Generation 15.

John Cary, born Somersetshire, England, came to America in 1637, and died in 1681: an original proprietor and first town clerk of West Bridgwater. In 1637 John and Deacon Willis were chosen "to take in all charges of the late war (King Philip's) since June last and Expense of the scouts before and since June." He married Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Godfrey, 1644. (See Cary Family in America.)

Generation 16.

FRANCIS CARY.

Francis Cary, son of John, the Pilgrim, was born in Braintree, Mass., 1647; he was named after his grandfather, Francis Godfrey; married Hannah, daughter of William Brett (see Brett line). Samuel Tomkins, of East Bridgwater, gave his estate to Francis, who was brought up by him: hence Francis named his eldest child after him. His children were:

Samuel, born 1677.

Ephraim, married Hannah Waldo, 1709.

Mary, married Nicholas Whitman, 1715; died 1719.

Lydia, married Joseph Edson, 1704.

Melatiah, married Joseph Lucas, 1727.

Generation 17.

SAMUEL CARY.

Samuel Cary was born in East Bridgwater in 1677: married Mary Poole (see Poole line). Their children were:

Joseph, born 1705; married Anna Brett, daughter of Elihu Brett.

Lydia, born 1706.

Alice, born 1707.

Eliza, born 1709.

Samuel, born 1711.

David, born 1713.

Nathan, born 1716.

Eleazer, born 1718; married a Miss Sturdevant.

Mary, born 1720.

Generation 18.

Eleazer Cary, son of Samuel and Mary (Poole) Cary, married a Miss Sturdevant, in Dutchess County, N. Y. He was born in 1718, at West Bridgwater. He was one of the first forty settlers who came to Wyoming Valley in 1769, and lived at Careytown (named for him), in lower part of Wilkes-Barre.

He was a Revolutionary soldier, also having two sons in Wyoming Massacre, and one with Washington's army; and also one doing guard duty at Wilkes-Barre fort at Time of massacre, and in Hollister's History of Lackawanna County he says Eleazer was with Sullivan's army (page 69).

In 1779 Eleazer brought his family to the valley. The place of settlement of this family was called Careytown, and is now called Sturdevant Place and Firwood, but the old Careytown road was renamed by City Council in 1884. Eleazer was entitled to a claim of land as a suffering settler, but it was not until after his death that the claim was acknowledged, on account of dispute of title. ("The writer does not know if his children ever received any part of it, but is of the opinion that Charles Bennett took out patents for the same land in 1808.")

FROM HOLLISTER'S HISTORY, PAGE 69.

Tuscarora Creek has a scrap of history of its own. The great warpath from Tioga down to Wyoming crossed the mouth of this stream. It was in the certified township of Braintrim, and county of Westmoreland. In 1779 General Sullivan, with his army, crossed the Tuscarora at this point. When his rear-guard had reached the south bank, where a large mountain, covered with oak, with little or no underbrush intervening to obstruct the view for a great distance, comes down to the very stream, a body of savages were seen stealing down its side for the purpose of securing a few prisoners. Familiar with the mode of Indian warfare, the guards leaped behind the trees, affording them partial shelter. The Indians, more skilled in the art and advantage of woodside encounter, as quickly betook themselves to the oak, which concealed even their presence, when the skirmish began. Soldiers fell wounded or dead without knowing from what particular quarter bullets issued. At length Eleazer Cary, who saw his fellow soldiers fall one after another simultaneously with the crack of the rifle near by where he was standing, espied the dusky form of a warrior cautiously peering out from behind a tree not fifty yards from where he was standing, with his well-aimed gun in his hand, bring down a soldier at each discharge of his weapon. After the Indian had reloaded, Cary, who had resolved to kill him if possible when he should attempt to shoot again, watched with intense solicitude the warrior's rifle as it was again brought beside the tree. No sooner had the slight projecting cheek and eye of the Indian come out so as to be discerned by Cary, when the avenging bullet was sent forthwith into his brain. He gave one high leap, uttered one deep yell, and fell to rise no more. The Indians ran, caught up his body and fled into the forest.

This is to certify that on examining the records of the settlers of the New England people on the Susquehanna River, that I find that Mr. Eleazer Cary, deceased, late of this town, was entitled to a right in one of the towns laid out for the Susquehanna purchase; he being entitled to such right as a suffering settler.

Cert. Zebulon Butler, late committee of said settlement, Wilkes-Barre, December 24, 1789.

The certificate was entered in the town of Putnam the following March 15, 1790, by me.

ZEBULON MARCY (Clerk).

Cary Cemetery.

The burial place of Eleazer Cary has not been definitely settled, but a number of the oldest settlers have told the writer that where St. Clement's Church now stands, on Hanover Street, Wilkes-Barre, was called the Cary burying-ground by the older people. Eleazer Cary's house is supposed to have stood somewhere near where Attorney Powell's house now stands. Previous to that the old Milan Barney blacksmith shop stood there.

The Children of Eleazer Cary.

Nathan Cary, born 1755, died 1835; aged 80 years.

John, born 1756, died Sept. 15, 1844; aged 88 years.

Samuel, born 1759, died April 23, 1843; aged 84 years.

Benjamin, born 1763, died Aug. 3, 1830; aged 67 years.

Mehitable, born 1765.

Comfort, born 1768, died Aug. 30, 1838; aged 70 years.

Generation 19.

Nathan, son of Eleazer, was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., 1755; was a man six feet in height, and of a very muscular frame. He was an early emigrant, with his father and brothers, to the wilderness of Pennsylvania. He was in the memorable battle of Wyoming, but miraculously escaped without injury. He was a soldier in the Revolution. He married Jane Mann, July 11, 1782, and situated at Hanover, in Wyoming Valley, until 1790, when he removed to the headwaters of the Canestota River, a place now known as Ark Port, Steuben County, N. Y. He purchased a farm then covered with heavy timber, but he made of it a beautiful home. He died there in 1835, aged 80 years. His children were:

Johnston, born March 5, 1783; Eleazer, born July 8, 1786; Adam, born January 1, 1789; William, born February 8, 1791; Christopher, born June 20, 1794.

Susan Cary, daughter of Johnston Cary, married William S. Hurlbut.

Mary Ann Cary married William Hooker Hurlbut.

Mary J. Wiggins, of Hornellsville, N. Y., and Hon. Charles Cary, of Orleans, N. Y., are grandchildren of William Cary.

Mrs. Fannie (Hurlbut) Huntley, of Hornellsville, and Charles H. Hurlbut, of New Whatcomb, Washington, are grandchildren of Johnston Cary.

Generation 20.

Eleazer, son of Nathan, was born in Hanover, Luzerne County, Pa., July 8, 1786; always lived in Wilkes-Barre. His first wife was Frances Slocum; his second wife was Rebecca D. Chapman, a widow. By his first wife he had two children: Frances, who married Peter Ousterhout, of Tunkhannock, and Rhoda S. Cary, who never married. By his second wife he had one son, who married Leletia Scott, of Wayne, Pa. They had three children: Lucy (died, aged eight years), Frances (single), and Mary, who married a Mr. Wendell.

Eleazer Cary was a highly respected man in the city of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he resided all his life. He was alderman for many years, and was familiarly known as 'Squire Cary. He was stepfather of C. I. A. Chapman; he was the first postmaster of Pittston, having the office at the corner of Main and Parsonage Streets.

Generation 21.

Miss Rhoda Sawyer Cary was born at Pittston Ferry in 1882; died at Diego, Cal., January, 1898, aged 16 years. Her mother was a grandniece of Frances Slocum (the lost daughter of Wyoming), and her father, Eleazer Cary, Esq., was Pittston's first postmaster, having the office at what is now the junction of Main and Parsonage Streets.

Generation 19.

John Cary, son of Eleazer, was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., in 1856. His first wife was Susanna Mann (widow Green). His wife died September 26, 1815, aged 71 years. His second wife was the widow of Frederick Chrisman. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary army, belonging to one of the armies raised in Wyoming Valley, and was in Washington's army. He lived in the lower part of Wilkes-Barre, on Carytown Road. The vicinity being now called Firwood and Sturdevant Place, which was formerly Carytown, named for the Cary family, who settled there in the earlier days. None of this ground is now owned by Carys.

Generation 19.

John was a man of Herculean strength and great personal courage. His children were: John Cary, Jr., born 1783; died September 28, 1808; aged 25 years. Elizabeth (Betsy), Susanna and Hannah.

Generation 20.

John Cary, Jr., married Kathern Vandermark, by whom he had two sons and three daughters. Eleazer, died; Miner, died; Susan, Hannah and Esther.

Generation 21.

Esther Cary, daughter of John, Jr., married ——— Jarvis. They only had one son that is known, Jepi Jarvis.

Generation 21.

Susan, daughter of John, Jr., married ——— Laird; moved to Ohio.

Generation 21.

Hannah, daughter of John, Jr., married Ebenezer Marble, father of John Miner Cary Marble, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Generation 20.

Elizabeth (Betsy), daughter of John, Sr., married Henry Tillburry; went West about 1840.

Generation 20.

Susanna, daughter of John Cary, Sr., married George Gore; went West.

Generation 20.

Hannah, daughter of John Cary, Sr., married Nathan Barney. They had one son, Milan Barney, who married Polly Wade; children, John, Milan, Mary, Harriet, Edward and Nathan.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 14, 1902.

Mrs. A. C. Smith, 24 Church Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

MY DEAR MRS. SMITH.—I have the pleasure of yours of the fifth inst., which came during an absence from home. I fear I shall not be able to give you anything new or valuable about the Cary family.

My great grandfather, John Cary, having been virtually a father to me from my earliest recollections until his death in 1844, when I was little more than eleven years of age. I have naturally felt a more than usual interest in his father, my great great grandfather; until recently about all I knew was his given name, Eleazer, and that he came to Wyoming Valley in 1769 with the Connecticut settlers, and that he lived for a time on the Old River Road, that had been pointed out to me—this road ran straight north from Carytown, and the part which lay beyond the Richards farm was little used in my time. At the forks in flood time was a good place to draw in drift wood with long hooks, and poles and hooks, an occupation which I entered into with zest.

The much used road of my day, going to town, branched off the old one, and kept on the higher ground. The Eleazer Cary homestead was on the west side of the straight road, and some yards north of a bayou.

My great grandfather's home was in a large red house on the west side of the road at Carytown, and my home was with him.

I remember his brothers Samuel and Comfort very well, but have no personal recollection of Nathan or Benjamin, the latter I presumed had removed to Ohio at an early date. My home was in Ohio from 1846 to 1888, when I came to California. During this time I endeavored to get some trace of Benjamin's family in Ohio, but without success.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN M. C. MARBLE.

Letter written by Mr. Dilley to Mr. J. M. C. Marble of California:

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., August 8, 1902.

Mr. John M. C. Marble,

DEAR SIR.—I find the enclosed in the Wilkes-Barre Record of July 30th, and it brings to my mind things of the long past. You say you are very much interested in anything that pertains to my great grandfather, John Cary; allow me, an entire stranger, to tell you some recollections I have of "Uncle John Cary," as everybody called him. By the way, at that early date in our valley men were addressed "Uncle So and So," whether any blood relation existed or not, just as down South all men are known as Captain, Major or Colonel. Uncle John Cary was a man six feet two or three inches in height, and was of fine proportions, and straight as a soldier, as I remember him. He was a kindly old gentleman and often came to my father's house; we lived on the middle road about a mile and a half from the Cary residence. This little incident fixed in my mind strongly my recollections of Uncle John Cary: My father made cider at Uncle David Richards', who lived just above Mr. Cary's, on the Carytown Road. My father just put a barrel of cider on a one-horse wagon and sent me home with it. I drove home. To get the cider off, I went to get something to slide it off the wagon. Uncle John did not get off, but sat still on the seat. I did not find what I wanted to and came back, intending to take a rail or two out of the fence, and so slide the barrel down that way. As I came back to the wagon I found another old neighbor, Thomas Quick, talking to Uncle John. Mr. Quick said to him: "Uncle John, I have heard say you could take up a barrel of cider by the chimes and drink out of the bung hole." Uncle John did not say whether he could do such a feat or not, but with his deep bass voice he said: "I could try." At that he got off the wagon and went to the back end, lifted the barrel by the chimes on to the tailboard, brought it to his chest, then stepped backwards and set the barrel down as a man would a pail of water. As I said before, he did not say he could perform the feat of lifting a barrel and drinking from it, but I have told the story many times, and firmly believe from what I saw that he could do it. I think at that time he was not far from eighty years of age.

I heard my father tell that at the raising of Bellee's Mills Mr. Cary would take a timber and carry it on his shoulder into the building, when it would take two or three men to carry a timber of the same size. He has always been my ideal of a strong man. Since I have taken the liberty of writing you, I am going to tell something more about a family your name brings to mind. I knew a family by the name of Marble. Mr. Marble built and lived in a house at the corner of Hanover Green and River Road. The house is still standing, in good condition, and a very respectable house. I was born in a house within forty miles of the Marble residence. Mr. Marble was a carpenter by trade; his wife had what is seldom seen, two thumbs on each hand. The second or extra thumb came out at the second joint, and was a quarter as large as the main thumb. These extras were fully formed. I was quite a favorite with Mrs. Marble, going there very often. I do not remember of their having any children, but think none at the time my father lived near them. My father moved about a mile and a quarter nearer Wilkes-Barre, and I lost sight of the Marbles, and I do not know what became of them. We still lived within the Hanover Green School District, and from my eight to ten years of age I went there to school; at that time a Mr. Bidleman lived in the Marble house. Nathan Cary taught school. I think he was Comfort Cary's son, but am not sure. The boys of that day were pretty rough, and it was no uncommon thing for a teacher to be turned out doors. But I want to say Nathan Cary was master as well as teacher, and it would have been a sorry day for some one to have made an attempt to turn him out. Nathan Cary had a son, Elias, who was a carpenter by trade and lived in Wilkes-Barre, where he died about four years ago. Now, I think I have spun a yarn long enough to tire your patience, and will subscribe myself,

Yours truly,

ANNING DILLEY.

No. 74 Ross St., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

CHANGING OF NAME.

At the March meeting of Wilkes-Barre City Councils, in the year of 1885, the name of the "Cary Town Road" was changed to "Cary Avenue." The Carys, for whom the thoroughfare was named, were pioneers in old Wyoming, and their memory held in high esteem. Eleazer was one of the first settlers in Wyoming Valley, coming first in 1769, and bringing his family three years later. One of his sons, John, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, settling afterwards below Wilkes-Barre, on River Road, the community being known as Carytown; his brothers, Nathan, Benjamin and Comfort, were leading settlers in Hanover Township.

PART II.

SAMUEL CARY FAMILY.

Generation 10.

SAMUEL CARY.

Samuel Cary, son of Eleazer and ——— (Sturdevant) Cary was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., in 1759; married Rosanna Cary (maiden name), but she was a widow when he married her—supposed to have been Widow Bennett, but there is record of a Samuel Cary having married a Rosanna Christian in Dutchess County. He was a man small in stature, but active, energetic, persevering and patriotic; was in the battle at Wyoming, under Captain Bidlack. He escaped but was taken prisoner by the Indians and remained a captive for six years. He was supposed to have been murdered, but returned unexpectedly in 1784 to Wyoming, having suffered incredible hardships. His second wife was Theresa Gore, daughter of Captain Daniel Gore. His first wife, Rosanna, died September 17, 1822, aged 67 years. His children were all by his first wife.

Samuel Cary died April 23, 1843, aged 84 years 8 months.

Children of Samuel.

Charity, born March 20, 1787; married James Purdy; died March 20, 1875.

John, born March 1, 1790; married Lois Williams; died August 24, 1836.

Samuel, born April 23, 1792; married Anna Pickett; died May 10, 1882.

George, born July 10, 1793; married Ann Downing; died January 2, 1820.

William, born December 27, 1795; married ——— Searle; died April 8, 1871.

Nathan (twin), born October 1, 1797; died April 18, 1872.

Francis, born March 14, 1800; died ———, 1858.

Laura, born July 23, 1801; married Martin Downing; died July 18, 1887.

Sarah (twin), born October 1, 1797; married Moses Williams; died May 24, 1888.

From The Hazleton Traveller.

While our minds are on the other side of the river at Jacobs' Plains, as the upper part of Wilkes-Barre is termed, sketching a brief outline of the Abbotts, the Searles and the Williams who reside there, methinks I may as well fulfill a promise previously made, and give you some account of the Cary family, their neighbors, a name which stands conspicuous on the list of those patriots who served and suffered at Wyoming in the cause of liberty and country.

Mr. Samuel Cary is now seventy-nine years old, of course; he was nineteen the year of the battle, active, ardent and patriotic, he was enrolled in Capt. Bidlack's Company and was out on several scouting parties before the invasion. He was up at Wyalusing, and with our men at Exeter helped to bring away the remainder of the Hardings and others murdered by the Indians a day or two before the battle. On the fatal third he was at his post and with Bidlack to the contest. Their position was to the right; the left wing was earliest pressed and retreated, being thrown into entire confusion before the right gave away, but retreat had become inevitable. Mr. Cary left the road and passed down on the low flats near where the monument is now being erected.

Zipperah Hibbard was in the prime of early manhood, six foot high, built for strength and activity; he was straight as an arrow and moved with a light elastic step. Of him it is said by several of the old settlers that in their athletic sports Hibbard would take off his hat and shoes and let two companions hold a string extended so that walking under it he could just touch with his head; he would now step off a few steps, till he got his proper distance, return on the spring and leap over the string with the alertness of the bounding deer; his activity, manly and social qualities rendered him a general favorite. Mr. Hibbard was but recently married; preparations for the engagement were made a day previous. Fear was a stranger to his breast, but he was sensible and sagacious, and he saw the unprepared state of our people, enfeebled by the two companies raised for our defense, being marched and kept away, and from the evidences of great force on the part of the enemy that the chances were all against us, and it is thought a particular presentiment that go the battle as it would, but the dictates of patriotism and duty. He fitted himself for the field, and went to the door, looking at the bright heaven, then at the beautiful earth then clothed in the rich robe of approaching harvest, gazed for a moment, resting his gun against the door post, hastened into the house, impressed one parting kiss on the pale and trembling lips of his bride, spoke not a word, but tore himself away, and the next hour there was not a soldier that marched to the field with greater alacrity: he went to return no more. Hibbard and Cary ran together towards the river. Hibbard in advance, breaking the path through a heavy piece of rye. The obstruction perhaps proved fatal to him, for by the time they got through he was nearly exhausted and showed signs of great fatigue. On coming near the river bank and leaving the rye field, Mr. Hibbard sprang to the sand bank, but was closely pursued by an Indian, who overtook him before he could reach the stream. As Hibbard turned to defend himself he received the accursed spear in the breast and fell lifeless on the sand. Mr. Cary got to the river lower down and succeeded in swimming across, but the savages had gone over before him, and he was instantly surrounded. One who seemed to have authority took charge of him, but a small Indian, pitted with the smallpox, and having lost one eye (as he stood naked, for Mr. Cary had stripped off all his clothes), with a malicious smile drew a knife up and down his breast and abdomen, about an inch from the skin, saying the while, "Te, te, te, te." They then made him swim back, bound his hands, and he was conducted to Wintermutes. The fort had been set on fire by the enemy at the commencement of the engagement, and Mr. Cary saw the remains of several of our people who had been thrown on the burning pile; they were then lifeless.

That night he lay on the ground, bound hand and foot and without food. The next morning an officer struck him on the hand, with his oxen hand: "You are the fellow that threatened yesterday morning to comb my hair." He then learned that the Indian who had taken him was Captain Roland Montour, who now gave him food, unbound and led him to a young savage, who was mortally wounded. What passed he could not perfectly understand: that the purpose was to show him the dying Indian, and ask if his life should be preserved, and he be taken to the Indian's parents to be adopted instead of his lost son. He assented, and young Cary's life was saved. They then painted him and gave him the name of the dying Indian, Coconenuqui, of the tribe Onondagoes. When the enemy marched from the valley, Mr. Cary, carefully guarded, was taken with them, and when they reached the Indian country he was handed over to the family into which he had been adopted. Where, if he would have conformed to the savage customs, and have so deep of the waters of forgetfulness as to cease to remember country connections and friends, he might have remained peaceably, if not happily. But beloved Wyoming, doubly dear from her sorrows, would rise in his slumbers as if it were ever present in his waking hours. And he sighed for liberty and home. He thinks the old Indian and squaw saw that he could not mingle in spirit with them, for they used constantly to mourn for their lost boy. Just at day-break they would let up a pitiful cry, "Oh, Oh, Oh," and at evening, as the sun was going down, "Oh, Oh, Oh," and with all their stoicism their sorrow did not cease. At times while with them he suffered, having only a spoonful of parched corn a day for several weeks; he thought he would famish, and in severe winters his suffering from cold was extreme, but he shared like the rest of the family, and they evidently meant to treat him kindly.

More than two weary years passed in this manner, when they got to Niagara where he was detained, though with less suffering, until restored to liberty by the glorious news of peace and independence. It was on the 29th of June, 1784, before the charming valley again met his sight, after having suffered six years of distressing captivity. Mr. Cary mentions the statement made by others that Walter Butler, a favorite son of Colonel Butler, was killed by the Americans at Mud Creek on returning from one of his excursions against our settlements on the Mohawk. He adds that which before I do not remember having heard, that one of the Wintermutes was killed at the same time. Butler was shot by a rifle ball through the head.

There was a Joseph Cary and a Samuel Cary killed in the battle, but it does not occur to my recollections whether any relatives or not. His brother, Nathan Cary, was in the engagement and fortunately escaped. His father's name was Eleazer Cary, a name held by one of his descendants, still known and highly respected in the valley. Though at the advanced age of 79, Mr. Cary enjoys tolerable health, his mind is active and his memories sound, though not rich he is, by the industry and frugality of a long life, comfortable in his declining days, and has the happiness of having sons and daughters settled around him, all well to do, and all respectable, and some in very independent circumstances. His second wife, Theresa, was the daughter of Captain Gore, of whom I have spoken, so that if his life was clouded with sorrow and woe, his evening was clear and serene. But did you say that there was a Mr. John Cary, a brave and faithful servant in the Revolutionary War? I did; I will give you an account of him, so do not hurry me. I must not mingle things much. In due time you shall hear all, but have patience. I have a great deal to tell. There was never a people who suffered more or did more or ever received so little recompense; it is high time that the wrongs and sufferings of Wyoming should be fully stated. While I can speak or hold a pen, she shall not need a tongue or hand to defend her.

Edmund C. Cary, of Benton, was an early settler of Wilkes-Barre; born August 12, 1822. His wife died 1891. His father, George Cary, had first handling of anthracite coal in Wyoming Valley; he helped open a stripping in Pittston, now known as Plains Township, in 1815. In the spring of that year, he, with several others, loaded a raft with coal and sent it down the Susquehanna to Harrisburg, where they sold forty (40) tons for ten dollars ($10.00). They were very much disappointed at such remuneration. This left transportation dormant until 1820, when they took another raft load down, which they failed to sell, so they dumped it in the Susquehanna at Harrisburg. So, as these early pioneers were concerned, the coal work ended. He died June 12, 1891.

PART III.

BENJAMIN CARY LINE.

Generation 19.

BENJAMIN CARY.

Benjamin Cary, son of Eleazer, was born in 1763; died August 5, 1830, aged 67 years. He married Marcy (Mercy) Abbott, daughter of John Abbott (see Abbott line; also Fuller line); was in the massacre at Wyoming, 1778, but escaped, and returned later to harvest his crops, and was scalped by the Indians on the flats near the river in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He built the first house in Wilkes-Barre, on the corner of Main and Northampton Streets. Benjamin Cary was a very fine singer, and could be heard a long distance over the meadows while at work. He was very hospitable, and the old house, which still stands (1908) on the back road below Wilkes-Barre, entertained much company. In the basement of the large, commodious house (considered so at that time) was a fireplace large enough to hold a log that would burn a week, and by the side of this was a large oven for baking. They would pull the hot ashes out of the oven and throw them into the fireplace. His granddaughter, Fannie Susan Stein, of Chicago, says she remembers many happy days spent in this house, although her grandfather was dead at that time. His daughter, Mrs. Bateman Downing, still lived in the house after his death. Benjamin was County Commissioner from 1813 to 1816. He owned a very large farm, which later proved to be very valuable coal property. But was not developed in his lifetime. All of the property came into the possession of his son-in-law, Bateman Downing. Benjamin Cary was buried in the Hanover Green Cemetery, back of the Presbyterian meeting house, near Mrs. Burritt's residence, by a numerous concourse of his relatives and friends, and a number of other respectable citizens from this place (Wilkes-Barre) and other townships, on August 5, 1830.

Benjamin was too young to be in the battle, but was doing guard duty at the Wilkes-Barre fort during the battle and massacre at Wyoming.

Generation 19.

The children of Benjamin were:

Nathan, born 1793; married Sally Ann Allen.

Nancy, married Elijah Adams. They went West.

 Selestia married Harvey Holcomb.
 John Abbott, born 1808; married Polly Bennett (see Bennett line).

Generation 20.

Nathan Cary, oldest son of Benjamin, was born in Hanover at the homestead in 1793. He married Sally Ann Allen. Nathan, like his father, was a good singer, taught singing school; also taught day school at Hanover, below Wilkes-Barre. Mr. Anning Dilly, of Wilkes-Barre, said: "Nathan Cary taught school; the boys of that day were pretty rough, and it was no uncommon thing for a teacher to be turned out of doors. But I want to say that Nathan Cary was master as well as teacher, and it would have been a sorry day for some one to have made an attempt to turn him out."

Nathan, and all his family, went West in 1845, but his son Elias, who always lived in Wilkes-Barre. Nathan married his second wife, by the name of Wagner; moved to Croachanton, Crawford County, Pennsylvania, where he is buried. He had fourteen children: Selestia, Elias, David, Waters, Nathan, Byron, Sarah Ann, Katherine, Amanda, Burton, and four who died in infancy.

Generation 21.

Elias Cary was a son of Nathan Cary, oldest son of Benjamin and Mercy (Abbott) Cary. Elias was born April 6, 1819. He was seventy-nine years old when he died, having been blind twenty-seven years. A sad series of domestic calamities overtook him after he had been blind about a dozen years. His son Plemon B., died 1886. His wife, Sally Ann (Patterson) Cary died 1888. His son Clarence W. may be living, but his whereabouts is unknown. For ten years he lived alone at his residence on Jackson Street, Wilkes-Barre, with no relative to cheer him in his old age. In his active days Elias was a carpenter, was employed on the Court House and other prominent buildings. He always took an active interest in city affairs and politics in spite of his blindness; was a lifelong member of the Methodist church.

The first year he was married he bought a farm at Sugar Notch, where his eldest child was born, but he was persuaded to sell his farm, which was situated about where the Catholic Church now stands, and go to Ohio. His second child was born in Ohio, but he did not like the country so he sold his farm and returned to Ashley, Pa., where he bought a farm, which is still owned by his heirs, but has been laid out into building lots and being sold, the place now being known as Carytown. Mr. Cary held a number of borough and township offices. He was a man highly esteemed for his integrity, honesty and upright moral life. He was 84 years old when he died, but no doubt would have lived many years more had it not been for a cancer which appeared on one side of his mouth, which the writer thinks was caused by the butt of his violin, for in later years he played almost constantly, until he was often called "John, the Fiddler." He had nine children: Hiram, (Fannie, Susan,) Sarah, Jane, Charles, Stewart, John, Nathan.

ELIZABETH (CARY) STARK LINE.

James Stark, son of Christopher Stark, was born May 22, 1734, at Greton, Conn.; died July 20, 1777, at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., of smallpox. He was an early settler at Pawlings, Dutchess County, having moved there with his father subsequent to 1755. He married Elizabeth Cary. In the spring of 1773 the family emigrated to the Wyoming Valley, locating at Wilkes-Barre. September 26, 1776, he enlisted in the 2nd Independent Company, located at Westmoreland; his son joined Capt. Simon Spalding's command June, 1778. This son was the eldest of a large family. On the day of the massacre at Wyoming the widow saved herself by hiding in a field of corn, and upon finding that their home and its contents were destroyed, she gathered what she could, and taking the small children she went all the way back on foot to her old home in Dutchess County, and arrived at her sister's (wife of Col. Pearce) a picture of utter misery and destitution. She died August 12, 1778, unable to rally from the trying ordeal.

Polly, daughter of Nathan and Ann (Hoover) Bennett, married John A. Cary (see Cary line) 1830. Polly (Bennett) Cary died 1896.

GEORGE ABBOTT.

George Abbott, the venerable ancestor of a numerous progeny, was born 1615; died December 24, 1681; emigrated, as tradition reports, from Yorkshire, England, about 1640; was among the first settlers of Andover in 1643, and a proprietor. His house was a garrison, and was used as such many years after his death. In 1647 he married Hannah Chandler, daughter of William and Annis (Alcock) Chandler (Weaver says); he married December 12, 1646. Hannah C., daughter of William, of Roxbury, who came over in same ship with his son-in-law (History of Andover says). William Chandler came to New England about 1637 and brought four children, Thomas, Hannah, John and William. Sarah, his fifth child, was born in Roxbury. Hannah's brother Thomas was among the first settlers of Andover, and progenitor of a numerous race.

George and Hannah were industrious, economical, sober, pious and respectable; with Christian fortitude and submission they endured their trials, privations and dangers, of which they had a large share; they brought up a large family well, and trained them in the way they should go, from which they did not depart. George A. died December 24, 1681. Hannah, born 1629, died June 11, 1711, aged 82 years. She married for her second husband, Rev. Francis Dane, minister of Andover, who died in February, 1697, aged 81 years.

They had thirteen children; their sixth child, William, was born November 18, 1657; died October 24, 1713; a Puritan in faith and Christian conduct; lived near Prof. Stewart's house, Andover; married June 2, 1682 (Weaver says), Elizabeth Geary, daughter of Nathaniel, of Roxbury, she died December, 1712. They had twelve children; tenth child was Philip (Page 85 in Historical Sketches of Andover, Mass.)

William Abbott married Elizabeth G., daughter of Robert Gray (Page 113.)

Robert Gray was a mariner, the only one of whom record has been found in and among the early settlers; in 1699 he bought some hundred acres of land, more or less, from Henry Holt and Mr. Dudley Bradstreet. These estates lie in the Holt district of the south parish; one parcel is described as between Col. Bradstreet's "upper falls meadow," and Lieut. Osgood's "Gillet plains meadow." The deeds have been handed down in the families which have continued to occupy the homestead to the present owner, Mr. Henry Gray. In February, 1718, Robert Gray made his will, giving lands, etc., and all his wearing clothes and cane, with a silver head, to his son, Henry G.

A son of Robert Gray was the Rev. Robert Gray, graduate of Harvard College, 1786; minister of Dover, N. H.

Philip, son of William, born April 3, 1699, and about 1748, farmer, went from Andover, about 1752, to Hampton, Conn.; removed to Windham, where most or all of his children were born. His estate was partially settled in probate court, Windham; he married Abigail Bickford, October 20, 1723; had eight children. John, the eighth child, born September 27, 1741, killed July 18, 1778.

JOHN ABBOTT.

John Abbott, son of Philip, moved to Wyoming 1769; was in battle at Wyoming, but e-scaped; but was soon after killed and scalped by the Indians while attempting to harvest his crops; his house, barn and furniture was burned, and his cattle lost. His widow, in a state of utter destitution, and nine children, the eldest son nine years of age, begged their way to their friends in Connecticut.

John Abbott built the first dwelling house in Wilkes-Barre, of which the fireplace still remains, on southwest corner of Northampton and Main Streets (Kulp III, 1392). He married November 4, 1792, Alice Fuller, daughter of Stephen Fuller (see Fuller line). They had twelve children; one daughter, Mercy, married Benjamin Cary in 1792 (see Cary line).

COPY OF THE WILL OF NATHAN CARY.

(Made at Pawling, Dutchess Co., N. Y., March 1, 1791; probated at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess Co., N. Y., January 17, 1801.)

IN THE NAME OF GOD AMEN: I, Nathan Cary of Paulings Town, Dutchess County, and State of New York, being in a comfortable state of bodily health, and of perfect mind, and memory, thanks be given unto God, calling unto mind the mortality of my body, and knowing that it is appointed unto all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament: viz. principally and first of all, I give and recommend my soul into the hands of almighty God that gave it, and my body I recommend to the earth, to be buried in a decent Christian burial, at the discretion of my executors, nothing doubting, but at the general resurrection I shall receive the same again by the mighty power of God. And as touching such worldly estate, wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me with in this life, I give, demise and dispose of the same, in the following manner and form:

first, I give and bequeath unto my well beloved daughter, Elizabeth Shaw, twenty-seven pound; also I give and bequeath unto my beloved son, Nathan Cary, Junr, all my home farm with the appurtenances thereunto belonging, together with my stock and farming utensils; also I give and bequeath unto the heirs of my well beloved daughter, Mary Starks, deceased, four pounds to be equally divided between them; also, I give and bequeath unto Rhoda Worden twenty-one pound sixteen shilling; also, I give and bequeath unto my beloved daughter, Huldah Rutty, twenty-one pound sixteen shilling; also, I give unto my grandchildren, Rise Cary, and Polly Wilcox, ten pound sixteen shilling, to be equally divided among them; also, I give unto my beloved daughter, Rosannah Cary, twenty-one pound sixteen shilling; also, I give unto my beloved daughter, Esther Cooper, twenty-one pound sixteen shilling. Also, it is my will and pleasure to give unto my five daughters: viz. Elizabeth Shaw, Rhoda Worden, Huldah Rutty, Rosannah Cary and Esther Cooper, all my household furniture that I shall die possessed of, to be equally divided among them.

And, furthermore, I do hereby constitute, make and ordain my beloved son, Nathan Cary, Junr, aforesaid, John Hoag, and Job Crawford, the sole executors of this my last Will and Testament.

And furthermore it is my will and pleasure, and do order the same that my son, Nathan Cary, Junr, aforesaid, do pay unto my several daughters and grandchildren, or heirs, the several sums annexed to their names, as is mentioned in the within, to be paid after my decease. And, furthermore, I do hereby utterly disallow, revoke and dis-annull all and every other former Testaments, Wills, Legacies, Bequeaths and Executors, by me in any-wise before mentioned, willed and bequeathed, ratifying and confirming this, and no other, to be my last Will and Testament, in witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal, seventh day of March, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven.

NATHAN (X) CARY.

Signed, sealed, published, pronounced and declared, by the said Nathan Cary, as his last Will and Testament, in presence of us, who, in his presence and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names.

Thomas Stevens.

Asa Hoag.

Timothy Pearce.

(True copy, except the spelling, punctuation and capitalization have been modernized.—James R. Clark.)

The following is a copy of a receipt or paper found among the papers of Nathan Cary, Jr., executor of the will herewith given, signed by eight of the ten heirs of Mary ("Polly") Cary Stark, wife of William (+) Stark. (Christopher 3, William 2, Aaron 1):

"In the year, 1810, August the 12th day, We hereby agree and set our hands, that the sum that William Stark agrees to take, this shall be full receipt. (Signed by) Oliver Starks, Nathan Starks, James Stark (had removed to Ohio, 1808), Mary Clark, Nancy Dickson, Samuel Stark, Elizabeth Dickson, John Stark."

(Probably the William above mentioned was the brother of the above eight children, instead of the father, who it is said died in 1795. This would leave but one of the ten children unaccounted for in this connection, viz., Lucy Stark Fancher, who, with her family, had removed from Luzerne County, Pa., in the fall of 1807, and was then living in what is now Delaware County, Ohio.)

(Elizabeth Shaw was the wife of Comfort Shaw.)

I find also among the receipts taken by the executors of this will from the beneficiaries under the will, this paper (which no doubt was intended for a receipt from the "heirs of my beloved daughter, Mary Stark"):

"In the year, 1810, August the 12 day; We hereby agree and set our hands, that the sum that William Stark agrees to take, this shall be full receipt. Signed by Oliver Stark, Nathan Stark, James Stark, Mary Clark, Nancy Dickson, Samuel Stark, Elizabeth Dickson, John Stark."

This paper, being with will and receipts taken from the other heirs, leads me to believe that it is a receipt from the heirs of Polly, or Mary Stark, and definitely settles the parentage of Polly; and that her father was none other than Nathan Cary, who died at Pawling about 1800.

But who was he? Whose son was he? Can you tell me?

"As the names of all the heirs of William Stark and wife Polly Cary, except two, were signed to the receipt, there can be no doubt that Nathan Cary, who made the will, was Polly Cary Stark's father.

"In a previous letter it was stated that Nathan Cary's wife's name was Mary.

"I have reason to believe, though the proof is not yet conclusive, that the Nathan who made the will was Eleazer's brother, Nathan, who was born in 1716 at Bridgevater, Mass., one of the 8 or 9 children of Samuel Cary, son of Francis, 2; John, 1.

"I have also a good deal information concerning the Rev. Henry Cary, who died at Pawling, about 1778, instead of in Vt., as stated in The Cary Family published a number of years ago by Samuel Fenton Cary.

"JAMES R. CLARK."

REV. HENRY CARY.

(From Manuscript written by Nathaniel Pearce.)

"The first regularly ordained minister of Pawling was the Rev. Henry Cary, who emigrated to this town from the east, about 1730. He was a graduate of some eastern college, where he took the degree of M. A.

"He settled on the west mountain at the place since known, however, as the Amos Wooden farm, which joins the place on the west formerly owned by the Rev. Nehemiah Johnson. He had been educated in New England and thoroughly indoctrinated with Puritanical principles; and was a Baptist after the most approved pattern.

"The writer of this sketch had for many years a register of the marriages of the inhabitants of this town, which he kept when he was the officiating Clergyman. Some of the leading parishioners were the Woodlins, Millards, Thorntons, Evans, Billings, Burdie, etc.

"How large a family he reared, we have not learned. He had two daughters, at least, and how many sons, if any, we know not. One of his daughters married Henry Stark (error, it was James Stark, Sr.), and settled at old Wyoming. (Description of massacre follows, and her death from measles, soon after her return to Pawling.)

"Mr. Cary left the mountains and lived for some years where Mr. John Townsend now lives, and where we think he died, and, if we mistake not, his remains repose in a field now owned by Mr. Sherman Campbell."

(In another manuscript he writes):

"His youngest daughter married Col. Wm. Pearce in 1766. About this time he removed from the West Mountain and lived for a few years on the John Townsend farm. We think he had no sons, and but one daughter besides Chloe. She was the wife of a Stark (should be Col. William Pearce, as above stated—J. R. C.), but whether his name was James, Henry or Daniel, we are not certain. There were four Stark brothers who were pioneer settlers of Wyoming, viz.: James, Henry, Aaron and David. They were relatives of the celebrated Gov. Stark.

"About 1760 a body of Connecticut men formed themselves into an association called the Susquehanna Company and purchased of the Six Nations that portion of Wyoming lying between the Allegheny and Susquehanna Rivers. (Here describes the massacre and says the settlers fled over the hills to Connecticut.) (Note—The date of the Susquehanna Connecticut Company's Purchase was 1754. First settlement under the purchase in 1763 proved abortive. Actual settlement first began with forty white persons in 1769.—J. R. C.)

"One of the daughters of Rev. Henry Cary had married and emigrated to Wyoming, and was there at the massacre, July 3, 1778. Whether the brothers Stark were there at that time I am not certain.

"There were few of our ancient inhabitants whose life was more full of adventure than that of Aaron Stark, who was son, or grandson, of Christopher Stark, one of the Connecticut Colonists that settled old Wyoming."

(From Pawling Pioneer of March 4, 1871.)

"The record is practically as above, with the addition of his personal appearance, which was imaginary, as he confessed to one of his descendants. He says Rev. Henry was called, 'Good Priest, Cary.' The record which he kept, containing names of people whom he had married, was burned by mistake.

"Thought not to have had any sons, and only two daughters. His youngest daughter, Chloe, married Col. Wm. Pearce, 1766. Not long after this he removed from mountain home and lived for a few years on lands now owned by John Townsend, until his wife died, when he resided with his son-in-law, William Pearce, where he died about the time of the commencement of the war of the Revolution."

See Cary Memorials, published by S. Fenton Cary, Cincinnati, Ohio, 1874.

First Generation.

JOHN CARY AND ELIZABETH GODFREY.

First in Duxbury. In Bridgewater, 1614. He died October 31, 1680.

Second Generation.

CHILDREN.

John, Francis, Elizabeth, born 1619. James, Mary, Jonathan, David, Hannah, Joseph, Rebecca and Sarah

DAVID (2) CARY AND ELIZABETH.

Born in Bridgewater, 1658; went with his brother John to Bristol, R. I. in 1680; died in 1718. One of the original proprietors of Bristol, R. I.; provided in his will that if his son Henry shall proceed in learning so as to enter college that his son Peter shall pay the charges of his college learning.

CHILDREN OF DAVID AND ELIZABETH CARY.

Elizabeth, (twins) Mehitabel and Bethsheba, Sarah, Bethia, David, Peter, Mary, Priscilla and Henry, born June 4, 1711.

(Note by the Author.)—Henry graduated at Harvard in 1733; married and emigrated to Vermont; had a large family, none of whom I am able to find. He died in 1801, at the age of 90 years.

Record: of S. Judson Stark (a descendant of Rev. Henry Cary.)

Rev. Henry Cary, born Bristol, R. I., June 24, 1711, where he resided till he entered Harvard College in 1729, from which he graduated in 1733, with the degree of A. B., and from which he received in 1735 his degree of A. M. The college catalogue shows that he once lived at Ashford, Conn., and moved to Wyoming. About 1730 (?) he came to Dutchess County from Great Barrington, Mass. Probably from Rhode Island.

He located on West Mountain. He was the first regularly ordained, salaried minister of that section, and was a Baptist. He was a neighbor of James Stark, Sr., who also located on the West Mountain.

In 1775 a Henry Cary was Chairman of the Committee of Safety of Dutchess County, N. Y. (The Rev. Henry, I take it.) He was residing in Pawling, N. Y., May 20, 1773, when he bought of William Stark, brother of James, Sr., one-half right in the Susquehanna purchase, as shown by the deed. March 10, 1774, he was a resident of Westmoreland, County of Litchfield, in New England (Wilkes-Barre, Pa.), as shown by deed made to him by Michael Rood of same place.

June 14, 1788, he was "Gent.," now residing in the County of Luzerne, as shown by his power of attorney of that date, given to Henry Stark, his grandson. This must have been the time when he left this section for good. He died in Vermont in 1801.

The following are all the children I can identify:

First. Elizabeth, his eldest daughter; married James Stark, Sr., my great grandfather, about 1758; she died August 12, 1778, in Pawlings, Dutchess County, N. Y.

Second. Chloe, born June 6, 1746; married Col. William Pearce of Pawling, March 2, 1766; died September 4, 1778.

Third. Henry, born August 9, 1748; died December 5, 1760.

Fourth. John Paul, born August 5, 1750; died March 3, 1757.

"Elizabeth, my great grandmother, after the battle and massacre of Wyoming, fled all the way back on foot to Dutchess County, taking with her her children, among whom was my grandfather Samuel, then but seven years of age. She died at the house of her sister, Chloe Pearce. Her husband had died the year before. Whether her son Samuel was reared in the home of his uncle, Col. William Pearce, I do not know, but he remained in that country until he married Polly Birdsall, born July 10, 1772; died January 22, 1827, in Cherry Valley, N. Y. She may have been the daughter of John Birdsall, but I do not know, although I have tried in vain to determine the matter. Can you give me any light on this point?

"Her children were: Abigail, Eliza, Johanna, Pamela, Cary, Eleanor, Paul, Sophronia, Mary, Samuel, John Birdsall, Bethany, Cynthia."

Again Mr. Stark writes: "If it is possible to prove that the Rev. Henry died in Dutchess County, and prior to the close of the Revolution, I wish it might be done. Two things are conceded all around—that the father-in-law of Col. William Pearce and James Stark, Sr., was the Rev. Henry Cary, and also that he was a college graduate."

"The Henry Cary records were copied from the old family Bible of Nathaniel Crandall, who married Abigail Stark, daughter of James Stark, Sr., and Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Rev. Henry Cary."

Comment by the one who has copied the above: "Mr. Stark is not willing to believe that there was another Henry Cary who was in Pennsylvania without proof, and the idea was new to him when I wrote him to that effect. But I think all the Dutchess County records say that he preached there until shortly before his death. He preached last in the old log meeting house near the camp meeting woods."

From Cary Memorials, by S. Fenton Cary. See page 2, this paper:

"There is a town called Carytown a few miles from Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Descendants of Eleäzer Cary, son of Samuel, born in Bridgewater, Mass., 1718; removed to Dutchess County, N. Y., and from there to Wyoming Valley in 1769.

"David Cary (Jr.), brother of Henry Cary, had a son Michael, who lived in Barrington (Bristol County, R. I.), and was a soldier in the Revolution, and a pensioner. He died in 1833, aged 94 years. Ebenezer, son of Michael, lived and died in Barrington. His children were Nathan, born 1814, and Ebenezer, born 1816."

From N. E. Gen. and Hist. Reg., Vol. XLV, page 143. From Record of Bridgewater (Mass.) Marriages:

"May 3, 1749, I married Henry Cary and Martha Byram." (What Henry is this? B. A. Sill.)

"Mr. Henry Burbeck, of Pawling, Dutchess County, (on "Old Geo. Sherman farm), gave me the inscription on the stone of Sarah, wife of Nathan Cary (written December, 1907), and wrote: "Mr. Albert Woodin, told me he could remember where there was a burying ground on my farm years ago, but it was plowed over before I came here in 1880. I will look in the walks near, and if I can find any stones, will inform you. I will also ask Mr. Archibald Dodge, one of our oldest residents, who used to live adjoining here."

As I understand it, Mr. Burbeck is on the road north of Pawling, where the road leading past the camp meeting woods and old log meeting house intersects. Mr. James Pearce thinks it was on the latter road, near the camp meeting woods, that he remembers seeing two grave stones in a field that he thought was those of Rev. Henry Cary and wife.

Rev. Seth C. Cary, of 12 Brent St., Dorchester Center, Boston, Mass., President of "John Cary Descendants," and publisher of "The Cary Family in England," and "The Cary Family in America," by Prof. Henry Grosvenor Cary of Boston, wrote me in response to queries about Rev. Henry Cary: "Your question is to everybody a puzzling one; the State of New York does not yet know where Bond's Bridge is or was, and yet it was one of the points in Dutchess County where some of our people were. You have about all any one has, and all I can see is to plod on in the search in New York."

"Henry Cary, A. B., Harvard, 1733, died in 1802. He entered college from Bristol (R. I.) in 1729, aged 19 years. He was a minister." Where would he have been ordained at that time? In 1761, what is now the First Baptist Church of Dover, belonged to the Philadelphia Baptist Association.

Mr. Henry J. Pearce says of his records: "They were commenced by my great grandfather, Nathan Pearce, and have been kept in the family from generation to generation. Some six years ago I made a tabular statement of our (Pearce) genealogy. I can find in the records, as father kept them (i. e., a general record of all marriages and deaths as far as they came within his knowledge, not of births, except they were in line). This general record, as far as deaths, I keep up. So that this general record shows nearly 3,000 marriages and about 5,000 deaths. Something of a job to go over. My intention is, if I recover my health, to get new books and record the genealogies and general records separate."

After sending my last letter to you, I have looked through the data not recorded in the two books (those books are full) held in detached pieces; but kept together for the time to come; when I shall feel able I shall get two large books, and with the detached can put in regular order our genealogy, and in the other the general record.

"I went to the family of Benoni Stark to examine their family Bible, and luckily found the family Bible of Benoni's father."

Mitchell's History of Bridgewater gives some Cary records, but do not coincide with the Bristol records of Rev. Henry.

The foregoing is from James Noyes, Ed. of Quin. Catalogue of Harvard University, written August 5, 1907, and sent me by Mr. Sill, 1908.

The following from Philip H. Smith, received May 30, 1908, author of Dutchess County History:

"David Cary, son of John Cary and Elizabeth Godfrey, and Elizabeth ———, of Bristol, married December 7, 1687.

Children:

"Mehitable, Beersheba (twins), born August 14, 1693.

"Daughter, born 1695

"Bothia, born 1698.

"David, born 1700.

"Daughter, born 1701.

"Peter, born 1703.

"Mary, born 1703

"Sarah, born 1706.

"Priscilla, born 1709.

"Rev. Henry, born 6-24, 1711.

"Chloe, died 1801.

"Francis, son of John Cary, had a son Nathan, who would be an own cousin of the above Rev. Henry Cary."

FIELD.

Robert Field, who settled at Flushing, L. I., in 1645, was the son of William Field, Lowerby and North Ouran, in the parish of Halifax, England. Himself the son of William Field of Great Horton, County York. This William was son of John Field, the famous astronomer, and belonged to the Fields of Horton and Ardsley. The arms confirmed in 1558; the American branch of the family is recognized in Burke's Peerage of Heraldry of families of England, Scotland and Ireland; also American Heraldica.

Joseph Coles Field, a descendant of Robert Field, born Aug. 22, 1769, married Charlotte Bull, daughter of Daniel and Susanna (Dickson) Bull, born December 1, 1768. They had eleven children.

The eighth child, Harriet C. Field, married James Ketchem; the said James Ketchem being her first cousin and son of Rubemant Bull, born February 11, 1758, and ——— Ketchem. They had a large family. One daughter, Adaline E. Ketchem, married David J. Smith. Their children were: Harriet E. Smith, Andrew C., Spencer Bull, Frederick D. and Jennie Field. A son, Andrew C. Smith, married May A. Cary, January 13, 1881 (see Cary line).

SMITH LINE.

Ephraim Smith came to Orange County, New York, from Connecticut; he was born in 1752, died May 1, 1834, aged 82 years; he married Elizabeth Bingham. They had seven or eight children. One child, Andrew L., married Lany Weller. Their children were: David J., Samuel, William Henry (died) Luther Pratt, John H., Charles Frank, Hiram Horton.

Lany Weller was daughter of Frederick and Katherine (Finch) Weller.

Catherine Finch was daughter of John and Margaret Finch.

David J. Smith, son of Andrew L. and Lanny (Weller) Smith, married Adaline E. Ketchem. (See Field and Ketchem line.)

OBITUARY OF EPHRAIM SMITH.

Mr. Smith was a soldier and sailor in the Revolutionary War, faithful to his post, wherever placed; great lover of civil and religious liberty, read much and thought more, few men possessed a better mind; died in a full faith of a Christian assurance, leaving a large and respectable family behind him to imitate his virtues and follow his advice.

The children of David J. and Adaline (Ketchem) Smith were Harriet E., Andrew C., Spencer Bull, Frederick D., Jennie Field.

Andrew C. Smith married May A. Cary January 13, 1881 (see Cary line).

CARY'S WHO ASSISTED IN RAISING FUNDS FOR WYOMING MONUMENT.

Owing to the delay in raising funds for the erection of the Wyoming Monument, a society was formed for that purpose, composed of the following named persons, who successfully raised the required amount:

President, Mrs. C. Butler; 1st Vice President, Mrs. J. W. Hollenback; 2d Vice President, Mrs. Cary; Secretary, Mrs. R. D. Cary. Executive Committee, Mrs. Butler, Mrs. Beaumont, Mrs. Hollenback, Mrs. Sturdevant, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Gilchrist, Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Nicholson, Mrs. Lewis, and Mrs. Cary.

This Society was the beginning of "Wyoming Monument Association."

The following is the inscription placed on the monument that was erected on original John Cary farm at West Bridgewater, Mass.:

NEAR THIS SPOT WAS THE HOME OF
JOHN CARY,
BORN IN SOMERSETSHIRE, ENGLAND.
HE BECAME IN 1651 AN ORIGINAL PROPRIETOR,
AND HONORED SETTLER ON THIS RIVER.
WAS CLERK OF THE PLANTATION.
WHEN THE TOWN OF BRIDGEWATER WAS INCORPORATED.
IN 1656, HE WAS ELECTED CONSTABLE,
THE FIRST AND ONLY OFFICER OF THAT YEAR.
WAS TOWN CLERK UNTIL HIS DEATH IN 1681.
TRADITION SAYS,
HE WAS THE FIRST TEACHER OF LATIN IN PLYMOUTH COLONY.
THIS TABLET IS ERECTED BY HIS DESCENDANTS
IN MEMORY
OF THEIR HISTORIC AND NOBLE ANCESTOR.

CARY REUNIONS.

About seventeen years ago the Joseph or Barnabas Cary family began holding reunions each year. In 1899 they were joined by the Eleazer Cary family, and formed themselves into an association. At the 1905 reunion they adopted the following Constitution:

NAME.—This association shall be called "The Wyoming and Lackawanna Valley Branch of the John Cary Descendants."

OBJECT.—The deign of the association shall be to serve as a bond of connection between the members of the Cary family and its affiliated branches. To gather up and preserve the historical material now so widely scattered, and eventually to put this into form for general distribution, to increase and intensify the family spirit among us.

OFFICERS.—The officers shall be a President, four Vice Presidents, Corresponding Secretary, Recording Secretary, Treasurer and Auditor; these shall constitute the Executive Committee.

MEETINGS.—The annual meeting shall be held on the last Thursday of August of each year; a mid-year meeting may be held to arrange for annual meeting, and transact such other business as may seem necessary. A special meeting may be held at any time when desired.

FINANCE.—Funds may be gathered in such ways as the Executive Committee may deem wise.

At the reunion on Thursday, September 27, 1908, the time and place of meeting was changed to last Thursday in June, at Nay Aug Park, Scranton. Place subject to change each year.
