PREFACE.

The writing of this memorial of the Breakenridge families of Palmer and Ware has been in greater part a labor of love, for if books enough can be sold to cover the actual cost of publication it is more than I expect. The gathering of material I commenced more than ten years ago as a matter of personal gratification. Wm. Sinclair Brackenridge of Westfield long had it in mind to compile such a volume and collected many facts relating to the family, some of which his daughter, Mrs. Root, has kindly furnished me; but doubtless much of his information is lost, as during his busy life he never found time to place it in connected form.

The tradition concerning the derivation of the name from the Scotch Bracken or common brake as growing abundantly on the ridge where the family was first distinctively known, was obtained by him from Rev. E. S. Breckenridge of Binghampton, N. Y., who came from Scotland in the present century, as is witnessed by a letter from Wm. S. B. to Susan H. B., dated at Rochester, N. Y., Aug., 1869.

It has some support in the fact that Francis of Palmer, the first one born in this country, to preserve his descent, spelled his name Brackenridge. Francis, of Ware, followed his example, as seen on the headstones of himself and wife in the old graveyard near the church at Ware Center. But the first emigrant wrote his name Breukenridge, and his youngest son George and his descendants to the fifth generation kept up that spelling. His second son William, of Ware, dropped the e and spelled Brakenridge and it was so kept up by most of his descendants, except the families of his son George. Now almost all our cousins of the name throughout the country adopt the Southern method Breckenridge. It has produced greater uniformity, but I am by no means certain that it conveys the right idea.

I wish here to express my thanks to all those cousins who have so kindly assisted me by furnishing for this work statistics of their respective branches of the family. I have taken great care and pains to avoid inaccuracies of every description, but fear I have not been entirely successful.

Ware, September, 1886.

NOTE.

Numbers at the right hand of masculine names refer to sections forward.

Numbers over the sections indicate male heads of families.

ABBREVIATIONS: b. born, m. married, ch. children, dau. daughter, res. residence, unm. unmarried.

The maiden names of married women are printed in Italics.

Heads of families in the female line are included under the section of their father.

GENEALOGY.

FIRST GENERATION.

1.

The first record that we know of our branch of the Breakenridge family, originally from Scotland, was contained in a manuscript book brought over by the first emigrant. "Jacobus Breakenridge, his music book made and taught per me Rob't Cairnes Glenreavoll, September, 1715." Born in 1696, Jacobus must have been about nineteen years old at this time. This little book contained the scale and rudiments of music, but he appears to have used it afterwards as a sort of diary and memorandum book. There are but two or three persons now living who have seen and examined it, for it was lost from the family more than thirty years ago. For the preservation of the items extracted from it we are indebted to the sketch of the earlier inhabitants of Ware by the Hon. William Hyde, published in 1847.

His marriage was in 1720, and the births of his children were minutely recorded, giving the time of the moon as well as the year, month, day, hour and minute. On one page was written, "We departed from Ireland, July 16th, 1727, and my child died on the 19th of August." He had three sons to take with him on leaving his home in Ireland, James, six years old, William, four, Francis, two and one-half. It was Francis that died on the voyage. It is probable that he left his mother behind him, as she died in 1729. His father died in 1709, when James was a boy of thirteen. Very likely there were other children in the family, but we do not certainly know.

He was one of a company of emigrants who settled in the forks of the Chickopee river, on the Elbow Tract, under the claim of Joshua Lamb, Esq., of Boston. The township, at first called Kingstown, is now Palmer. The titles under this claim were disputed and the settlers appealed to the Provincial Legislature, and were at last conditionally allotted tracts of about one hundred acres each; that of James Breakenridge was a mile east of Palmer Center. Here he lived and brought up his family in comfort and respectability, and kept up some intercourse with the "old country," for the late J. C. Hamilton of Feeding Hills told me that he had seen a curiously directed letter, superscribed on this wise, "James Breakenridge, Town of Kingston, County of Hampshire, Province of Massachusetts Bay." Mr. Hamilton also showed me a stout oak cane headed with silver which came over the blue waters with his great-grandfather.

James Breakenridge d. April 5, 1767, aged 71. Sarah, his wife, d. Nov. 17, 1773, aged 78. Their eight children were:

- I. James b. May 28, 1721. (2.
- II. William b. Sept. 17, 1723. (3.
- III. Francis b. Jan. 8, 1725, d. Aug. 19, 1727.
- IV. Francis 2nd b. Nov. 18, 1727. (4.
- V. Sarah b. Oct. 6, 1729.
- VI. Esther b. Sept. 19, 1731.

VII. George b. June 1, 1733. (5.

VIII. Margaret b. ——— d. Sept. 9, 1787, unm.

Of Sarah there is a tradition that she m. James Lammon of Palmer and left numerous descendants, some living in Ware.

Esther m. James Hamilton of Palmer and had sons James and John; some of her descendants are now living in Palmer and some in Feeding Hills, Mass.

SECOND GENERATION.

Of James, eldest son of the first James, but little is now certainly known. In the earliest town records of Ware, I find the births of six children of James Brakenridge and Mary his wife, viz. :

I. Janet b. Aug. 18, 1746.

II. Isabel b. Oct. 22, 1748.

III. Esther b. Sept. 22, 1751.

IV. Mary b. Feb. 1, 1754.

V. James b. Aug. 26, 1756.

VI. William b. Dec. 8, 1758.

I do not think he lived in Ware during these years, but he may have been here, though I have heard no tradition of place or occupation. It is certain that he went to Bennington, Vt., some time before the Revolutionary war. He and his brother William were members of the Provincial Congress in 1775. James was sent on a mission to England for redress of grievances; while there he was so persuaded of the wrong of rebellion against the king that he turned "tory," as it was called, and so could not return to his home in Vermont till after peace was declared in 1783.

There is a tradition that he came back to Canada and that one of his near relatives, perhaps uncle, came with him, died there, and that his family emigrated to Kentucky. A lady in Belchertown related to Susan H. B. that she distinctly remembered seeing James Brakenridge alight from the stage at her father's tavern there, when he was on his way to Boston to start on his English mission, and that he was a man of the most noble presence that she had ever seen. One of his sons, probably James, settled in Vergennes, Vt.; the other remained at Bennington, and had descendants of the name there only a few years ago.

SECOND GENERATION.

William, second son of James and Sarah Breakenridge of Palmer, m. Agnes, daughter of William and Mary Sinclair of (Boston?) They were companions on the emigrant ship. Her father, William Sinclair, d. July 3, 1753; Mary, his wife, d. Aug. 9, 1765.

William Brakenridge took up a thousand acres of land in Ware on both sides of Muddy Brook, embracing the farms afterwards owned by his sons William, James and Francis. At first he and his young wife lived in a cabin near what has been called the Gulf, about a quarter of a mile north of where he afterward built his house.

I have heard it related that when it was necessary for him to go back to Palmer to bring on some young stock, and perhaps be gone till very late or even all night, he urged his wife to have Rachel Simonds from the settlement above, come and stay all night with her lest she should be afraid, but she scouted the idea; however, as the night wore on, she grew so lonely and fearsome she thought it would be better to curl down in the hovel with the cow where she could hear her chewing her cud than stay alone in the cabin, showing how inherent it is in human nature to seek the company of any living creature rather than endure solitude in stillness and darkness. She had not been there a great while before the loud voice of her husband was ringing through the woods calling to his cattle. She made haste to get back to her proper place and conceal all signs of trepidation. In after years she related the incident to the wife of her son James, who told it to me among the many stories with which she amused my childhood.

William Brakenridge has been described to me by a grandson George, who well remembered him, as over six feet in height, with an erect, well-proportioned figure, long featured and of Scotch cast of countenance. He had such a loud, clear voice that he could stand in his dooryard and make himself distinctly heard by his sons when they were nearly a mile away in the hill pastures opposite. More than one of his descendants may trace their relation to him by a similar loudness of voice.

According to all traditions of him he was a man of most notable qualities and well fitted for a successful pioneer. The wife of his son George, who lived at the homestead for eight or ten years after their marriage, considered him the most nearly faultless of any one she ever knew.

Captain Brakenridge never united with the church in Ware, some scruple of conscience preventing; but he was a religious, Godfearing man; maintaining family worship with reading the Scriptures, singing and prayer, in the Scotch-Presbyterian way. He was a lover of good books including Henry's Commentary in huge folio; the Greater Catechism, explaining and enlarging on the questions of the smaller, on one of the fly pages of which was written Queen Elizabeth's reply to her questioners about the real Presence in the Sacrament,

"He was the Word that spake it,
He blessed the bread and brake it,
And what the Word doth make it,
That I bless and take it."

He had a set of Scott's Bibles, some of the volumes being in existence now; Bayley's dictionary, which was as great a treasure then as Webster's unabridged is now. These I remember looking over with childish curiosity.

He was one of the first Board of Selectmen after the town was incorporated; was Town Clerk for eighteen years; was chosen delegate to the Provincial Congress in 1775; had held a Captain's commission under the King, but resigned it and afterward raised a company for the war of the Revolution, his eldest son William being the first to enlist in it as a private, saying "he was going to take care of his father." The company was engaged in the strife in Connecticut, (probably Stonington,) also in the battle of Bennington.

The silver-hilted sword which he used as captain of this company is now preserved as a relic, having descended to his son Francis, who used it as a militia captain, then to his son Francis, also captain of the militia, and is now in the possession of Francis Homer Brakenridge, living on the homestead of his great-grandfather. A heavy sword cane is in possession of another great-grandson, Joseph C. Brakenridge. Francis Homer now has the tall case brass clock Captain Brakenridge bought from the estate of Rev. Ezra Thayer, who died in Ware, Feb. 12, 1775, in the sixteenth year of his ministry.

The death of Agnes, first wife of William B., is thus recorded in his family Bible, now in possession of his great-grandson Moses Paige B., of Westfield, Mass., "The partner of my joy and sorrow departed this life," etc., beautiful way that our fathers had of not calling their loved ones dead, but gone on to a life beyond. The inscription on her tombstone at Ware Center is as follows:

MEMENTO MORI.

In memory of Mrs. Agnes, the amiable Consort of Captain William Brakenridge, who died March 19th, 1789, in the 70th year of her age.

Her virtues would a monument supply

But underneath this stone her ashes lie.

The second marriage of Captain Brakenridge was to Mrs. Rosella Anne, widow of George Paige of Hardwick, March 17, 1790.

William and Agnes Sinclair Brakenridge had seven children:

I. Sarah b. Aug. 22, 1747, m. Joseph Ruggles of Enfield. Their six children were:

1. Joseph b. Mar. 10, 1779.
2. William Brakenridge b. Feb. 28, 1781.
3. Benjamin b. Apr. 13, 1783, m. Abigail, dau. of Ebenezer and Milley Coney Gould of Ware. Their seven children were, Lavasta, Betsey, Evander Knox, Lorasa, Willard Gould, Orestes, Lorraine.
4. Sally Sinclair b. Aug. 29, 1785, d. Mar. 21, 1790.
5. Betsey b. Aug. 2, 1787, d. Mar. 19, 1790.
6. Sarah b. Aug. 12, 1795, m. Abner Pepper.

Sally Sinclair and Betsey Ruggles died from the well water becoming poisoned by the breaking of a mineral spring. William B. Ruggles, a very promising young man, died of small-pox in his 22nd year. The nature of the disease was at first unknown: his uncle, George Brakenridge went and took care of him and had the disease himself in "the natural way" and recovered.

The attachment between this brother and sister was especially strong. His youngest daughter said that when they would observe father dressing up of a week day they expected to hear him say, "I am going to step over to sister Ruggles." The step was a matter of five miles by the nearest crossways.

Mrs. Ruggles died —— 1827, aged 80.

II. William, Jr., b. Mar. 5, 1750. (6.

III. James b. Nov. 22, 1752. (7.

IV. George b. Aug. 5, 1755. (8.

V. Francis b. Jan. 11, 1759. (9.

VI. Mary, or Molly as called in her father's record, was a twin with Francis. She m. in 1780 Jesse, son of William and Mercy Aiken Paige of Hardwick, Mass. He was b. Mar. 4, 1752, d. July 3, 1818. Their seven childred were:

Francis, Mary, Christopher, Nancy A., Sally, Jessee, Hadassah. Christopher settled in Prescott and has sons still living there. Nancy married Bassett Fay of Hardwick, Mass., and when their children, Mary, Jane and Charles B., were grown, moved to Ohio. Sally married Colonel Briggs and moved to Indiana.

Mrs. Mary Paige d. Feb. 28, 1810.

VII. Infant b. Jan. 25, 1762.

William Brakenridge died Feb. 16, 1807, in his 84th year.

SECOND GENERATION.

Francis 2nd, fourth son of James and Sarah Breakenridge, born in Palmer, 1728, lived with his parents at the family home. I have not been able to learn the name of his first wife. They had no children, which was a grief to him. When over sixty years old he married a second wife, Rebecca Blair of Warren, Mass. He died in his sixty-second year, before his daughter Rebecca was born. She grew to womanhood, married Joseph Brickett and went to Webster to live, carrying with her many valuable family papers. I was told by the late J. C. Hamilton that Mrs. Rebecca Breakenridge married second Jonathan Webber and continued through life on the homestead and left several Webber descendants. The name of Francis has been kept to the present day in all the generations of his brother George.

SECOND GENERATION.

The records under this number were not obtained until the book was nearly ready for publication, so they are placed at the back of the volume.

THIRD GENERATION.

William, eldest son of William and Agnes Sinclair Brakenridge, married Thankful, daughter of Judah Marsh of Ware. She was born Aug. 9, 1748. Their five children were:

I. Thankful, b. Jan. 8, 1781, m. Amasa Anderson and lived a short distance north of the meeting-house in Ware Center; the house was built to board the workmen on the meeting-house. Her family were especially helpful to the church as singers, musicians and sextons. She had four children:

1. Oriva b. Apr. 16, 1803, m. 1st, Marshall Edson of Greenwich, Mass., and had seven children; m. 2nd, Artemas Ellis. Mrs. Ellis is now living in Ware.

2. William b. Oct. 12, 1805, d. July 21, 1884.

3. Samuel Franklin b. Nov. 10, 1807, m. Sylvia Maria, dau. of Warren Conkey of Pelham, Mass., and they had one son George b. June 20, 1831, m. Dec. 31, 1873, Emily Vowles Kingsley of Norwich, Conn., they having one son George Kingsley, b. 1874. S. F. Anderson died Apr. 18, 1860.

4. Charles b. Aug. 6, 1822, d. Sept. 12, 1879.

Mrs. Thankful Anderson d. Jan. 14, 1870.

II. William Sinclair, b. Sept. 8, 1783. (10.

III. Judah Marsh, b. Sept. 8, 1785. (11.

IV. Sally b. Feb. 14, 1787, m. Joseph Cummings of Ware, b. Mar. 5, 1784. Their ten children were :

1. Mary b. June 30, 1808, d. Mar. 6, 1815.
2. Sarah, b. Mar. 10, 1810, m. Lyman Taylor, had 2 children.
3. Eliza b. Dec. 23, 1811, m. Charles Adams of North Brookfield, her present res.
4. Delphia, b. April 11, 1814, m. Nicolas Harris, of Hartford, Ct., d. Dec. 5, 1879.
5. Joseph Austin b. May 26, 1816, m. Frances Elizabeth Bliss, of Springfield, Mass., res. Ware.
6. Lutheria b. Apr. 20, 1818, m. Ezra Batcheller of North Brookfield, d. Sept. 26, 1878.
7. Mary Anne b. July 16, 1820, m. John Yale, M. D., of Ware. her present res.
8. William Brakenridge b. Sept. 4, 1822, m. Mary P., dau. of Avery Clark, res. Brooklyn, N. Y.
9. Elbridge b. Aug. 14, 1824, m. Emeline Reckard of Ware, res. North Brookfield.
10. Martha b. Oct. 21, 1829, m. Frank H. Palmer. Res. Boston.

Mrs. Sally Cummings d. May 21, 1852.

V. Charlotte b. Nov. 5, 1789, m. Isaac Stearnes, of Temple, N. H., in 1815. Their five children were :

1. Charlotte b. Aug. 25, 1815, d. Jan. 10, 1886.
2. Isaac, Jr., b. Dec. 1, 1817, m. Frances A. Davis, of Ware, and had three children. Res. Warren, Mass.
3. Maria b. May 14, 1820, m. Edwin Merritt of Hartford, Ct. One dau., Emma St. Clair. Res. Hartford.
4. Alonzo b. Mar. 19, 1822, m. Sophronia Grainger, dau. of Haskell Cummings of Ware. Three children. Res. Ware.
5. Hannah b. Nov. 10, 1824. For several years teacher in Hartford, Ct. Res. Ware.

Mrs. Thankful Brakenridge d. Dec. 27, 1831.

William Brakenridge d. Dec. 17, 1833. He was a man of calm, even temperament, eminently known as a peacemaker in the neighborhood ; of a devoutly religious character, though subject to doubt and depression, rather than having a confident hope. In such seasons he would go to his son-in-law, Deacon Joseph Cummings, have a long talk and go home refreshed and comforted. His grandson, William Anderson, has told me that when his aged grandparents would come over on Saturday to spend the Sabbath and go to meeting, starting out early to ring the bell, he would follow along after his grandfather and hear him engaged in vocal prayer all the way to the meeting-house.

THIRD GENERATION.

James, second son of William and Agnes Sinclair Brakenridge, m. Priscilla, daughter of William and Mehetable Elles Coney.* She was born in Sharon, Mass., Aug. 28, 1762, m. Jan. 2, 1781. Their eight children were:

I. James b. Sept. 4th, 1783. (12.

II. Allender b. Jan. 11, 1785. (13.

III. Polly b. May 11, 1788, m. Barnard Whitcomb, eldest son of Samuel and Hannah Pratt Brown of Ware. Their three children:

1. James Frederick b. Mar. 29, 1813, m. June 10, 1841, Eunice M. Woodford, of Burlington, Conn., and had three children, 1st Eugenia A. b. June 14, 1845, m. Dec. 28, 1875, George Casey. 2nd dau. b. 3. Mary Jane b. ——— m. Amasa M. Cobb. He died at Collinsville, Ct. Mrs. Cobb has lived in Westfield, Mass., for many years.

IV. Reuben Moss b. Oct. 29, 1792. (14.

See Appendix.

V. Priscilla, b. July 9, 1794, m. 1st, Dexter Bridges of Western, now Warren, Mass., June, 1816; 2nd, Seth Gould of Ware, Aug. 19, 1828, d. Oct. 3, 1838.

Mrs. Bridges had one daughter, Cornelia Dexter, b. Dec. 13, 1821, who took the name of Cornelia Adeliza Gould in 1836, and the position of adopted daughter to S. Gould.

VI. William b. Aug. 16, 1797. (15.

VII. Agnes Sinclair b. Apr. 15, 1800, m. Chester Hall of Enfield, Sept. 5, 1822. He was a clothier and set up business at Marsh Mills in the north part of Ware, and they both died of malignant fever in Dec., 1822, within two days of each other.

VIII. Mehetabel Elles, afterward called Alice M., b. May 26, 1804, d. Sept. 22, 1864, unm. She always had her home in her father's house, in the family of her brother William, and was beloved and respected by his large family of children almost as another mother. Her mother, towards the close of life, was for a long time almost a helpless invalid and this daughter attended upon her with unwavering devotion and care.

James Brakenridge had the south end of his father's thousand acres for his homestead. He was several years in clearing his land and getting his house built, on which he did a good deal of work himself. I suppose there must have been a bridle path by the place, for grandmother has told me that she was going with a small grist from her sister Morse's to the mill over at Ware Town, and had so much curiosity as to get off her horse and "peek in" to the half-built house of which she was afterwards to be the mistress, but never dreaming of such a destiny then.

From Joseph C. B. I learn that his grandfather used to say "brother James was not noted for his force and energy when a young man at home, but when he went out for himself he was a smasher." This brother was of calm, even temper and mild deliberate speech, a contrast to James, who was hasty, impulsive and somewhat rough in manner.

Their dwellings were about half a mile apart, William's at the foot of a steep hill. James had part of the Muddy Brook meadows and was quite apt to put on too heavy a load for his team. William would have his oxen yoked and ready for use about the time he expected James along, and when with much urging and loud talk he was trying to get the load up the hill, William would come up with his oxen and say, "Hold on James, I'm a comin'," and so with both teams the load would be dragged up the hard road.

It was the fashion in those days for men to wear the hair long and dressed in a queue, and J. B. wore his so, till one day being at work in the woods, it bothered him so by catching in the twigs that he held his head to a log and cut off the queue with his axe and ever after wore short hair.

He was a natural mechanic. When a young man he worked with Deacon Jenkins in his tannery; the place was the next southeast of his. He learned also something of shoemaking and had a bench and kit of tools so as to repair for his own family; but his taste was for wood work and he had a shop at the end of his cider mill where he made spinning wheels and reels, etc., when the wool was all worked up by hand, and many a farmer's daughter went to his house and spun for a "great wheel" when they wanted one for themselves. Farm wagons, carts, sleds, etc., were also in his line of work, and a little coo-pering, such as making tubs and barrels, besides. No wonder that his sons and grandsons have taken to mechanics and in several instances shown quite a genius for invention.

When the parsonage house on the corner of the main and south roads in Ware Center, was built for Rev. Reuben Morse, he wanted it set square with the points of the compass. I am told "Uncle Jim" went down one evening and set the stakes by the North star.

In 1800, when the bell tower and cupola were attached to the new church, just built, it was to be done by private effort without expense to the town. The corner posts were solid timbers, extending from the underpinning up above the bell deck; three of them were prepared; where the fourth was to come from was a puzzle till grandfather heard of a tall white pine in the edge of Belchertown. So one morning about sunrise he took his axe, broad axe, etc., and went over there on horseback. He cut down the tree, scored and hewed it about sixteen inches square at the butt, cut his initials "J. B." on it and got home about sundown. The relater of this anecdote says he found the "J. B." on the timber when the steeple was taken down in 1843. Somewhat later this same steeple came near being the means of his death, for being at work on the belfry he fell over on the east side, caught on the staging as he came down, all but the lowest giving way. He hung by his right hand till he could be taken down, when it was found that only one nail of the fastening held. His shoulder was so wrenched as to make it trouble him greatly for the rest of his life.

He took great interest in fruit growing and from Deacon Jenkins, who brought nice fruit from Roxbury, he learned about the cultivation of it, and made many experiments in planting and grafting. By carefully splitting the cions he succeeded in producing a tree which bore apples one-half sweet and the other sour. Climate and soil allowed the cultivation of peaches in those days. Oriva Anderson tells me that when she was a little girl, going from town to her grandfather's in the peach season, there was a fine large tree in the little garden at the top of the hill, before getting to the house, and she was tempted to go through the bars and help herself, well knowing that she would be welcome to them. After eating all she could hold and putting a few in the bosom of her dress, (little girls didn't have pockets then,) she was hurrying on by as fast as she could, but Uncle Jim espied her from the shop and called out, "Here, come back you little trollop you, and get some peaches to carry to your granny. She wants some." So she was loaded with all she could carry in a bag, and given strict orders to stop when she came back and take another load to her mother, her heart all the time in a tremble for fear they would ask why she couldn't eat any more.

He had the habit of speaking sharply to children, but was kind and indulgent to them nevertheless. Once when his two eldest boys were abusively punished by a passionate school teacher, they were sent to bed with small sympathy from him, but he took pains to go a long distance that night to give the young man a "talking to," and a warning that it must never occur again.

When his youngest son was married in 1827, his parents were too infirm to go to the wedding. The bride had been left fatherless in childhood and deeply felt the want of a father's house and home, and it moved her to the core of her heart to have her husband's father say, as she came over the threshold, "My daughter, I bid you welcome." For only a year did she enjoy this late found kindness, as he died of typhoid fever Dec. 10, 1828, aged 76. Priscilla his wife died Sept. 11, 1840, aged 78. Both united with the church in 1794, in the ministry of Rev. Reuben Moss.

THIRD GENERATION.

³George, third son of William and Agnes Sinclair Brakenridge, married May, 1784, Persis Joslyn, of New Braintree, b. 1767. Their ten children were:

- I. Dwight b. Sept. 29, 1785. (16.
- II. John b. May 4, 1788, d. Aug. 13, 1822, unm.
- III. George b. Jan. 12, 1791, d. Oct. 23, 1871, unm.
- IV. William b. Dec. 10, 1793. (18.
- V. Benjamin b. June 26, 1796. (19.
- VI. Betsey b. Mar. 12, 1799, m. Isaac Osborn of Ware. Their five children were:

1. George B. b. Oct. 9, 1819, d. July 11, 1829.
2. William I. b. June, 1821, m. Sarah Nelson of Sturbridge. Their two daughters, both married, reside at Kendall, Mich.

2. Eliza Jane b. Sept. 1, 1833, m. Philip H. Sagendorph of Ware. Their two daughters were Mary Demond and Florence Livingston.

3. Walter Lewis b. Nov. 30, 1847, m. Charlotte E., daughter of Danforth Keyes of Warren, Mass. Their three daughters are : Alice B., Helen K., Anna L. Demond. Walter L. Demond died at Spencer, Mass., Oct. 1, 1882. He was for several years cashier of the Spencer National Bank, a young man of noble Christian character, greatly useful in his life and lamented at his death.

Mrs. Sally Demond d. Nov. 17, 1881. Deacon Lewis Demond d. Dec. 2, 1880. The most of his life was passed in mercantile business in Ware Village : retired to a small farm north of the village, where his daughter, Mrs. Sagendorph now lives.

VIII. Theodosia More b. May 22, 1804, lived on the homestead with her parents and remained unmarried. When in 1829 her sister Osborn died, leaving a baby only a few months old, this child was taken to the home of her grandmother and brought up as a daughter of the house ; but the principal care was taken by her Aunt 'Dosia, who well fulfilled the part of mother and who in her turn received a daughter's care and tenderness from this adopted child. T. M. B. in her youth was remarkable for personal beauty, and all her life for gentle, courteous, ladylike demeanor. She died Aug. 13, 1884, aged 80.

IX. Susan Howe b. July 9, 1807, d. Apr. 17, 1880. From early life to middle age she was an acceptable teacher in the public schools of her native town and the adjoining ones, and many a pupil remembers her as a guide not only in lessons from the books, but in ways of honor and good principles. She was one of the first teachers in this vicinity to introduce singing as a daily exercise in her schools and excelled as a disciplinarian.

X. Franklin b. Oct. 23, 1809. (20.

George Breckenridge lived at the homestead with his father for about eight years after his marriage, then the Captain Oliver Coney Farm, lying just south of the one thousand acres, was bought on for him and a new house built fully upright; the others had houses two stories in front sloping down to one at the back. Not far from this time he was chosen one of the "Queristers" by the town and was persuaded to finish one end of the second story of his house into a hall that could be used for singing meetings, etc. This house is still standing in good preservation, though important changes have been made in it, and is now occupied by his granddaughter, Mrs. Persis B. Rich. He was the first of the name to unite with the church in Ware, in 1789. Died June 11, 1828. Persis his wife d. Jan. 5, 1849, aged 82.

- VII. Julia Ann Childs b. Apr. 12, 1824, d. Jan. 28, 1830.
- VIII. William Lowell b. Feb. 1, 1828. (32.

Mrs. Esther B. died Nov. 23, 1846, and Allender B's second marriage was to Mrs. Celia Chapin Webster, Feb. 16, 1848.

Allender B. d. Dec. 12, 1871. Celia his wife d. May 1, 1875.

James and Allender Brakenridge settled on the Perry farm, about a mile north of Ware Center. Both families lived in the house which was built in the old style with two front rooms. James had the north part and lived there till his death. When the factory village began to be settled Allender was employed there in the building of the works, he was a wheelwright and carpenter, and took up one of the free lots and built a house on it for his family and lived there until 1830 or 1831, when he moved back to his farm and lived there the remainder of his life.

Mrs. Esther B. was so unfortunate as to lose her reason after the death of her third child and was never fully rational again while she lived, a period of more than thirty years. The patience, forbearance and tender indulgence of her husband through all these trying years were worthy of all praise and were unailing to the end.

The two brothers and their wives united with the church in 1813, Rev. Samuel Ware, pastor.

Allender was connected with the Sunday School work from its beginning and was for several years Superintendent; was active in the "Temperance Reformation." He cast one of the three votes in town for James G. Birney for President, in anti-slavery days, was sent to the Legislature with Homer Bartlett in 1832. He and his brother James were Captain and Lieutenant of an independent military company, probably the first organized in town. It was short lived, but military titles generally stick, and "once Cap'n allus Cap'n." In the war of 1812 he was one of a drafted company of soldiers from Ware, led by Captain E. S. ——— They went into camp near Boston, but peace was declared before they were called into action. One day on parade Captain S—— being a little too full of spirits, addressed his company thus: “There are three principal duties of the soldier. The first is subordination to your officers; the second is like unto it; and the third is likewise.” Words fail to express the mock heroic of speech, ground out with slow, deliberate emphasis between half-shut teeth. After he had retired some one asked Allander B. how long Captain S. had been in the service. With a pucker to his lips and a twinkle in his eye, which those who were acquainted with him will recall, he answered, “I can’t exactly tell, but I believe he was Orderly Sargeant under Pontius Pilate.”

FIFTH GENERATION.

Charles Sinclair, eldest son of William Sinclair and Anna Cummings Brakenridge, after the death of his father changed his name to William, being then the fourth William in direct line of descent. He was a young man of grave, thoughtful temperament, early making a Christian profession in the ministry of Rev. A. B. Reed. He began a course of study for a preacher, but owing to a weakness of the lungs developing itself, also to the sudden death of his father, that hope was relinquished. But through all his life he was persevering in his efforts to bring others into the kingdom of his Master.

For two or three years he kept a country store in Ware Center, then with his brothers was engaged in the manufacture and sale of confectionery in Norwich, Conn. After the death of his brother Porter he came back to Ware and established a druggist business in the factory village. In connection with this he carried on an extensive business in life, marine and fire insurance. Here he remained for many years, taking an active part in the town affairs, schools, etc. Among other efforts for usefulness he kept a circulating library of the best solid literature, especially the choicest religious works. He was twice sent to the State Senate for the district of which Ware is a part. Here he gave his voice and influence for making Kansas a free state. He was a staunch total abstainer from intoxicants as a beverage and had the moral courage to refuse wine at public dinner in honor of the Governor, with only one friend to keep him company in so doing.

“Whether in private, business or political relations of life, he showed sound judgment, undeviating rectitude and conscientious fidelity to duty. His genial, sympathetic and always courteous manner secured the unquestioned friendliness of all his acquaintances and deep affection of all his friends.”

He was twice married, 1st to Minerva, daughter of David Gould, of Ware, Aug. 27, 1835. Their children were :

I. Helen Minerva b. June 12, 1836, m. Lewis Fowler Root of Westfield, Mass., Dec. 22, 1857. Their children were :

He learned the jeweler's trade of Lewis Babcock, of Ware, but when about nineteen years of age, went to Bristol, Conn., to work in a clock factory. Hearing from a shop mate the idea that elastic steel wire might be substituted for the heavy cast metal bells then in use for clocks, he experimented secretly, after working hours, till he succeeded in getting a temper that made the coil of wire resonant like a musical instrument. Such bells soon came into use and are still the principal ones manufactured for clocks. Present residence, New Haven, Conn.

IX. Philip Kendall b. Oct. 8, 1867.

In the fall of 1840 and winter of '41 J. C. Brakenridge was a student at Wesleyan Academy at Wilbraham, Mass. In the spring of '41 he went to Boston and was for two years clerk in the carpet store of Ballard & Prince. Stopping at Meriden, Conn., to visit his brother, A. C. Brakenridge, then in the employ of Pratt & Co., at the ivory works, he was offered a situation in the cutlery works of Pratt, Ropes & Co., a business recently transferred from Saccarappa, Me., to the south village of Meriden, then called Hanover. He began at first as an ordinary hand, was soon made foreman, and with only two short intervals of less than a year in all, continued with the company until his death in 1869. In 1855 the methods of the business were remodeled and he became a shareholder, was elected a director and superintendent and continued to hold both positions while he lived. Their table cutlery, in all varieties, finished with ivory, bone, horn, South American wood, etc., obtained great popularity and extensive sales, and the building up of the business was in a good degree due to his talent and energy.

He was a man of attractive manners, genial and friendly with his companions, respected and beloved by the working people, so that many years after his death some said: "Nobody has ever cared how we got along since he died. We don't have nobody to go to for an advice since Mr. Brakenridge died. Mr. Brakenridge's family never could have missed him more than the people of the village did."

He built a handsome residence north of the factories, where his life very suddenly closed at the age of 59, by rheumatism of the heart.

APPENDIX.

Priscilla Coney was born in Sharon, Mass., Aug. 28, 1762. Her eldest sister Abigail, married to Phille Morse, having emigrated to Ware, when Priscilla was about thirteen years old she came to live with her awhile. Their mother was taken sick and their father came after Priscy. She went back with him on horseback, riding double according to the fashion of the times.

Mrs. Mehitable Coney died Aug. 14, 1777. She had ten children :

1. Oliver b. June 11, 1749. He came to Ware with his brother-in-law, Phille Morse, and friend, Daniel Gould, somewhere about 1770 probably, prospecting for a place of settlement. When the Revolutionary war broke out he enlisted, was captain of a company and was in several battles.

He married a wife of Dutch descent somewhere in York State, but lived many years in Ware, on a farm afterwards owned by George Breckenridge. He died Dec. 19, 1830.

2. Nathan d. in infancy.

3. Abigail b. 1753, m. Phille Morse of Sharon. They settled in Ware near the river falls. The descendants of their son Calvin still own and occupy many of the paternal acres. Mrs. Morse died there at 90 years of age. Her daughter Clarissa, wife of Prince Andrews, also lived to that great age.

4. John b. 1755, had sons John and Martin. He had his home for some years in Hawley, Mass., then went to western New York and had descendants in Chatauqua County.

5. Molly b. 1758, m. Captain Ephraim Scott. They lived first at Ware, then at Belchertown. Most of the family lie buried at Ware Center. Captain Scott composed the following quaint epitaph for himself and wife :

Farewell, vain world ; we've had enough of the ;
 And now we're careless what thou sayest of us ;
 Thy smiles we seek not, nor thy frowns we fear.
 Our cares are past, our heads lie quiet here,
 What e'er you saw amiss in us, be sure avoid,
 Search your own heart and you'll be well employed.

6. Milley b. Dec. 13, 1760, m. Ebenezer Gould, Jan. 2, 1781, lived near Ware Center, died June 17, 1851, at the age of ninety years and six months. Her daughter Mehitabel Elles m. James Magoun, d. in Hastings, Mich., at over ninety years. Her daughter Milley m. Nicholas Cummings, lived in Augusta, Oneida County, N. Y., had a family of thirteen children, most of whom lived to maturity, d. Nov. 20, 1885, aged ninety-one years and six months.

7. Priscilla b. Aug. 28, 1762, m. James Brakenridge.

8. William b. Feb. 3, 1765, always lived on his father's farm in Ware. His daughter Galacia m. Darius Eaton. Children of his sons Nathan and John are now living in the factory village.

9. Daniel b. Jan. 3, 1768. His grandson Dwight lives at the old farm on Coy's Hill.

10. Ellis b. Apr. 19, 1770. He was a physician, lived at Goshen, Mass., d. Oct. 29, 1807, leaving two daughters. Mary, the younger, m. Leonard Smith ; the family moved to Wethersfield, Henry County, Ill., in 1838.

William Coney m. Mary Carr, widow of Aquila Robbins, for a second wife, and soon after moved to Coy's Hill, then in the border of Brookfield and in the neighborhood of his daughter Mrs. Morse. He has been described to me by his grandson, Allender Brakenridge, as a man of small stature and that he never gave up the fashion of wearing breeches with long stockings. He went to meeting at Brookfield, and having missed the reckoning was out at work one Sabbath when a neighbor came home from the services. He was so shocked at his desecration of the day that he and his family kept Monday in the most religious manner. He is said to have had a brother Lowell, hence the name in Allender B's family. He died in 1805, aged seventy-eight.
