DESCENDANTS OF WILLIAM CURTIS.

WILLIAM CURTIS.

William Curtis In the Ship Lyon, which arrived in Boston, Sunday, September 16, 1632, came William Curtis, with his wife and four children. In the same ship came William Heath and Daniel Brewer, and all three settled in Roxbury, William Curtis on Stony river.

In the earliest Records of Roxbury was a list of "Ye estates of the Inhabitants of Rocksbury." There is no date to this list, but it was between 1634 and 1643. In it are the names of the families of William Curteis with thirteen persons in his family; forty acres of land, estate eight—probably pounds sterling. Also John Corteis, with five persons in family. William Curtis appears to be the largest land-holder in this list, which contains fifty-three names; but there is another list of about a dozen larger land-holders, among whom are Dudley, Weld, Gore and Heath. Curtis is spelled in various ways in the old records, as was the case with most other names. In one of Shakespere's plays it is spelled Curtis, which is good authority.*

Roxbury was settled by a party under the direction of William Pynchon, from the company who came with Winthrop, in 1630. They were mostly from London and its vicinity, and a few from the West of England. It is supposed by some that William Curtis came from London, by others from Warwickshire. The birth of his youngest son, Isaac, is in the Town Records, 1642, ten years after their arrival. It is not known whether Mary was married. The marriages of his daughters Elizabeth and Hannah are on record, but not their births. John and Philip settled

* There is a family in Stratford, Conn., the first comer of which is said to have been a brother of our William Curtis, and that they came over together in 1632, from Stratford, in Warwickshire, England. As the great poet lived there from 1564 to 1616, it is possible that he was a fellow townsman and acquaintance of these brothers, and so took their name for one of the characters in "The Taming of the Shrew."

on Stony brook, near their father. John was a farmer, but also in mercantile business, for there is a paper extant relative to a consignment of goods from a London merchant to John Curtis, Ephraim Crafts and Isaac Curtis. Isaac was Collector of Taxes for many years. In his will, still extant, and written on parchment, he is styled gentleman. All the Curtises in Roxbury are his descendants. Those of John and Philip are scattered through other States.

The house built by William Curtis, on Stony brook, is yet standing in good preservation. It is occupied by a lineal descendant in the sixth generation, Mr. Isaac Curtis. It stands near the Boylston Station, on the west side of the Boston and Providence Railroad, under the shadow of a large elm, and near it is the spring of water used by the family for more than two hundred years. The family tradition is that the house was built of timber cut upon the ground, and that it was the second house built here by William Curtis, which seems to be confirmed by the following extract from the Records of Massachusetts Bay, Vol. I. p. 252. "William Curtis had leave to build upon his lot, his other dwelling being seated so inconveniently. March 13, 1638-9."

In 1669, William Curtis made over the homestead to his son Isaac, then twenty-seven years old, on condition that he and his wife should have a comfortable support from the estate during their lives. This deed is still extant. William Curtis died December 8, 1672, aged 80. Sarah Curtis died March 22, 1673, aged 73.

44. PHILIP CURTIS, born 1717, Harvard College 1738. Kept school in Dorchester, and studied Divinity with Rev. Mr. Bowman, of that town. Settled in Sharon, 1742; married, in 1744, Eliza Bass, of Newburyport. Second wife, Eliza Randall, of Sharon. He preached to the age of eighty (fifty-five years) without the use of spectacles. His salary was £60 in money, the use of a meadow, and his wood. Upon this stipend, and a small farm of his own, he brought up a large family, and liberally educated one son. During the war he opened a free school for the parish. Besides this, he fitted students for college, and the Hon. Christopher Gore was one of his pupils. After the war, his people proposed to build a new church, and he gave one quarter's salary, with the right of way through his farm, that a nearer road might be opened to the church. Mr. Curtis baptized 926 persons, buried 403, and married 313 couples, during his ministry. Rev. Philip Curtis died in 1797, aged 81. Mrs. Eliza Curtis died November 11, 1823, aged 91.

45. MARY CURTIS, daughter of Samuel Curtis, born 1720; married Joshua Loring, of Roxbury. He learned the tanner's trade, but when of age he went to sea. Was promoted to a command on the lakes in the old French war, where he was wounded, and retired on half pay. In 1760, he built an elegant house on Jamaica Plain, which was confiscated during the Revolutionary War, he having adhered to the Royal cause. This house is still standing, and is owned by the Greenough family.

Being one of the King's Mandamus Counsellors, he was closely watched by the people. About the time of the battle of Lexing ton, he mounted his horse one morning at Jamaica Plain, and pistol in hand rode to Boston, on the way only stopping to answer an old friend, who asked, "Are you going, Commodore?" "Yes," he replied, "I have always eaten the King's bread, and I always mean to." He received a pension from the crown, and died in England, as did also his wife, at the age of eighty.

CHILDREN, FIFTH GENERATION.

- I. HANNAH LORING, married Joshua Winslow, a Boston Tory, and removed to Halifax at the evacuation of Boston. In 1777, when her nephew, Dr. Samuel Curtis, was brought prisoner to Halifax, he wrote to Mrs. Winslow asking for aid in his distressed condition, but she returned no answer, nor did she visit him.
- II. JOSHUA LORING, JR., was Deputy Commissary of American Prisoners in New York, and lived there in great splendor. Was the intimate friend of General Howe, the British Commander in Chief, and was detested by the Americans for his cruelty to them. He married Miss Lloyd, of Boston, in 1769.
- III. BENJAMIN LORING, Harvard College 1772, was a Surgeon in the British army, and died in South Carolina.
- IV. JOSEPH LORING, was an officer in the British navy.
- V. JOHN LORING, was a midshipman in the British navy at the age of fourteen; he was captured early in the war, and there being no place for prisoners of war, was sent to Concord jail. His uncle, Obadiah Curtis, being a well known patriot, was able to procure the transfer of his nephew to the house of Colonel Buckminster, at Framingham, but the boy was so insolent to the neighbors, calling them "rascally rebels," and other bad names, that his kind host was in danger of having his house pulled down, though himself a good patriot. John Loring was exchanged in 1776, and is probably the same man who in 1798, as Captain Loring, in the Carnatic, 74, near Havana, took five men out of the United States Sloop-of-War Baltimore, 20, under the pretence that they were Englishmen. Captain Phillips, of the Baltimore, surrendered his ship to an overpowering force, three 74 gun ships and two frigates, but was dismissed from our service on the ground that he ought to have resisted. This conduct of Capt. Loring was characteristic of his family, who seem to have been very bitter against their countrymen. A similar outrage, a few years later, led to war between England and the United States.

46. JOSEPH CURTIS, son of Samuel, born 1722, lived on his father's place at Jamaica Plain, having bought out the other heirs. He is said to have been the first who sent vegetables to Boston in a waggon, a horse and panniers having been previously used for that purpose. In 1771, he married Catherine Parker (born 1735), who kept a shop of British goods in Boylston street. After the battle of Lexington, Mr. Curtis opened his house and gave quarters to a company of one hundred men from Farmington, Conn., reserving for his own family only his wife's shop, and one chamber. This company was composed of young men of good station, and during the three months that they occupied the house of Mr. Curtis, the most perfect discipline was preserved. There were frequent alarms that the British were coming out from Boston, and one night being suddenly called to arms, every man brought his watch and purse and deposited them with Mrs. Curtis. "Why, what shall I do with them?" she asked. "If we come back," they replied, "we shall know our own; and if we never return, we would rather you should have them than the British." Joseph Curtis died January 28, 1792, aged 70. Mrs. Curtis died June 16, 1802, aged 67.

CHILDREN, FIFTH GENERATION.

IV. Infant, d. young.		88
V. KATHERINE,	b. 1797.	89

47. BENJAMIN CURTIS, son of Samuel, twin brother of Joseph; married Abigail Bridge, October 17, 1751. He died February 3, 1773. Wife died July 16, 1773.

CHILDREN, FIFTH GENERATION.

I. BENJAMIN,	b. Sept. 16, 1752.	90
II. JOHN,	b. Jan. 15, 1754.	91
III. ABIGAIL,	b. Sept. 4, 1755; d. young.	92

V. SAMUEL,	b. April 28, 1761.	94
VI. THOMAS,	b. March 11, 1763; d. young.	95

48. OBADIAH CURTIS, son of Samuel, born on Jamaica Plain, 1724. He married, first, Miss Crafts, of Brookline, who died within the year. Second wife, Martha, daughter of Joseph Buckminster, of Framingham, December 28, 1751. She was born in 1726. He was a wheelwright by trade, and settled in Boston after his second marriage, and his wife opened a store at the corner of Rawson's lane (now Bromfield street) and Newbury street, for the sale of British goods, and accumulated a handsome estate. Mr. Curtis afterwards purchased part of the farm in Newton, belonging to his grandson, Samuel Clarke, where he and his wife passed the remainder of their days. They went to Newton about 1807.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis were staunch patriots, and he was said to have been one of the "tea party" in 1773. His nephew Philip Curtis was apprenticed to his uncle, and he used to relate that on that memorable 5th of November, he followed the crowd, among whom was his uncle, to Mr. Hancock's house, where they assumed their disguises; that he followed his uncle and the crowd to the wharf, where he saw them board the ship and destroy the tea.

When the expedition against Canada was fitted out under Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis loaned their specie to the Colony, and took their pay in Continental paper. Mr. Curtis became so obnoxious to the British authorities, that he was obliged to remove with his family to Providence, where he remained till after the evacuation of Boston.

In a little work called "Adventures of Ebenezer Fox," published by Charles Fox, Boston, 1848, is the following notice of Obadiah Curtis.

"While at Providence in 1775, in the course of my perambulations, I went into the Market House, and while there, I saw a gentleman who was addressed by the name of Curtis. He was habited according to the fashion of gentlemen of those days; a three-cornered hat, a club wig, a long coat of ample dimensions that appeared to have been made with reference to future growth, breeches with large buckles, and shoes fastened in the same manner, completed his dress. I was induced to make inquiries respecting him, and found that his christian name was Obadiah, and that he had lately removed from Boston to Providence."

Mrs. Curtis, with other shop-keepers of Boston, before the Revolution, entered into an agreement not to buy goods of certain Tory merchants of the town. Some of the shop-keepers were supposed to have violated the agreement, and Mrs. Curtis published an indignant denial that she had done so. The following is from the Massachusetts Gazette and Boston Weekly News Letter, of Thursday, May 24th, 1770:—

"MR. DRAPER,

"Please insert the following:

"If the piece in Messrs. Edes & Gill's paper of the 21st inst., called 'A Hint to the Wise,' had one Lisp of Truth, it might have been kindly taken, but I do declare it is a groundless, malicious Falsehood, and I challenge the Author to produce one person to say that I have visited the McMasters, or have any dealings or connection with them.

MARTHA CURTIS."

It is said that during the war, pins (which were made in England solely at that period) became so scarce that most women had to use thorns to fasten their dresses. Mrs. Curtis held the whole stock of pins in Boston, and obtained great profits upon them.

Mrs. Curtis died January 11, 1811, aged 85 years.

Obadiah Curtis died November 8, 1811, aged 87.

BUCKMINSTER FAMILY.

1. THOMAS BUCKMINSTER, or BUCKMASTER, which was the original name, being taken from the office of keeper of the King's Deer, came from Wales to America in 1640.

2. JOSEPH BUCKMINSTER lived in Roxbury in 1648, on the place since occupied by his descendant, Mrs. Thomas Lee.

3. JOSEPH BUCKMINSTER, 2d, Framingham in 1693, married, for second wife, Martha Dall, of Boston.

4. JOSEPH BUCKMINSTER, 3d, Framingham 1719, married Sarah Lawson, and had:

I. JOSEPH, Harvard College 1739.

II. MARTHA, b. 1726; m. Obadiah Curtis, 1752.

She died December 24, 1774, and her two children the same year. Dr. Curtis, in 1777, went as surgeon in the privateer Boston, Capt. Manley. In their first cruise they were captured by the British Frigate Rainbow, and sent into Halifax, where they were prisoners six months; they were then sent to New York to be put in the Jersey Prison Ship, but they rose on the crew during the voyage, took the vessel and brought her into Salem. In Halifax, when landing, Dr. Curtis saw his aunt Winslow, who lived there, but she took no notice of him, and when he wrote to her for assistance, she did not reply to his letter.

Dr. Curtis married, for 2d wife, Abigail Whitney, of Weston, March 5, 1778. He received a pension in the latter part of his life, and died at Amherst, N. H., April 1, 1822.
