1799 there were 73 members added bringing the membership to 100. Isaiah Matteson, son of the founder Thomas, served the First Church for forty years, 1804-1844. At the close of his pastorate all four churches were united at Shaftsbury Center, seventy-six years after the First Church had been founded. Elder Isaiah Matteson spent his life in the service of the church in which he had been born, reared, converted, baptized, and ordained. After Caleb Blood's departure from the Center Church, Elder Matteson also preached there every other Sunday for 18 years. In his time 400 members were added to both churches.

Among the names recorded on March 18, 1814 by the Shaftsbury Union Society for the support of a preacher at the center of town are: Simon and Nathan H. Bottum; Amos, Martin, Augustus, Jacob, Jonas, Simeon, Jacob 2nd, Truman, George & Jonas 2nd Galusha; Amos Jr., Henry, Matthew, Amos 3rd, Elias & Daniel Huntington; Russell Loomis; and Francis Matteson.

Center Shaftsbury Baptist Church and Cemetery

The present church ediface was built in 1846, two years after the merger. The parsonage was built in 1849 and was financed through the Parsonage Association by the sale of shares or stock. Judge Nathan Huntington Bottum's will leaves equal shares to his sons, Norman and Nathan, in the meeting house, the horse sheds, and the parsonage. The inventory of his estate in 1855 lists $190 for the meeting house, $100 for the parsonage, and $340 for parsonage stock. All of the church property was signed over to the Vermont Baptist State Convention when the church was closed in 1949. A. Ranney Galusha, a descendant of the Galusha, Bottum, Clark, and Huntington families, purchased it in 1968 from the Convention. He has deeded the property to the Shaftsbury Historical Association as a memorial to the founders, most of whom are buried in the adjoining cemetery. The State Convention has used the funds from the sale of the old church for the conference center at Gove Hill. The church was filled once more at the 200th anniversary gathering on May 19, 1968, many wearing the garb of their forefathers. A torch was lighted and carried to Gove Hill where it will symbolize the spirit and faith of the pioneer fathers and inspire future generations. The cemetery is maintained with funds left by Calvin Huntington, grandson of Capt. Amos Huntington, a first settler.

THE SHAFTSBURY ASSOCIATION PIONEERS

The idea of the formation of church associations originated with the Baptists and began as a simple annual meeting for spiritual exercises by small groups of churches. Later the churches gradually began to help each other against governmental oppressions but they transacted no business because the members feared growth of power and supervision. The first association began in the Philadelphia area in 1707. By the early 1770's there were two in the Carolinas and one each in Rhode Island and Connecticut. The Shaftsbury Association was the first one to be established inland from the seacoast in the less populated regions. It began in 1782 with five churches, the First and Second of Shaftsbury, one in Cheshire, Massachusetts, and one each in Stillwater and White Creek across the New York border. In another six years there were fifteen churches and, after the Association sent missionaries to Upper Canada, it at one time included five Canadian churches across the St. Lawrence River. Eventually the Shaftsbury Association became the parent of five other associations - Saratoga, Hudson River, Washington Union, Berkshire, and Stephentown. The Oneida Association was founded by Elon Galusha, son of Governor Jonas Galusha and one of the most eloquent preachers of his day. By widely spreading its influence the Shaftsbury Association had reduced itself to again five churches by 1854 - the two in Bennington and one each in Hoosick, Manchester, and Shaftsbury. On its 65th anniversary in 1847 it met in the new building in Shaftsbury Center. By 1910 it included 19 churches with 2494 members.

The influence of the Shaftsbury Association on the men and leadership it produced and its vision in creating a missionary body cannot be estimated. Strong stands against Masonry, slavery and intemperance were taken by these leaders. Inspired by a sermon by Caleb Blood in 1801, the Association had formed a missionary committee charged with raising and distributing funds to send preachers to the wildernesses of western and northern New York State and Upper Canada. Blood's account of his three months journeys in 1802 and in 1803 and of his friendship with the Iroquois chief, Red Jacket, are documents of historic significance. In 1805 the "handsome sum" of $167.91 was contributed for missionary purposes, and tributes were paid to Adoniram Judson and Luther Rice, the great Baptist pioneers in Burma. Elder Covell of Pittstown and Elder Warren of the Albany church were sent out with $50.00 each from the Association. They traveled 1600 miles in 129 days, preaching 125 sermons and baptizing 21 persons. Their visits included the village of Buffalo and the nearby Tuscarora Indians who sent back to the Association wampum and a letter of gratitude and good will signed by two of their sachems.

The Shaftsbury Auxiliary to the Baptist Board of Missions, whose headquarters were in Philadelphia, was organized in 1816 and a constitution adopted. Captain Amos Huntington was secretary and the president was Governor Jonas Galusha who was also president of the Bennington County Colonization Society for the resettlement of Negroes and an officer of the Vermont Bible Society.

Of necessity the role of women in these early days was confined to the home. It should be noted that Lydia Barr was listed in 1774, with five men, as a leader of the membership of 39. In 1811 Mary Clark was president of the Shaftsbury Female Mite Society which sent $16.45 to the Association to be used for missionary purposes and, according to the minutes of that year, the money was accompanied by "an interesting letter". Helen Bottum is cited in 1889 as a "faithful member of the Female Mite Society". Many, many other names should be added to the roll of those who have sustained the life of this historic church.

CHAPTER VIII THE TORIES IN THE FAMILY

FOURTH GENERATION FROM DANIEL[1] LONGBOTTOM

When war with England was declared and Americans had to decide where their loyalties lay, Vermont was cruelly torn, for the issues were different here than in the thirteen colonies and it was touch and go whether Vermont would remain loyal to King George or cast its lot with the patriots of the American cause. It followed that individual families, for one reason or another, found themselves divided in their sympathies and the family of Elijah [#6] and Dorothy Bottum was one of these. No letters or records or family stories survive to reveal the heartaches they must have suffered. Lemuel, the youngest son, served during several enlistments with the Continental forces. Elijah, the eldest son, served with the King's Rangers and Sarah, the youngest daughter, followed her husband when his Tory activities forced him to seek sanctuary across the border in Canada. They and their children remained there and made permanent homes though some of their descendants later returned.

Many Vermont men of property were loyalists during the war, partly because the crown had sided with them in their disputes with the governor of New York over the titles to their land. New Hampshire had made the original grants of the lands possessed by the early Vermont settlers. In most instances the lands were the basis of their wealth. On July 20, 1764 when the crown had adjudged the Vermont Territory to be under the jurisdiction of the governor of New York, the resultant confusion found many dispossessed of their property by subsequent New York grants. Feelings exploded and the settlers were literally in arms over the situation. In 1774 the king reversed himself and ordered New York restrained from interfering with the land titles of the New Hampshire grants. With this act still fresh in their minds the Declaration of Independence found them stubbornly loyal to George III. The grievances which had driven the coastal colonies to rebellion against the British Parliament and finally to war against the king did not particularly touch Vermont. Their big quarrel was with New York.

Several of the Vermont families who became residents of Canada were connected by marriage with the Bottum family, either before or after the war. These were the families of Sherwood, Hurd, Hawley and Burritt. They settled near each other, across the St. Lawrence River, on lands in Ontario granted "by order in Council" for their loyalty to Great Britain.

ELIJAH[4] BOTTUM OF AUGUSTA, ONTARIO, CANADA

8. Elijah[4] (Elijah[3], Daniel[2], Daniel Longbottom) Bottum was the son of Elijah [#6] and Dorothy (Williams) Bottum, born at Norwich, Ct. on Mar. 5, 1757 - died at Augusta, Ontario on Aug. 6, 1825. He is buried in the Blue Church Burying Ground at Augusta beside his wife Mary, his two daughters Harriet Terressa and Sarah Louise, and his mother-in-law Anna (Hawley) Hurd. Elijah Bottum married

(1) Ruth Andrus, at Shaftsbury, Vt. on Mar. 3, 1785. She was born 1767 - died Apr. 16, 1803 after birth of her 8th child, the daughter of David[5] and Mary (Parks) Andrus. [Chapter XXX]

(2) Sarah Jones, on Oct. 4, 1803. They had one child who died in infancy. She died on Feb. 18, 1805, aged 27 years, 6 months and 25 days.

(3) Mary (Molley) Stone, on Feb. 5, 1806 at Augusta. She was born at Newtown, Ct. about 1761 - died Nov. 18, 1852, the widow of Elisha Stone and the daughter of Phineas and Annah (Hawley) Hurd. Elijah and Molley Bottum had 6 children.

Elijah Bottum served throughout the Revolutionary War in Provincial Canadian regiments under the commands of Major Mathews, of Major Jessop and of Captain Justus Sherwood. Records show him on the Rideau River in 1783 serving in the King's Rangers. Thereafter all records show him in Augusta. On Sep. 8, 1789 "Elijah Bottum of Augusta in the District of Luenburg, Province of Quebec" sold to his brother "Simon Bottum of Shaftsbury in the County of Bennington, State of Vermont" a tract of land in the township of Shaftsbury. In 1797 he petitioned for crown lands. The census records of 1798 - 1807 find him in Augusta, about 6 miles from Prescott. In 1804 he was assessed for the following property: 18:8 pounds; 100 acres cultivated; 2250 acres uncultivated; 1 house in the country; 2 additional fireplaces; 1 pair of stones (grist mill); 3 horses; 2 oxen; 5 cows; 6 young horned cattle; 1 pig. Elijah was a member of the Church of England and a church warden. There is an 1813 record of his membership in the Oswagatche Masonic Lodge.

Only Loyalists and children of Loyalists could claim crown lands for patriotic services. At various times between Feb. 20, 1810 and Oct. 28, 1835 each of Elijah's living children petitioned for and received land in Ontario "by order in Council". Elijah had 15 children by his three wives:

11 i. William Henry[5], born June 28, 1787.
ii. Polly, born May 12, 1789; married John Weatherhead.
iii. Lucy, born Mar. 25, 1791; married Duncan Campbell of Augusta.
iv. Alpheus, born June 11, 1793 - died Mar. 21, 1795.
v. Lemuel, born May 17, 1796 - died Jan. 27, 1797.
vi. Elizabeth, born Aug. 21, 1799 - died Mar. 26, 1828; married a Mr. Stone.

vii. Isaac, born Jan. 9, 1802; married on Apr. 18, 1824 Eliza Carlick. They lived in Oxford, Ontario. They had children:
  1a. Alfred[6] Bottum, b. Apr. 23, 1825 - d. July 7, 1826.
  2a. Teresa Harriett Bottum, b. Sep. 15, 1827.
  3a. Charles Frederick[6] Bottum, b. Apr. 4, 1830.
  4a. Child.
  5a. Child.
  6a. Isaac Bottum, d. Dec. 1840.
viii. Sarah, born Apr. 7, 1803 - d. Apr. 11, 1803.
ix. Walter Jones, born June 17, 1804 - died Sep. 28, 1805.
x. Harriet Terressa, born May 19, 1807, bapt. 1809 in Kingston - died Jan. 11, 1863.[1] She married Alonson Hurd, son of Andrew and Peggy (Mitchell) Hurd of Augusta. [Hurd, below] xi. Sarah Louise, born Sep. 13, 1808, bapt. 1809 in Kingston, Upper Canada - died Nov. 10, 1845; married Willard J. Miles.
xii. Ruth Ann, born June 4, 1810 - died Jan. 26, 1811.
xiii. Elisha, born Oct. 26, 1811; married Almira Burritt, daughter of Daniel Burritt. [Burritt, below] 12 xiv. Elijah[5], born Oct. 26, 1811. [Chapter XI]
xv. Ruth, born Mar. 12, 1814; married a Mr. Parsons.

SHERWOOD

Justus Sherwood came to New Haven, Vermont in 1774 from Norwich, Connecticut. One of the original surveyors and the first proprietors' clerk of the town, it is apparent that he was a leader and held the esteem of the community. He settled on a farm where he erected a log house, and married Sarah, the youngest daughter of Elijah [#6] and Dorothy (Williams) Bottum of Shaftsbury. Their house was on land which later was used for the Bottum cemetery on the road which became Lanesboro Street. The Revolutionary War found him outspokenly sympathetic to the mother country and he was accused of undercover Tory activities and giving aid to General Burgoyne's troops. There seems to be some question as to the validity of the case against him but, labeled "Jacob" by the Green Mountain Boys, he was arrested and tried. Given an humiliating sentence by a Bennington judge, he was so angered that he raised a company of Loyal Rangers. Commissioned Captain in the Secret Service, he joined Burgoyne in 1777 and served with the British throughout the rest of the war. He was probably the most prominent of the Champlain Valley Tories. His wife Sarah remained a short while in Vermont after his departure but she was allowed to join him at Ticonderoga, being "conveyed by a flagg". In 1779 the Vermont Banishment Act proscribed Justus Sherwood by name.

It is told that before leaving New Haven Justus Sherwood buried, in an iron pot with a potash kettle turned over it, someplace on his farm, all of the town records that had been in his care. It is also told that they were never found. Fearing that his property would be confiscated he transferred title to Elijah Bottum, his father-in-law. An orchard he had planted survived the war years in spite of neglect and the deer and the moose. The farm later belonged to Elias [#13] Bottum, grandson of Elijah, and it remained in his family until recent years. Justus Sherwood was a man of courage and was held in high regard by the British officers. During his service in the army he was known and remembered for his kindness to American prisoners of war in Canada. For his services to the king he received a pension of a crown a day for life and a grant of 1200 acres of land near the future site of the Blue Church in Augusta, across the river from Ogdensburg, New York. The land awarded the Loyalists was drawn by lottery, each soldier receiving 100 acres fronting on a river and 200 acres of land at a point beyond. His services were no doubt extraordinary, warranting such a large grant. After the war he and George Smith were British agents to exchange prisoners with Vermont, and he also represented the British in the abortive discussions for the annexation of Vermont to Canada.

Among the children of Justus and Sarah Sherwood were Livius, born 1777, James and Thomas. Family records mention that James and Thomas were educated at Williams College and became eminent lawyers. Lineal descendants from Livius through 5 generations were Edward, Edward Dillon, E.S. of Ottawa, Frederick Henry, and Phillip Justus Sherwood.

HAWLEY

1. Joseph Hawley, son of Judge Samuel Hawley, was born in England about 1603 and died in Stratford, Connecticut May 20, 1690. He was in America before 1658. He married about 1640 Katherine, daughter of Edward Birdseye. Children whose births were recorded at Stratford: Samuel, Joseph, Elizabeth, Ebenezer, Hannah, Ephraim, John, and Mary.

2. Samuel[2] Hawley, born 1648 - died at Stratford on Aug. 24, 1734; married (1) on Mar. 20, 1673 Mary, daughter of Thomas and Ann (Wells) Thompson of Farmington, and (2) Patience (Nichols) Hubbell, widow of Lt. John Hubbell. By his first marriage;

3. Ephraim[3] Hawley, born about 1692 - died Arlington, Vt. in 1771; married Sarah (or Phebe) Curtis. He came to Arlington and several of his children came also. He had 10 children: Jehiel, Matthew, Ephraim, Nathan, Patience, Abel, David, Josiah (a stone for him and his wife Hannah is in the Arlington cemetery), Gideon, and Phebe.

4. Jehiel[4] Hawley, born at Stratford, Ct. in 1712 - died at Shelburne, Vt. on Nov. 2, 1777; married (1) on Mar. 30, 1731 Sarah Dunning, born Aug. 14, 1713, the daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Miner) Dunning, and (2) Abia Hubbell. Jehiel moved to New Milford (now Bridgewater), Ct. with his father and family about 1743. In 1764, accompanied by his father and brother Josiah, he settled in Arlington, Vt., where they became large landowners under the New Hampshire grants. He had been a lay reader in the Episcopal church in Roxbury, Ct. for 12 years and he continued in this capacity after his move to Vermont. A stone in the churchyard in Arlington states that he was the founder of the church there. Devoted to his religion he had been lay missionary and lay reader. In 1784 it was organized into an Episcopal church through the efforts of Governor Chittenden's missionary brother, Bethuel, and it has continued a strong church to this day.

Jehiel Hawley was a leader in the affairs of early Arlington. In 1769 in connection with disputes over land claims of New York State and Vermont, with Samuel Safford for Bennington and Benjamin Calvin for Shaftsbury, he signed a petition to the crown for help in defending the Vermont titles against the claims of New York. This was the same year that Ethan Allen and his four brothers arrived from Litchfield, Ct. to undertake the military defense of the Vermonters. Bennington had been settled only eight years before and there were no settlements of consequence north of Bennington County. In 1772 Jehiel Hawley and James Breckenridge of Bennington were agents to London to obtain confirmation of the New Hampshire grants, an invaluable service to the Vermont land owners. Returning in the first heat of the revolutionary activity he was apprehended and imprisoned because of his loyalty to the British king.

He was released through the mediation of his friends and because of his services to Vermont and his umblemished character, but, at a loss as to where to turn to find asylum as most of his friends were Loyalists, he was forced by necessity to join the forces of General Burgoyne. Captured at Ticonderoga, he was invited to return to Arlington but he felt honor-bound to go to Canada. He died on the way at Shelburne, Vt. and is buried on the shore of Lake Champlain.

Jehiel Hawley owned 3000 acres in Arlington and had built a beautiful home there. Thomas Chittenden later purchased it from the Commission of Sequestration and it became the first governor's mansion in Vermont. Just previous to the war, Indian depredations had caused the Allen and Chittenden families to go south to the Massachusetts line but, in order to counteract the Loyalist influence, they returned during the war years. Governor Chittenden occupied the Hawley home, Ira Allen the one next door, and Ethan Allen lived on the main road to Shaftsbury (now Rt. 7). It is generally believed that the westward view from the knoll on which the Hawley house stood was the basis for the Vermont State Seal which dates from 1779.

The children of Jehiel Hawley were:

i. Andrew[5], born June 22, 1732.
ii. Phebe, born July 1, 1734; married Nov. 23, 1749 John Treat, born Sep. 4, 1724 - died May 27, 1804.
iii. Anna, born Nov. 26, 1736; married Phineas Hurd. [Hurd, below]
iv. Abijah, born Jan. 30, 1738 - died Apr. 20, 1832; married Molly Burritt on Jan. 1, 1785. She was born Nov. 1, 1763 and died July 26, 1819, a sister of Daniel Burritt. They were in Fairfax, Vt. in 1789.
v. Mary, born Mar. 24, 1739.
vi. Jeptha, born Sep. 29, 1740, lived near Bay of Quinta, C.W. in 1780. He married Dec. 26, 1762 Esther Castle, bapt. Aug. 17, 1746.
vii. Ruth, born Aug. 19, 1742; married on Feb. 23, 1761 Abel Mix. They lived in Woodbury, Ct.
viii. Jehiel, born Sep. 16, 1744
ix. Curtis, born Apr. 24, 1747 - died July 2, 1825; married Hannah French, born Apr. 20, 1747 - died Feb. 2, 1846.

5. Andrew[5] Hawley, born June 22, 1732 at New Milford, Ct. - died at Arlington, Vt. June 24, 1801; married on Jan. 2, 1757 Ann Hard, born 1735 - died Feb. 28, 1827, daughter of James and Hannah (Kimberly) Hard of Newtown, Ct. Their first 5 children were born in New Milford and the last 5 in Arlington, Vt.:

i. Eli, born Nov. 20, 1757 - died Jan. 19, 1850; married Widow Mary (Jeffers) McGeer of Charleur, Canada on Nov. 4, 1787. She was born Feb. 8, 1750 - died Mar. 16, 1814. He was a teacher in Canada; Arlington, Vt.; and Alton, Ill.
ii. Philo, born July 3, 1759 - died Nov. 2, 1856; married Hannah Leonard on Dec. 30, 1784. She was born Nov. 12, 1765 - died Dec. 31, 1858.

HURD

1. John Hurd, born 1664 at Stratford, Ct. - died 1731. His son,

2. Jabez Hurd, born 1707 - died 1793 at Arlington, Vt. His son,

3. Phineas Hurd, born Feb. 11, 1732 - died Dec. 31, 1777 in New York State; married at Newtown, Ct.
Annah (Anna) Hawley, born 1736 - died Dec. 22, 1822 at Augusta, Ontario, Canada, the daughter of Jehiel Hawley. [Hawley, above]

Phineas Hurd and his brother Gideon were in Arlington, Vt. as early as 1764. Like so many landowners in Vermont, Phineas Hawley was not enthusiastic about the war with Great Britain. The exact cause was never very clear but this father of twelve children and owner of one of the finest farms in the town became the first victim in Vermont of reprisal against his person by American patriots. In 1809 in her petition to the Canadian government for crown lands for herself and children, Annah Hurd told of the suffering and loss inflicted upon them and their children in retaliation for her husband's loyalty to the king. In brief, these are the facts. On August 22, 1777, Phineas Hurd was seized, taken to Bennington a few miles south of Arlington and arrested for his activities. He was able to send a message to his wife by Israel Burritt and this was the last word she ever had from him. Later it was learned that he had been imprisoned on a ship in the harbor of Esopus, New York and held without means of communications. After some time he was put in the town "gole" and, when the British destroyed the town by fire a few months later, it was presumed that he died in the conflagration. The home of Phineas and Annah Hurd was plundered of all its possessions and their farm of its stock. By order of the General Assembly she was allowed to use the farm for awhile. A year after the death of Phineas the lease of his land was given to Jacob Galusha [#6, Chapter XXXIV], in return for which he was to support Annah and her family. However, it was not long before she took her children to Canada. Three of her sons joined the British forces. The children were:

i. Tyrus, born 1759; killed in the war. He married Content Newton. Their son, Ashael, went to Canada in 1793.
ii. Ashael, born 1760; married twice,
(1) Sarah Burritt. [Burritt, below]
(2) Lois Burritt, sister of Sarah. By Sarah, his children were Truman, Esther, Elias, Jehiel, Eli and Stephen, b. Mar. 17, 1802 - d. after 1879; married Lucretia, daughter of Stephen Burritt. By Lois, he had Lois, Ashael, and Isaac Nelson.
iii. Jehiel, who settled in Augusta, Canada where he lived and died.
iv. Mary (Molley) Hurd married twice,
(1) Elisha Stone, and
(2) Elijah[4] Bottum [#8, above], as his third wife.
v. Andrew, born Oct. 7, 1770 - died Mar. 22, 1842; married Peggy Mitchell, died Nov. 10, 1857 at age of 82. They settled in Augusta and had 4 children:
1a. Maria (Marcia), died 1822 in her 21st year; married William Henry Bottum [Chapter XI, #11], as his 1st. wife.
2a. Alonzo, died in 1838 at age 30.
3a. Alonson, d. Aug. 25, 1876 at age 68 years and 11 months; married Harriet Terressa Bottum, died Jan. 11, 1868 at about 61, the daughter of Elijah [#8, above] and Molley Stone (nee Hurd) Bottum. They had 2 children.
4a. Sereus, died in 1825 at age 19.
vi. Isaac settled in Augusta.
vii. Phebe married Jeremiah Turner.
viii. Jabez ("Jabesh") settled in Augusta.
ix. Hester married Robert Buck.

BURRITT

There were several generations of Burritts in America before the Stephen Burritt of Stratford and Newtown, Connecticut who had sons:

Amos, Israel, Andrew, Daniel, and several daughters.

Daniel Burritt settled in Arlington, Vermont about 1774 where he lived until 1790 when he went to Canada to be with his children. He died in 1836 in his 98th year. Loyal to the king, he and his family opposed the American cause, his five sons all holding commissions in the British army. However, only his son Stephen had settled in Canada before the close of the war. The Burritts were connected by marriage with the families of Bottum, Hurd, Hawley, and Landon. He had 11 children:

1. Lois, born Oct. 16, 1756 - died in her 93rd year. She married Ashael Hurd, widower of her sister Sarah. They had 3 children. [Hurd, above]

2. Adoniram, born July 16, 1758 - died at age 98. He married Sarah Reid, daughter of Moses Reid. Before the war he settled on a farm adjoining his father's in Arlington, Vermont. He fought with the Loyalists at the Battle of Bennington. He had 9 children, one of whom was Charles Burritt of Augusta, Ontario.

3. Stephen, born Nov. 2, 1759. He fought at the side of his brother Adoniram at the Battle of Bennington, afterwards escaping to St. Johns, Quebec where he joined the British army. He married Martha Stephens. In 1793 they were the 1st settlers on the Rideau River at the site which was later Burritt Rapids. Their children:
   Henry, Edmond, Sally, William Augustus, Hamilton, and Lucretia who married Stephen Hurd, son of Phineas and Annah Hurd (above).

4. Edmund, born Dec. 7, 1761 - died in his 36th year; married Sally Hines.

5. Phoebe, born Oct. 6, 1763 - died at 82 years; married a Mr. Buck. They had 8 children.

6. Esther, born May 8, 1765 - died at 82 years; married (1) Mr. Young, and (2) Mr. Benedict. She had 7 children.

7. Urania, born Feb. 13, 1767; married Marcus P. Phillips. They had 6 children.

8. Daniel. There are conflicting dates for his birth. The Burritt genealogy says that he married Electa Landon, but the Bottum family Bible says that he married Sarah Landon. The Burritt genealogy also says that Daniel married twice, so Sarah could then be his second wife. It is said that he fought in the Revolutionary War and it is a matter of official record that he served as captain and major in the 2nd Regiment of Grenville Militia during the War of 1812. In 1793 he settled on the Rideau River, 1st Concession of Marlborough. In 1802 he was a government clerk.

Daniel Burritt had 6 children:

i. George Landon, born 1798; married Sarah Adams.
ii. Daniel Hamlet married Esther Young.
iii. Walter Horatio married Maria Schofield.
iv. Urania married William Loucks.
v. Minerva, born June 18, 1818; married on June 28, 1838 Elijah[5] Bottum [#12], son of Elijah and Molley Stone (nee Hurd) Bottum. [Hurd, this chapter]
vi. Almira married Elisha Bottum, twin brother of Elijah.

BOTTUM

9. George Burritt, known as Major, died at age of about 90. He married (1) a Miss Hawley, and (2) a Miss Hurd.

10. Sarah (Sally) was the first wife of Ashael Hurd.[Hurd, this chapter] She died at age 36 years. She had 6 children.

11. Tamar married a Mr. Wright. She had 7 children.

DESCENDANTS OF DANIEL[2] LONGBOTTOM

CHAPTER IX FOURTH GENERATION FROM DANIEL[1] LONGBOTTOM

SIMON BOTTUM 1759-1822

9. Simon[4] Bottum was the son of Elijah [#6] and Dorothy (Williams) Bottum, born at Norwich, Ct. on Aug. 23, 1759 - died at Shaftsbury, Vt. on Feb. 7, 1822. He was 8 years old when he trekked with his family from Connecticut to Vermont and he lived to see the primitive frontier develop into prosperous towns and farm lands. His brother Elijah fought with the British and remained in Canada after the Revolutionary War as did the husband of his sister Sarah. Wherever his sympathies may have been it appears that he remained at home and tended the farm with his father. He was in his 30th year when he married, on May 13, 1790 at Shaftsbury,

Elizabeth Huntington, the daughter of Nathan[4] (Matthew[3], Christopher[2&1]) and Amy (Brown) Huntington.[1] Born in Norwich in 1767/8, she was a baby when her family migrated to Shaftsbury in 1768, the same year that the Bottums came. Simon was a "practical and progressive farmer" and was noted for his fine merino sheep. He was a merchant as well as a farmer. In 1805 he built a store a mile or so northeast of his home on the site of the future railroad station and post office. A few years later he set up his oldest son Elias in business as a merchant in New Haven, Vermont. Simon was a town selectman and for many years the town treasurer. In 1813 he was town assessor with Jacob Galusha and Amos Huntington, Jr. His parents were among those who organized the Baptist church in Shaftsbury and he and Elizabeth supported the church all of their lives. He amply provided for the education of all of his children. In 1785 he bought a 500 acre farm in New Haven and in 1810, for $1000, another 500 acre farm in north central Vermont at Greensboro. As fathers were accustomed to do in that day if they had the means, he later gave these two farms, one half to each, to his two sons Elias and Nathan H. as a start in life. However, in 1815, the spring before his marriage, Nathan H. sold his shares to Elias and bought the house next to his father's on the south and a part of the home place which then included 200 acres of glebe land east of the houses, several wood lots on West Mountain, grazing land for the sheep, and meadows to support 50 head of cattle - 500 acres in all. In 1815 their farms were valued at $6825, the highest on the town lists. Simon's parents lived with him in their advanced years. When he died he made generous provisions for his daughters, Betsy Galusha and Caroline, then 18, and left his share of the home place to his son Lemuel, then 22. Elijah had died in 1817. R.B. Lacy

1. Amy (Amie) Brown was the daughter of John[5] (John[4], Nathaniel[3], John[2], Edward) Brown and his wife Amie Fellows, daughter of John [3] (Ephraim[2], William) Fellows.

Simon and Elizabeth Bottum had 6 children:

13 i. Elias[5], born Feb. 3, 1791 - died Feb. 6, 1866.
14 ii. Nathan H.[5], born Jan. 24, 1793 - died Aug. 4, 1855.
iii. Betsey, born Feb. 13, 1796; married Elon Galusha [#16, Galusha Family, Chapter XXXIV].
iv. Elijah, born Feb. 17, 1798 - died May 23, 1817.
15 v. Lemuel, born Aug. 28, 1800 - died July 14, 1880.
vi. Caroline, born July 6, 1804; married
(1) Daniel Loomis [this chapter].
(2) Seneca S. Spencer [Spencer Family, Chapter XXXX].

DANIEL[4] BOTTUM OF WOODSTOCK, CONNECTICUT

10. Daniel[4] (Daniel[3,2,1]) Bottum, born on Feb. 15, 1763 at Norwich, Ct. - died on Aug. 4, 1831 at East Woodstock, Ct. and buried there in the cemetery beside his wife, the son of Daniel [#7] and Sarah (Dow) Bottum; married on May 15, 1788 at Norwich, Ct.

Elizabeth "Betsey" Hyde, born at Norwich on June 12, 1766 - died at Southbridge, Mass., the daughter of Asa and Lucy (French) Hyde of Groton, Ct. [Hyde, this chapter] Soon after their marriage he bought a large farm in what is now Woodstock, Ct., then called North Society. The house in which they lived was an old tavern located on the Springfield - Woodstock turnpike, purchased in 1797 from Asa Ballard who had bought it from William Morris. Even then it was an historic building and had housed many noted guests. Daniel was a talented musician. He taught in some of the old time singing schools and was one of the three appointed choristers of the Congregational church. He was a public spirited man and a leading citizen of the community. He had a large farm and was successful at this as well as at his trade of manufacturing coffins. He left a large estate to his widow, who never remarried even though she lived till Mar. 22, 1855. They had 8 children, all born in Woodstock:

i. Lucinda, born Mar. 9, 1789.
ii. Elizabeth "Betsey", born Oct. 23, 1790 - died at Webster, Mass. on Sep. 1, 1867; married at Woodstock Feb. 1, 1825 Uriah Allard.
16 iii. John[5], born Sep. 16, 1792.
iv. Jedd[5], born Aug. 26, 1794 - died May 28, 1877; married Emeline Morse, a descendant of Anthony Morse (who died at Newbury, Mass. on Oct. 12, 1696), born 1807 at Southbridge, Mass. - died there on Nov. 20, 1882. They are buried in Pratt District Cemetery, three miles north of Woodstock, beside their only child:

a. Harriet Bottum, born 1833 - died 1837.

17 v. Harry5, born Nov. 13, 1796 - died Aug. 29, 1837.
18 vi. Abial5, born Feb. 15, 1799 - died Mar. 5, 1885.
vii. Lucy H., born Apr. 15, 1801 - died at Webster, Mass., unmarried.
viii. Mary, born Aug. 28, 1803 - died in childhood.

CHAPTER X EARLY SHAFTSBURY HOMES

The old Bottum homes in Shaftsbury are to be found on the main road north from Bennington to Arlington on Route 7 as it follows the broad valley between the Green Mountains on the east and the Taconics to the west. The oldest house still standing in the town is located just south of the village of South Shaftsbury on the west side of the road - a half-stone house built in 1769 by Peleg Cole two years after Elijah Bottum from Connecticut settled nearby. In 1920 it became the home of the poet Robert Frost and has remained in his family. Just beyond the crossroads of the village is the town clerk's office where the original charter of the town and a map of the original lots and owners may be seen.

A little beyond the village on the east side of the road stands the large Joshua Munro house with its Palladian window and impressive facade, built in 1807 by a man from Rhode Island who made a fortune in wheat during the Napoleonic wars. It is believed to have been designed by Lavius Fillmore who had just finished the beautiful meeting house in Bennington.

On the west side of the road further on is the imposing brick house with the one white pillar which was built by Harlow Huntington [#7-ii], brother of Peace Bottum and grandson of Captain Amos Huntington who came from Norwich, Connecticut in 1768. This house was built in 1858 at a cost of $1910.80. It has had no structural changes except for a one story addition in the rear. After the death of Harlow Huntington it became the home of his son-in-law, Horace B. Bottum [#26] and then of his grandson, Harlow A. Bottum. It was also the home of Calvin H. Bottum, Harlow's brother, after he retired from his law practice in Nebraska. In a building which still stands behind this house the women of Shaftsbury prayed during the Battle of Bennington on August 16, 1777. A group of Baptists also met there for a time before the Center Shaftsbury Church was established.

Across the road a bit further north, at the end of a long driveway, is the home built in 1807 by Jacob Galusha [#6-iii] who had come from Norwich with his brothers in 1775.

Half a mile beyond on the west side of the road at Center Shaftsbury is the large square tavern bearing the date 1787, built by Captain David [#8] Galusha, brother of Jacob. In 1782 Governor Thomas Chittenden met with his Council at this house to hear a report by Ira Allen and Jonas Fay on their negotiations with Congress regarding the entrance of Vermont into the Union, which event did not take place for another nine years. Five years later during Shays' Rebellion a hundred men from Massachusetts gathered at the Galusha Tavern but moved on out of the state at the request of the town authorities. President Timothy Dwight of Yale visited Shaftsbury in 1798 and described at length the view from the Inn at which he stayed, presumably here.

Next, on the northeast corner of what was once a small crossroads village, stands the Center Shaftsbury Church, the oldest Baptist Church in the state, established in 1768. [Chapter VII] The present building was erected in 1846. Its spacious burying ground marks the graves of the earliest settlers and many of their descendants to the present day. A fund left by Calvin [Chap. XXXV, #7-iii] Huntington, another brother of Peace Bottum, provides for perpetual care which has made it one of the most beautiful old cemeteries in the country.

Just across the side road that goes to the east immediately south of the church is the former home of Ralph Hyde [#40] Bottum, son of Horace B. and Harriet Ellen (Huntington) Bottum, where his son Lynn Andrus Bottum grew up.

Less than half a mile beyond the church on the west side of the road stands the beautiful and historic homestead of Governor Jonas Galusha [Chap. XXXIV, #9] with its fine Palladian window and decorated cornices, which he himself built in 1783. Iron hinges are evidence of his own handiwork and two bedrooms still retain the hand-painted floral designs on the plaster walls done by an itinerant artist. Until a wall was recently moved back to its original position, there was a concealed space under the governor's bedroom, a reminder that he had been an official of the underground railway that helped escaping slaves to safety. This old house is today the home of A. Ranney [#46] Galusha, a great, great, great grandson of Jonas and a descendant of the pioneer Elijah [#6] Bottum through his grandmother, Fanny [#23-iii] Bottum Galusha.

Here at the base of Bottum Hill lies the large Bottum farm of former days, with its three homes. At the very foot of the hill on the east side of the road is the house built by Judge Nathan H. Bottum in 1847 after a fire had destroyed the one he had purchased on the same site in 1815 from John Downer.[1] Directly across the road is the home built in 1858 by his son Nathan.[2] The third home, on the east side of the road and a quarter of a mile to the north and just before a side road bears off to the northeast toward the store and railway station, which are a part of the family history also, is the oldest of the Bottum houses, built by Simon Bottum and his father. This spacious house, with its nine fireplaces, was built soon after Simon [#9] Bottum was married, since he is recorded in the household of Elijah on the 1790 census and in a separate household on the 1800 census.[3] Simon was 30 when he married Betsy Huntington on May 13, 1790 and already a prosperous farmer. Across the road from this old house is the site of the cabin that Elijah Bottum built on his first trip to the Green Mountains in 1767. Later there was an orchard here but traces of it are hard to find today. On a knoll to the north of the cabin site was located the school house where many of the Bottmms were teachers as well as "scholars" over the years.

The large Simon Bottum home is of fine proportions and is in good condition after a hundred and eighty years. The chimneys were placed in the center of each half of the house instead of at the ends, so that each

1 The John Downer house was erected in 1792.

2 At a cost of $793.65 according to Nathan's account book, half of the cost being for labor at $1.50 to $2.00 a day.

3 The present owners have "1805" on the house.

chimney served fireplaces for four rooms, two on each floor, eight in all. The large kitchen wing still retains the big fireplace, built-in oven, and built-in copper kettle common in that day. Recently added picture windows look out to the north from the kitchen and dining room upon one of the most beautiful views of valley and mountains in the state. A two-story porch, added many years ago, formerly covered the front and south side of the house. The entrance, originally in the classic New England style on the center front of the house, has now been changed to the south side. This house also has the tradition of being a part of the underground railway by means of a tunnel from the cellar to the barns which were once located at a lower level in the rear to the northeast. Simon Bottum established his oldest son Elias on the large family farm in New Haven, which he had owned for twenty years, giving half of it to his son Nathan H. who was still attending school at the time. His third son Elijah had died at 19, so it was his youngest son Lemuel [#15], at the time only 22, who inherited the home farm upon his death. This remained in the family until 1877 when Lemuel's son Edward [#27] sold the house to Marshall Dunlap, father of Fidelia, the young wife of H. Merle Bottum [#35] who lived next door to the south. After Marshall Dunlap's death this part of the old Bottum farm became the property of Ben Hewlett who also purchased the adjoining farm and home of H. Merle Bottum after his death in 1921. Mr. Hewlett's daughter was still living there in 1964.

About the time of his marriage to Peace Huntington in 1815 Nathan H. Bottum [#14], second son of Simon, bought the home and land just south of his father's place from John Downer. He rebuilt the chimney in 1829, at which time he laid in its masonry a paper giving these dates which was recovered after the fire which destroyed the dwelling in 1847. The present home was built on the site of the old one and here he spent the rest of his life as did his son Norman and his grandson Henry Merle Bottum. This is a spacious and comfortable New England farm home of fifteen rooms with the wing on the right, referred to as "our own rooms" in a letter by Peace, containing the only fireplace, since fireplaces were then looked upon as old fashioned. There were nine bedrooms in the house with a private stairway to the hired girl's room over the wing and another going up from the large woodshed and tool room in the rear to the hired man's room. The big kitchen had three pantries off from it, later combined into one, and a long metal lined sink with running water piped in from a spring on the mountainside, which was kept from freezing in the winter by being turned on to a trickle day and night. There was a built-in oven and brass kettle (used for boiling clothes on wash day) behind the big wood-burning cook stove, and a long center table for work, sociability, and Sunday night suppers. The dining room was part of the family room where the fireplace was. Franklin stoves heated the front and back parlors which opened in to this family room as also did the front stairway. The entrance hall, which could be opened up for heating from the family room in the winter time, was large enough to hold a grand piano and was next to the front porch where friends and neighbors of this musical family often gathered for sings in summer.

Across the road is the third home on the old Bottum farm, built in 1858, after the death of his father, by Nathan [#24] Bottum for his bride Frances Ranney. She was the sister of his brother Norman's wife, so the two brothers and the two sisters lived across the road from each other and the joint operation of their farm made the N & N Bottum name in wool, sheep and cattle well-known. Originally this place had been the farm of George Niles, one of the first settlers in Shaftsbury. After Nathan's death this home was sold since his only son, George Henry Bottum [#36], was a doctor practicing in New York City.

Only a stone's throw down the lane was the sugar house where friends, needing no invitation, gathered on the occasion of new fallen snow in early spring to pour hot maple syrup on the snowbanks for a "sugaring off" party. The beautiful double rows of maple trees in the lane by the sheep barn, where the sap was collected in an enormous wooden tub drawn on a sled by oxen, are now all gone, but the little brook in the meadow is there still, choked with a blue carpet of forget-me-nots along each bank. The proud red barns, with the sheep on their golden weather-vanes, are no longer proud, but the house stands erect, remembering its heritage. The front walk is, of course, white marble.

In 1921, with the death of Henry Merle Bottum of the fourth generation after the pioneer Elijah, the Bottum name virtually disappeared along this road which had known so many of them so well for a hundred and fifty years.

THE VERMONT FAMILY

13. Elias[5] (Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]) Bottum, born at Shaftsbury, Vermont on Feb. 3, 1791 - died at New Haven, Vermont on Feb. 6, 1865, the son of Simon and Elizabeth (Huntington) Bottum; married in December of 1811

Diadama Squier, born at New Haven, Vt. on June 25, 1790 - died May 28, 1889, the daughter of Andrew and Nancy (Cole) Squier of Lanesboro, Mass.[1] Elias was educated in the common schools of Shaftsbury. In 1809 he located in New Haven on one of his father's farms. This farm had belonged to Justus Sherwood, a Tory during the Revolutionary War, who had married his aunt, Sarah Bottum, daughter of Elijah [#6]. Because of their allegiance to the king, Justus and Sarah Sherwood had moved to Canada early in the war and had never returned to live. He subsequently sold his Vermont property to his father-in-law. Elias used the best ma-teral in the abandoned Sherwood cabin and, moving a few hundred yards north he constructed a temporary home in which to live while a permanent home was being constructed. This building was later moved onto another of Elias' farms and converted to a pig pen and a butcher shop. It is still standing on this site. The original location of the Sherwood cabin was a cemetery for many years. Later the bodies buried there were moved to Evergreen Cemetery in New Haven Village. At one time the farm properties of Elias Bottum consisted of over a thousand acres. In the 1850s it was the largest dairy in the state. The original Bottum house and some of the land was sold to C.H. Conant. His daughter, Mrs. Alice C. Landon, lives there now. The present Bottum farm has about 300 acres. The home here was built by Elias Simon Bottum about 1850 for his bride. In 1912 lightning destroyed the cow barn, horse barn and other buildings. These were rebuilt but the house is the only original building left. The widow of Carroll[8] Bottum [#45] resides there now.

Elias and Diadama Bottum became members of the Congregatoonal Church of New Haven on July 3, 1831. He was in the Vermont Legislature in 1822-1829, a senator from Addison County in 1840-1841, on the Council of Censors in 1836, and assistant judge in 1847-1849. In his later years he was always referred to as Judge Bottum.

Elias[5] and Diadama Bottum had four children:

i. Mary Ann, born Sep. 15, 1812 - died in Feb. of 1875. She married in 1838 Julius Sprague. They had no children.

ii. Charlotte Emeline, born July 4, 1815 - died June 1, 1863. She married on Sep. 6, 1836 Ezra M. Hoyt, son of Ezra and Jerusha (Phelps) Hoyt of New Haven, Vt.[2] He died June 1, 1851. They became members of the Congregational Church in 1834. They had 1 child:
a. George Wilberforce Hoyt, born 1844 - died 1856.

iii. Caroline Eliza, born June 13, 1818 - died 1842; married 1840 the Rev. James Meacham. He died June 2, 1843. They had 1 child who died in infancy:
a. Elias Bottum Meacham.

21 iv. Simon Elias[6] Bottum, born Sep. 18, 1821 - died Nov. 7, 1877.

1. Lt. Andrew and Huldah (Bronson) Squier of Woodbury, Ct. moved to Lanesboro, Mass. in 1779 and to New Haven, Vt. in 1790. Their children were Timothy, who located in Orwell, Vt. and died in 1855; Eleanor; Andrew; Wait; Ebenezer and Amos. Andrew, born 1763 - died Nov. 11, 1855, settled in New Haven in 1787 and married Nancy Cole, born 1765 - died May 20, 1841. Their daughter, Diadama, married Elias Bottum (above). With his brothers, Timothy and Wait, Andrew lived on a street known as Lanesboro running north from the village. All three brothers were six feet tall and sat in the same pew at church. Andrew Squier took an active part in town affairs. He served as selectman and cooperated earnestly with Judge Hoyt in securing the erection of the Congregational Church. He had a son Alvin Squier who had children Elanor, Lucius, Sarah, Charlotte, Andrew, Edward Hallock, Argaylus and Mary. Edward Hallock Squier had children Alvin C. and Charles F. Squier. Charles F. had children Carrie M. and Louisa E.

2. The Hon. Ezra Hoyt, son of Ezra and Sarah (Seymour) Hoyt, born at Norwalk, Mass. on Oct. 16, 1770 - died on Aug. 5, 1831, settled in Vermont toward the end of the 18th century. On Feb. 28, 1790 he married Sarah Smith, born 1772, daughter of Jonathan Smith of Lanesboro, Mass. They moved to New Haven, Vt. in 1792 and she died Apr. 11, 1798. Their children were Laura, Otto Smith and Sarah Jane. He married (2) Jerusha Phelps, daughter of Matthew Phelps. They had 6 children: Ova Phelps, Sarah, Charlotte, Rhoda, Ezra M. and George. The Hon. Ezra Hoyt, a lawyer and judge, was active in politics and civic affairs, holding many offices and appointments. He was a member of the House of Representatives for several terms between 1797 and 1817. His son Ezra M. Hoyt prepared for college but poor health interrupted his studies. He married Charlotte, daughter of Judge Elias Bottum.

Until he was ten years old, Nathan Huntington Bottum attended school six or seven months of the year, after that only in winter since he was employed on the farm the rest of the year - as were all farm boys in New England in that day. In his Journal, which he started in 1813, he wrote that he was anxious to excel in school and was determined to get an education. The last three winters spent in the home schoolhouse, which was only a quarter of a mile north and across the road from where he lived, he was fortunate in having two young men from Williams College for his teachers. To the usual curriculum of reading, writing, spelling and arithmetic they added the study of English grammar, surveying, navigation, Latin, natural philosophy, higher mathematics, chemistry and rhetoric. His parents offered to educate him for a profession, which in those days meant a choice of the ministry, medicine or law, but from the first he had felt drawn to the land by his love of nature. The winter of 1811, at the age of nineteen, he taught the first school in North Bennington and the same year he attended the meetings of a society formed to improve the speaking and writing abilities of its members. In 1813 he matriculated at Middlebury College, using the money he had earned teaching. There he studied logic, geography, metaphysics and astronomy. He was a natural student and he found it difficult to make the decision to return to the family, which he did after five months.

While at Middlebury he began a journal in which he related what he knew of his family's history and spoke of the events which had led to his conversion. To understand the seriousness of his writings it should be realized that the War of 1812 had just ended. This had been "a year of war and pestilence". Vermont was a border state and again families were distressed by divided loyalties, many having members living in Canada and fighting against annexation by the United States. "A plague that killed thousands", originating with soldiers stationed at Lake Champlain, had swept through the state. Called "spotted fever", it was probably a form of meningitis. Related to these fearful times, religious revivals also flared up all over the state. Nathan's parents were foremost supporters of the Baptist Church. After much soul-searching, he was baptized in May of 1811 as part of a revival that added 100 members to the Shaftsbury Center Church in one year. Peace Huntington, the girl he was to marry four years later, was baptized the same day. The sincerity of his religious commitment was demonstrated throughout his life.

Having decided both against studying for a profession and going into the mercantile business either at his father's store in Shaftsbury or with his brother Elias in New Haven, Vt., he sold to Elias his half of the large New Haven farm which his father had given the brothers as a start in life and bought the farm in Shaftsbury next to his father's on the south. In 1815, at the age of twenty-two, he married his second cousin, Peace Huntington, and settled on his farm for life.

Peace is described as a "young lady of much worth and humble piety." In their later years fine oil portraits were made of both Peace and Nathan. In hers she appears serene, warm hearted and wise, just as her letters reveal her to be. A forceful man, shrewd and determined but kind, looks out from Nathan's portrait. No pictures taken in their youth have been found. In writing of their early married life he relates that they soon overcame "the difficulties of a house in a bad state of repair, poorly cultivated land, a mortgage, and my indifferent health." In a short time he became a prosperous, successful farmer like his father and a respected and beloved citizen. For many years he served as clerk of the church and was a leader in its rebuilding on the same site in 1846. He wrote the account of this historic church for Crocker's Baptist Church in Vermont and for Stephen Wright's Shaftsbury Baptist Association. He was a life member of the American and Foreign Bible Society and he made his wife and children life members also through donations in his will.

The portraits of Nathan H. and Peace Huntington Bottum, though unsigned, are thought to be the work of Daniel Huntington (1816-1906), the well-known artist in New York City where Nathan H. and Peace Bottum frequently visited relatives. Daniel's father, Benjamin[5] Huntington, descendant of Simon and Margaret Baret Huntington, was born in Norwich, Connecticut. The three were 4th cousins in the Huntington line. As Daniel was so well known it would have been natural for them to have sought him out. After graduation from Hamilton College, Daniel Huntington studied with the artist Samuel F.B. Morse (later the inventor) and became a successor of his as president for over twenty years of the American Academy of Design. He painted many famous people of his day - Abraham Lincoln, Van Buren, Gallatin, Generals Grant, Sherman, and Sheridan and members of the Dupont, Vanderbilt and Morgan families. Many of his portraits may be seen at the New York Chamber of Commerce and copies of his work are in the Frick Art Reference Library in New York City. The Bottum portraits would be a part of his early work, painted in his thirties, examples of which may be seen in the above collection. The original portraits of Nathan H. and Peace Bottum belong to Marion Peace Barrett Cameron of Babylon, New York who received them from her mother, Stella Bottum Barrett, daughter of H. Merle Bottum [#35]. They had remained in the Nathan H. Bottum home until it was sold after the death of H. Merle Bottum. A second pair of portraits, a slightly smaller copy of the originals and painted by an unknown artist, is owned by Ruth Barrett Lacy of Ithaca, New York, sister of Marion Cameron. These were a gift to her from Helen Bottum Sawyer of Burton, Washington, a granddaughter of Nathan H Bottum's son Nathan. These had traveled afar, south and west, with the family of Nathan's son George, until they have come back to be near their starting place.

Nathan H. Bottum was constable, collector, and selectman of the town of Shaftsbury, "often a guardian of orphans and counsellor of many". At the age of 32 he became a member of the state legislature for three successive years. He was twice a delegate to meetings on amendments to the state constitution. Judge of the Probate Court for the District of Bennington and Assistant Judge of the County Court, he was known as "Judge Bottum" for the rest of his life. He was county treasurer for ten years and a director of the Vermont Mutual Insurance Company, the agency of this company remaining in the family over a hundred years. He was a director of the Bennington Bank and of several others, owning stock in the banks of Woodstock, North Bennington, Battenkill, Vergennes, Rutland, Middlebury, and the Farmers' Bank of Troy. When the Bottum homestead was sold in 1921 the flat silver was still wrapped in some of the bank notes of the Bennington Bank (tarnish-proof paper!) which had needed only Judge Bottum's signature to turn them into currency. These probably had been printed when he was appointed receiver and acting president of the bank. He had resigned from the board some years previously when he disagreed with its policies. He was also a director of the New Hampton Institute, a theological seminary in Fairfax, Vermont, and of Brandon Academy.

In 1854 his biography was included in the American Portrait Gallery with a steel engraving made from his oil painting. This was a Who's Who of that day published by John Livingston of New York City. In it are given three maxims "he early laid down by which to be governed in the avocations of life" -

> "No work is worth doing at all unless worth doing well.
> A strict account should be kept of all expenditures, and no business be prosecuted which proves unprofitable.
> It is better to have small expenses than to live expecting large but uncertain profits."

Hiland Hall who later became governor of Vermont wrote of his friend Nathan H. Bottum -

> "His home business was that of a farmer but, possessing a clear and investigating mind, sound discriminating judgement and undoubted integrity, he was, for a considerable portion of his life, called upon to transact business abroad in the capacity of executor and trustee of estates, commissioner, auditor, referee, insurance and bank director, etc., in the service of the town and state in official positions."

A paper dated 1829, found in the chimney of his home many years later and addressed in his own handwriting to "Posterity", reads -

> "This paper is deposited to inform whomever may tear this away . . . that though the writer of these lines may long have slept in death, and perhaps all his children (he has four living), yet he now has a hope in Christ that he shall again be raised to a blessed immortality beyond the grave. Reader, hast thou an interest in the Saviour? If not, the voice of one from the dead speaks to you. Prepare to meet your God for in such an hour as you think not, the son of man cometh, and without repentance for sin and faith in Christ, where our blessed Saviour has gone you cannot come."

In 1836 there was a great fever of emigration to "the west", which then meant New York State as well as Illinois and Michigan. He bought lands in Clinton, Ottawa, Ionia, and Eaton counties in Michigan, near Lansing and Grand Rapids. Among family papers are three deeds for 520 acres of land in Ionia, which have the signature of President Martin Van Buren. A letter to his sister Caroline, dated 1844, says that he had once considered moving to Michigan.

> "In 1836 it was so fashionable to emigrate, & it looked so somewhat enticing or enchanting even, to live in a log house & begin > a new farm, that I really thought I should like it; but there are so many privations & drawbacks that I hardly think I shall attempt it. The want of roads & mills & meetings & schools & highways & comfortable houses & barns, & fruits, & the abundance of wolves & mosquitoes, together with greater prevalence of fevers & agues, etc. altogether united, seem enough to keep me & others back. Still, for those who have no farms & cannot get them in an old country, it is well to go and live on anticipation a few years. It is light food, but very healthy and exhilerating withal & very abundant in a new country. I did not have much time or money to spend in traveling except in those sections of the state where my land was situated. The country around the Grand River is probably settling as fast as any part of Michigan. Forty emigrants arrived at Grand Rapids the day I was there and they were arriving every day. The steamboats were filled with emigrants to Wisconsin and Illinois also."

Busy as Nathan was, he managed to visit members of the family from time to time. Letters tell of going to Lockport, Buffalo, Rochester, and the Utica area - as well as to relatives in Canada - traveling by stage, river boat, the Erie Canal barge and the railroad. These letters reveal many facets of his character as well as the high regard in which his relatives held him. After the death of Daniel Loomis, his cousin and husband of his sister Caroline, he became the guardian of Daniel's children by his first wife. Caroline was eleven years younger than her brother and, over a period of some 30 years, his letters show a fatherly concern in her welfare as she marries again and has a family of her own. One written in 1822 while she was attending boarding school in Williamstown, Massachusetts reveals a lighter, humorous side of his character.

> "All the mountains retain their relative situations; the landcapes their diversified beauty; the public edifices their wanted magnificence and splendor; the people their generally extreme sociability and politeness; the dandies their odiferous locks, their striped whites and silver stirrups; the old maids, just turned thirty or fifty as the case may be, maintaining all the graces of form, beauty, and fashion, with eyes sparkling with youth, cheeks blooming with the most refined delicacy, sensibility of mind and manners attending, etc. . . Passing over fifty other subjects all remaining about as usual . . . I expect the stage every moment. Please do write a few lines if convenient and thereby oblige your friend and brother,
> Nathan H. Bottum"

He was an esteemed and beloved counselor and friend of Peace's family also. Many details of his relationship with them are found in letters from her brothers. Four of them and her only sister, Pamelia, continued through the years to seek Nathan's guidance in their affairs, entrusting the settlement of their family estates to him even after they had left the big colonial home west of Center Shaftsbury and moved to Rochester in the 1840s.

Nathan Bottum was an extensive landowner in Greensboro, Glastonbury.

and Shaftsbury, as well as the lands in Michigan. Among the family records are sixteen deeds in addition to the ones for the home place, glebe land and shares in the parsonage and meeting house. There is also the record of the $100,000 mortgage on the land in New York City (originally Shoemakers' Field) which was left by Jan Auberdinck to the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church there, purchased in 1841 from Elias Huntington, uncle of his wife, by Nathan H. Bottum and three other Shaftsbury men. At the time of his death his estate was inventoried at $25,400.

At this time in New England tuberculosis was a terrible scrouge, accounting for one third of the deaths in Vermont. Letters from Peace's brothers express their concern over Judge Bottum's poor health and invite him to go south with them, and to Europe, for a milder climate. In one of Peace's letters there is a reference to their having been to Virginia. In one to their son Elijah shortly before his death she wrote that they had not heard his father's voice in six months, but were still able to profit from his good counsel. At the age of sixty-two he died at his home in the deep valley between the Green Mountains he loved so much. A tall shaft in the Center Shaftsbury Church cemetery marks his resting place.

DANIEL WEBSTER AT STRATTON MOUNTAIN

Over 10,000 people turned out on July 7th & 8th, 1840 to hear Daniel Webster speak on Stratton Mountain, halfway between Arlington and Townshend, Vermont. Judge Nathan H. Bottum of Shaftsbury introduced him and Dr. Waitstill R. Ranney of Townshend presided at this great Whig rally. Descendants of those thousands who came originally by wagon, stagecoach, horseback and afoot gathered there in 1940 to celebrate the Webster centennial, on this occasion some 1500 arriving in 600 cars. Judge Bottum's sons Norman and Nathan had married Dr. Ranney's daughters Helen and Frances, and at the centennial celebration Norman D. Bottum of Williamstown, Massachusetts and Mrs. Stella Bottum Barrett of Babylon, New York took part in the ceremonies as great-grandchildren of both men.

In 1840, as now, this was a remote place for a public gathering. Today it can be reached only from Stratton village to the east, since only a logging road runs down the mountain west to Arlington. The village, three miles away from the meeting area on top of the mountain, consisted of only eight or ten houses and the Torrey Tavern where the great Daniel stayed. Many people slept in the open. A bronze marker can be found in a small clearing by the road. This location had been a compromise in a heated controversy between Bennington and Windham counties for the honor of having Webster speak. A line was drawn from the far northern corner of each county to the opposite southern corner of its neighbor, and Stratton Mountain happened to be the point of intersection. Tradition in both the Bottum and Hall families has it that the renowned orator required some help in sobering up before his three hour long speech on "Liberty and Union, one and inseparable, now and forever." No copy of this speech exists but one made at Saratoga, New York the following month on August 19th is to be found in the volumes of his speeches. This was delivered before an equally large crowd and was cheered from the audience with cries of "Go on! Go on!" whenever he tried to stop.

The year 1840 was the first time that a presidential campaign aroused the great interest and partisan fervor across the country that we are accustomed to today. William Henry Harrison was elected with great fanfare under the "Tippecanoe and Tyler Too" slogan. People had become politically conscious because of the great depression of 1837-8. Webster was the hero of the hour in the north because of his anti-slavery and high tariff protection stands, which appealed particularly to the farming areas of Vermont where there were 8 sheep to each person in the state in 1840. New Englanders were especially proud of him as much for his fiery eloquence as for his national leadership as their representative.

LEMUEL BOTTUM OF SHAFTSBURY, VERMONT

15. Lemuel[5] (Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2&1]) Bottum was born Aug. 20, 1800 at Shaftsbury, Vermont - died there July 14, 1880, the youngest son of Simon and Elizabeth (Huntington) Bottum. He married

Abia B. Andrus on May 4, 1819. The daughter of David[5] (Isaac[4], John[3], John[2&1]) [Chapter III, #4] and Mary (Parks) Andrus, she was born at Arlington, Vt. on Feb. 9, 1803 - died Sep. 7, 1889. Family letters frequently mentioned Abia's poor health but, for that period, she enjoyed a long life, outliving Lemuel by nine years. Members of the family have preserved a group of maps which were meticulously drawn by Lemuel and Abia and dated 1817,1818 and 1819 and signed. It would seem, then, that they had attended school together, one of the many small boarding schools in New England of that era [Chester Academy, Part VI] and had married after the spring term in 1819. Apparently they each drew seven maps, the subjects being the United States, North America, the West Indies, South America, Europe, Asia and Africa. These maps, handed down through five generations, found themselves in the possession of Ruth Barrett Lacy. A complete set have been given to the Americana Collection, National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the age of twenty-two Lemuel inherited the original Bottum farm upon the death of his father, and lived there all of his life. He served in many town offices and in the State as representative and senator. He held the rank of colonel in the State militia and was an active member of the Shaftsbury Baptist Church. In August of 1822, six months after the death of their father, Nathan H. Bottum wrote to his sister Caroline,

Colonel Lemuel Bottum

then in school in Williamstown, Massachusetts, that

> "Lemuel and myself are busily engaged, as you know farmers must be at this season of the year. We have been three weeks engaged in haying and harvesting and shall probably finish in two weeks more. The farmer's life is a life of toil, yet I would not relinquish it for any other. The greatest objection is there is too little time for study."

Lemuel Bottum was a director of and actively connected with the building of the Western Vermont Railroad which ran through his property. On Jan. 16, 1851 Nathan H. Bottum wrote Caroline and her husband Seneca S. Spencer, then living in Lockport, New York a news filled letter in which he spoke of the railroad,

> "Our railroad is prospering this winter. We have plenty of Irish Shanties around us - six families on our farm. Norman has taken two culverts to build - has finished one and the other has a week's work, with two teams and six hands, to be done. It is all under contract from Troy to this place and from here to Rutland, and probably will be finished by November next. This will accommodate us very much when we shall visit our friends west and also our friends who may visit us. . . . The world is rather a hard master, especially in Railroad times, when we have to provide breakfast at 6 o'clock and send dinner to 5 or 6 men at half past eleven."

Lemuel and Abia (Andrus) Bottum had five children:

i. Mary Elizabeth, born Mar. 15, 1822 - died Feb. 28, 1838.

25 ii. Simon[6], born Feb. 26, 1824 - died Jan. 29, 1904; married Margaret A. Douglass.

26 iii. Horace Barlow[6], born July 3, 1826 - died Apr. 21, 1905; married Harriet Ellen Huntington.

iv. Caroline Amelia, born Sep. 6, 1828 - died May 21, 1919; married Norman R. Douglass. (Douglass, below)

27 v. Edward[6], born Jul 29, 1832; married
(1) Ellen L. Clark.
(2) Marietta Cox.

DESCENDANTS OF DANIEL^{3} LONGBOTTOM [#7]

16. John^{5} Bottum was born Sep. 16, 1792 at Woodstock, Ct., the third child and eldest son of Daniel^{4} (Daniel$^{3,2,&1}$) and Betsey (Hyde) Bottum. He married his 5th cousin, Sophia Hough of Bozra, Ct., born Apr. 30, 1794. He was a carpenter and a builder. They lived in Unadilla, New York but moved from there in 1834 to Tonawanda, Pennsylvania. In 1839 they moved to New York City and from there to Boston, Massachusetts in 1843 where they were still living in 1860. Early in their married life they legally changed the spelling of their name to Bottume. No recent information can be found about this family. They had 4 children:

i. Daniel Bottume, born July 12, 1820 at Unadilla - died June 4, 1831.

ii. Fanny Fitch Bottume, born July 30, 1822; married Dec. 5, 1839 LANGFORD William H. Langford, born Aug. 19, 1814 - died Mar. 20, 1847 at Lee, Massachusetts. He was a jeweler and watch maker. They settled in New Brunswick, N.J. in 1840. She was living with her parents in 1860. They had 3 children:

a. Fanny Langford.

b. Sophia Langford.

c. Elizabeth Langford, born June 7, 1846.

iii. John[6] Bottume, Jr., born Feb. 2, 1826; married Elizabeth A. Lord of Northfield, Mass. He was a partner in the firm of Bart, Baldwin and Bottume, commission merchants in Boston, Mass.

iv. Frank[6] Bottume, a Methodist Episcopal minister in New York City; married Margaret MacDonald, born Dec. 29, 1827 - died Nov. 14, 1906, daughter of William and Mary (Willis) MacDonald. She was organizer of the King's Daughters and an assistant editor of the Ladies' Home Journal.

17. Harry[5] Bottum, born Nov. 13, 1796 at Woodstock, Ct. - died Mar. 7, 1830, the son of Daniel[4] [#7] and Elizabeth (Hyde) Bottum. He was married on Nov. 22, 1825 by Samuel Backus to Lucy Comstock, born June 15, 1797 - died Nov. 27, 1848, the daughter of John, Jr. and Ruth (Rich) Comstock and a descendant of William Comstock, born June 16, 1697. Headstones mark their graves in East Woodstock, Ct. cemetery. They had 4 children:

i. Lucy Bottum.
ii. George[6] Bottum never married. He was living in Oxford, Mass. in 1860.
iii. Lydia Bottum married her 6th cousin, John Hough, in 1858.
iv. Harriet L. Bottume, married on Apr. 4, 1849
John Quincy Adams, born May 14, 1827 at Dudley, Mass. They lived in Worcester, Mass. He enlisted from Webster, Mass. in the 25th regiment of Mass. Volunteers. He died of yellow fever at New Berne, N.C. on Oct 5, 1864. They had 3 children:

pect Hill Cemetery in Hampden, Mass.

After receiving a common school education, Abial Bottum, who was 6 feet tall and wore a number 12 boot, became a school master, teaching in the winter months and working as a farm hand the rest of the time. He was frugal and ambitious. His one goal in life was to become a physician. His first medical studies were under the direction of a country doctor. He rode with the doctor while making his visits, thus acquiring much practical knowledge of the profession. He later entered Brown University and was graduated in Medicine on April 8, 1824. He started his practice in the town of Thompson, Ct., remaining there for 6 years. His next move took him to South Wilbraham, now Hampden, Mass. where he practiced his profession for 54 years.

Dr. Abial Bottum always drove a spirited white horse hitched to a two wheeled sulky. Like all doctors of this era he compounded his own medicine, prepared tinctures, ointments, plasters and linaments and provided himself with large quantities of everything he used. He was also an "artist in the budding art of Psychology." Among the entries in his day book, 1840-1843, is found no mention of "professional services". Instead it is "advice and medicine". The charge for attending a birth was $3.00, if twins, $4.00. He pulled teeth for 12 cents each. A "bleeding" was called "cupping" and his charge for this operation was 13 cents.

Dr. Abial and Diana Bottum had 4 children:

i. Theodore Perrin Bottum, born at Thompson, Ct. on Jan. 18, 1827 - died in Chicago, Ill. May 20, 1864. No descendants.

ii. Sarah Elizabeth Bottum. born Apr. 29, 1831 at Thompson - died Dec. 13, 1912 at East Hartford, Ct.; married twice:
(1) Fred Stock. They had 1 child:
a. Theodore W. Stock, born June 4, 1871 - died Sep. 8, 1871.
(2) Hubert Frank Wheeler of New Haven, Ct. He died Jan. 6, 1906 at Springfield, Mass. They have no descendants. They are buried in Oak Grove Cemetery, Springfield.

iii. Charles Bruce Bottum, born Oct. 15, 1834 at (now) Hampden - died in 1910 at Sioux City, Iowa where he is buried. He legally changed his name to Botham. No descendants.

CHAPTER XII

DESCENDANTS OF DANIEL[2] LONGBOTTOM
SIXTH GENERATION FROM DANIEL[1] LONGBOTTOM

CANADIAN FAMILY, DESCENDANTS OF ELIJAH[4] BOTTUM

18a. William[6] Bottum, born Aug. 11, 1820 in Kemptville, Ontario, Canada - died there on Nov. 29, 1869. On July 24, 1845 he married

(1) Sarah Wright. She died Jan. 21, 1854. She had 2 children. On Oct. 19, 1854 he married

(2) Harriett Wright. They had 4 children, all living at the old homestead in Kemptville in 1886. The children by the two marriages:

i. William H.[7] Bottum, 2nd, born Feb. 21, 1847; unmarried.
ii. Marcia Bottum, born July 31, 1849; married Apr. 22, 1872 Daniel Abel Burritt. In 1887 he was Post Master at Shelby, Dakota Territory.
iii. Helen W. Bottum, born Feb. 20, 1861.
iv. Elijah A. Bottum, born Nov. 16, 1863.
v. Harriett Bottum, born Dec. 13, 1865
vi. Serena Bottum, born June 25, 186 .

On July 15, 1886, William H. Bottum, 2nd wrote to Frank M. [#22-ii] Bottum, giving him the Bible records of his family from those of his great grandfather down through his own generation. The following year Frank visited the Kemptville cousins and wrote an account to Calvin Bottum, with whom he was working on the family history.

"William H. Bottum is a splendid fellow, but does not look much like the Bottums. He is about 5 ft. 10 in. weighs 160 lbs. Has a magnificent pair of black whiskers and cleanly shaven lip and chin -'a la Burnside'. His complection is fair, is a nervous, quick actioned fellow. His features are clearly cut, nose aquiline, and his eyes are a very light blue. In the town of Kemptville, which has about 1200 inhabitants, he seems to be the 'big gun'. Keeps the village drug store and acts as ticket agent for C.P.R.R. Is clerk of the District Court, and is evidently a man of consequence and intelligence. The farm on which the first settlement of this branch of the Bottum family was made is situated in the village on the banks of the Rideau River. Quite near the village is a half mile tract which W.H. told me was leased by them to an association. The farm has been divided among the heirs and is worked by the half-brother, Elijah. I saw the house in which they all live and the step-mother who still lives there. They are a very happy family. The step-mother thinks just as much of W.H. as if he were her own child. They are all members of the Church of England. The house is an old-fashioned two story affair, plain and comfortable. They said it was built for Laura Huntington and they call it Laura Huntington's house. In the churchyard, the family are buried in a long row, and the tombstones are of the same antiquated style you see in Shaftsbury. They are evidently well-to-do people, and are universally respected. The name "Bottum" was like a talisman in Prescott."

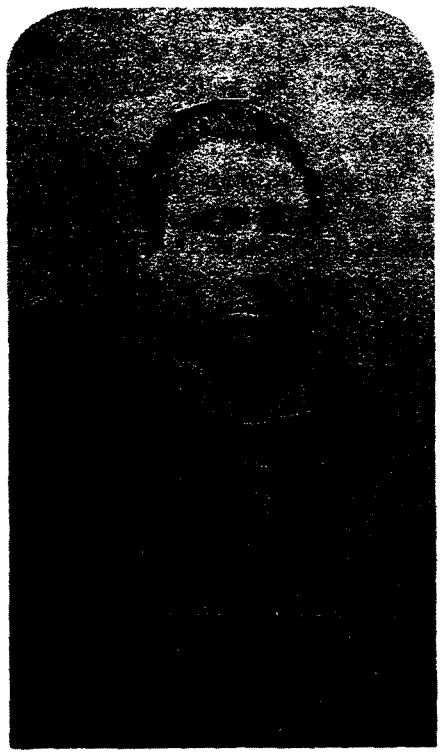
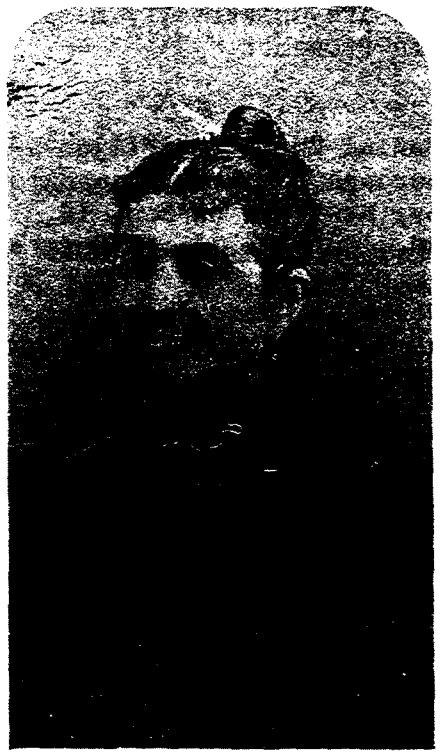
19. Daniel Burritt[6] (Elijah[5,4,3], Daniel[2,1]) Bottum, born at Marlborough, Ontario, Canada on Aug. 23, 1850, bapt. Jan. 12, 1851 - died at Troy, New York on Sep. 14, 1940, son of Elijah and Minerva (Burritt) Bottum. On Sep. 13, 1879 at Burritt Rapids, Ontario, he married

Delphine Giard, born Dec. 2, 1853 at Iberville, Canada - died at Cohoes, New York on June 26, 1918, the daughter of Edward and Mary (Bessett) Giard.[1] Daniel was 16 when he decided to join his family in New York State. He had apparently stayed on the farm at Burritt Rapids while also working at learning the trade of plumber. With only $10.00, given him by his Uncle Elijah when he last visited him in Brockville, he started walking and got as far as Prescott where he stopped for a night at Daniel's Hotel. It was winter and the St. Lawrence River was frozen over. The next morning, upon being asked his name and replying that it was Daniel, the proprietor took him into the dining room and told him to order whatever he wanted for breakfast. Mr Daniel would take no money for the meal and, moreover, took him to the railroad station and bought him a ticket to Troy. From there he made his way to Cohoes, where his parents were living - and started working in the family plumbing business. After their marriage, drawn by the prospect of free land to homesteaders - and possibly by the romance of gold in the hills of South Dakota - Daniel and Delphine joined the trek of hardy pioneers westward in the company of Delphine's five brothers. "Jerry" stayed on the land and raised wheat. He farmed to an old age and survived his four brothers. Charles also farmed and Fred and his wife, Anna (Myers) ran the Scott House in Huron, the only hotel in the area. All the brothers and Daniel Bottum received adjoining land, in equal amounts, along "the Jim" (James River). Daniel built his cabin at the foot of the black Hills and the brothers helped him to build a bridge across the river at its narrowest, near the cabin. A well and a storm cellar were built on Jerry Giard's land. Their settlement was in the midst of the wilderness and the winter storms were nightmares of ferocity. A trip to Ottawa took about two weeks. Returning from one such trip after winter provisions, Daniel was overtaken by a blizzard with a wind blowing snow at 70 miles an hour. In bending over to put the reins around the front board of the wagon to give the horse his head, he stepped on his rifle (Indians and bandits were still traveling hazards in the 70's and 80's) and it went off putting a bullet between the thumb and forefinger of his right hand. The horse got him home but he carried a large scar for the rest of his life to remind him of Dakota.

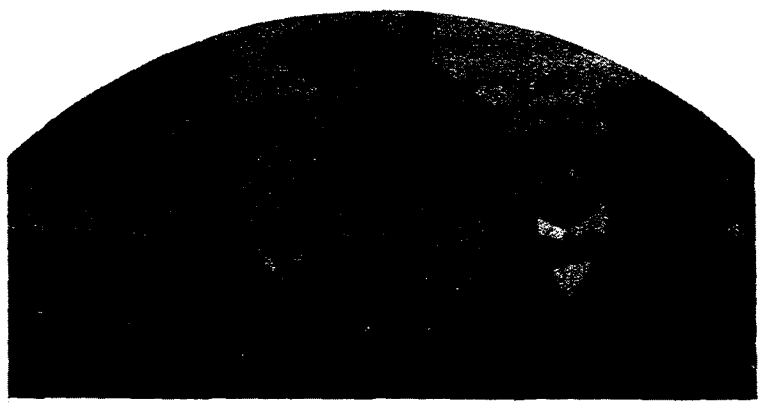
1. Mary Besett was born Sep. 22, 1828 and died May 22, 1878. Delphine's brothers and sisters: Edward, b. Sep. 9, 1848; Zephier, b. 1851; Alice, born 1852; Considore, b. 1854; Adolf, b. 1858; Frederick, b. 1870; Charles, b. 1872. Many of the Giard family are buried at Huron, South Dakota. Delphine is buried in the Waterford, N.Y. Rural Cemetery.



Daniel Burritt Bottum



Delphine (Giard) Bottum



William Alfred & George Landon Bottum

Delphine bore three children on their homestead. After years of hardship Daniel gave up the struggle against the elements and the land and took his family back to Cohoes where he again entered the family plumbing business. In all Delphine and Daniel had 9 children. Effa, the youngest, now living at Cohoes, remembers when her father bought the Bible in which the family records are kept. One evening when she was 5 years old a man came to the door and, to the delight of all the children, "talked my dad into buying the book". Daniel was a wonderful reader and frequently spent the evenings reading aloud to the family. The time was shared between Dickens, history, the Bible and such novels as David Harum. The Bible had beautiful pictures and the stories from it were usually about the pictures. The children were:

i. Charles Henry[7] Bottum, born at Hitchcock, S.D. on June 12, 1880 - died at Cohoes on July 7, 1895.

ii. Theresa Agnes Bottum, born Sep. 17, 1881 at Hitchcock - died at Cohoes Oct. 9, 1919; married at Cohoes, N.Y. John Francis Brennan. [Brennan, below]

29 iii. Elijah[7] Bottum, born May 21, 1883 at Hitchcock; married Loretta Ann Clotilda Provost.

iv. A twin who died at birth.

v. A twin who died at birth.

30 vi. Edward[7] Bottum, born at Cohoes, N.Y. Dec. 3, 1884; married Wilhelmina Peterson.

vii. Daisy Elizabeth Bottum, born Mar. 25, 1886 in Cohoes, died there on Aug. 8, 1963. For 17 years previous to her death she operated, with her sister Effa, a ready-to-wear store in San Francisco, named The Three Sisters.

viii. Connie Helen Bottum, born Mar. 7, 1889 at Cohoes - died at San Francisco on Apr. 10, 1954; married in San Francisco on Sep. 26, 1914 Cornelius J. Williams, born July 18, -died Nov. 16, 1956. He was an electrician. They had 3 children:
a. Infant, died at birth.
b. Constance Williams, born Apr. 7, 1925.
c. John Burritt Williams, born May 24, 1935 - died in 1938.

ix. Effa Marie Gabrille Bottum, born at Cohoes, N.Y. on Dec. 10, 1890, is the family historian for her branch of the Bottums. She graduated from nurses' training at St. Joseph's Infant Home in Troy, N.Y. on Dec. 8, 1928 and was a nurse there for a number of years. All of the old records preserved by the family have come into her safe-keeping. She has kept the newspaper items that have pertained to the family and the birth, marriage and death announcements and notices. She has done research on the Burritt, Hurd and Landon families and on the Canadian Bottums. The data on the descendants of Daniel and Delphine Bottum has come from her records. It has been a pleasure to know this cousin and to correspond with her. She lives at 64 Masten Ave., Cohoes. N.Y. 12047.

John Francis Brennan; married Theresa Agnes Bottum (above). They had three children:

i. John Francis Brennan, Jr., born June 11, 1914 - died July 12, 1959; married Helen Louise Herzog. They lived in Troy, New York. They had 3 children:

a. Nuralon Louise Brennan, born Apr. 19, 1938; married Gerald Edward Oathout on Aug. 27, 196-. They live at 41 Bolivar Ave., Troy, New York.
b. Frances Ann Brennan, born Feb. 26, 1942.
c. David Burritt Brennan, born June 19, 1945. (see addenda)

ii. William Burritt Brennan, born Nov. 13, 1915; married Virginia Strazi. He was in the United States Marine during W.W.II. He lives in Schenectady, N.Y. They had 2 children:

a. John Burritt Brennan, born Sep. 16, 1940 - died 1942.
b. Richard William Brennan, born Feb. 9, 1943.

iii. Thomas Roy Brennan, born Dec. 4, 1917; married in Troy, N.Y. Florence Louise Julien. He served in the United States Marines during W.W.II and is a patrolman by profession. Their home is at 4911 Lindley Avenue, Tarzana, Cal. They have 1 child:

a. Thomas Roy Brennan, Jr., born May 15, 1946.

20. George Landon[6] Bottum, born at Burritt Rapids Mar. 4, 1853 - died Feb. 17, 1919 at Chicago, Illinois, son of William Elijah[5] [#12] and Minerva (Burritt) Bottum; married on Oct. 1, 1877 at Troy, N.Y.

Margaret Agnes Croak, born on Jan. 12, 1853 in New York State - died June 1, 1929 at Chicago, Ill., daughter of William and Joanna (Ryan) Croke.[1] George Landon Bottum and Margaret Agnes Croak met in Wilksbarre, Pa. He became an inventor and wealthy engineer and manufacturer. Trained in his father's plumbing business, he invented a valve for steam heat radiators and established, and was also president of, the Bottum Valve Co. in Chicago. He was also president of the National Steam Specialties and of the General Fire Extinguisher companies. It was his invention that perfected the boiler of the Stanley Steamer car. He was remembered by his son Chauncey as "a grand father . . . I don't recall that he ever scolded any of his children. We all loved him. He was a fairly famous engineer and was consulted on many projects." There were four children:

31 i. George Alfred[7] Bottum, born Nov. 18, 1878 - died in 1929.
ii. Clara Alberta Bottum, born Nov. 28, 1879 - died Sep. 11, 1951. She was a school teacher and never married.
iii. Alice Macomber Bottum, born Dec. 23, 1887 - died Dec. 31, 1949. She also taught in high school and never married.
32 iv. Chauncey Aird Bottum, born June 15, 1889 at Troy, N.Y. - died in 196-.

1. Both of Margaret Agnes Croak's parents were born in Ireland, at Thurles, Tipperary Co. Her father died on Dec. 18, 1883. A brother was a Catholic priest and bishop in Albany, and one of her uncles was Archbishop Thomas W. Croke of Thurles.

The data on George Landon and Margaret Agnes Bottum and on their descendants is taken from letters from Chauncey A. Bottum to R.D. Oliver.

SIMON ELIAS BOTTUM OF NEW HAVEN, VERMONT

21. Simon Elias[6] (Elias[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]) Bottum, born Sep. 13, 1821 at New Haven, Vt. - died there on Nov. 7, 1877, the son of Elias [#13] and Diadama (Squier) Bottum; married at Hinesburgh, Vt. on Jan. 11, 1849

Mary Mills Hoyt, born at Utica, N.Y. on July 10, 1827 - died at New Haven on Mar. 1, 1905, the daughter of the Rev. Otto Smith and Laura Jane (Huntington) Hoyt.[1] Simon Elias (also referred to as Elias Simon) was educated at private schools. At the time of his marriage he bought a New Haven farm of 150 acres and, upon the death of his father, inherited the large family farm making a total of 900 acres which he brought to a high state of cultivation and which yielded a very good income. He was a selectman and served in the Vermont State Legislature in 1847 and in 1872. All of his family were members of the Congregational Church in New Haven. After his death his widow purchased a house in the town of New Haven where she lived. Their son, Julius Otto, remained on the farm. There were 8 children in this family, born in New Haven.

33 i. Elias Huntington[7], born Feb. 28, 1850 - died Sep. 18, 1925.

CENTRAL NEW YORK SETTLERS

The desire for land was the prime motivation behind the migrations of people to and across the North American Continent, from the first arrival of 'saints & strangers' at Plymouth to the last train load of immigrants to the western frontier. For a hundred and fifty years the mountains had hemmed in the New England settlers along the Atlantic coast but the end of the French and Indian wars had greatly diminished one danger and land hungry pioneers, most of them with three or more generations of American ancestry behind them and many with backgrounds of education and culture, swarmed past the fall line of the rivers and over the mountains from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Long Island and Maine into New Hampshire, Vermont, Central New York and beyond. After the treaty with the British and the Iroquois it is recorded that 1200 settlers passed through Albany, New York in one 3 day period to settle Genesee County. One February day in 1795, between sunrise and sunset, 500 sleighs passed through the city.

Descendants of Daniel and Elizabeth Lamb Longbottom found themselves swept along in this westward movement, following hard upon the ever moving frontier, so it is not surprising that sons, grandsons and great-grandsons of Daniel^2, David^2, John^2 and James^2 Longbottom, with kin and friends, have left records of their passing in a number of the Finger Lake counties of Central New York. The Huntingtons, Galushas, Ranneys, Salisburys, Spencers and Wheelocks were there; members of the Andrus, French and Bottum families bought lands there, lived on it or speculated with it, raised families and died there - or moved on. Their stories will be told. Five children of Amos Huntington, Jr. located in Rochester, New York. [Huntington Family, Part VI] Their cousin Caroline, daughter of Simon Bottum [#9], and her husband Daniel Loomis and family lived there until the death of Daniel. Elijah, son of Nathan H. Bottum, settled there.

According to New York State history, Rochester was America's first boom town. In 1820, before the construction of the Erie Canal, its population was 1,500; in 1840, when Elijah Bottum had gone there, it had grown to 20,000. The iron industry with its manufacture of tools for farm and and home use contributed strongly to this economic upsurge. At the same time the nearby towns of Lockport, Utica and Whitesboro were booming.

ELIJAH BOTTUM OF ROCHESTER, NEW YORK

22. Elijah[6] Bottum, born Oct. 29, 1818 at Shaftsbury, Vt. - died at Rochester, N.Y. on July 27, 1881, son of Nathan H.[5] (Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]) and Peace (Huntington) Bottum; married at Big Flats, N.Y. on May 22, 1845

Mahala D. French, b. Sep. 6, 1826 - died Apr. 10, 1882, daughter of John M. French, the celebrated merchant and iron founder of Rochester. Elijah and Mahala Bottum lived out their lives in Rochester, though he did consider "going west" at one time. He was a merchant and iron founder, no doubt associated with his father-in-law. He was also connected with D.W. Powers Banking House and had some business dealings with his uncle Elon Huntington. [Chapter XXXV, #7-iv] Elijah, Elon Huntington, and John M. French bought land in Ontario, Wayne County, N.Y. in 1850. He and Mahala also bought lands there in 1855 and 1856 and sold them in April of 1867. Elon Huntington and Elijah Bottum were influential in the founding of the University of Rochester and the Baptist Theological Seminary of Rochester where Elon Huntington was a trustee for over 50 years. Elijah and Mahala Bottum had 1 child:

i. Frank M.[7] Bottum, born Sep. 17, 1850 - died Aug. 4, 1899; married on June 21, 1882 at Rochester Bertha C. Widener, born in Chili or Clifton, N.Y., daughter of Peter and Adeline (Gage) Widener of Chili and sister of Janet Lisette Widener who married George Henry [#36] Bottum, 1st cousin of her husband, both being grandsons of Nathan H. [#14] Bottum. They had no children. Frank was graduated from the University of Rochester, A.B., in 1871; admitted to the bar in 1877; a town supervisor 1879-1882; and canal collector 1882. He was a musician and singer of note and practiced law as his profession. For a number of years he worked with his cousin, Calvin[7] (Horace[6], Lemuel[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]) Bottum, gathering genealogical data on the Bottum and allied families. The records they obtained from near and distant kin were copied by Calvin in his Record Book. These are now included in the Bottum Collection. (See p. xii) Bertha (Widener) Bottum was an unusually accomplished musician. After her husband's death she spent several years in Europe. She accompanied Fritz Kreisler for one or two seasons on his European tours and also in the United States. She lived to about 80 and in her old age she studied pipe organ and violin cello and played these until her death in the early 1930s.

Norman and Helen Louise (Ranney) Bottum

Fanny Lorraine & Henry Merle Bottum

NORMAN AND NATHAN BOTTUM OF SHAFTSBURY, VERMONT

23. Norman[6] Bottum, born Oct. 5, 1822 - died July 28, 1870, son of Nathan H. and Peace (Huntington) Bottum; married Feb. 23, 1848 at Townshend, Vt.

Helen Louise Ranney, born Feb. 10, 1826 - died Apr. 14, 1879, daughter of Waitstill and Phebe (Atwood) Ranney. [Ranney Family] Her sister Frances Sophia married her husband's brother Nathan. Norman was born on his father's farm and he lived there all of his life. The adjoining farm to the north was the one originally cleared and settled by his great-grandfather Elijah. [Early Shaftsbury Homes, Chap. X] He and his younger brother Nathan operated their father's large farm specializing in Spanish merino sheep and short horn cattle. Their "N&N Bottum" was a well known trademark among dealers.

Norman Bottum was treasurer of the Bennington Co. Agricultural Society, town treasurer, school trustee and, from his account book of the last decade of his life, it appears that he was also unofficial banker of the community. One page lists 22 Civil War soldiers "enlisted by N. Bottum" with $200 payments to each coming from the State and from individuals including himself. He was a sub-contractor of the new railroad across his land and shared in the increased trade and travel it made possible. The family was often in New York City where five Ranney brothers-in-law were doctors; in Boston on business; in Virginia for the warmer climate his health required; at his brother's in Rochester; and in Perry and Lockport, New York visiting other relatives. He was a deacon in the Shaftsbury Baptist Church founded the year his family came to Vermont, and he served as its choir leader, S.S. superintendant and teacher, as well as church clerk and treasurer for many years. The church bell was given by him and is inscribed with his name. The last time it was rung was in 1921 at the funeral of his son, H. Merle Bottum. Closed now for many years, plans are now underway to make this old church, the second established in Vermont, into an historic monument. [Shaftsbury Church, Chap. VII]

Norman and Helen Bottum had five children, two of whom died in infancy:

35 i. Henry Merle, born Jan. 18, 1849 - died Mar. 17, 1921.

ii. Stella Elizabeth, born July 4, 1854 - died Sep. 15, 1854.

iii. Fanny Lorraine, born Sep. 22, 1855; married Sep. 14, 1876 GALUSHA (1) Albert Loomis Galusha, born Oct. 6, 1850 at Jericho, Vt. - died Nov. 8, 1879 at Denver, Colo. They had two children:

a. Albert Leet Galusha, born Nov. 23, 1877 [Galusha Family #43]

b. Frank Merle died 1879 in infancy.

Fanny Lorraine Bottum, on Dec. 28, 1882, married (2) William Chase Norris (below).

iv. Nellie Agnes, born June 6, 1859 - died June 9, 1860.

v. Anna Bertha , born Mar. 23, 1866 - died April 11, 1931 in Pasadena, Cal., her home in later years. She never married. She attended Vermont Academy and taught school in Lincoln, Nebr., where her sister and family lived for a time, and in Chicago. She had a fine contralto voice and had studied in N.Y.C. She was always a church soloist. Ruth Barrett Lacy remembers her as a favorite aunt who came to her college graduation. Calvin Bottum, her second cousin, was her life-long, unsuccessful suitor.

NORRIS

William Chase Norris, born June 3, 1842 in Hardwick, Vt. - died at St. Cloude, Fla. in 192 ; married at Jericho, Vt. on Dec. 28, 1882 Fanny Lorraine (Bottum) Galusha (above). The story goes that her little son, Albert L. Galusha, was a favorite of William Norris, the local telegraph agent, and that it was the boy's suggestion that Norris would make a desirable father, thereby getting Fanny's second romance underway. Fanny died Oct. 10, 1917. Though the official record says that he was 20 years old, William Norris was only 16 when he inlisted in May 1861 in Co. F., 2nd Vt. Reg. as a wagoner. He reenlisted Jan. 31, 1864; was taken prisoner July 21, 1864; was paroled Feb. 22, 1865; and mustered out July 15, 1865. He was graduated from Burlington Business College and was an expert telegraph operator. They were Methodists and their home was in Portland, Me. They had 1 child:

i. Bertha Huntington Norris; married Arthur G. Hildreth.

HILDRETH

Arthur G. Hildreth, born Sep. 30, 1887 at Westford, Mass., son of Francis C. (1851-1933) and Sarah Jane (Griffin 1852-1911) Hildreth. He died May 8, 1964. A graduate of Bowdoin College, he taught science in the high school at Newton, Maine and at Cambridge Junior College. On June 30, 1917 at Nashua, N.H. he married

CHAUNCEY THE BEAR HUNTER

32. Chauncey Aird Bottum, youngest child of George Landon [#20] and Margaret Agnes (Croak) Bottum, was perhaps the most colorful of the whole clan of Bottums. A mere sketch of the life of this amazing person, drawn from data and documents furnished by himself, will have to suffice here as it would take a book to do justice to the adventures, public exploits and services which filled his nearly eighty years of living.

The Bottum home was in Chicago opposite Lincoln Park, on "the gold coast where the neighbors were the Thornes, the Leiters, the Fields, Reyersons, Pullmans and the Wrigleys." In 1914 Chauncey married Anna McMillan which happy event was soon followed by a widely publicized divorce. He worked at many different kinds of jobs - engraver; boxer; model for magazine covers, which he did off and on all of his life; transitman for a Bolivian Railroad - none of which held him for long. Then, strangely for one with such a restless spirit, he sought solitude in the wilderness country of Bayfield County in northwest Wisconsin. On August 17, 1917 Chauncey married Marion Eleanor Felt in South Bend, Indiana.

Honey, as he called his wife, and Chauncey pioneered their homestead on Wilderness Lake, 8 miles through virgin forest from the nearest settlement. They blazed their own trail and lived in a tent for months in 1922 while they were building their log home, a cabin which in time became their nine room "Wilderness Lodge". Here they reared their 3 daughters and "taught them at home". In 1963 he wrote R.D.O. that "Honey was a wonderful wife and partner - she peeled every log in our home with a spade - we were completely happy." He cleared a field of stumps for a garden, traveled to a cross-roads five miles distant for their mail three times a week and packed in supplies, which they could not grow, on his back or by toboggan. The snowshoe trail was packed so hard during the long winter that the rest of the forest floor was green before the icy path gave way to the warmth of summer. In the spring of 1949 Honey died of a cerebral hemorrhage, and Chauncey "was lost".

It is impossible to tell of all the publicity stunts he contrived and executed for local, state and federal governments, as well as for different industries and private individuals - while at the same time succeeding, to a large degree, in living a life of seclusion. Everything he did was big and loud, ingenious, spectacular, very often hilarious and, above all, effective. He was a personality, a character, a patriot and a promoter of good will. He threw his genius into hundreds of undertakings that he deemed good for the nation, business or mankind and, in an uncalculated calculated way, both fun and profitable for Chauncey. He

My dear Rebekah Deal

(Cousins can't be formal—?? so henceforth—It's Chauncey—!!(I realize thats a Helleva name(sigh) But it was tagged on me in Troy,N.Y and I was too young(a Trojan) to object—Then Bobby Babs(Brewing family) hung the Descriptive section to it, so it is now as above.

I will go into our family tree a bit later, as I have to assemble all the various letters pertaining to our family, I can locate—I had a sister Alice, who went in for this sort of thing and she even dug up a brace of "CRESTS" of the LANDON & BURRITT DIVISIONS(of the Forest) When I write you on this, I'll endeavor and draw a sketch from them(sigh) too.

Yes-I know Wyoming fairly well— In fact was a member of that "ONE SHOT ANTELOPE CLUB" in your Red Desert, and the others were as I recall—Gov.Griswold of Neb— Gov. Smith of Wyoming— and a Gov. of Colorado—Then Fredrick Bunte(Candy mfr)Bill Jeffers Pres.U.P. and Coloman Johns of Denver Colo(Taxidermist) I didn't win the shoot—!!

I have a candlestick from a "Colonel Burritt" handed down fro the days of the Rebellion(you see, I say that, instead of REVOLUTIONARY WAR— is because my ancestors was low TORIES! and had to duck out of New England(fast)-and settled up in Canada-and my dad came to the States when he was 14—(I am told)

I also sat on the CONTINENTAL DIVIDE(GALLATIN NATIONAL FOREST for 5 days(Jan 6th to 10th—1940) to get a MOUNTAIN GOAT FAMILY GROUP PICTURE. This is on the west side of yellowstone Nat. park. And I mite add-while I was sitting there-I was figuring what a sap I was(at my age) to be sitting on the roof of America(in Winter—)when I'd far rather have been down at Marco, or Naples, Fla—, where I go for TARPON pictures(in winter— you understand)

I am ashamed of myself—cause I owe Theodore Bottum a couple cast out cake and, on the returning tide, picked it up with icing all over it! It delighted him to be known as "Chauncey, the bear hunter" and he acted as guide to many great and near-great who hunted in his northern woods. As a very young man he "volunteered to help General Pershing put a stop to Poncho Villa's border depredations" but a bayonet wound and malaria fever brought this heroic venture to a speedy end. He tried out the movies and knew the young and yet-to-be-famous Francis X. Bushman, Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson, the Beery brothers and others. For a while he took up motorcycle racing. His adventures with building, flying and selling "jennies" for Harold McCormick ended in a crash in which he broke "a goodly number of his bones". The original endeavor that brought him into the national prominence which everything he did afterward only seemed to enhance was instigated by friend of the family, George Horace Lorimer, then editor of the Saturday Evening Post. This was a campaign to show that the American business leaders were not the heartless, ruthless money-grabbers that they so often had been depicted. So Chauncey wrote letters to all the leading members of industry offering life membership in a ficticious club he planned - in return for one of their products! Whether it proved the industrialists generous, compassionate, good sportsmen and full of sentimental humor or not - it proved a bonanza for Chauncey. He became the recipient, gratuitously, of items of American manufacture from pencils to station wagons! Aside from this he was many times nationally recognised and was given numberless awards for openhanded, patriotic and humanitarian things he did in his capacity of ambassador to people from people. He sold U.S. Savings Bonds over a period of 21 years. At the close of W.W.II. he was credited with the sales of $62,000,000 and in 1961 he had run up his record to $102,000,000. He was given titles and awards from the U.S. Treasury, the U.S. Army and the U.S. Marines. He was recognised by police officials, mayors, governors and presidents and was honorary mayor of countless cities in the United States. He was a chief of 5 different Indian tribes and Honorary Davy Crockett of Tennessee. And much more.

In March of 1950 Chauncey married Miss Diane Skinner of Australia, who herself had enjoyed a number of glamorous jobs, and they both expressed hopes of a happy and challenging life in Chauncey's wilderness home. The wedding received world-wide publicity and the gifts were fabulous. Sadly, this marriage ended in divorce.

Chauncey Aird[7] Bottum was born in Troy, N.Y. on June 15, 1889. He died in 196 . He had 5 children, 4 by his wife Marion Eleanor Felt and 1 by his wife Diane Skinner:

i. A child who died at birth.
ii. June Bottum, born 1920; married Francis LeFlex Biggers. In 1963 they had 3 children and were living in Millers, Indiana.
iii. Claire Bottum, married Andrew S. Podlesny. In 1963 they were living in Salt Lake City and had 2 children:
  a. John Andrew Podlesny
  b. Fred Bottum Podlesny
iv. Nancy, born 1929 - died 1962; married a Mr. Ledin. They lived in Ashland, Wisconsin.
v. Chauncey Bottum, Jr., later called Jimi by his mother, b. 1951.

ELIAS HUNTINGTON BOTTUM OF MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN

33. Elias Huntington[7] (Elias S.[6], Elias[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]) Bottum, born Feb. 28, 1950 at New Haven, Vt. - died at Milwaukee, Wisc. on Sep. 18, 1925, the son of Simon Elias [#21] and Mary Mills (Hoyt) Bottum. He married at Schuylerville, N.Y. on Oct. 17, 1876

Caroline Melinda Bailey, born Sep. 10, 1851 at W. Newbury, Mass. - died Nov. 13, 1924 at Milwaukee, the daughter of the Rev. Augustus Franklin and Melinda (Dam Tewksbury) Bailey.[1] Elias H. Bottum was graduated from Middlebury College in 1871 and from Columbia Law School in Washington, D.C. He joined the Congregational Church of New Haven Vt. on May 7, 1865 and was dismissed to the Hanover Street Church, Milwaukee on Dec. 25, 1874. He practiced law in Milwaukee in partnership with his brother Fordyce. He was a corporation lawyer and set up many local companies starting in business. He was counsel for steamship and railroad lines. He had a large practice and settled many cases out of court when the best interests of his clients so dictated, thereby gaining the love of several generations of Milwaukee citizens. He was a Mason, a member of the American Bar Association and of the Downtown Athletic Club. He was president of the Republican Club of Wisconsin for many years and, at one time, declined a bid by his party to run for the office of governor. Elias H. and Caroline Bottum had only one child:

i. Mary Ethel Bottum, born Aug. 25, 1877 at Schuylerville, N.Y. - died Mar. 17, 1920 at Milwaukee. She married Sep. 1, 1897 at Milwaukee Morris Fuller Benton, born Nov. 30, 1872 at Milwaukee - died July 1, 1948 at Plainfield, N.J., son of Lynn Boyd (1844-1932) and Jessie Elizabeth (Donaldson 1846-1930) Benton. They had known each other a long time as their parents owned homes on the same street in Milwaukee. He was head of the designing department and of the manufacturing department of American Type Founders Co. in New Jersey and was the designer of many type faces used today. His "School Book Type" was adopted by the R.C. parochial schools. Mary Ethel attended Gilman School

1. The Rev. Augustus Franklin Bailey was a Methodist minister. He was born Oct. 12, 1817 at W. Newbury, Mass. - died May 22, 1895. Melinda was born Mar. 25, 1821 at W. Newbury - died at Milwaukee on June 12, 1906.

Elizabeth Boyd Benton, born Aug. 20, 1898 at New Brighton, Staten, Is., N.Y. (above). Elizabeth was graduated from Radcliffe College in 1920 and attended Parsons School and the Art Students League in New York City. She was employed by the Boston Museum of Fine Arts in the Decorative Arts Department until her marriage. Winthrop Swain was a graduate of Roxbury Latin School; of Harvard, 1913 and of M.I.T., 1917. He was a major in Heavy Coast Artillery and in France during W.W.I. They lived in southern Virginia, for ten years, on a tobacco plantation which they had bought due to the depression - and found it a rich experience. During W.W.II. Winthrop was employed by the Board of Economic Warfare in Washington, D.C. After the war they returned to New England where he was a broker with Keystone Custodian Fund, Draper Sears Co. of Boston. He has since retired. Elizabeth spent several years in voluntary community work of various sorts before again teaching decorative art. She is a member of the Historical Society of Early American Decoration, Cactus and Succulent Society of America, Appalachian Mountain Club, League of Women Voters and the Episcopal church. Their home is at 4 Leavitt St., Hingham, Mass. They have 2 daughters:

JULIUS OTTO BOTTUM OF NEW HAVEN, VERMONT

34. Julius Otto[7] Bottum (Elias Simon[6], Elias[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]), born Jan. 26, 1858 at New Haven, Vt. - died there Feb. 28, 1940, son of Elias Simon [#21] and Mary Mills (Hoyt) Bottum; married on Oct. 14, 1879

Ella Jane Partch, born Feb. 25, 1858 - died Apr. 18, 1924, the daughter of Nelson Partch. Julius Otto was the fifth in a family of 8 children. His father died when he was 19 years old and, as his brothers and sisters were either in school, married, or making a living elsewhere, he was the one to carry on the work of the farm. At the time of his marriage his mother purchased a home in New Haven and moved there, leaving the farm to Julius Otto. The present farm house was built for his bride by Elias Simon and is now the home of Mrs. Daisy (Sturdevant) Bottum, widow of Carroll Julius Bottum. Julius Otto was a selectman, a school board member and a Republican. They had 2 children:

45 i. Carroll Julius[8], born Nov. 10, 1881 - died Oct. 19, 1957.
ii. Vora Louisa, born Dec. 19, 1882 - died July 19, 1884.

HENRY MERLE BOTTUM OF SHAFTSBURY, VERMONT

35. H. Merle[7] Bottum(Norman[6], Nathan H.[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]), born Jan. 18, 1849 at Shaftsbury - died Mar. 17, 1921, the son of Norman [#23] and Helen L. (Ranney) Bottum;* married Dec. 21, 1870 at Shaftsbury

(1) Fidelia Eunice Dunlap, born May 10, 1848 at Arlington, Vt. - died at Shaftsbury on Mar. 3, 1906, daughter of Marshall and Thalia Vanilla (Matteson) Dunlap. [Matteson, below] He married again

(2) Agnes C. Carpenter, daughter of Solomon Carpenter. She was a young woman at this time and outlived him by forty years. On July 10, 1946 she married Charles Albert Ross. She died on July 12, 1960. She was interested in family and local history, an intelligent, religious, but rather eccentric woman. Henry Merle Bottum lived on a farm part of which had been in the family since 1767. The house in which he lived all of his life was built in 1847 by his grandfather, Judge Nathan H. Bottum. He was educated at Kimball Union Academy in Meriden, N.H. and at Burr and Barton Seminary at Manchester, Vt. At the time of his father's death in 1870, the only son and just 21 years old, he shouldered the responsibilities of a family - his mother and 2 sisters aged 15 and 4 - and the operation of a large farm. His father's partnership with his uncle Nathan was continued for 3 years at the end of which time the $12,000 estate was divided equally between them. The farm, listed at $11,000, was bought by Merle and the second house with 15 acres across the road and some of the mountain lots going to Nathan. [Early Shaftsbury Houses, pp. 54-56] The Bennington Banner and the New England Farmer, Mar. 6, 1909, published articles about the life of H. Merle Bottum:

* In 1943 Agnes Bottum Ross wrote that the winter of Merle's birth his parents were reading Henry Merle DeAubigne's History of the Reformation.

> "Naturally endowed with a strong physique, unusual energy and industry, and good practical judgment, he proved equal to his opportunities. He added to the original farm until it contained about 500 acres of which 125 are mowing and tillage and the balance pasture and woodland, including an excellent sugar place of 300 trees from which he made 160 gallons of maple syrup last year."
> "He is widely and favorably known as one of the pioneer breeders of black and white cattle and probably has furnished more high class foundation stock than any other Holstein breeder in the Green Mountain state, . . . making sales to the best known breeders in the East."

He laid the foundation of his highly pedigreed stock in 1885 by buying the famous Holstein-Fresian bull Utica and four heifers imported from Holland and Freisland, whose names were Lucelia, Merdee, Serida, and Nosnip, one of whose descendants, then owned by Cole & Hicks of Pawlet, Vt., broke all U.S. butter records for all breeds (861 pounds of milk containing 51.31 pounds of butter). He also won a gold medal at the World's Fair in Paris, 1905, for his wool. A leader in the church and community, he served as representative to the State Assembly in 1888 and again a few years later. H. Merle and Fidelia Bottum had 5 children:

46 i. Norman Dunlap[8] Bottum, born June 11, 1873 - died June 25, 1957.

ii. Stella Ruth, born Oct. 19, 1875 - died May 26, 1958; married Edgar Eugene Barrett. [Barrett Family, Part VI]

iii. Molly Stark Bottum, born Aug. 3, 1877 - died Feb. 11, 1909 of tuberculosis at Salem, N.Y. She was named after the Vermont heroine, Molly Stark. Before her marriage she taught school in Shaftsbury, Lincoln, Nebr. and Chicago. She married in 1907 Harry G. Peck of Camden. N.Y. They had no children. She is buried in Center Shaftsbury. Among the collected treasures of the Bottum family is the newspaper account of Molly's wedding, an elaborate, Victorian affair, held in the home of her parents, with cousin Bertha Norris one of the four bridesmaids and nephew Master Forrest Bottum one who "also rendered music" during refreshments. "The bride and groom drove away amid showers of rice and confetti, while white rags, old shoes, bells and placards fluttered and dangled from the carriage."

iv. Nathan Hugh, born Oct. 1, 1883 - died June 6, 1948. He was a farmer in Shaftsbury and never married.

v. Peace Huntington, born Feb. 19, 1885 - died of tuberculosis Mar. 29, 1905 after treatment at Saranac Sanitarium. She joined the Center Shaftsbury Church at 15. She was an active member and much beloved.

GEORGE HENRY BOTTUM OF NEW YORK CITY, SOUTH CAROLINA AND CALIFORNIA

36. George Henry[7] Bottum (Nathan[6], Nathan H.[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]), born June 15, 1861 at Shaftsbury, Vt. - died June 15, 1910, the son of Nathan and Frances S. (Ranney) Bottum; married at Clifton, N.Y. (later Chili) on Thurs., Feb. 6, 1890

Janet Lisette Widener, born Apr. 9, 1866 at Rochester, N.Y. - died June 13, 1934 at Hickman Mills, Mo., daughter of Peter and Adeline (Gage) Widener of Clifton and Rochester. Janet lived in the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank C. Bottum, in Rochester from the time she was 12 years old and Bertha was 24. She attended the State Normal at Rochester. At 19 she ran away to Paris, Texas to teach music in a private school for girls. Later she met George H. Bottum, 1st cousin of her brother-in-law, in her sister's home, and married him. He was graduated from Brown University and from Harvard Medical School. He continued his studies, 1887-1889, at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, completing post-graduate courses in surgery and gynochology. This college in N.Y.C. later became Columbia University. In 1890 he became physician and surgeon for the New York City Street Railways and for the John Wanamaker stores. While a student he lived in the home of his uncle and aunt, Dr. James W. and Helen Elizabeth (Hunter) Ranney, in New York City. [Ranney, Part VI] This home was willed to George H. Bottum when his uncle died in 1889 so he continued to live there after his marriage and it was in this house that his 3 daughters were born. The Street Railway work involved many cases of slum criminal attempts to receive injuries for the purpose of bringing suit against the city. Theodore Roosevelt was police commissioner at the time and circumstances frequently threw the two men together. His daughters recall the exciting tales their father would tell of his experiences. He spoke French and German and employed a very black Puerto Rican (6 feet, three inches tall) named Frank who spoke Italian, Spanish and Portugese well enough to interpret for the doctor. Frank drove, cared for the horses and carriage and cleaned his offices, and acted as bodyguard in his sometimes dangerous visits to the slum areas. In 1895 George contracted tuberculosis. The next year the family moved to Greenville, South Carolina where he established a fine practice and at one time was president of the S.C. Medical Association. His health forced him to give up his practice and the family moved to El Paso, Texas in 1907 and later to San Diego, Cal. He bought and operated a lemon ranch at Lemon Grove, Cal. with fair success until his death. The girls commuted the 15 miles into San Diego to school, Helen's high school Spanish being a great help in dealing with the Mexican labor on the ranch. After George's death the family returned to Ashville, N.C. George H. and Janet Bottum had 4 children:

i. Frances R., born Dec. 11, 1890 in N.Y.C. - died July 15, 1958. After 1 year at State Normal School in San Diego she attended St. Mary's School in Raleigh, N.C., being graduated in 1912. She continued her training over the years and held her B.S. and M.A., with majors in biology, from the George Peabody College for Teachers, and her Ph.D. in botany from the University of Chicago. She taught at Peabody for almost 3 decades, instructor in Biology from 1926-1929 when she became Associate Professor of Biology. She was active in the Tennesee Academy of Science and served as sponsor of its Junior Academy 1942-1954. She was a fellow of the American Ass'n for the Advancement of Science and a member of the N.E.A.; the Tenn. Education Ass'n; Sigma Xi, Nat'l Science Fraternity; Kappa Delta Pi, education fraternity; and the Tenn. Ornithological Society. She is remembered at Peabody as "'a lovely lady and a wonderful and inspiring teacher". She retired on Dec. 16, 1955 and resided in Seattle, Wn. with her sisters until her death.

ii. Helen Gage Bottum, born Sep. 11, 1892 in N.Y.C., attended schools in San Diego, Cal. After her family returned to N.C., she taught 3 years in an Episcopal church mission school. The last year of W.W.I. she worked as a Red Cross nurse's aid. She was an industrial nurse for 3 years and in 1923 she completed her training at the University of Virginia School of Nursing. After 5 years of private duty nursing, mostly at Research and St. Luke's in Kansas City, Mo., she married Edmund Joseph Sawyer, noted ornithologist, artist and author, whose work is found in many of America's leading museums, and in magazines and books. His name, with accomplishments, is in Who's Who in American Art and Who's Who on the Pacific Coast. (Hope Sawyer, a daughter by a former marriage, is also an ornithologist and a distinguished artist in her own right.) During the first year of their marriage, Edmund and Helen Sawyer were at Cornell University where he was doing temporary work in the Dept. of Ornithology under Dr. Allen. Some of his work is still in Fernow Hall. During the war they spent a year on Copper Mountain as spotters for enemy planes, under the supervision of the Pacific Coast Command, U.S. Army. Their home is at Burton, Wn., a small village on Vashon Island in Puget Sound, in view of Quartermaster Harbor. They are 25 feet from high tide and can see Mt. Ranier, 25 miles in the distance. Their address is Rt. 1, Box 1, 98013. They have no children.

iii. Margaret Bottum, born Aug. 3, 1893, was graduated from St. Mary's Episcopal School in Raleigh, N.C. in 1915. During W.W.I. she was the secretary of the American Red Cross at Washington, D.C. Headquarters. Previous to this she had spent several summers at the University of N.C. and the University of West Va. After the war she continued in social work in W. Va. and later went with the family to Hickman Mills, Mo., at first working as a secretary in Kansas City. She organized a credit bureau for wholesale dealers and was its manager for 10 years. During W.W.II. she took a 6 months course in precision tools and instruments at Pratt & Whitney School and was supervisor of instruments and airplane parts until the end of the war. She then returned to secretarial work, moving to the State of Washington in 1948. Her health failed in the middle fifties. She died in May of 1969.

iv. George Bottum, born March 1896 in Greenville, South Carolina, died in infancy.

Theodore Perrin Bottum

Carriage shop owned & operated by T.P. Bottum at Mittmeague Village, West Springfield, Mass. 1909

Frederick Daniel & Nellie Mable Bottum

42. Theodore Perrin[7] Bottum (Daniel Wesley[6], Abial[5], Daniel[4-1]) born Apr. 21, 1874 at Belchertown, Mass. - died July 1,1954 at Worcester, Mass., the son of Dr. Daniel Wesley and Ellen (Jaro) Bottum. He married on Aug. 1, 1894

(1) Mary Luella Fuller of Springfield, Mass. born July 12, 1869 - died Sep. 8, 1912. She is buried in the family lot in Prospect Hill Cemetery, Hampden, Mass. He married July 8, 1914

(2) Mary Cluffie Trall Beauchamp, born Dec. 25, 1874 at Hartford, Ct.; widow of Joseph Beauchamp - died Oct. 10, 1941 at Hartford and is buried there. There were no children by the second marriage. Theodore Perrin Bottum was "an old time carriage and wagon builder of the horse and buggy days". He spoke of himself as "an old timer of tough down-east stock". His father died when he was 15 years old. He attended school at Hampden, Mass. till he was 16, and then he went to work. He lived in Hartford from 1910 till 1941 and then in Easthampton, Mass. He lived there and in that vicinity, not far from some of his grandchildren, until his death. The last few years of his life he worked as a salesman in an antique shop. Brought up in a devout Methodist home, he later became a confirmed member of the Episcopal church. He belonged to the Odd Fellows for 34 years and was also a member of the Knights of Pythias. He was a "mossback Republican". Discouraged, in August of 1952 he wrote, "We are licked whoever is elected President". He was of a musical family, himself a pianist and a baritone, and his wife Luella was a contralto singer. He greatly missed his music in his later years. He wrote more than once that his grandchildren, and their children, kept him from being lonely. He was a bit of a philosopher and had a sly kind of humor. "Take it easy and don't get old." "The older I get the more I notice it." "We gain nothing to cry." A short time before his death he wrote, "so far I am able to pay my board and find happiness and attend my church every Sunday when the weather permits. I walk quite a distance to church, using my cane, and feel like a big shot." His greatest interest, aside from his family, was his genealogical work and correspondence with his Bottum cousins, no matter how distant. The vital and historical records in the Connecticut State Library furnished a great deal of the material for his Bottum Genealogy and he gleaned much from his correspondents, and he gave credit to them all. He placed a typed copy of his manuscript in the Connecticut State Library and a copy is on microfilm in the New York City Public Library. A few members of his family were given a copy.

Theodore Perrin and Mary Luella (Fuller) Bottum had 2 children:

54 i. Ray Augustus[8] Bottum, born May 15, 1895 at Hampden, Mass.
55 ii. Guy Wesley[8] Bottum, born July 27, 1901 at Buckland, Mass.

Virginia Chase, born Aug. 9, 1814 at Detroit, Mich., daughter of Thomas Lynn and Eula Maria (Bunting) Chase. Julius H. Bottum, who had been farm manager on two large southern ranches (Spring Lake Farm owned by Robert Jamison in Birmingham, Ala. and Jersey Ranch owned by Columbus Roberts, Atlanta, Ga.), returned to New Haven in 1941 to take over the farm there when his father retired. His parents remained at the farmhouse and Julius and Virginia moved into the "street house", vacant since the death of Julius Otto Bottum. Julius managed the farm, now only about 300 acres, and 100 acres on the farm owned by Daisy Bottum's uncle, Wendell Sturdevant, until the year following the death of his father. On Sep. 3, 1958 the machinery, cattle, and other equipment were sold and the farm was discontinued after over 125 years of uninterrupted operation under the same family. Since January of 1960 Julius has been laboratory technician in the Zoology Department of the University of Vermont at Burlington. For 10 years Virginia Bottum was a medical assistant at Mary Fletcher Hospital in Burlington and is now a licensed practical nurse. The family are members of the Congregational Church and are Republicans. Julius, always interested in cattle and horses, plans to farm again upon retirement. He is a Mason and Virginia is a member of the Order of the Eastern Star and of the American Association of Medical Assistants. Their address is Box 106, Shelburne Heights, Vermont 05482. TENTH GENERATION FROM DANIEL[1] LONGBOTTOM, DESCENDANTS OF DANIEL[2]

68. Lynn Hoyt[10] Bottum (Julius Hoyt[9], Carroll J.[8], Julius Otto[7], Elias S.[6], Elias[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]), born Nov. 4, 1944 at New Haven, Vt., son of Julius Hoyt [#56] and Virginia (Chase) Bottum. Lynn spent his boyhood on the family farm at New Haven, moving with his parents to Shelburne, Vt. in 1960. He attended the Lyndon State College in Lyndon Center, Vt. and the University of Vermont where he majored in political science. He writes that he seems "to follow in the pattern of Bottum conservatism". He has been politically active, in school and since. In 1968 he lost by a narrow margin, in a three way race, his bid for a seat in the Vermont State Legislature. He is also interested in steamboats, railroads, old coins and genealogy. He is genealogist for his branch of the family. While still in high school he became a member of the Steamship Historical Society of America. Lynn is a radio telephone operator and a licensed radar observer and is presently employed by the Lake Champlain Transportation Co. of Burlington, Vt. as a captain of one of their ferry boats.

69. Norman Edward[10] Bottum (Forrest H.[9], Norman D.[8], H. Merle[7], Norman[6], Nathan H.[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel[2,1]), born June 28, 1932 at Springfield, Mass., the son of Forrest H. [#57] and Ruth Marian (Gibbs) Bottum; married in June 1968 at Pompano Beach, Florida

Dorothy J. Carine, born Mar. 15, 1931, the daughter of Samuel and Rose (Luscri) Carine of Sharpsville, Pa. A graduate of Utica Free Academy at Utica, N.Y., he attended Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy, N.Y. and Syracuse University of Syracuse. In Oct. 1954 he enlisted in the Army Security Agency of the U.S. Army. After graduating from Army Language School in Monterey, California, he served in Germany till September of 1957. In Springfield he was active in the Young Republican Club and in the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He is an avid golfer and sport car rally enthusiast. He is employed as a supervisor of the Accounts Payable Department at the Avionics Division of the Bendix Corporation, Fort Lauderdale, Florida. They live at 736 N.E. 13th Court, #14, Fort Lauderdale 33304. Norman and Dorothy Bottum have one child:

i. Douglas Edward Bottum, born May 23, 1970.

SONS OF JAMES^2 LONGBOTTOM

70. James^3 Longbottom, Jr. (James^2, Daniel^1), born Sep. 27, 1729, bapt. May 17, 1730 - died in Feb. of 1814, buried at Hanover, Ct., the son of James and Priscilla (Lovett) Longbottum; married on Mar. 20, 1753 in the 1st Congregational Church of Plainfield, Ct.

(1) Mary Farnum of Canterbury, Ct., born Jan. 26, 1730 - died Apr. 13, 1775. She had 6 children. James married again on June 27, 1776, by Levi Hart, Minister,

(2) Sarah Averell. She had 3 children. James fought in the Revolutionary War. He enlisted from Norwich and marched to Boston at the time of the Lexington alarm, April 1775. James changed the name from Longbottom to Bottum between the time of Mary's last child, Roswell, and Sarah's first child, William, according to Norwich V.R. The children of James Longbottom, Jr. were:

i. Priscilla Longbottom, born Feb. 28, 1755; married at Norwich by Andrew Lee, town clerk, on Oct. 25, 1780 Dyer Kingsley. They had 2 children:
   a. Daniel Kingsley, born Oct. 29, 1781.
   b. Polley Kingsley, born May 10, 1783.

ii. James[4] Longbottom, born Mar. 30, 1756. He lived in Vermont.

72 iii. Asael[4] (Asahel) Longbottom, born July 31, 1758.

iv. Mary Longbottom, born May 26, 1759.

v. Sylvina Longbottom, born Sep. 27, 1760 - died 1806; married on Sep. 29, 1784 Wesley Perkins.

73 vi. Roswell[4] Longbottom, born Jan. 2, 1767 - died Oct. 2, 1853.

74 vii. William[4] Bottum, born July 3, 1777 - died 1851.[1]

viii. Sally Bottum, born May 13, 1779.

75 ix. Martin Bottum, born Oct. 4, 1781.

1. Theodore P. Bottum's manuscript lists the three youngest children of James Longbottom, born 1729, as belonging to James Longbottom, born 1756. However, the following proves that he was mistaken. From a letter dated April 25, 1886 addressed to Calvin H. Bottum from Henry C. Bottum, grandson of Roswell [#73, above] - "... that William Bottum was a younger brother of my grandfather does not admit of doubt in my mind because he spent some years in Orwell when he was a young man and taught school winters and worked at carpenter's trade summers and some of the houses that he built still stand there and though my father was but a lad at this time he has always spoken of his Uncle William with a great deal of affection. He has told me that he was a scholarly person and a finished gentleman. Of his Uncle Martin he never told me so much." From a letter addressed to C. H. Bottum from E. A. Bottum of Dickson, Tenn. and dated Mar. 6, 1886 -"... I am the youngest son of William Bottum, formerly of Norwich, who emigrated to Ellsworth, Trumbull Co., Ohio in 1820 when I was two years old. I never saw but two of my uncles on my father's side, Uncle Roswell and Uncle James, but my father often spoke of his brothers Asahel and Martin." Bottum Collection, pp. 45, 52, 53.

71. Pelatia[3] (Pelatiel, Peltiah) Longbottom (James[2], Daniel[1]), born Feb. 23, 1739-40, bapt. Mar. 2, 1749, Norwich, Ct., son of James [#3] and Elizabeth (Jackson) Longbottom; married Sep. 18, 1764 Hannah Gray (Gary) of Pomfret, Ct. The U.S. census, 1790, shows them in Sandgate, Vt., just north of Shaftsbury. The names of 2 children are recorded in Norwich. Pelatia also changed his name to Bottum. His children are registered as Bottum in the Norwich vital records:

76 i. Ebenezer (Ebeneza) Bottum, born Sep. 16, 1767.
ii. Elizabeth Bottum, born June 17, 1773.

Norwich, Ct. V.R., Vol. 1, pp 318,445; Vol. 2, pp. 160, 195; Vol. 3, pp. 20,24,156,290,299.

GRANDSONS OF JAMES[2] LONGBOTTOM

72. Asael[4] Bottum (James[3], James[2], Daniel[1]), born Jan. 3, 1754 at Norwich, Ct., son of James [#70] and Mary (Farnum) Bottum; married on May 29, 1788 at Mansfield (once known as Swiftown), Ct.

Rebecca Parker. Asael Bottum was a Revolutionary War patriot. He enlisted from Norwich and marched to Boston at the time of the Lexington alarm, Apr. 1775. At New London, Ct., 1832, he received a pension, # S. 15341. [1] He and Rebecca Bottum had 5 children:

77 i. James L.[5] Bottum, born Mar. 10, 1790.
78 ii. Ephrum[5] Bottum, born Oct. 6, 1791.
iii. Rebecca Bottum, born May 15, 1793.
iv. Zackariah Parker[5] Bottum, born Apr. 20, 1797, as recorded in the Franklin, Ct. Church Records. He married on Jan. 8, 1882, by Wm. S. Strong,
(1) Clarissa Clark of Somers, Ct. He married again on Feb. 3, 1828, by the Rev. Levi Nelson
(2) Lydia Tibbetts. He married a third time on Apr. 27, 1843, by the Rev. S.D. Jewett at Lisbon, Ct.
(3) Mary Stephens. No record of children was found.
v. Mary Bottum, born Dec. 28, 1803; married on Mar. 1, 1826 at Norwich, by the Rev. David N. Bentley Charles Fuller, born in Lisbon.

1. The name of Asael is found in records spelled variously as Asa, Asell and Asahel.

73. Roswell[4] Bottum (James[3,2], Daniel[1]), born Jan. 2, 1762 at Norwich, Ct. - died on Oct. 2, 1853 at Orwell, Addison Co., Vt., son of James [#70] and Mary (Farnum) Bottum; married in February of 1793 at Orwell
(1) Omira Bush. They had 1 child. Roswell Bottum married again on July 3, 1801 at Orwell

(2) Moriah Conkey [1.], born in 1784 - died at Orwell on May 26, 1863. They had 2 daughters. Roswell Bottum was among the early residents of Orwell, Vt., settling there in 1786 on a farm which remained in the family for many years and which passed into the possession of his granddaughter, Emily Bottum and her husband Moses J. Clark. The Clark family remained in Orwell for several generations. Roswell was a tanner as well as a farmer. An articulate advocate of free speech in his day, the following is related of him in the Records of Governor and Council of Vermont, Vol. 4, pp. 495-6:

> "Roswell Bottum was author of an article in the Rutland Herald in 1798 relating how Matthew Lyon, 2. imprisoned under the alien and sedition laws for writing a letter criticizing President Adams, was freed from prison by great numbers of people who each contributed silver dollars toward his $1,000 fine in order to overcome a technicality and hindrance to his release, whereafter they escorted him in a long procession to the state line so that he could resume his seat in Congress. He became a national symbol of the right to freedom of speech."

The children of Roswell Bottum:

79 i. Roswell[5] Bottum, Jr., born Feb. 17, 1796.
ii. Eliza Bottum, born Sep. 11, 1802 - died July 1803.
iii. Eliza M. Mottum, born Apr. 16, 1806 - died Dec. 20, 1873; married on June 13, 1830 at Orwell (then in the County of Rutland), by the Rev. Sherman Kellogg, Samuel Brewer of Orwell. They had 2 children:
a. Miriam Brewer, died young.
b. Martha Brewer lived in Orwell.

1. Henry Clay Bottum gives the name of his grandfather's second wife as Miriam. The family Bible and tombstone say Moriah, so perhaps her name was Moriah Miriam.
2. Matthew Lyon married Beulah (Chittenden) Galusha, daughter of Governor Thomas Chittenden [#5-iv] of Vermont and widow of Elijah Galusha [#6-vi], brother of Governor Jonas Galusha.

Vermont 1790 U.S. Census, Orwell, p. 40.

74. William[4] Bottum (James[3,2], Daniel[1]), born July 3, 1777 at Norwich, Ct. - died in 1851 in Ohio, the son of James [#70] and Sarah(Averell) Bottum; married on June 30, 1804 Amy Robinson. William and his family lived in Vermont until 1820 when they emigrated to Trumbull Co., Ohio. In Orwell he was a carpenter and a building contractor employing a number of men. He may have followed this trade after he moved to Ohio but he also farmed there. [Footnote 1., #70] William and Amy Bottum had 6 children, all born in Orwell:

i. Emeline Augusta Bottum, born Aug. 1, 1805 - died Mar. 5, 1835; married on May 21, 1826, George Matson.
ii. Caroline Eliza Bottum, born Jan. 17, 1807 - died Aug. 23, 1808.
iii. Caroline Salinda Bottum, born Feb. 8, 1809 - still living in Feb. of 1886 at Anoka, Minn.; married May 11, 1832 Haynes Fitch.
iv. Harriet Tracy Bottum, born Nov. 6, 1814 - died Dec. of 1873; married on Jan. 1, 1840 Lorenzo D. Smith.
80 v. Edwin Augustus Bottum, born July 16, 1818.
vi. William Wallace Bottum, born Nov. 20, 1819 - died Feb. 21, 1831.

76. Ebenezer[4] Bottum (Pelatia[3], James[2], Daniel[1]), born Sep. 16, 1767 - died Dec. 20, 1852, son of Pelatia and Hannah (Gray) Bottum; married on Nov. 11, 1792

Lucretia Daniels of Pomfret, Ct., born Nov. 19, 1774 - died May 11, 1867. Ebenezer, Lucretia and their son Lyman are buried in the Center Shaftsbury Baptist Church Cemetery. They had 3 children, probably all born in Shaftsbury:
i. John[5] Bottum, born May 31, 1793.
ii. Ira[5] Bottum, born Sep. 15, 1795 at Shaftsbury.
iii. Lyman[5] Bottum, born Apr. 19, 1798 - died May 5, 1867.

EDWIN AUGUSTUS BOTTUM OF TRUMBULL COUNTY, OHIO AND MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

80. Edwin Augustus[5] (William[4], James[3,2], Daniel[1]) Bottum, born July 16, 1818 at Orwell, Vt, son of William and Amy (Robinson) Bottum; married on Sep. 19, 1839 Mary Jane Smith of Prairie du Chien, Wisc. He grew up in Trumbull Co. and, as a young man, went to Minneapolis where he lived until 1885 when he, his wife, unmarried daughter and youngest son went to Dickson, Tenn. returning though at the end of 1886 to their home at 2495 - 9th Ave. S. in Minneapolis. He was interested in the family history and wrote Calvin H. Bottum that there were several of the Bottum name in Tennessee, a Mary in Eva Benton Co. whose father's name was Hiram, and a Charles someplace and a family in Hickman Co. - but he had been unable to get in touch with them. Edwin A. and Mary Jane Bottum had 9 children:

83 i. Charles F.[6] Bottum, born Aug. 24, 1840.
ii. Mary E., born Jan. 24, 1841, a milliner and "old maid".
iii. William T.[6] Bottum, born Jan. 3, 1843; married Dec. 10, 1873. He was a R.R. superintendent and well-to-do. His wife persuaded him to change his name to Matson "for fear his children would be disgraced by the name Bottum. I think he is ashamed of the act and would give all his old shoes to have his father's name back."
84 iv. Henry Lee[6] Bottum, born Feb. 7, 1845.

iii. Perkins Burnham7 Bottum, born Jan. 6, 1859 - died at Oshkosh, Wisc. on June 18, 1958 at the age of 99. He never married. As a young man he followed his brother Joseph to the Dakota Territory and homesteaded 160 acres near Sioux Falls. He lived for a time near Miller, S.D., returning to Ripon about 1897. The United States Rural Free Delivery was established in 1896 and the Ripon Post Office began delivery in that year also. In 1904 Perkins Bottum started a rural delivery route which he served for nearly 20 years. He carried the mail by horse and buggy to 100 farmers on a 25 mile route in all kinds of weather and over unbelievably poor roads. He was often forced by weather conditions to accept overnight hospitality at a farmhouse and finish his route the next day. In 1918 he started using an automobile but he still depended on his horse and buggy in the bad weather of winter months.

CHAPTER XIX

SEVENTH GENERATION, DESCENDANTS OF JAMES[2] LONGBOTTOM

JOSEPH HENRY BOTTUM OF SOUTH DAKOTA

85. Joseph Henry[7] Bottum*(Henry Clay[6], Roswell, Jr.[5], Roswell[4], James[3,2], Daniel[1]), born Sep. 26, 1853 at West Bloomfield, N.Y. died at Faulkton, S.D. on June 19, 1946, the son of Henry Clay and Helen Maria (Burnham) Bottum; married on June 2, 1885 at La Foon, Dakota Territory

Silvia Smith, born Apr. 1, 1864 at Stanford, Indiana - died at Faulkton on Sep. 27, 1956, the daughter of Darius Sherman and Adelia Murilla (Williams) Smith.[1] Joseph Henry Bottum was one year old when his parents moved to Wisconsin. He was graduated from Ripon College in 1877, studied law in Fond du Lac and moved to Sioux Falls, Dakota Territory in 1880. In 1883 he went to Faulk County and practiced law for a time in LaFoon.[2] Two years after his marriage they settled in Faulkton where they spent the rest of their lives. He served the community in every capacity his training and talents offered: Register of Deeds, States Attorney, State Senator, Circuit Judge of the Tenth Judicial Circuit for 33 years, and a member of the Constitutional Convention when South Dakota became a state. A member of the Congregational church, he taught Sunday School for more than 50 years. He was active in the Masonic lodge and in the Order of Odd Fellows. Silvia Grace Smith had come to LaFoon with her parents in 1882 from DeSoto, Mo. where her parents had moved in 1867. She was LaFoon's first school teacher while the county was still raw prarie, unsurveyed, unorganized and unnamed - and 2 years later she became its first bride. She always took an active part in the life around her, her home a center for church, social, and civic affairs. She promoted the school and its programs, was a member of Eastern Star and the Tuesday Club, played golf enthusiastically - an accomplished and useful citizen. Joseph Henry and Silvia Bottum had 7 children:

i. Helen Bottum, born Mar. 18, 1886 at LaFoon, Dakota Territory. For a number of years she has lived with her sister Fannie in Minneapolis.

ii. Fannie Crawford Bottum, born Dec. 5, 1889; married William Paul Givens. (Givens, below)

iii. Emily Bottum, born Dec. 1, 1892; married Clarence George Horen. (Horen, below)

iv. Dora H. Bottum; married George H. Flynn. (Flynn, below)

* Joseph H. Bottum was christened "Joe". "Joseph" grew from presumption and he adopted it as such.

1. Darius S. Smith, son of John & Mary (Burroughs) Smith, b. Aug. 19, 1833 in N.C. - d. Feb. 28, 1926 at Faulkton;m. Adelia M. Williams in Mo.
2. LaFoon, a pioneer town 5 miles from Faulkton, passed out of existence when the Northwestern R.R. came thru Faulkton and it became the county seat. All records were moved from LaFoon to Faulkton.

(1) Mary Jane Stewart, born Sep. 13, 1862 at Rosendale Center - died at Phoenix, Ariz. on Mar. 8, 1908, the daughter of Elisha and M.C. (Klampee) Stewart. He married again

(2) Mrs. Ida Pinch of Rosendale, born Aug. 17, 1873 - died Aug. 19, 1966 at Englewood, Colo., daughter of Charles and Augusta (Miller) Brown. George R. Bottum attended Ripon College at Ripon, Wisc. In the fall of 1882 he filed on a homestead in Burdette Township, Hand Co., S.D. and lived and farmed on it until 1919 when he retired to Redfield in Spink Co. Like most 19th century Americans he believed that faith, work, and thrift were virtues essential to the good life and that education was a great aid. A Republican, he served 2 years in the State Legislature and was interested and active in community affairs. He was a member of the local school board. Mary Jane Stewart attended Ripon College where she studied art. Her life was in the true tradition of the pioneer woman - rearing a family, helping to sustain religion, and bringing culture to a new and wild country. She was a member of the Methodist church at Burdette and her hobby was painting. She suffered from tuberculosis and had gone to Arizona to regain her health, previous to her death. George R. and Mary Jane Bottum had 5 children:

91 i. Stewart Neil[8] Bottum, born Janusry of 1890.
92 ii. Sheldon Gale[8] Bottum, born Apr. 2, 1893.

CHAPTER XXII

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN[2] LONGBOTTOM, BORN AUGUST 4, 1708

4. John[2] Longbottom, born Aug. 4, 1708 at Newent, Ct., bapt. in the Newent Church on Sep. 14, 1716 - died before Apr. 17, 1761, the date on which his will was probated. He married on Nov. 8, 1739

(1) Rebekah Shedd, who died June 3, 1744, and on Feb. 6, 1751
(2) Hannah Jewell of Preston, Ct. He had 3 children by each wife and died while his second family was still young. The births of the first 3 children are recorded. In his will John names Samuel as his 6th and youngest child. A probate court record, dated Jan. 1, 1771, shows that Daniel Bishop was named guardian for Samuel. The will of Jabez L. Bottum, probated Jan. 17, 1837 in Cayuga Co., N.Y. contained bequests for the children of his sister Rebecca Spaulding and his brother Samuel. John Longbottom and his brother James were among the 20 men severely injured when a 100 foot span of a bridge they were building over one of Norwich's rivers fell with 40 men on it, killing 2 and severely injuring 20. Children of John Longbottom:

i. John[3] Longbottom, Jr., born Nov. 23, 1740, bapt. in the Newent Church on Nov. 30, 1740.
106 ii. Joshua[3] Longbottom, born June 26, 1742, bapt. July 25, 1742.
iii. Daniel[3] Longbottom, born May 26, 1744.
iv. Jabez[3] Long Bottum, born May 5, 1753. (Below)
v. Rebecca Bottum, born 1756 - died in Scipio, Cayuga Co., N.Y. in 1816; married on May 9, 1784 in Farmington, Ct. Oliver Spaulding of Plainfield. Her brother Jabez mentions "children of deceased sister, Rebecca Spaulding", but only one by name, John. John was born July 4, 1785. The will also names the children of John Spaulding - Rebecca, Nancy, John, Hamilton, and Mary - all minors.
107 vi. Samuel[3] Bottum, born before July 5, 1759, the date on which he was baptised.

Jabez Long Bottum, born May 5, 1753 - died Sep. 14, 1836, buried in Dry Creek Cemetery, Moravia, N.Y. He married, late in life a widow, Mercy Knapp, born about Jan. 1, 1774 - died June 27, 1834, by whom he had no children. In a letter to Calvin Bottum, dated March 7, 1889, LaPorte, Indiana, Robert Bottum, grandson of Jabez's brother Samuel, tells of a letter "that came to Stonington directed to Samuel Bottum, my grandfather (then dead), from some old and rich bachelor farmer but, by some unavoidable accident they did not go to him right away. He, supposing them all to be dead, and wanting someone to take care of him in his old age, married an old widow with a numerous family. However, he left father and Uncle Robert a thousand apiece." Jabez L. Bottum was a veteran of the Revolutionary War having enlisted Jan. 1776 from Plainfield, Windham Co., Ct. and having served for 3 years, a private under Capt. Cliff and Col. Durkee in the Continental Line. In 1793 he settled on land (Government compensation for military service) in Cayuga Co., N.Y., which became a part of the Village of Sempronius in 1799. In 1832 a pension of $60.00 a year was approved. In 1833 that part of the village in which he lived - 100 acres bought from John Stoyell, Sr. on the Moravia and Milan Turnpike on the Toll Gate Corner - became the Village of Moravia. He carried the first mail from Auburn to Moravia, via Owosco, Kellogsville and Sempronius. He lived alone in his house which stood a little east of the tollgate until his marriage. He was leader of the choir in the Congregational church and was the song singer of the community. His will, in addition to the Spauldings and Robert and Samuel Bottum, mentions "heirs at law and next of kin" as Frederick Bottum of Worcester, Mass. (died May 24, 1855 in Southbridge, Mass.); Edward & Hannah Harris of Barre, Orleans Co., N.Y.; Rebecca & Wm. Quigley of Genoa, Cayuga Co., N.Y.; George Hopkins of Genesee Co., N.Y., a minor, Steven & Diana Hopkins of Ledyard Co., N.Y.; Seymour & Silvia Deming of Ledyard; Wm. Knapp; Septa Bottum of Sempronius and his heirs.

FOURTH GENERATION, DESCENDANTS OF JOHN[2] LONGBOTTOM

108. Samuel[4] (Samuel[3], John[2], Daniel[1]) Bottum, Jr., born July 28, 1788 - died Nov. 9, 1874 at Stonington, Ct., the son of Samuel [#107] and Mary (Sheffield) Bottum; married on Dec. 31, 1815

Nancy Palmer, born at Stonington on Oct. 14, 1791 - died May 11, 1869, daughter of Peleg (born Stonington Jan. 24, 1754, married Mar. 1, 1779) and Mary (Burch) Palmer. Samuel Bottum, Jr. participated in the War of 1812 between June of 1813 and Aug. of 1814 for 3 short terms of enlistment, twice in the Connecticut Militia and once in a detachment of Infantry. The gun he had used was kept by the family and in 1938 his grandson, Frank Bottum [#109-iii], gave "the Battle of Stonington gun" to Theodore P. Bottum who, a short time before he died, gave it to his grandson, James Theodore Bottum. Samuel Bottum, Jr. later became a whaler and he was remembered as "Captain", possibly because he was captain of his whaling vessel or because an honorary rank was given him in his later years because of his war record.

Samuel and Nancy Bottum had 8 children:

i. John[5] Bottum, born Oct. 21, 1816. He was killed July 10, 1854 by natives on the Island of New Britain in the Pacific Ocean. On May 15, 1843 he married Susan E. Forsyth of New London, Ct., born Dec. 5, 1820.

ii. Mary Ann Bottum, born June 27, 1819; married Capt. Gurdon Pendleton. (Below)

109 iii. Francis A. Bottum, born May 4, 1822.

iv. William Earle[5] Bottum, born Apr. 6, 1826 - died May 13, 1898; married Ann Eliza Palmer. They had 3 children:

a. Nancy Bottum.

b. Samuel Bottum, born Jan. 19, 1859 - died Jan. 17, 1860.

c. Helen.

v. Caroline E. Bottum, born Nov. 6, 1828 - died Nov. 23, 1854; married on Mar. 8, 1849

HOBART William S. Hobart, born Sep. 26, 1821 - died Feb. 1, 1854. They had 2 children, both born in Stonington:

a. William H. Hobart, born May 12, 1850 - died May 25, 1925.

b. Albert P. Hobart, died May 20, 1855, aged 2 years.

They are all buried in Evergreen Cemetery, Stonington.

vi. Robert[5] Bottum, born Jan. 25, 1832 at Stonington - died May 25, 1916. He married on Mar. 10, 1868 Ellen Kill, born Mar. 14, 1844. Their home was in LaPorte, Ind. He was a member of the LaPorte City Band. He wrote Calvin H. Bottum in 1889 telling him what he knew of his family. He had 2 children:

KORROS a. Hattie Bottum, married Callus Korros of LaPorte. They had a daughter:

1a. Linda Korros.

b. Gurdon Bottum.

vii. Henry S. Bottum, born July 21, 1835 - died before 1889.

viii. Helen M. Bottum, born Sep. 8, 1839 - died Nov. 4, 1886.

Samuel Jay and Olive Jerusha (Longley) Bascom on their 50th wedding anniversary

Samuel Jay Bascom wrote that his four younger brothers had all died before and he named them: Wyman Hubbard, George B., Robert O., and Cassius Clay Bascom. He attended school in Orwell and Orwell Village and for 2 years at Burr and Burton Seminary at Manchester, Vt. At the close of the Civil War he went to Washington, D.C. and was employed by the U.S. Sanitary Commission and attended evening classes at Columbia Law School. He met his future wife in Washington and became engaged to her. He and a friend went west in 1867 and he took up land in what is now Elk County. His brother Wyman joined him on adjoining property. Kansas was wilderness at this time and, by hard work and with the help of a courageous and ingenius wife, he did here what his grandparents had done in Orwell. In their later years they retired from farming and moved into the town of Howard, diagonally across the street from the corner where the mother of Glenn W. Oliver spent the last 20 years of her life. Samuel Jay and Olive Bascom had 4 children, the oldest being born in Washington, D.C. where she had gone to be with her mother, and the three younger ones being born in Elk County.

Dorus Clark (D.C.)[9] Bascom, born Nov. 11, 1885 - died at Denver, Colo. on Dec. 29, 1965, the son of Samuel Jay and Olive Jerusha (Longley) Bascom (above); married on Aug. 22, 1911 at Howard, Kansas

Alma Thompson, born July 27, 1885 at Howard - died May 4, 1958 at Fowler, Colo., the daughter of Benjamin Monroe and Mary (Auldridge) Thompson. D.C. Bascom was born on the Bascom farm in that part of Elk County which was known as the Western Park community. He attended the rural schools and Howard High School and was graduated, B.S., in 1910 from the Kansas State Agricultural College (now Kansas State University). He went to Ft. Collins, Colo. after graduation, as secretary of the college Y.M.C.A. After 2 years he became the first county agent in Colorado, stationed at Sterling. He worked for Great Western Sugar Co. as fieldman for 2 years and from 1918 till 1935 was county agent for Larimer County, Colo. at Ft. Collins. For 2 years he was Rural Organization Specialist for Colo. Extension Service and from 1935 to 1949, when he retired from government service, he was conservationist for Soil Conservation Service at Colo. Springs, Dalhart, Texas and Walsh and Fowler, Colo. For some years after this he kept books for the Diven Packing Co. at Fowler. In 1962 he was an honored guest at the Colorado State Fair and was recognized in the observation of 50 years of 4 H Club work in Colorado. He was a Mason and was a member of the Fowler Lions Club. The family were Methodists. D.C. and Alma Bascom had 2 children:

i. Betty May Bascom, born Sep. 19, 1916 at Sterling, Colo.; married on June 1, 1939 at Ft. Collins, Colo.
KARST Kermit George Karst, born Jan. 19, 1914 at Pueblo, Colo. They are both graduates of CSU at Ft. Collins. Betty is a teacher and an educational secretary and a life member of NAES (National Ass'n for Educational Secretaries). Kermit has held several positions having to do with animal husbandry. For a number of years he has been field editor of the American Hereford Journal. They have 2 children:

CHAPTER XXIV

FOURTH GENERATION, DESCENDANTS OF DAVID[2] LONGBOTTOM

SIX SONS OF ASA [#110] BOTTUM

114. Charles[4] Bottum, born Jan. 2, 1775 at Scotland, Ct. - died Mar. 31, 1813 at Genoa, Cayuga Co., N.Y., son of Asa and Elizabeth Farnum Bottum. He married on Jan. 18, 1803

Mary Bassett. She perhaps died before January of 1821 for a guardian was appointed for their older son Jarius at that time. Charles had died intestate. The Surrogate Court of Cayuga Co. N.Y. appointed Lucius Gaylord, of Scipio and later of Ledyard, guardian of their three children: on Jan. 30, 1821 for Jarius, "... son of Charles deceased, late of Genoa in Cayuga County, aged 14 years on the 20th of September last"; on February 2, 1821 for Cornelia Bottum, "... 17 on 8th day of January last, child of Charles Bottum late of Genoa"; and on Dec. 30, 1823 for Lorenzo "... aged 14 on 8th day of September 1823, child of Charles Bottum." Nothing more has been learned of this family.

i. Cornelia Bottum, born Jan. 8, 1804.
ii. Jarius Bottum, born Sep. 20, 1806.
iii. Lorenzo Bottum, born Sep. 8, 1809.

T.P.B.'s MS., p. 30.
Bottum Collection: Box #110, Book B[1], pp. 29,31, guardianship papers recorded in Cayuga Co. Court House, Auburn, N.Y., Surrogate Court, p. 118.

115. Jarius[4] Bottum, born Jan. 2, 1779 at Scotland, Ct. - died June 27, 1828, son of Asa and Elizabeth (Farnum) Bottum; married on Dec. 10, 1807

Sarah (Sally) Decker, born at Linlithgo, N.Y. Nov. 24, 1790, baptized there in the Reformed Dutch Church on Nov. 29, 1790 - died Feb. 23, 1826, daughter of Jan Jacobsen and Lois (Stephens) Decker. (Decker, below) Jarius and Sally Bottum began their married life in Red Hook, Dutchess Co., N.Y. Within 7 or 8 years of their marriage, records show that Jarius Bottum had moved into the Finger Lakes area of New York State. For 40 or 50 years members of the Norwich, Ct. families of Bottum had been moving westward for one reason or another. Original land holdings had probably been divided to the point where their large families could no longer be sustained and the more recently opened lands of Vermont and New York State held an irresistable appeal. It is not known whether Jarius lived in Ovid, Seneca County, but he bought land there. As Early as 1790 much of the site of Ovid was owned by members of the Decker family so it is not unlikely that Jarius and Sally may have lived there when they first moved to central New York. In 1815 and 1820 records of deeds in Cayuga County show that Jarius was probably living in Scipio, New York. His brother Charles had died there in 1813. He held joint interest with his brother David in property in Genoa. In 1820 he bought 350 acres in Cato. Family records show that their children were born in several different neighboring places; 1814 in Schoharie County, 1818 in Syracuse, Oneida County, and 1824 in Oneida County. Jarius and Sally Bottum are buried in Van Buren, Onondaga, County. They both died before any of their children were of age, the two youngest being babies. After the death of their oldest child Adeline in 1830, or perhaps when her health began to fail, Lafayette and Sarah Etta became the foster children of Lorin and Electa (Rewey) Shedd who had no children. The grandfather of Lorin Shedd had come from Canterbury, Ct. to western Massachusetts before the Revolutionary War. It is very probable that they were Quakers. He was perhaps a brother of Rebekah Shedd who married John Bottum [#4]. Lafayette Bottum became the sole heir of Lorin Shedd of Westbury, Wayne Co., N.Y. He was not legally adopted and he kept his own name. Jarius and Sally (Decker) Bottum had 11 children:

i. Adeline Bottum, born Aug. 8, 1808 at Red Hook, N.Y. - died Feb. 6, 1830 in Van Buren, N.Y.

ii. Ozias D. Bottum, born (prob.) 1809 at Red Hook, N.Y. - died Mar. 20, 1856 at St. Louis, Mo. In 1847 he was in Columbia, Ark. The family lost track of him for many years though efforts were made to locate him. They learned of his death through a letter from an acquaintance.

123 iii. Edward Wheeler[5] Bottum, born June 22, 1810/11 in Red Hook.

iv. Eleanor E. Bottum, born Feb. 13, 1812.

v. Lois Jane Bottum, born Dec. 31, 1813; married Amaziah Carrier. (Carrier, below)

vi. Charles L. Bottum, born Aug. 17, 1816; married Angeline ___?___. They lived in Livingston Co., N.Y. They had 1 child, perhaps more:

a. Benajah Bottum, who lived in Holland, Mich.

1a. Bessie Bottum.

vii. Jarius Bottum, Jr., born July 20, 1818, lived in Syracuse, N.Y.

viii. Eliza Ann Bottum, born May 20, 1820; married Sylvester Ketchum. (Ketchum, below)

124 ix. William James Bottum, born Dec. 11, 1822, Wayne Co., N.Y.

125 x. De LaFayette Bottum, born June 12, 1824, Oneida Co., N.Y.

xi. Sarah Etta, born Aug. 3, 1825 - perhaps died young.

CARRIER

Amaziah Carrier, born in Conquest, Cayuga Co., N.Y.; married Lois Jane Bottum, born Dec. 31, 1813, also in Conquest, daughter of Jarius and Sally (Decker) Bottum. She lived to a very old age and is remembered by her great-nephew, Charles W. Lytle, who knew her as a small child. She was then blind and spent her time with knitting and reminiscing. In 1843 Amaziah Carrier bought the home of Robert Mason, first holder of the land, at Four Corners on the southeast side of Rose, Wayne Co., N.Y. They later lived in the neighboring town of Wolcott. Family records give the following names of their children:[1]

i. Child, died young.

iv. William J. Ketchum, born Mar. 17, 1860 - died Feb. 17, 1950; married Sarah La Vanchit Slack.

1. The above names of the children of Amaziah and Lois (Bottum) Carrier were given to Prof.Charles Walter Lytle, N. Tarrytown, N.Y. by Mrs. John A. Massen of Chicago, a granddaughter of Lois Jane (Bottum) Carrier. Roe, in his Rose Neighborhood Sketches 1893, gives different names: Betsey, Jane, Stephen, Willard, Caleb. I would conclude that he was in error and that the family records are correct.

Family records in possession of Prof. Charles Walter Lytle, grandson of LaFayette Bottum (# 125).

116. Walter[4] Bottum, born Oct. 29, 1781 in Scotland, Ct. - died July 2, 1857, son of Asa [#110] and Elizabeth (Farnum) Bottum; married on Jan. 30, 1802

116a. David[4] Bottum (Asa[3], David[2], Daniel[1]), born in Willimantic, Ct. on Feb. 12, 1784 - died in the town of Ridgeway, N.Y. about 1829, son of Asa [#110] and Elizabeth (Farnum) Bottum; married in Norwich, Ct. on May 2, 1813

(1) Lucy Atwater, born Feb. 18, 1790 - died Feb. 14, 1817. It would appear that they had no children. He married again about 1818 or 1819 at Hyde Park, Dutchess County, N.Y.

(2) Lucinda Baker, born Oct. 9, 1786 at Windham, Ct., christened on Mar. 12, 1815 in St. James Episcopal Church in Hyde Park - died Oct. 22, 1878 at Amboy, Lee Co., Ill., the daughter of Elijah and Olive (Kasson) Baker. By 1820 David Bottum was manufacturing silk in the town of Ridgeway (then in Genesee County), N.Y. In addition to his wife there was a "female under 10" and a "male 26-44" living in his home, and 2 males were "engaged in manufacture". So it would seem that David and Lucinda Baker had married by mid 1819 and that perhaps a relative or apprentice was living with them and working in the factory. Lucinda had been a teacher before her marriage. After David's death she married again in 1832, (2) Isaac Barross of Riga, N.Y., a widower with 9 children.

In the spring of 1846 they moved to Avon, Michigan and her husband died there in the fall of the same year. She lived with daughters in New York State and in Indiana until 1851 when she made a permanent home with another daughter in Amboy, Illinois where she lived the rest of her life. David and Lucinda (Baker) Bottum had 5 children:

i. Lucy Amelia Bottum, born in Orleans Co., N.Y. (prob.) in 1820 or 1821; married before 1850
FROST Stephen Allen Frost. In 1852 they were living in Batavia, N.Y. and in 1890 their home was in Jersey City, N.J.
ii. Sarah Lucretia Bottum, born 1822 in Orleans Co., N.Y.;married James Rosebrugh. (Rosebrugh, below)
iii. Emma Lucinda Bottum, born Aug. 22, 1823 at Shelby, Orleans Co., N.Y.; married George Doty. (Doty, below)
iv. A daughter, born about 1825 - died in 1849 at Perry, Ind.; married PERRY S.E. Perry.
v. Marcia Olive Bottum, born Feb. 23, 1828 in Orleans Co., N.Y.; married Allen G. Hawkins. (Hawkins, below)

HUDSON L. BOTTUM OF LISBON, CONNECTICUT

120. Hudson L.[4] Bottum (Darius[3], David[2], Daniel[1]), born Nov. 12, 1788 - died July 17, 1846, the son of Darius [#112] and Lydia Lawrence Bottum; married on Dec. 31, 1812

(1) Lydia Jewitt, born 1794 - died Nov. 11, 1834, "age 40". He was married again, by the Rev. Levi Nelson on May 14, 1837 to
(2) Betsey Wilcox. It is possible that this was a marriage of his son, Henry Hudson Bottum, instead of his second marriage. Hudson L. Bottum had 8 children, none of whom were by his second marriage. He was a veteran of the War of 1812. He was a musician. And he lived all of his life in Lisbon, Ct. The first 5 children are recorded as children of Hudson and Lydia, the sixth as daughter of Hudson and Elizabeth and the last two as sons of Hudson. Th baptism of each child is recorded in the Lisbon-Newent Church records, except for Laurens Bottum, born three and a half weeks before the death of Lydia. The births of the first 5, except for Charles, are recorded on the same page of the Lisbon V.R. The births of the last 3 and the deaths of Lydia and of the next to youngest child are all recorded on the same page. As Ann Elizabeth, the 6th child, died at age 20, there is no point in pursuing her mystery further. The children of Hudson L. Bottum were:

i. Henry Hudson Bottum, born Jan. 7, 1814, bapt. May 19, 1822.

ii. William Bottum, born June 3, 1816, baptized May 19, 1822.

iii. Lydia Marie Bottum, born Nov. 16, 1818, bapt. May 19, 1822; married on Sep. 29, 1840, by Joseph Ayers, Jr.
BROMLEY Ezekiel Bromley of Lisbon. They had 2 children:
a. Charles Henry Bromley, born 1843.

b. Seymour Bromley, born Jan. 8, 1850.
iv. Charles Bottum, baptized May 19, 1822.
135 v. George Gilbert[5] Bottum, born Nov. 8, 1824.
vi. Ann Elizabeth Bottum, born Sep. 17, 1827, baptized June 22, 1828 - died Sep. 17, 1847, "age 20".
vii. Dwight Bottum, born June 8, 1830, baptized Sep. 19, 1830 - died Apr. 28, 1831.
viii. Laurens Bottum, born Oct. 16, 1834.

FIFTH GENERATION, DESCENDANTS OF DAVID LONGBOTTOM (1717-1785)

DR. EDWARD WHEELER BOTTUM OF LYONS, NEW YORK

123. Edward Wheeler[5] Bottum (Jarius[4], Asa[3], David[2], Daniel[1]), born at Red Hook, Dutchess Co., N.Y. on June 22, 1810/11 - died at Lyons, Wayne Co., N.Y. on Feb. 29, 1888; married on May 27, 1841 at (prob.) Victory, Cayuga Co., N.Y.

Sophronia Clark, born 1816. The disposal of her estate is dated Jan. 7, 1913 in the Court records at Lyons. Edward W. Bottum, 2nd son of Jarius and Sarah (Decker) Bottum, evidently spent his boyhood in the Finger Lake region of New York State. Seventeen years old at the time of his father's death, he was assisted in his education, according to family tradition, by his father's friend, Dr. Edward Wheeler of Red Hook, N.Y. He studied medicine at the Casleton Medical College in Vermont and, after graduation, he began his practice in Victory, N.Y. where he had trekked with a Shaker colony. After his marriage he moved to Huron in Wayne Co. where he was town supervisor in 1840. He continued in active practice there until 1856 when he moved to Lyons in the same county. He took an interest in public affairs and he represented the 1st District of Wayne County in the 74th Session of the Assembly of the State of New York which convened from Jan. 7 to Apr. 17 and from June 10 to July 11 in 1851. He had a large practice in Lyons and was associated at different times with Dr. Wm. G. David, Dr. Chamberlin, Dr. Gillette and Dr. Veeder. From family letters it seems he was in close touch with members of his family. He predeceased his wife by many years. Each is buried in Wayne County. Edward W. and Sophronia Bottum had 5 children:

i. Corintha E. "Cornie" Bottum, born Huron, N.Y. in 1843 - died before 1888 (the date of her father's death); married a Mr. Collins(possibly the Thaddeus Collins, administrator of the estate of Sophronia Bottum). They had 1 child:
   a. Frank E. Collins, born in Lyons.

ii. Mary E. Bottum, born at Huron in 1848 - died at Detroit, Mich. on Dec. 30, 1903; married at Lyons M.J. Curtis. Their home was in Detroit. They had 2 sons:
   a. George M. Curtis, died Dec. 30, 1905.
   b. Marion Curtis, born 1888.

iii. Edward C. Bottum, born at Lyons in 1854. In her will his mother left him $500 and forgave all indebtedness. Thaddeus Collins, in filing the disposal of her estate, stated that Edward's address was unknown and that his sister Harriet had paid him $200 from her own funds. In 1889, when his father's will was probated, he was living in Chicago. Edward W. Bottum's estate was left to his wife Sophronia and her heirs. As she lived to a great age, it is possible that there was nothing left of his estate when she died.

iv. Harriet Williams Bottum, born Jan. 12, 1857 at Lyons, N.Y. - died Feb. 16, 1944 at Summerville, S.C. She was never married and she was called (behind her back, no doubt) "old Hat". She attended Lyons Union School, Claverack College on-the-Hudson, and Wellesley College when it was a "Ladies' Seminary". She was the assistant librarian at Lyons for many years before her retirement in 1941. She moved to Summerville then to live with her sister Jennie and her two nieces Helen and Dorothy Hubbard. Harriet was a Presbyterian. She is buried in the Rural Cemetery at Lyons.

v. Jennie A. Bottum, born in 1859 at Lyons; married Charles Duane Hubbard. Their home was in Summerville, N.C. They had 2 daughters:
   a. Helen Hubbard, born in 1892.
   b. Dorothy Hubbard, born in 1896.

WILLIAM JAMES BOTTUM OF BARRY COUNTY, MICHIGAN

124. William James[5] Bottum (Jarius[4], Asa[3], David[2], Daniel), born Dec. 11, 1822 in central New York State, probably either Onondaga, Oneida, or Wayne County - died Sep. 23, 1854 in the Village of Hastings, Michigan and was buried on Sep. 24th by the Rev. Zerah Taylor Hoyt. He was the son of Jarius and Sarah (Decker) Bottum. He married about 1843 at Huron, Wayne Co., N.Y.

Matilda Esther Dowd (Doud), born in 1825 in Wayne Co., N.Y. In 1870 she was still living in Hastings. They came to Barry County, Michigan in 1848, probably in the company of his Uncle Septa Bottum for they both had property registered there in 1851, '52, '53 and '57. It is family tradition that William J. Bottum was a lawyer, and that he was called "the Squire". It is also said that his brother, LaFayette, had had training in the law and was also known as "the Squire". Perhaps they both were so trained and both wore the sobriquet, or the family tradition may have become confused and the honor belonged to only one of the brothers. William J. Bottum was a Mason and was elected secretary of Hastings Lodge, No. 52 F. and A.M. at its first election on Jan. 19, 1853. In the petition of Matilda E. Bottum to the Probate Court of Barry County after his death, it is shown that he left "goods and chattels, land and tenements" and that he left his "child, Benajah J. Bottum now of the age of ten years the only heir to his estate". William James and Matilda Esther Bottum had only 2 children:

136 i. Benajah James Bottum, born Dec. 12, 1844 in Wayne Co., N.Y.

ii. Mary Jane Bottum, born 1850 in Barry Co., Mich. - died 1852.

De LAFAYETTE BOTTUM OF WAYNE COUNTY, NEW YORK

125. LaFayette[5] Bottum (Jarius[4], Asa[3], David[2], Daniel[1]), born June 12, 1824 in Oneida Co., N.Y. - died July 30, 1878 at Butler, Wayne Co., N.Y., son Of Jarius [#115] and Sarah (Decker) Bottum; married on Feb. 14, 1846 at Hickory Creek, Van Buren, Cayuga Co., N.Y.

Alvina Armstrong, born Apr. 25, 1824 at Camillus, N.Y. - died at Wolcott, N.Y. and is buried at Westbury, N.Y., the daughter of Daniel (1793-1852) and Jemima (Selback, 1793-1850) Armstrong. In 1949 LaFayette started west with his family and his wife's parents. He settled in LaPort County, Ind., remaining there only a few years. A daughter was born in their log cabin in this place. They were caught in a prairie fire and he saved his cabin by plowing around it. Tragedy struck when a child caught fire from a fireplace and was burned to death. In 1852 the family returned to Van Buren, via the new bridge over Niagara Falls, to more civilized living and good schools. At the time of his death he had only one living child. Alvina Bottum, Edward W. Bottum and Thaddeus W. Collins were named on the administrators' bond. LaFayette and Alvina Bottum had 6 children:

i. Fayette, died Dec. 22, 1846.
ii. Sarah D., born 1848 - died 1858.
iii. A child who burned to death in Indiana.
iv. Electa Jane Bottum, born Mar. 2, 1851; married Charles Emmett Lytle (below).

CHAPTER XXVI

SIXTH GENERATION, DESCENDANTS OF DAVID[2] LONGBOTTOM.

BENAJAH JAMES BOTTUM

136. Benajah James[6] Bottum (William James[5], Jarius[4], Asa[3], David[2], Daniel[1]), born Dec. 12, 1844 at Wayne Co., N.Y. - died Mar. 19, 1918 at Olivet, Mich., son of William James [#124] and Matilda Esther (Dowd) Bottum; married on May 13, 1868 at Irving, Mich.

(1) Effie E. Ingram, born in 1850 at Irving, Mich. - died in 1921 at Hastings, Mich, daughter of Orrin C. and Lydia A. Ingram. (Ingram, below) The marriage ended in divorce. He married again

(2) Dora Mann, and Effie married (2) Frank Beamer. The 1885 Michigan Census for Barry County shows Benajah's son, Edward Frederick Bottum in the home of Frank Beamer. Benajah James Bottum came to Barry County at the age of four in 1848 with his parents. He was a member of the Barry County Pioneer Association. He and Effie Ingram were married by the Rev. A.P. Moons and the witnesses were William C. Messer of Carlton, Michigan and Melissa J. Bierce of Irving. At the time of his marriage he was employed as a druggist. The 1870 U.S. Census found them residing in the Village of Hastings and his business was making window shades. Perhaps he was employed by Wm. H. Dicken and Wallace J. Bentley who, according to the census, "made doors, sash, blinds, window and door frames, moulding and custom work". In the '90s he was in the rustic chair business and in December of 1892 he was receiving mail at Lincoln, Nebraska, according to a note from the postmaster there to Calvin H. Bottum of Rochester, N.Y., who was interested in tracing members of the family at that time. His death certificate states that he was a painter at the time of his death. His grandson, Curtis E. Bottum of Ann Arbor, Michigan remembers him as "an easy-going, kindly fellow, but he was not too industrious or a very good business man. I think he was a better fisherman! My grandmother was a little red-headed girl and quite industrious." They had 1 child:

143 i. Edward Frederick Bottum, born Oct. 30, 1869.

INGRAM

This story of the Ingram family is told by Curtis Edward Bottum [#153], written in March of 1962 after he had visited the cemetery at Irving, Michigan, where several generations of his Ingram family are buried.

My grandmother on my father's side was named Effie Ingram. She was born in 1860 and died in 1921. Of course, I remember her very well. Her brother was Frederick F. Ingram. He was younger than my grandmother and became a druggist and was a manufacturer. He was president of the F.F. Ingram Company, drug manufacturers of Detroit, in his adult years.

My grandmother's father was Orrin C. Ingram. He died in 1885 when he was 60 years old. My grandmother's mother was Lydia A. Ingram who died in 1870 at the age of 43. Orrin Ingram's father, who would be my great-great grandfather, was Frederick Ingram who died in 1848. He was a soldier of the Mexican War. This Frederick Ingram's father, who would be my great-great-great grandfather, was named Amos Ingram and he was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and died in 1838 at the age of 81 years. He died at Irving and is buried in the Irving cemetery. By this information we can trace our history back to the Revolutionary War on the Ingram side of the family, if any of the gals should want to join the Daughters of the American Revolution. This information is all on the tombstones at Irving and, of course, I have heard it before.

I am not sure whether it was my grandmother's father, Orrin Ingram, or her grandfather, Frederick Ingram, who first came out to Michigan. I believe it was her grandfather. He was a contractor who hauled logs from the northwest territory to New York. This story is related in a memorandum my great uncle wrote before he died. Anyway, the reason that the Ingrams came to Michigan was because either Orrin or Fred Ingram lost a raft of these logs over Niagara Falls and had to stand good for them. The owner of the logs in New York took everything he had in payment for the logs. Then he felt sorry for this fellow, Ingram, and told him he had some land in Michigan which he, the owner, had not seen but which was supposed to be swamp land and he, Ingram, could have it if he wanted to move on it and start over, and that he could use one of his former tugs to transport his family and furniture to the head of navigation closest to the new land, which turned out to be near Irving, Michigan. So he took his family and their belongings through the Great Lakes and up the Huron River as far as Ypsilanti. From there on, I suppose, they went by ox team to Irving. When they got there they found the land was high ground, not swamp, so they cleared a site and started living. This must have been Frederick Ingram, my grandmother's grandfather, because my grandmother's father had a large house or building called the Ingram Tavern, which was a stage coach stop on the road between Battle Creek and Grand Rapids, and I think that it would take more than half a generation to develop this status, and this is why I believe it was my grandmother's father who owned the tavern rather than her grandfather. I believe the story goes that Amos Ingram, soldier of '76, came out to visit or live with his son in his old age and died there in 1938. It seems that this would make all the dates fall into line.

I have heard my grandmother tell how she used to play with the Indian children in the field across from where the old Ingram Tavern stood when she was a little girl. She married Benajah Bottum and lived in Hastings. My grandmother and grandfather Bottum separated when my Dad was 7 years old and my grandmother afterwards married Frank G. Beamer and he is the grandfather that I really remember best, although my grandfather Bottum lived at our house for a year or so when I was a boy.

EDWARD STORRS BOTTUM

137. Edward Storrs[6] Bottum (Samuel A.[5], Joshua[4], Asa[3], David[2], Daniel[1]), born Oct. 7, 1847 at Florence, Mass. - died there on Aug. 18, 1925, the son of Samuel A. [#129] and Sarah (Storrs) Bottum; married on May 7, 1874

CHAPTER XXXIII

CHITTENDEN - SHARPE - FREHE - INGRAM - HOBSON - ROBINSON - BISHOP -

FLEMMING - LINSER - et al

1. William[1] Chittenden, born in March of 1594 in England, son of Robert Chittenden; married Joanna Sheaffe. They came to Guilford, Ct.

2. Thomas[2] Chittenden, born in England - died Oct. 1683 at Guilford; married Joanna Jordon, daughter of John and Anna (Bishop) Jordon.

3. William[3] Chittenden, born Oct. 5, 1666 at Guilford - died there Aug. 11, 1738; married Hannah _____.

4. Ebenezer[4] Chittenden, born Aug. 31, 1699 at Guilford - died there Aug. 8, 1756; married on Mar. 21, 1723 Mary Johnson.

5. Thomas[5] Chittenden, born Jan. 6, 1730 at East Guilford, Ct. - died Aug. 25, 1797 at Williston, Vt.; married Elizabeth Meigs, daughter of Janna and Elizabeth (Dudley) Meigs.

Thomas Chittenden was educated in the common schools of Guilford. When he was 18 he went on a sea voyage to the West Indies and was taken captive by a French man-of-war. He returned home penniless and cured of the sea. He was married the next year and in 1749 they moved to Salisbury, Ct. where they lived for 24 years. A first settler, he became a leading citizen - colonel in the militia, justice of the peace, and a representative to the Connecticut Legislature from 1765 to 1769 and again in 1772. He first saw northern Vermont in 1764 while on a military expedition. Soon after this he and his sons became original grantees of Jericho and of several Vermont townships, from Gov. Wentworth of New Hampshire. According to the records he was a proprietor of 42 town properties. In May of 1774 he and a neighbor, John Spofford, moved their families to a large tract of land at Williston, Chittenden, Co., Vt. on the south side of the Onion River. There they built themselves shelter and established a good supply of food and necessities. When the American Army was forced to retreat from Canada in 1776, he and two neighbors went to Philadelphia to learn what defenses Congress planned for the northern frontier. Finding that there were none, he moved his whole family back to Pownal. They all walked, along a route of marked trees, with their clothes and provisions on 2 horses. They reached Williamstown at the time of the Battle of Bennington. Thomas Chittenden was president of the Council of Safety which met in perpetual session at Bennington, and he was also a member of the convention at Dorset in 1776 which declared Vermont an independent state. The following year he was a delegate to the convention in Windsor which drew up Vermont's first constitution. After the capture of Burgoyne he bought the Arlington farm of Jehiel [#4, Chapter VIII] Hawley. In 1778 he was elected Governor of Vermont and was reelected each year but one (1790 when Moses Robinson was elected) until he retired the year of his death. In 1787 he and his wife had returned to Williston.

Thomas Chittenden was noted for his sagacity, benevolence and discretion. He was successful in peaceably disposing of the estates of Tories and he aided wives and families of Loyalists in reaching Canada safely. He was responsible for the "quieting act" which secured the settlers in their possessions at a time when Vermont was in reality at war with New Hampshire, New York and Massachusetts as well as England. Historians have noted the parallel of his life to that of George Washington, not only as to the time and length of office but also in the similarity of their traits of character and leadership and in the influence of each man on his area of government at its formation. He was president of the convention at Bennington which resulted in Vermont becoming the 14th state of the Union on March 4, 1791. Thomas and Elizabeth Chittenden had 4 sons and 6 daughters:

i. Mabel Chittenden, born July 10, 1750; married Thomas Barney.

ii. Noah[6] Chittenden, born Oct. 26, 1753; died 1835; married Sally Fasset. He owned 2000 acres across the Onion River from his father's land. He was sheriff of Addison and Chittenden counties, judge, state representative, director of the Vermont State bank and a member of the Congregational Church. Children:

a. Thomas[7], born 1791, a judge in Ohio. He had a son, Thomas Jefferson Chittenden.

b. Hannah, born 1795; married

GALUSHA Truman Galusha [#15, Chapter XXXIV]

LYON (2) Col. Matthew Lyon who came from Ireland at age 14, was hired man and clerk to Governor Chittenden in Arlington and became a nationally known figure, a leader in the state, and a member of Congress during the administration of President John Adams. He became famous for his fight against the alien and sedition laws. There is a stone in the Arlington Cemetery with the inscription, "Mrs. Mary L. Lyon, the amiable consort of Col. Matthew Lyon who died Apr the 29th AD 1784 aged 39 yrs & 6 mos."

vii. Martin[6] Chittenden, born Mar. 12, 1763 - died in 1840; married Anna Bentley. He owned a large farm near his brother Noah's. A Dartmouth graduate and a Whig, he was judge, member of Congress and Governor of Vermont.

viii. Truman[6] Chittenden, born Aug. 3, 1770 - died Sep. 5, 1840; m. Lucy Jones. His farm adjoined his father's. He was justice of peace and judge of the Probate Court.

CHAPTER XXXIV

GALUSHA FAMILIES OF VERMONT AND NEW YORK STATE

The information on the Galusha families has come, for the most part, from the family records and research of several different people. This history is limited to the descendants of Jacob[4] Galusha, son of Daniel, as these are the people whose ancestors came to Vermont from Connecticut about the time of the Revolutionary War, some of them later going into New York State, and who fit into our story more closely than do the Massachusetts families. This is a more comprehensive study than that given to the other allied families as there seems to be no published genealogy of the Galusha family. Grateful acknowledgment is made to the following people for their contributions: George M. Easter of Roosevelt, New York; Mrs. James A. Lacy of Ithaca, New York; Mrs. James I. Galusha of Rochester, New York; A. Ranney Galusha of Shaftsbury, Vermont; Mrs. Howard E. Galusha of Riverside, California; and Mrs. Lois Hoff Smith.

The Galusha, Chittenden, Huntington and Bottum families of Vermont were closely related. Lydia, daughter of Matthew Huntington [#4, Chapter XXXV] was the first of Jacob Galusha'a four wives. He moved, with their five sons, from Norwich, Connecticut to Shaftsbury, Vermont in 1775 after the death of Lydia. The oldest son, David, represented Shaftsbury in the state legislature in 1779; Jacob was the Shaftsbury representive for ten years, 1801 - 1811, and was also town clerk for forty-one years; Jonas became fifth governor of Vermont; Amos Galusha fought in the Revolution and was a supporter of Jefferson and Madison through his newspaper articles; and Elijah, the youngest son, married a daughter of Governor Thomas Chittenden. Jonas and David were leaders of the Green Mountain Boys under Ethan Allen from Litchfield, Connecticut, the unofficial military group that successfully fended off New York's claims to Vermont lands. Governor Jonas Galusha had two daughters who married Huntingtons. Clarissa married Daniel Huntington [#5-v, Chapter XXXV], son of the first Amos. He was a doctor in Shaftsbury for forty years, later moving with his family to Perry, New York. Aurelia Galusha married Daniel's brother, Elias Huntington [#5-iv], a prosperous farmer in Shaftsbury, most of whose nine children moved westward. Abigail, the youngest daughter, married into the next generation. Her husband was George Huntington [#7-iv, Chapter XXXV], brother of Peace, wife of Nathan H. Bottum. He moved to Rochester in later years, after his wife's death, and his seven children all moved away from Shaftsbury also.

Jonas' son, Elon Galusha [#16], the famous Baptist preacher, married Betsey Bottum, sister of Nathan H. [#14] Bottum and his son, Truman [#15] Galusha married Lydia Loomis, daughter of Russell and Lydia (Huntington) Loomis and granddaughter of the first Amos Huntington who came from Norwich. Truman was grandson of Amos' sister, Lydia (Huntington) Galusha.

In the next generation Rollin Galusha [#25], grandson of Jonas, whose father had moved to Jericho, Vermont, married Julia Ann Bottum, daughter of Nathan H. and Peace Bottum. His brother, Truman Chittenden Galusha [#24], was the father of Albert Loomis Galusha [#34] whose son, Albert Leet Galusha [#43] was an inventor. Upon his retirement his son, A. Ranney Galusha [#46], purchased the ancestral home of Governor Jonas Galusha and is living there. [Chapter X]

Obituary of Albert Leet Galusha and other family records.

It is thought that the first Galusha in America was a Huguenot refugee who came about 1660 from the Isle of Jersey, possibly by way of Wales, and settled near Plymouth. One authority thinks that the family came from Holland as they were known as "Dutchmen" in Dunstable. They probably were Huguenots and the route they took is not too important.

1. Jacob[1] Galusha, b. ca. 1622, settled near Plymouth, Mass. With him, when he came to America, was an 8 year old son:

2. Daniel[2] Galusha, b. (prob.) 1652 - d. ca. 1706 ; m.
Oct. 10, 1676 at Chelmsford, Mass.
Hannah Gould, b. July 18, 1655 at Braintree, daughter of Francis Gould. A soldier in King Philip's War, in 1676 he was stationed at the garrison at Springfield, Mass.,where he was paid by the town of Reading, and at the Westfield Garrison, where he was paid by the town of Braintree. With him at the Westfield garrison was John Lamb [Chapter XXXVI, #2], father of Elizabeth who married Daniel[1] Longbottom. Daniel Galusha moved to Dunstable, Mass. about 1696. His home there was a garrison. On July 3, 1706 it was attacked and burned and his daughter Rachel slain. Daniel surrendered and it is thought that he may have been taken to Montreal and died a prisoner there that fall. Daniel and Hannah (Gould) Galusha had 8 children, all born in Chelmsford:

i. Hannah, b. Sep. 10/12, 1677; m. (prob.) Joseph Haskell.
3 ii. Jacob[3] Galusha, b. June 24, 1680; m. Sarah Reed.
iii. Rachel, b. Sep. 13, 1683 - d. July 3, 1706.

9. Jonas[5] Galusha (Jacob[4], Daniel[3,2], Jacob[1]), b. Feb. 11, 1753 at Norwich - d. Sep. 25, 1834 at Shaftsbury, Vt., son of Jacob and Lydia (Huntington) Galusha. Jonas was married 4 times. He m. Oct. 1778
(1) Mary Chittenden, b. 1757/8 - d. Apr. 20, 1794, the daughter of Thomas [Chapter XXXIII, #5] and Elizabeth (Meigs) Chittenden. They had 8 children, all born at Shaftsbury. He married again
(2) Martha "Patty" Sammons, b. 1764 - d. Nov. 10, 1797. They had no children. He married on June 3, 1808
(3) Abigail Ward, b. 1770 - d. May 6, 1809, a month after the birth of her only child. He married in 1818
(4) Abigail "Nabby" Atwater of Cavandish, Vt., b. Apr. 2, 1764 - d. July 30, 1831, the daughter of Reuben Atwater and widow of Elnathan Beach. He announced this marriage thus:

> "In Cavandish Feb. 24, 1818 Jonas Galusha and Mrs. Nabby Beach, a lady of unblemished reputation, and possessing in an eminent degree, those amiable female virtues whose price is far above rubies."

Thanks to the writings of the Rev. Pliny H. White, Vermont historian and biographer, his descendants are able to get an intimate picture of of Jonas Galusha and his family. Jonas and his brothers received their education from the common schools of their day and, though they had no further formal education, "their strength of mind and energy of character" soon made them leading men in the town and in the state. Soon after coming to Shaftsbury, at age 22, Jonas set up a shop for making nails. He also operated a farm for his older brother David. He later acquired a farm of his own and he remained a farmer all of his life, except when he was holding public office. He continually improved his education by "reading, observation, and reflection". In the fall of 1775 he served in Canada in Col. Seth Warner's regiment of Green Mountain Boys, under the command of his brother David. After the capture of Capt. Amos Huntington at the Battle of Hubbarton, he was made captain of both Shaftsbury companies. He continued in service through the Battle of Bennington and was at the surrender of Burgoyne.

After the war, he was sheriff for six years, resigning in 1787. In 1792 he was elected a member of the second council of censors which was concerned with changes in the state constitution. The next year he was elected a member of the Governor's Council which office he held for 6 years. Simultaneously he served as assistant judge of Bennington County Court, 1795-1798. In 1800 he was again elected judge, remaining in office for 7 years and, in 1807 and 1808, he was elected to the Vermont Supreme Court, serving with the famous Royal Tyler. The following year he was chosen an Elector of President and Vice President of the United States. He gave the vote of Vermont to James Madison. He held this honor 3 more times, voting for James Monroe in 1821 and for John Quincy Adams in 1825 and in 1829. He became the 4th Governor of Vermont, serving 9 terms in all, 1809-1812 and 1815-1820. His support of Madison during the War of 1812 had proved unpopular and he lost in 1814 in the election for governor to his brother-in-law Martin Chittenden, who ran on the Whig ticket and won by 1 vote in the Joint Assembly balloting, 1 member having been persuaded to be absent that day! A delegate from Shaftsbury, Jonas Galusha was selected as president of the Constitutional Conventions of 1814 and again in 1822. He retired happily to private life and enjoyed a serene and honored old age.

Though an active man, Jonas was rather stout. He was short and fair with blue eyes. He was mindful of the requirements of society and a sense of humor and an ability to get along with people made him sought after. His home life was harmonious and his children respected members of their communities. Though not a member of a particular denomination, he participated in religious activities, such as the Vermont Bible Society, and led a Christian life. The children of Jonas Galusha who grew to adulthood:

i. Clarissa, b. Sep. 9, 1779 - d. May 26, 1823; m. before 1814 Dr. Daniel[6] [Chap. XXXV, #6-v] Huntington of Shaftsbury.

Almira Cole, b. Feb. 18, 1797 - d. June 14, 1893, daughter of Peleg Cole (also ancestor of Isabel Cole, Shaftsbury genealogist and historian). About 1836 he bought land in Gorham, across the river from Rochester, which is now a part of the city. He played an active role in the development of Rochester and foresaw it as an industrial city of the future.
ix. Sophia, b. 1793 - d. 1794.
x. Abigail, b. Apr. 15, 1809 - d. Apr. 1, 1864 at Shaftsbury, daughter of Jonas and his 3rd wife Abigail; m. Mar. 8, 1832
Deacon George Huntington [Chapter XXXV, #7-iv]. After her father's death they bought the Governor Galusha home and farm [Chapter X]. In 1864 it was sold to the Harrington family from whom A. Ranney Galusha purchased it in 1968. Some of the original furniture remains in the house, some belongs to descendants of Abigail in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and some is in the Bennington Museum and in the Vermont State Museum.

16. Elon[6] Galusha (Jonas[5], Jacob[4], Daniel[3,2], Jacob[1]), born June 18, 1790 at Shaftsbury, Vt. - d. Jan. 6, 1856 at Lockport, N.Y., the son of Jonas [#9] and Mary (Chittenden) Galusha; married on Aug. 25, 1815 at Shaftsbury, Vt.
Elizabeth "Betsy" Bottum, born Feb. 13, 1796 at Shaftsbury - died after 1856 at (prob.) Whitesboro, N.Y. They had 3 sons.

In 1811 Elon Galusha became a member of the Shaftsbury Baptist Church during a great religious revival in the community under its pastor, Caleb Blood. At this time he was studying law with the Hon. Richard Skinner. Becoming satisfied that his real vocation was the ministry, the next year he became the pastor of the newly formed church in nearby West Arlington. He also preached regularly in the Shaftsbury Church while their pastor was absent on extended missionary tours. At this time his father, Gov. Jonas Galusha, was a delegate from Vermont to a Baptist meeting in Philadelphia which organized the first American foreign missionary society, its particular purpose being to provide funds for the first American foreign missionaries, Adoniram Judson and Luther Rice, who were already in Burma. Elon's older brother, Truman Galusha, also became a licentate (unordained minister). Elon was ordained in 1815 in his home church, and the same year he was married.

His first pastorate was in Whitesboro, N.Y. near Utica, where he remained for 15 years. During this time 390 members were added and a new edifice was built. Five young men went out to preach from his congregation, two of whom, Eugene Kincaid and Miles Bronson, going to Burma, inspired by Adoniram Judson's example. In 1820 he was the leader in forming the Oneida Association of Baptist Churches in the Utica area. Because of differences over his strong anti-slavery, anti-Freemasonry, and pro-temperance views he left the Whitesboro church in 1832 and went to the Broad Street Baptist Church in Utica, and later to churches in Rochester, Perry, and Lockport, N.Y., where they lived until his death.

Much of his life was spent in traveling, since he was a very successful fund raiser and was an agent for several local and national institutions. He was one of the most active founders of Hamilton Theological Seminary, now Colgate University at Hamilton, N.Y., and he also worked in behalf of Columbian College in the District of Columbia, now George Washington University. He spent several months in England in behalf of his philanthropic interests, before settling in Lockport in 1841. In 1822, while still in Whitesboro, he had been sent by the N.Y. State Baptist Missionary Convention, of which he was later president, to help organize many new churches, notably the Baptist Church of Christ in Buffalo, N.Y., then a village, and the first Baptist Church in Pontiac, Michigan.

He was president of the American Baptist Anti-Slavery Convention which met in New York City in 1840. As a consequence, the following year in Baltimore, Maryland he was ousted from his office as vice president of the National American Baptist Triennial Convention. He is credited with starting the matter of the separation of the northern and southern Baptists by maintaining that it was not right or wise that foreign missions should be supported by the contributions of slave holders. In the year that he became the pastor of the church in Lockport, N.Y., he further alienated himself from the hierarchy of the Baptist Church by accepting the doctrine of William Miller who lectured up and down the land in 1841 to 1844 on the imminent second coming of Christ. In reference to this, the Lockport Baptist Church history reads, "The year 1843 was the most fatal in our history. It brought a terrible calamity, the cause of which was Millerism. . . . the church was rent in twain. Mr. Galusha, followed by about one third of the members, established services in another place." The record also mentions that newspapers of the time spoke of the loss of a beloved pastor.

On June 4, 1844, upon his return from a visit to some of his Michigan property, Nathan H. [#14] Bottum, brother of Betsy (Bottum) Galusha, wrote their sister Caroline, wife of Seneca S. Spencer of Delta, Oneida Co., N.Y.

> "Mr. and Mrs. Galusha were not in Lockport when I went west, but I saw them in Rochester upon my return. They arrived there the same day that I did. Came with their own team and he went on in the cars the next day to Boston, whilst Betsey remained in Rochester. Their son, Judson, was in Buffalo in employment, and son Elon had just arrived in Rochester to be engaged, probably, as he had been the past winter, in superintending the _____ of the books & publications of the Second-Advent people of Rochester. They are all, undoubtedly, sincere in their views, but their friends generally suppose them to be in error."

It would seem that Elon Galusha was driven all of his life by a hounding conscience and an unrelenting and, perhaps, stubborn dedication to religious principles as he saw them. Letters from Betsy Galusha and also from her son Elijah reveal their concern for his health and their personal unhappiness with his strenuous activity in behalf of those causes which enveloped his whole life. His family bore, with him, the burdon of his conscience. On October 31, 1853, in a long letter to her brother Nathan, Betsy wrote,

> "We had a very pleasant journey and visit to New York, except that I was going to leave Mr. Galusha behind. . . . Mr. Galusha writes he had a very pleasant meeting in N.Y., was in Stonington Ct. when he wrote last - had had very good services in New Haven - his health was improving - was going to New London where I last wrote him. I can hardly be reconciled to his absence but am sensible he is better away from the farm and all its cares. I anticipate much pleasure in reading the book you gave us. I have just finished "Shady Side" which was lent to me which I think a true picture, and I feel that I am in a shady place at present."

The Baptist Encyclopedia describes him as "the most unselfish and devout of Christians", "a father and a leader of Israel whose memory has a blessed fragrance", "possessed of a rich imagination, of glowing enthusiasm and . . . of pure eloquence. Few men could carry a large congregation with such overwhelming power as Mr. Galusha."

A few family letters reveal most of the little which is known about the family of the Rev. Elon Galusha. In 1853 Judson was (working?) "in a store house" in Lower Town, Lockport, but coming home at night as his father was away on one of his extended trips. Elijah B. Galusha went to California in 1849 and returned in 1851, perhaps in poor health as two years later he was taking baths and undergoing treatment at some spa - possibly Saratoga Springs, N.Y. - and his appetite and health were improving. Of historical interest is a portion of a letter, dated Utica, Dec. 6, 1832, written by Elijah, then perhaps 16 years old, to his Aunt Caroline Bottum at Shaftsbury, Vt.

"On my return I was detained at Bennington Tuesday night (being the first after I left Shaftsbury) as the eastern stage had gone before we arrived there, and I was obliged to remain until eight o'clock the next morning. We reached Troy about four o'clock Wednesday afternoon. I remained there until one o'clock Thursday when I set sail in the stage for Albany (there being no steamboat going to that place) where I arrived about four and with some little trouble came to the railroad, at sight of which my anticipations were realized. I soon found myself seated in one of the cars and moving at a very rapid rate. I reached Schenectady in a short time and there stepped into the packet boat "Mohawk", Captain Bacon of Utica, where I was, with the rest of the cargo, safely landed on the evening of Friday."

The children of Elon and Betsy (Bottum) Galusha:

i. Elijah B.[7], born at Whitesboro, N.Y. ca. 1816.

26 ii. Elon Chittenden[7], born June 5, 1820.

iii. Judson[7], born at Whitesboro. No doubt named for his father's friend, Adoniram Judson, first missionary to Burma.

The research and the story on Elon Galusha was done by R.B. Lacy.

Julia Jessup, b. Mar. 24, 1820. In her 1853 letter to her brother, Nathan H. Bottum, Betsy Galusha wrote of this family.

> "Clarissa and I came directly to Lockport while the rest stopped a day in Rome. When I reached home I found Elon and Julia had been packed up about a week and staying at our house. Elon left the same day and Julia about a week later for Rochester and from thence to St. Louis where they seem very well pleased. Julia wrote me her neighbors sent her in all the fruit she wanted to preserve and more than she could use. Little Charley seems to be getting quite well living almost wholly upon gingerbread. When I came home he would eat nothing at all but drink his milk. I baked some plain gingerbread one day of which he seemed fond. I told her I would give it to him as he would eat nothing else. She says she has to bake it every other day. Excuse so much baby talk as you know the health of the grandchildren is a very important thing with us & he is now growing fat."

46. Albert Ranney[10] Galusha, b. June 10, 1907 at Boston, Mass., son of Albert Leet [#43] and Isabel Mary (Cockran) Galusha; m. on Feb. 13, 1933 at Arlington, New Jersey
Marjorie Randall Hewitt, b. Feb. 10, 1911 at Rockville, Ct., the daughter of Thomas Edward and Cora May (Nichols) Hewitt. A. Ranney Galusha, graduated from Cornell University in 1928 in mechanical engineering, was a plant extension engineer for New Jersey Bell Telephone Company in Newark, New Jersey. Upon his retirement in 1968 he moved his family to the ancestral home and farm of his g.g.g. grandfather, Governor Jonas Galusha, who had built it in 1783 in Shaftsbury, Vermont. He had purchased this beautiful old structure [Chap. X] from the Harrington family, the only owners besides the Galusha family in almost 200 years.

The owner having died intestate, the house had to be sold in order to divide the estate. Offers to purchase were not lacking, one having been made by a benefactor of the Shelburne Museum who wished to preserve its historic beauty, but Albert Ranney Galusha was given first opportunity and, now, he and his family have a challenging project in restoration which will add adventure to their lives for some time to come. The house is a gem of early American architecture. Designed by the famous Colonial architect, Lavius Fillmore, it has a Palladian or Trinity window on the second floor above the front entrance. The fireplace mantles are hand-carved and have facings of marble with fire backs of soapstone. The floors are pine, the doors and woodwork hewn by hand and the handles were forged by the governor, himself. Modern conveniences have been unobtrusively added but the water supply still comes from the same mountain spring which quenched the thirst of the governor and his family. In 1968 Ranney Galusha had purchased the historic Shaftsbury Baptist Church property nearby [Chap. VII], which he turned over to the Shaftsbury Historical Society, of which he was president, for preservation and use as a community center and museum. Ranney and Marjorie Galusha have 7 children:

i. Richard Hewitt[11] Galusha, b. Feb. 28, 1935; m. on Nov. 7, 1964 Janet May Harding, at Haledon, N.J. "Dick" studied at the U. of Vermont and Fairleigh Dickinson University. After 4 years in the Navy as an electronic technician he went into similar work at a local instrument manufacturing company. Janet is a graduate of Trenton College where she was Auberta Galusha's room-mate. Their home is at 83 Beverly Road, Fairfield, N.J. They have 2 children:
   a. Dawn Huntington Galusha, b. May 11, 1968.
   b. Linda Ruth Galusha, b. Jan. 27, 1970.

ii. Gwendolyn Ann Galusha, b. June 16, 1936; m. on June 5, 1958 STROVINK Kurt Anthony Strovink. Gwendolyn studied at Allegheny College and has a BS degree in sociology from Penn State University. She taught school in the primary grades and is a case worker with the City of Hampden, Va. She has done graduate work at William and Mary College. Their home is at 619 Redheart Dr., Hampden. They have 2 children:
   a. Mark Anthony Strovink, b. Jan. 26, 1959.
   b. Jeanette Jean Strovink, b. Mar. 3, 1960.

iii. Louise May Galusha, b. May 16, 1938; m. WELSCH George Welsch, Jr. Louise studied at Penn State, Springfield, Rutgers, and has her BA degree in physical education from Douglass College. She taught school at Bound Brook and Somerville, New Jersey. George is a graduate of Newark College of Engineering and is a research engineer at Johns-Manville Corporation. Their address is North Lakeside Drive West, Oakland Lakes, Medford, New Jersey. They have 3 children:
   a. Russell Paul Welsch, b. Nov. 7, 1965 at Summit, N.J.
   b. Valerie Ann Welsch, b. Dec. 8, 1966 at Summit, N.J.
   c. Theresa May Welsch, b. Feb. 7, 1968 at Summit, N.J.

iv. Auberta Jean Galusha, b. Sep. 7, 1941, is a missionary with the Board of Missions of the United Methodist Church. After graduation from Trenton College she taught in the elementary grades in Wayne, N.J. She was active in Girl Scout and Youth-of-All-Nations work. She spent a summer in Bolivia and toured South America with a Methodist Mission workshop. She has taken

CHAPTER XXXV

THE HUNTINGTON FAMILIES OF VERMONT

Members of the Huntington family have been leaders in state and nation, colony and town, since the arrival of the first of the name in America. They were early settlers, sometimes original proprietors, of towns; holders of both high and low office in government; statesmen; founders of industry and trade; a signer of the Declaration of Independence; patriots during the Revolutionary War and high ranking officers and able soldiers; representatives of the professions; and supporters of education, culture and religion. As the Huntington Family, published by the Huntington Family Association in 1915, and its 1962 Supplement are comprehensive genealogies, the purpose of this chapter is to briefly outline the lineage of the Vermont Huntingtons and to point out their marriage connections with the Bottums and related families.

Nathan and Amos Huntington, two brothers from Norwich, Connecticut, were early settlers in Vermont and, as with the Andrus, Chittenden, Clark, Galusha and Ranney families, their descendants married into the Bottum family for several generations.

1. Simon[1] Huntington, b. in 1583 in England - d. in 1633 on board a ship bound for America. His brother was a captain of the King's Guard, but he was a persecuted Puritan. He married in England in 1623

Margaret Baret (Barrett), daughter of Christopher[A] (William[B], William[C], John[D]) Baret, mayor of Norwich, England. She settled in Roxbury, Mass. with their four children, and she later remarried. A son of Simon and Margaret Huntington was

2. Christopher[2] Huntington, b. in 1624 in Norwich, England - d. in 1691 in Norwich, Ct.; m.
Ruth Rockwell, daughter of William and Susannah (Capen) Rockwell. He moved from Roxbury to Windsor, then to Saybrook, Mass. and, in 1659/60, to Norwich, Ct. where he was one of the first officers of the settlement. He was selectman for the east side and Hugh Calkins was selectman for the west side. He was the first town clerk and recorder, an office that he held all of his life and which was handed down to his son and to his grandson, Isaac, who held it for 60 years, and subsequently to direct descendants for 150 years in all, until the records went to the Chelsea subdivision of Norwich! Christopher and Ruth Huntington had 9 children: Their son,

3. Christopher[3] Huntington, b. Nov. 1, 1660 - d. Apr. 24, 1735, the first white child to be born in Norwich, Ct.; m. there, on May 26, 1681, his 1st wife

Sarah Adgate, b. Jan. 1663/4 - d. Feb. 1705/6, daughter of Deacon Thomas Adgate and his 2nd wife, Mary, widow of Richard Bushnell and daughter of Matthew and Elizabeth Marvin of Hartford, Ct. He was town clerk, deacon, town surveyor, deputy to the General Court, justice of the peace, and extensive land owner. His home still stands in Norwich. He and Sarah had 8 children. By his 2nd wife, Mrs. Judith (Stevens) Brewster, he had 4 more. His 5th child,

4. Matthew[4] Huntington, b. Apr. 16, 1694 at Norwich; m. there on May 17, 1726 as his 3rd wife Lydia Leonard, b. Sep. 22, 1707, daughter of Samuel[3] (Samuel[2], Solomon[1]) and Lydia (Cooke) Leonard. She was the daughter of Richard Cooke of Stonington, Ct. They lived and died in Preston, Ct. They had 5 children, 4 of whom (or their families) settled in Shaftsbury, Vt. in its early days:

i. Lydia Huntington married Jacob Galusha. [Chap. XXXIV, #6] 5 ii. Nathan[5] Huntington married Amy Brown. [Chapter IX, #9]
iii. Amy Huntington married Jeremiah Clark. [Chapter XXXII]
iv. Sarah Huntington married Amariah Branch.
6 v. Amos[5] Huntington married Peace Clark. [Chap. XXXII]

5. Nathan[5] Huntington, b. Oct. 30, 1730 at Preston, Ct. - d. Nov. 14, 1794 at Shaftsbury, Vt.; m. in 1756 at Preston Amy Brown, b. there on Oct. 4, 1732 - d. Mar. 8, 1796 at Shaftsbury, daughter of John and Amie (Fellows) Brown. [Chap. IX, #9] He owned and lived on a farm on the east side of the Quinebaug about 9 miles north of Norwich. They moved to Shaftsbury in 1779. Nathan and Amy Huntington had 8 children, all born in Norwich. Those of interest to our story were the 4 youngest:

i. Eunice[6] Huntington, b. Feb. 12, 1769 - d. Nov. 1850; m. Timothy Stanley of Greensboro, Vt. All of their 11 children predeceased her except her daughter Mary, Mrs. Asa H. Billings of Rochester, N.Y. "She was remarkable for her great mental capacity." She is mentioned in letters of Nathan H. Bottum as "Aunt Stanley."

ii. Elizabeth[6] Huntington, b. May 28, 1767 - d. in Mar. 1848 at Shaftsbury; m. at Norwich Simon[4] Bottum. [Chap. IX, #9] Elizabeth is 8th generation from the Mayflower passenger, James Chilton, so her descendants (found on pages 60-73, 81-94, 102-118, 121-126, 128-132, 259-261, 264-265, 267- 270, 271-27 , 302-312) are all eligible to membership in The Society of Mayflower Descendants through her lineage: Elizabeth (Huntington) Bottum, Nathan Huntington[7], Lydia (Leonard) Huntington[6], Samuel Leonard, Jr.[5], Samuel Leonard[4], Mary (Chandler) Leonard[3], Isabelle (Chilton) Chandler[2], James Chilton[1].

iii. John[6] Huntington, b. Oct. 8, 1763 - d. Jan. 22, 1840. He was a merchant at Middlebury, Vt. His daughter
a. Laura[7] Huntington (2nd cousin of Nathan H. and Caroline Bottum) married, as his 2nd wife William H. [#11, Chap. XI] Bottum of Kemptville, Ontario, Canada, son of Elijah [#8] and Ruth (Andrus) Bottum of Augusta, Upper Canada. [Chap. XXX, #4-vi]

iv. Henry[6] Huntington, b. Sep. 23, 1765 - d. 1846; m.

(1) Chloe Stanley.
(2) Peggy Brown, widow.
He had 6 daughters. Of them,
a. Chloe Huntington, b. Apr. 12, 1794 - d. Sep. 6, 1832; m. Jan. 1814 George Douglass, who d. Sep. 16, 1832. They had 7 children, of whom Simon[6] [#25] Bottum (Lemuel[5], Simon[4], Elijah[3], Daniel) [Chap. XXII].

6. Amos[5] Huntington, b. Sep. 4, 1739 at Norwich - d. 1822 at Shaftsbury; m. Feb. 4, 1767 at Norwich
Peace Clark, daughter of James and Thankful Clark and sister of Jeremiah. [Chap. XXXII] They moved to Shaftsbury in 1768 at the time that Elijah [#6] Bottum was moving his family there. Amos Huntington was captain of a Shaftsbury infantry company of Vermont militia and was at Ticonderoga and at Hubbardton on July 7, 1777 where he was taken prisoner by Burgoyne and confined to a ship at Quebec and later in New York harbor. He was paroled after 4 years and 10 months of service and exchanged for a British captain. He was a prosperous farmer, an active member of the Baptist Church and an honored citizen. Amos and Peace Huntington had 5 children:

7 i. Amos[6] Huntington, Jr., b. Aug. 21, 1768.
ii. Lydia[6] Huntington married

CHAPTER XXXVI

THE LAMB FAMILY

Thomas Lamb, the grandfather of Elizabeth who married Daniel [#1] Longbottom of Norwich in 1692, came from Sussex, England[1] (or "perhaps from Stowe, Langtoft Co., Suffolk"[2]) to Roxbury, Massachusetts in the ship Arabella of Governor Winthrop's fleet, landing at Salem on June 12, 1630. Sir Isaac Johnson and his wife Arabella, daughter of the Earl of Lincoln, who financed the ship's voyage, died within 2 years of their arrival due to the hardships of living in the new land. Isaac Johnson is called the "father of Boston". Another passenger in this fleet was Thomas Miner who settled in New London, Connecticut and later in nearby Stonington. His famous diary is a well-known source of information and an accepted authority about those times. It covers the years 1653-1684.

1. Thomas[1] Lamb, born in England - died Apr. 3, 1646[3]; married in England his first wife

(1) Elizabeth _____, who died in 1639 and was buried on Nov. 28th. They had 6 children. He married again on July 16, 1640 at Roxbury, Mass.

(2) Dorothy Harbittle. They had 5 children. According to the Roxbury Church records, Thomas Lamb brought his wife and his two oldest sons with him from England. He had been a merchant in London but there is no record what his occupation was in the new country. He was one of the founders of Roxbury, being admitted an inhabitant on Oct. 19, 1630 and made a freeman (a voter) on May 18, 1631. He owned 37 acres of land. He was one of 10 founders of the Roxbury Church and one of 6 persons to collect money for the Roxbury Latin School. His children by Elizabeth were:

i. Thomas[2] Lamb, born in England - died Dec. 2, 1652; married a Miss Stebbins. He was captain during King Phillip's War and was present at his capture. He settled in Framingham, Mass. and had children: Joshua, Abel, Joseph, Decline, Mary and Dorothy.

2 ii. John[2] Lamb, born 1625 in England.

iii. Samuel[2] Lamb, baptized at Dorchester, Mass. in October 1630.

iv. Abel[2] Lamb, born 1633 - died Oct. 16, 1649.

v. Decline Lamb, born April 1637; married in 1666 Stephen Smith.

vi. Benjamin, b. 1639 was buried with his mother on Nov. 28, 1639.

2 Winthrop Fleet of 1630, p. 78, Banks.
3 Idem, also Farmer's Register of N.E. Settlers, though Stradley, in Lamb-Merrill Family says "Jan. 28, 1646 of Calenture (high fever) and a mighty cold." Some records say 1645.

Thomas Lamb's children by wife Dorothy:

vii. Caleb, d.y. (This child must have been a son of the first marraige or b. Feb. 9, 1641 and Caleb (below) at a later date.)

viii. Caleb, born Feb. 9, 1641; married on June 30, 1669 Mary Wise.

ix. Joshua, born Sep. 29, 1642 - died Sep. 23, 1690; married (1) Mary Alcock. (2) Susanna Cary.

x. Mary Lamb, born Sep. 29, 1644; married William Swan.

xi. Abiel Lamb, born June 2, 1646. (It is strange that he would be named 'Abiel' when he had a living brother named 'Abel'!)

2. John[2] Lamb, born in England in 1625 - died at the age of 52 at New London, Connecticut and was buried there on Nov. 9, 1677. Thomas Miner, whose diary refers to his Lamb neighbors in Stonington 13 times, noted on Aug. 14, 1673 that he "made goodman Lam his will." John Lamb married, date and place unknown, Ann _____. Theodore P. Bottum's manuscript says that her last name was Powell, but there seems to be no record to verify this.

In 1654 John Lamb is recorded as possessing grants of land in Kittery, Maine and on July 7, 1666 he sold land there to Edward Stuart. In 1664 he bought land in that part of New London which later became Groton, having become an inhabitant there in 1663. He was on the rate list in 1664 and became a freeman in 1669. A deposition made the following year gives his age as 45. On Nov. 5, 1674 John Lamb, Sr. leased a mill from Major J. Winthrop at the head of the Mystic River (Stonington) and the document was witnessed by his wife Ann Lamb. On Oct. 5, 1683 Ann Lamb was appointed guardian of her children with James Avery, Jr. and John Morgan. John and Ann Lamb's children are named in Calkin's History of New London.

i. Thomas[3] Lamb married at Dorchester, Mass. in 1689 (a second or third marriage?). A deed, dated Nov. 26, 1695, confirmed 14 acres of land to Thomas, "eldest son of John Lamb, deceased" and on the same day Thomas assigned a part of the land to his brother Samuel. It is described as "now Pocatuck alias Southerton" bought in 1663. This is the modern Pawcatuck in the southeastern corner of Connecticut across the river from Westerly, Rhode Island. New London, Groton, Stonington, Pawcatuck, Westerly, and Norwich are all within a 20 mile area.

ii. John[3] Lamb of Braintree died at Stonington on Jan. 10, 1703/4, leaving a wife Lydia and 10 children. The 3 sons, John, Joseph and David, were born after leaving Braintree. Of the 7 daughters there was Margaret; Sarah, baptized at Braintree on June 18, 1696 and married to Nathaniel Larebie on Jan.18, 1714; and Abigail who married on Dec. 21, 1721 Peter Yarrington, a neighbor of her brother David.

iii. Goodman[3] Lamb was killed on Nov. 5, 1677 in an accident near New London.

LONGBOTTOM

iv. Elizabeth[3] Lamb, noted in her father's will as his 4th child, married on Feb. 15, 1692 Daniel [#1] Longbottom. [Chapter IV]

v. Ebenezer[3] Lamb, born about 1665/6; married May 6, 1690 at Norwich

Mary Armstrong. They had 4 children, possibly more:
a. Jonathan[4] Lamb, born Sep. 15, 1691.
b. Ebenezer, born July 21, 1694.
c. David.
d. Isaac.

vi. Samuel[4] Lamb, had a son Thomas who had a daughter Elizabeth in Salisbury, Connecticut.

vii. David[4] Lamb.

BOTTUM

Judith[3] Bottum, born May 6, 1729 at Norwich, Connecticut and baptized in the Newent Church on May 11, 1729, the daughter of Daniel [#2] and Mercy (Caswell) Longbottom; married on June 19, 1749/50 at Norwich David Lamb. He was, in all probability, the grandson of one of Elizabeth (Lamb) Longbottom's brothers. A David Lamb is named with James, son of Elizabeth, and Joseph Longbottom as 3 of the 20 men seriously injured when a large bridge under construction collapsed in 1728. This Joseph was not a son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Lamb) Longbottom but was perhaps a member of the Norwich Longbottum family in which the names of Thomas and Eleanor appear. [pp. 6,7] David and Judith (Bottum) Lamb had 4 children:

i. David, born Oct. 26, 1750.
ii. Lucretia, born Oct. 12, 1752.
iii. Sibel, born Jan. 20, 1755.
iv. Jesse, born July 14, 1757.

CHAPTER XXXVII

THE RANNEY FAMILY

Another family related to the Shaftsbury Bottums and the Vermont and New York Galushas was the one descended from Thomas Ranney who was granted a house lot in Middletown, Connecticut in 1658. Thomas[1] Ranney died at 97 in 1713 and was the first person buried in Middletown. His son Thomas[2] (1660-1726) and grandson Thomas[3] (1692-1764) also lived in Middletown. Our Ranneys are the descendants of two sons of Thomas[3] Ranney - Ephraim[4] and Jeremiah[4] Ranney.

Ephraim[4] Ranney, son of Thomas[3], was born at Middletown Upper Houses in 1725. On Nov. 26, 1747 at E. Middletown he married Silence Wilcox, daughter of Janna and Rachel (Boardman) Wilcox. Ephraim Ranney moved to a 60 acre farm at Haddam, Connecticut and, in 1761, to Westminster, Vermont where he bought lot #7 on the bank of the Connecticut River, kept a tavern, and was one of the 7 founders of the Westminster church and its first deacon. He was also justice of peace. In addition to being the mother of eleven, Silence was a "doctress of considerable reputation" who traveled on horseback with a stock of herbs. Ephraim accumulated great wealth for those days and was able to give each of his children a thousand dollars at marriage as well as "a large dividend at his death." Seven of his descendants in the next 2 generations were ministers or missionaries. There is a Ranney cemetery at Stockbridge, Vermont. There were 4 sons in Ephraim's family - Ephraim, Elijah, Daniel and Waitstill, all of whom fought in the Revolutionary War.

Waitstill[5] Ranney, born Jan. 3, 1762 - died July 5, 1839; married in 1785
Abigail Harlow of Westminster. They had 5 children including twin daughters, Abigail and Amaryela. They moved to Chester, Vermont where they lived on a 1000 acre farm 3 miles out of the village.

Waitstill Randolph[6] Ranney, born May 23, 1791 - died Aug. 23, 1853, son of Waitstill and Abigail (Harlow) Ranney, was born in Westminster and is buried in Townshend, Vermont where a tall marble shaft in the s.w. corner of the cemetery adjacent to the village bears the names of his 13 children, all of whom were living at the time of his death at the age of 62. He married on Jan. 16, 1811
Phoebe Atwood of Chester, Vermont, born Nov. 28, 1789 - died July 7, 1844, daughter of Jeremiah and Zilpha (Willard) Atwood. When Waitstill R. Ranney was 16 he attended Rev. Foster's high school in Charleston, New Hampshire where he covered 3 years work in one and was then admitted to Middlebury Academy at Middlebury, Vermont where he studied for 2 or more years, leaving for financial reasons. He taught school in Malone, New York. After his marriage he studied medicine at Dartmouth College and then moved with his family to a farm home a half mile north of the village of Townshend, Vermont where he began a practice which he was to love all of his life. Dr. Waitstill Ranney was a leader in the community and in state affairs and, for many years, he was a faithful Sunday School teacher. He was often called upon to lecture before literary, agricultural, and medical societies and he was an advocate of the anti-slavery and temperance movements. A member of the Whig party, he was sent to its convention to propose amendments to the U.S. Constitution. He served his state in the General Assembly - 3 years as state senator, 2 years as Lieutenant Governor and came within one vote of being elected a U.S. senator. He presided at the meeting on Stratton Mountain in 1840 when Daniel Webster made his impassioned plea to the thousands gathered there to "save the country from corruption and disunion." [p. 69]

Phoebe Ranney died at 55 of cancer when their youngest child was 12. Dr. Ranney married 2 years later

Mrs. Mary A. Cook of Brattleboro, who was loved and respected by his children. Two of the 13 children of Waitstill and Phoebe (Atwood) Ranney, Helen Louise and Frances, married the Bottum brothers of Shaftsbury, Norman [#23] and Nathan [#24], sons of Nathan H. and Peace (Huntington) Bottum. They lived across the road from each other . On 3 occasions - in 1846,1847 and on their father's 60th birthday, May 22, 1851 - all 13 and their families gathered at Townshend. Upon the last occasion, "rigs" were sent to meet the trains in Brattleboro and elsewhere. Sixty persons were lodged over night; 53 of his family were present, including 18 grandchildren; eighty in all were served dinner; and Norman and Helen Louise Bottum drove there by horse and buggy.

Dr. Waitstill Randolph Ranney

The children of Dr. Waitstill R. and Phoebe (Atwood) Ranney were:

i. Evander[7], born 1811, attended Middlebury College and was a doctor in New York City.

ii. Darwin, born 1812, was a teacher and a minister. He died in Brattleboro.

iii. Stella, born 1814, married Sharon Gray. She died in Townshend.

iv. Alfred, born 1816, maintained his father's farm until 1865 when he moved to "Ranney Manor" at Pawling, N.Y., and later to New York City where he held important positions in the city gov - ernment. He was responsible for the development of Central Park, among other things. He died while visiting a daughter in Colorado.

v. Henry, born 1817, was a doctor in New York City.

vi. Lafayette, born 1819, married on Feb. 25, 1846 Adaline Loomis, born Nov. 24, 1823 - died Jan. 5, 1865, daughter of Daniel and Eliza (Beech) Loomis. [Chap. IX] (Daniel was a cousin of Peace, wife of Nathan H.Bottum [#14]. After Eliza's death he married Nathan H. Bottum's sister, Caroline, and died shortly after.) Two of Lafayette's sisters married two sons of Nathan H. Bottum. Lafayette attended Dartmouth College and practiced medicine in New York City. While he was setting up his practice, Adaline and their child boarded with Peace and Nathan H. in Shaftsbury. This had been a part-time home for adaline and her sister and brother as Nathan H. had been their guardian after the death of their father. Lafayette was surgeon in chief to the N.Y. Police Force and a prominent member of the N.Y.C. Board of Education. They lived at 708 East 28th Street. Their son Ambrose Loomis[8] Ranney was also a doctor in N.Y.C. and each was prominent in his profession. Ambrose L. Ranney taught at several medical schools.

vii. Ambrose Arnold, born 1821, was graduated in 1844 from Dartmouth College with high honors. The following year he was principal of Chester Academy. He practiced law in Boston and served 3 terms in the Massachusetts State Legislature and in the 47th, 48th and 49th United States Congress. His son Fletcher was a doctor in New York City.

viii. Stephen, born 1822, was a doctor in N. Bennington, Vermont and was town superintendant of schools for many years. His son, William Watson Ranney was a well-known Congregational minister in Hartford, Connecticut and Denver, Colorado, and was the beloved chaplain at Dartmouth for many years.

ix. James, born 1824, taught school at Townshend at age 15 and attended Middlebury College and N.Y.C. School of Medicine. A doctor in N.Y.C., he lived at 17 E. 46th Street. He became a member of the Common Council one year after his arrival there and for 20 years was surgeon and attending physician to the 12 leading railroads. He was attending physician to the Commodore Vanderbilt and Russell Sage families and was city commissioner on lunacy. He brought 3 of 4 doctor brothers to New York, and also his nephew George Bottum, to practice medicine. He accumulated a fortune.

x. Helen Louise, born 1826, married Norman Bottum [#23] of Shaftsbury. She was a great-grandmother of Ruth Barrett Lacy [Chap. XXXI] and of Albert Ranney Galusha [Chap. XXXIV, #46].

xi. Frances, born 1828, married Nathan A. Bottum [#24] of Shaftsbury. She was the grandmother of Helen (Bottum) Sawyer of Burton, Washington.

xii. Martin Luther, born 1830, was a doctor in N.Y.C., as was his son Frederick. His daughter Maude Ranney married June 16, 1901 Carl Lotus Becker (1873-1945), eminent historian, author of many books and one of Cornell's greatest lights.

xiii. Mary Angeline, born 1832, was a teacher. She married a lawyer in N.Y.C.

Copies of both the Reminiscences and the Gallery are in the Library of Congress.

RANNEYS IN CENTRAL NEW YORK, DESCENDANTS OF EPHRAIM4 AND JEREMIAH4.

Two grandsons of Ephraim[4] and Silence (Wilcox) Ranney settled in Homer and nearby Summerhill in Cortland, N.Y. This area had been divided into military tracts as payment to soldiers and settlement began soon after 1779. The Ranney brothers, Elijah[6], born 1773, and Joseph[6], born 1779, moved there in the early 1800s, and many of their descendants are still there although others moved on westward.

Minnie[9] Ranney, born 1866 - died 1907, daughter of Clifford Ira[8] (Ira Patterson[7], Joseph[6], Elijah[5], Ephraim[4]) and Frances (Maltbie) Ranney, married

David [#37] Galusha, born 1851 - died 1930, son of Newton [#28] and Mary (Kenner) Galusha and grandson of Ezra [#19] Galusha, who settled in Cortland County. [Chap. XXXIV]

Elijah[6] Ranney, brother of Joseph, had 2 sons - Samuel[7], born 1792, and Alfred[7], born 1794 - whose families were leading citizens and founders of the Congregational Church. They became very prosperous through land investments in the West. A neighbor of theirs was Willard Fillmore who was to become president of the United States, 1850-1853. Samuel's son, Ebenezer Goodhue[8] Ranney, moved to a large farm near Homer where he was the founder of the Homer Bank in 1910, and where he built and endowed the Home for Aged Women. He was always called "Deacon" Ranney, and his protege (hired man and clerk), Homer Jones, was said to have been the prototype of the David Harum legends of the area.

Another well known New York Ranney was Thomas Stow Ranney who spent the last 24 years of his life in Homer. He was a missionary to Burma and had officiated at the burial at sea of his close friend and fellow missionary, Adoniram Judson. Thomas Stow[6] (Julius[5], Jeremiah[4], Thomas[3], Thomas[2&1]) Ranney was born in Connecticut but grew up in Danby, Tompkins County, New York where his father was minister of the West Danby Baptist Church in 1821. His grandfather Jeremiah was a brother of Ephraim[4] Ranney who went to Westminster, Vermont and was the ancestor of the Vermont Ranneys.

CHAPTER XXXVIII
CHESTER ACADEMY

An 1845 catalogue of Chester Academy names Ambrose Ranney as the principal, and the three younger members of the family, James Waitstill, Martin Luther and Mary Angeline, as students. Children of Shaftsbury families were among its pupils that year also - the cousins, Nathan and Horace Bottum and Julia and Alfred Loomis. The following year Adaline, older sister of Julia and Alfred, married Dr. Lafayette Ranney, brother of Ambrose Ranney. According to the catalogue, the institution was > " . . . pleasantly located on the South Street of Chester, a village sufficiently retired to be free from the evil inducements which exist in many places, yet so marked for beauties and exhibitions of good taste, and containing so much refinement and intelligence, that it furnishes a delightful home to the student."

Listed are "102 ladies" and "132 gentlemen", as students in the English or classical (college preparation) courses, and a combined staff and faculty of ten people. Tuition was $3.00 to $4.00 a term of eleven weeks, and board and room was provided in private homes and boarding houses for $1.50 a week, incidentals included. Chester High School stands today on the same spot as the original academy which had been founded 30 years before 1845, old pictures of which can be seen in the village library. Students were required to attend religious exercises in the chapel morning and evening as well as on Sunday, and to be in their rooms from ten p.m. Rhetorical exercises were required of each student weekly.

No doubt but many a courtship and many a family line can be traced to a beginning at Chester Academy and other schools like it throughout New England, many of them church sponsored and with trustees from leading families in the area. Perhaps it was here that Lemuel Bottum [#15] and his future wife, Abia Andrus, attended 1817-1819, the two years previous to their marriage. These boarding schools also account for the very large homes in New England towns, since it was the custom for nearly every family to make a home for varying numbers of students. At Chester there was room for only 25 boys to live in the Academy building itself.

CHAPTER XXXIX

THE SAFFORD FAMILY

1. Joseph[1] Safford and wife Abigail came to Plymouth, Mass. from Ipswich, England. They lived at Ipswich, Mass. where their children were born and, in 1723, moved to Norwich, Ct. Their son

2. Joseph[2] Safford, b. Jan. 18, 1705 - died June 25, 1775 at Bennington, Vt.[1] He married on Nov. 5, 1729 in Norwich Ann Longbottom, b. May 3, 1711 - d. Nov.28, 1780 at Bennington, daughter of Daniel [#1] and Elizabeth Longbottom. They came to Bennington in 1761. His name is the 2nd one to appear on the records of the First Church of Bennington (Deacon Fassett's name is the 1st) - "To receive Joseph Safford and Ann Safford his wife into full communion with this church." He was made deacon at the 1st election on record. At the 1st town meeting (held at the home of Deacon John Fassett), he was appointed town treasurer and one of the "tithing men". On March 31, 1762 it was voted to give him and Samuel Robinson 5 acres of land and $40.00 for erecting a cornmill. Jenning's History of Bennington says, "Deacon Safford brought with him to this town the records of the Newent (Conn.) Separate Church. These are still preserved by his descendants; and also a manuscript letter from the old church at Newent signed by Daniel Kirkland, its first pastor, to Joseph Safford & others, Separates, with a view to some further conference on the matters of difference between the separating brethren and the old church. These records are interesting as containing the record of Joseph Safford's formal election to and installation in the office of deacon in the Separate Church; also an important case of discipline, spread out at length, showing their structure and success in maintaining discipline in the church." Joseph and Ann (Longbottom) Safford had 12 children:

i. Ann Safford, born Dec. 11, 1730. (Wallbridge, below)
ii. Samuel Safford, born Nov. 1, 1732 (Jan. 1, 1743) - d. 1735.

I. Samuel[2] Montague, b. Jan. 15, 1743 at Sunderland, Mass. - d. Mar. 27, 1826 at N. Cambridge, Vt., son of Samuel[1] Montague who died at the Battle of Bennington; m. in 1764 at Bennington, Vt.
Lucy Safford, b. June 2, 1748 at Norwich, Ct. - d. Apr. 4, 1828 at N. Cambridge, Vt., daughter of Joseph and Ann (Longbottom) Safford, above. They are both buried at Cambridge. Samuel was a private in the Revolutionary War and is listed in the DAR Patriot Index as serving in Massachusetts. They lived in Bennington, Vt. until July of 1784 when he and his family moved to Cambridge, Vt., when that village had only 4 or 5 families. That part of the state was then a wilderness and they made their way on their journey from Bennington by a blazed trail. They had 10 children, the first eight being born at Bennington:

i. Lucy, b. Feb. 12, 1765; m. Daniel Kinsley.
ii. Darius, b. Apr. 18, 1767.
iii. Anna, b. Oct. 2, 1769.
iv. Elizabeth, b. Feb. 11, 1771/72.
v. Samuel, b. Apr. 23, 1775.
2 vi. Celinda, b. Nov. 28, 1777; m. Samuel Kinsley (below).
vii. Child, b. 1779 - d. 1780.

SPENCER

1. Israel Spencer, with his sons Israel, Jr. and Jesse and other Spencer kin and companions, were early settlers in the town of Maryland, Otsego Co., N.Y.[1] They were later in Western, N.Y. as were also the Rudds and the Salisburys. They came from Connecticut, some say from the town of Haddam, but no documented proof has been found as to their ancestors. Connecticut abounded in Spencers, and the name of Isreal was common among them.

2. Israel Spencer, Jr., born May 16, 1785 - died on Dec. 1, 1821 at Adams, Jefferson County, N.Y. About all we know of him is found on the Salisbury monument in the Rural Cemetery at Adams where he is buried beside two of his young children and in the inventory of his estate in the Surrogate Court at Watertown, N.Y., filed on Aug. 14, 1822 and the administrators account, filed on Feb. 12, 1827, by Abigail Spencer. Two of the appraisers were his brother Jesse Spencer and her brother-in-law Chauncey Smith, both of Steuben. He married, about 1812, Abigail Salisbury, born Feb. 15, 1790 at Gloucester, Mass.- died May 27, 1875 at Whitesboro (then known as Whitestown), N.Y., daughter of Nicholas (1762-1833, son of Edward^{4}, Revolutionary War Minute Man, Jonathan^{3}, Cornelius^{2}, William^{1}) and Rowena (Wheelock) Salisbury.- After his death Abigail married (2) Col. Benjamin Rudd, b. May 10, 1786 - d. Feb. 6, 1876, veteran of the War of 1812 and son of Prosper and Eliza (Lord) Rudd. They lived in Western and in Delta, N.Y. until 1870 when they moved to Whitesboro. They are buried in the Rome, N.Y. cemetery. Many letters, signed "Abigail Rudd" which, over a period of years she wrote to her granddaughter, Abbie Elizabeth Huntington Spencer, are in the possession of R.D.O. Israel and Abigail Spencer, Jr. had 5

1. The then remote but wide tract of Otsego lands in New York State were opened up by William Cooper, father of James Fenimore Cooper, in 1787. Jefferson County, along with Oneida, Steuben, and others opened shortly after. It is a country with navigable rivers and many lakes. To get a faithful picture of life on this frontier, which differed in detail only from that in Lexington, Kentucky, Galesburg, Illinois and in every pioneer community as civilization marched across the breadth of the continent - one should read the author's The Pioneers and Chronicles of Cooperstown.

3. Seneca Salisbury Spencer married on Mar. 3, 1838 Caroline (Bottum) Loomis, b. July 6, 1804 at Shaftsbury, Vt. - d. Nov. 28, 1874 at Chicago, Ill., daughter of Simon [#9] and Elizabeth (Huntington) Bottum and widow of Daniel Loomis [#7, p. 48]. Caroline attended school in Williamstown, Mass., graduating in 1822. In 1832/33 she married a widower with 3 children: Adalin, almost 9; Alfred, not yet 3 and little Julia under 2. Daniel died within the first year of their marriage. She continued to live on in their home in Rochester, N.Y. and cared for the children. After her marriage to Seneca S. Spencer they sold her home in Rochester and the children, under joint guardianship of Caroline and her brother Nathan H. Bottum, whose wife Peace was their father's cousin, spent part of their time with other relatives or in school. From familiy letters it is learned that she was always affectionately concerned with their welfare and happiness and that they regarded her with love and respect. Seneca and Caroline Spencer lived in Delta, Oneida Co., N.Y. and in Lockport, Niagara Co. until shortly before the Civil War when the family moved to Chicago. There he established a prosperous nursery business. They owned a home on the then fashionable Indiana Avenue - Number 1105. They had 3 daughters:

4 i. Abbie Elizabeth Huntington Spencer. b. Jan. 1839 at Lockport; m. Theophilus James Brookes. (Below)

5 ii. Julia Salisbury Spencer, b. June 18, 1840 at Delta, N.Y.; m. Mirza Benjamin. (Below)

6 iii. Mary Bottum Spencer, b. 1843 at Delta. She never married and the date of her death is unknown. She is not buried in Oak Woods Cemetery, Chicago where her mother and Abbie and her husband are buried. It is apparent from family letters that she had an affliction, referred to with loving obscurity. Her niece Constance saved some of her letters which are made up of entertaining little stories.

1. He wrote to his granddaughter Constance on this date thanking her for a penwiper she had made him for Christmas.

Abbie Elizabeth Huntington (Spencer) Brookes

Note: As this book is already overlong and as we hope soon to compile a biographical and pictorial genealogy devoted to the descendants (and their allied families) and to the ancestors of Theo and Abbie (Spencer) Brookes, the following record is limited to names, dates and places. The ancestors of Abbie Elizabeth Huntington (Spencer) Brookes have been traced to over 30 early Massachusetts Bay and Connecticut families. Such a book would be of present interest chiefly to the below 6th and 7th generations, but of future interest to a greater degree to the 8th generation and their posterity.

BROOKES

4. The Rev. Theophilus James Brookes, b. May 11, 1834 at London, England - d. Jan. 19, 1910 at Chicago, Illinois, son of Dr. Benjamin[A] (Samuel[B], Samuel[C]) and Elizabeth (Tanner) Brookes. (Elizabeth Tanner was the daughter of Thomas and Sussannah (Charlwood) Tanner.) Theo was married on Oct. 15, 1868 in Trinity Church, Chicago by his friend the Rev. Charles Edward Cheney of Christ Church to Abbie Elizabeth Huntington[4] Spencer (above), b. Jan. 1839 at Delta (perhaps Lockport), N.Y. - d. Sep. 27, 1887 at Grace Church Rectory, Lyons, Iowa. Theo came to America in 1851, at age 17, the only one of his immediate family to migrate. However, he found many friendly homes to welcome him in Chicago, Illinois as his uncle Samuel Brookes of Middlesex, England had come to Chicago in 1833 with his wife Mary (Shepherd and their 9 children, being among the early settlers there. Theo eventually studied for the ministry and became a priest in the Episcopal church. He was a missionary minister all the rest of his life, serving churches in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Oklahoma and Illinois. He visited his family in England 3 different times but none of them ever came to America until 1960 when a grandaughter of his brother and in 1966 when a granddaughter of his nephew visited members of the family here. His daughter Constance was 18 when her mother died of diphtheria contracted while nursing her brother. Theo and Abbie Brookes had 3 children:

32 a. Barbara Ruth[7] Brookes married John Roger Gislason. (Below)

33 b. Judith Malcolm[7] Brookes married David Mathews Froberg. (Below)

The data on Theophilus and Abbie Brookes and their descendants has come from (1) records received from members of the 6th and 7th generations and (2) Brookes family records in the possession of R.D.O., especially: The Private Register of the Rev. Theophilus Brookes; Letters from English cousins; excerpts from Parish Register, Christ Church, Chicago; records in Elizabeth Ritter's Bible, Apr. 11, 1694 - Aug. 27, 1869; Bible of Samuel Brookes; Deal family Bible, 1871-1959; letters from Nathan H. Bottum to his sister, Caroline (Bottum) Spencer and from Abigail Rudd to her granddaughter Abbie (Spencer) Brookes. Copies of many of the above records have been given to the DAR and DAC Libraries in Washington, D.C. and to the Newberry Library in Chicago.

Lemuel Bottum [#15,p.70] and Abia Andrus were in school together in 1817-1819, the two years before their marriage. Each drew a set of seven maps of the world, some of which were signed and dated. The one reproduced here shows the United States of America as it was then. One set of the maps is in the Americana Room at DAR Headquarters in Washington, D.C.
