PREFATORY.

The object of the following pages is to present, in a condensed form, a Record of the CAVERNO FAMILY, in its several branches, from the immigration to this country of its progenitor, Arthur Caverno, down to the present time. How far the author has succeeded in this design, must be left to the judgment of those who are equally interested with him in it.

It is not the object of the author to write the history of the family : this would require more time and material than he is able to command at present. But it is hoped that, should such a history ever be called for, a good beginning will be found in the present effort.

That mistakes and deficiencies will be found in this summary, is altogether probable. They could hardly be avoided, considering the way and manner of obtaining the statistics herein contained. The author has done what he could to make the record complete, though, in some instances, as will be seen, he has failed to reach the necessary data. He asks that families and individuals who find defects in their record will take an early opportunity to inform him by letter of the same, so that should another edition of the pamphlet be called for, or the history of the family be written, these defects may be remedied.

The author acknowledges with special favor the assistance which he has received from several individuals who feel an interest in the undertaking, and have contributed to the preparation of the work.

That many now living, whose names are here recorded, will never see or be seen by the author in this life, is altogether probable. But should he be so happy as to meet all his dear relatives with the blood-ransomed throng whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life, his joy will be full. Such, dear friends and relatives, shall be the prayer of your unworthy servant to the end of life.

THE AUTHOR.

RECORD.

TRADITION says that Arthur Caverno (sometimes written Cavano, Kavanaugh, &c.,) from whom originated the Caverno family in this country, was born of Scotch Irish descent, in the north of Ireland, early in the 18th century, supposed about 1718, and immigrated to this country about 1735, or between that time and 1740. It does not appear that he was accompanied by any of his relatives. Subsequently to his arrival here, he worked as a ship carpenter in Boston.

Fanny Potts, who became his wife, was also born in Ireland about 1720. She was the daughter of Thomas Potts, a surveyor of lumber on the Cork river. Having lost his wife, the mother of Fanny, he married again, but unhappily, it seems, as they soon parted, and he came with young Fanny to this country about the time that young Caverno did. He had three sons, namely, Thomas, Henry and John, who were sea-captains, and who found homes in Boston.

There are two versions of the story relating to the marriage of said Arthur and Fanny. One is, that they met at a well in Boston, where they went to get water, and that there they saw each other for the first time. There an acquaintance was formed which subsequently ripened into courtship and marriage.

The other version is, that Arthur paid attention to a young lady in Boston who was an associate of young Fanny, and who had been courted by a young man of sea-faring life, but who was supposed to be dead, as nothing had been heard from him for a long time. The young man, however, returned. The young lady, feeling a preference for her former suitor, went to Fanny and prevailed on her to go to the ship-yard where Arthur was at work, and inform him that he need not call again, as her former "beau" had returned. "Very well," replied Arthur, "then I will take her spokesman." Fanny blushed, and retired. The reply, however, was a success. They were married in Boston in 1741.

After their marriage they moved to Newfoundland, where John Caverno was born. Here Arthur followed fishing, while Fanny, being an "expert" with the needle, was employed in repairing fishermen's garments. They did not, however, remain there more than a year or two, but returned to New England. Mr. Potts, the father of Fanny, having married a widowed lady in Lee, N. H., and settled there, Arthur and Fanny, with their infant son, came and dwelt with them. Several other children were born unto them there, most of whom died of throat-distemper.

When John Caverno became of age, he married Sarah, eldest daughter of Jeremiah Tebbets of Barrington, N. H. They lived in Lee for a while, then moved back to Sarah's father's, in Barrington, where they spent several years. Here Molly Caverno and Jeremiah her brother were born. Having purchased a tract of land in the westerly part of Barrington, near Northwood line, in a section of the town long known as Canaan, and having erected their little cabin there, they moved into it "without door or window." All was a wilderness around; but, by the vigorous efforts of father and son, the land was gradually cleared and brought into a state of cultivation. The farm thus prepared has always since been known as the homestead of the Caverno family.

In the mean time, Eleanor, daughter of Arthur Caverno and sister to John, married a man by the name of Michael Runnels, who bought a tract of land adjoining that of John Caverno, afterwards known as the Jonathan Dame place. Here Runnels and wife lived and died.

Subsequently to the settlement of John Caverno in Canaan, Arthur, his father, moved from Lee, and settled on a lot of land since known as the Libbey place, adjoining the Runnels' farm. Here Arthur and Fanny lived for some time; but, on becoming aged, an arrangement was made for them to live with their son John, with whom they spent the residue of life. Arthur died in 1795; and Fanny in 1797. Both lie buried on the Canaan homestead.

Besides John and Eleanor Caverno, there was a daughter of said Arthur and Fanny whose name was Molly, born in 1744. She lived with her uncle, Thomas Potts, in Boston, where she died of consumption in 1764. There was another daughter whose name and the time of whose birth are unknown. She married a Williams of Canterbury. Another daughter's name was Betsey, but nothing farther is known of her.

The record of John and Sarah Caverno's family stands thus :

John Caverno,—b. 1742; d. May 29, 1806.

Sarah his wife,—b. 1746; d. July 19, 1833.
