PREFACE.

MORE than ten years since, Rev. Robert C. Learned, whose mother was a Coit, commenced making collections of Family Records, with a view to publishing a History and Pedigree of the Coit Family at some future day. Having made extensive collections, he died in 1867, leaving the work uncompleted. The work was suspended for about three years, when Mr. Samuel Coit employed the compiler to prepare a full history and genealogy of the family. Accordingly a circular was addressed to every member of the family whose residence could be ascertained, requesting full records of his or her particular branch, and a general response was given. The papers of Rev. Mr. Learned were passed into the hands of the subscriber. The whole has been re-written; the collections greatly extended, especially those in the female line. In the prosecution of this work the author has written many hundreds of letters; also visited the offices of Town Clerks and Judges of Probate, searched burial grounds, visited numerous families, and made as thorough a search as practicable to include all of the race in the country. The largest libraries of New York, Boston, New Haven, and Worcester have been examined, particularly to learn from what locality in the old country the ancestor, John Coit, emigrated. The task of collecting materials for this memorial has of course been laborious, beyond what any one can realize who has not been engaged in similar labors.

The compiler assures the numerous living descendants of John Coit that he has spared no pains to make a perfect record. Perfect accuracy in such a work, however, is simply impossible. Great difficulty has often been encountered in deciphering old records and inscriptions, and in reading some of the letters received from aged persons and others unaccustomed to epistolary correspondence.

The biographical sketches in this work are derived from a variety of sources. Some of them were left in the handwriting of Mr. Learned; of course the compiler has no means of knowing by whom they were prepared. Some of them have been forwarded by classmates and contemporaries of the persons named. Some are comparatively full; some will be found meagre in detail; some have been spun out to a length that the limits of the work have required to be considerably condensed. They bear a proportion to the information placed at the author's disposal. Some of them have been found in other family histories already published.* Some are more complete than the immediate relatives were able to prepare. No important facts have been intentionally omitted, while it may be found in some cases that all the facts that should have been recorded have not been communicated to the writer.

Often, too, where in the absence of Family Records different members of the same family have sent records according to their memories, they have disagreed widely in their dates of births, marriages, and deaths of the same individuals. In some instances no dates could be found, in which case only an approximation to accuracy has been attempted. It is extremely difficult to avoid mistakes in printing a work containing so many figures, even when the copy is complete.

With few exceptions, we think it will be found that a full and exact record is given. There are of course many of the younger generations now on the stage who have been born during the last few years, since the preparation of the work, which are not included, and many may have deceased since the last intelligence received. The special thanks of the compiler are hereby tendered to those members of the family who have aided him in his researches.

As the work will probably fall into the hands of some persons not extensively versed in genealogies, the author has endeavored to make it as free from intricacies as possible. The descendants of each child of the first settler are distinctly traced according to their generations, and are all numbered from the beginning. The marginal numbers give each descendant his place in the order of descent, while the head numbers in the middle of the page, corresponding to those in the margin, give the marriage of such as have entered the family relation, and as far as possible the names of their partners, with the dates of their marriage and decease. A full index of the baptismal names of those whose surname is Coit is furnished, the number of the individual being opposite to the Christian name on the left, and the date of birth on the right ; also an index of the descendants bearing other names than that of Coit, with numbers and dates to correspond, and a list of those who have married into the Coit Family, with the number of their respective partners on the left and date of marriage on the right. In fine, the work is sent forth with the hope that it will be acceptable to the numerous living members of the family, and that it may stimulate the present and future generations to emulate the piety, the love of civil and religious liberty, and that devotion to the welfare of all, which characterized the earlier families of those bearing the name of Coit.

THE EARLY HOME OF THE COITS IN THE OLD COUNTRY.

IN Grove's Antiquities of England and Wales, Vol. 7, page 76, is a description of Coity castle (spelled also Coite). In the description of Glamorganshire is the following :

“The exact time when this castle was first erected seems uncertain, though, in all likelihood it was built about the year 1091, by Payanus de Tuberville, one of the twelve Norman Knights who under Robert Fitzhamon seized the Lordship of Glamorgan. That event is, in substance, thus related in Powell's History of Wales:”—

In the fourth year of the reign of William Rufus, one Eineon, who had, unsuccessfully, rebelled against Rhys ap Teudor, Prince of South Wales, took shelter with Jestin ap Gurgant, Lord of Glamorganshire, then at war with that prince, who proving too strong for him, Eineon undertook, on certain conditions (one of which was that Jestin should give him his daughter in marriage), to procure him assistance from the Normans. Articles being agreed on, he set out for England the beginning of the following year, returned with a considerable body of men under Robert Fitzhamon and twelve other Knights, who cruelly ravaged the country, and after an obstinate engagement, vanquished and slew Prince Rhys ap Teudor in a battle near Breck Nock.

Jestin being thus victorious by the assistance of the Normans, refused to fulfil his engagements to Eineon, who being justly incensed thereat, persuaded the Normans to seize on the country. The fertility and beauty of the spot made few arguments necessary; they easily conquered Jestin, and as some say, slew him, after which they made themselves masters of the whole Lordship of Glamorgan, the most pleasant and fertile parts of which they divided among themselves, leaving the mountainous and rocky grounds to Eineon. In this division the Lordship of Coity, with its appendages, fell to Sir Paine or Payanus de Tuberville.

Stowe says of the Knights who attended Robert Fitzhamon, "To that building there (i. e. in Glamorganshire), they added certain castles, and joining their power together, they defended their farms and lordships which they had taken and possessed." This seems to give a probability to the above supposed date and builder of the castle. The lordship of Coity castle remained in the family of the Tubervilles for many generations; till for want of male issue Sir Richard Tuberville bequeathed it to the heirs male of Sir Roger Beckefolles, Knight, from whom, in like default, it fell to Sir William Gamage, Knight, in whose family it was when Leland wrote his Itinerary. 'The castle of Coite,' says he, 'standeth on a playne ground a mile by north est from Penbout, a good market town standing on Ogor. Coite Castelle is also half a mile from the West Ripe of Wamey and a mile from the East Ripe of Ogor. This castle is maintained and some say it 'longged ons' to Payne, called from his ruffeling there Diable; now Gamage is Lord of it and it is his principal house.' Sir Robert Sidney, created Earl Leicester, sixteenth of James the First, marrying Barbara, daughter of John Gamage, Esq., Lord of Coity, had with her that castle and other great estates in Wales. In one of the rooms at Penhurst Place in Kent, the noble old seat of the Sidneys, is a large ancient picture painted on wood, representing that lady Bárbara in the dress of the times ; about her stand eleven children, three sons and eight daughters, each having their name and additions written under them. Likewise in the Park, at the same place, between a large piece of water called Laeg Cupwell and the lawn fronting the house, is a clump of trees having one in the centre and the others round it. These are said to represent Barbara Gamage and her eleven children. The clump is to this day called Gamage's Bower. The castle lately belonged to the Edwins."

In Pennant's Tour in Wales, vol. 2, page 300: "In my return from this southern ride I called at Coytmore, or more properly Coed Mawr, seated in the midst of lofty trees, every now and then opening so as to admit sight of the exalted mountains and rocks soaring above with misty tops."

COIT FAMILY.

FIRST GENERATION.

JOHN Coit, the first of the name in America, came over, probably, from Glamorganshire, Wales, between 1630 and 1638. He was in Salem, Mass., where he had a grant of land, in 1638. He removed in 1644 to Gloucester, where he was selectman in 1648, and his son John's name also appears there, on the records, at the same time. John Coit senior had his residence at the end of the neck of house-lots now called Wheeler's Point, where, and on Planter's neck, he had considerable land. He was admitted freeman in 1647 and selectman in 1648. He received a grant of land in New London, Ct., in 1650. The records of that town say: "On the 19th of October, 1650, grants were made to Mr. Blynman, Obadiah Bruen, Hugh Caukin, Hugh Roberts, John Coite, Andrew Lester, James Averey, Robert Isbell." These were all from Gloucester, Mass., situated upon the peninsula of Cape Ann, and hence the section in New London where lots were assigned them was called "Cape Ann's Lane."

Mr. Coite exchanged with Mr. Welman on Close Cove, probably at its head, on Harbor's Mouth Road, he being by occupation a ship's carpenter, and desirous, on that account, of locating near the water, where he could be accommodated with a building yard. In 1653 a series of farms was laid out in that part of the town now called Ledyard, one of which was assigned to Coite. In "1661 grants were made of small portions at the water side, next south of the Fort land, to John Culver, Wm. Douglass and Joshua Raymond. The remainder of the bank, with the exception of a building yard granted to John Coite, in 1699, was left common until the next century."

He married Mary Ganners or Jenners in England, where all his children were born previous to his emigration to America. "Mr. John Coit died (vide Miss Calkins' history of New London, page 275) Aug. 29, 1659. Mrs. Mary Coit died Jan'y 2, 1676, aged eighty. This may be regarded as, almost, a solitary instance of protracted widowhood for that day—our ancestors, at whatever age bereaved, having been much addicted to second and even third and fourth marriages. If the age of Mr. Coit equaled that of his wife, they were more advanced in years than most of the early settlers of the town; a couple to be ranked with Jonathan Brewster and wife and Walter Harris and wife—for whose birth we look back into the shadow of the sixteenth century. The will of John Coit, Aug. 1, 1659, (vide Appendix, note A) provides for his son Joseph and two daughters, Mary and Martha; but he refers to four other children, two sons and two daughters, absent from him, and leaves them a trifling legacy, "if they be living." Of these four absent children none appear on the records of New London or Gloucester, except John, who came to New London with his father in 1651, and had an house lot laid out to him, but soon returned to Gloucester, where he fixed his residence, probably, on the land owned there by his father, when he left there for Connecticut. The other three children had undoubtedly been left in England, and not improbably were the eldest and settled in life before their parents' emigration. Of the seven children, we have the names of but four.

THIRD GENERATION.

JOHN Coit, son of John and Mary Jenners Coit, born in England, came to this country with his parents. He was settled in Gloucester, Mass., near his father, and remained there when his father removed to New London; although it would seem that he contemplated a like removal, as the records of New London say, under date of March 18th, 1650-51: "John Coite, the younger, hath given him, by the townsmen of Pequot, one acre of meadow lying in the length by William Wellman towards the West, and Will Meade's towards the east, laid out by the measurers in Quaquaupauxet." Babson supposes him to have died before Oct. 3, 1667, because at that date a widow Mary Coite married John Fitch in Gloucester.

John Coit married *Mary Stevens, daughter of William Stevens, "a ship-builder of high repute," May 21, 1652.

JOSEPH Coit, son of John and Mary Jenners Coit, born —, was, probably, one of the younger children of his parents, and born (perhaps) in Salem, probably came with his father from Gloucester to New London about 1651, and spent the remainder of his life there, carrying on the trade of ship-building with his brother-in-law, Hugh Mould. One of their first works was "the ship New London, of seventy tons," built for Charles Hill, of London, and Christopher Christophers of New London, and delivered June 25, 1666. In 1668, they built for the same parties the barque Regard, and in 1672 the sloop Charles of 20 tons. Between 1666 and 1674, they constructed for Thomas Beeby, William Keeny and Matthew Beckwith the barques Speedwell, Hopewell and Endeavor, ranging from 12 to 20 tons, and in value from 50 to 82 pounds sterling. Their largest vessel, The John and Hester, is stated at 90 to 100 tons. The last one

*Note by Rev. Robert C. Learned: "In regard to the descendants of this woman a singular fact is noted in a communication to a Boston paper of Feb. 2, 1756, as follows:

'Gloucester, Jan. 6, 1756. This day a child was born that has ten grandfathers and grandmothers, all living, and this child makes a fifth generation, and the first born of every generation was a daughter, and every one of the children's names was Mary, and they are all of them now living.'

Babson, in his history of Gloucester, says these Marys must have been—
 (1.) Mary the infant daughter of Daniel and Mary (Matchett) Ellery, born 1756.
 (2.) Mary (Matchett) Ellery, b. 1734. (3.) Mary (Ingersol) Matchett, b. 1713.
 (4.) Mary (Stevens) Ingersol, b. 1694. (5.) Mary (Ellery) Stevens, b. 1677.
 The mother of the last was Mary, the second born (1655) of John and Mary Stevens Coit.

that can be named is the Edward and Margaret, built in 1681 for Edward Stallion. In 1689, the New London brought from Europe "two large brass bells with wheels, one of which was suspended in the turret of the meeting-house and was the first bell that ever vibrated in Eastern Connecticut." In 1667 Hugh Mould and Joseph Coit were freed, by the county court, from common training. Mr. Coit was elected constable, July 24, 1665, and 1683 was on town committee to procure a minister. He married Martha Harris of Wethersfield, daughter of William and Edith Harris, July 15, 1667. He and his wife were added to the church, April 3, 1681, and he is mentioned as deacon in the church records in 1683, together with William Hough. His colleague soon died, and he seems to have officiated alone for ten years. He died March 27, 1704, and his wife died July 14, 1710. Nearly, if not all of the Coits of America, are descended from him. His estate was valued at £312 17s. 4d., and was divided between the widow, Martha, John who received a double portion, Joseph, the heirs of William deceased, and Solomon. (For settlement of his estate, see Appendix, note B.)

NATHANAEL Coit, son and fourth child of John and Mary Stevens Coit, was born at Gloucester, April 13, 1659, and there spent his life. In 1698 he was living with Henry Walker, who, dying in that year childless, left the bulk of his property, appraised at £922 10s., to him. This being a very large estate, it made its possessor a man of influence. He was on committee for procuring a minister, was selectman for six years; representative of the town in 1714, 1718, and 1719. His residence was near the head of Little River. In 1704, he was complained of, to the General Court, for not keeping open the cut made by Rev. Mr. Blynman (then in Coit's possession) between the waters of Massachusetts and Ipswich Bays. He re-opened it, being allowed a tax or toll on vessels passing through it, but it was closed again by a great storm in 1723. He bore the title of "Captain," but whether from service in the militia or on the sea is not known. His death, Jan. 10, 1743, was without previous indisposition, and at the ripe age of 84. The name of Coit has not since been perpetuated in the town of Gloucester, although descendants, through his daughters, are numerous. He was thrice married: 1. To Elisabeth Davies, Feb. 16, 1687, who died Feb. 11, 1700. 2. To Abigail Stevens, Feb. 17, 1702, who died Jan. 8, 1710. 3. To widow Hannah Sargent, Nov. 30, 1711.

JOHN Coit, the oldest child of Deacon Joseph and Martha Harris Coit, was born in New London, Dec. 1, 1670, and spent a long life there (as it would appear), in the pursuit of his father's business of ship-building. For this purpose, the town granted him, in 1699, a place for a new ship-yard near the Point of Rocks, where, in 1729, he built a wharf. This is the same locality on Bank Street, occupied of late years by Benjamin Brown and sons, by whose improvements the appearance of the place has been very much changed. Mr. Coit was re.

*He was living in Marblehead in 1715. In 1716 he calls himself heir of John Fitch, and in 1719, still of that place, he is called merchant and schoolmaster. He may have removed to Boston before 1743, when Nathanael, Job, Joseph, and other grandchildren of Nathanael Coit of Gloucester were living there. There is no evidence that he was married and left descendants.

(For the settlement of his estate see Appendix, note C.) He married Mehetabel Chandler, daughter of John and Elisabeth Chandler of Woodstock, June 25, 1693, who survived him, dying Nov. 1758, at the age of 86.

Rev. JOSEPH Coit, second child of Deacon Joseph and Martha Harris Coit, born in New London, April 4, 1673, was graduated at Harvard College in 1697, and was admitted to a Master's degree at the first commencement, in Yale College, in 1702. He preached in Norwich in the latter part of 1698, and was invited to settle there ; but gave an answer that was thus reported to the town meeting : " Mr. Coit doth expressly declare his disagreement from Norwich church, and, consequently, he cannot walk with them, for how can two walk together except they be agreed ? But he that, in matters controversial, doth set up his own opinion in opposition to the Synod Book, and a cloud of witnesses, will be in great danger to wander from the way of peace and truth."

Mr. Coit soon after went to the new town of Plainfield, where he continued to preach most of the time for five years, when he received and accepted a formal call to settle as Pastor.

The following extracts from the Town Records, are given as showing the reasons for the long space between the time of his first preaching at Plainfield and his final settlement:

"May 31, 1699. At a town meeting legally warned, it was then voted that Jacob Warner, William Johnson, and Samuel Cleveland should treat with Mr. Coit, to continue with us three-quarters of a year longer, or for some shorter time, if he do not see cause to continue with us so long. Also it is voted that the above said committee shall tender Mr. Coit twelve pounds for each quarter of a year, two-thirds of it to be in money, and the other third in provision paye as money, and, in like manner, for the three quarters of a year, if he see cause to continue so long among us."

"The committee above said, that were appointed to treat with Mr. Coit, have been with him and have made the proposal, as they were ordered by the town, and their return is that he doth not incline to engage for three quarters of a year now, as things are circumstanced, with us, but he doth not know but he may abide one quarter of a year with us, upon such terms as have been expressed, to wit, twelve pounds for the quarter, two thirds of it to be in silver money and the other third in provision paye, as money."

June 12, 1699, the town voted to give him "for his encouragement ten pounds in money to officiate in the work of the ministry one quarter of a year, he paying or allowing out of it for his board," to which proposal this was the reply; "He does not see cause to continue for any certain time, but if he does stay here, he desires that the town would provide as convenient a place as may be, for his board, and defray the charge of it, and the remaining part to be returned to him according to the time he do stay here."

"Sep. 5, 1699. At a Town Meeting, legally warned, it was then voted, that we should still endeavor to have the gospel preached among us." "The same day it was voated that we should endeavor to get the Rev^d Mr. Coit to remain another quarter of a year with us for that end." "The same day it was voted that the same persons that did formerly treat with him should now treat with him for that end: that Mr. Coit might continue another quarter of a year with us, the persons that were appointed a committee for that work were Stephen Hall, Nathanael Jewell, Joseph Spald, and Thomas Williams." "The same day it was voated that the raising of the rate that shall be made for another quarter of a year preaching here, by Mr. Coit, it shall be first seen by an indeavor what those that are in an improvement, and pretend to an interest in the plantation, are willing to contribute towards carrying on the publick worship of God here, in this plantation, and then to make the rate accordingly upon alotments as have been of late."

Possibly Mr. Coit may have hesitated about staying in Plainfield, because of proposals made to him from Gloucester, Mass., where (in 1701) he was finally chosen pastor. But although messengers were finally appointed to wait on him (one of whom was his cousin, Nathanael Coit), yet, in consequence of division of sentiment among the people, the project fell to the ground.

Returning, therefore, to Plainfield, Mr. Coit preached there for a while longer.

On Jan. 21, 1703, "then at a town meeting, legally warned, it was voted and desired that the Rev. Mr. Coit might, would he, be the settled minister here in the town, to officiate in the work of the ministry according to the order of the gospel." "Voted to give the Rev. Mr. Coit for his incouragement to settle here and to be the constant minister here, offitiating in the work of the ministry, a lot over Moosup River and fourscore pounds to carry on his building and other concerns as to the settlement. Also for Mr. Coit's further encouragement to give him at present, as a constant salary, 40 pounds a year as money, and when better able, to give more. Voted that Benjamin Palmer, Joseph Spalden and William Johnson are appointed a committee to treat with Mr. Coit, in the aforesaid concern and receive his answer. The committee have been with Mr. Coit and made the town's tender to him, and his answer is that he do accept the lot over Moosup River and the eighty pounds, provided it be in any good way that is passable, and also provided he can procure a settlement elsewhere that may suit him, which if he can't and do stay here the town must seek some other way, and he do also accept that his salary be forty pounds a year, as voted, only he desire some of it shall be in money."

"Oct. 25, 1708. At a town meeting legally warned it was then voted that the present rate makers do, speedily, make a rate for Mr. Coit as was voted for his salary, which was forty pound; ten of it to be in money and the rest as money."

Oct. 19, 1704, the town "voted a call to Mr. Coit to settle as pastor, and to request Rev^d Mr. James Noyes [of Stonington], Rev. Mr. Saltingstall of New London, and Rev^d Mr. Treat of Preston, to be helpful to the town in carrying on a day of humiliation."

Dec. 25, 1704. "Voted that next Wednesday, come seven night, be the day of ordination, and that the select men send to the elders and messengers at the town charge." No record remains of the ordination, nor of the long ministry that followed the 7th of January, 1705, on which day it would seem that the church was organized as well as the Pastor ordained. In January, 1728-4, the town "sent some to discourse about the uneasiness of the people," but still the Pastor held on his way, and his salary was increased by additions of £10 at a time until in 1726 it stood at £80, and in 1732 at £90. At length, after more than 43 years, a council having been assembled on the 6th of March, 1748, for the ordination of Mr. David S. Rowland to the Pastorate, Mr. Coit "appeared before the counsel and desired a dismissal, by reason of his advanced age and some other reasons, all which so influenced y^e counsels' judgement that according to his desire y^e people consent they dismissed him."

He continued to reside in Plainfield until his death, July 1, 1750, aged 77.—For the settlement of his estate, see his will in Appendix, note D.

In the latter part of his ministry, some disaffection had arisen, probably growing out of the separatist movement which then distracted many of the churches. A suit was threatened by Mr. Coit in 1748, for arrearages of salary.

In 1749 he was fourfolded by the officers of the town, for not giving an account of his property, whereupon he obtained from the General Assembly an order "that he have his lists released, and all rates and taxes thereon, and that his estate be free from taxes during his life."

His property at death was considerable, and included one male negro servant and two females. Twenty years after his death, a Plainfield correspondent of Dr. Trumbull, the historian, described him as an ornament to his profession, not only a preacher of the gospel of peace, but a zealous promoter of peace among his hearers and others, so that even those who in the latter part of his ministry were disaffected with his preaching, never seemed to have any personal prejudice against him."

Traditions report that Mr. Coit used to pray with great simplicity "that his descendants might be the children of God as long as the grass should grow and the brooks should run,"—a prayer that seems to have been answered in respect to a large proportion of his descendants to the present time. It may be noted that, in the settlement of his father's estate, Mr. Joseph Coit of Plainfield allows £20 in consideration of the amount before received.

He married Experience Wheeler, daughter of Isaac Wheeler of Stonington, Sept. 18th, 1705, by whom he had ten children. Mrs. Experience Coit died Jan. 8, 1759, aged 75. She lies by her husband's side in the old burial place of Plainfield.

SOLOMON Coit, fifth child of Deacon Joseph and Martha Harris Coit, was born in New London in 1697, and, probably, spent his whole life there. The date of his decease is not known, but administration on his estate was granted to his son, Nov. 6, 1758. He was a man of some note in town, which he represented in the General Assembly, in 1724; and was repeatedly appointed on committees, with regard to the defense of the town against threatened French invasion. In 1725 he was chosen to "keep the town magazine in the garret of the court-house, gratis." He was also one of the committee of the town to petition the King for aid against a feared invasion of the French in 1744.

What was his regular business is not known; but, in 1735, he represented to the General Assembly, that he was the only person in the colony who had works for distilling molasses. Mr. Coit's house was on Main Street, nearly opposite the foot of Church Street, and a brook running through his garden to the river was known as "Solomon's Brook." He and his wife Mary were received to the church by Mr. Adams, Nov. 18, 1704, and his wife Margaret, July 12, 1741.

He was four times married. 1. To Mary Stevens, Dec. 24, 1706, who died July 7, 1718, and lies in the old cemetery, New London. 2. To Elisabeth Short, widow of Thomas Short, the first printer in Connecticut, Aug. 8, 1714, who died March 25, 1715, and lies in the Old ground. 3. To Abigail Cary, Nov. 16, 1715. 4. To Margaret —. He probably died in the year 1758. For the settlement of his estate, see Appendix, note E.

JOHN Coit, son of John and Mehetabel Chandler Coit, was born in New London, May 25, 1696, and settled there as a ship-builder, pursuing this ancestral occupation at his father's stand in Bank Street as late as 1735, when Miss Calkins says that " ' The New Snow, ' built by him for Benjamin and Isaac Ledyard, Capt. Broadhurst of Great Britain, commander, burthen about 120 tons, ready to sail, took fire, no man being on board, and burned down to the bottom, and consumed all the masts, rigging, and sails, and loading, except some small matters in the bottom and heavy timber, and drove ashore on Douglas Beach. It is supposed to be wilfully done by the Captain, he having sent the men on shore in the day-time, to help raise the top of the steeple of the church. 'They were all scattered abroad, some in one place and some in another. They suspect the Captain to be guilty, and have put him in prison.' "

Mr. Coit was received to the church in 1757. In 1758 he was Town Clerk. In 1750, he deeded lands to his sons Samuel and Joseph, and in 1760 to Joseph Chew, about which time he is supposed to have removed from New London. He renewed his baptismal covenant with the First church, in New London, and had all his children baptized there, but does not appear as a communicant.

He was twice married :—1. To Grace Christophers, July 2, 1719. She was born Nov. 14, 1698, and died Nov. 9, 1745. 2. To Hannah Potter, widow of Thomas Potter, of Newport, R. I., and daughter of Henry Gardner, June 20, 1748.

JOSEPH Coit, second child of John and Mehetabel Chandler Coit, was born Nov. 15, 1698, at New London, and there spent most of his days, sailing as a ship-master from that port, in early life, then occupying himself in mercantile and commercial pursuits, until the disturbances of Revolutionary times induced him to move to Norwich, where his son Daniel L. had recently built the house occupied latterly by his grandson, Daniel W. Coit, and died April 27, 1787, aged 88.

He was, in middle life, employed in matters of public interest; in 1744 at the head of a committee to petition the King in regard to the defense of New London; in 1761 one of the seven managers of a lottery granted by the General Assembly for the erection of a light-house; and in 1667 on town committee of fifteen with regard to the famous Boston Resolutions.

He was received to the Congregational Church in 1718, and left behind him a reputation for sincere piety. His sight failed him before his death, but his mind was still bright and active. He lies with his wife in the old cemetery near his Norwich home.

He was twice married:—1. To Mary Hunting, daughter of Rev. Nathanael Hunting of East Hampton, L. I., June, 1732, who died March 29, 1733. 2. To Lydia Lathrop of Norwich (b. 1718), Jan. 9, 1739–40, who survived him and died Jan. 10, 1794, in reputation for virtue and religion.

He died March 10, 1725, in his twenty-third year, and was buried in the old cemetery. Administration was taken on his estate, May 5, 1725, by his widow, and the sum of £145 2s. 9d. was afterward distributed to her and his only child. Nothing, particularly, is known of Mr. Coit's character. He was admitted to the Congregational church in 1719, and his widow in 1728.

She married Dr. Ebenezer Gray of Lebanon or Windham, Feb. 20, 1727-8, and had children by him. For settlement of his estate, see Appendix, note G.

COL. SAMUEL Coit, second child and oldest son of Rev. Joseph and Experience Wheeler Coit, born at Plainfield, Ct., in 1708, was twice married:—1. To Sarah Spalding of Plainfield, daughter of Benjamin Spalding, March 30, 1730. She died July 11, 1776, aged 65. 2. To Mrs. Jemima Hall, March 22, 1779. He settled in the North Society of Preston (now the town of Griswold), and there spent a long and honored life, dying Oct. 4, 1792, aged 84.

In military life he rose to the rank of Colonel, and, in 1758, had command of a regiment raised in the neighborhood of Norwich, which wintered at Fort Edward. He was also much employed in civil matters, representing Preston in the General Assembly in 1761, 1765, 1769, 1771, 1772, and 1778, and sitting as judge on the bench of the county court and of a maritime court, in the time of the Revolution.

In 1761 he was one of a committee appointed by the proprietors of Amherst Township, in Nova Scotia, and in 1774 was moderator of the town meeting on the Boston Port Bill, and one of the Preston "Committee of Correspondence." He was received into the church in Preston in 1742, and his wife Sarah in 1738.

The posterity of Col. Coit have been quite numerous, and, as they filled a large place in the town for one or two generations they have been distinguished from their New London cousins as "the Preston Coits." They have now entirely withdrawn from Preston and Griswold, but the graves of the past generations are numerous in the cemetery east of Griswold church.

JOSEPH Coit, third child of Rev. Joseph and Experience Wheeler Coit, born about 1711, settled in North Preston, now Griswold, and died there, as his gravestone informs us, July 21, 1741, aged 30. For settlement of his estate, see Appendix, note H. Administration on his estate was granted to the widow in the month of November following, and in the same month she was received to the Second Church in Preston and her children baptized. He is supposed to have married Mary Spalding, sister of his brother Samuel's first wife. The date of the marriage is not known. After the decease of Mr. Coit she married Gen. John Tyler, Dec. 14, 1742.

ISAAC Coit, fourth child of Rev. Joseph and Experience Wheeler Coit, was born in Plainfield, in 1714, and spent his life there, dying April 23, 1776, aged 62, and buried near his father. He held, for some time, the office of deacon of the church of which his father had been Pastor, and bore also the title of military Captain. He represented Plainfield in the General Assembly in 1772, 1773, and 1774, was moderator in 1774 of the town meeting about the Boston Port Bill, and one of "the Committee of Correspondence." Yet with the inconsistency of the times, we find him advertising in August, 1770, for his runaway negro, "Boston."

In his last will, he bequeathed £250 to the selectmen of the town for the maintenance of a Latin or Grammar School; a bequest that is believed to have much to do with the establishment of Plainfield Academy, chartered about 1784, an institution that, for many years, had an honorable fame in Eastern Connecticut, and which still holds this legacy of Mr. Coit's intact.

Mr. Coit was twice married:—1. To Ruth Spalding, who died May 15, 1772, aged 53. 2. To Elizabeth (Pratt) Webb, widow of Rev. Nathan Webb of Uxbridge, Mass., November, 1773, who married for the third time Rev. Isaac Jones of Western Massachusetts, Nov. 30, 1779.

Mr. Coit had no children.

DANIEL Coit, son of Rev. Joseph and Experience Wheeler Coit, born in 1723-4, married Tamasine Kimball, of Methuen, Mass., and settled in Plainfield, where he died, according to the town records, April 14, 1762. Letters of administration were granted to the widow, in the course of that year, and his real estate was valued at £640, consisting of an house and lot and 150 acres more. His grave-stone bears the following inscription:

"This stone stands here
To show the place
Where his dust lies
Not what he was
When saints arise
That day will show
The part he acted
Here below."

After his decease, Mrs. Tamazine Coit married Dr. Elisha Lord of Abington, Nov. 16, 1763, and died at Killingly, Dec. 12, 1812, aged 73. The mother of several noble women.

By her first husband she had

124. Experience, born about 1761 or 1762; died in Abington, Nov. 4, 1764, aged 3 years.

DANIEL Coit, the first and only child of William and Sarah Chandler Coit, that arrived at the age of maturity, was born in New London, in the year 1698, and spent his long life there with usefulness and honor. He was chosen Town Clerk in 1786, and was reelected annually until his death, except in 1757, when for one year he gave place to his cousin, John Coit. He was also appointed on important town committees, and held other trusts. "On the 28^d of Feb. 1778, he was attacked with a violent Cold, which brought on consumption, in which he languished until the 19th of July, when he expired without agony at about 2 o'clock in the morning." Such is the entry in the Town Records. The New London Gazette of July 23, 1778, contains the following:—"On the 19th Instant died of a lingering disorder, which he bore with Christian fortitude and resignation, Daniel Coit, Esq., aged 75 years, and on Tuesday, his remains were decently interred. He was a gentleman, distinguished for a long and uninterrupted course of publick usefulness, having for near fifty years been in the commission of the Peace, Town Clerk and Clerk of the County Court, besides sundry other publick offices, which he sustained; in the discharge of all which, he was remarkably diligent and faithful. In his judiciary proceedings, he was active, judicious and upright, and in his clerical conduct, he was assiduous, ready, correct, and expert. Of sound judgment, quick discernment and tender passions. Of undissembled piety and strictly just in all his dealings. He was humane and benevolent; and a certain tender sensibility was peculiarly apparent in all his conduct, where the passions were concerned, and his private character was no less amiable than his publick was useful; an affectionate husband, tender father, kind master, an agreeable companion and benevolent friend. Exemplary and happy in death. Oh may we die the death of the righteous, and our last end be like his!"

Among the records made by Mr. Coit are the birth dates of the following servants of his:—Flora, born 1760; Dinah, born 1762; Cato, born 1765; Zilpah, born 1768. His burial place is unknown, but is conjectured by Miss Calkins to be under a rough stone without a name in the old cemetery.

Mr. Coit was thrice married:—1. To Lydia Christophers, daughter of Richard Christophers of New London, May 9, 1721, who died Jan. 22, 1741. 2. To Mehtabel Hooker, daughter of Samuel Hooker of Farmington, Jan. 21, 1742, who died Nov. 17, 1768. 3. To Elisabeth Jeffrey Stow, daughter of Jonathan Stow of Groton, Dec. 16, 1764.

CAPT. NATHANAEL Coit, third child of Solomon and Mary Stevens Coit, born May 30, 1711, in New London, and spent his life there, as it is believed, but the time of his decease is not ascertained. In early life he was a ship-master, employed, for a number of years, in the Irish trade, and, afterwards, in trade with the West Indies. The following is quoted by Miss Calkins from an English paper, Jan. 5, 1740: "The Dolphin of New England, Nathanael Coit, Master, from Cork, is wrecked on a great rock called the Roane Corrigs, in the Bay of Banttry, about four leagues from town. The vessel was staved to pieces and a passenger drowned, but the captain and crew, who were six in number, got upon the rock. The bad weather continuing, nobody would venture to save them, but nine brothers, sons of Marten Sullivan of Beershaven, who, after obtaining their father's leave and blessing, boldly ventured forth and brought the captain and sailors ashore."

Later in life Capt. Coit kept a house of entertainment on Main street (sign of the Red Lion), probably in the house formerly owned by his father.

Capt. Coit was thrice married:—1. To Margaret Douglass, daughter of Captain Richard Douglass, Nov. 6, 1735, who died July 17, 1752, and is buried in the old Burial Ground. 2. To Mary Braddick, widow of Capt. John Braddick and daughter of Richard Christophers of New London, July 13, 1754. The date of her decease is not known. 3. To Love Rogers, widow of Samuel Rogers and daughter of George Richards, Nov. 8, 1759.

He was born June 21, 1745. She had, by him, two children, and died May 9, 1776. She was a lady of rare accomplishments and decided piety. Mr. Jedediah Huntington, the brother of her husband, in a letter dated "Camp at New York, May 21, 1776," thus speaks of her: "The death of our sister Lucy has made one more breach in our late happy family: Though it ought to check our grief that she has left such good evidences of her inheritance in a better world."

JOSEPH Coit, son of Dr. Joseph and Lydia Lathrop Coit, born Sept. 23, 1750, married Elisabeth Palmes of Preston, Feb. 10, 1775. He was, early, taken into the employment of his uncles, Daniel and Joshua Lathrop of Norwich, and by them established in the drug business at Hartford, where, in 1776, he was a partner of Solomon Smith, who had also been a clerk with his uncles. This business, however, did not long continue, by reason of his death, which occurred on a visit to Norwich, where he suddenly sickened and died, Dec. 18, 1779, and was buried in the Old Grave-yard up town. He is reported as having possessed "a cheerful disposition, a fund of ready wit and humor, and the talent of easy versification."

His wife long survived, and by her second marriage to Capt. William Coit of Norwich became step-mother to a large family of Coits. She died Aug. 29, 1808, and was laid by her second husband, near the entrance of a burial-place in Norwich City, having a reputation for intelligence, energy, and piety.

THOMAS Coit, son and sixth child of Dr. Joseph and Lydia Lathrop Coit, born July 17, 1752, in New London, was apprenticed, at twelve years of age, to Christopher Leffingwell, a merchant in Norwich, and, afterwards, his brother-in-law. He became himself a merchant of Norwich Landing (firm of Howland & Coit), and was engaged in shipping. The privateer, Gov. Trumbull, of 20 guns, was built for this firm in 1777; made its first cruise in 1778, and was taken in 1779. The sloop Maria, of 6 guns, was also employed by them, by a letter of marque. But the influence of the Revolutionary war and of other casualties, especially the burning of his store a second time in 1798, was so discouraging, that, in 1795, he left trade and removed to a farm in Pomfret. This he soon exchanged for a farm about one and a half miles north of the village of Canterbury, on which he continued until about 1804, when he sold his farm and went into trade on Canterbury Green, under the firm of Payne, Coit & Adams. In 1810, the partnership was broken up and Mr. Coit continued the business, first associating a son with him, and then selling out to that son in 1822. He died in Canterbury, July 18, 1882, and was there buried, but his remains were removed thence to rest with his family in Norwich. His memory is, however, cherished in Canterbury, where he was honored as a man of singular uprightness, intelligence, and piety. He held, at different times, sundry offices of trust, and especially was collector of internal revenue from distilled spirits, under the administration of General Washington. He was a true patriot, and for many years a consistent member of the Congregational church. He was twice married :—1. To Frances Mary Baker of Norwich, April, 1778, who died Oct. 18, 1778, aged 21. 2. To Sarah Chester of Wethersfield, October, 1782, who died in Norwich, Dec. 6, 1834.

DANIEL LATHROP Coit, son of Dr. Joseph and Lydia Lathrop Coit, born in New London, Sept. 20, 1754, came to Norwich when young and there served an apprenticeship with his Lathrop uncles, as his brother Joseph had previously done, and, ultimately succeeded to their business, of which an important part was the importation and sale of drugs.

In 1788, soon after the revolutionary war, he visited England, Holland, and France, passing the winter of 1784 in Paris, to acquire a familiarity with the language, where he enjoyed the acquaintance of Dr. Franklin, then our Minister in France, and of the Marquis La Fayette, lately returned from his American campaigns, and who then, as ever afterwards, was pleased to manifest his regard for the country of his adoption by courteous attentions to every American.

Among the matters of interest witnessed by him in Paris was the first successful balloon ascension, which was made in December, 1788, from the gardens of The Tuilleries, by Messrs. Robert and Charles; and he used to describe the enthusiasm of the French people at the success of this novel and bold enterprise, from which results were anticipated by men of science as well as by the public, which have so far been by no means realized.

After his return from abroad he became associated in business with the late Mr. Thomas Lathrop, who after a few years retired, leaving him alone in the business, which he continued for some years.

In 1801 he removed with his family, for two or three years, to the city of New York, where he was engaged in foreign trade, in partnership with his brother-in-law, the late Mr. Joseph Howland. At the expiration of this time he returned to his former residence in Norwich, where he passed the remainder of his life without again embarking in the hazards of commerce. He had before this time been one of the original purchasers from the State of Connecticut of that portion of the State of Ohio, known as New Connecticut, or the Western Reserve; and much of his time was subsequently engaged in the attempts at colonizing and settling that territory, which he repeatedly visited while yet a wilderness. Plans had, indeed, been originally formed for an early settlement of the country, but in consequence of the opposition of hostile interests, and of political causes which belong to the history of the times, these expectations were for a long time frustrated, and the proprietors were subjected to a tedious and costly struggle in providing for the necessities of this remote region.

The means of transportation between the western country and the seaboard was naturally regarded by him as of the highest importance. He had while abroad examined, with much interest, the canals of Holland and of England, and he was among the first who conceived and advocated the system of internal improvements that have already overspread our country, and have abridged to an interval of little more than twenty-four hours, a distance which he first knew as a toilsome journey of as many days.

Before these improvements were commenced, he devoted much consideration to the possibility of discovering or providing some result of productive industry, of sufficient value to bear the cost of transportation from so great a distance. At one time the production of raw silk he thought might prove available, and with this view he carefully studied the modes of culture and of manufacture abroad, and in use in this country. And in order to determine the point practically, with characteristic forethought, he procured experienced persons to raise one or two crops of the silk-worm on a sufficiently large scale under his own inspection, having, fortunately for the experiment, an ample supply of the proper mulberry-trees at his disposal. The result of this trial, however, satisfied him that there were insuperable obstacles to its meeting the end designed.

In politics, he was a federalist of the old school, satisfied that our form of government was the one best adapted to our circumstances, only requiring to be administered by upright men, and in such manner as to interfere as little as practicable with the legitimate pursuits of the private citizen. But he took no active part in public affairs further than in systematically voting at elections, and occasionally filling the office of Representative in the State Legislature; obligations he considered equally due by the citizen to the public when called upon, for himself preferring the repose and unobtrusive pursuits of private life.

In 1786 (Nov. 28), he married Elizabeth Bill, daughter of Capt. Ephraim Bill and Lydia Huntington, who was a daughter of Hezekiah Huntington, all of Norwich. Mrs. Coit was endeared to her family, and a numerous circle of friends, by her benevolence, her unpretending piety, and the undeviating sweetness of her disposition, qualities which cheered and brightened the residue of his days.

The cultivation of his fields and his garden, of which he was very fond, furnished him with agreeable occupation and healthful exercise; and books, of which he never tired, were the companions and solace of his leisure. Chemistry, geology, agriculture, and natural philosophy, with all which he was practically conversant, were his favorite studies; not, however, to the exclusion of the graver English poets, among which the finer passages of Pope, of Young, and of Watts, were stored in his memory, and which, to the last, he was fond of reciting. His well-filled mind and extensive experience made him a store-house of information for his friends and acquaintances, not the less appreciated from the unassuming simplicity and modesty with which his knowledge was imparted to those who sought it.

In his social and domestic relations his character was singularly attractive and exemplary. Thoughtful and unwearied in preparation for every duty, he was resolute and firm in execution. Unassuming and punctilious in rendering to every one the dues and the courtesies of life, nothing could surpass his forbearance and indulgence for the failings and weaknesses of others; while his disinterestedness, his sincerity, and freedom from prejudice, united with a judgment ripened by a wide intercourse with mankind, gave a weight and sanction to his counsels that were often sought and were unobtrusively rendered.

He had the satisfaction to survive until he had seen all his six children established in life; and he died on the 27th of November, 1833, in a ripe old age, and before time had impaired the powers of his richly stored and disciplined mind; —with the consolations of a firm religious faith, not presumptuous or ostentatious, but in keeping with his character,—calm, deliberate, and resigned.

His widow survived him thirteen years, and died in New York, March 8, 1846. Both are buried in the old burying-ground in Norwich Town. Their portraits were painted by Fisher, and are still preserved in the family.*

HON. JOSHUA Coit, son and ninth child of Dr. Joseph and Lydia Lathrop Coit, born in New London, Oct. 7, 1758, graduated at Harvard in 1776 ; studied law, and, at an early date, settled in the practice thereof, in his native town. Here he attained an honorable position, receiving numerous offices of trust from his fellow-citizens, representing the town in the General Assembly in 1784, 1785, 1788, 1789, 1790, 1792, and 1793, (of the Lower House, in which body he was repeatedly Clerk and Speaker,) and finally, a representative of the State in Congress from 1793 till the time of his death. In politics, he adhered mainly to the Federal party, but separated from them on particular points in Congress, illustrating his own independent character and incurring their displeasure. Death, however, removed him just at this time from all earthly contentions. During the summer of 1798, the Yellow Fever prevailed in the central part of New London to such an extent as to drive away many of the inhabitants. Mr. Coit had previously sold the house erected by him on Bank Street, on the site formerly occupied by his father, and was residing at the northern end of the city, intending soon to remove to a farm in Montville, but the infection seized him while attending to some business, and he died, Sept. 5, 1798, aged 40, in the flower of his manly vigor, beauty, and promise. He was a member of the Congregational church. His grave-stone, now standing in Cedar Grove Cemetery, bears this inscription:

"If a mind highly cultivated and richly endowed,
A soul replete with every virtue,
A heart of universal philanthropy,
And manners of peculiar affability,
Will justify an eulogium,
None who intimately knew him
Will censure this."

Mr. Coit married Ann Boradill Hallam, daughter of Nicholas and Elisabeth Hallam of New London, Jan. 2, 1785, who was born in 1764, and survived him forty-six years, bringing up her children with singular discretion, and dying March 22, 1844, aged 80.

An inscription on his gravestone in Cedar Grove Cemetery says:—"He was ever ready to pour wine and oil into the wounds of the afflicted, and regulated his actions by the strictest rules of piety, and died in the full belief of the redemption of his Lord and Master." He and his first wife were received into covenant by Rev. Mr. Byles, Pastor of the Congregational church, July 15, 1759, and he "joined in the communion" under Mr. Channing, June 29, 1800. His second wife was received, Sept. 28, 1766, of whom it is testified that "she lived the life of a Christian and died in peace."

Mr. Coit was twice married:—1. To Abigail Richards, daughter of John Richards, May 23, 1756, who died Aug. 19, 1761. 2. To Mary Gardiner, Jan. 12, 1764, who died Sept. 20, 1824, aged 80.

BENJAMIN Coit, oldest child of Col. Samuel and Sarah Spalding Coit, born March 28, 1731, spent his life so far as known as a farmer, in his native place, where he became a very influential citizen, as his father had been,—often Moderator of Town Meetings, Representative in the State Legislature in 1772, 1773, and 1778, Judge of the County Court, &c., &c. He was also a sincere and consistent Christian, owned the covenant in the 2d church of Preston, now Griswold, Oct. 20, 1754, and was received to communion July 6, 1806. He was taken suddenly ill, while on a visit in North Stonington, died there, April 21, 1812, aged 81, and was buried in the Coit Tomb in Griswold cemetery.

He married twice:—1. To Abigail Billings, daughter of Roger Billings of Preston, Jan. 30, 1753, who died Jan. 27, 1760, aged 30. 2. To Mary Boardman, widow of Elijah Boardman and daughter of Capt. Moses Tyler of Preston, May 28, 1760, who died June 15, 1800, aged 70.

WILLIAM Coit, third child of Col. Samuel and Sarah Spalding Coit, born Feb. 18, 1735, became a ship-master and merchant in Norwich, and there spent a long life. In 1761, he advertised for horses suitable for shipping; in 1771 was one of the managers of a lottery for a bridge over the Shetucket; in 1778 was concerned with Whitelaw and Savage to whom Coit's Gore, Lamoiville County, Vermont, now Waterville, had been chartered; in 1782, was one of the associators against illicit trade, and in 1800 was a partner in the firm, Coit, Lanman & Huntington, when their ship, "Three Friends," William Coit, Junior, Master, came with goods direct from Liverpool to Norwich. In 1793, a fire consumed his store. He died Nov. 16, 1821, aged 86, and is buried in the old burial-ground in Norwich City.

He married:—1. Sarah Lathrop, daughter of Ebenezer Lathrop of Norwich, March 21, 1759, who was born Oct. 2, 1735, and died Feb. 21, 1780, aged 45. 2. Elisabeth Coit, widow of Joseph Coit of Hartford, Oct. 15, 1780, who died Aug. 29, 1803, aged 52.

WILLIAM Coit, the second child and oldest son of Daniel and Mehetabel Hooker Coit, born in New London, Nov. 26, 1742, graduated at Yale College in the class of 1761, and seems to have spent his life mainly in his native place, a hearty patriot in the times of the Revolution, "blunt and jovial, eccentric, very large in frame, fierce and military in his bearing, and noted for wearing a scarlet cloak." It may have been partly this circumstance, and partly the habitual roughness of his speech, that procured him among his townsfolk the soubriquet of "The Great Red Dragon." It is not plain what was his original occupation, but highly probable that he followed a seafaring life. In 1771 he was selectman, and in 1774 one of the committee of correspondence. Early in 1775 a military company was raised in New London, and trained under Capt. Coit's command. On the 25th of May this company started for the vicinity of Boston, and took part in the battle of Bunker Hill.

Capt. Coit was soon transferred to the command of the schooner Harrison, fitted out in Boston Bay to cruise against the enemy, and claimed, afterwards, to have been "the first man in the United States to turn his majesty's bunting upside down." In the following year Capt. Coit was placed in command of the Oliver Cromwell, a 20 gun ship built at Saybrook, under the authority of Connecticut. This vessel was expected to sail in October, 1776, from New London; but was prevented by various difficulties, until the spring following, when another officer took Capt. Coit's place. (For an account of these difficulties, see letters, Appendix, note H.) Of his further services no particulars are at hand, though it is known that he was taken prisoner in 1781 and carried to New York.

After the termination of the war, Capt. Coit continued to reside in New London, but probably died at the South, where some of his children settled. In a New London paper, August 14, 1797, appeared the following notice: "Sailed, sloop Lois Douglass for North Carolina; passenger, Capt. Wm. Coit, on a tour for his health." In the college catalogue his death is dated 1802.

He married Sarah Prentiss, daughter of Capt. John Prentiss, Dec. 18, 1768. She died in New York City, May 18, 1818.

He was elected a deacon of the Congregational church in West Springfield, March 1, 1759, and retired from the office in 1782. lence, exemplary Virtue and extensive Usefulness in Church and State, calmly fell asleep, 12th Oct. 1805, æt. 95." HON. HUGH White, son of Hugh and Mary Stone White, grandson of Ensign Daniel and Susannah Mould White, and great-grandson of Nathanael and Martha Coit White, born in Upper Middletown, Jan. 25, 1788. He settled there, and was one of the selectmen of Middletown from 1779 to 1788. "He was a commissary in the army during a part of the Revolutionary War. Soon after the close of the war, he became the pioneer of the settlements in Central New York. In May, 1784, he left Middletown, with four sons, who had arrived at manhood, a daughter and daughter-in-law, and founded a settlement at Sedahquate, a few miles from the present city of Utica. In the January following, he took thither his wife and the remainder of his family. Several of his relatives, with others from Middletown and its vicinity, quickly followed; and the new settlement, under the name of "Whitestown," soon became widely known as the place in which the emigration from New England centered. The hardships and perils encountered by these early settlers can scarcely be conceived of, by those who now visit that thickly-peopled region. The whole country was in the wildness of nature. The nearest mill was at Palatine, 40 miles distant. The hostility of the Indian Tribes had hitherto rendered the settlement of that region impossible, and at the close of the war, the whole central and western portions of the State were without civilized inhabitants. It was therefore necessary that the pioneer of the new settlement should conciliate the favor of the Indians. In his intercourse with them he was frank and decided. On one occasion, an Indian Chief demanded of Mr. White, as a test of his professed confidence, that he would permit him to take to his wigwam a little grand-daughter then playing about the house. The Chief promised to keep the child safely, and bring her home again the next day. The child was entrusted to him; but it was not until the approach of night, when fears of treachery had almost overcome her mother, that she was returned, finely arrayed in Indian dress, with many ornaments. This incident is said to have contributed much toward establishing a lasting friendship between the new settlers and the neighboring Indians. In 1788 the town of "Whitestown" was organized. It included in its limits all of the State of New York lying westward of a line passing through Utica, and reaching from the southern boundary of the State to the St. Lawrence river. This territory had 6,000 inhabitants in 1792, and Judge White lived to see it containing a population of over 800,000. At the organization of Herkimer County,

Mr. White was appointed a Judge. He afterwards held the same office in the new County of Oneida. He died April 16, 1812, aged 79." (Vide "White Family.") He married twice:—1. Mary Clark of Middletown, daughter of Daniel and Mary Clark, Aug. 23, 1758. She was born Feb. 10, 1734, and died about the year 1774. 2. Mrs. Lois Davenport, of New Hartford, Conn., widow of Rev. Ebenezer Davenport of Greenwich, Conn., and daughter of Jonathan and Elisabeth Loomis, March ——. She died at Whitestown, April 18, 1829, aged 86.

Allen's American Biographical Dictionary says, "He was a scholar, a Christian, and an able and judicious divine." Rev. Elijah Waterman, his successor in the ministry at Windham, in his published centennial sermon, thus describes him: "Mr. White possessed good natural abilities, improved by early education. In his station, he was a workman that needeth not to be ashamed; and the manuscript sermons left behind him are a testimony of real piety and faithfulness. He was constitutionally modest, and, unless with his acquaintances, reserved in conversation. In his domestic relations, he was tender and indulgent, and the same affectionate temper he manifested towards his church and people."

He married Mary Dyer of Windham, daughter of Col. Thomas and Lydia Backus Dyer of Windham, Sept. 2, 1741. She was born Jan. 31, 1719, and died May 27, 1802, aged 83.

JOSEPH Coit, eldest child of Thomas and Sarah Chester Coit, born in Norwich, Aug. 18, 1783, in early life became interested in Western emigration, and made his first journey to the Western Reserve in 1803, at which time he accompanied Gen. Moses Cleveland, who went to treat with the Indians for the land on which the city of Cleveland now stands. The journey from Connecticut was performed on horseback in a little less than thirty days. At this time Mr. Coit selected a spot for his own settlement, at the center of Ellsworth, in Mahoning County, then an unbroken wilderness, and, in the following year, returned to take permanent possession. At this time, he began his improvements, although for a time employed in Gen. Perkins' office at Warren. In that western home he spent the vigor of his youth and the maturity of his manhood, leaving his family to enjoy it after his half-century occupation was closed. His death, which occurred May 31, 1857, was occasioned by a cancer upon his face, an affliction which he bore for several years with great patience. Mr. Coit shared honorably in various civil offices, and, in the war of 1812, did good service as cornet of a company of dragoons. Besides his agricultural labors, he was considerably employed in surveying, and took an active part in the various improvements of his town. Always moral and exemplary in his habits, he did not make a public profession of religion until the last year of his life. Of his true worth as a man we have the testimony of the Hon. Elisha Whittlesey, in a newspaper article contributed at the time of his decease. He married Elisabeth Mygatt, June, 1838.

Here Mr. Coit carried on the manufacture of salt from saline springs, until the competition of Eastern manufacturers rendered it unprofitable. About 1828 he removed to Euclid (Collamer Post-Office), near Cleveland, where he has since resided, engaged largely in agricultural pursuits. BENJAMIN Coit, Jr., son of Benjamin and Abigail Billings Coit, born Dec. 21, 1759, in Preston, became first a ship-master in Norwich and then a merchant there, spending a long life in that city, much of it in a house in Shetucket street, since consumed by fire. His early manhood corresponded with the period of the Revolutionary War, and, at the age of 18, he enlisted in the naval service, on board the Spy, a vessel of 50 tons, commissioned by Gov. Trumbull, for the purpose of conveying intelligence and transporting military stores. Of the crew of this vessel Mr. Coit was the last survivor. In the extemporized navy of 1779, he was made commander of the armed ship "Hope." But, after these earlier years, his life was mostly spent in the quiet employments of mercantile life, trading to the West Indies for rum and molasses, and sometimes to England directly. He was of the firm of Erastus Coit & Co. He was for some time one of the judges of the County Court, as his father and grandfather had been before him. He died at Norwich, Dec. 28, 1841, aged 83.

He married Sarah Coit, daughter of William and Sarah Coit of Norwich, Oct. 15, 1788, who survived him, and died Aug. 31, 1855, aged 90 years and 6 months.

ELISHA Coit, son of William and Sarah Lathrop Coit, born Dec. 22, 1762, became a successful commission merchant in New York City, distinguished for his Christian zeal and activity, and sustaining, with great credit, the office of Ruling Elder in the Cedar Street Presbyterian church. Rev. Dr. Miller, in a work on the office of Ruling Elder, describes one who seemed to have fulfilled that office most completely, and in a note says that the portrait was drawn from Mr. Coit, whom he had known intimately while Pastor in New York City. The passage is too lengthy to be quoted here; but is a beautiful testimony, from a Pastor, to one who had stayed up his hands by prayer and united labor.

He married Rebecca Saltonstall Manwaring, daughter of David and Martha Saltonstall Manwaring, of New London, Jan. 20, 1798. He died in New York, June 19, 1835, aged 78. Mrs. Rebecca S. Manwaring Coit died July 14, 1853, aged 84.

MARY Lanman, daughter of Peter and Sarah Coit Lanman, born July 29, 1773, married Jabez Huntington, by whom she had six children, and died Sept. 29, 1809, aged 36. Mr. Huntington "was a man of very marked qualities. Quick in reaching a conclusion, he was as positive and persistent in adhering to it and as earnest in maintaining it. He was eminently conscientious also, so that, if he found himself at fault, he would acknowledge it as readily as detected. He was at one time connected with the Episcopal church or society in Norwich; yet at length he united with the Congregational church, of which Dr. Bond was pastor, and of which he continued a useful member and became an efficient deacon. He was induced to accept the office of Major, in the Connecticut regiment of the Army raised by the elder Adams, but soon left the service. He was at one time President of the Norwich Bank and Treasurer of the Norwich Savings Society. He died in Norwich, Aug. 16, 1848." (See "Huntington Family," Memoir, page 242.)

1024. Peter Lanman, " " Sept. 16, 1809. " Graduated at Yale College in 1828. During his Junior year he became the subject of a revival which then occurred in College, and with all the earnestness of his ardent nature devoted himself to the life of a Christian and to the work of preparation for the ministry. The memoir of his sister, Sarah L., states that, 'for the purpose of obtaining means to prosecute his professional studies, and also for the benefit to be derived to his own character, he went to Natchez, Miss., to engage in the labors of a private tutor in a family.' But he was not to succeed in this leading aim of his heart. A fall which he had received, before going South, had seriously affected his spine, and soon began to show its results upon his entire nervous system. He was forced to abandon his professional studies and return home again, to linger awhile, in great suffering, until death should come to his relief. He died solaced with all the most precious ministries of his beloved home, and of his unwavering faith, Dec. 24, 1832." (See "Huntington Family," page 328.) The following tribute is from the pen of his classmate and friend, the Rev. Dr. Tryon Edwards. He says: "I knew him well. He was active and earnest in temperament, impulsive, warm-hearted, and generous; strong in all his statements and prejudices; good in all departments of study, but excelling as a belles-lettres scholar; cultivated in taste; refined in feeling; cordial in manner, and a true gentleman in address and in all his intercourse, and evidently one to make his mark in the world in whatever sphere he might be placed. In his junior year, in College, he became deeply impressed with the subject of religion, and united himself with the College church. From this time all his strong traits were turned into a new channel, and his earnest ambition was devoted to the true ends of living. Had he been spared, he would have made a man of prominence and usefulness."—To this tribute of Dr. Edwards, the compiler, who was also a classmate, most heartily subscribes.

NATHANAEL Coit, son of Samuel and Sylvia Lewis Coit, was born in New London, Dec. 28, 1786, and died at Bloomfield, New Jersey, July 8, 1866, in the 80th year of his age. "He left his native town at the age of 14 years and went to live with his uncle, David Coit, in the city of New York, with whom he served an apprenticeship at boat-making, which trade he abandoned, before he attained his majority, for the grocery business. In 1813, he was called out to serve in the New York State Militia, and stationed at Harlem Heights, for the defense of the city of New York. This military service, although short, was in after years a source of great satisfaction, and from it was drawn many a pleasing incident to enlighten and enliven social conversation. He was twice married:—
1. To Esther Olmsted of Wilton, Conn., March 9, 1807, by whom he had three daughters, the two eldest of which are still living, one in Newark, New Jersey, and the other at New London, Conn. Mrs. Esther Coit died in the city of New York, Jan. 14, 1820. 2. To Miriam Place, youngest daughter of James and Sarah Place of Hempstead, L. I., in the city of New York, Dec. 18, 1820. By this second marriage Mr. Coit became the father of six children,—four sons and two daughters,—five of whom lived to grow up. In 1827, he purchased a farm at Bloomfield, N. J., a beautiful town sixteen miles west from New York, where he removed with his family in April of that year, and resided for a period of forty years, and finally died. After removing to Bloomfield, for some twenty years or more he retained his business relations in New York. But in the later years of his life, he devoted himself principally to his farm. Although his business, as a ‘farmer,’ was never remunerative, yet it afforded him great pleasure, and gave him what was better than profit—vigorous health and a robust frame.

“As a man of business, Mr. Coit was active, prompt, and energetic. He was honest to a fault, and gave to all their dues. It was said by all who knew him that ‘his word was as good as a bond.’ In social life he was entertaining and instructive. His remarkable memory and well-stored mind, together with good conversational powers, afforded many a treat to his family and friends. He possessed the spirit of a patriot and the gifts of an orator. He was a diligent student of the times, and watched, with much interest, the progress of political events. His earnest support was given to all measures which tended to the elevation of the American people. Next to his God and family, he loved his country, and, during the late struggle with the rebellion, he regretted that age prevented him from again rendering to his country active service as a soldier. But, on all public occasions, where opportunity offered, his voice rang out earnest and clear for the triumphs of liberty and the rights of all. Nathanael Coit was an earnest, untiring, and exemplary Christian. He experienced religion in August, 1806, and became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church in New York, at Second street, of which denomination he remained and died a member, holding official relationships for nearly sixty years. In his early Christian life and labors, he was intimately associated with Messrs. Oakley, Daniel Ayers, Andrew, Ezekiel, and Samuel Halsted, of New York. For nearly 40 years he had the charge of a class of colored people whose place of meeting was in Ann street, at the house of one Sarah Williams. Until the close of his life, he maintained a warm interest in every movement which sought the elevation of that oppressed people. He also bestowed much labor for the religious welfare of seamen. He was an intimate friend of 'Father Taylor,' late of Boston, but formerly of New York; also of Rev. Henry Chase, and was, on the Sabbath, a frequent worker in the seamen's Bethel in Cherry street. Scarcely did he ever make a prayer without invoking the blessing of God upon those 'who go down to the sea in ships.' In his more advanced years, he would walk five and six miles to spend a Sabbath in Christian labor with a neighboring church. Long will the exhortations of this earnest Christian man be remembered both in New York and New Jersey. The sickness which hastened his death was 'Bright's disease of the kidneys.' He suffered much, but with great patience, retaining to a considerable extent his faculties and consciousness until the last. Thus has passed away 'a landmark of the family,' a stern but faithful father, a faithful husband, a patriot of the Puritanical type, a Christian of the Wesleyan school. His widow, now in her 77th year, still lives near the old homestead in Bloomfield, and is still active, keeping her own house. She is the only surviving member of her father's family. Mr. Coit's oldest son is a member of the Newark Methodist Conference. His second son has retired from the sea and resides on his farm, on Long Island. His third son, for fourteen years a minister of the Gospel, died in Iowa. His youngest son, George, is a physician at St. Johns, Missouri Valley, Iowa. His daughter, Mrs. Winne, resides in Bloomfield, New Jersey." (Communicated by a friend of the family.)

He led a party by which a vessel belonging to his uncle was boldly rescued (cut out) from under the guns of the fleet blockading New London; was engaged for some time in the West India trade, and named one of his sons for a Dutch merchant in one of the Islands; early in the whaling business, before the mast, in the Leonidas, Capt. He was mate of the packet George Washington in 1817, when John Quincy Adams came passenger from England, and so formed an acquaintance with him; was a man of rough manners, but of great energy; weighed, it is said, at one time, four hundred pounds, but lost his enormous bulk a while before he died. In 1836 he removed from New London and settled on a farm in Greenfield, Huron County, Ohio, where he died, Aug. 19, 1846, aged 57. Mrs. Phebe Coit died Dec. 23, 1864, aged 78.

To Ann Maria Bolles of Norwich, daughter of Ralph and Happy Bolles, July 28, 1833.

He established himself in Norwich as captain of a packet, running regularly to New York. In July, 1833, he took command of the steamer Gen. Jackson, and continued to command successive steamers, between New York and Norwich, until 1842. Since that time, he has been much engaged in the building and management of steamers, having constructed the Maria, Norwich, Hunter, Express, Worcester, North America, San Juan, Escort, Raphael, Ann Maria, and William W. Coit. The last-named was General Gilmore's staff-boat, and the first that entered Charleston as the rebels retreated, and her ensign the first union flag hoisted over Fort Sumter. He has also been actively engaged in other business enterprises in Norwich and has contributed largely to the prosperity of that city. While engaged as ship-master on the sound, a remarkable success attended him, so that no passenger ever lost his life and no marine insurance company ever paid a loss on vessel or cargo under his command.

He commenced the practice of his profession in Litchfield, where he continued about 30 years. He represented Litchfield in the State legislature in 1829, and during his residence in Litchfield he won for himself the confidence and esteem of the community, and the reputation of a sound and able lawyer. He was elected a representative to Congress in 1829, and continued in that branch of Congress until 1834. He returned to his native town of Norwich in 1829, which he made his home during the interim of his public duties at Washington. He was appointed Judge of the Superior Court in 1834, and also of the Supreme Court of Errors. On the death of the Hon. Thaddeus Betts, a Senator in the United States Congress from Connecticut, in 1840, Judge Huntington was appointed for the remainder of the unexpired term; and at the close, in 1845, was reappointed for another term, from which high trust he was removed, in the midst of his great labors, by his sudden death, which occurred in Norwich, Nov. 1, 1847. (Vide "Huntington Memoir.") The following tribute appeared in the American Obituary of 1847:—"A statesman of more unbending integrity or more unwavering fidelity to the interests of the Union, never occupied a seat in the Senate of the United States; and the records of that body during the last eight years bear ample testimony to the untiring industry, energy, and distinguished ability with which he discharged the responsible duties assigned him by his native State."

ELIZABETH COIT Gilman, daughter of William C. and Eliza Coit Gilman, born Sept. 4, 1821, " married Joseph Parrish Thompson, D. D., LL. D., of Broadway Tabernacle, New York City. Dr. Thompson is a distinguished clergyman in the city of New York. He was born in Philadelphia, Aug. 7, 1819, was graduated at Yale in 1838, and immediately began a theological course of study. This course was begun at Andover and concluded at the Theological Seminary in New Haven. He was ordained Pastor of the Chapel street Congregational church, in the latter city, Oct. 28, 1840. After a prosperous ministry, he was called to the pastorate of the Tabernacle Congregational church, in New York, in which he was installed April 15, 1845. Dr. Thompson has been a diligent student and a constant contributor to the press, both as editor and author. He has paid particular attention to Egyptology. In 1848, in connection with Drs. Leonard Bacon and Richard S. Storrs, Jr., he became editor of the Independent, and held that post, in addition to his numerous other pressing duties, for about twelve years. Dr. Thompson was one of the founders of the New Englander, and associate editor of the Bibliotheca Sacra, and makes frequent contributions to the Congregationalist, the Advance, the Congregational Quarterly, the North American Review, and other periodicals. Besides having published a number of sermons, addresses, and other pamphlets, he has contributed to the New American Cyclopædia, Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, and Kitto's Cyclopædia of Biblical Literature. As a trustee of the American Congregational Union, and as one of the executive officers of the Home Missionary Society, he has had much to do with the development and growth of Congregational interests, and he took a prominent part in the proceedings of the National Council of Congregational churches held at Boston in June, 1865.

In 1856 Harvard University conferred on him the degree of S. T. D., and in 1868 the New York University gave him that of LL. D. His first wife was Miss Lucy O. Bartlett of Portsmouth, N. H. Deeply interested in the triumph of the National government during the Rebellion, and in the emancipation and enfranchisement of the bondmen, Dr. Thompson sent two sons to do service for the country. One of these having enlisted as a private, died after a few months' service, and a paternal tribute was paid to his memory in a little volume entitled "The Sergeant's Memorial." The other received a commission in a colored regiment of United States troops, and remained in the service until the close of the war. Happy in the respect and esteem of an influential congregation, Dr. Thompson has declined the numerous flattering invitations which have been offered him to go to other posts of business. Among the printed volumes of which he is author may be named a memoir of Mr. Timothy Dwight, a biography of Mr. David Halo, a work on Egypt, Past and Present, and several religious and devotional works." (Vide Gilman Genealogy, 1869, pages 187-188.)

Dr. Thompson's health being in a measure impaired, he resigned his charge of the Tabernacle church and congregation in October, 1871. His people, as a testimonial of their regard, immediately on accepting his resignation, presented him $50,000 and upwards, and it is understood he designs visiting Egypt for the further prosecution of his studies in relation to that country.

Since the above was written, Dr. Thompson has repaired to Berlin, Prussia, where he now (1874) resides; is a constant contributor to the Independent and other publications, and is engaged in other literary labors.

REV. EDWARD W. Gilman, son of William Charles and Eliza Coit Gilman, born Feb. 11, 1823, married, June 5, 1850, Julia Silliman, youngest daughter of Professor Benjamin Silliman, LL. D., of Yale College, New Haven, Conn. He was fitted for college at the Ellington, Conn., High School ; entered Yale in 1839, and was graduated in 1843. In the autumn of that year he went to West Point, N. Y., and spent a year as instructor of Prof. Kinsley's school for boys. While residing there, he published, anonymously, a guide to West Point. In November, 1844, he removed to New York city, and spent several years in teaching, in private schools and in the grammar schools of the New York University. During this time he also attended the Union Theological Seminary, and pursued, for two years, a course of theological studies. In May, 1847, he accepted an invitation to a tutorship in Yale College, and held the office for two years, meantime attending lectures in the Theological Seminary at New Haven. In July, 1849, he resigned this position to enter the ministry, with letters of approbation from the Association of Congregational Ministers of New York and Brooklyn, and after a few months' residence at Lockport, N. Y., he was ordained pastor of a Congregational church in that village, Dec. 4, 1849. In July, 1856, he left Lockport and removed to Cambridge, Mass., where he was installed Pastor of the Prospect street Congregational church, Sept. 9, 1856. This office he resigned in October, 1858, and removed to Bangor, Maine, at the invitation of the First Congregational church in that city, over which he was installed Pastor Jan. 13, 1859. There he remained until October, 1863, when he removed to New Haven, Conn., to spend the winter, but not with the intention of making a permanent residence there, and was in 1864 called to become Pastor of the Second Congregational church at Stonington, Conn., where he now resides. He was installed Sept. 14, 1864. (See "Gilman Genealogy," pages 188-189.)

BENJAMIN B. Coit, M. D., son of Benjamin and Sarah Coit, born April 10, 1801, in Norwich, graduated at Yale College in the class of 1822, and at Jefferson Medical College in 1826. He married Adelaide C. Johnson, daughter of William and Susan Johnson of Lebanon, N. Y. The following notice of Dr. Coit is taken from the San Francisco Bulletin of April, 1867:

DEATH OF A PIONEER PHYSICIAN.—Dr. Benjamin B. Coit, a pioneer physician of this city, died suddenly about 6 o'clock last evening, while in the act of crossing Montgomery street, at its north intersection with Washington. He had complained of feeling unwell, and was crossing the street in company with Thomas Hayes, when he suddenly laid his hands on Mr. Hayes' shoulders, exclaiming, "Save me! save me!" and instantly expired. His death is supposed to have been caused by disease of the heart. Dr. Coit came to this city in 1849, and has resided here continuously ever since. He was born in Norwich, Conn., in 1801, and at an early age went to New York, and subsequently to Philadelphia, where he graduated at the Medical College with high honors, and afterwards practiced his profession in New York City. During the cholera season of 1832 he devoted himself entirely to the suffering around him, and Mayor Gideon Leo presented him with a rich set of silver service in token of the estimation in which he was held by that municipality. He was also a graduate of the New York College of Surgeons, and of Yale College, and was the oldest graduate of the latter institution on this coast. Dr. Coit ranked among the foremost in his profession, and was noted for his benevolence and kindheartedness, giving his professional services freely at all times to those who were poor and in distress. He was universally respected and esteemed by all who knew him. He leaves a family, all of whom are in the East, except a son who is in Arizona. The funeral will be attended by the California Pioneers, of which society he was a member.

ELISABETH B. Coit, daughter of Joseph and Eliza Remington Coit, born Dec. 11, 1797, married Daniel Latimer of Ames, Montgomery County, N. Y., Feb. 23, 1830. Mr. Latimer was the oldest of three children of his parents, Reuben and Elisabeth Peck Latimer, born March 3, 1797. They were natives of Lyme, Conn., and soon after their marriage emigrated to Canajoharie, where Daniel was born, having previously purchased land heavily covered with timber, being guided in their course to their future home by marked trees. He continued to make accessions to his farm until he was the possessor of a large tract of land. It was situated two miles from what has since been called Ames, upon an eminence commanding a fine prospect, and derived its name from its owner, Latimer Hill, which name it still bears. It required years of toil and sacrifice, accompanied with many privations to which they had been strangers in their Eastern home, to bring it to that high state of cultivation which gives it its present value. His sons as they grew up shared his toils in clearing up the land. Daniel, the subject of this sketch, in his childhood received the advantages of education, which he greatly improved, and far surpassed most of his associates. In his youth he showed a marked degree of ingenuity, which led him to devote himself to architecture as an avocation, and in which he afterwards excelled. In this he was employed at the date of his marriage. He superintended the structure of churches and other public edifices, and exhibited a remarkable faculty in executing difficult pieces of mechanism, and an adaptation for different kinds of ornamental work. A portion of the time he engaged in agriculture. His character was unblemished, and his integrity and veracity are known to all with whom he had intercourse to be among his leading characteristics. He was strictly temperate in all things.

His desire to see the yoke of the oppressed broken was great, and, in his prayers, a petition was breathed forth in their behalf, and he was ever ready to assist them in any manner that offered.

In December of 1851 he went to California. The first part of his journey was pleasant and rapid. Stopping at Havana, he visited several places of interest. To cross the Isthmus was, at that time, attended with many difficulties, and his voyage across the Pacific was long and tedious, on account of the vessel being unseaworthy and needing extensive repairs. Being much longer than the usual time, the Monumental City was given up for a long time by friends at home, for lost. But finally she reached the long wished-for port, and her passengers and crew were regarded almost as risen from the dead. While in California, he was engaged a portion of the time in mining, and although meeting with some losses, he returned home bringing joy and gladness to the hearts of his family, and some of the wealth of the "Golden State," having been absent four years and a few months. His wife, during his absence, exhibited great energy of character and capability in superintending home affairs. After his return, he resumed the management of his farm, improving and beautifying the surroundings, and displaying remarkable taste in so doing. In this he continued until he retired from business.

Mr. Latimer was hopefully converted in the year 1835 and united with the First Baptist church, of which he has been a consistent and exemplary member. The influence of his labors for the welfare of the Redeemer's kingdom, and of his example and prayers, will be a lasting memorial of him.

Mrs. Elisabeth B. (Coit) Latimer was born in the town of Cherry Valley, Otsego County, N. Y. She early manifested a fondness for learning, and great aptitude in acquiring a knowledge of books. As her mind expanded, she displayed those qualities of character which gave her a wide influence and fitted her for the enjoyment of intellectual society. A portion of her education was received under her father's instruction, who was well qualified for the task. She was a guiding star among her youthful associates. Their social gatherings were considered incomplete without her joyous presence. While in the vigor of life the interests of her soul were not neglected. She gave her heart to God, and indulged a bright hope in the Saviour, "with the sweet assurance of sins forgiven."

After her marriage, she was pleasantly situated on a farm, which commanded an extensive view of the surrounding country, on Latimer Hill. In a few years they rented their farm, her husband engaging in merchandise at Ames, where their eldest child was born. Subsequently they returned to the farm, where they spent many happy days. Here at Latimer

Hill their second daughter was born. Their eldest daughter was instructed in the first rudiments of learning at home, her parents preferring this to confinement at school. After the birth of their third and youngest child, they again removed to Ames, where they continued to reside until Mrs. Latimer's death, one object in returning to that place being to avail themselves of the superior advantages afforded for educating their children. As they grew up the parents put forth untiring efforts to inculcate, in their youthful minds, the importance of mental and moral culture, application to study with perseverance in whatever they undertook, their motto being "never say fail." To these instructions the children owed much of their success. Both parents possessed a natural talent and love for music, with good voices, which, after proper cultivation, was a source of great enjoyment through life. They retained the use of their vocal powers to an advanced age, to such a degree as to sing with accuracy, each taking their part in the service of song. Under their training, the daughters have become proficient in the science, and spend a portion of their time in instructing in music, both vocal and instrumental.

Their children have all become hopefully pious, and connected themselves with the Baptist church, of which they are active and efficient members.

Mrs. Elisabeth Coit Latimer was eminent as a Christian. She exhibited the value of experimental religion in her exemplary life. She was not a member of any church previous to her marriage. Her attendance upon public worship was principally at the Methodist Episcopal church, this being the only denomination in her locality. It was here that her sympathies were. But, subsequent to her marriage, she with her husband united with the First Baptist church of Ames. She was beloved and respected by all who knew her. Possessing a cheerful disposition, she was well calculated to make home happy. The buoyancy of her spirits even in her latter days diffused a halo of light and joy around the hearts of her family, and others within the circle of her acquaintance.

Prompted by a kind and loving heart, she was ready for every benevolent work, but was especially conspicuous for her efforts in aid of the suffering soldiers in our late civil war. Her amiability was manifest throughout her life, securing the lasting friendship and grateful remembrance of a large circle, to whose welfare she devoted herself, especially in seasons of sickness, bereavement, and sorrow. As the natural result, her piety exhibited the choicest fruits as she drew near the closing scene of life. In her last and extremely painful illness, as her weeping family were watching around her bed, she besought them with gentle voice, "Weep not for me." She retained her mental faculties to the very last. The hope which she had long indulged proved as "an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast." When unable longer to speak, she pressed the hands of her partner and children with a sweet look of recognition and love, and her spirit took its flight.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."—(Communicated by a member of the family.)

SARAH LANMAN Huntington, daughter of Jabez and Mary Lanman Huntington, and grand-daughter of Peter and Sarah Coit Lanman, born June 18, 1802, married Eli Smith, D. D., the eminent American missionary at Beyrout, Syria, July 21, 1833.

(The following tribute to her memory is found in the "Huntington Family" memorial, pp. 320, 321, and 322.)

"The memoir of this gifted and truly Christian member of the family has been worthily compiled and written by her brother-in-law, the Rev. Dr. Edward Hooker. The memorial is a just tribute to her great excellence and usefulness; its careful study could but be grateful and profitable to every one who bears her name.

"'Doing good to others' would, I think, most exactly express her life-work, from early childhood to its close. She early acquired a mastery over every form of self-seeking, that she might live for others. At the age of eighteen, with a consideration unusual with one of her years, she deliberately consecrated herself to the service of Christ. 'I am anxious,' her correspondence testifies, 'to fill up life with usefulness, that God may be honored.' In the Sabbath school of her own church, among the poor and unfortunate in her own neighborhood, with the remnant of the neglected Mohegan Indians, for whose spiritual and temporal good she unweariedly toiled, in her cheerful labors for the unfortunate Greeks, during their struggles, and for the perishing heathen of a foreign land, she equally exhibited this leading aim of her life. And she was anxious that her kindred might possess the same spirit. She says of them all: 'If the numerous Huntingtons are useful in their generation, it is of little consequence whether they are conspicuous.' In fulfilment of this most earnest desire of her heart, she engaged, as early as the year 1827, in an effort to secure the secular and religious instruction of the Mohegan Indians, a small remnant of that tribe still left, upon the west bank of the Thames, some five miles below Norwich. Here, with much praying and toil, she established a missionary school, both for the week-day and the Sabbath, and with the aid of two such kindred spirits as Miss Breed of Norwich and Miss Raymond of Montville, she accomplished a good work. The nature and method of this work are best exhibited in her own words:—

“‘Seated in my little missionary apartment, which serves for parlor, bed-room, kitchen, school-room, and chapel, I have composed myself to the sweet employment of answering your good and long letter. I have a school of eighteen or twenty, including four adults—one man, two married women, and a squasissse. They come at half past nine and stay until four, having half an hour's intermission; and we carry on arithmetic, millinery, tailoring, etc., etc., besides the ordinary avocations of a school. All this, with the government of untutored, untamed beings, nearly exhaust my powers during the day, and, at evening, I have work to fit and my 'profession' to study. But I am quite satisfied. I came here for their benefit and not to please myself. Our Sabbath school is twice as large, embracing whites, and is kept up four hours of the Sabbath, besides an intermission. I leave home Sunday morning and return the next Sunday evening, and Miss Raymond does the same. So we are both here on the Sabbath.'

"Nor were her labors here unrewarded. She persevered in enlisting her friends in the measure, until she had secured a chapel and an appropriation from Congress of five hundred dollars towards a house for a permanent teacher, and an annuity of four hundred for his support. But more than this: she had won the confidence and affectionate regard of the neglected children for whom she labored; nor have the years which have since passed effaced her loved form and her holy teachings from the memory of their still grateful hearts. The writer, many years after she had left them, heard from the lips of more than one of them the simple story of their gratitude.

Well and truthfully did her early friend, Mrs. Sigourney, thus embalm in her sweet verse these labors:

"Hear I the murmured echo of thy name,
From yon poor honest race? 'Tis meet for them
To hoard thy memory, as a blessed star,
For thou didst seek their lonely homes and tell
'These sad-browed children of a Saviour's love,
And of that clime where no oppressor comes.
Cold winter found thee there, and summer's heat,
With zeal unblenching. Though perchance the sncer
Might curl some worldling's lip, 'twas not for thee
'To note its language, or to scorn the soul
Of the neglected Indian, or to tread
Upon the ashes of his buried kings
As on a loathsome weed. Thy own fair halls
Lured thee in vain, until the hallowed church
Reared its light dome among them, and the voice
Of a devoted shepherd day by day
Called back these wanderers to the sheltering fold
Of a Redeemer's righteousness."

“ Nor less truthfully, or with less grace, did the Right Rev. Bishop Lee of Delaware allude to these labors for the Indians, in the address which he delivered at the great bicentennial celebration, in Norwich, in 1859. I quote from memory, yet am sure I report the spirit of the touching record :

“ With an angel’s alacrity, she entered on this work. When strong men would have shrunk back, this fair and delicate woman never hesitated. But another field of labor was prepared for her, when she was no longer needed here. Just two months after her marriage she embarked at Boston for Malta, on her way to Syria, the missionary field to which she had cheerfully consecrated the remainder of her days. The same prayerfulness, the same affectionate consideration towards her parents and friends, and the same intelligent preparation for her work, which had previously made her so useful and acceptable, were in this most important and trying decision no less apparent. She had prepared both herself and friends, and now that she had started on the final mission of her life, she went as one who has lost all sense of a duty calling for self-denial, in the conscious enjoyment of a privilege of which she deemed herself unworthy. On the 28th of January, 1834, she reached Beyrout, her future home. In sight of Lebanon she felt herself to be on sacred ground ; and though in the midst of an ignorance and heathenism that touched her deepest sympathies, she was now satisfied to find herself in the very spot to which her Heavenly Father had led her. She had no will but to work henceforth in this heaven-appointed field. Here for about two years and a half she was permitted to enjoy the labors of the successful missionary. Early and late, each day in season and out of season, wherever she might be, she was ever at the work which she loved. She came to feel each half-hour sacred to some special and useful service.

While in Beyrout she was at the same time engaged in learning the languages, in teaching a school, in aiding her husband in preparing manuscript for the press, and in superintending the needed domestic arrangements of her large household. But she was not destined to a long service in this heathen land. Her health having given out, she left Beyrout in 1836 with her husband to visit Smyrna. On the passage occurred an event which, while it illustrated the simplicity and strength of her faith, aggravated the symptoms of her disease. Off to the north of Cyprus their vessel struck upon a reef, and they were obliged to trust themselves to the long boat, by which they were at length safely landed on the uninhabited coast of Asia Minor. From this sandy beach they were next morning removed by a lumber boat from Damietta in Egypt, to the deserted harbor of Selefkeh. Here, for about five days, she was exposed to a burning sun and the chill air of night alike, with scarcely the defenses of ordinary clothing, this having been much of it lost by the wreck. One Sabbath and one birthday she thus spent. Yet this dying woman found, even then, occasions for gratitude. She had, it is true, none of those comforts which had before blessed her natal days—the presence of her dear friends, and the bountiful tokens of their love; she had not even a sufficiency of food, or the comfort of a place for rest; but she had sources of joy which sustained her; even there, no doubt, angels ministered to her. That lone and we should say desolate Sabbath brought, as she herself testified, to her, a feast of fat things. From his pulpit of stones the Rev. Mr. Wynne, who had also shared their fate in the shipwreck, read from the English liturgy. ‘Never,’ she said, ‘did I so realize the beauty of that formulary, and its value under such circumstances.’ At length, on the sixth day after they had been wrecked, they were taken off, and on the 13th of July they were landed at Smyrna. But her disease had now assumed a positive form. It was rendered certain that her lungs were too much diseased to admit of her recovery ; and the succeeding weeks only confirmed the fears of her husband, as they gradually carried her down towards her end. On the 7th of August she was removed to Boojah, a village some five miles from Smyrna. Here in resignation and in Christian joy she awaited her end. In communion with her Saviour, in pleasant memories of dear friends in other lands, and in spirit longings for the communion of sainted friends who had already gone above, she had great delight until she was called herself to all the glory and joy of a Christian's final triumph. She had finished her life-work ; she had given up all she had clung to on earth ; she had nobly resigned her earthly interest, in her devoted and loved husband, and she was ready to go. Too weak to utter words for human ears, she spoke her last benediction in the sweet smile which lighted up her face, as with the radiance of her new home in Heaven. An appropriate monument marks the place of her interment in a quiet spot in the village where she died, on which the record may be read : ' To benevolent efforts for the youth and the ignorant of her native city ; for the neglected remnant of its aboriginal inhabitants, and for the benighted females of Syria, she devoted all her ardent, expansive, and untiring energies as a servant of Christ, until, sinking under missionary labors at Beyrout, she was brought hither and died in triumphant faith, Sept. 30, 1836, aged 34.' JANE E. Coit, daughter of Nathanael and Esther Olmsted Coit, born Nov. 25, 1818, married Albert R. Harris, a grocery merchant in New London, Jan. 15, 1838. She died Jan. 15, 1864, and Mr. Harris married her sister Elisabeth, the widow of Aquilla Murray, Nov. 4, 1868.

The following notice appeared in the Christian Secretary soon after her decease :

Died in New London, on Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1864, Mrs. JANE ESTHER HARRIS, wife of Mr. Albert R. Harris, aged 46 years.

The death of this godly woman will cause sadness in a wide circle of admiring and loving friends. Her natural nobility of mind, her cheerfulness of disposition and manners, and her sterling piety, made friends of all good people who knew her, and made those love her most who knew her best. She belonged to one of the oldest and most respectable families of New London. Her grandfather and grandmother were constituent members in the First Baptist church of this city at the time of its organization. Jane was born in New York, where her father, Mr. Nathaniel Coit, a native of New London, was then living. Her mother died when she was fourteen months old and she came to live with her aunt Elizabeth Coit when she was four and a half years old. Her natural disposition was amiable, and during all the period which she spent with her aunt, from her infancy to her marriage, she was the light and joy of the household, and after her marriage she exercised such an affectionate care and interest in her adopted mother's welfare as caused the pious old lady often to give thanks to God that she had been entrusted with her training and education, and blessed with her society. Jane was the child of many prayers, which seem to have been graciously answered by her conversion, which took place during a revival of considerable breadth and power when she was 16 years of age.

An extract from a letter written to her father soon after her conversion, sets forth her views and feelings at this time. "Your prayers for your child, dear father, I trust have been answered to the saving of my soul. I can truly say that I have taken more comfort within three weeks than I ever took in all the days of my life in sin and vanity. 'Bless the Lord, O my soul,' I have that blessed hope of one day reigning with you and my dear mother in His kingdom of eternal glory. Father, pray for me that I may never turn back to the beggarly elements of this world; but that I may live close to the Lord and set such examples to the world and my associates, that they may take knowledge of me that I am a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus."

From first to last, her experience was clear, earnest, and decided; her life was consistent, and her memory will be fragrant for a long time in the church of which she was a beloved sister.

There are several traits which deserve particular mention, and are worthy of our imitation. Her cheerfulness made sunshine where she went, and yet she was never rude or unlady-like. In her mirth she never forgot that she was a Christian. She showed most beautifully how Christian sobriety differs from gloom and ascetic despondency, with which it is sometimes confounded.

Her domestic traits were such as are not often equaled, never surpassed. As a housekeeper, she was neat, orderly, tasteful, and economical; as a wife, she was faithful, capable, and loving; as a mother, she was affectionate, provident, and watchful, devoted, and prayerful. In the church she was a laborer. Ever since her conversion, for 29 years, she has been a regular attendant and participant in the female prayer-circle; and in the social meetings her voice was often heard in prayer and song. Clouds and rains did not prevent her from going up to the Sanctuary on the Sabbath, for which she used to give this reason: she thought there would not be many out, and there was the more need of her. Where there was sickness, or death, or poverty in the neighborhood, she would go, and if she had not the means of relief herself, she would go to those who had. At each of her last meetings, in the female prayer-meeting and in the covenant-meeting, she was wonderfully blessed, and seemed to have been taken up into a mountain apart, where she beheld the glory of the Saviour and was strengthened for the last trial and final triumph of her faith. The day before her death she called her family together and bade each and all who were present an affectionate good-bye. To her motherly aunt who came to see her Monday, she said, "I did not expect to see you again on this side of the eternal world. On account of my children and you, I would like to stay a little longer if it were the Lord's will—but all is pleasant and delightful with me—I am not afraid to die—I am only going a little before you." After an illness of only three or four days, on Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock, she fell sweetly asleep in Jesus, in the full assurance of a glorious resurrection and blissful immortality beyond the grave.—Com.

REV. CHARLES S. Coit, son of Nathanael and Miriam Place Coit, was born in the city of New York, April 14, 1822. At the age of five years his parents moved to Bloomfield, a beautiful town in New Jersey, now in the suburbs of Newark. Here on his father's farm and in the school he devoted his time until the 17th year of his age. In the absence of his father, the supervision of the farm and its work fell to his lot, requiring hard physical exertion, which for one so young and not of a vigorous constitution was a severe tax, and yet this experience and the habits of industry acquired gave firmness and strength to his constitution, and developed the feeble youth into a manly form, healthful and vigorous, so essential to the ministerial work. The knowledge he then gained of business and men has been of vast service to him since, and improved to good advantage.

James Tully
Chas. S. Coit

From the age of seventeen to twenty years, he made sundry attempts in New York and Brooklyn to acquire a knowledge of the business of practical architecture, of which he was passionately fond. His taste in this direction was often manifested in youth, in the construction of boats, carriages, houses, and the like, and in later years in the planning of churches, parsonages, &c. But Providence had for him a nobler work than that to which he then aspired. His godly father had prayed that Charles might be called to preach "the gospel of the kingdom," and his prayer was answered. One of his employers in business was burned out, the other failed, and returning home in 1843 to share in a blessed work of revival in progress at Mt. Clair, near his father's residence, he was the subject of converting grace, and soon after united with the Methodist Episcopal church. What a change! New joys, new aims, new plans are now developed, for he is soon convinced that he is called to work on the great spiritual building, even the temple, and at the altar as one of its ministers. When called to this holy work, he felt the need of a better preparation, and turned his attention to the study of theology, under the direction of his Pastor, Rev. C. S. Vancleve, then stationed at Mt. Clair. Subsequently he prosecuted his studies in the New Jersey Conference seminary at Pennington. While delving in classic lore, in languages and mathematics, in his seminary course, he did good work for Christ and souls, leading numbers of fellow-students to the cross, some of whom are now his fellow-laborers as gospel ministers.

He closed his connexion with the seminary in July, 1846, with credit to himself and honor to his instructors in the institution. Rev. I. N. Felch, a Presiding Elder of the New Jersey Conference, in the following September appointed him as a supply on Sandiston Circuit, which lies on the Delaware river, a fine field to try the mettle of a young man—hard work, a scattered population, rough roads, long journeys, and small compensation except in the souls saved. The winter was severe, and yet he was equal to his new position, and received at the close of the year a recommendation to the Conference as “a young man well qualified for the work of the ministry.” His pleasant colleague, Rev. H. B. Beegle, and himself found many kind friends, and had pleasant seasons together. In April, 1847, he was admitted as a probationer in the New Jersey annual Conference, which met at Salem, and since that period to this date, a quarter of a century, he has been a zealous and successful minister of the gospel. Few men have done more effective work in twenty-five consecutive years.

The following is the list and order of the appointments he has filled since his admission into conference: New Prospect, Rockland Lake, N. Y., Port Jervis, Hackensack, Hacketts-town, Pitman church, New Brunswick (of which he was the first pastor, and he built this church), Hoboken, Madison, Bethel, L. I., Newark, New Providence, Fulton Street, Elizabeth, Newtown District as Presiding Elder four years, and Dover, N. J., where he is just closing his third year.

On the 22d of December, 1852, he was married to R. Malinda Harrison, only daughter of the late Demas Harrison of Newark, and half-sister of Rev. James M. Tuttle of the Newark Conference, who has proved herself well qualified in every respect for the wife of an itinerant minister, and who has by her personal attractions, influence, piety, and usefulness, been an helpmeet indeed and greatly aided him in his work.

Mr. Coit is now (February, 1872), in the 50th year of his age, enjoys good health and hard work, is closing up his pastorate at Dover with great success. A gracious revival is now in progress. Eighty persons have already professed faith in Christ. His whole soul is in his work, and he is very effective as a revivalist in bringing sinners to Jesus. His devotion, zeal, and industry since he entered the work of the ministry have done much in improving the temporal and spiritual interests of the church of his choice. His efficiency as a Presiding Elder was marked. His District was large, rough, and mountainous, many appointments, and preaching often; frequently when his regular official work was done, at his quarterly meetings, remaining to assist in special efforts, and thus cheering and greatly aiding his preachers in their fields of labor. In the administration of the affairs of his District, there was manifested remarkable discretion. Few Presiding Elders have been more successful and popular, both among preachers and people of his district. By his influence and energy he secured an excellent house as a permanent residence for the Presiding Elder—a grand achievement, which few others could have accomplished. This will be a monument to his skill and force for years to come.

Mr. Coit's gifts are eminently practical. He has a well-balanced intellect. A warm heart and genial nature, and the culture he has acquired, make him a safe counsellor, a warm friend, a pleasant companion, and an interesting and instructive preacher. His pulpit efforts are often very effective. His voice is strong, full, musical, and well cultivated. In the midst of an earnest exhortation, while the audience is throbbing with emotion under his stirring words, he will add to the interest of the occasion by some appropriate melody, singing most sweetly, and thus more deeply impressing his subject upon the hearts of the people. The effect is oftentimes thrilling. In person he is of gentlemanly bearing, rather stoutly built, shoulders broad, deep chest, of medium height, black eyes and hair, the latter now slightly gray. It is hoped that Providence will spare him for many years to prosecute the work in which he is earnestly engaged. (Communicated by an intimate friend and brother in the ministry.)

REV. JOHN SUMMERFIELD Coit, son of Nathanael and Miriam Place Coit, born Sept. 18, 1828, married Ellen Nafie Harriman, widow of Samuel Harriman, June 7, 1853, and died Jan. 7, 1868. The following obituary notice appeared in the Christian Advocate soon after his decease:—"Rev. John Summerfield Coit, son of the late Nathanael Coit of Bloomfield, N. J., and brother of Rev. Charles Coit, Presiding Elder of the Newton District, Newark Conference, died in Montana, Iowa, Jan. 7, 1868, aged thirty-nine years, three months, and twenty days. The morning of his life was spent at the home of his parents, within the bounds of the same range of hills that mark the spot now chosen for his grave. His parents were sterling Christians of the early Methodist type, "full of faith and the Holy Ghost." Hence, in his earlier years, our departed brother was the subject of religious convictions and awakenings. At this period of life he was noted for obedience, honesty, industry, and perseverance; a model son. When about seventeen years of age he chose the profession of builder as the vocation of his life, and apprenticed himself to Mr. Henry Lieber, a workman of skill in the city of Newark, N. J. While here attending to his duties he became thoroughly awakened and renewed the vows of earlier years to serve the Lord, and was soon after clearly and powerfully converted. He joined the Halsey Street charge on probation, but soon after identified himself with the young and vigorous society of Orange Street, where he was rapidly promoted to the positions of Sabbath school teacher, class leader, exhorter, and local preacher. He now felt it his duty to give himself wholly to the work of the ministry, but having succeeded his employer in his business, he said, "What shall I do with this knowledge and these tools?" This question was answered by two fires, in which he twice lost shop and tools. He then entered Pennington Seminary, where he spent a year and a half in hard study, during which he is said to have been a model of correct deportment and industry, by which he became proficient in the English branches, and so far advanced in the Latin as to be honored with the Valedictory at the last term. The want of young men for the work, his ardent desire to be engaged in saving souls, together with an inviting call from a Presiding Elder, induced him to leave the seminary and enter upon the active duties of the ministry. His first field of labor was under the Presiding Elder, in care of the newly organized society at Elizabethport. He was received on trial in the New Jersey Conference in 1853, and continued in the active work until his death. In June, 1858, he was married to Ellen Harriman, of Newark City, who, with five children, now mourn the loss of husband and father. At the last session of the Newark Conference he desired and received a transfer to the Des Moines Conference, at the subsequent session of which he was appointed to the Montana charge, where he met with a cordial reception to the hearts and fellowship of the people. His letters to the writer and others clearly indicate that he was pleased with his new surroundings in the work of Christ. The vast prairies, the rapidly multiplying and growing towns, of the great West, the privilege of having a part in molding and directing the developments of society, in the interests of religion and human elevation, seemed to rejuvenate his ministerial life and animate him with the hope of future years of usefulness, in the cause he loved so well. But just here he ceased to work and live. Toward the close of December the typhoid fever broke in upon the family. First two of his little daughters and then himself were taken down. On Sabbath afternoon little Mary was brought to his bedside in a dying state. He was yet conscious, and bade her affectionate and tearful farewells! He lingered until Tuesday, the 7th, and then followed the little lamb to the presence of the chief Shepherd in the world of glory. The bodies of father and child in one coffin arrived in Bloomfield on Sabbath, the 12th, and the funeral service took place in the Methodist Episcopal church on Tuesday, the 14th, in the presence of a large audience, including some twenty or more ministers. Seldom if ever have we participated in a scene so solemn, so affecting. Long must it be remembered by all that were present.

He was emphatically a good man—an humble, honest-hearted, devoted, and useful Methodist minister. Beloved by his brethren of the Conference, he enjoyed the affection of the people, in his several fields of labor, and was instrumental in adding many to the church of Christ. His faith in Christ, and love for his cause and work, were strong and active to the last, absorbing the thoughts and utterances of his last hours. We magnify the grace of God that was in him. And while we doubt not that he has entered into the joy of his Lord, we commend his bereaved companion and little ones to the prayers and sympathies of the church."

REV. JOHN TOWNSEND Coit, son of George and Hannah Townsend Coit, born May 8, 1824, at Buffalo, N. Y., showed in his early years great amiability of disposition and marked intellectual tastes. He graduated at Yale College in 1844, having while a member of that institution developed the ripened fruit of that good seed which maternal piety had planted. After studying theology for three years at Andover, Mass.,

he went abroad and spent two years in study and travel in Europe. On returning, November, 1851, he entered upon the work of a preacher, but did not take upon him the responsibilities of a Pastor until July, 1855, when he was ordained and installed over the Presbyterian church in Albion, N. Y. In this charge he labored with great acceptance and success for five years, receiving into the church at two successive communions one hundred and fifty converts, and securing the affections of the people to a remarkable degree. In June, 1860, he removed to Rochester, on invitation from St. Peter's church in that city, over which he was installed in July following. On the 18th of January, as he was officiating in his old pulpit at Albion on a visit, he was suddenly attacked with disease, which not only obliged him to desist from further service on that occasion, but by rapid progress led to the termination of all his labors by death on the Friday following, Jan. 23, 1863, aged 38. A funeral sermon on the 27th in Rochester by Rev. Walter Clark, D. D., of Buffalo, has been published with an appropriate tribute to the peculiarly lovely and excellent character of Mr. Coit. He married Martha J. Davis of Norwich, Conn., Nov. 25, 1855, but had no children.

3. I do give to my grandchildren of ye relieks of my son Joseph Cpl't deceased, viz. : Elisabeth and Mary Coit, besides what I and my wife have given to their father and his heirs and assigns forever, in lands lying in Preston, and I do give each of them one sheap apeaco, to be paid to them by my executors after my decease, and that is to be looked upon as ye whole of their portion.

4. I do give to my loving and dutiful son Isanc C., besides what I have already given him in money for lands that I have sold to Elijah Dyer, Daniel Downing, Simon Spalding, Capt. FAMILY GATHERING.

HASTINGS, Oswego Co., N. Y., July 20.

Editors of the Watertown Daily Times:

It has just been my happy privilege to attend one of those large family gatherings that occur but once in one's life-time, and to but very few individuals at that. The eleven sons and daughters of Hon. James J. Coit, with their wives, husbands, and children, making a company of thirty-three in all, met at the old homestead yesterday, to enjoy a reunion, and visit. Mr. Coit was born in Griswold, Connecticut, in May, 1803, and is, therefore, now 68 years old. He came to Hastings, Oswego county, at the age of 21, and purchased his present farm, then all woods. Here for 47 years he has lived and raised his large family. His reputation for industry, honesty, intelligence, and piety, in all this region, is thoroughly established. For over 40 years he has been a consistent and steadfast member of the Presbyterian Church. His fellow-townsmen have honored him with an uninterrupted term of office for over 30 years, as School Commissioner, Justice of the Peace, Assessor, Supervisor, &c. In 1859 he was elected by a large majority to represent the 2d Assembly District of Oswego county in the State Legislature, where he was known as an intelligent and honest legislator, whom professional politicians could neither manipulate nor buy. It would be well for our State legislation if we would send more such men to Albany.

The 11 children are divided into five sons and six daughters. They have all obtained a good education, and all but one have engaged for a longer or shorter period in school teaching, making a sum total together of 145 terms of teaching. They are all but one also members of the Christian Church. I may be pardoned, perhaps, in making personal mention of each one in the order of their ages: Caroline is the wife of Edgar F. Morris, who served two years in the war, as 1st Lieutenant of Co. I, 184th regiment, N. Y. S. V., and acting Adjutant and Provost Marshal. Rosetta has just closed her 42d term of school. For six years past she has been engaged in teaching among the Southern freedmen, the last two years holding the position of Principal of the Union Normal School of New Orleans, La. James is a prosperous business man in Adams. Jane is the widow of Gilson Goodwin, who died on his way home from the army, at the close of the war. Martha is the wife of Rev. M. D. Kinney, who is a graduate of the Wesleyan University, Ct., and now pastor of State street M. E. Church of Watertown, N. Y. Albert is a graduate of Rochester University and Theological Seminary, and now pastor of the Baptist Church of Wellsville, N. Y. Charles is a graduate of Rochester University and Auburn Theological Seminary, and now pastor of the North Presbyterian Church of Binghamton, N. Y. Jay is a farmer in Volney, Oswego county, and a deacon in the Presbyterian Church. Amelia is teacher of the public school of Central Square. Mary is the wife of Prof. S. M. Coon, who is a graduate of Rochester University and just elected Principal of the Black River Con. Seminary, at Antwerp, N. Y. Judson has just graduated at Fally Seminary, and will enter the first class of Syracuse University at its opening.

Such a family of children are surely the "heritage of the Lord," and are an inestimable joy to their parents in their declining years. After a most happy day that will never be forgotten, the company were all gathered together. Albert, on behalf of all, presented father and mother with a beautiful testimonial of their love, accompanying it with a tender address; father replied in touching words, commending them all to God: Beautiful songs were sung, and prayer was offered by M. D. Kinney.

There are some things worthy of note concerning this family, and many important lessons are suggested. They are remarkable for the steadfastness and vigor of their Christian and moral principles. I may be permitted to say also that they are unusually good singers. A quartette can be selected from them equal to the very best that can be found. This family is a most beautiful and forcible illustration of the power of rigid yet wise parental government, and home purity. During the whole 45 years, every day, God's word has been read and prayer has been offered in the presence of all the household.
