Arms: Azure, an eagle displayed with two heads argent, holding in the dexter paw a sceptre and in the sinister a rose proper within a bordure of the second, charged with cinquefoils and mullets alternately of the field.

Interpretation: The arms or shield is blue (azure) and on this is an eagle with two heads and wings wide apart (displayed) and silver (argent) in its right (dexter) paw is a sceptre and in the left (sinister) is a rose and these items are to be in natural or proper tinctures and they are within a bordure of the second tincture mentioned (silver) and on this silver is a charge of cinquefoils and stars (mullets) arranged alternately and they are to be of the tincture of the main part of the shield—the field. This is blue. (Authority; Burke's, "General Armory" London.)

The eagle is the king of all heraldic fowl with a long symbolic ancestry of warfare and divine power. The double head is a symbol of power over the east and the west. Of course the sceptre represents ruling authority and the rose is for peace.

A border was granted on which are five-leaved flowers (cinquefoils) and mullets (stars). Such items of design were frequent as indicating differencing (between families such as sons of the head family).

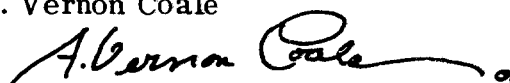

When warranted tinctures were granted to the first one to receive the coat of arms according to the man's characteristics. For instance, silver represented sincerity and peace; blue was for loyalty and truth.

The official record does not show a crest registered for this family. The very oldest heraldic designs did not have such registered. To the arms the knightly helmet and mantle or robe has been added. These are arranged like they were frequently seen in Days-Of-Old, when our knightly ancestor would hang his shield on a wall peg, then his helmet on the same peg over the shield and lastly he draped his battle torn cloak over the helmet with the ends falling down around the helmet.

Our heraldic ancestors were very proud of their coats of arms for they were a mark of social distinction. Without such an honor a man, "Was no gentleman" and of course his wife was no lady as families were rated in those days. So, frame this coat of arms well and hang it proudly as a document of family history.

HERE'S TO THE YEAR THAT'S AWA'

by John Dunlop (1750 - 1820)

1. Here's to the year that's awa'!

We'll drink it in strong and in sma';
And here's to ilk bonnie young lassie we lo'ed,
While swift flew the year that's awa';
And here's to ilk bonnie young lassie we lo'ed,
While swift flew the year that's awa'.

2. Here's to the sodger who bled,

And the sailor who bravely did fa';
Their fame is alive, tho' their spirits are fled
On the wings of the year that's awa';
Their fame is alive, tho' their spirits are fled
On the wings of the year that's awa'.

3. Here's to the friends we can trust

When the storms of adversity blaw,
May they live in our song, and be nearest our hearts,
Nor depart like the year that's awa';
Nor depart like the year that's awa'.

PROLOGUE

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF DUNLAP would have not been so interesting to write in its final form had not the author visited the scenes of origin of this ancient and honourable family where they settled after having come from Scotland.

The writer and his father visited Goshen, Goshen Pass, the vicinity of Harrisonburg Staunton, Lexington, the site of the Tinkling Springs Presbyterian Church, and Cowpasture Creek, located in Augusta and Rockbridge Counties, Virginia, during the summer of 1955. Here one is able to picture members of this clan working in the fields, tending their flocks, and during chores of sundry types on their large and spacious acreages. Too, flintlocks were always nearby to repel the advance of any Indian tribe which would venture too close to these hardy Scotch immigrants, who had come to Augusta County, Virginia, about 1730. These staunch Presbyterians came to British-America to begin a new way of life and worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience.

Captain Alexander Dunlop (later Dunlap) was born in Scotland (not North Ireland as some genealogists claim) in 1716 the son of Alexander and Antonia Brown Dunlop of Dunlop. Alexander Dunlop, Sr., had been a Scotch soldier in the Siege of Londonderry, North Ireland in 1689; it was he who held the lands of Dunlop from 1670 until 1683, when the English crown forced him to renounce all title. He was a Covenanter. Captain Dunlop married Anne MacFarlane (1715-1786), a daughter of Caleb MacFarlane, the last MacFarlane of MacFarlane, Loch Lomond, Scotland. They had four children. Captain Dunlop died in Goshen 1744 at the early age of twenty-eight; his widow married a few years later.

About 1783 another Dunlop (Dunlap) family came to Middlebrook, Virginia from Campbellton, Scotland. It was headed by John and Nancy Colvin Dunlap who had nine children. This family was very closely related to that of the above named. They were Presbyterians who settled, first, 1775, in New York, later in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, and later, 1783, in Augusta County, Virginia, where their descendants live today. The writer had the privilege of visiting Miss Henrietta Campbell Dunlap, Miss Lulu Dunlap, Samuel Dunlap, James Dunlap, and William McCorkle, descendants of this lineage; in their veins flow not only the blood of the Dunlops of Dunlop but of the Hannas of Castle Sorbie!

The topography of the beautiful valley of Virginia is much like that of the rolling hills of Ayrshire and Wigtonshire where lived many many centuries ago our ancestor, William Dunlop (cir. 1290). William Dunlop's ancestors were Celtic people who inhabited the southwestern part of Scotland before the time of Christ. One source of history states that this noble clan was descended from the kings of Scotia (now Ireland); another source traces the descent from Adam and Eve! However ancient the race may be we are certain that the mists rise when we probe into its glorious past; we trust that the future may be even brighter. It is no wonder that the Dunlaps and other Scottish and Scotch-Irish immigrants chose Harrisonburg, Winchester, Staunton, Lexington, and Goshen, to settle down and raise their families and graze their cattle and sheep, for it reminded them of their beloved homeland even though, there, they were bitterly persecuted by monarchs opposed to religious freedom. Here they remained for many decades marrying into such prominent families as the: MacFarlanes, Erskines, Gays, Alexanders, Grahams, Kerrs, Campbells, MacDonalds, Clarks, Hannas, Watsons, Hamiltons, Bells, Cunninghams, Davises, MacKees, MacCulloughs, MacCutchans, Camerons, Gatewoods, MacCorkles, and numerous other Scotch and Scotch-Irish families. Here in this healthy section we find blended together Highlander and Lowlander, all spiritual followers of Calvin and Knox.

There were other Dunlop families from Scotland who settled in New England, New York, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. Some of the Dunlops of Garnkirk came directly to Georgia and South Carolina, while some of the Virginia and Pennsylvania branches moved southward and settled in North and South Carolina. Following the Revolutionary War, in which a large number of Dunlaps participated, the first and second generation, moved into Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois; Miss Olivia Gertrude of Jacksonville represents the Illinois branch. They moved into Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi. During the Westward movement the west received many Dunlaps. And in this volume the reader will be surprised to learn of the many western branches all having roots in Virginia, Pennsylvania, or some other eastern state. The South Carolina branch of our family is represented today by Aunt Mary Dunlap Roddney of Rock Hill, S. C., Rev. Joseph Witherspoon Dunlap, minister of the Presbyterian Church at Darlington, South Carolina. He is descended from Alexander and Antonia Brown Dunlop through Samuel Dunlap, Lay Elder, their son. We also find that many Dunlaps in Texas, Mississippi, and Alabama, are too descended from Alexander and Antonia Brown Dunlop. They have played a most conspicuous part in the building of the South. Their sons and daughters became soldiers, politicians, lawyers, farmers, merchants, clergymen, homemakers, Librarians, School-teachers, and statesmen.

It is the explicit desire of the writer that this volume may stimulate descendants of this ancient clan to realise fully their heritage and to appreciate moreso the "Land of their Fathers" - Scotland and Ulster - in order that future descendants may rise up and call them blessed. As St. Paul was zealous for the knowledge of his ancestors so should we be concerned. Even the writers of the Holy Gospels were concerned with the genealogies of Christ not to mention the long lists in the Old Testament. To have absolutely no past or background gives one little hope for a future.

As this volume goes into one hundred or more homes it goes with a prayer that our fathers and mothers and their illustrious forebearers may be honoured for having found this HOUSE OF DUNLAP.

The Manse,

J.A.M.H.

Oak Hill, Ohio.

November 18, 1955.

Breathes there the man, with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,

 This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burn'd,
As home his footsteps he hath turn'd,

 From wandering on a foreign strand!
If such there breathe, go, mark him well;
For him no minstrel raptures swell;
High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim:
Despite those titles, power, and pelf,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust, from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonour'd, and unsung.

O Caledonia! stern and wild,
Meet nurse for a poetic child!
Land of brown heath and shaggy wood,
Land of the mountain and the flood,
Land of my sires! what mortal hand
Can e'er untie the filial band,
That knits me to thy rugged strand!

INTRODUCTION

THE HISTORY OF THE PARISH OF ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY - DUNLOP

a former minister of Dunlop.*

* Rev. John F. Bayne is now (1955) minister of the Bo'ness Presbyterian Church, Bo'ness, West Lothian, Scotland. Most of his work on Dunlop Parish is incorporated in the Introduction with an agreement between the author and himself.

A Note Concerning the Reverend John F. Bayne, M. A.
(Hons.), B.D. of Bo'ness, Scotland.

Rev. John F. Bayne is the author of Dunlop Parish: A History of Church, Parish, And Nobility, and the author of two other books dealing with parish histories.

Rev. Bayne was born in Pershire, Scotland. He attended Webster's Seminary, Kirriemuir (Medallist); Forfar Academy (Modern Medallist). He was graduated from St. Andrew's University, M.A., in 1915 with Honours in English Literature, English Language, and Philology, and Modern History. He also received various class distinctions (History Medallist), and was awarded the Tyndall Bruce Scholarship.

During the Great War (1914-1918), Rev. Bayne served as Sergeant and Sergeant-Major at St. Andrew's University O. T. C.; in 1916, Sergeant of the 6th Black Watch, Royal Highlanders; from 1917 until 1919 he was a Lieutenant in the Royal Garrison Artillery. He served overseas in France, Belgium, and on the Rhine.

He was graduated with his B.D. at St. Mary's College, St. Andrew's in 1920; Medallist, Church History; First, Divinity. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Stirling, 1920; Assistant at Tron Church, Edinburgh, 1920-1922; and in St. Andrew's Parish Church, Edinburgh, 1922-1924. He was ordained in St. Minian's Parish Church, Glasgow, in February of 1924, and was inducted to Dunlop Parish February 10, 1929.

He married Euphemia Adam Shirran on April 9, 1925, the eldest daughter of the late William Shirran of Edinburgh, Scotland. There are two daughters Rosemary Agnes (born May 15, 1931) and Yvonne Barbara (born May 31, 1934). The first born, a son, Ian Ferguson, was born January 13, 1926 and died June 4, 1930.

INTRODUCTION

I. NAME. The Scottish family name, Dunlop or Dunlap, provides in two syllables valuable evidence of the early history and origin of the Parish of Dunlop. The name Dunlop is derived from two Gaelic words, "dun," which means a "hill fort" or "strong place," and "luib," which denotes a "bend." The Gaelic "dun" is also found in Welsh as "din," in Gallic as "dunon," and the Latinised form is "dunum," and it is related to the Anglo-Saxon suffix "don," and the Anglo-Saxon word "tun," from which our word "town" came. Wherever the Gaelic form of "dun" is found as a prefix in a place name, it is reasonable to suppose that the original settlers were the early Celts (or Kelts) who gave the name which succeeding races never changed. The early Celt has left this indisputable evidence of his wide diffusion over central Scotland in such names as: Dumbarton, Dundee, Dunfermline, Dunbar, Dunipace, Dunkeld, and Dunlop. The chieftains of this ancient race build their homes on hills, which provided a natural means of defence. Near the Church of Dunlop there is such a hill. It stands at the confluence of three small streams, the Templehouse Burn, the Black Burn, and the Glazert Water. Near the point of junction the Glazert sweeps around the hill in a picturesque bend. The name of the Celtic chieftain's stronghold built on the hill was inevitable. He could not have called it anything else. The fortified hill (Dun) by the bend of the stream (Luib) - Dunlop.

II. ROMANS IN SCOTLAND. During the Roman occupation of part of Britain the legionaries established a precarious and intermittent military ascendancy over the whole of Scotland south of Antonine's Wall, built between the estuaries of the Clyde and the Forth. Celtic forts would be destroyed or occupied by the Roman Legions. The rare dispersion of authenticated Roman forts in Scotland would seem to indicate that the Romans were content to capture and hold the forts of the natives. It may be something more than poetic imagination to envisage Roman soldiers standing sentinel on the fort at Dunlop Hill guarding the line of communication between Carlisle and Dumbarton. In the century or two following the departure of the Roman legions the history of "the land of our fore-fathers" is somewhat hidden in the mist, but significant racial movements, migrations, and invasions were slowly gathering together those strange peoples who were later to emerge and consolidate into the Scottish nation. Scotland did not become a kingdom until 1018; it did not achieve any measure of Church establishment that would make Christianity a living and a dynamic force in the land until the twelfth century; and it did not acquire her present territorial limits until 1266.

III. SCOTLAND BORN. In the late 16th century four great races emerged as rivals to fight for possession of the land: (1) the Picts or Goidelic Celts, (2) the Britons or Brythonic Celts, (3) the Scots, and (4) the Angles. From the union of these four races, blended with stray elements of adventuresome and marauding Danes, Irish, Norsemen, and Normans, the Scottish nation was born. Let us recognise, however, that a few of the original settlers remained untouched. The people who settled in the district of Cuningham were Brythonic Celts, and they were related to the race who occupied Britian during the Roman occupation and invasion. It was not until 573 A.D., at a battle near Carlisle, that this hardy people asserted their independence, and separated from the solid body of Britons who stretched as far as the Bristol Channel. A Northern Kingdom of Britons, Strathclyde, was then established, with territory extending from the Solway Firth to the Clyde. Dumbarton, "the fortified hill of the Britons," was the capitol. Contemporary with Strathclyde there were these other kingdoms in Scotland: North Pictland, occupying territory north of a line drawn between Fort William and Montrose; South Pictland, covering the counties of Mearns, Angus, Perth, Fife, and Kinross; Bernicia, holding the Tweedlands and the Lothians, strategically placed for allegiance with the powerful Kingdom of Northumbria; Dalriada, embracing Argyll and the Isles. From the fifth to the ninth centuries conflicts among these rival kingdoms were constant, but gradually union was effected. In 844 A.D. Kenneth MacAlpine became ruler of the United Picts and Scots. One of his successors, Constantine III (900-942), a great general in the wars against the Danes and the Norse, and wise in the ruling of his kingdom, induced Strathclyde to accept his brother as king. The two kingdoms remained separated for another century, rivals in the struggle for ascendancy, or united in common cause against the Danes. Strathclyde ceased to be a separate kingdom in 1018, when it was annexed by Malcolm II. Malcolm acquired the Kingdom of Lothian by his victory at Carham in 1018. Scotland was now a United Kingdom.

IV. THE CHURCH OF DUNLOP. The Christian faith came to Scotland perhaps as early as 100 A.D. Tertullian, the great Roman historian, wrote about 200 A.D. that "place in Britain inaccessible to the Romans have yielded to Christ." We may assume that these sections may well have been north of Hadrian's Wall or even Antonine's Wall. Without doubt, it was Roman legionaries who first brought the teachings of Jesus Christ to Scotland. And during the years when Scotland was in the upheaval of national emergence the Hand of God was at work. Christian missionaries of the stature of Apostles such as: St. Ninian, St. Columba, St. Kentigern (St. Mungo), and St. Cuthbert, came to our ancestor's land. They and their faithful disciples, along with numerous lesser saints whose names are perpetuated in the saint names of Scotland, had succeeded by the end of the ninth century in establishing Christian religious practises all over Scotland. Skene's Chronicles of the Picts and Scots makes mention of the "Scottish Church" as far back as 878 A.D.

The first Christian Church in Dunlop was erected near the relics of the Druids. Dr. Thomas Chalmers wrote in 1824:

"In this vicinity there was in former times a Chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, which had an appropriate endowment for support of a Chaplain. After the Reformation, this Chapel was allowed to fall in ruins, but the remains of it are still to be seen on the side of a small rivulet, the Black Burn, which was here crossed by stepping stones called 'The Lady Steps,' and this name is still continued although the steps have been superseded by a bridge."

There are reasonable grounds for assuming that near the Druid stone (called Thor's Great Stane), on a field still called "the Templecroft," the first Christian place of worship in Dunlop was built.

The missionary who evangelised the early settlers of Ayrshire, the Brythonic Celts, and who brought the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the Celtic tribe at Dunlop was St. Winning. St. Winning has been variously called: St. Finbar, Finnian, Vimin, Vinnen, and Wynnyng.* St. Winning was a Scotsman by birth; he was trained in the monastery of Moville in Ireland. In 520 A.D. he crossed to Scotland and became a scholar and an instructor at St. Ninian's "Candida Casa." He remained there for twenty years. While at Moville he had under his charge the famous St. Columba. He died at Kilwinning in 570 A.D. and is buried there. Undoubtely St. Winning covered Dunlop in his evangelistic work. This saint found that the Druid Celtic chieftains and his followers readily accepted Jesus Christ because their deeply religious instinct craved for something more satisfying than their pagan faith could ever give. And, too, it was the "fullness of God's time."

After St. Winning had won the chief to his cause, he received sanction and assistance to oust the Druids from their place of worship and from their dwellings around the Thugart Stane, Chapel Craggs, and the Holy Well. He took over these places and there build his Church and founded a colony of monks. From there they went out to evangelise the tribesmen, who had their homes in the watered dells and under the rocky bluffs that are features of the topography of this parish. St. Winning built his Church at Kilwinning (Church of Winning) near a sacred well and Druid grove. The site and well were later appropriated by Romanised and Monastic Christianity. This general practise supports the theory that the Lady Chapel was the Celtic cradle of Christianity in Dunlop.*

The Church of Dunlop is beautifully situated in a miniature landscape of river, hill, and dell, at the west end of the village. It stands on the site of the original 12th century Church, or where it may be assumed the first Church was erected when the parish was formed. The present Church was erected in 1835, and opened in the last month of that year. It is of rectangular design, lying east and west. An aisle projects northwards from the centre. A massive tower, sixty feet high, crowned with an embattled parapet, rises from the east end of the building fronting the public highway. The Gothic arched windows in the upper and lower divisions of the tower give a pleasing relief to the severity of the design.

The main body of the Church is lighted by seventeen windows designed to give a maximum light and an artistic variety of form. Those in the upper storey, with the exception of two small lights in the east gable, are arched and divided into two lights by mullions and transoms. Those in the lower storey are of ordinary design.

* See Archibald Scott's The Pictish Nation, Its People and Its Church, pp. 57-58.

The only part of the Church with a claim to antiquity is the Dunlop Aisle, which, on the north gable, presents authentic architectural features of the 17th century, as the date 1641 clearly evidences. This is explained by the fact that when the Church was rebuilt in 1835 an effort was made to preserve the sculptured stone-work and architectural features of the Church it replaced, and the Church preceding that. The aisle belongs to the family of Dunlop of Dunlop, to whom the Church owes a great debt for their interest, generosity, and patronage.

Over the lintel of the entrance to the aisle is a deep frieze and cornice, from which rise two columns having composite pillars. Between the columns there is a small window-like recess backed with ashlar. Over the capitals of the columns is another deep frieze and cornice, from which rise two pillars with composite capitals. Between the columns a recess, now backed with ashlar, suggests that here was a niche for a saint when such images were tolerated. On the capitals of the columns rest another frieze and cornice surmounted by the principal window in the gable. This window is framed in elaborate architectural designs. The sides are decorated with ornamental scroll-work. On the top of the terminals are the heads of a man and a woman suggesting likenesses of persons in the time of King James VI. These stone heads support a frieze and cornice surmounted by a semi-circular stone. In the centre of the stone is an escutcheon surrounded with the fancifully carved scroll-work typical of the Elizabethan and early Jacobean era. In the centre of the escutcheon are two monogrammes (composed of the letters - I. D. E. C. -) with the date 1641 above. The windows right and left of the door are crowned with triangular stones similarly ornamented with scroll-work. In the centre of each is a shield, with the letters - I. D. - on the right one and - E. C. - on the left one. These are the initials of James Dunlop, 15th Laird of that Ilk, who built the original aisle, and of his wife, Elisabeth, the daughter of Alexander Cunninghame of Corsehill. This series of designs is completed with a tall fleur-de-lis, which rises above the ornamental crown of the gable window.

The interior of the Church at Dunlop is notable for its galaxy of stained-glass windows. Only three of the lights remain to be illuminated in colour. The neat arrangement of transepts, aisle, and galleries, the chastely plain decor and the handsome pulpit, all suffused with a soft glow of light from the multicoloured windows, render the building pleasing to the eye and conducive to the true worship of Almighty God. The Church was seated for 750 souls, but a slight extension to the choir stall in 1931 reduced that number by about twenty.

The interior of the Church has been considerably improved and enhanced in the past fifty years. In 1882 Thomas Douglas Cunninghame Graham, then proprietor of Dunlop House, presented a series of handsome stained-glass windows executed by Powell of London. These were built into the lights of the south wall of the Church. In the centre of this wall is the pulpit. The two windows, upper and lower on either side of the pulpit, portray the Twelve Disciples. The two windows at the east end of the wall depict Abraham and Moses; David and Isaiah. The two windows next the west end feature the Blessed Virgin and Dorcas; Eunice and Priscilla. They are made in the style peculiar to the period; the figures are conventional; all have their proper emblems, and each is surrounded with a frame of architectural devices. The following inscription runs along the tier of windows on the ground floor:

“These windows were erected by T. D. C. Graham, in memory of Thomas Dunlop Douglas, born 1st January 1776, died 30th January 1869. Also his wife Rosina Hunter, born 28th June 1785, died 26th March 1864.”

Three stained-glass windows light the gallery of the Dunlop Aisle. They depict Faith, Hope, and Charity (love). “The greatest of these” occupies the central position in the gable.

The interior was still further enhanced in the summer of 1884 by extensive renovations and improvements inspired by Thomas Douglas Cunninghame Graham of Dunlop, who generously defrayed the greater part of the expense.

The whole of the pews, choir, platform, and pulpit were entirely remodelled. The pulpit was designed after the style of ornamentation of the windows of the aisle. A handsome baptismal font designed to harmonise with the pulpit was placed at the intersection of the main passages. The front of the gallery was adorned with embossed work, and the walls and ceiling redecorated. These improvements were carried out according to plans and designs by John W. Small, F. S. A.

The lower windows of the Dunlop Aisle were at the same time filled with the armorial bearings of Dunlop of Dunlop in the east wall, Dunlop Douglas of Dunlop in the west wall, and Cunninghame Graham of Dunlop in the north wall. The only alteration then made on the exterior of the building was the addition of an archway, composed entirely of ashlar, to protect the stair and doorway leading to the vault of the Dunlops of that ilk. This vault, a commodious and well-ventilated structure, is situated below the Dunlop Aisle.

The reconditioned Church was reopened on August 31, 1884. Other improvements have been made at various times. The late Francis Henderson, of the Anchor Line of steamships (Henderson Brothers), while tenant of Dunlop House, conceived a great love of the Church, and was a regular worshipper. He expressed this love in various ways, notably by filling with stained glass the gable window of the vestry gallery. This window depicts the Old Man in Adam on one side, and the New Man in Christ Risen, Glorious, and Triumphant, on the other, with the text: "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." On the sill is a brass tablet with the inscription:

"This window was designed by Alf Webster, who on the outbreak of the Great War in 1914 joined the Gordon Highlanders as 2nd Lieut., and gave his life for his country."

At various times there were inserted into the east windows of the Church the armorial bearings of other noble families connected with the parish. Mrs. Houison Crawford (also Crawford) inserted in the west windows of the ground floor the arms of the Dalrymple Hays on the north side, and those of the Houison Crawfurds on the south side. In the corresponding windows of the gallery are the arms of the Mures of Caldwell, and of the Eglinton family, to which the then Lady Mure belonged.

In 1934 Mrs. Henderson presented a window, designed by Powell of London, and built it into the north window of the vestry gallery. The inscription on the sill reads:

"This window was erected to the most loving memory of Francis Henderson by his devoted wife and three children. During the years he resided at Dunlop House his Christian simplicity and unobtrusive generosity endeared him to all, and he will long be remembered by those in this parish."

Mrs. Henderson travelled from her residence in the south of England along with her son, Lieut. Colonel Sir Vivian Henderson, M.P., Lady Henderson, and daughter, and unveiled the window. The designers of the window describe it:

"The two lights of the window depict St. Nicholas and St. Christopher, selected as suggesting Mr. Henderson's connexion with shipping, and his love of children. The face of St. Nicholas suggests a likeness to Mr. Henderson. In the tracery at the top the Henderson arms, with those of Hammond on 'An escutcheon of pretence' as his wife was an heiress."

This galaxy of handsome stained-glass windows depicting patriarch and king, saints and disciples, Adam and the Lord of Life, together with the flash of numerous armorial bearings, lend to the Church a distinction equalled by few other country Churches in Scotland.

The congregation, deeply sensible of the value of their place of worship, have shown their love and appreciation by responding generously to every appeal to preserve and enhance its beauty. In 1924 the sum of 1800 pound sterling was raised for further renovations and redecoration. About the same time the Church was handed over to the General Trustees, and an additional sum was secured from the heritors. With the monies raised for the Church improvement scheme the Clandeboye School was converted into the present handsome hall; the interior of the Church was beautified, and electric lighting installed; the small room which served for a vestry was considerably enlarged, and tastefully furnished. The view from the vestry window, which fills the west gable, presents a pleasing picture; the water of Glazert, in the fore-ground, winds its way to the sea between Dunlop Hill and the Glebe Hill; beyond are swelling pasture-lands, dotted with white farm-houses and small plantations; the hills of Kilbirnie and West Kilbride fill the background and fade softly into the blue distance.

At the union of the Churches in 1929 the Kirk Sessions of the Parish Church and the United Free Church agreed to distinguish the Churches by these names: the Parish Church to be known as the Laigh Church and the former United Free Church as the High Church.

V. THE MANSE OF DUNLOP. Before the Reformation (cir. 1517) the old manse stood on the north side of Main Street, and was entirely surrounded by Church lands. These lands must have extended at that time to approximately 40 to 50 acres. During the dividing up of the spoil of the Reformation all this land, with the exception of nine acres, passed into lay hands. The manse was reserved for the use of the vicar and his successors.

In 1787 the heritors decided to build a new manse. "As the situation of the old manse was thought inconvenient, being mostly surrounded by the lands of Kirkland-Dunlop belonging to Gabriel Dunlop," the heritors entered into an agreement with him, whereby "the old manse and offices of the parish of Dunlop, with the garden thereof and entries to the same," were excambied for 54 falls, or thereby, of lands of Kirkland-Dunlop lying on the opposite side of the highway and adjoining the glebe, he also paying to the heritors the sum of 50 pounds sterling as an additional consideration in making the exchange. The disposition by Major Andrew Dunlop of Dunlop for himself and the other heritors in implement of the agreement is dated at Dunlop House, May 26, 1787.

The manse was accordingly built in 1781. Considerable additions, alterations, and improvements have been made since then. A substantial addition was made in 1814. Reverend Matthew Dickie, who was minister of the Church from 1834 to 1843, further improved the manse by adding the west wing. Since 1915 over 1000 pounds sterling have been spent by the heritors in bringing the manse up to modern requirements. In 1929, when Church and manse were handed over to the General Trustees, the manse was again overhauled, and fitted with electric lights.

The manse may be described as somewhat too commodious, but comfortable old house, quaintly rambling, like most old buildings, but beautifully situated with a southern exposure in a pleasing landscape of wood and pasture.

VI. THE DUNLOP BURIAL GROUND. The old burial ground surrounded the Church, and by various expedients was made to serve the needs of the parish until 1884, when the heritors purchased half an acre of glebe land to provide more accommodation. In 1934 the Ayrshire County Council made a further extension, purchasing an acre and a third of glebe land, but using only about a half of the same. The two extensions are harmoniously merged into the old ground, the whole community having co-operated in preserving the ancient site and amenities.

One of the old stones in the graveyard is worthy of note. It stands against the south wall of the Church tower. The inscription which is dated, 1732, reads:

“This . is . the . burial . place . of . John . Dunlop . of . overhill . and . Barbara .

Barbara Gilmour Dunlop was the originator of that brand of cheese known all over the world as Dunlop Cheese.

VII. DUNLOP CHEESE. During the Covenanting persecution Barbara Gilmour (Gilmore) Dunlop took refuge in North Ireland. There she was supposed to have learned the art of making sweet milk cheese, of the brand now so popular, and made and marketed all over the world with the trade name “Dunlop Cheese.” Reverend Thomas Brisbane admitted to Reverend Matthew Dickie that he had merely heard the Irish theory of origion in his “Old Statistical Account.” At any rate, wherever Barbara Gilmour Dunlop learned the art, it was she who introduced it to Dunlop. Her stone cheese press is still preserved in the Hill Farm.

The vogue of Dunlop Cheese rapidly spread in a district entirely devoted to dairy farming, but unable to dispose of fresh-milk, and accordingly obliged to develop cheese making. A sturdy board of independent cheese merchants soon sprang up in the Kirkcubright, helping the growth of the former small hamlet into a village. They purchased the cheeses from the farmers, and conveyed them to the Glasgow shops by road. The advent of the railway enabled the farmers to market their milk direct to Glasgow, and the flourishing trade in cheese devolved into an odd-time expedient for using surplus milk.

VIII. DUNLOP CATTLE: THE AYRSHIRE BREED. Dunlop gave the world not only a specific brand of cheese, but a famous breed of cattle - the Ayrshire. John Speir, Esq., in a scholarly and scientific thesis on "The Early History of the Ayrshire Breed of Cattle," stated that the breed originated in Dunlop, or, at least, first appeared in the Parish of Dunlop about the end of the 18th century. It was brought into the district by one of the Dunlops of that ilk, and may actually have been bred by him. It was first known as Dunlop cattle, but the breed became so popular that herds spread over Cunninghame, when it acquired the name of "Cunninghame" cattle. The value of the breed for dairy purposes led to its adoption all over the country, so that it was given the name of "Ayrshire."

These cattle are pied, white and brown, are short in the leg, long in the horn, straight in the back: the bulls are fiery in temper, the cows are placid and docile. They are easily satisfied with food in comparison with heavier breeds, and give a remarkable yield of milk rich in butter fat.

John Speir, Esq., maintains that the cattle native to Scotland in early Celtic times was a small black short-horned animal. The Romans introduced their own cattle to Scotland, as the native breed was too light for draught purposes and for yoking to the plough. The Roman breed was heavy, white in colour, and long in the horn. These were the first pure white cattle known to Scotland, so that the popular belief that the Druids sacrificed sacred white bulls is a myth. The bulls may have been painted with a chalky substance.

The successive waves of invasions which broke upon the shores of Scotland left peaceful settlements of Norwegians, Danes, and Saxons, who brought their native cattle from the Continent. In addition, English breeds found their way into England as a matter of course. All these various kinds of cattle were cross-bred, to the enrichment of the cattle stock in the country.

The antecedents of the Ayrshire are not to be found in any of the aforesaid cattle, but in stock imported from the Netherlands not earlier than the 16th and not later than the 17th centuries.

It is general acknowledged that the Ayrshire breed - coloured like the Holderness (Humber area) white and brown, which are also of Dutch origin - first became sufficiently numerous to attract attention in the Parish of Dunlop. John Speir, Esq., and his theory states that a Laird of Dunlop House brought breeding stock from the Netherlands (by way of the Port of Ayr), and by skilful breeding produced his "Dunlop" cattle, now known as the Ayrshire, and valued all over the world as the best cow for the production of milk.

Timothy Pont, in 1600, refers to the suitability of the soil of Dunlop for dairy farming - "A deipe fatt clayeish soil much enriched by lyming," whereby the pastures are luxuriant, "Quhence it is that this pairt of the countrey (Cunningham) yields a grate deal of excellent butter, as all the countrey besyde, but especially the Parishes of Steuartoune and Dunlop." Pont states further that Cunningham supplied most of the butter of the kingdom, one acre in Cunningham yielding more butter than three acres anywhere else. It is probable that the rich yield in butter was due more to the breed of the cow than the richness of the pasture.

Cunningham always had a reputation for dairy farming, as the ancient rhyme attests:

"Kyle for a man,
Carrick for a coo,
Cunningham for butter and cheese,
And Galloway for oo."*

IX. AN ANCIENT MEMORIAL STONE AT DUNLOP. This memorial stone was found in a corner of the grave-yard three-quarters embedded in the soil. It was excavated, restored, and set in a cement mould for preservation. It is now safely housed in Hans Hamilton's tomb.

* It should be noted that Ayrshire cattle are coloured white and black instead of white and brown - the typical colouring - are also assumed to be pure bred and are permitted entry in the Ayrshire Herd Book. The Dunlap family in Virginia and West Virginia raised hundreds of head of Ayrshire cattle. Note by Rev. Hanna.

There are said to be very few stones of this type in Scotland. The bottom part has unfortunately been broken off and lost. No inscription can be traced. The figures are Adam and Eve standing by the tree the fruit whereof they were not to eat else they should surely die.

The armorial bearings carved at the head of the stone are those of the Dunlops of that Ilk. The helmet is that of a lesser baron or esquire. The shield would bear, not the eagle, but an inscription or lettering to commemorate the person to whom the stone was erected. The hand with the dagger has been broken off and lost, but the garland of liveries on which the land rested is still intact. The stone seems to be a monument to one of the early Dunlops.

DUNLOP - 1000 A.D. TO CHURCH UNION 1929 A.D.

I. FROM CELTIC CHIEF TO NORMAN BARON. Up to the middle of the 11th century the Celtic chief on Dunlop Hill governed his clan much in the manner of his forebearers. He may have been at war with his neighbouring kingdoms much of the time, but he lived in peace within his own realm, observing his ancient tribal customs, and acknowledging the sovereignty of his hereditary overlords. He might rank as a Toisech or Mormaer, and probably had begun to call himself "Dunlop of Dunlop." We would like to think that he may have been the progenitor of the noble family of that Ilk. It is a reasonable suggestion that the families whose patronymics are derived from their estates have an age-long connexion with the land. When that patronymic is a Celtic place name, the presumption is that the family is also of Celtic origin. If, in addition, that family's connexion with their name district can be traced back, as in the case of the Dunlops, to the days of early feudalism, their claim to Celtic tribal chieftainship seems difficult to refute. It is on such reasonable grounds that we assume that the Dunlops of that Ilk, who later appear in this history, were descended from the tribal chief of Dunlop Hill, and were noblemen in the Kingdom of Strathclyde.*

The Norman baron, after much of Britain had been subjugated by the Norman conquest in 1066, proceeded to establish himself by erecting a castle on the most advantageous site within the bounds of his new estate. The advantages he would look for were natural defences, proximity to roads and water, and a central and commanding position. Quite naturally any such ideal would already be occupied by the castle of the Celtic chief. The rule in such cases was invariable. The Celt had to yield to the Norman, but he was appeased by adequate recompense in other ways. The Norman knight, with the help of the retainers he brought with him, proceeded to establish his position and set the feudal machinery in motion. The new order would appear to have been peaceably grafted on the old. There was no native opposition, for no injustice was done to the Celtic nobility, who, being merely tribal chiefs, held no title to their lands in the feudal sense. There was no question of their being dispossessed, since private ownership of land was outwith their communal system. They were reorganised to fit into the feudal system. The title of mormaer or toisech changed into earl or thane; communal possession of the land passed into royal ownership. By the close of King David's reign (1124-1153) most of Scotland was held by Norman vassals and subvassals who looked to the King as their feudal chief. The feudal system set the stage for the establishment of the Scottish Church and the institution of the parochial system for administering the offices of religion with some form of social service.

The first feudal baron of Dunlop was the first de Ross who was sent there by de Morville. He ejected the tribal chief from his stronghold on Dunlop Hill, and his home. Our Dunlop of Dunlop had to leave, but not in a bad spirit or truculent mood; he was absorbed into the feudal system, and was given private ownership of land under the vassalage of de Ross with sanction to build a castle. He removed to the banks of Clerkland Burn, which divides Dunlop from Stewarton. Here he built his castle on a site where Dunlop House now stands.

We do not know when the castle on Dunlop Hill ceased to be occupied, or how such an ancient stronghold was allowed to fall into ruins. Nothing remains of it now, beyond the unmistakable traces of the foundations of a building of considerable extent. The hill commands an extensive view, and affords natural means of defence on all sides except the southern slope. On this side, near the top, are the remains of a deep wide ditch or fosse. No trace of masonry is to be found, but the ground has never been excavated. With the departure of the de Rosses the Dunlops became the leading nobility of the parish, and remain so to this day.

II. THE INSTITUTION OF THE PAROCHIAL SYSTEM. From the time of Malcolm and Queen Margaret the early Celtic Christian Church, called the Church of the Culdees, was slowly being Romanised by a series of Anglicised and Normanised kings. The process was hastened and consummated in the time of King David I, for he favoured the mediaeval English Church model. This was a united Church owing spiritual allegiance to Rome, secular allegiance to the king, and organised on a territorial and feudal basis. King David I proceeded to superimpose the system on the "Ecclesia Scotticana."

Dunlop is a very old parish. Its first Church must have been constructed at the same time as other old parish Churches in the Church-building era. It may have been built as early as 1150 or a century later. Churches were being built in the 12th and 13th centuries all over the kingdom. By the 14th century the need may have been adequately met, but certainly there was little enthusiasm then for establishing religious institutions. By the 15th and in the early 16th centuries Church buildings were being allowed to lapse into repair and even decay.

III. THE PRE-REFORMATION CHURCH. Dunlop Church was made a vicarage of Kilwinning Abbey possibly at the end of the 12th century, and certainly not later than the beginning of the 14th century, when the monks were pleading poverty "on account of losses by various wars, and frequent inroads of enemies." It was held by the monks of Kilwinning from that time up to the Reformation. They collected or "farmed out" the tythes, and appointed a vicar ("Vicarius" - a substitute) to administer the officers of religion in Church and parish.*

This practise was in accordance with the ecclesiastical policy of the period. It was one of the corrupt expedients adopted to maintain monasticism, which had spread its power and influence all over Europe (including England and Scotland) by the end of the 12th century. Originally monasticism was a natural growth, in one way of speaking, for men fled from the world of sin to the seclusion of holiness. These independent anchorites grouped themselves into small organisations. The earliest order was instituted by St. Benedict in 529 A.D. From that order were derived all others: Cistercians, Carthusians, Dominicans, and Carmelites. The rule of life of the Benedictine Order was based upon a vow of Obedience, Poverty, and Chastity.

Malcolm and Margaret had initiated the movement in Scotland by imposing Roman monasticism on the existing Celtic Order. King Alexander I founded three monasteries; but King David I moved even more rapidly in conforming the Scottish Church to the Roman model. The method he used was simple: he founded a monastic institution; gave to it crown lands; endowed it by granting absolute possession of the teinds of anything up to twenty parishes. In return the monks had to serve the cure by appointing a vicar or parish priest. Sometimes they saved the money by sending one of their own number, but this practise was discouraged by the papal authorities. It was the sad fate of Dunlop Parish to be deprived of its religious endowments for nearly four centuries. During this period the history of Dunlop Parish is inseparable from that of Kilwinning Abbey, and is wrapped in the same semi-obscurity owing to the loss of the Abbey records.

IV. JOHN MAJOR, VICAR OF DUNLOP (1518-1550). John Major was the most illustrious of all the vicars of Dunlop. He was born of humble parents at Gleghornie in the Parish of North Berwick in 1469. He studied at Cambridge University, and graduated from the University of Paris with his Doctor of Theology. He lectured in Navarre and at the Sorbonne. He received an appointment as Professor of Theology at Glasgow University; funds were provided by granting him the endowments of Dunlop and of the Chapel Royal at Stirling. In 1522 he is described as: "Professor of Theology, Treasurer of the Royal Chapel of Stirling, and Vicar of Dunlop." The great Scottish reformer, John Knox (1502-1572) studied under him. John Major was too old a man to take an active part in the Reformation, but he was behind the movement. When John Knox preached his notable sermon against papal abuses in 1547, John Major was present. Patrick Hamilton and George Buchanan were students under him. He continued to teach even in senility. He remained on to the teinds of Dunlop with equal tenacity. He remained on to the teinds of Dunlop with equal tenacity long after he was unable to render any service to the parish.* He died at St. Andrews in 1570 at the age of eighty-one. He was a man who taught the Reformers.

V. THE DAYS OF THE REFORMATION, 1550-1563. We can learn only a very little of Reverend John Houston, the last Roman Catholic vicar of Dunlop, beyond reference to his name in certain transactions dealing with Church properties and endowments. In 1566 Reverend John Houston, with the consent of Gavin Hamilton, commendator of Kilwinning Abbey, disposed of the Church lands of the vicarage of Dunlop by granting them in fee-firm to William Cunninghame of Aiket. He reserved an acre of land adjoining the manse for the use of himself and his successors. From this we may infer that Reverend Houston remained the vicar and continued to live in the manse and draw of the revenue up to 1566, although a Presbyterian clergyman was appointed to Dunlop in 1563. Reverend Hans Hamilton was appointed reader in Dunlop shortly after the Reformation. Hereafter the Church entered upon a more vital and vigorous period of religious life.

VI. FROM THE REFORMATION TO THE COVENANT, 1563-1637. Reverend Hans Hamilton (1563-1606), the son of Archibald Hamilton of Raploch, was appointed to Dunlop in 1563, and he is variously described as vicar, reader, and exhorter. During the transition period following the Reformation there was not a sufficient number of accredited and qualified ministers of the Presbyterian Church to serve the needs of every parish. So readers and exhorters were appointed, but without the status of ordained clergymen. Reverend Hamilton attained the dignity of parish minister after 1574. His stipend is given at 78 pounds sterling. The relation of Pounds Scots to Pounds Sterling at that time was five to one, and the purchasing value of sterling about twenty times what it was in 1935, so Reverend Hamilton was well provided with a stipend. For the first time in centuries the teinds of Dunlop were being used for the legitimate purpose of maintaining the Ministry of Jesus Christ in the parish. With the maintenance of an educated and qualified ministry, religion in Scotland began to be a real force in the social, political, and national life.

Successors to Rev. Hans Hamilton were:

Rev. James Cunninghame, A.M., 1606-1608

Rev. James Montgomerie, A.M., 1608-1613

Rev. Hew Eglinton, A.M., 1615-1647

VII. THE DAYS OF THE COVENANT, 1637-1690. The Prayer Book of King Edward VI (1547-1553) of England, generally adopted at the Reformation was replaced by John Knox's own Liturgy, for it certainly was no desire of Knox that the form of public worship should be left to individual ministers, and wisely so! It was King Charles I's (1625-1649) attempt in 1637 to force Laud's Liturgy upon the Scottish Presbyterian Kirk that set the entire nation up in arms against everything that savoured of Episcopacy. The National Covenant in 1638 signed in the blood of noble and commoners, constituted the principles of civil and religious liberty for which the people of Scotland fought and died during the next fifty years. The wars of the Covenant were all wars the most to be deplored - Civil Wars. Dunlop has not been accustomed to flaunt its Covenanting honours. Here no martyrs shed their blood. But heroes of the Covenant there were in Dunlop: Reverend Gabriel Cunninghame, for 40 years was hunted and harried by the agents of Episcopacy, ejected from Church and Manse, fined and imprisoned; the noble families of Dunlop of Dunlop and Mure of Caldwell fought and suffered imprisonment, fines, and sequestration of estates. With such champions to lead them the ordinary parishoners must have played a worthy role.

Successors to Rev. Hew Eglinton were:

Rev. Gabriel Cunninghame, A.M., 1648-1683

Rev. John Hay, A.M., 1680-1682

Rev. Alexander Lyndsay, 1685-1687

Rev. William Robison, 1688-1690

James Dunlop of that Ilk, who held the estates from 1617 to 1634, resisted the attempt of King Charles I to introduce Episcopacy. To avoid sequestration, he made over his estates to his brother, John Dunlop of Garnkirk, a member of the mercantile aristocracy of Glasgow. Covenanting blood ran strong in the family. His son, James Dunlop of Dunlop, was imprisoned along with other Ayrshire Lairds in 1665 for active resistance to the Episcopal administration under Lauderdale and Rothes; he was freed in 1667 on condition of granting a bond to keep the peace; the bond was placed at 2000 merks. About this time, 1666, the Pentland Rising inflamed the Privy Council to horrible extremes of persecution. James Dunlop, already under the ban, set about securing his property by making over a considerable portion of his estates to the Earl of Dundonald to avoid forfeiture. His son Alexander Dunlop, who succeeded him suffered also in the cause of the Covenant. The Scottish writer Wodrow mentions that he was imprisoned on the 30th of July in 1683 on suspicion of being concerned with the Bothwell Brig Covenanters, and was compelled to give up his estate, besides a bond of 12,000 Pounds Scots to appear in November following. He was indicted anew in April of 1684, when he made over the lands to his son John. Shortly afterwards he emigrated to North Ireland and at a later date to British-America probably to escape the danger that threatened every stout Covenanter during "The Killing Times."* Alexander Dunlop served as a soldier at the Siege of Londonderry in 1689; he married Antonia Brown and they went to Virginia with their large family.

In 1684, John Dunlop's son, John, secured the lands that his father had settled on him, and in the following year acquired from the Earl of Dundonald the lands his Covenanting grandfather had conveyed over to Dundonald. His considerable estates were erected into the Barony of Dunlop. As John Dunlop died without heirs, the title became extinct.

VIII. PRESBYTERIANISM AT WORK, 1690-1843. The Revolution Settlement established Presbyterianism. An Act was inserted in the Treaty of Union in 1707 providing for the maintenance of the Presbyterian Church in Scotland, and requiring the sovereign to take a Coronation oath to maintain "the government, worship, discipline, rights, and privileges of the Church of Scotland." The substance of this oath is still reaffirmed by the King or Queen in his or her letter addressed to the General Assembly of the Kirk on the opening day.

X. THE DUNLOPS OF THAT ILK.*

1. The first Dunlop discovered in written record is Dom. Gulielmus de Dunlop in a national copy of an inquest, 1260. The document is in the charter chest of the Burgh of Irvine. The title Dom. (Dominus) was used to designate a lord, baron, peer, and was accorded by courtesy to monks. The title applied to Dunlop signifies equality of rank with the "Balliols" and "Crawfurds." If at this early date William de Dunlop was a Scottish peer, it may reasonably be assumed that he had a long line of noble ancestry behind him.

2. A Neil Fitz-Robert De Dulap appears in the "Ragman Rolls" as having subscribed allegiance to King Edward I of England. In 1306 his estates, along with the estates of the de Rosses, were forfeited, on the accession of Bruce, for supporting John Balliol in the contest for the Scottish crown. The Dunlop estates were later returned to the family, as various records attest, but there are regrettable gaps in the history of the family for the next century.

3. James De Dunlop appears in a valuation of the County of Ayr in the 14th century as the possessor of Dunlop.

4. John De Dunlop was recipient of a charter from Hugh de Blare, 1407.

5. Alexander Dunlop of Hunt-hall or Dunlop, was a son of the above, John, and is mentioned by Rymer as "of that Ilk," in the reign of King James I of Scotland. From his time the word "de" was dropped in favour of "of that Ilk."

6. John Dunlop of that Ilk, cir. 1450, was a son of the above, Alexander.

7. Constantine Dunlop of that Ilk is mentioned as Laird of Hunt-hall in 1483. He died in 1505, leaving a daughter, Janet (who married James Stuart, Sheriff of Bute, great-grandson of King Robert II. Their son was the first Earl of Bute), and a son, John Dunlop. Both the sons and daughters of Dunlop made good marriages, allying themselves with noble or landed families. This is true of the family both in the early and later centuries, and indicated that the Dunlops had such high status among the Scottish nobility as to command good marriage alliances, and were further alert to the advantages and prestige accruing to their house from such "marriages de convenance."

8. Alexander Dunlop, son of Constantine, held sway or his retour in 1476.

9. John Dunlop (1507-1509), a son of Constantine (No. 7), and nephew of Alexander, married Marion, a daughter of the fourth Earl of Douglas, and granddaughter of King Robert III, and was succeeded by his son, Alexander.

10. Alexander Dunlop (1509-1547). He had the patronage and presentation of the Parish and Church of Dunlop. By a Charter under the Great Seal in the reign of Queen Mary and the Protectorship of Arran he settled his estates on his five sons in succession: James, William, Constantine, Robert, and Andrew. His daughter married Archibald Lyon, a son of the family of Glamis. His son Robert was the founder of the Dunlops of Hapland.

11. James Dunlop (1547-1558).

12. Alexander Dunlop (1558-1596).

13. JAMES Dunlop (1596-1617). He married Jean, a daughter of Somerville of Cambusnethan. Their family of sons, James, Alexander, John, William, and Thomas, became the progenitors of the various cadet branches. The eldest son, James, carried on the direct line. The third son, John, purchased the lands of Garnkirk, and founded the cadet branch associated with that estate. Of the other sons, William founded the family of "Bloak," and Thomas the family of "Househill."

14. James Dunlop of that Ilk (1617-1634), was conspicuous as a Covenanter. He resisted the attempt of King Charles I to introduce Episcopacy.

15. James Dunlop (1634-1670) was a son of the above James.* He married

* The author's particular family is descended from the Dunlops of Dunlop who gave to Pennsylvania, Virginia, the Carolinas, Kentucky, and Ohio, many famous settlers. Our Scotch-American ancestor was Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744), the son of Alexander Dunlop (cir. 1689), who came to Virginia with his famous sister, Elisabeth Dunlop, of "The Seneca Trail" fame, and many other relatives: his grandfather was James (No. 15). Note by Rev. Hanna.

Elisabeth, daughter of Cunninghame of Corsehill. He was outstanding among the leaders of the Covenant. It was this Laird who built the aisle of the Church at Dunlop. His initials and those of his wife, with suggested likeness of their faces, are included in the ornamental work of the aisle gable.

16. Alexander Dunlop (1670-1683) was a son of the above James. He was another champion of Presbyterianism.

17. Sir John Dunlop (1684-1706) was a son of the above Alexander.

18. Francis Dunlop (1706-1748) was a brother to the above Sir John, and was among the gentlemen called upon in 1707 to witness the disposition of the Scottish Regalia in Edinburgh Castle.

19. John Dunlop (1747-1784). He was deputed by the County of Ayr to offer the assistance of the County to the Duke of Cumberland during Bonnie Prince Charlie's romantic bid for the royal inheritance of the Stuarts (1745-1746). He married the daughter of Sir Thomas Wallace of Craigie, who became the celebrated Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop, immortalised as the great friend and patron of Scotland's national poet, Robert Burns (1759-1796). She was descended from Sir William Wallace, the champion of Scottish freedom. Their sons and daughters were: Francis, Thomas, Alexander, Andrew, James, John, Antony, Agnes, Susan, Frances, Rachel, and Keith.

20. Andrew Dunlop (1784-1804). He was the fourth son of the above John (No. 19). He was a Brigadier-General, and served in the Revolutionary War (1775-1783), and died in command of the Island of Antigua in 1804.

21. James Dunlop (1804-1832) was a brother to the above Andrew (No. 20). He was a military figure. He served in the Revolutionary War, in India, and served as Brigadier-General in command of a Brigade in the 5th Division of Wellington's forces; during the Peninsular War he commanded the 5th Division under Wellington. He was elected a member of the Stewarty of Kirkcudbright in 1812.

22. Sir John Dunlop (1832-1839) was a son of the above James (No. 21). He married Charlotte Constance, a daughter of General Sir Richard Dawns Jackson. They had James and Charlotte.

23. Sir James Dunlop (1839-1858). He died unmarried.

24. John Dunlop, the sixth son of John Dunlop (No. 19), 19th Laird, and of Frances Ann Wallace (Robert Burn's benefactor, Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop), succeeded Sir James Dunlop (1839-1858), Bart., as the 24th representative of the family. And so the "Chieftainship" of the family of Dunlop continues.

25. John Andrew Wallace Dunlop was a son of the above John (No. 24).

26. Robert Henry Wallace Dunlop was a son of the above John (No. 25).

27. Keith Wallace Dunlop was a son of the above Robert (No. 26). He was born in 1862 and later became a citizen of the United States, so consequently the "Chieftainship" may be claimed by the descendants of his brother, Arthur Wallace Dunlop, who was born in 1866, and who was at one time a Captain in the Indian Staff Corps.

XI. THE DUNLOPS OF HAPLAND AND BORLAND (1520-1820). Ancestors of the Browns of the Hill and of the Reids of Balgray make up this noble family. Alexander Dunlop, the tenth Laird, settled his estates on his five sons. The fourth son, Robert, would appear to have secured the lands of Hapland as his portion. In 1597, David Dunlop, fourth of Hapland, exchanged his lands for Borland. By 1750 the family is represented by the two daughters of John Dunlop (sixth of Borland), Mary (born 1778), and Jean, who married Thomas Reid of Balgray, Irvine.

Between 1660 and 1732 John Dunlop lived. He married Barbara Gilmour. One of their descendants, Andrew Brown of Craighead, married the above Mary (1779-1839). Their son, John Brown of Craighead and Hill, had: Jane, Andrew, John, Robert, Mary, Allan, and Marion.

XII. THE DUNLOPS OF LOANHEAD. James, son of John Dunlop, fifth of Borland, founded this branch. He married Agnes Service (1742). Their grandson, James Dunlop, Beith, married Marion Howie (1806). They had ten children, of whom Jean married Orr Spiers; Elisabeth married William Stewart, Beith; John married Marion Stevenson; Thomas married Elisabeth Robertson; Matthew Crauford married Margaret Galt; William Raeside married a Miss Pollock.

XIII. THE DUNLOPS OF AUCHENSKAITH. James Dunlop, 13th of that ilk, had a family of five sons, one of whom Reverend Alexander, is reasonably supposed to have been the scion of the House of Dunlop who was a minister of Paisley Abbey from 1644 to 1677. He married Elisabeth Mure, granddaughter of Reverend Hans Hamilton, minister of Dunlop. They had seven children all with numerous descendants. Their son, Reverend Professor Dunlop, was Principal of Glasgow University in 1698, and Historiographer for Scotland. He married Sarah, sister of Principal Carstairs. They had a son, Reverend Professor Alexander Dunlop, Professor of Greek in Glasgow University, whose grandson was Alexander Dunlop of Keppoch (1766-1840). His daughter, Jane Dunlop, married John Cadell of Tranent, Advocate. Their ninth child, Helen Boyle, married Reverend Robert Story of Roseneath.

XIV. THE DUNLOPS OF AUCHENSKAITH, AND CADETS. Auchenskaith was acquired by John Dunlop, a cadet of the Dunlops of that Ilk, in 1407. The Dunlops can be traced in possession of this estate up to 1595.

1. Rev. Alexander Dunlop, minister of Paisley Abbey, 1644-1677. He was a second son of James Dunlop, 13th of that Ilk, and elder brother of John of Garnkirk; he married Elisabeth Mure, granddaughter of Rev. Hans Hamilton, minister of Dunlop. They had numerous descendants.

2. Rev. Prof. William Dunlop (1654-1703). He was Principal of Glasgow University. He married Sarah Carstairs. They had numerous issue.

3. Rev. Prof. Alexander Dunlop (1682-1747). He was Professor of Greek at Glasgow University. He married and had issue.

4. John Dunlop (1730-1805). He married and had issue.

5. Alexander Dunlop (1766-1840) of Keppoch. He married and had issue.

6. (a) John Dunlop (1789-1868). He was a Temperance Reformer.

(b) Alexander Dunlop (1798-1870). He married and had issue. His eighth child was Henry Liston Murray-Dunlop of Corsock, Dalbeattie.

Hundreds of Dunlops can claim descent from this cadet branch.

XV. THE DUNLOPS OF GARNKIRK. This great family was founded by John Dunlop, the third son of James Dunlop, 13th of that Ilk. John Dunlop became a very prosperous merchant and burgess of Glasgow in 1631. He married a wealthy widow, Bessie Dunlop, and placed his wife's fortune in the estate of Garnkirk, which remained in the possession of the family until 1769. This cadet branch had numerous descendants and gave distinguished citizens to Glasgow, Edinburgh, the Colonies, the United States, the Netherlands, and the Dutch Colonies.

T. Dunlop in his Memorabilia of the Families of Dunlop, wrote:

"William Dunlop, the third son of James of Garnkirk, was sent to Holland in 1681 to acquire a commercial education. As in those days there was a great intercourse between the two countries, many Scotsmen were settled in Rotterdam and other Dutch towns as merchants, besides many others who found refuge there from the persecutions which had been raging at home."*

* T. Dunlop, Memorabilia of the Families of Dunlop, 1898, p. 21.

It was the persecutions of the Covenant that induced so many Scots to seek the freedom and refuge of Holland. Even to this day the Scottish communities there love and honour all that the Covenant embodied. The above William Dunlop, writing from Holland, refers to his cousin James Dunlop of Rotterdam, who was also settled there.

John Coutts, Banker, was provost of Edinburgh in 1742; he was the son of Patrick Coutts and Jean Dunlop (her second husband). Colin Dunlop, Provost of Glasgow, 1770, was a "Tobacco Lord." He founded along with five others, Glasgow's first native bank, "The Ship Bank," afterwards merged into the Union Bank. The Dunlop Mansions in Argyle Street were built by him. Hence the name Dunlop Street, which ran past the Mansions. His grandson, Colin, owned the Clyde Ironworks. Another Colin Dunlop of the same family was Lord Provost of Glasgow in 1794. The mother of the Very Reverend Dr. Robert Story of Roseneath was Helen Boyle Dunlop Story, from the Garnkirk branch.

The descendants of the prolific and gifted family of Dunlop have spread the name all over the world. The Dunlop tyre (tire) is now a household word; its inventor was John Boyd Dunlop (1840-1921) from the family of Dreghorn. He invented the pneumatic tyre in 1888.

Any individual legitimately bearing the name Dunlop or Dunlap may lay claim to the Parish of Dunlop as their place of origin. J. Paterson, Esq. wrote:

"The Family of Dunlop is of noble origin, as are almost all those whose patronymics are derived from a locality, for there can be little doubt that the district of Dunlop gave the name to the family."*

XVI. SIR WALTER SCOTT DESCENDED FROM THE DUNLOPS THROUGH THE GARNKIRK BRANCH. It is very interesting and inspiring to note and relate that Sir Walter Scott (1771-1832), Scotland's and the world's celebrated novelist and poet, was descended from the Dunlops of Dunlop through the Garnkirk branch. Here is his connexion:

- 1 James Dunlop (born 1574), 13th of that Ilk, married Jean Sommerville (ancestors of the author of this volume).

* J. Paterson, History of the Counties of Ayr and Wigton, 1866, p. 226. See Robert Reid, Family Records, privately printed (Irvine).

 See Hesketh Pearson's Sir Walter Scott. His Life And Personality (New York, 1954). Note by Rev. Hanna.

- 2 John Dunlop, married an heiress, Bessie Dunlop, the founder of the Garnkirk branch.
- 3 Jean Dunlop, married (first) Robert Campbell of North Woodside, the son of Campbell of Blythswood.
- 4 Janet Campbell, married Thomas Haliburton of Dryburgh Abbey and New Mains.
- 5 Barbara Haliburton, married Robert Scott of Sandyknowe.
- 6 Walter Scott, Esq., a Writer to the Signet in Edinburgh, who married Margaret, a daughter of Professor John Rutherford of Medicine in the University of Edinburgh.
- 7 SIR WALTER SCOTT (1771-1832). He was born in College Wynd, Edinburgh, Scotland, August 15, 1771. He married Charlotte Charpentier (1777-1826) in Carlisle Cathedral, December 24, 1797. He died at Abbotsford, September 21, 1832.
- 8 Sophia Scott (1799 -). She married John Gibson Lockhart, 1825, who became the biographer of Sir Walter. He was editor of the "Quarterly Review."
- 8 Walter Scott (1801 -). He married Jane Jobson, 1825.
- 8 Anne Scott (1803 -).
- 8 Charles Scott (1805 -).

DUNLOPS IN SCOTLAND

DUNLOPS IN SCOTLAND*

Murray-Dunlop of Corsock

James Dunlop, thirteenth of that Ilk, had a son, Alexander, who was minister of Paisley Abbey. One of his descendants (see Reid's Family Records) was Alexander Dunlop, M.P. (1798-1870), who took the name 'Murray' from property that came to him through his wife, Elisabeth Murray. Their eighth child was Henry Liston Murray-Dunlop, J.P., D.L. (1857 -).

Seat: Corsock, Dalbeattie, Kirkcudbrightshire.

Dunlop of Doonside

Descended from the Dunlops of that Ilk (connexion not traced accurately enough to state).

Robert Dunlop, Lt., R.N., descended from the family of Dunlop of Dunlop. He married his cousin Magdalen Dunlop, daughter of Alexander; they had a son, David Dunlop. He married Miss Macgregor, heiress of Clober - issue (among others): Robert of Clober, married Christian, daughter of Hamilton Douglas Boswell of Garallan. Their seventh son was William Hamilton Dunlop, J.P., D.L., of Doonside, married Janette, daughter of Thomas Gemmell of Frankville. Their son is Lt.-Col. Thomas Charles Dunlop (1878 -), married, 1905, Louise Elfrida, daughter of R. G. Watson - issue: Frederick Hamilton (1905 -); William Herbert (1907 -); Ruby, Janette, and Margaret Noel.

Residence: Sauchrie, Maybole.

W. B. Dunlop, Esq., Seton Castle, Longniddry, East Lothian, is a cousin of the above Col. Thomas Charles Dunlop.

Buchanan-Dunlop of Drumhead, Dumbartonshire,

Also of Househill

Descended from James Dunlop, third of Garnkirk. He had 16 children. Of these,

* From Burke's Landed Gentry and Fox-Davies' Armorial Bearings, as given in Rev. John F. Bayne's Dunlop Parish, pp. 152-157.

Robert, of Househill, married Janet, a daughter of Archibald Buchanan of Drumhead. They had a son, Robert Buchanan-Dunlop of Drumhead and Househill. His son, of the same name and title, Robert Buchanan-Dunlop (1807-1882), had a son, Lt. Col. Henry Donald Dunlop, who had issue with descendants:

- (1) Lt. Col. Archibald Henry Dunlop.
 1. Robert Arthur Dunlop (1904 -).
 2. Archibald Ian Dunlop (1908 -).
 3. David Kennedy Dunlop (1911 -).
- (2) Col. Henry Donald Dunlop (1878 -). C.M.G., D.S.O.
- (3) Rev. William Robert Dunlop (1881 -).
 1. Savina Dunlop. Married, 1905, Alfred Castle Warren, M.A., M.D., M.R.C.S., and has issue.
 2. Emma Dorothea Dunlop. Married, 1909, Rev. F. W. Eddison, M.A., and has issue.
 3. Jean Hamilton Dunlop. Married, 1905, Rev. R. Callender, M.A.
 4. Rhoda Dunlop.

Residence: Whitley Rise, Reading.

Dunlop of Woodburn

This family sprang from the Garnkirk branch, perhaps from James, third of Garnkirk, whose issue by three marriages we are unable to trace.

Thomas Dunlop, of Glasgow (1831-1893) married, 1852, Robina, daughter of William Jack of Glasgow. Their eldest son, Right Hon. Sir Thomas Dunlop, G.B.E., of Woodburn, Lord Provost of Glasgow, J.P., D.L., LL.D., (1855-) married 1879, Dorothy, daughter of Peter Mitchell, by whom issue:

1. Thomas Dunlop (1881-). Married, 1911, Mary Elisabeth, daughter of William Beckett.
 - a. Thomas Dunlop (1912 -).
 - b. William Beckett Dunlop (1915 -).
 - c. Dorothy Francis Dunlop.
2. Peter Mitchell Dunlop (1883 -). Married, 1915, Frances, Daughter of John Brewis.

Residence: 1 Kirklee Gardens, Glasgow.

- a. Mary Mitchell Dunlop.
- 3. Robert Jack Dunlop (1891 -). Married, 1918, Maude Rowena, daughter of William Teacher.
 - a. George Teacher Dunlop (1923 -).
 - b. Robert Jack Dunlop (1927 -).
 - c. Rowena Margaret Dunlop.
 Residence: 39 Frognal Lane, Hampstead.
- 4. Robina Stirling Dunlop. Married, 1917, John Somerville.
- 5. Dorothy Euphemia. Married, 1917, J. Bruce Jones, Castlehill, Larbert.
- 6. Mary Boyd Dunlop.

Residence: 6 Park Terrace, Glasgow.

Dunlop of Lockerbie

In tracing the lineage of this house, Burke gives the Dunlop family tree, beginning with Constantine, seventh Laird of that Ilk. The Lockerbie family is descended from the cadet branch of Garnkirk: The sixth son of Jame, third of Garnkirk, was Colin Dunlop of Carmyle, Provost of Glasgow, 1770. His son was James Dunlop of Tollcross (1741 -). His second son was George Dunlop of Edinburgh, Advocate (1777 -). His fourth son was Colin Dunlop of Fullerton House, Lanark, (1816 -). His second son was Colin Dunlop of Lockerbie House (1844-1914), married Mary, daughter of John Crum of Thornliebank, Eastwood - issue, Colin John Dunlop (1869-1908); and Agnes Mary Helen, married 1899, John Stewart Lyon of Kirkmichael.

Seat: Lockerbie House, Dryfesdale, Dumfries.

DUNLOPS IN THE NETHERLANDS (HOLLAND)

In the 17th century Dunlops began to trade with and settle in Holland. They figure also in various records as soldiers in the Netherlands.

From a Dutch publication called Nederland's Patriciaat, published in 1923, we find the genealogy of the Scotch-Dutch Dunlops - (pp. 38-49) a prolific and prosperous stock, 1753-1923. The genealogy of the book begins:

1. James Dunlop. Flourished before 1753.
2. David Dunlop (1721 -). He was born in Fenwick, Ayrshire, Scotland. Departed from Fenwick, 1751. He married in the Scots Kirk, Rotterdam, Janet Roberts, 1753, whose parents came from Bo'ness, Scotland.
 - a. Jane Dunlop (1754 -).
 - b. Johanna Dunlop (1756 -).
 - c. James Dunlop (1758 -).
 - d. David Dunlop (1766 -).
 - e. Samuel Dunlop (1768 -).
 - f. Janet Dunlop (1770 -).
 - g. Alexander Dunlop (1773 -).

All were baptised in the Scots' Kirk, Rotterdam. The numerous descendants of this family were conspicuous in Holland and the Dutch colonies for the next two centuries as merchants, traders, sugar manufacturers, distillers, scholars, bankers, authors, philosophers, and farmers. The present representatives of the family hold positions of standing in the business world of Holland.

There was a David Dunlop who was a Ruling Elder in Fenwick Parish Church, 1643. As Ruling Elders were selected in those early days chiefly from the heritors or landed class, he must have been a man of substance. Was he (or his antecedent) a younger son of one of the Dunlops of that ilk? Fenwick's proximity to Dunlop Parish indicates that this is a perfectly reasonable supposition. A corner of Fenwick Churchyard affords evidence of numerous Dunlops in the parish for the succeeding centuries. There are now four families of Dunlops in Fenwick, unrelated, except perhaps in origin.

The earliest authentic evidence of Dunlops in Holland is to be found in the Memorabilia of the Dunlops by Archibald Dunlop. As he had access to voluminous Dunlop papers his evidence may be taken as correct. He records that William Dunlop, third son of John, first of Garnkirk, was sent to Holland in 1681 to acquire a commercial education. In those days there was great intercourse between the two countries. Many Scotsmen were settled in Rotterdam, and other Dutch towns, as merchants. Others found refuge there from the persecutions of the Covenant.

In one of his letters William mentions a James Dunlop, his cousin, then resident in Rotterdam with his wife and family, who showed him great kindness during his stay in Holland. In Blair's Glasgow Necropolis, p. 56, there is an allusion to a James Dunlop of Rotterdam, who may be the same person. He was selected by the Estates of the Scottish Parliament in 1688 for the task of importing not less than 'ten thousand stand of arms for the use of His Majesty's subjects in this kingdom.' This James Dunlop, said to be either the Househill branch or of the Auchenskaith branch, and a son of Rev. Alexander Dunlop of Paisley Abbey, may have been the progenitor of some of the Dutch Dunlops.

NEW YEAR'S DAY (1790)

To Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop by the Scottish poet,

ROBERT BURNS (1759-1796)

MRS. DUNLOP OF DUNLOP
(from the original in possession of the family)

New Year's Day (1790)

To Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop by the Scottish poet,
Robert Burns (1759-1796)

This day, Time winds th' exhausted chain;
To run the twelvemonths' length again:
I see the old, bald-pated fellow,
With ardent eyes, complexion sallow,
Adjust the unimpair'd machine,
To wheel the equal, dull routine.

The absent lover, minor heir,
In vain assail him with their prayer;
Deaf as my friend, he sees them press,
Nor makes the hour one moment less.
Will you (the Major's with the hounds,
The happy tenants share his rounds;
Coila's fair Rachel's care today,
And blooming Keith's engaged with Gray)
From housewife cares a minute borrow (That grandchild's cap will do to-morrow),
And join with me a-moralising;
This day's propitious to be wise in.

First, what di yesternight deliver?
'Another year has gone for ever.'
And what is this day's strong suggestion?
'The passing moment's all we rest on!'
Rest on - for what? what do we here?
Or why regard the passing year?
Will Time, amus'd with proverb'd lore,
Add to our date one minute more?

A few days may - a few years must - Repose us in the silent dust.
Then, is it wise to damp our bliss?
Yes - all such reasonings are amiss!
The voice of Nature loudly cries,
And many a message from the skies,
That something in us never dies:
That on this frail, uncertain state,
Hand matters of eternal weight:
That future life in worlds unknown
Must take its hue from this alone;
Whether - as heavenly glory bright,
Or dark as Misery's woeful night.

Since then, my honour'd first of friends,
On this poor being all depends;
Let us th' important now employ,
And live as those who never die.
Tho' you, with days and honour crown'd,
Witness that filial circle round
(A sight life's sorrows to repulse,
A sight pale Envy to convulse),
Others now claim your chief regard;
Yourself, you wait your bright reward.

CHAPTER I

CHAPTER I

From "The House of Dunlop"*

Wild winds swept across the dark sky rifting the clouds to show a glint of moonlight on the ramparts of Dunlop Hill. In the watchtower tall, Celtic Chieftain, John of Dunlop, stood alone. Below on the stone parapet his stalwart henchmen fingered their shining daggers and waited the assault. John's fierce, blue eyes looked beyond his meadow-lands toward the deep forest where danger and death lurked tonight for the unwary.

Only this morning a runner had fallen exhausted at his master's feet gasping a message containing a dreaded name that was wont to bring terror to the stoutest heart, "Romans attack - tonight - through the forest."

"Roman swine!" John of Dunlop's hand went to his dirk. "By Thor and Balder, I fear them not!"

The runner had risked his life to save his Chief. Behind the enemy lines, the lad had learned that the Romans must capture Dunlop Hill to complete their lines of communication from Carlisle to Dumbarton. The centurion's plan was to have his men creep silently through the forest at nightfall. Now, thanks to the fealty of the brave youth, the forest was alive with Dunlop men armed with their trusty dirks.

Suddenly wild cries rang out from the wood where the night mist was falling, and dim shapes appeared crossing the meadow-lands. A torn remnant of the once proud cohort was advancing on the Castle. Unthinkable that Roman soldiers should be worsted by a handful of barbarians. On the soldiers came. Yet there was no sign from the dark Fortress. On they came, plunging into the icy Glazert Water, and trying for a foothold on the steep hillside beyond.

Then wild, Celtic battle cries rent the air as Dunlop and his men charged the Romans with furious onslaught. Reeling, the front line of legionaries fell back upon their advancing comrades. Far below, the dark Glazert Water was waiting to carry the wounded

* This section, Chapter I, was taken from Mrs. Mary Freda Dunlop White's magnificent genealogical novel The House of Dunlop, pp. 17-32. It is used by her kind permission.

Romans to an ignominious grave. Thus ended the assault on Dunlop Castle. Late into the night, till the smoking torches burned low, there was the sound of feasting and revelry in the castle hall. Dunlop and his victorious men dined merrily on boar's head, filling their drinking horns again and again from huge tankards of mead. Shouts of laughter and the songs of the Bard resounded through the stone corridors.

A different scene was taking place in the dark wood. There the white-robed Arch-Druid was standing before the altar within the magic circle. Solemnly he chanted a curse on the enemy of his people:

"Rome shall perish - write that word
In the blood that she has spilt;
Perish, hopeless and abhorred,
Deep in ruin, as in guilt."

The Romans had conquered England by the year 78 B.C. But her legions could make no headway against the Scottish Barbarians who avenged themselves against the Romans by raiding and plundering across the Border. At last, in desperation, Hadrian ordered the building of the Wall across northern Britain all the way from Solway Firth to the North Sea, a distance of eighty miles. This vast Wall was defended by stone castles from sixty to seventy feet square, built at intervals of one mile. Between the castles were stone turrets or watch towers which were used as sentry boxes. At every fourth mile there was a fort, covering from three to six acres, occupied by a large garrison of picked soldiers. Even in the narrowest places, three soldiers with shields could walk abreast on the Wall.

The Wall was scarcely completed before the daring Scots conceived a trick to frighten the Roman sentries. By night the Barbarians, armed with their hooked weapons, would climb up and pull the Romans off the wall and dash their heads against the ground. In self defense the Romans thereafter went out every Spring and burned all the heather on the north side of the Wall for ten miles back, so that no murderous Celt could creep up on them unobserved.

When Rome began to decline during the 4th Century A.D. she had to gather in her legions from the Wall to protect her homeland. The thin line of soldiers left on guard were no match for the wily Celts who raided over the Wall and made breaches through its embankments. Soon the Celts were to be seen pasturing their sheep and setting up their beehives in the heather on the south side of the Wall.

Rome could not conquer these Celts, but they yielded to Jesus Christ. About the year 520 the good missionary, Saint Winning, came to minister to the Celtic tribe in Ayrshire. He sought an audience with Chief Dunlop, and was received under the great oak in front of the Castle. For the Chief had taken precaution not to allow the stranger in the Castle, according to ancient belief, lest Saint Winning might practise magical arts and thus get the better of him.

St. Winning came bearing a silver cross and a beautiful illuminated copy of the Sacred Scriptures; and the war-like Chief soon realised that the good man had come with a message of divine love, and not magical arts. Dunlop was amazed at the Book from which St. Winning read to him. Rude and ruthless though the Chieftain was, he listened with awe and reverence to the story of Jesus Christ. It was not hard for Dunlop to understand because he was already familiar with a god in heaven, Thor, who left his spirit on earth in the form of the golden bough (mistletoe).

Near the Druid's Stone, by the Chapel Crag, from the base of which gushes the Holy Well, the first Christian Church was built in the Parish of Dunlop. St. Winning wisely allowed the Celts to keep their sacred festivals and adapt them to Christian uses. Many of the Druid rituals were derived from Hebrew origins. Their magic circle of stones was a counterpart of the circle Joshua made a Gilgal with stones taken from the Jordan River. The sacred stone chest of the Druids was regarded the same as the Ark of the Covenant among the Hebrews.

The Beltane fires marking the birth of Spring now became the fires of Easter celebrating the Festival of the Risen Lord. The Beltane fires in the Autumn, which in Celtic practise marked the death of the year and commemorated all departed spirits, became All Saint's Day. The evergreen holly with its red berries was regarded as the symbol of everlasting life; and the mistletoe signified the mystery of the Abiding Spirit. Ancient Druid customs were thus tolerated until the superstitions of the people could give way to a pure and simple faith in Jesus Christ.

In the year 410 the prophecy of the Arch-Druid came true, and the Romans were forced to leave Britain forever. In 573, Chieftain Dunlop joined with neighbouring chiefs in a battle for independence against Southern Britain. The Celts were victorious. A Northern Kingdom of Britain, Strathclyde, with territory extending from the Solway to the Clyde, was then established with Dumbarton, the fortified hill of the Britons, as capitol. From the fifth to the ninth century there was strife between the king of Strathclyde and the rulers of rival Scottish kingdoms, such as North and South Pictland, Dalriada, and the powerful kingdom of Northumbria. In the year 1018 all Scotland became a United Kingdom under the rule of Malcolm II, King of Alba.

Up to the middle of the eleventh century, the Celtic Chief on Dunlop Hill ruled his tribe much in the manner of his forbears.

When Malcolm II annexed Strathclyde, he made himself a feudal monarch like the other kings in Europe, and as such assigned the lands within Scotland to men of Norman, Saxon, and Danish ancestry. The Norman baron established himself by building a castle on the best site within the bounds of his new estate, a spot almost always already occupied by the castle of the Celtic Chief. In such cases the Celt had to yield to the Norman, but he was appeased by full recompense in other ways.

Godfrey de Ross was the feudal baron sent to Dunlop. According to custom, he took possession of Dunlop Hill. Dunlop of Dunlop was dispossessed of his ancestral stronghold; but he was given private ownership of lands under the vassalage of de Ross, with sanction to build a castle. He moved to the banks of the Clerkland Burn which divides the parish of Dunlop from Stewarton. There he built his castle on the beautiful site where Dunlop House now stands. Thus the Celtic Chief became the Norman Knight with his red and white standard flying from the turrel of his castle.

The first of the name "Dunlop" (or Dunlap) found in a written record is Dom Gulielmus de Dunlop whose name was mentioned in a notarial copy of a search of title in a cause betwixt the Burg of Irvine and Dom Godfrey de Ross regarding lands held by them from de Ross. The title Dom (Dominus) was used to designate a lord, a baron or a peer. It at this early date (1260), William de Dunlop was a Scottish peer, it may be reasonably assumed that he had a long line of noble ancestry behind him.

In the year 1509 Henry VIII, the "Merry Monarch" came to the throne of England. The Scots did not share the spirit of the flamboyant and rambunctious Tudors. North of the Border, the Scottish Barons now saw an opportunity to make another valiant struggle for freedom against the domination of England.

At Flodden Field in 1513, the Scots met the English army of picked men under the leadership of the Earl of Surrey. On that tragic day, King James and the flower of Scottish Knighthood was slain. The Rosses and the Cunninghams, the Dunlops and the Hannas were there. No one ran away. The knights and their squires, hopelessly outdone by the superiour armament of the English, stood and died through the long afternoon, until the setting sun saw Flodden Field stained red with their blood. Sir Walter Scott (1771-1832), a descendant from the Dunlops of Garnkirk, tells of the last heroic stand made by the Scots guarding their king.

“But yet, though thick the shafts as snow,
Though charging knights like whirlwinds go,
Though bill-men ply the ghastly bow,
Unbroken was the ring;
The stubborn spear-men still made good
Their dark impenetrable wood,
Each stepping where his comrade stood
The instant that he fell.

“No thought was there of dastard flight!
Linked in the serried phalanx tight,
Groom fought like noble, squire like knight
As fearlessly and well,
Till utter darkness closed her wing
O’er their thin host and wounded king.”

A look into the Privy Council Register of Ayrshire reveals a state of lawlessness prevailing during the close of the 16th century among the Dunlops and other contemporary families of that district. James Dunlop, in particular, had two sons, James and Allan, who are described as unruly youths. Allan, the younger, had the “original wickedness” to perpetrate a piracy on the coast of Fairlie. This adventure of a party of fast young fellows, as recorded in the Privy Council Register, (translated into modern English) is as follows:

“A shipmaster from Brittany named Lyon, master of a cargo ship, Perundaill, arrived at the port of Irwin last October. Having discharged a part of his cargo of coarse salt and other merchandise, Lyon anchored his ship at Fairlie whilst he went into town to deal with the merchants. At midnight that night Allan Dunlop, with a gang of youths, about twenty in number, did board the ship, Lyon, and sail her to Lamlash Bay on the Isle of Arran where they set ashore the poor mariners of the crew. Allan Dunlop and his crew of scapegraces then took full command of the Perundaill’s wine bunkers. After a jolly carousal with a piper on board, they cruised around the Isle of Arran. When the lads had had their fill of wine and jollity they landed again in Lamlash Bay. Here they delivered the ship to the poor mariners who had been left freezing on the beach the night long. At dawn the youths went to their respective places of abode rejoicing in the successful issue of their piratical adventure."

The unruly youths were duly cited to appear before the Privy Council, but they failed to show up, and so were denounced as rebels, that being the end of the matter.

About the year 1600, the historian and archeologist, Timothy Pont, visited the castle at Dunlop. His description of the place is interesting. "Dunlop ane ancient stronge hous fortified with a deipe foussie of water and planted with goodly orchards it is also named Hunthall because say they the ancient possessor thereof was huntsman to Godofred de Ross. The quholl hounds and grounds heirabout and all Macharnoch Moore was of old a mighty forrest it belongs to James Dunloppe of thet fame and chief of hes name."

The Dunlop who was the "ancient possessor" of Hunthall was made Huntsman to de Ross, a position accounted to be of high honour. When Pont visited the castle, however, the owner was James Dunloppe who had rebuilt or restored the ancient structure. Over the door of the great hall of the castle, James had placed a stone bearing the date "1599" and the inscription, "O Lord Let Ever Thy Blessingis Remain - Vithin Yis Hous." The monogram in the circle is that of James and his wife, Jean Somerville.

Pont also mentioned the church built near the castle. "Dunloppe Kirk," prettily seatt at ye confluence of 3 small brookes."

The Dunlops belonged to the Covenanters, those heroic Scots who bound themselves in solemn covenant to uphold their Presbyterian faith and resist to the death all those who tried to force them to change it. During the reign of Charles II (1660-1685) Covenanters who gathered secretly in glens and caves to worship God were hunted like animals with bugle and bloodhound. When caught they were hanged or drowned without mercy.

James Dunlop was imprisoned in 1665 along with other Ayrshire lads for active resistance to the Church of England. After two years Dunlop was freed. He then set about securing his property by making over part of it to the Earl of Dundonald to avoid forfeiture. Alexander, son of James Dunlop, also suffered imprisonment for the Cause. After being freed, Alexander emigrated to America, that haven of the persecuted, to escape the danger that threatened every staunch Covenanter during the "Killing Times."

In the year 1684, Sir John Dunlop, Baronet, son of Alexander, secured the lands that his father had settled on him before leaving for America. In the following year, John received back the lands previously conveyed to the Earl of Dundonald. These large estates were consolidated into the Barony of Dunlop. On the old site of the Norman Castle, Sir John built the stately mansion known as "Dunlop House." An interesting description of the place is given by a young man, one of the Dunlop family, who visited the estate. He is Robert D. White, son of the author, who visited the Dunlop mansion while serving in the U. S. Army 8th Air Force, August, 1945. He wrote:

"It was a grand August day when I set out to visit the Dunlop Estate. The countryside was green and rich looking with a little burn running noisily along the road. I walked for quite a distance until I came to some gates and a Lodge House. This marked the entrance to the Estate. From then on the road let into a forest of oaks, evergreens, maples, and chestnuts. The path of the wood was verdant with ferns and grass, and a carpet of fallen leaves. I walked and walked but could see no sign of a house. The forest reminded me of the one in Sherwood where Robin Hood and his merrie men exacerbated the Sheriff of Nottingham. It must have been three quarters of a mile, after many turnings through the woods, I espied the tall chimneys of the house. The mansion was a beautiful Tudor architecture and had more than a hundred rooms. The roof was a forest of chimneys and gables and turrets. Tennis courts were located at the back of the mansion and well kept lawns and gardens adorned the front areas. The interior of the mansion with its grand staircase, its polished floors and its elegant, handcarved ceilings spoke of the grandeur of the House of Dunlop."

From 1748 to 1784, another Dunlop lived in the Mansion House. He married Frances Ann, the daughter of Sir Thomas Wallace of Craigie. Frances Ann Dunlop was always proud of her descent from Sir William Wallace, the champion of Scottish freedom. Later she herself, was to become famous as the friend and patron of Robert Burns (1759-1796). In Rev. John F. Bayne's "Dunlop Parish," we read: "It was the Cotter's Saturday Night that opened the heart and home of this noble lady to Burns. While in a state of nervous prostration, following a severe illness, a copy of the Kilmarnock Edition of Burn's poems came into her hands. The poem so uplifted her spirits as to restore her harmony and peace of mind. She forthwith wrote to Burns. So began the correspondence that ended only with the poet's death. The last use he made of his immortal pen was a short letter to her a few days before he died."

Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop lived a life full of kindness and good works. She had a large family of children, eight sons and four daughters.

The last of the Dunlops to be born in their ancestral home were John, born 1904, and Alexander James, born 1906. Their mother, descended from James Dunlop of the Garnkirk branch, was the wife of Brigadier General Houison Crawford. Mrs. Crawford inherited the Dunlop Estate and did much for the welfare of the Dunlop Church and the entire parish. She did a great service to dairy farming in Ayrshire by converting the home farm into a model farm and introducing a fine herd of certified cows, and by pioneering in the production of pure milk from tuberculin-tested and certified herds.

As times changed and property taxes increased, Dunlop House, like many other great houses, became a burden instead of an asset to the owners. So the Dunlop Estate was sold to Ayrshire County Council in 1933, to be used as a home for orphan children.

Meanwhile, for many generations, Dunlops had gone forth from Dunlop Parish to all parts of the Empire, and to every land under the sun. Thus new branches of this ancient, noble, and prolific family sprung up in distant parts of the globe.

As time passed the vicissitudes of fortune caused some branches of the family to lose their landed estates. Under the British law, designed to keep estates intact, land was inherited only by the eldest son. Younger members of great families were thus left to shift for themselves. Daughters, if possible, were married off. Otherwise they continued to live on at the old home place dependent upon the bounty of their oldest brother. Every household had these spinsters who really did spin. Besides this they helped with household tasks and cared for the children, and often were regarded as little better than servants.

Younger sons of noble families went into professions or trades, or emigrated to the Colonies to seek their fortunes. Prominent families in the United States of America or British Canada bearing the name of Dunlop or Dunlap testify to the courage and ability of those younger sons who came West in early days. Some of the younger sons, however, clung stubbornly to their native heath and, as freeholders, continued to farm a few acres which were enclosures of big estates.

Many of these men added to their incomes by working at spinning and hand weaving in the home or by engaging in some other form of industry such as boat-building or the milling of grain.

Among the Dunlops who remained in their native land was James Dunlop. He was one of the hundreds of Dunlops who, over the centuries, had made their way north to the county of Renfrew which adjoins Ayrshire wherein the town of Dunlop is situated.

County records of Renfrew in the 18th century reveal that a certain James Dunlop, Miller, lived in the ancient hamlet of Dovecothall about the year 1730. James Dunlop had four sons, James II, Robert, William, and Henry. How many daughters were born to James and his wife, no one will ever know. Sons were the only children whose births were recorded in "the good old days."

COUNTY OF REFREW, SCOTLAND*

Being the Mary Freda Dunlop White Line of Oakland, California.

The following information was taken from the Scots Ancestry Research Council Report.

The earliest reference I can find to your family is in the old Parochial Register of Neilston in the County of Refrew, where James (I) Dunlop, Milner, ie., miller, at Doucat Miln (Dovecot Mill) had the following children:

Robert, born March 18, 1739.

William, born March 15, 1741.

Henry, born May 10, 1747.

There is unfortunately a blank in the Register just before this, which would account for the fact that his eldest son, James (II) is not recorded, but there is an entry of his marriage as follows: - James Dunlop (II) lawful son to James Dunlop of this Parish and Helen Witherspoon in the Abbey, Parish of Paisley, married August 26, 1761.

They had a son, James (III), born June 25, and baptised June 27, 1762.

This James (III) married Barbara Patterson and had a son, James (IV): born March 27 and baptised April 17, 1790. James (IV) married Mary Wilson of the same parish (Neilston) on October 9, 1829. The name of the minister was Rev. Alexander Fleming. They had issue:

1. James Dunlop and Mary Wilson, spouses, Gateside, (Foreman, and of the Established Church) had their first child being a son, born October 23 and baptised November 7, named James.

THE DUNLAPS*

Reverend Alexander Dunlop, M.A. Line

This branch of the Dunlop (Dunlap) Family came to British-America from Campbellton, Ayrshire, Scotland. One branch of the Dunlap Clan in Scotland changed its name to Campbell because of the Chieftain whom they served. The present Duke of Ayrshire is of the original Dunlap Family.

Rev. Alexander Dunlop, M.A.

Rev. Dunlop was the famous Presbyterian clergyman at Paisley, Scotland (1644-1677). He married Elisabeth Mure, a granddaughter of Rev. Hans Hamilton, minister of Dunlop. Rev. Dunlop belonged to the Dunlops of Auchenskaith. Their son was:

Rev. Prof. William Dunlap (1654-1703)

He was licensed to preach in Glasgow, Scotland, 1679, but that country was in such a turmoil that he left and came to the Carolinas in British-America, remaining until 1690. Then he returned to Scotland and was appointed Principal of the University of Glasgow by King William III (1689-1702). Think of the life of his wife during those years of turmoil that would compel them to leave the home of a University Principal in Glasgow to come to American wilderness, the land of Indians, the dangers and the enduring hardships! Yet this was God's way. Rev. William Dunlap and his wife, Sarah Carstairs Dunlap, had three sons, all University of Glasgow men. Rev. Alexander Dunlop (1682-1747) was Professor of Greek; his grandson was Rev. Alexander Dunlop

 Miss Ruth A. Campbell states: "No where on our Dunlap line do we have a Dunlop. In a letter from the Duke of Argyll, he stresses the difference in these lines, and states also that Dunlap were Highlanders of Clan Campbell and Dunlop were lowlanders."

 Other sources say Rev. Prof. William Dunlop was born in 1649 and died 1700. Consult Dictionary of National Biography, Volume VI, 1908, p. 209.

of Keppoch (1766-1840). Rev. William Dunlap (1692-1720) was born in Scotland and was a Professor of Church History in the University of Edinburgh at a later date. Rev. John Dunlop (1684-) was a Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow as is shown on the old tombstone in Augusta, Virginia; he was born in the Carolinas, and returned with his parents to Scotland in 1690. Rev. John Dunlop married Nancy Colvin, in Scotland, and returned to British-America, settling finally in Augusta County, Virginia.

Major William Dunlap (1743-1816)

Rev. John and Nancy Colvin Dunlap had William, who was born July 23, 1743, and died in Kentucky, March 5, 1816. He served as a major in the Revolutionary War, until the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, October, 1783, when the war with Great Britain was considered virtually at an end. The old musket that Major William Dunlap carried in the war is still in the possession of one branch of the family living in Kentucky. This is mentioned in a letter now in the possession of Samuel M. Duncan, Esq., of Nicholasville, Kentucky, which reads as follows:

“Major William Dunlap,

The musket which you carried in the war for Liberty was left by your boys at my house during the Christmas Holidays. Your boys and my boys had a good time shooting turkeys and firing off guns before Daylight to waken the neighbours. The bayonet in the gun was broken by carelessness. I will bring the gun to Lexington next week.

Your friend,

William Price.”

When he was mustered out he held the rank of major. There is a tradition authenticated by letters in the possession of an old archaeologist in Kentucky that Major William Dunlap was in the street with Edward Payne when in an altercation with George Washington, who was then a Colonel, he struck him using (gassing) in his field notes speaks of the saying that Washington afterward acknowledged himself in the wrong and apologised hands only to Payne.

Major William Dunlap married Rebecca Robertson, a lady of Scottish descent. She was the daughter of James and Elisabeth Crawford Robertson who came to Virginia about 1735 from Scotland by way of North Ireland; they settled about one mile from Staunton, Virginia, where Rebecca, their sixth child was born. Rebecca Robertson Dunlap was born in Augusta County, Virginia, July 23, 1751, and died in Kentucky, November 7, 1849. They were the parents of nine children: Rev. James, Jane, William, Rebecca, Elisabeth, George, Alexander C., John R., and Patsy.

Of the five sons, two served their country. Alexander Dunlap volunteered as a private in the War of 1812 and was captured at Dudley's defeat, May 7, 1813. He commanded a company in the Seminole War, also the detachment that captured St. Mark's in April 7, 1818, taking prisoners Arbuthnot and Aubereramble. He was Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Illinois in 1843 and was Commander Major in the United States Army in 1846, Vera Cruz, March 28, 1847. He died in Jacksonville, Illinois, November 11, 1853, and is buried in the Dunlap Lot in Dramond Grove Cemetery.

The other son who saw service was Colonel John Robertson Dunlap. He served in the Black Hawk War. He died near Lexington, Kentucky, July 3, 1834, and is buried there.

Rev. James Dunlap (1773-1866)

He was a Baptist minister. He had been reared and educated a Presbyterian and was a devoted member of that Church until his marriage at the age of 21, he entered the Church of his wife's father and began preaching in the frontier wilderness of Kentucky. Rev. James Dunlap was the first Dunlap in Jacksonville, Morgan County, Illinois. He was born in Augusta County, Virginia, July 10, 1773, and died in Jacksonville, Illinois, February 28, 1866, in his 93rd year. At the age of 11 years he went with his father's family to Kentucky. He married Emily Johnson August 29, 1784 in Kentucky. She was born in Virginia, October 15, 1777, and died in Jacksonville, Illinois, March 13, 1848, at the age of 70 years, 4 months, and 27 days.

Rev. James Dunlap, after his marriage, resided several years near Urbana, Ohio. Several of his sons emigrated to Jacksonville, Illinois. In 1844, he moved to Jacksonville and lived surrounded by most of all the members of his family. He was the father of 13 children who lived to be grown men and women. He was a minister in the Baptist Church for more than 50 years. He was blessed by his numerous and highly favoured posterity, consisting at the time of his death: 13 children, 83 grandchildren, 106 great-grandchildren, and 7 great-great-grandchildren. The children of Rev. James Dunlap and his wife, Emily Johnson Dunlap were: William, Rebecca, Mary, John, James, Elisabeth, Nancy, Edward, Jephtha, Stephen, George A., Samuel, Minerva.

One of his sisters, Patsy, born June 13, 1798, married Archibald Henderson in Kentucky; later they moved to Illinois and raised a family. Patsy Dunlap Henderson died in Illinois, July 3, 1834, leaving several children, all girls, except William Henderson, who died about 1940.

There are many descendants of Rev. James Dunlap in Champaign County, Ohio, as well as in Fayette and Bourbon Counties, Kentucky. A large number of grand-children and great-grandchildren are located in and near Urbana, Ohio.

The children of John Dunlap (son of Rev. James Dunlap) and grandchildren reside in Lexington, Kentucky. Many Dunlaps in Virginia, Missouri, and Pennsylvania are descendants of Major William Dunlap or are closely related. They are prominent and outstanding men and women, leaders in public education, and spending freely their hard-earned money and time for other public affairs.

Colonel James Dunlap held the School for the Deaf and Blind in his private home until the state could erect a building. They built The Dunlap Hotel in 1856, and The New Dunlap Hotel was built by a descendant. In 1845-1846, the State Hospital was built. The first Board of Directors consisted of Colonel James Dunlap, Judge William Thomas, Owen M. Long, and Joseph Martin, great-uncles of Miss Olivia Gertrude Dunlap. The School of Deaf and Blind followed.

The following is a lovely tribute to "Miss Nettie" which was given at the Commencement Exercises of Ruffner School, Lexington, Virginia, June 3, 1954:
- "For forty-eight years boys and girls in Lexington have looked up to 'Miss Nettie'. No other person in this town has had such a deep influence upon so many people. Her pupils have learned far more in her classroom than can be found in history books or grammars. They have learned good manners and the spirit of citizenship. They have gotten a broader vision of their world. They have been shown what fair play and helpfulness mean. Through all these, in no secretarian fashion, they have been led to see the reverence for God and respect for other people are the crowning elements of a true education. Some of this they have gotten through the formal lessons she has taught them; but the best of it has come from the contagion of a strong and sweet and loving personality. All who come in contact with her have felt the warmth of her affection; but the boys and girls who have had most need of help have known her as a wise and patient friend. Through the years hundreds of them will rise up and call her blessed."
- 7 Lula Strain Dunlap (1886 -).

CHAPTER II

Dunlap Ancestry

Dunlops (Dunlaps) In British-America or the United States of America

CHAPTER II

1. DUNLAP ANCESTRY

compiled by Mrs. Esther Mae Winget Warner

May, 1955

In the lineage "The Adamic Line of Descent," found in the book "Know Your Ancestors," by George Jewett and Company, 1931, we find that the Dunlaps can be traced back to Adam.

This line begins with Adam and Eve, the twelfth generation being Magog (Genesis 10:2). The Old Irish Chronicles 1: 15 states that Magog was contemporary with the building of Ninevah.

An ancient record, according to the Book of Invasion of Ireland, "Cin Droma Sneachta" which existed when St. Patrick came to Ireland, says Magog had three sons, one named Baath was father of Fenius Farsdaidh (2000) who ruled as King of Scythia (Keating, Vol. I, p. 227). The lineage comes down to Heremon, generation No. 37, who with seven brothers and his Mother, Scota II, left for Ireland around 1560 B.C. He had previously been in Egypt with his parents and while there married a Jewish Princess of the House of David, a daughter of Zedekiah, named Circa. Circa is said to have taken the "Stone of Destiny" (lia Fail) which to this day rests under the Coronation Chair in England. Queen Victoria and all succeeding English sovereigns from 1272 have been crowned on this chair. It was brought from Scotland by King Edward I, 1296. The monarchs of Ancient Scotland and Ireland were crowned upon this stone. This is the stone of which Jacob pillowed his head when he had the vision, and later set up at Bethel (House of God). Later all kings of Judah were crowned upon it. At the time of the Babylonian Captivity, Jeremiah rescued it and also the Princess Circa, who later married Heremon, son of Milesius. She went with him to Spain, then to Ireland, taking the Stone with her. All the kings of Ireland were crowned, sitting on this stone until 424 A.D. when Fergus, the great King of Scotland, a descendant of Heremon and Circa, borrowed it and had it taken to Scotland (90 A.D.). It was used in Scotland for Coronations until Malcolm's (the slayer of Macbeth) time. His descendant, Edward I, conquered Scotland, 1296, and removed the stone to London, England, where it has since remained.

The lineage comes down from Heremon to Aenaes Furneach (Fairneach), 384 B.C., the 81st King of Ireland. He was a good king and reigned many years. He left two sons, Enna, from whom descended most of the kings of Ireland, and Faighaor Fiach, who was the ancestor of the kings of Scotland in Argyle and Dalrioda, and of Mac Dunsleible-Dunlop, Dunlap, Dunlape, and Dulape, etc.

References given in the book are as follows: "The Holy Bible"; "Irish Chronicles;" "Psalter of Tara", collected at Tara by King Cormac Ulfhada (King 227-266 A.D., and Eithrial, King of Ireland (the 11th) B.C., between 1500 and 1400: he wrote, in his own hand the "History of the Gails, "his ancestors; Keating's "History," Vol. I; "Prominent Virginia Families," by Dubelle, Vol. II; "History of England and Great Britain," Arthur Lyon Cross, 1920.

Extracts from "Irish Pedigrees" by O'Hart as given in "The Annals of Ulidia-Ancient Ireland," state: "Aeneas Faimeach, the 81st monarch of Ireland, who is the 66th in line from Heremon, had a son named Fiach Feumara, who was the ancestor of the kings of Argyle and Dalrioda in Scotland. He was also the ancestor of Mac Dunsleible and O'Dunsleible (English) Dunleavy, Don Levi, Dunlevy, Conlevy, Dunlop, Delop, Dunlief, Livingston, and Levanston. On down to the 110th king is given. He was Dunsleible or Dunslieve (from which are Mac Dunsleible and O'Dunsleible). His sons Connor and Rory were the 53rd and 54th Christian kings and also kings of Ulidia. Descendants of this family passed into Scotland after the invasion of Ireland, and there changed the name to Dunlief and Dunlop and even Livingston. Their name traces back to 1260 when Dom Gulielmus de Dunlop was Lord Dunlop in Ayrshire, the estate still in possession of the family."

The following is taken from a book of the Dunlop Family which was written by William Dunlop, Esq. 1720; it is now owned by Mrs. John B. Yost of 402 East Walnut Street, Shelbina, Missouri: "((Rev.)) Alexander Dunlop, minister of the Gospel at Paisley, a person of considerable note for piety, learning, zeal, and credit in the Kirk of Scotland. He had a son William, who became Principal of the College of Glasgow. William Dunlop had a greatness of spirit that few could equal. He gave proof of it in that undaunted resolution and fortitude of mind, with which he bare persecution and hardship to which he exposed for conscience sake and which sent him as an exile as far as the America Plantations. Here he was a great encouragement and supporter of his countrymen and fellow suffers who went along with him. Under the conduct of King William of ever glorious memory, Rev. Dunlop returned to Scotland and was by the favour of that Prince promoted to the Station of Principal of Glasgow College. The authority with which he governed that learned Society and the respect paid him by master and scholar was an undoubted evidence of his great ability. When the Kirk of Scotland, anno 1694, sent a deputation of their number to wait on His Majesty, King William, to negotiate some of the affairs of the Church at Court, Rev. Dunlop was one of them and very deservedly for he was remarkable for his public spiritedness and exerted himself always with uncommon vigour and activity for the general interest of the Kir. He died 1700 and left a widow and three sons, Alexander, the eldest, a worthy gentleman, and Professor in the University of Glasgow; the second son died soon after his father; and William, the youngest died October 29, 1720."

Alexander Dunlop, Soldier (cir. 1689)

It is a known fact that the Dunlap family were landed gentry of Celtic (Keltic) origin and were not of Norman or Saxon ancestry. The father of Alexander Dunlop was Alexander Dunlop, a member of the Dunlop Cadets (Dunlop of Dunlop, some say Dunlops of Garnkirk), and served through the Londonderry Siege (April-July 1689). He migrated to Ulster, the northern part of Ireland, from which Oliver Cromwell had driven the Roman Catholic Irish and had opened it to Presbyterianism. The settlers were largely Scotch; there were lesser numbers of English and French Huguenots. The Londonderry Defence was against the last Roman Catholic King of England, James II (1685-1689).

Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744)

Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744) came first to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, then travelled southward into the Shenandoah Valley at the head of the James River. He became the first owner of Goshen Pass, then called Dunlap Gap. His land consisted of the pasture region known as the Great Calf Pasture River (Greenbriar River). This was the furthestmost settlement in Virginia at that time. In 1743, the Indians were threatening the Valley and his Fort (all houses were forts) being the most extended on the frontier, he was commissioned "Captain of the Horse," of the Virginia Militia.

Captain Dunlop married Anne MacFarlane (1715-1786), a daughter of Caleb MacFarlane, the last Chief of Clan MacFarlane in Scotland. To this union were born four children: John, Robert, Alexander, and Elisabeth. He died in 1744 and the widow married Capt. Robert Bratton. Captain Dunlop left personal property valued at $811.48. The name now was spelled Dunlap (the "a" replacing the "o").

William, Captain James, Hugh, all related to Captain Alexander Dunlop came to British-America about the same time. William and James settled in Augusta County, Va., and Hugh went to Tennessee. Captain Dunlop's brothers were Samuel, Robert, John, and David.

The Dunlap family is one of the oldest and most distinguished of the Scotch and Scotch-Irish Presbyterian families of the middle-east states and of the South. From these early settlers have come many prominent descendants. This family was one of the largest landholders in the South and have furnished more clergyman than any other family. Many physicians have also come from this ancient clan as well as nurses and missionaries, politicians and college professors.

Because of the social and political prominence of the Dunlaps - these Dunlap, Gay, Warwick, Hanna, MacKee connexions have been stated to be one of the families of largest land-holdings in the Virginia Valley, if not the largest.

The Dunlaps of Virginia and Kentucky constituted an interesting family of people in the early era of the history of both commonwealths. Conspicuous as large land-owners, for professional men, military men, and clergymen.

In Kentucky they intermarried with the families of many pioneer settlers. Tradition is that the Dunlaps, Gays, Hannas, Stevensons were the first settlers of Woodford County, being there before 1784. Other families were Kinkeads, Elliotts, Clarks, Hamiltons, Campbells, Carlyles, Kicklines, Lockridges, Meeks, MacIlbaine, Mortons, Allens, and Meeks.

John Dunlap (1738-1804)

Captain Alexander Dunlop's house stood on the site now occupied by the Alleghany Inn at Goshen. John Dunlap, oldest son of Captain Dunlop, lived in Rockbridge County and was the largest land-owner in the county. He also owned 7,000 acres of land in Kentucky and Ohio at the time of his death. His Virginia land included a half interest in the Rockbridge Alum Springs, now a famous southern resort. His Kentucky land was very valuable and is still owned by a descendant as is his Ohio holdings.

John Dunlap was an explorer in southern Ohio in 1776. The land he purchased in Ohio included Old Chillicothe (now Frankfort, Ohio), capitol of the Indians of North-west Territory. He married Anne Clark, the daughter of James Clark and kinswoman of General George Rogers Clark "The Hannibal of the West", and his brother William of the Lewis and Clark Expedition. The Clarks, an old Scotch family, were frequent visitors at the Dunlap home.

Soon after the Revolutionary War, John Dunlap erected a large three story brick house on the present site of Victoria Furnace, near Goshen. He died in 1804. His will is recorded in Rockbridge County, Va., and in Ross County, Ohio, where his children were living. Anne Clark Dunlap's Will is recorded in Rockbridge County, Va., in 1809, as are her father's and mother's, James and Elisabeth Clark.

Among some of the distinguished descendants of John and Anne Clark Dunlap are: Professor Robert E. Young, leader in southern education; Renick Dunlap, former Assistant U. S. Secretary of Agriculture, and many others.

John Dunlap III (1811-1879)

John Dunlap II was a pioneer in Ohio. He was a surveyor, 1796, with his cousin James Dunlap, also a distinguished Ohio pioneer. John Dunlap married Dorcas Dowell, a niece of Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790) and moved to Ross County, Ohio, 1825. Here he erected a large brick house burning the brick on the farm. His house still stands on a ridge west of the Scioto River and is owned by descendants. Four brick houses were erected along this ridge on four adjoining farms and three are still owned by descendants, the fourth having been given to a tenant by the last Dunlap owner who was a bachelor. This later farm was formerly owned by James Dunlap (born 1769), who erected the house prior to 1815, the oldest of the four.

John Dunlap III was born in Rockbridge County Virginia in 1811 and came to Ohio at the age of 14. He attended school at the Old Field Schools in Virginia. He was a successful farmer and stock raiser. He died in 1879. He married Mary Ann Minear who was born in 1818 and died in 1924 at the age of 106.

Charles, the son of John Dunlap III, succeeded to the ownership of the old home consisting of 185 acres. He also owned 320 acres in North Dakota. The old home is still owned by his children.

John Nelson Dunlap (1845-1942)

Nelson Dunlap, son of John and Mary Ann Minear Dunlap, was one of the foremost farmers and stockmen in Pickaway County, Ohio. He was an extensive land-owner and played an important part in the development of farms; he was a model in all respects. He raised horses and other fine stock. He was conspicuous in politics and civic life of the section. He attended Mount Pleasant Academy, later a commercial college at Chillicothe, Ohio, where he took a business course and taught two terms. He joined the Navy, Nov. 19, 1863, and was a member of the Mississippi Squadron. Previously he was a scout for General Morgan. In 1863 he was detailed to the Paymaster Department and had charge of stores, clothing, etc. He was a purser-stewart for the balance of his term. He was discharged January 1, 1865, and took up farming. He owned 900 acres of land and dealt heavily in stock-feeding. He was a man of wealth, a leader of finances in this part of the state. He was Vice-President and Director of the Scioto Valley Bank, Kingston, Ohio, and President of Kingston Tile Company. He was often a delegate to Republican District and State Conventions. He was the first elected Treasurer in the township and was chairman of the local Grange, and held all the various offices at some time. He married Elisabeth Bell, a daughter of Hugh and Lavina Renick Bell in 1867.

Renick Dunlap (1872-1945)

Renick W. Dunlap, son of Nelson, graduated from Ohio State and went into politics. He was an Ohio State Football Star and Captain of the team in 1895 and active henceforth in the Alumni. His son, Nelson, was first Star's son to win Varsity "O". Renick Dunlap maintained his farm and raised fine cattle as a hobby. In 1907-1911 he was Food Commissioner, a member of the Senate in 1915, and was Secretary of Agriculture in the State. In 1925 he was appointed Assistant Secretary of Agriculture under President John Calvin Coolidge and served also under President Herbert Clark Hoover. He operated the Congo Stock Farm, Kingston, Ohio. He was a member of the 76th Assembly, 1904-1905; Dairy and Food Commissioner for Ohio, 1907-1911; and an advocate of enforcement of pure food laws bringing about the commercial food-stuff law in Ohio.

Major Dunlap (1814-1876)

Major Dunlap, son of John and Dorcas Dowell Dunlap, was born in Virginia and moved to Ohio with his parents, 1825. He married, first, Martha MacCollister, by whom he had one daughter, Mary. Martha died and Major married, second Ellen Goodman, the daughter of David and Elisabeth Cullum Goodman, great-granddaughter of George and Catherine Gouger Goodman. Catherine Gouger is recorded as the first white woman to have lived in Ohio and left known issue.

"The Chillicothe Register" reported at the time of his death: "But few men in Ross County, Ohio, were better known than Major Dunlap. His reputation was that of a highly honourable, upright, generous man, a possessor of considerable wealth. He was a cheery and generous friend with a heart liberally inclined and was easily moved to acts of practical sympathy." "The Christian Union Paper," reported: "He was a grand and noble man, of great wealth which he used to do good and advance the cause of Bible Gospel Unity. He was fair and true in his religious beliefs." His home was the stopping place of ministers, generally, and no difference who they were, they were never turned from his hospitable board. If he met a man along the highway in need, he sent him to the house for food or work. His wife, Ellen, could always find some chore for them.

Major Dunlap subscribed liberally to the stock of the Scioto Valley and the Dayton and Southern Railroads. He owned most of the stock in the Louisville Turnpike, upon which his house was located and which he and a brother built at their own expense in order to have a road to transport their produce to market. The old toll-house, on his land, is still in use, now being used as a tenant house. He also invested largely in the Chillicothe and Clarksburg Turnpike, also a toll road. Considering the nature of his principal business he got along with remarkable smoothness, very seldom engaging in litigation. He met his death by being thrown from a horse when leading a colt by a halter fastened to his foot in March, 1876. He left a widow and five small children well provided for. Besides his home farm he left each child about 200 acres. His widow, being a good business woman, managed all the farms until each child became of age when he took over his own farm.

Ensign Robert Dunlap (1740-1781)

Robert Dunlap, second son of Captain Alexander and Anne MacFarlane Dunlop, lived in Aspen Grove, Rockbridge County, Virginia. He furnished money for the MacConnells to found MacConnell Station (now Lexington, Kentucky) for which he was to receive 500 acres of the present site of the city. This Estate was lost to his heirs in Court, by a Decision of the Court of Appeals in Kentucky, 1805. He served as Ensign in the company of his half-brother, Captain James Bratton of "Rock Rest" Bath County, Virginia, who later became Major Bratton. Robert lost his life at the Battle of Guilford Court House because he refused to obey orders to retreat. He married, 1763, Mary Gay, a daughter of Rev. William and Mary Walkup Gay of Ulster and Virginia.

Robert Dunlap and his father-in-law brought the first improved cattle and first thoroughbred horses to Kentucky. His daughter, Anne (born 1765) married David McKee (MacKay) of Jessimine County, Kentucky, one of the founders and Ruling Elders of the Old Cedar Creek Presbyterian Church.

Among the descendants of Robert Dunlap are: Rev. James W. Bashford, Methodist Episcopal Bishop in China, author, and President of Ohio Wesleyan University; James W. MacMurty, archaeologist; Robert Bashford, Dean of Law School of the University of Wisconsin; Boutwell Dunlap, historian, eugenist of California; Rev. E. O. Brown, Church historian of Vanderbilt University; Rev. W. W. Morrison, D.D., missionary to Africa who stirred up foreign governments to action against the Congo atrocities; Rev. Graham Gordon, Presbyterian clergyman in Kentucky; Rev. James Arthur MacClellan Hanna, Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio.

Alexander Dunlap (1743-1828)

Alexander Dunlap, son of Alexander and Anne MacFarlane Dunlap, was born in 1743 in Rockbridge County, Virginia. He settled in Greenbrier, now Pocahontas County, West Va. He removed, about 1783, to Woodford County, Kentucky, and opened a sugar camp. He was the founder of the famous Pisgah Presbyterian Church and Academy, the forerunner of Transylvania University. Woodford County, Kentucky is called "the asparagus patch" of Kentucky and is the most aristocratic county in that state. Alexander was an Indian fighter and built the Clover Lick Fort which he later sold to his cousin, Major Jacob Warwick when he moved to Kentucky. He married Agnes Gay, a daughter of James and Jean Warwick Gay. After her death, 1804, he removed to Ohio (Brown County), where he lived with his children until his death in 1828. He is buried in the Red Oak Presbyterian Cemetery.

Samuel Stevenson, brother-in-law to Colonel Alexander Dunlap, gave the land for Pisgah Church which was founded by Colonel Dunlap. In Brown County, Ohio, he founded the Dunlap Church. Although a Ruling Elder, he became so impressed with the interpretation of Rev. Alexander Campbell's teachings of the Holy Writ that he became a member of his Church and made the new Church the first, or one of the first, to be used by the Disciples of Christ in Ohio.

In 1795, Alexander Dunlap and Major Samuel Stevenson explored southern Ohio. On one of these trips he was accompanied by Allen Trimble who moved to Ohio later and became governor of the new state. Colonel Dunlap purchased land in Brown County and also in Ross County near Chillicothe, on the Scioto River. Major Stevenson purchased a large tract of land near Old Town, Greene County, to which his three sons emigrated.

Colonel James Dunlap (1768-1821)

Colonel James Dunlap, son of Colonel Alexander Dunlap, was born in Virginia in 1768. He settled on a farm near Chillicothe, his land adjoining that of his cousin John. Here he erected a large brick house before 1815 and lived there until his death in 1821.

While a boy, during one of the Indian forays in Virginia, James Dunlap was mounted on a black stallion whose back had been tarred so as to enable him to stay on his mount, was sent with a message through the Indian lines from Clover Lick Fort of the Dunlaps to Warwick's Fort, to bring assistance in an effort to repel the Indians. He was also out in the West Indian Campaign in Kentucky. He left Woodford County for Chillicothe in 1796 to take charge of his father's estate. He returned the following year and married Elisabeth Stevenson, June, 1797, a daughter of James Stevenson, Sr., and a distant relative of Major Samuel Stevenson, who first settled at Pisgah. He was Justice of the Court of Quarter Sessions of Ross County in 1799, a member of the Ohio Legislature in 1803, and later sessions, member of the State Senate, Presidential Elector, 1812, and also a Colonel in the War of 1812. He was a Whig Candidate for Governor of Ohio in 1816 and 1818. He was a member of the first Court in Ross County, Ohio, 1798, Chillicothe Court of Common Pleas for the U. S. Territory North-West of the Ohio River, presided over by the "Gentlemen Justices." He was commissioned by Governor Arthur St. Clair in 1798 for this task with ten other gentlemen. He served until the Judiciary was organized under the State Constitution. He sold 200 acres of his land for the Poor Farm in 1818.

William Dunlap (1772-1849)

William Dunlap, son of Colonel Alexander and Agnes Gay Dunlap moved to Brown County, Ohio, about 1797. He became an anti-slavery leader in the State. His son, Dr. Alexander Dunlap, was a prominent early physician and surgeon. Dr. Dunlap attended Athens University, Miami University, studied Medicine under his brother, Dr. Milton Dunlap (1807-1890) of Greenfield, Ohio, then graduated from Cincinnati Medical School in 1830. Dr. Dunlap practiced with his brother until 1846, then moved to Ripley, Ohio. In 1856, he removed to Springfield, Ohio. In 1843 he removed, successfully, a forty-five pound ovarian tumor but his patient died a week later. He was denounced but in 1868 was elected President of the Ohio Medical Society and twice re-elected. He was one of the Judicial Council of A. M. A., and he resigned to accept the Vice-Presidency. He was elected a Fellow of the American Gynecological Society in 1875 and was appointed to Professor of "Surgical Diseases in Women" in Starling Medical College of Columbus. In Lithotomy he was reported as successful in removing a 20 ounce stone, largest ever reported from a living person, 1881. He was prominent in other operations. His surgical instruments are in the Historical Museum in Xenia, Ohio, having been acquired by a friend, Dr. Ben McClellan.

Rev. Samuel MacChord, a grandson of William Dunlap, was an essayist, the second "Oliver Wendell Holmes," preaching at Harvard, 1838. Another grandson was Charles Kephart Dunlap who was a leading railroad man and who is written up in "Who's Who In America."

Rev. Mitchell G. Dunlap (1809-1891)

Rev. Mitchell G. Dunlap was the son of Robert and Martha Graham Dunlap of Augusta County, Virginia, grandson of Robert and Mary Gay Dunlap. No person extended an influence for the best interest of our people superior to what he did. He studied at Lexington, Va., and Union Theological Seminary at Hampden Sydney. Several years later he was licensed by Lexington Presbytery and soon after went to French Creek-Oak Grove Church, Va. He lived at Hillsboro and supplied Hunterville and Oak Grove. He was principal of Pocahontas Academy, established, 1840, by Rev. Joseph Brown. He organized the "Church Magazine" in 1845. He retired to the farm. He served his Church faithfully from 1845 until his death in 1891.

Tradition is with us today that the first generation of the family of Dunlaps were the first settlers of Pasture Region in the Valley of Virginia, furthestmost settlers of the Virginian frontier at that time. The second generation advance money for what later became Lexington, Virginia, "The Athens of the West." The third generation, William Dunlap, went to Kentucky. The fourth generation early settlers located in Kansas, and the fifth generation was William the prominent California pioneer who had been to Mexico in 1848 (Boutwell Dunlap's lineage).

2. Dunlops (Dunlaps) In British-America or the U.S.A.

OUR SCOTTISH-AMERICAN ANCESTOR was Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744), a Captain of the Horse, who came from Scotland by way of North Ireland (Ulster) with his famous sister, Elisabeth Dunlap, who is mentioned in the "Seneca Trail," and settled in Augusta County (now Rockbridge), Virginia, on Calfpasture. He built and owned Goshen. He came with his kinsmen: Captain James Dunlap, William Dunlap, and Hugh Dunlap. Hugh Dunlap settled in Knoxville, Tennessee, and had two illustrious sons: General Richard G. Dunlap (1775-1859), who was Secretary of War in the Texas Republic, and the Honourable William Claiborne Dunlap, a statesman.*

Captain Alexander Dunlop was the son of Alexander and Antonia Brown Dunlop; Alexander Dunlop was a Scottish soldier at the Siege of Londonderry, North Ireland, 1689; he was descended from the Dunlops of Dunlop, Scotland. Capt. Alexander Dunlop married Anne MacFarlane (1715-1786) in 1737, who was born in Scotland, and was a daughter of Caleb MacFarlane, the Chief of the Clan, whose lands were proscribed before 1740 (See Appendix for an historical sketch of Clan MacFarlane).

After the death of Capt. Alexander Dunlop in 1744, Anne married Captain Robert Bratton of Virginia, 1745.

To the first union we have a record of four children, three sons and one daughter with whom we shall be concerned: 1. Ensign Robert Dunlap (1740-1781), 2. John Dunlap (1743-1804), 3. Colonel Alexander Dunlap (1743-1828), and 4. Elisabeth Anne MacFarlane Dunlap (1744-).

* See Mary U. Rothrocks, Editor, The French Broad-Holston Country, 1946. Two other sons were: James T., Comptroller of the Treasury of Tennessee, 1857-1861, and Hugh White, a judge in West Tennessee.

Rev. A. J. Ponton in his History of Windy Cove Presbyterian Church, Millboro Springs, Virginia, 1749-1929, wrote:

“About this time (1730) a number of enterprising and hardy families, seeking a home in the wilderness, came and settled in this neighbourhood on this river, and changed its beautiful Indian name of Wallawhatoola into that of Cowpasture River. They were soon afterwards joined by other families. They were the descendants of those who had suffered so much in the Old Country under Claverhouse the bloodhound of persecution in Scotland. Their fathers and mothers had been shut up for eight months in the Siege of Derry. It is stated in the history of that day of blood, that about twenty-seven thousand persons were shut up in the walls of that town, of whom about one thousand perished in the siege, when James II (1685-1689) was endeavouring to bring them into subjection, and establish over them in all the realm, the Roman Catholic religion. They came to this broad land in the hope of enjoying that civil and religious liberty which neither they nor their fathers could enjoy at home.”

- 7 Elisabeth Dunlap (1810-or 1812-1882). She married a cousin, Frank Graves (or Graham) Dunlap (1809-1900). She died March 24, 1882 and is buried in the Old Hall Cemetery on Davis Creek, West Virginia. It is most unfortunate that Mr. Oren F. Morton in his splendid history unintentionally omitted the name of Elisabeth Dunlap and Frank G. Dunlap. To this holy wedlock one son was born, Franklin Francis.
- 8 Franklin Francis Dunlap (1837-1891). He was born in 1837 in Monroe County, Virginia, and died on Davis Creek, West Virginia, November 23, 1891, and is buried in the Old Hall Cemetery. His occupation was farming in the Loudon District. He was reared in the Presbyterian faith, but later attended the Methodist Episcopal Church. He married Sarah Davis (born September 3, 1837, and died September 19, 1908), 1859 a daughter of Reverend Thomas L. Davis (1798-1876) one of the first settlers in Charleston, West Virginia, and who at one time owned over 1,200 acres of land, and gave his name to Davis Creek; he was of Welsh extraction; her mother was Sarah (Sallie Means), a daughter of Hugh and Sarah Snodgrass Means, who was of Welsh and Scotch descent, married 1828. (Rev. Thomas L. Davis' grandparents came from North Wales and settled among the Welsh settlements in Virginia. He was a clergyman in the M. E. Church (he was believed to have been formerly a Calvinistic Methodist or Welsh Presbyterian), serving various parishes in Virginia and West Virginia. He was accidentally killed by falling timber on Lick Creek, Boone County, West Virginia, both he and his horse; Rev. Davis and his wife are buried in the Old Hall Cemetery, Davis Creek, near Charleston.) To this happy union nine (9) children were born. All of them were reared in the Methodist Episcopal faith. There were seven sons and two daughters: Peter C., Emma E., Robert S., Stanhope F., Andrew J., Rome E., Golden H., Alice C., and James B.*

9 Peter Cartwright Dunlap (1863-1935). He was born in Monroe County, Virginia, Dunlap's Creek, during the War between the States. He was reared in the M. E. Church, but his father's people were staunch Presbyterians. He married Samatha Kinder; to this union eleven (11) children were born. He died in St. Albans, West Virginia in 1935. Samatha Kinder was the daughter of James and Nancy Holt Kinder. They are buried in the Dunlap Cemetery, Olcott, West Virginia.

- 9 James Brady Dunlap (1882-1954). He was born in Charleston, West Virginia, November 27, 1882, and was reared in the M. E. Church; later he attended the Baptist Church in Ruth. A very devout Christian, he was united in marriage (first) to Margie Childers (Childress) who was a daughter of Robert Lee (1853-1921) and Elisabeth Ann Pauley Childress (1859-1937); she was born in 1883 and died 1909. He farmed for many years in the vicinity of Ruth, Kanawha County, and operated a merchandise store there for over forty years. He was an upright man in all his business transactions and exerted much influence in the community. During the years of depression he assisted generously nearly two hundred families without thought of being reimbursed. He was a very large man, standing over six-feet two and weighing over two hundred twenty five pounds. He died quite suddenly January 5, 1954 in Charleston; he was laid to rest on the 8th of January, 1954 in the Dunlap Family plot in Graceland Cemetery. He will be remembered with love and affection by his children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren. He married, second, Ida May Barker (1889-) in 1910.*

Rev. Hugh Walker McCutchan gives the following additional notes:

1. Spelling of the Name. Over two hundred years ago, the usual spelling of the name was McCutchen or McCutcheon, and a majority of the members of the family still use one or the other of these spellings. For the past few generations, most members of our branch of the family have written the name McCutchan.
2. Geographical Locations. Most of the members of our branch of the McCutchan Family continued to live on the Little Calfpasture until 1876. Adam Travis and his family lived at Estaline Furnance in Augusta County, Virginia, until 1836, when they moved to Lewis County, Missouri. All of his five children married in Missouri and made their homes there. In 1872 John Samuel

* The children of Rev. and Mrs. John Wilson McCutchan are: Marjorie Ann (born 1938) and Mary Caroline (born 1940). He is now Professor of English at Davidson College, Davidson, North Carolina.

McCutchan and wife and younger son, William Thomas, moved to Lewis County, Missouri. Mary Agnes McCutchan and her husband, James Luther Morrison made their home on Whistle Creek, near Lexington, Virginia.

5 Colonel Alexander Dunlap (1743-1828).* He was the first settler of Woodford County, Kentucky, and was the founder of the Pisgah Presbyterian Church and Pisgah Academy, which later became Transylvania University. He married, 1768, Agnes Gay (1745-1804), a daughter of James and Jean Warwick Gay, granddaughter of William Gay of Ulster. Colonel Dunlap is buried in the Red Oak Presbyterian Cemetery near Georgetown and Ripley Ohio (Rev. James Edgar Tweddle is Stated Supply of the Red Oak Church, 1947-). He built Clover Lick Fort in Virginia, and served as a private in Colonel Patterson Bell's Regiment, 5th Company, 8th Battalion, Chester County Militia, 1778. Died March 16, 1828.

6 Colonel James Dunlap (1769-1821). He married, 1797, Elisabeth Stevenson, a daughter of John and Mary Moore Stevenson, granddaughter of John and Martha Warwick Stevenson, Licking County, Kentucky. They came to Ohio in 1798. He was a State Senator, and served in the War of 1812. He was sent from Clover Lick Fort to Warwick Fort to bring assistance to repel Indian attacks. He was placed on a tarred stallion and made the trip.*

7 Margaret Dunlap. She married, 1816, Alexander MacCoy.

7 Agnes (Nancy) Dunlap. She married, 1821, John Mace, son of Jacob and Bettie Fisher Mace. Colonel Mace served in the War of 1812, and later lived on the Dunlap farm in Ross County, Ohio.

* The descendants of Colonel Alexander Dunlap were sent to the author by Mrs. Esther Mae Winget Warner of Xenia, Ohio (1955).

 From Reverend Sander's history of Louisville Seminary, we find: "The Church in Kentucky soon found need for a school of the prophets. As early as 1794, when it was in session at Woodford Church, in Woodford County, the Transylvania Presbytery initiated steps looking toward the founding of an academy to prepare young men to preach. Kentucky Academy was founded at Pisgah Church as a result of this action and it was amalgamated with Transylvania Seminary in Lexington in 1798 to form Transylvania University."

Old Waxhaw Community, Lancaster County, South Carolina

GENEALOGY OF THE WAXHAW DUNLAP FAMILY

The Reverend Joseph Witherspoon Dunlap, B.A., B.D.

GENEALOGY
WAXHAW DUNLAP FAMILY

THIS FAMILY ORIGINATED IN THE OLD WAXHAW COMMUNITY, LANCASTER COUNTY, SOUTH CAROLINA.

Compiled by
THE REVEREND JOSEPH WITHERSPOON DUNLAP, MINISTER, DARLINTON PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
DARLINGTON, SOUTH CAROLINA

THIS GENEALOGY INCLUDES ONLY PART OF THE WAXHAW DUN-LAPS. THERE ARE 40 MORE OR LESS DUNLAP MARKER'S IN THE WAXHAW CEMETERY.

PREFACE

The following account of a Dunlap Family of the "Old Waxhaw" community of Lancaster County, South Carolina, is compiled from various authentic sources, and every effort has been made to render it as full and accurate as possible. Data concerning my own direct line of ancestry, being so much more readily obtained, must be an excuse for seeming partiality to that branch. There are, doubtless, some errors and many omissions in the work, but the undertaking has been one of great difficulty, and the very lack of information on the part of the members of the family convinces me of the need of this publication, however imperfect it may be. This Genealogy is simply the effort of a busy man to preserve in permanent shape some account of his ancestors.

This Genealogy of the Dunlap Family of the "Old Waxhaw Community" does not include all of the Dunlaps in the Waxhaws.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

1. Grateful acknowledgment is hereby made to Miss Nancy Crockett, Genealogist, Waxhaws chapter, D. A. R., Lancaster, S. C., who has made an extensive study of the Waxhaw section. She furnished valuable information from her files for generations "A", "B", and "C". She was very gracious in sending wills, deeds, grants, information from Minutes of Presbytery, tombstone inscriptions from Old Waxhaw Cemetery etc. She also lended valuable assistance by reading the mss. of generations "A" and "B" and making corrections, suggestions to further research and appraising the material located. Without the help of Miss Nancy Crockett, this work could not have been completed.

Further acknowledgment will be made to Miss Crockett in the Genealogy which follows.

2. History of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina, Rev. George Howe, D. D., Professor in the Theological Seminary, Columbia, South Carolina. Duffie & Chapman, 1870. I have obtained useful information from Volume 1, "Old Waxhaw", 1750 - 1760, pages 285 - 293, and other references to our early ancestors of the family.

3. Genealogy of the Witherspoon Family, with some account of other families with which it is connected, compiled by Joseph G. Wardlaw, printed at the Enquirer Office, Yorkville, S. C., 1910, pages 134 - 135: 22 - 24.

"A Scotch-Irish family which landed in Pennsylvania: from thence three brothers (Robert, Samuel, and _____)* moved to the Waxhaw Community in Lancaster County, South Carolina, probably in May, 1751, with many neighbors and friends." (Genealogy of the Witherspoon Family, compiled by Joseph G. Wardlaw, Yorkville, S. C., 1910, pg. 134).

"Alexander Dunlap (1689), a Scottish soldier who fought at the Siege of London-derry had five sons who came to Pennsylvania. They were Alexander Dunlap, Jr., (1716-1744), Samuel, David, Robert, and John. Samuel, David, Robert and John moved to South Carolina." (J.A.H.).

WAXHAW: "This community is so closely associated with our early ancestors as to make it proper to set down a few facts relating thereto. The name doubtless originated from the Waxhaw Indians. It embraces a territory about five miles square, near the Catawba River, in Lancaster County, South Carolina. It was settled by the whites about 1751, the families forming the settlement came from Pennsylvania and Virginia and were Scotch-Irish who gradually worked their way south. The first grant of land was made to Robert McElhenney in 1751, and is known as the "Old Blair Place." Some of the earliest settlers were the Whites, Pickens, Fosters, Simpsons, Calhouns, Dunlaps, Barnetts, Millers, Lattas, Crockets and others. It is thought the Crawfords, Jacksons, Hutchisons and others arrived about 1760. The defeat of Braddock, in 1755, probably induced many to seek homes in the more protected sections of North and South Carolina. Very soon after these worthy people provided shelter for their families, they began the erection of a building for the worship of God. Rev. J. B. Davies says: the first church was organized in 1755 or 1756. I notice that Samuel Dunlap, who married Mary Craighthead, and Henry White are named as two of the original trustees and elders, to whom was deeded in 1758, "The church and four and one half acres and a spring," (Ibid, Wardlaw, pages 22 - 24.) Dr. Howe says: "The original Trustees of the Waxhaw Church were Samuel Dunlap, Henry White, Robert Davies, Robert Ramsay, and John."

"The successors of the original trustees have been William Davis, Robert Montgomery, Robert Dunlap, William Carns, Nathan Barr, James Dunlap.

After this, the trustees having died out, the congregation held an election, during the pastorate of Edward Palmer, and elected John Foster, B. S. Massey, Robert Crockett, D. Dunlap, and _____ Gamble. The lease of the church lot was recorded in the Registry Office of Anson County, N. C.—" (Book D., No. 4, pp. 371, 375, the 17th of September, 1759) Ibid, Howe, Vol. 1, 293.

"Mr. Miller (Rev. Robert Miller) had sold his plantation to Mr. Barnett, but had reserved four and a half acres, on which the church was built, as sacred to the uses of the congregation. On this day (March 9, 1758) he and his wife Jane executed a lease and release of the land, transferring this tract, on which was the cemetery, church, and spring to trustees for the Waxhaw congregation. The Trustees named in the document are Robert Davies, Robert Ramsay, John Linn, Samuel Dunlap, and Henry White. It is attested by Robert McClanahan, John Crockett, and Andrew Pickens." History of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina, Rev. George Howe, D. D., Professor in the Theological Seminary, Columbia, South Carolina, Vol. 1, pg. 290.

Mr. Wardlaw quotes Mr. McCrady as saying:

" 'Almost invariably as soon as a neighborhood was settled preparations were made for the preaching of the Gospel by a regular stated pastor, and wherever a pastor was located, in that congregation there was a classical school.' Certain it is that religion and education were the most potent factors in moulding the characters of the inhabitants of this section, and as a result men were produced, who have added lustre to the entire state. Gen'l McCrady also says, 'If the old St. Phillips Church was a part of the constitution of South Carolina, as Westminster Abbey was of the British constitution, so around the Old Waxhaw Church in Lancaster—the first church above Orangeburg—was formed the settlement which gave tone and thought to the whole upper country of the State. From these people came three of the greatest men of their times—Jackson, Calhoun and Crawford (Wm. H.). From the Waxhaws too, came Stephen D. Miller, a man of great power in his day and generation in society, as the bar and in the councils of his country.' Continuing, he comments upon the rearing of the children of this community and states that they were 'taught to speak the truth and defend it, to keep a good conscience and fear God.' 'The desire of knowledge was cherished before a competence was gained.' Dr. Howe says, 'Many of the Waxhaw men were numbered among the patriots of the Revolution. Besides Major, afterwards General and subsequently Governor, William R. Davie, there were Major Robert Crawford, Major John Barkly and Henry Massey. Waxhaw church was a general place of rendezvous for the patriots. Waxhaw in the olden time, was the centre around which good men, such as Andrew Pickens and Patrick Calhoun loved to gather. And in time of Revolution, the time that tried men's souls, the men of the congregation, among whom Major Robert Crawford, Major Jno. Barkley, and even the boys, as Henry Massey and Andrew Jackson were found in marray in defense of their homes and country." (Ibid. Wardlaw, pp. 22 - 24).

"THE OLD WAXHAW CHURCH--The church and congregation whose name stands at the head of this article is one of the oldest in the up-country of South Carolina. Some six or seven families settled in the country known as 'the Waxhaws,' in Lancaster district, in May, 1751. In the fall of the same year a few more joined them, and a considerable number in 1752, chiefly from Augusta County, Virginia, and the back parts of Pennsylvania. These first settlers were known as 'the Pennsylvania Irish,' having first settled in that State in their migrations from the north of Ireland. 'Those from Pennsylvania,' says Mr. Stinson, from whom we now quote, 'had resulted there sufficiently long to be judges of good land.' they settled along the river and creek. The 'Scotch-Irish,' who came by the way of Charleston, not being judges, settled out on thinner land, and towards the heads of the creeks and water-courses. All, however, were of the Presbyterian persuasion. (Ibid, Howe, Vol. 1, 285).

A Highway Historical Marker, reads as follows:

"Waxhaw Presbyterian Church. About 5 miles North is Waxhaw Presbyterian Church, organized 1755. First Church in Upper South Carolina. President Andrew Jackson, born nearby. Baptized there. His father lies in the Churchyard with other early settlers of the Waxhaws and many veterans of various wars, including the following: General William R. Davie, Major Robert Crawford, John Barkley, Col. J. H Witherspoon, and Captain Isaac Donnom."

A Stone Marker in the front yard of the Waxhaw Church reads as follows:

"Tombstones In The Church Yard date from 1758. Among prominent men buried here are President Andrew Jackson's Father, General William R. Davie, Revolutionary Patriot, Founder of the University of North Carolina, 1789, Governor of North Carolina in 1798, and Minister to France, 1799."

In Celebration of the Two Hundredth Anniversary of Old Waxhaw Presbyterian Church, Cradle of Presbyterianism in the Up Country of South Carolina, Lancaster County, S. C., July 24, 1955, the following was printed in the program.

"The Waxhaws", deriving its name from an extinct tribe of Indians, was settled in the early 1750's by immigrants from Virginia and Pennsylvania. Receiving their grants in Anson County, North Carolina, they met in the Waxhaws a smaller group of settlers who were establishing their claim under the South Carolina government.

Never long in one place without religious services, these Scotch-Irish pioneers were, no doubt, engaging in some form of corporate worship soon after their arrival. The first sermon recorded was delivered in February, 1753, by John Brown, a young probationer from Pennsylvania. The Reverend Hugh McAden preached at the Waxhaw 'meeting house' on November 23, 1755, while on a mission through Piedmont Carolina.

Calling for their minister a Scotch schoolmaster, Robert Miller, the Waxhaw congregation received from him and his wife, Jean Pickens, their first title to Waxhaw Church property. This deed, dated March 9, 1758, for 4 1/2 acres included a house for divine services, a retiring house and a spring.

After an unsuccessful mission among the Cherokee Indians, the Rev. Wm. Richardson accepted the pastorate of Waxhaw Church in 1759. 'His widely extended ministry, lasting till his death in 1711, did much to make the Waxhaws the Presbyterian center of the South Carolina back country.' (Meriwether) His remains were reinterred in the handsome Davie Memorial in 1927 along with those of his illustrious nephew and namesake, William Richardson Davie, and other members of the Davie family.

The first meeting house, on the east side of the graveyard, was used as a hospital during the Revolutionary War. It was burned by the British after a skirmish at the church April 9, 1781. The next building burned by accident after the Great Revival of 1802. The third church, built on a 4 1/2 acre tract purchased from Robert and Jame Thompson in 1808, was used until the present edifice was erected in 1896.

Many notable ministers have served this congregation during its long history, one of the most distinguished being the Rev. J. H. Thornwell, D.D. Concerning this church he wrote, 'It was here in her (church's) schoolhouse the classics were first taught in South Carolina. It was here in one of her camp meetings that the singing of hymns (instead of Psalms) was introduced in public worship. . . It was here in this historic church on April 12, 1785, that the Presbytery of South Carolina held its first meeting.

Old Waxhaw Presbyterian Church, pioneer church of this denomination in upper South Carolina, stands today as a citadel to the 'Faith of Our Fathers,' (Prepared by Miss Nancy Crockett, Note: "There have been Eleven Elders in the Waxhaw Presbyterian Church by the name of Dunlap.

The Ruling Elders in 1813 were as follows:

"Alexander Carnes, Wm. Dunlap, Geo. Dunlap, Charles Miller, Robert Walkup."

THE WAXHAW ACADEMY

"Second only to their religion was the Scotch-Irish Presbyterian's belief in education. Robert Mills in his 'Statistics of S. C.', published in 1826, said 'At one period this part of the state could boast of having the best institution for learning in the upper country; nay the only one above Charleston. It was conducted with ability and was highly respectable. In this institution many gentlemen, who afterwards distinguished themselves, were educated.'

It was the fame of the Waxhaw Academy that brought the founder of the Witherspoon family in Lancaster County into the Waxhaws. James Hervey Witherspoon, born Nov. 20, 1784, near Kingstree in Williamsburg County was sent to this Academy to prepare for the South Carolina College. Romance intervened and in 1803 he married Jean Donnom, the only daughter of Captain Isaac Donnom and Sarah Crawford, and settled near the Catawba River. He is Lancaster County's only Lieutenant-Governor, serving from 1826-1828 while John Taylor was Governor. It was to this J. H. Witherspoon that Andrew Jackson wrote August 11, 1824, 'I was born in South Carolina, as I have been told, at the plantation whereon James Crawford lived, about 1 mile from the Carolina road crossing of the Waxhaw Creek. . . .'

CAMP MEETING

Old records estimate that the number of people who gathered for the Great Revival which reached the Waxhaws in 1803 at between three and four thousand while some put the peak number much higher. They came 'in 120 wagons, 20 carts, 8 carriages' and many by horseback and shanks mare. The camp was laid out in an oblong on the hillside near the spring and services held in the open. The meeting was interdenominational with 18 ministers taking part. However, the gathering was strongly censored by the more conservative people because of the actions of some who attended and because of the introduction by the church pastor, John Brown, of Rouse's Version of the Psalms. Those who held to the Old Version of the Psalms of David considered this a sacrilege. The next year John Brown asked to be relieved of his pastorate and part of the congregation drew off to form a new church now known as Shiloh ARP.

Subsequent divisions to form neighboring churches further diminished Waxhaw's membership.

BICENTENNIAL PLANS

Never large in membership since the Confederate War, this church has maintained an active small group which this year is planning to celebrate its becentennial. For many years now Waxhaw has shared its pastor with one or more small neighboring churches.

Today's casual visitor to the remodeled church building may find it difficult to comprehend the vast sweep of time and history through which this old settlement has passed. But somehow, a walk through the adjoining 'city of the dead', lifts the visitor above the pressing present and sets him down gently, with reverence and respect, among the sleeping pioneers of the past. He will come away with the feeling that all must eventually be well in this red-clay community which still worships at the shrine hallowed by their God-fearing and courageous forefathers."

"One of the original Elders and Trustees, to whom 'the church and four and one-half acres and a spring' were deeded . . ."

"Married Mary Craighead. Issue, Sam F., Minister at Columbia, and William."

(Wardlaw, Ibid, pg. 134.)

There are several disputed points here.

Dr. Howe says that Mary Craighead married the son of the Old Elder (Ibid, Howe, pg. 331), "but buried by the side of the Old Elder is a Mary Dunlap, who died December 5, 1796, aged 66 years. . . . The person compiling a new Craighead Genealogy is questioning Mary Dunlap's (1730 - 1796) being Mary Craighead. From Alexander Craighead's will, he lists his eldest daughter Margaret, Agnes (Nancy), Jane (who was born in 1742), Rachel, Mary, who married Samuel Dunlap." (Miss Nancy Crockett, Lancaster, S. C.)

¹Rev. Wm. Richardson married Nancy Craighead, one of the six daughters of Rev. Alex. Craighead.

"The other sisters of Mrs. Richardson were married, Rachel (Craighead) to Rev. David Caldwell, of Guildford, N. C.; Margaret (Craighead) to Mr. Carruth; Mary (Craighead) to Samuel Dunlap, son of the old elder of that name; Elizabeth (Craighead) to Alexander Crawford, the two last mentioned living in Waxhaw congregation." (History of the Presbyterian Church in South Carolina, Rev. George Howe, D. D., Professor in the Theological Seminary, Columbia, S. C., Vol. 1, pg. 331.)

Mr. Wardlaw lists as a son of Samuel, Sam. F., Minister at Columbia, and William. The Minister at Columbia was Rev. David Ellison Dunlap, organizing pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Columbia, S. C. Dr. Howe says: "Rev. David E. Dunlap. Mr. Dunlap was the son of Samuel Dunlap, a worthy and much respected Elder of the Waxhaw Church." (Howe, Ibid, Vol. 1, pg. 596.) The

Will of Rev. David Ellison Dunlap mentions four brothers and one sister, namely, Robert, Samuel, William, Elizabeth Stephenson and Thomas (Deceased). We cannot speak with assurance concerning the Samuel Dunlap's. Miss Nancy Crockett, Lancaster, S. C., says: "There are 40 odd Dunlaps in Waxhaw Cemetery, with marked graves, five Samuels, six Marys, three Williams, and three Roberts." The Census of 1791 lists in the Camden District, Lancaster County, S. C., Samuel Dunlap, Sr., and three Samuel Dunlaps.

"On September 26, 1751, one Robert Ramsay entered public land in the then Anson County (1749), North Carolina, which at that time included (up until 1772) much of the Old Waxhaw Area in the now Lancaster, York, and Chester counties, South Carolina. On the same date, September 26, 1751, one, Samuel Dunlap (the old elder) (1715-1791) entered 300 acres in the then Anson County, part later (1862). Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, and after 1772, the "New Acquisition" * in South Carolina (Upper parts of Lancaster and York Districts, and, some of Chester County, I believe, and eastward.) Ramsay (or Ramsey) entered at least three tracts on that date, September 26, 1751, 300 acres, 400 acres, and 300 acres. Later on, Ramsay sold some of his land to Robert Dunlap, Sr. (1708 - 1773). Ramsay's wife may have been a Dunlap. The families were later intermarried, if not before." - Land Records are from Vol. IV, of the Colonial Record of North Carolina. (The above information was furnished by Rev. Wallace Hogue, Retired Episcopal Rector, Kellys Ford Farm, Remington, Virginia. The research was done by H. W. Goforth, Lenoir, N. C.)

2. The next Land Grant in this book is to Robert Ramsey -- a 300 acres of land in the Co. of Anson, on the No. side of the Catawba River.

"Samuel has the most official records (of the three brothers, Samuel, Robert and David), beginning with a land record (Anson County, N. C., 300 acres, listed on September 26, 1751. This record is recorded in, "The Colonial Records of North Carolina," Vol. IV., page 1246. These books are separately indexed in the State Archives Building, Columbiana, Columbia, S. Born: 1747, Died, 1804.

REV. DAVID ELLISON DUNLAP. "Mr. Dunlap was the son of Samuel Dunlap, a worthy and much respected elder of the Waxhaw church; was a graduate of Mount Zion College, Winnsboro; was received as a candidate, under the care of South Carolina Presbytery, in April 1791, and was licensed to preach in April 1793."

Ibid, Howe, Vol. 1, p. 596

"Mr. Dunlap was licensed to preach April 16th, 1793, was appointed September 25, to preach at James Island, John's Island, Wadmalaw, Fishing Creek, Ebenezer, Bethel, N. Pacolet, Milford and Nazareth, each one Sabbath, and at Lebanon, two. From Lebanon, he received a call. In April, 1794, he was ordered to preach at John's Island and Wadmalaw, Dochester, Bethel, Lebanon, Fishing Creek, and Nazareth, each one Sabbath, at Columbia four, and the rest at discretion. He was called to Columbia, Sept. 23, 1794, and was ordained and installed June 4, 1795."

Ibid, Howe. Vol. 2, p. 77

"In 1786 measures were taken to locate a capital of the State as near as possible to its geographical centre. . .The beauty of the site, and its superior salubrity, induced the selection of the spot, on which Columbia is situated in preference to the town of Granby, three miles lower, on the Congaree, which, before and during the war of the Revolution, was a place of considerable business. The State records were removed from Charleston to Columbia in 1789, and the legislature met in the State-house, then newly erected, in 1790. In 1791, the State College was established by legislative enactment, and the central position of the infant capital, the advantages it held as a place of education, the fact that it was the head of the navigation on the river, and the commerce which was attracted toward it, gave it a sure, though by no means a very rapid growth. A letter addressed to David E. Dunlap, recently licensed by the Presbytery of South Carolina, from a number of inhabitants of the place, intended as a call to him to accept the charge of a church lately established there, was laid before the Presbytery in April, 1794, but was sent back that it might be more fully conformed to the order prescribed in the form of government adopted by our church. (This letter was signed by Thomas Taylor and Benjamin Waring, and is dated March 20, 1794). The place had been visited by Robert Wilson of Long Cane, on his Missionary tour. He preached in Columbia to a large concourse of people, on the 15th of December, 1793, and refers to the effort they were making to secure the services of Mr. Dunlap. They rightly said in their letter to Mr. Dunlap, that it was "greatly contrary to the interests of a young town to be growing up without the Sabbath day's observance." And that this was a prevailing evil at that time in this newly-settled place, is what the testimony of others leads us to believe. Mr. Dunlap was not ordained and installed till June 4, 1795. The public service of ordination was held in the State-house. Robert McColloch acting as moderator, and John Brown (afterwards D. D.), preaching the ordination sermon from 2 Corinthians 5: 20 ("Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God."); after which Mr. Dunlap was solemnly ordained to the whole of the gospel ministry by fasting, prayer, and the imposition of the hands of the Presbytery, and a charge was given to the young pastor and his flock by the moderator. In the call presented to Mr. Dunlap, one hundred and eleven pounds were named as having been subscribed to his salary, and more was expected. Mr. Dunlap divided his time for a season between Columbia and Granby, preaching in Columbia two-thirds and at Granby one-third of his time. He supported himself in a good measure from his own private resources, and the salary he received as clerk of the Senate—(Ms., History of the Columbia Church, by Rev. Dr. Palmer. Minutes of the Presbytery, p. 81). He was employed thus for three years preceding August, 1799, In October, 1799, a call was presented to Presbytery by the people of the Granby for the pastoral services of Rev. George Reid, after which Mr. Dunlap devoted his whole labors to the congregation in Columbia. There being no church edifice, he preached in the legislative hall; and there are persons yet living who speak of the gentlemanly manners and his gifts.”

Ibid, Howe, Vol. 1, p. 594-595.

Ibid, Howe, Vol. 2, pg. 78

“Mr. Dunlap died in September, 1804, and lies buried in the southeastern angle of the Presbyterian (First) church yard; the record upon his tombstone stating the remarkable fact of the wife’s death on the same day with himself. They were interred in the same grave. “In death they were not divided.”

Marriages and Death Notices, City Gazette, Charleston, S. C S. C. Historical Magazine, Vol. 28, pg. 52. Died at Columbia, on the morning of the 10th instant. of a violent bilious fever, Mrs. Susannah Dunlap, the wife of Rev. David E. Dunlap aged 30 years. Also, on the evening of the same day the Rev. David E. Dunlap of the same complaint aged 36 years. They were interred on one grave on the day following attended by a general and solemn assemblage of the citizens of Columbia and Granby. His friends were expressly enjoined by him to be silent as eulogists; but it cannot be deemed a deviation from this injunction, when it is observed, that their illness and death should take peace (sic) in perfect conformity to their wishes, and as expressed under the immediate direction of the Providence of God agreeably thereto. Relatives and friends are becomingly affected by their death. (Monday, Sept. 17, 1804)

History of Richland County, So. Car., pg. 188.

“One of the first teachers in the Columbia Male Academy was the Rev. David E. Dunlap, the first pastor of the Presbyterian Church. Edward Hooker’s Diary informs us that he began to teach because of the failure of his salary as pastor. The Rev.

D. E. Dunlap was the son of Samuel Dunlap of the Waxhaw Settlement, was a graduate of the Mt. Zion College at Winnsboro, was licensed to preach April 1793. In the following year he came to Columbia at the call of a congregation of Presbyterians, and became the first pastor of the church here. For a time he also preached at Granby. As there was no house of worship he made use of the State House, Alternating with another denomination. Mr. Dunlap was one of the first trustees of the S. C. College. He and his wife died the same day, September 10th, 1804 and are buried in the northeast corner of the churchyard."

Died: October 2, 1841 at Dunlap Homestead on Catawba River in "The Waxhaws".

Married: To Nancy Agnes Carnes; born 1770; died November 22, 1845; buried - Old Waxhaw Cemetery

The following evidence is given that Nancy Agnes Carnes, daughter of Alexander Carnes (1739 - 1814) and his wife Rebecca Carnes (1744 - 1808) is the wife of Wm.

1. She is buried beside William Dunlap (1766 - 1841)
2. Rebecca M. Foster, Consort of Henry Foster (about 1810 - 1833), and daughter of William and Nancy Dunlap.
3. William Dunlap and Nancy Agnes Dunlap are buried in the row with Alexander Carnes (1739 - 1814) and his wife Rebecca Carnes (1744 - 1808) (Nancy Agnes Dunlap's parents).
4. Alexander Carnes in his will mentions daughter Agnes Dunlap, wife of William Dunlap.

Will of Alexander Carnes, Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, Will Book A, page 221.

"Item—I give and bequeath unto my daughter Agnes Dunlap, wife of William Dunlap one volume of Floods works and one volume of Newtons works."

Item—I give unto my daughter Agnes Dunlap, Rebecca Parks, and Martha Davis each the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars.

Item—I do hereby constitute and appoint my son-in-law, William Dunlap, Charles Carnes and David B. Carnes, Executors, etc.”

This item is of passing interest:

“Item—I give and bequeath unto my daughter Martha Davis, wife of Isreal Davis, all the books she hath in her possession—also ONE NEGRO GIRL named CATE which she hath already in her possession, also ONE NEGRO GIRL LUCY now in my possession, with her increase to his or her heirs forever.”

(Information above furnished by Miss Nancy Crockett)

d. OCCUPATION: Farmer. William Dunlap, Sr. owned Several tracts or parcels of land situated in Lancaster District, S. C., (Cedar Grove Ranch - Gibson-Homestead-tract - the house is gone). The homestead was a tract containing 200 acres on the Catawba River. For description of two tracts of his land see Deed of Alexander Carnes. (This Deed is recorded in Deed Book P., page 447, Lancaster Co., S. C., a copy of which is included in this Genealogy under Alexander Carnes Dunlap, Generation “C”. Also, this Deed mentions the children of William.)

In his son’s obituary in Lancaster Ledger, prepared by J. H. W., for Rev. Robert W. Dunlap, there is the statement, “He (William Dunlap, Sr.) was a most excellent and worthy man.”

e. CHURCH: Member of old Waxhaw Church (Presbyterian)

Elder: 1800 - 1810; 1830 - 1840. He was elected an Elder between the first two dates, and he continued as an Elder until sometime between the last two, 1841 to be exact;

Trustee: 1807, along with Robert Dunlap, Dr. Samuel C. Dunlap

DIED—

In Lancaster District on the 2d inst. Mr. William Dunlap, in the 75th year of his age. A more extended obituary will be given in our next.

THE CAMDEN JOURNAL, Camden, South Carolina, Wednesday, October 13, 1841:

Departed this life, after a lingering illness, on the night of the 2d inst. Mr. William Dunlap, of Lancaster District, in the 75th year of his age. The domestic character of the deceased and his unobtrusive habits, may have prevented his name, being spread abroad, but with those to whom he was known and who enjoyed his acquaintance, his memory will be cherished and endeared, by all the most tender and affectionate recollections of life; he was exemplary, in the faithful and prompt discharge of his duties. As a husband, he was most affectionate and devoted; as a father, kind and indulgent, as a neighbor, obliging, benevolent and hospitable, and as a citizen and christian, universally confided in, beloved and honored. For many years, he has been a zealous and constant member of the Presbyterian Church, firmly believing in its doctrines and conforming to its discipline. But, at the same time, exercising, towards, all other denominations, the highest degree of tolerance, and charity. Indeed, it may well be said of him, he was a Christian; not alone in profession, but in practice. One who obeyed the precepts of divine revelation with scrupulous exactness, but without ostentation. Never has the writer of this witnessed, a more imposing, though humble religious services, than around the family altar of the deceased: nor can he ever forget, the soothing influence of that service. The deep and fervent energy of that voice in prayer, though trembling and broken by age, the unaffected piety breathed in every word and the perfect sincerity and confidence of his aspirations were really the outpouring of the heart.

He has left a bereaved wife and numerous relations to mourn his loss.

Requiescat in pace. W.

Resolutions of the Holly Springs, Mississippi, Presbyterian Church concerning Dr. Thomas L. Dunlap:

"Dr. Thomas L. Dunlap was born in Lancaster District, So. Car., in November 1808, and died at his residence, 2 1/2 miles east of Holly Springs, Miss., on the 4th of April, 1876, in the 68th year of his age. He was a child of the Covenant, and was brought up by his parents, under the ordinance of the Christian Religion, as they were dispensed in the Old Waxhaw Presbyterian Church, in Lancaster District, S. C. At 17 years of age, he made a public profession of faith in Christ. He studied medicine in Lexington, Ky., and for some years was engaged actively in his profession in Lancaster Village, S. C. He was made an Elder there, probably in the year of 1835. He was present at the meeting of Harmony Presbytery, in Nov. 1834, when Rev. Dr. James Henley Thornwell^{} was licensed to preach the gospel, and largely, through, Dr. Dunlap's influence Dr. Thornwell, then quite a young man, was induced to take charge of the Lancasterville, Waxhaw, and Six Mile Churches,^{} and Dr. Thornwell became an intimate friend of Dr. Dunlap's family. A life-long friendship existed between them. Dr. Dunlap came to his late residence in 1846 and was afterwards called by his fellow citizens to represent them in the State Legislature. He became an Elder of this church in 1847. In all of his relations, as a husband, father, citizen, and ruling Elder in the church, he led an upright, consistent Christian life. He was a man of intelligence, integrity, piety and will be greatly missed as a citizen and as an Elder, and leaves in his home a vacuum which earth cannot fill. His religious experience in his declining years was bright and death came to him

OBITUARY

Departed this life, in Hagers Town, Maryland, on Sunday the 17th February, 1856, Rev. ROBERT W. DUNLAP, in the 46th year of his age.

Mr. Dunlap was born in Lancaster District, S. C. in 1811, and was the youngest son of that most excellent and worthy man, the late Wm. Dunlap, Sen. At an early age, and in his youth, he became a member of the Presbyterian Church, as Waxhaw, and well adorned his profession by a walk and life of christian virtues and graces. In fact, he was born a "child of grace," and his inclinations and taste led him to the ministry. As soon as his academical studies prepared him, he entered the University of N. C., at Chapel Hill, where he graduated in 1835. He next entered the Theological Seminary at Princeton, and there completed his preparations for the ministry. After becoming licensed, he become Pastor, in 1837 or 1838, of the Presbyterian Church in St. Augustine, Fla., which he gave up on account of his health. Afterwards, he was Pastor of the church in Columbia, Pa., also, in Baltimore, and in the city of New York, and, for the last five years, was the Pastor of the church in Hagers Town, where he closed his earthly labors.

A friend in communicating his death to his brother (Mr. A. C. Dunlap) also says, "No people ever were blessed with a more faithful and useful minister of the gospel. His words, his life, his sufferings and his death, all beautifully coincided, and have left an abiding and saving impression upon his people, while the community at large read in these, also lessons which cannot but adorn the christian religion. He died amidst the tears of his friends and people and the gloom of our whole community." J. H. W.

Wounded June 30, 1862, at Malvern Hill, Virginia, in the Civil War, in McClellan's Peninsula Campaign, He died July 9, 1862. "General Lee believed he had defeated most of the federal army at Gaine's Mill, and though his opponents so demoralized that they could not make a successful resistance. He ordered the assault, and his forces were received with well-directed artillery and infantry fire & defeated with heavy loss. It is conceded that the battle of Malvern Hill was in error on the part of the confederate commander, due to his underestimation of the strength and condition of the federals." (1) Born: Sept. 25, 1841, Chester County

(2) Died: 4:00 a.m., Dec. 5, 1906, In her home, Rock Hill, S. C.,

Occupation: He was educated at Mt. Zion Institute, Winnsboro, S. C., spent two years at Princeton University, leaving to enter the Confederate Army. He had a notable war record.

He was a member of the Lancaster Grays. In July 1861, the Lancaster Grave became a part of the Ninth S. C. Regiment. Later this company was placed in the Jenkins' Brigade and became a part of the Fifth S. C. Regiment. At the Battle of the Wilderness, Capt. Stewart was captured by the enemy, and Col. Dunlap (then a first lieutenant) took charge of the company as Captain, and this position he retained until near the close of the war, when he resigned and went into the Artillery branch of the service. During his service in the Confederate Army he participated in the Battles of Williamsburg, Seven Pines, Seven Days, Malvern Hills, Second Battle of Manassas, Fredericksburg, Pennsylvania, Antietam and Racoon Valley. Throughout the war he proved himself a soldier of great gallantry and courage.

After the cessation of hostilities, Col. Dunlap returned to Lancaster to take up the task of mending his broken fortunes, and he applied himself to that task with indomitable courage. In 1876, when the State was redeemed from radical rule, Col. Dunlap was appointed Treasurer of Lancaster county by Gov. Wade Hampton, and this position of trust he held through election for 14 years. His predecessor in that office had been a Negro appointed by the radical carpetbag governor, Chamberlain. In 1890 he moved to Rock Hill, S. C., where he has since made his home. During his residence here he was very active in Rock Hill affairs. While Winthrop College was under construction he was Secretary of the Board of Trustees. He later was Secretary of the Arcade Cotton Mill; then President of the Smith-Fewell Co., and was for sometime in business for himself as a wholesale grocer, then retiring from business.

"Col. W. B. Dunlap was a notable figure in the life of Rock Hill. No man here has ever stood higher in the love and esteem of his fellow-citizens. He was a friend of all who had the honor of his acquaintance, all recognizing him as a man of sterling character and honesty of purpose-the desire to always do the right thing being a predominating trait of the man." The Record Newspaper, (Rock Hill, S. C.) April 22, 1918

(Dictated Friday, May 11, 1917.)

The first real battle that I was engaged in was the Battle of Seven Pines, called White Oaks by the Federals. I do not recall the exact hour we became engaged, but I remember that the enemy was advancing towards Richmond, and we were ordered out to meet them. After marching several miles we were formed into line of battle. Skirmishers were thrown out in front and advanced driving back the pickets of the enemy. Shortly afterwards we were ordered forward and were in line of battle, and I recall that we came to trees and bushes that had been cut down and formed into what was called an abatis. These, of course, hindered our advance somewhat, but we pushed them aside and jumped over and made our way onward. The cannon had been firing out so all the way, but now they commenced with their musketry. In a short time the cannon ceased firing because our lines of battle were approaching so near the Yankees were fearful of hurting their own men as well as us.

Now, onward we go, and with the rebel yell we rush towards the enemy, and are met with a terrific shower of musket balls. The sound at the opening was more like hail falling upon a tin roof than anything else I know of. You could hear the bullets whistling through the air, and when they would strike you could distinctly hear a sound like,

"Zip! " The firing on each side was now terrible. We lost our Colonel, the lieutenant-colonel and a lieutenant in our company besides other men. It was fearful to hear the men groan when they were hit.

We finally drove the enemy back and took possession of the battle field. I remember we halted where some of the Yankees had had their mess. The pots were on the fire boiling their dinner.

I recall seeing one horse tearing down the road without a rider, his rider having been shot. His horse was caught by some of our men, and an aid to the General took possession of him.

This was the end of the Battle of Seven Pines.

This deed of donation of lands made this the first day of March A. D. 1883, from Louisiana Jones of Shelby County in the State of Tennessee to Elizabeth C. Jones the wife of her son Henry Jones of Marshall County in the State of Mississippi, witnesseth:

That whereas the said Louisiana Jones is in advanced years and is desirous according to her own free will to provide as to her seems best: Therefore she now here donates, aliens and conveys to the said Elizabeth C. Jones wife of said Henry Jones the following described lands lying in said Marshall County, Mississippi, towit:
Section Nineteen (19) township four and range two West, and the Northwest quarter of Section twenty nine (29) same township and range.

To have and to hold the same with the appurtenances to her the said Elizabeth C.
Jones as if she were sole and and unmarried and to her heirs and assigns forever. I covenant and agree for myself and heirs to warrant and defend the the title to the said tracts of land to the said Elizabeth C. Jones her heirs and assigns against the lawful claims of all persons whomsoever. In witness whereof I hereunto write my name and affix my seal the day & year first above written.

Louisiana Jones (SEAL)

State of Tennessee County of Shelby -SS

Personally appeared before me J. M. Trezevant a Notary Public in & for said State & County the within named Louisiana Jones who acknowledged that she signed and delivered the foregoing instrument on the day and year therein mentioned.

J. M. Trezevant, Notary Public

Filed for record January 16, 1884, at 11/4 o'clock A. M. and recorded January 21st, 1884.

Jas. B. Walthall, Clerk

(The land mentioned in this deed is located three miles southeast of Holly Springs, Mississippi, on the I. C. Railroad. It was purchased by William Lumpkin, the father of Louisiana Lumpkin Jones, who apparently gave it to her. The old home was known as "Athenia", being named after Athens, Georgia, the previous home of William Lumpkin and his family. Three generations of the Jones family lived here, the last being the children of Henry Alexander Jones and Elizabeth Catherine Dunlap Jones.)

Educated at Erskine College, University of Virginia; Trustee of Erskine College, Winthrop College, Davidson College; Director of Equitable Life Assurance Society; Deacon and Elder in the Oakland Avenue Presbyterian Church, Rock Hill, S. 6. John Roddey; birth, December 3, 1901

"The State" Newspaper, Columbia, S. C., August 25, 1950, carried the following article about Mary Perry Dunlap Roddey, written on her 84th birthday:

"Mrs. W. J. Roddey of Rock Hill celebrated her 84th birthday today with many members of her family about her - - children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren at the family's summer home in Montreat, N. C.

"Mrs. W. J. Roddey, formerly Miss Perry Dunlap, is the daughter of Elizabeth Baskin and William Benjamin Dunlap. She was born in Lancaster on August 25, 1866, where she lived until her marriage. As a young girl in Lancaster, she was considered the belle of that section.

"She was loved and admired by young and old, not only for her beauty, but for her charming personality and lovely disposition, qualities by which she is still characterized.

"She lives such a busy and useful life. It is not often that one can persuade her to reminisce, but one of her loveliest stories is about the time she attended the St. Cecilia ball in Charleston - - the costumes, the dances, and the people, most of whom are long since gone.

"On August 6, 1890, Perry Dunlap married William Joseph Roddey and went to make her home in Rock Hill, where she has lived continuously for the last 60 years.

"Here again, she has endeared herself to the whole community, where she is affectionately known as 'Mamma Joe'.

"Mrs. Roddy has always exemplified in her own life what she believes - - that a woman's first duty is her home. Her house was not only a home to her six children but was a gathering place for the children of the community. Many dignified citizens can still recall with pleasure the good times at 'the Roddeys' - - inside on rainy days outside on the sunny ones - - playing anything from kick-the-can and stealing sticks to baseball and tennis as they grew older."

The various billy goats, hunting dogs, and the pony, "Dot," were also public property. Later, when "Dot" and the others of her tribe passed on, the family seven-passenger automobile always had room for one more. Next to her home and family in her affections comes her church. She reared her children to attend Sunday School and church, and chose as the site for their summer home the conference ground of the Southern Presbyterian Church at Montreat, N. C. The family were charter members of the Oakland Avenue Presbyterian church of Rock Hill. Mr. W. J. Roddey, Jr., is at the present time is clerk of the session. Mrs. Roddey, at 84, is a regular attendant at the prayer meeting and Sunday morning services, the circles and the auxiliary meetings.

Of a decidedly sociable nature, Mrs. Roddey has never cared a great deal for club work, although as a younger woman she was a member of the "Over The Tea Cups Club" and United Daughters of the Confederacy. The only club affiliation she still retains is that of the Garden club, which she enjoys thoroughly. She is a regular exhibitor at the monthly meetings and the flower shows, constantly winning blue ribbons both in horticulture and flower arrangements.

Her flower garden has always been dear to her heart. She is a real "dirt gardener" and possesses the "green thumb." Her garden is beautiful. She always has something lovely in bloom and it is a pleasure not only to herself, for, like all of her other possessions, she shares it with the town.

She is never too busy to stop and cut flowers to send to the sick, to a neighbor for a party, or the the church for services or for weddings.

She always has a root, a cutting or some special seeds to help new gardeners and her advice is always wonderful.

As a citizen, she is not found wanting. Besides contributing to society her fine sons and daughters who have taken important places in their respective communities, she always goes to the polls to cast her own vote. She reads the daily papers, listens to her radio and is interestingly conversant on world affairs.

In 1915 she and Mr. Roddey entertained President Taft in their home overnight when he came to Rock Hill to speak at Winthrop.

If Mrs. Roddey has a hobby, I would think it might be a love for playing games. Almost any night except Sunday, if you drop in at her home you will be apt to find some game going. She likes bridge and plays an exceptionally good hand. She also enjoys Canasta, Chinese checkers, Forty-Two and Set-Back. The Dunlaps were a game-loving family and she runs true to form.

To many of "Mamma Joe's" admirers, her greatest and most recent accomplishments is her mastery of the pressure cooker. She had never done very much cooking in her life until she was almost 80 years old. Somebody gave her a pressure cooker and it rang a bell. Now she can turn out the tastiest snack or the daintiest dish in the twinkling of an eye, and always with delighted, sunny smile which makes one feel there must be something wonderful about growing old after all.

She seems to say "Come and grow old with me. The best years are yet to be."
 If one would find a real description of this wonderful, versatile woman, as she appears to those among whom she lives and moves in her daily life, read Proverbs, chapter 31, verses 10-31: "Who can find a virtuous woman, for her price is far above rubies. . . Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellent them all. . . ."

He graduated from Erskine College, Due West, S. C., in 1891. He moved to Rock Hill in 1892 and first engaged in the insurance business, later taking a place in the then First National Bank. Later, on the organization of the National Union Bank, he was made Assistant Cashier, and from that was promoted to Cashier, and then elected in 1916 to the Presidency of the Bank, which place he held at the time of his death, and which institution he saw grow to be not only among the leaders in this part of the State, but one of the strongest in the State. His high regard for honest, upright, straightforward business dealings won him not only a most prominent place with the business interest of this city and the general public at large, but throughout the entire State, and part of the adjoining states. He made the National Union Bank a tremendous factor in this section.

Ira Dunlap was popular with every one. In fact, we doubt if he had an enemy in the world. He was always identified with everything that was for the best interest of the city or community. He was always decided in his opinions, and one could always know just where he stood. If a thing looked the least off-color or questionable, he would immediately say, "You can count me out on this. I don't like its looks." He was outspoken in denouncing any schemes or questionable methods by any one under a pretense of public interest. He believed in every one having a square deal no matter how large or how small. Many are the men and the business that have been carried over from what seemed inevitable ruin by his timely business advice and loans of money when all other sources had failed.

In addition to being President of the National Union Bank, he was President of the Rock Hill Grocery Co., Vice-President of the Mechanics Building and Loan Association and identified with other business interests of the city.

He had served as President of the State Bankers' Association and his knowledge in the line of business was recorded as being of the very highest class. He was Vice-President of the Rotary Club of the city and he exemplified in his daily life the aims and ideals of the Rotarian, "Service Above Self." Truly dependable, his ample word was as good as the Bible oath. . . a "Real Man."

Not only was Mr. Dunlap identified with the best interest of this community from a worldly or material standpoint, but he was also a Deacon and Elder in the Oakland Avenue Presbyterian Church, and he was always found as ready to render services in his church as in his business life."

E. Bernard Carnes, son of W. B., son of A. C., son of Wm., son of Samuel.

Born: Feb. 21, 1873, Lancaster, S. C.

Married: To Bertha Miller of E. St. Louis, Mo. 1903.

E. 4. Herbert McCollough, son of W. B., son of A. C., son of Wm., son of Samuel Born: September 7, 1875, Lancaster, S. C.

Died: January 15, 1934, Where ? Rock Hill, S. C.

On January 9, 1934, he argued a case before the Supreme Court in Columbia, S. C. On the way home he met with a slight accident and, as a result of a lick on his neck, developed Strepti Cocci throat infection and died January 15, 1934.

Married: June 19, 1902, Mary Joe Witherspoon of Yorkville, S. C., in the Presbyterian Church of Yorkville, S. C. She graduated from Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C. in the class of 1897 and taught in the graded schools at Yorkville, S. C. 1898 - 1902. She is a direct descendant of John Knox, the Reformer; one of the loveliest Christian women in the Witherspoon family.

Occupation: From 1909 - 1934 Herbert Dunlap and his twin brother, Walter M. Dunlap, engaged in the practice of law under the firm name of Dunlap & Dunlap.

Other information:

Herbert Dunlap moved with his parents to Rock Hill in 1891. He studied in the local schools, Bank's High School, Clemson College. He was a Spanish-American War veteran, serving in Company G, First South Carolina Volunteers as a lieutenant, he and his twin brother, Walter, being lieutenants in the same company. He was one of the first Rotary Presidents in Rock Hill, and at the time of his death, President of the York County Fair Association, President of Mechanics Building and Loan Association, Rock Hill, S. C. and Mayor of Rock Hill, S. C.

When the twins, Herbert and Walter, were very small, Herbert was badly injured on a Rail Road Turn Table in Lancaster, S. C., and had to spend several months in bed. Walter stayed in bed with him during the entire time, each had his pet dog at the foot of the bed. They were identical, their best friends could not tell them apart, and they counted their friends as legion.

At its session in February, 1934, the Rock Hill City Council adopted the following tribute to the late Mayor H. M. Dunlap:

"One of God's noblemen is no more, though his memory can never be effaced from those who knew and loved him. Herbert M. Dunlap, Mayor of Rock Hill, distinguished lawyer, beloved by a host of men, women and children, in the midst of his great achievements, at the highest point of his valor, and in the maturity of his wisdom, died on the 15th day of January, 1934. He was born at Lancaster, S. C. on the 7th day of September, 1875, and came to Rock Hill in 1891, where he spent all his life with the exception of the time he valiantly served his country during the Spanish-American War.

After spending several years in business, he became a lawyer in 1909, and for twenty five years successfully practiced his loved profession, gathering around him a host of devoted followers and enthusiastic admirers. He was equal to every emergency, because he possessed distinguishing characteristics of fearlessness, confidence in himself and mankind, and, as a lawyer, he was unsurpassed in controversy, with a fulness in his voice an earnestness in his manner, and a directness in his argument, which won him many victories. He was genial and attractive, open and frank, and generous almost to a fault, possessing innumerable friends who ever enjoyed his happy and cheerful companionship.

The city of Rock Hill will never have a citizen more devoted to public service, more beloved by people of every class; and his fine, cheerful life, will ever inspire to nobler deeds and higher achievement all who knew him. Let these words in memory of his life be set forth in the minute book of the City Council, published in the press, and a copy sent to his beloved family where the domestic circle is broken by his departure, to whom no sufficient words of consolation can be said."

Church: Presbyterian. He was a Ruling Elder in the Oakland Avenue Presbyterian Church, Rock Hill, S. C., at the time of his death. He also served as a Deacon before being elected to the Session. Other offices he held included Superintendent of the Sunday School for several years, President of the Men's Bible Class in 1927.

Married: Mary Lillian Massey, Feb. 6, 1908.

Member of the First Presbyterian Church, Rock Hill, S. C.

Twin brother of Herbert.

"Moving with his family to Rock Hill in 1891, Senator Walter Dunlap studied at the graded school, at Banks' High School, and later at Clemson College. Giving up his post as Secretary and Treasurer to the Manchester Cotton Mills, which is now the Industrial Cotton Mills, Mr. Dunlap entered the Spanish-American War and served as a first lieutenant in Company G which later became known as the Catawba Rifles. After the War he was telegraph operator and agent at Denmark, S. C. and St. Matthews, S. C., for the Southern Railway. At St. Matthews he began his law study, later studying at the University of Virginia. In 1902 he entered the profession and became connected with the law firm of Spencer and Dunlap. In 1908 Mr. Dunlap and his twin Herbert formed the partnership of Dunlap and Dunlap. Their firm was one of the best known in this part of the country, and the partners were affectionately known as "the Dunlap twins." Mr. Dunlap was elected to the house of representatives in 1931. However he resigned when he was elected to the State Senate to fill the unexpired term of the late I. J. Campbell of Clover, and in 1932 he was re-elected without opposition for a four-year term. A leader in the ranks of the Democratic party, he represented the fifth congressional district at the National Democratic Convention in 1912 when Woodrow Wilson was nominated as candidate for the presidency. During the lifetime of his twin brother, the late Mayor Herbert Dunlap, Walter and Herbert frequented many public gatherings together and it was a standing joke friends had of confusing the two because of their very striking resemblance. The story went that in their college days one would go to see the other's sweetheart and the poor girl would never know the difference."

This Is His World

TITHE: IT'S GOD'S RENT

BY ROY COVINGTON

Observer Religion Editor

In fulfilling an assignment that calls upon them to inspire peoples of the world to spiritually soar into a stratospheric "unworldliness," churches are confronted with an ageless dilemma.

That is:

How to raise money—itself a standard of worldliness—to support a program that minimizes the importance of earthly possessions.

Charlotte's First Methodist Church is no exception.

There is danger in stretching a point to say that its early history was shaped by finances.

But conceivably, First Methodist could be standing where First Presbyterian now stands had it not been for a lack of available resources.

First Methodist, the forerunner of the downtown churches, grew out of a Methodist Society organized about 1814 by Dr. David Dunlap.

Dunlap, a grandson of Sugaw Creek Presbyterian's famed Alexander Craighead, came to Charlotte via Wadesboro and entered Methodism via Presbyterianism.

Ousted from the Presbyterian Church because he married the sister of his first wife who had died in childbirth, he became a Methodist sparkplug.

At his request, town commissioners set aside the present First Presbyterian property for use as community church property.

In a building erected there, Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians found an arrangement that was satisfactory, spiritually to them, at least.

But not to the bank which held notes on the unpaid portion of the mortgage. After waiting for approximately 10 years it closed on the mortgage.

Presbyterians satisfied the debt and the Methodists and Baptists went looking elsewhere.

The congregation of First Methodist settled first at N. College and Seventh. It moved later to where the Mayflower Hotel now stands.

DESCENDANTS OF ADAM AND REBECCA WORK DUNLAP

Being Professor Howard Leroy Dunlap Line of Athens, Ohio.*

- 1 Adam Dunlap (1752-1830). He was a son or grandson of the original Dunlop line from Scotland and North Ireland. He settled in Pennsylvania. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and upon his discharge received a land-grant in western Pennsylvania on the ground of Coke Ovens, MacConnellsville, Pennsylvania. He came from Dunbar township, Fayette County, to Athens township, Harrison County, Ohio, before 1809. He married Rebecca Work (1745-1846).
- 2 William Dunlap, Sr. (1780-1865). He married Margaret Rankin (1787-1838).
- 3 Adam Dunlap. To Missouri.
- 3 James Dunlap. He moved to Trenton, Missouri.
- 3 Reverend William Dunlap, Jr. He moved to Trenton, Missouri. He was a Presbyterian clergyman. Dr. Howard Leroy Dunlap gives us the following information:

“This William Dunlap took up land on which Trenton, Mo., is now located. He built a Church on his farm. He was first ordained a Baptist minister (Stillwater Baptist Church) about 1841. Both William, Sr., and William, Jr., were active in this Church the records (minutes) show, as they were working to build the present structure (1845). Both withdrew and William, Sr., with Samuel (?) Lafferty and a Dickerson founded Nottingham Presbyterian Church, but about that time Rev. William, Jr., moved to Trenton, Mo. It is told that an emigrant waggon camped at this Church (pre-Civil War). The next morning one of the emigrant children called at home to obtain some milk for their seven children and reported that one of his brothers or sisters was very ill. The Rev. William thought he had better go to the camp and investigate. Seeing the child was very sick, he suggested they take it to his home and get a doctor, which they did. It took a day or two to get the doctor there and when he came he pronounced it "Small-pox." The Dunlaps said 'move in with us and we will all have the small-pox together' and they did. There were 13 Dunlap children. After they recovered the emigrants (not sure of their names, something like Anderson) decided that would be a very good community in which to live bought an adjoining farm. The families grew up and some of the children married into their families."

He married _____. They had 13 children. Some of the children married and went west. There are, perhaps, many descendants who live around Trenton, Missouri, today.

* From a note by James Mendenhall Dunlap, II, of Raleigh, North Carolina: "My grandfather, Dr. James Mendenhall Dunlap, told me that he inherited from his father, Joseph Fletcher Dunlap, the land which is now owned by my mother, Mrs. Fleetwood Ward Dunlap. It is 800 or more acres in Anson County, North Carolina, just above the confluence of the Rocky and Pee Dee Rivers on the Rocky River, extending west about two miles. The land to the South owned by Tom Dunlap, son of George B. Dunlap, and south of that by Mrs. Kate Leake Dunlap, widow of Frank Dunlap, who was the son of Joseph Dunlap, my grandfather's brother. My great-grandfather, Joseph Fletcher Dunlap, owned a vast plantation, for he left each of his children a fair sized farm of several hundred acres each."

39. William Dunlap. He married Elisabeth Skiles, November, 1840. He came from Pennsylvania to Ohio in 1856 and had a large family: Rebecca E., Margaretta W., John S., William E., Joseph M., Mary C., Nancy Lee, James I., Thomas M. In 1881 they were all living except James and Thomas.
40. James Dunlap. He married Elisabeth Bear of Virginia. They had William Dunlap (1794-1867), who married, first, Peggy Biddle of Virginia; he married, second, Charlotta Ervin. William and Peggy Biddle Dunlap had: Joseph, Worthington, Jonathan, George (1823-1897), Polly, Priscilla, Hetty. George Dunlap married Marie Lawrence of Highland County, Ohio; they had: Rachel, William, Marion (1850-1922) who married Margaret Amanda Murphy, George, Jr., (died 1927), Samantha, Priscilla, Minor, Clayton, Sarah, Julia.

EPILOGUE

by Sir Walter Scott, a Dunlop descendant. From "The Lady of The Lake"

Harp of the North, farewell! The hills grow dark,
On purple peaks a deeper shade descending;
In twilight copse the glow-worm lights her spark,
The deer, half seen, are to the covert wending.
Resume thy wizard elm! the fountain lending,
And the wild breeze, thy wilder minstrelsy;
Thy numbers sweet with nature's vespers blending,
With distant echo from the fold and lea,
And herd-boy's evening pipe and hum of housing bee.

Yet, once again farewell, thou Minstrel harp!
Yet once again, forgive my feeble sway,
And little reck I of the censure sharp
May idly cavil at an idle lay.
Much have I owed thy strains on life's long way,
Through secret woes the world has never known,
When on the weary night dawn'd wearier day,
And bitterer was the grief devour'd alone.
That I o'erlive such woes, Enchantress! is thine own.

Hark! as my lingering footsteps slow retire,
Some Spirit of the Air has waked thy string!
'Tis now a seraph bold, with touch of fire,
'Tis now the brush of Fairy's frolic wing.
Receding now, the dying numbers ring
Fainter and fainter down the rugged dell,
And now the mountain breezes scarcely bring
A wandering witch-note of the distant spell -

SARAH MEANS DAVIS

APPENDIX A-1
THE SCOTTISH CLAN OF CUNNINGHAM *

Our Dunlap ancestry can claim double Cunningham connexions. Our ancestor Alexander Dunlop who held the Dunlop lands from 1509 to 1547 married Ellen Cunningham. Their son was James who married Isabel Hamilton. Their son was James who married Jean Sommerville. Their son was James who married Margaret Hamilton Campbell. Their son was James who married Elisabeth Cunningham, and he held the Dunlop lands from 1634 to 1670. Their son was Alexander who held the Dunlap lands from 1670 to 1683; he married Antonia Brown. Their son was Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744) our Scottish-American ancestor.

Cunningham as a surname is taken from the district of that name in Ayrshire, and the ancestor is stated to have been Wernibald, who received a grant of Kilmaurs in Cunningham from Hugo de Morville, Constable of Scotland, 1140. Other traditions say that Malcolm, the son of Freskin is the ancestor of the Cunninghams. Harvey de Cunningham is said to have fought at the Battle of Largs, 1263, and to have had a confirmation of Kilmaurs from Alexander II in 1264, and Hugh de Cunningham got the lands of Lamburgton from Robert the Bruce, 1321. His grandson, Sir William, married the heiress of Danielston of that Ilk, by which he acquired Finlaystoun, which became one of the principal seats of the family. His grandson, Sir Alexander, was created Lord Kilmaurs about 1462 and Earl of Glencairn, 1488. From his second son came the Cunninghams of Craigends, Robertland, and Auchinharvie. Robert, 2nd Laird of Kilmaurs, was rejected of his claim of his father's earldom, which was later revived for his brother and heir, Cuthbert, 3rd Lord Kilmaurs and 2nd Earl of Glencairn. William, 3rd Earl, was captured at the rout of Solway Moss, but later released on undertaking to promote a marriage between Edward VI and Mary, Queen of Scots. Alexander, 4th Earl, was a friend of Reverend John Knox (1502-1572), and James, 6th Earl, was famous for his feud with the Earl of Eglinton. William, 8th Earl, was Lord Justice-

General, and after the Restoration, Chancellor of Scotland. James, 13th Earl, sold Kilmaurs in 1786. His brother, John 14th Earl, is celebrated as the good friend of the poet Robert Burns, and since his passing the Earldom has been unclaimed.

The chieftainship is regarded as being in the House of Cunningham of Corsehill, deriving from the Honourable Andrew Cunningham of Corsehill, second son of the 3rd Earl of Glencairn. Sir Alexander, 7th Laird of Corsehill, was created a Baronet 1673, and his representative, Sir William Montgomery Cunninghame, 11th Baronet, is regarded as the present chief of the name of Cunningham, and rightful heir to the Earldom of Glencairn. The Baronets of Robertland, created in 1630, came from the Craighends branch, and Thomas Cunningham of Baidland, great-uncle of the 2st Lord Kilmaurs, was father of Adam Cunningham, 1st Laird of Caprington, 1425, from whom is descended the present Wallace Cunninghame, 15th of Caprington, which was erected into a feudal barony by Mary, Queen of Scots.

Members and descendants of this clan may wear the Cunningham tartan. The Coat of Arms may be found in Sir Thomas Innes of Learney's The Tartans of the Clans and Families of Scotland.

THE SCOTTISH CLAN OF HAMILTON *

The Dunlap Family can claim double connexion with this famous Scottish Clan of Hamilton. James Dunlop married Isabel Hamilton; Isabel was a daughter of Gavin Hamilton of Orbieston, Scotland. Their son was James who married Jean Sommerville. Their son was James who married, 1614, Margaret Hamilton Campbell; Margaret Hamilton Campbell Dunlop's mother was a Hamilton of Clan Hamilton. Their son was James who married Elisabeth Cunningham. Their son was Alexander who married Antonia Brown. Their son was our Scottish-American ancestor Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744).

The first of the Hamiltons on record in Scotland was Walter Fitz-Gilbert from whom is descended the Dukes of Hamilton. This gentleman witnessed the signing of a charter in 1294, which conferred the monastery of Paisley the privilege of herring fishing in the Clyde River. Walter was the governor of Bothwell Castle for the English government during part of the time of the Scottish War for Independence, but later joined forces with Robert the Bruce from whom he received the Barony of Cadzow. The Hamilton family remained loyal to the Crown and gained in importance. James, 6th of Cadzow, was created Lord Hamilton in 1445. His second wife was the eldest daughter of King James II, and widow of the Earl of Arran. James, his son, was created Earl of Arran in 1503, and Duke of Chatelherault in France in 1549. His second son was made Marquis of Hamilton in 1599, and his fourth son was the ancestor of the Earls of Abercorn. James, 3rd Marquis, was created Duke of Hamilton in 1643, and William, 2nd Duke, died from wounds received at the Battle of Worcester in 1651. The latter was succeeded by his niece, Anne, Duchess of Hamilton, who married Lord William Douglas, and through whom the Hamilton titles passed to the Douglas family.

James Hamilton, grandson of the 2nd Earl of Arran, was created Earl of Abercorn in 1606, and in 1790 a Marquessate was conferred on the 9th Earl, whose son the 2nd Marquess was elevated to a Dukedom in 1868. Other principal families of the name of Hamilton were those of: Raploch, Dalserf, Preston, East Lothian, Airdrie, Silvertonhill, Lanarkshire, and the Earls of Haddington.

The present Duke of Hamilton is Douglas, 14th Duke of Hamilton, 11th Duke of Brandon and Premier Peer of Scotland.

The crest is: In a ducal coronet an oak tree fructed and penetrated transversely in the main stem by a frame saw, proper, the frame, or.

The members of this clan or descendants are entitled to wear the tartan of Clan Hamilton and display its Coat of Arms (Armorial Bearings).

APPENDIX A-3

THE SCOTTISH FAMILY OF SOMMERVILLE *

We trace our Sommerville descent from Jean Sommerville who married James Dunlop (born 1574); they had five sons. James Dunlop held his ancestral lands from 1596 until 1617.

The name Sommerville have various spellings: Somerville, Somervile, Sommmervail, and Somervail. One authority says the name is taken from a town near Caen in Normandy, Sumar's or Somer's estate.

* George Fraser Black, The Surnames of Scotland (New York, 1946), p. 737.

William de Somerville, first of the name in Scotland, came in the reign of King David I, and received territories in Lanarkshire. There were five Williams in succession, the last one dying in 1282. They appear as witnesses to charters to the religious houses of Melrose, Kelso, Coldingham, Glasgow, Newbattle, and Paisley during the reigns of King David I and King Malcolm IV, and William the Lion. One of these Williams in the reign of William the Lion is reported to have killed a monstrous animal or serpent which greatly devastated the district of Linton, Roxburghshire, and obtained the lands of Linton as a reward. A rude sculpture on one of the walls of the Church represents a horseman in complete armour in the act of driving his lance down the animal's throat. An inscription is affirmed to have run:

“The wode laird of Lariston
Slew the worm of Wormes glen,
And wan all Lintoun parochine.”

Robert de Sumeruilla witnessed a charter by Duncan, Earl of Fife, to the nuns of Berwick about 1177 (CMN., 3). Ralph de Sumervilla, acolyte, was promoted to the Church at Linton, 1255. Johan de Lynton of the county of Rokesburk, who rendered homage, 1296 (Bain, II, p. 202), was most probably a Somerville as Lynton at that time was a possession of that family. William Somerwele of the Plane, a charter witness in Edinburgh, 1492 (HP., II, p. 193). John Semrell, tenant under the Abbey of Kelso, 1567 (Kelso, p. 530), and John Symmerwell was burgess-freeman of Glasgow, 1614 (Burgesses). They are nearly thirty different ways to spell Sommerville.

The Sommervilles were a powerful family at one time. They never were a clan in the sense of the Highland Clans, nor did they adopt a tartan of their own.

APPENDIX A-4

THE SCOTTISH HIGHLAND CLAN CAMPBELL OF ARGYLL*

Our Dunlap ancestry can claim descent from the famous Highland Clan, Campbell of Argyll. It was James Dunlop who married in 1614 Margaret Hamilton Campbell of the

* Frank Adam, The Clans, Septs, and Regiments of The Scottish Highlands (Edinburgh, 1952), pp. 205-208. See also Sir Thomas Innes of Learney, The Tartans of the Clans and Families of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1947), pp. 90-94. One branch of the Dunlap family in Scotland took the name Campbell and ascended to the Dukedom of Argyll. The present Duke of Argyll is descended from the Dunlaps of Dunlop. Miss Olivia Gertrude Dunlap of Jacksonville, Illinois, has the Coat of Arms of the Campbells of Argyll, and this branch is entitled to wear the tartan of this famous clan.

Campbells of Argyll; he held the lands of Dunlop from 1617 to 1634. Their son was James who married Elisabeth Cunningham. Their son was Alexander who married Antonia Brown. Their son was Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744) our Scottish-American ancestor.

The Celtic name of Clan Campbell was Clan Duibhne. Diarmid O'Duine is regarded as the ancestor of the Campbells, and in 1368 a Crown Charter acknowledges Duncan MacDuibhne as progenitor of the Campbell lords of Lochow. Duncan appears to have lived in the reign of King Alexander II and according to tradition, Eva Campbell, heiress of Lochow and heretrix of Clan Duine, married Gillespie Campbell and from them descended Sir Colin Mor Campbell of Lochow, called "Cailein Mor," from whom the successive chiefs derive the patronymic "MacCailein Mor." This great chief was slain in 1294 at Alt-dearg of Lorn. His son, Sir Neil, was one of the earliest and most devoted of the Bruce's supporters, married Lady Marjorie Bruce, and for his son, Sir Colin, the "duthus" of Lochow was in 1315 erected into a free barony.* His grandson, Sir Colin Campbell, received the lands settled in tail male, with obligation to bear the name and arms of Campbell, 1409. At his death in 1453 he was succeeded as 2nd Lord Campbell by his son Colin, who was created Earl of Argyll, 1457, Justiciar and Chamberlain of Cowal, 1472, founded the Highland burgh of Inverary, 1474, and was Lord High Chancellor of Scotland, 1483. Archibald, 2nd Earl, commanded the right wing of the Scottish army at Flodden Field and was slain. Colin, 3rd Earl, was created hereditary Lord Justice-General and Master of the Royal Household in Scotland in 1528, and to the insignia of these great offices, placed saltireways behind MacCailean's shield, relate the motto: "I scarce call these things our own." Archibald, 4th Earl, supported the Reformation; his eldest son, Archibald, 5th Earl, proved the ruin of Mary Queen of

* Septs of Campbell of Argyll are: Burns (Burness), MacConnochie, Denoon, MacPhedran, Macglasrich, MacIsaacs, MacIver, MacTavish, Thompson, Bannatyne, MacGibbon, MacKellar, MacOran, MacOwen, MacNichol, MacPhun.

Scots by (having been appointed her Lieutenant-General), at Langside, "fainting" on the field of battle. His brother Colin succeeded as 6th Earl, and was the father of Archibald, 7th Earl, who having been sent to seize "the Popish earls" (Huntly, Erroll, and Angus) was defeated at Glenlivet, 1594, and left the field in tears, and on returning to report his defeat, the pawky James VI observed of Huntly: "Fair fa' ye, Geordie Gordon, for sending him back lookin' sae like a subject." He subsequently rendered himself hateful to the other clans by ruthless persecution of the Macgregors, and the execution, under trust, of Macgregor of Glenstrae and seven of his clan in 1604. His brutality to Clan Macgregor led to a similar commission against Clan MacDonald, supported by English ships-of-war, in 1613, soon after which he slunk abroad and, overcome by remorse, joined the Church of Rome. It was he who laid the foundation of the hatred and mistrust of the Campbells among the other Highland clans. His son was Archibald, 8th Earl, who was created Marquis of Argyll in 1641 and was in command of the Covenanters' army during the civil war. He helped restore Charles II to Scotland and placed the crown on his head and helped to bring about the Restoration. He was beheaded in 1661 because he had been too influential in the councils and armies during the rebellion. His son was restored as 9th Earl, 1663, but was condemned in 1681. He supported Monmouth's rebellion in 1685 and was beheaded. He is the subject of the famous painting "Argyll's Last Sleep." His eldest son, Archibald, 19th Earl, was created Duke of Argyll to him and his heirs male, 1701 (he was one of the most courageous and truthful statesmen in Scotland). He died 1703 and his eldest son John, 2nd Duke of Argyll and Greenwich, 1719, was the celebrated Field-Marshal and statesman who brought about the accession of King George I. His brother and heir was Archibald, 3rd Duke, who had been a distinguished judge as Lord Islay; he was succeeded by his cousin, John Campbell of Mamore, 4th Duke, from whom descend the subsequent dukes, including George, 8th Duke, the historian, and the 9th Duke, who married Princess Louise, Queen Victoria's daughter. The present chief of the clan is the 11th Duke of Argyll. The seat of the Duke of Argyll is Inveraray Castle, Loch Fyne.

The Slogan is: "Cruachan" (a mountain near Loch Awe). The Badge is: Roid (Wild Myrtle) or Garbhag an t-sleibhe (Fir Club Moss). The Coat of Arms of Campbell of Argyll may be found in Sir Thomas Innes of Learney's book (Op. Cit.). Members and descendants of this famous and influential clan may wear the Campbell of Argyll tartan.*

APPENDIX A-5

THE SCOTTISH FAMILY OF BROWN* *

Alexander Dunlop, who held the Dunlop lands from 1670 until 1683, married Antonia Brown. Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744) was one of their many sons.

George Fraser Black, in his Surnames of Scotland (p. 107), says that Brown was and is a very common name in Scotland, and has more than one origin.

The name may be spelled many different ways: Braun, 1676; Bron, 1446; Brouin, 1546; Broun, 1320; Broune, 1502; Browne, 1509; Browyn, 1525; Brune, 1333; Brwune, 1505. The earliest record of the name appears about 970 A.D. as Brun. It is found in Old English charters.

The name Brown may have come from some of the Lamont Clan who changed their names to Brown and White in troublous times.

Again we find on record that Brown is a fully recognised sept name of Clan Macmillan and those who rightfully bear this name may wear the tartan and display the arms of that clan.*

* Other branches which sprung from the Campbells of Argyll are: Breadalbane, Cawdor (Calder), and Loudoun.

APPENDIX A-6

THE SCOTTISH HIGHLAND CLAN MACFARLANE *

Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744) married Anne MacFarlane (1715-1786), who was born in Scotland, and was a daughter of the Chief of Clan MacFarlane whose name was Caleb; his title was MacFarlane of MacFarlane. The MacFarlanes have no clan territory. The limitations of the chiefly honours is to "heirs" (general) (Lyon Register), so the chieft is to be sought in the female line. Seats of this ancient clan were: the Castle of Arrochar (Loch Long), the Castles of Ellanbui and Inveruglas, on islands of Loch Lomond.

After her husband's death in 1744, at the age of 28 she married Captain Robert Bratton, a Captain who had seen service in the French and Indian War.

The Gaelic is "MacPharlain," meaning "son of Parlan." Malcolm Macpharlane was one of the witnesses to a charter by Ywar Cambell of Strachur to Duncan, Earl of Leuenax about 1385. In 1395 Duncan filius Malcolm Makfarlane had a charter from Duncan, Earl of Levenax. Andrew MacFarlane of Aracher was admitted burgess free-man of Glasgow gratis in 1577.

"The ancestor of the Macfarlanes of Kirkton was George MacFarlane of Markinch, second son to Andrew Macfarlane of that Ilk, in the reign of King James V. George having sold the fairsaid lands of Markinch, went afterwards and settled in the north Highlands amongst his namesakes the Macfarlanes, promiscuously called the Irish ((Gaelic)) language, M'Allans, Allanach, or Clan Allan, i.e., the posterity of Allan, because of their descent from Allan Macfarlane, a younger son to one of the lairds of Macfarlane, who settled in Strathdonn, Aberdeenshire, several centuries ago. From him are descended the families of Auchorrachan, Balnengown, Lismurdie, etc., as also several others in Braemar and Strathspey."

 Nimmo, History of Stirlingshire, 3 ed., 1880, p. 100, quoted in George Fraser Black, Op. Cit., p. 492.

Robert Macfarlane (1815-1883), born in Rutherglen, was for 17 years editor of the Scientific American. Makfarland and Makferlande, 1546; M'Farlen, 1603; Mcfarling, 1668; M'Farling, 1663; Makferlan, 1529; McKfarlen, 1728; McFerlane, 1612; and MacPharheline, 1610.*

The MacFarlanes were descended from the old Celtic Earls of Lennox, and occupied the land forming the western shore of Loch Lomond from Tarbet upwards. From Loch Sloy, a small sheet of water near the foot of Ben Voirlich, they took their war cry of "Loch Sloigh." The ancestor of the clan was Gilchrist, brother of Maldowen, the third Earl of Lennox. Gilchrist's grandson was Bartholomew, which in Gaelic is "Parlan," from whom the clan are designed - the letters "Ph" in "MacPharlain" sounding like "F" in Gaelic. In 1373 the death of Donald, the sixth and last of the old Earls of Lennox, without male issue, left the Chief of the Clan MacFarlane the male representative of the old Lennox family. The claim was disputed, and ultimately the Earldom of Lennox was conferred on Sir John Stewart of Darnley, who married Elisabeth, one of the daughters of the last Earl of Lennox of the old line. The resistance of the MacFarlanes to the "Stewart" Earls of Lennox would appear to have been the beginning of the end of their destruction as a clan. That the MacFarlanes were not totally deprived of their lands was in consequence of the marriage of Andrew, head of one of the cadet branches, to the daughters of John Stewart, Earl of Lennox. By this union Andrew MacFarlane obtained possession of the clan territory of Arrochar. His son, Sir John MacFarlane, assumed in 1493 the designation of Captain of the Clan MacFarlane, then equivalent to "Chief," and the style MacFarlane of that Ilk was in 1672 officially recognised; and in the 18th century, Walter Macfarlane of that Ilk obtained the armorial insignia of the Chief settled on his heirs-general, but since 1866 the chiefship has been dormant, no one having claimed or obtained signature for the Chief of Arms.

The Badge of Clan MacFarlane is Cranberry and Cloudberry. Members and descendants of this clan may wear the MacFarlane tartan. The Coat of Arms (or Armorial Bearings) may be found in Lyon Register, I, 184. It is described:

Arms: A saltire waved or engrailed (the actual entry in Lyon Register is illegible owing to decay of the parchment and ink at that point) and cantoned with four roses gules (being the original bearings of the Lennoxes).

Crest: A demi-savage holding a shear of arrows in his right hand and pointing with his left to an imperial crown.

Mottes: over escutcheon, "This I'll defend," and under escutcheon, on a compartment wavy, "Loch Sloy."

Mrs. Esther Mae Winget Warner states:

"One of the first with a definite record is Gilchrist, son of Alwyn, second Earl of Lennox. He had a brother, Earl Malduin from whom he obtained lands and barony of Arrochai about 1225."

Our MacFarlane genealogy is as follows:

- 1 Gilchrist, son of Alwyn, second Earl of Lennox.
- 2 Duncan.
- 3 Malduin, who fought in the service of King Robert Bruce.
- 4 Pharlan.
- 5 Malcolm MacFarlane. He designated himself MacFarlane. This is the first time the surname is used.
- 6 Duncan MacFarlane. He married Christian Campbell who belonged to the famous Clan Campbell.
- 7 John MacFarlane (born in 1500's). He married Jean Mure, a daughter of Sir Adam Mure, and a sister of the first wife of King Robert II of Scotland.
- 7 Thomas MacFarlane.
- 8 Duncan MacFarlane. He came to British-America, 1718.
- 8 Daniel MacFarlane. He came to British-America, 1718.
- 8 Caleb MacFarlane. He came to British-America, 1718. He was the last Chief of the Clan in Scotland; his lands were proscribed and he and his two daughters were forced to flee to Pennsylvania.

- 9 Anne MacFarlane (1715-1786). She married Captain Alexander Dunlap (1716-1744).
- 10 Robert Dunlap (1740-1781). He married Mary Gay, 1763.
- 11 Alexander Dunlap (1764-1841). He married Jane Alexander, 1795.
- 12 Elisabeth Dunlap (1810/1812 - 1882). She married her cousin, Franklin Graves (Graham) Dunlap.
- 13 Franklin Dunlap (1837-1891). He married Sarah Davis (1837-1908).
- 14 James Brady Dunlap (1882-1954). He married Margie Childress.*
- 15 Myrtle Lee Dunlap (1901-1949). She married Julian Anton Hanna (1898 -).
- 16 Reverend James Arthur MacClellan Hanna (1925 -).
- 16 Marion Hanna (1929-1929).
- 16 Grace Lorraine Hanna (1931 -). She married Lieutenant James Lowry Johnson, 1951.

THE SCOTTISH HIGHLAND CLAN OF MEANS (MENZIES)

The Means family name is of Norman origin being originally de Meyners. In England it assumed the form Manners. In Scotland the name is spelt in many ways: Menzies, Mainzeis 1675, Magnies 1447, Meigneis 1421, Meigneis 1448, Meignes 1419, Meigneis 1424, Meingnes 1460, Meingzes 1651, Meingzeis 1641, Meinyeis 1630, Meinzeis 1658, Meinzies 1677, Mengues 1487, Megyeis 1591, Mengzeis 1574, Mengzes 1572, Mengzies 1634, Mennes 1349, Menyas 1424, Menyeis 1500, Menyheis 1431, Menyhes 1428, Menzas, Menzes, Menzeis and Menzeys 1550, Menzheis 1503, Menzis 1446, Moygne 1369. The name is pronounced Meeng-us.

Robertson in his Historical Proofs on the Highlanders says the Clan Means or Menzies is descended from a Gaelic-speaking race, the chiefs being of Lowland origin. Skene, another historian, says the same. The name occurs in charters during the reign of William the Lion and the reign of Alexander II. In 1250 Robert de Meyners, Knight, was Lord High Chamberlain of Scotland. Sir Robert's son, Alexander, was possessor of the lands of Weem, Aberfeldy, and Fortingal, in Atholl, Glendochart, in Breadalbane, as well as Durisdeer, in Nithsdale. Robert, the elder son of Alexander, inherited these with the exception of Fortingal which Thomas the younger brother secured. From Alexander's eldest son descended Sir Robert de Mengues, Knight, whose lands were erected into the Barony of Menzies in 1487. His descendant, Sir Alexander Menzies of Castle Menzies, was in 1665 created a Baronet of Nova Scotia. From him was descended the late Sir Neil Menzies of Menzies, who died without issue, when the baronetcy expired, and his sister, Miss Egidia Menzies of Menzies became chieftainess of the clan. Another family was Menzies of Pitfoddels, dating back to the 14th century. The Clan Menzies fought for Robert the Bruce at Bannockburn. At the time of the Revolution in 1688 the Chief of the Clan Menzies favoured the new Government. During the Rising of 1715 the Menzies were out for Bonnie Prince Charlie. In the Rising of 1745 the chief of the clan took no action, though the clan was out under Menzies of Shian. To a Menzies Scotland is indebted for the introduction of the larch tree, which is found all over the Highlands. The first larch trees were grown from seven seedlings brought in 1738 from the Tyrol by Menzies of Culdares. The House of Culdares (the seat is at Arndilly) is now regarded as the chief, and while Castle Menzies was disposed of by Sir Neil's creditors, the clan has acquired and holds as its headquarters the old Kirk of Weem, where the monuments of the chiefs are to be seen.*

The Badge of Clan Menzies (Means) is Uinnseann (Ash); Menzies Heath. The Slogan is "Geal is Dearg a suas" ("Up with the White and Red"). The Coat of Arms (or Armorial Bearings) may be found in Lyon Register, I, 186. It is described:

"Arms: Argent, a chief gules.

Crest: A savage's head erased proper.

Supporters: Two savages wreathed around the head and loins proper.

Motto: (over) "Will God I shall. " "

THE SCOTTISH FAMILY OF SNODGRASS

Snodgrass is an Ayrshire surname derived from the twenty shilling lands of old extent of Snodgers or Snodgrasse in the parish of Irvine and bailliary of Cunningham. Adam Snorgyrs appears as bailie of Are in 1372 (ER., II, p. 486), and Patrick Snodgrass was admitted burgess freeman of Glasgow in 1578 (Burgesses). The name is found in Glasgow Protocol Books as Snodgers (1556), and Margaret Snodgers was recorded heir of John Snodgers, maltman and burgess of Glasgow, in 1621 (Inquis., 972). Andrew Snodgrasse in the Bridgeend of Glasgoq was released from imprisonment in 1679 on signing a bond not to take up arms (RPC., 3 ser. VI, p. 296), Neil Snodgras appears as notary in Paisley in 1684 (ibid., IX., p. 321), and Hew Snodgrass, William Snodgrass, and John Snodgrass too the Test in the same town in 1686 (ibid., XI, p. 496). Snodgrass 1679, Snodgerss 1608, Snodgrase 1652.*

The Snodgrass family moved to Virginia in the early 18th century and settled in Augusta County, Virginia, later Bottetourt County, Virginia. I can find no mention of the Snodgrass family being a Clan or a sept of a Clan.

APPENDIX A-9

THE SCOTTISH FAMILY GAY

Ensign Robert Dunlap (1740-1781) married Mary Gay, a daughter of William and Mary Walkup Gay of North Ireland, a granddaughter of Reverend William Gay of Belfast, North Ireland, who came to Virginia and settled at Gay's Run.

The name Gay is found in the County of Angus, Scotland, in the 15th century, and in the County of Fife, 17th century (Scots Kith and Kin, Clan House, 117 Grove Street, Edinburgh, Scotland).

Professor George Fraser Black says in his Surnames of Scotland:

"GAY. John Gy, chaplain in Dundee, 1452, may be John Gy who appears as presbyter in Brechin, 1458 (REB., I, 156; II, 99). George Gaii was church elder in Dysart in 1641 (PBK., p. 209), and David Gay and Alexander Gay, sailors, were burgesses of the same burgh in 1661 (Inquis., 4465). Janet Gay in Nethertoun of Crawfordjohn in 1682 and five more of the name appear in Lanark Commissariat Record, and William Gay was horsehirer in Dumfries in 1781 (Dumfries). The name is found in England in first half of the twelfth century. It may be a descriptive name, 'light-spirited.' Adam le Gay and Robert le Gay appear in co. Oxford in 1273 (Bardsley)."

The Gay family moved to North Ireland during the Ulster Plantation. I can find no mention of the Gay family being a Clan or a sept of a Clan.

THE SCOTTISH FAMILY OF ALEXANDER*

The Honourable Alexander Dunlap (1764-1841) married a lady, descended from the ancient family of Alexander of Scotland, Jane, in 1795. We are not certain just when this family arrived in British-America, but we can surmise that Jane Alexander's grandfather, Captain James Alexander, Sr. (died 1778), who served in the Old French War, came to the Colonies before 1740; he was a commissioner or a trustee of the Tinkling Springs Presbyterian Church in Augusta County, Virginia. Jane Alexander was born in 1775, the daughter of James Alexander, Jr. (1750-1814) and Isabella Erskine Alexander; he took part in the Battle of Point Pleasant, October 10, 1774.

Alexander means "defender of man" (Greek). Miss Yonge has pointed out in her History of Christian Names that nowhere is the name Alexander so thoroughly national as in Scotland, into which country it was introduced by Queen Margaret, wife of King Malcolm Ceanmor, from the Hungarian Court, where she was brought up. So popular became the name in Scotland that Alexander in its diminutive form, "Sandy," is even more the national name than "Donald."

As a surname Alexander is very common on the west coast, where, according to the authors of Clan Donald, some of the descendants of Godfrey, second son of Alastair Mor, appear to have settled in the Carrick districts of Ayrshire, and several territorial families of Macalexander from this stock were prominent in that region, e.g., the MacAlexanders of Daltupene, Dalreoch, Corsclays, etc. About the end of the 17th century they dropped the "Mac." The Alexanders of Menstrie claimed to be connected with the Clan Donald and to be closely allied in blood with the Macallisters of Loup. Gilbert, son of Donald, son of Alastair Mor, got a grant of lands in Stirlingshire in 1330. There is no further trace of this family until the beginning of the 16th century, when they are found settled in Clackmannanshire. William Alexander was connected with the accounts of the city of Edinburgh, 1435. Robert Alexander was a granger in Feichly and Drummelochy in Strathdon, 1438, and the name is of frequent occurrence in the Moray rentals in the first half of the 18th century. The name was early adopted into Gaelic, appearing as Alaxandair in the Gaelic genealogical manuscript of 1467 (now spelled Alasdair), and as a patronymic it appears as Mac Alasdair, whence the well-known Macalister, Macallister, etc. Alexander, 1501; Alisandre, 1424; Alisschonder, 1536; Alschinder, 1546; Alschoner, 1613; Alschunder, 1581; Alshander, 1581; Alshunder, 1597; and Alsinder, 1539.*

The Coat of Arms of the Alexander family has as its motto: "Per Mare Per Terras." The Macalister Clan adopted the same motto; however the Coat of Arms differ widely. The Badge of the Macalisters is: "Fraoch gorm" or "Common Heath."

Members of this Clan and its descendants may wear the tartan of Clan Macalister, MacDonald, or MacDonell of Glengarry. The present chief of Clan Macalister is Lt. Col. Charles Godfrey Somerville MacAlester of the Loup and Kennox, who succeeded to the chiefship in 1903; his residence is Kennox, Ayrshire. The present chief of Clan MacDonell of Glengarry is Ranald Macdonell, 21st Chief.

Mr Oren F. Morton, in his work A History of Monroe County, West Virginia, tells us that the Alexander family was the first to settle where the county seat was established, Union (Monroe County, West Virginia). Owing also to its intermarriages with other prominent families of Monroe County, the Alexander connexion has been very noted in the local annuals. James Alexander, Sr., who lived in Beverly Manor, is mentioned there as early as 1746, and was a captain in the Old French War. James Alexander, Jr. visited this region before his settlement in 1773. He located on land which he understood was to be conveyed by a man from Pennsylvania, but that individual failed to show up. His first home was constructed on the hill just east of Union. The second year he started for the Valley, and from the summit of a knob the couple saw their cabin in flames. It was the year of the Dunmore War. The second home was built on what became the main street of Union, and the third "Old Hundred," was low down on the west slope of Green Hill. It was later the home of Matthew Alexander, and was burnt, about 1907. The cemetery at the top of the knob is on land granted by the pioneer. He was a member of the Greenbrier Court, 1784, and was sherriff, 1793. Two years before Union was formed he took out a tavern license. His wife was Isabella Erskine, of Scottish descent.*

When Monroe County was organised it had nearly 4,000 people, and not even a village. A mile from the courthouse to the south James Byrnside had made a home about 1762. In 1774, James Alexander, Jr., a young man of 24, built his cabin a little north of the town. He sold a part of his land to Michael Erskine. Even in 1799 there does not appear to have been any dwelling within the present town limits except that of Alexander himself. That this farm became a town was entirely because it was selected for the seat of government of the new county. On the second day of the first term of the Monroe court, Alexander entered into a bond to convey one acre as a courthouse lot and ten acres adjoining as a town site. The bond was made out in favour of William Haynes, John Gray, John Byrnside, James Handley, and James Alexander, acting as town trustees. The sherriff was then ordered to let out the building of a log courthouse and a stone jail. In 1806 James Alexander, Jr., deeded one acre for a courthouse lot and 25 acres for a town site, so long as the ground should be used for such purposes.

Some descendants of Captain James Alexander, Sr. (died 1778):

- 1 Captain James Alexander, Sr. (died 1778).
- 2 James Alexander, Jr. (1750-1814). He married Isabella Erskine.
- 3 Andrew Alexander (1773 -). He married Phoebe Bracken, 1805.

APPENDIX A-11
THE SCOTTISH CLAN ERSKINE

Isabella Erskine married James Alexander, Jr. (1750-1814). Their daughter was Jane Alexander (1775 -), who married, 1795, the Honourable Alexander Dunlap (1764-1841). Isabella Erskine, we are led to believe, was the daughter of Henry and Jean Thompson Erskine, immigrants from Scotland to Cecil County, Maryland. Isabella's brother was Michael Erskine, a close neighbour to James Alexander, and he purchased a section of his land. Michael Erskine married Margaret, a widow of Captain James Paulee (or Pauley), after her return from a captivity among the Indians; her maiden name was Handley. Michael Erskine died in 1812. The children of Michael Erskine and Margaret Handley Paulee Erskine were:

1. Henry Erskine. He married Agatha _____. He lived at Lewisburg where he died in 1847.
2. William Erskine. He married Margaret Benson, 1810. He lived at Salt Sulphur, where he was in partnership with Isaac Caruthers in a summer resort for many years.
3. Alexander Erskine. He went to Alabama.
4. Michael Erskine, Jr. He went to Texas.
5. Jane Erskine. She married Hugh Caperton, 1806.

A cousin to the above Erskines was Elisabeth (1776 -) who married Michael Bickett.*

The name Erskine is of territorial origin from the barony of the same name in Renfrewshire, Scotland. Henry de Erskyn who witnessed a confirmation by King Alexander II of a grant by Amelec, brother of Maldoven, Earl of Lennox, of the Church of Rosneath to the Abbey of Paisley in 1225, is probably the first of the name on record. John de Irskyne witnessed a donation by Adam dictus Carpentarius of the land of Aldhingleston (or Haldhingleston), c. 1260. Sir John de Ireskin, knight, witnessed a sale of land in Glasgow, c. 1280-1290. Johan de Irskyn of the county of Lanark rendered homage in 1296. His seal bears a stag's head cabossed, between the antlers a small four-footed animal passant to sinister. John de Herchyn witnessed a charter by King David II to Robert Erskyn. Robert de Erskyne witnessed an Aberdeen charter of 1361. Robert Erschin was canon of Glasgow in 1491. Rachel Askine lived in Newstead. George Erskine was a tailor in Irvine, 1666. A 15th century French spelling of the name is Hasquin, and in the lists of the Scots Guards in France it appears as Assequin. Another French spelling is provided by Voltaire, who in his Letters on the English Nation wrote it "Hareskins." A common pronunciation in the 18th century was Arskine. A common Scots pronunciation is "Askin" which is also the spelling used by Sir James Melville in his Memoirs in referring to Arthur Askin, master stabler to the queen. Froissart spells the name Aversequin, Auermesquin, and Auernesquin.

The Erskine Clan was loyal to Robert the Bruce, to whom they were related by marriage. Sir Robert de Erskine was Great Chamberlain of Scotland, ambassador to England and France, and held many important national offices. He exchanged with King David II Strathgartney for the lands of Alloa; he died in 1385. Sir Robert Erskine assumed the title of Earl of Mar in 1435, but his son Sir Thomas Erskine, was dispossessed of it in 1457, and in 1467, he was created Lord Erskine. John, fourth Lord Erskine, had in care the infant Mary Queen of Scots in Stirling Castle, Inchmahome, and then took her to France; he died in 1552. His daughter was the mother of the Regent Murray; his son, Alexander, was the ancestor of the Earls of Kellie. John, fifth Lord Erskine, was confirmed in the Earldom of Mar; he died in 1572. In 1715 the Earldom of Mar was forfeited when John, the eleventh Earl, formed a party as leader in the Jacobite Rising.

The Erskines of Dun descended from the Erskines of Erskine when Sir Thomas received a charter of the Barony of Dun from King Robert II in 1376. A large number of the family of Dun fell at Flodden Field, and after several decades the estate of Dun passed to the Marquis of Ailsa in 1793. His second son, John, inherited the property and assumed the name Erskine. The Erskines of Alva are descended from the House of Mar are now represented by the Earls of Rosselyn. James Erskine, son of the seventh Earl of Mar, acquired the Earldom of Buchan by marrying the Countess of Buchan. Walter John, Earl of Mar and Kellie is chief of the Erskines; his seats are at Alloa and Kellie Castle, Fife. The ancient Earldom was confirmed to John Francis Goodeve-Ershine as 29th Earl, and has devolved on Lionel Young-Erskine, as 35th Earl from Gillocher, Normaer of Mar in the days of King David I.*

Members and descendants of this clan may wear the Erskine tartan. The Coat of Arms (or Armorial Bearings) may be found in Lyon Register, III, 67. It is described:

Arms: Quarterly. 1 and 4, Azure a bend between six cross-crosslets or. 2 and 3, Argent a pile sable.

Crest: (ancient) on a cap of dignity, gules doubled ermine, two wings erected and addorsed, azure, each charged with a bend between six cross-crosslets or.

Supporters: Two griffins argent. "

The Crest: a dexter arm couped at the elbow, and erect, grasping a club, all proper.

Motto is over the escutcheon: "Je pense plus."

THE SCOTTISH FAMILY OF HANNA

Myrtle Lee Dunlap (1901-1949) was the first daughter of James Brady Dunlap (1882-1954) and Margie Childers (Childress) (1883-1910) Dunlap. She married Julian Anton Hanna (1898 -) August 1, 1924; to this union three children were born: Reverend James Arthur M., 1925; Marion (infant boy, 1929); Grace Lorraine, 1931.

The Hanna Family began in the 12th century (c. 1150) with its progenitor Patrick

* Sir Thomas Innes of Learney, Op. Cit., p. 122. See also Robert Bain's The Clans and Tartans of Scotland (Glasgow, 1948), p. 122. Consult Frank Adam Op. Cit., pp. 215-216.

Hanna, who was the first Lord of Sorbie in southwest Scotland.* The Hannas, like the Dunlaps, were originally Pictish or Scottish; they were not Anglo-Normans. Gilbert de Hannethe of the county of Wiggeton (Wigton) rendered homage, 1296, and in the same year as Gilbert Hahanith was jurior on an inquest concerning the succession to Elena la Zuche in Scotland. John of Hanna was master of a ship of King James of Scotland. John Hanay was a witness in Glasgow, 1477. Robert Ahannay of Castle Sorbie had precept of office of curatory, 1499. A "brew caldron" was stolen from Ellen Hannay, 1514. James Ahannay was the king's culverner, 1529. John Ahanny was baker to the queen, 1566. The "knaiffscheipes" of the mills of Melrose were vacant by the death of Mathew Ahanney, 1565. Thomas Hannaye, smith, was made burgess freeman of Glasgow at the request of the archbishop of Glasgow, 1575. David Hanna was tenant in the barony of Mousewall (Mousewald), 1673. Canon James Hanna, Dean of Edinburgh Cathedral, attempted to read the Anglican liturgy before Jenny Geddes in St. Giles Church in Edinburgh, 1637, and was forced to flee to his chamber when she hurled a stool at his feet. In the early 17th century a feud broke out between the Hannas of Castle Sorbie and the Murrays of Broughton, which appears to have ended in the ruin of the former family. The name may be spelt many ways: Hanna, Hannah, Hannay, Hannethe, Ahannay, Hana, Hanay, Hanaye, or Ahanna. In North Ireland the name is commonly spelt Hanna; in the United States and Canada and other British possessions we find the spelling Hanna or Hannay. In Scotland today the spelling of the name Hanna, Hannah, and Hannay, is widely used.

* The Hanna Family, being a Lowland Clan, does not have a tartan of its own; however, because of the intermarriage with Highlanders they may adopt the tartan of their wife's clan. One branch of the Hanna Family wore the Scott tartan because of intermarriage with the Scotts in the early 19th century. Hannas in general have been known to wear the Stewart tartan as this clan looks with favour upon their tartan being displayed. The Hannas served the House of Stewart well in its early history and several intermarriages are recorded.

 George Fraser Black, Op. Cit., p. 341.

Most Hanna families have adopted the Coat of Arms of Hanna of Sorbie. The Hanna Coat of Arms is described in Burk's Encyclopaedia of Heraldry as follows:

"Ar. three roebucks copued az. collared ir. a bell pendant from each collar gu. crest, a cross crosslet fitch issuing out of a crescent sa. supporters, two roebucks ppr. motto: Per ardu ad alta, 'Through difficulties to high places.'" *

The Sorbie Coat of Arms of the Hannay (Hanna) Family was used by the Kirkdale branch, the Mochran branch, the Grennan branch, the Knock branch, and the Cairnhill branch. The Kirkcudbright branch and the Kingsmuir branch used the same Coat of Arms with the motto: "cresco et spero," and the Ballhouston branch also used the same Coat of Arms with the motto: "per ardu in collum." The London branch substituted goats coupled for the roebucks coupled on its coat of arms. After a part of the family had removed from Scotland and settled in Ulster, the Newry branch of the Hanna Family was organised, and the Coat of Arms of Sorbie was adopted with the addition of a scroll of hands clasped coupled inserted between the crest and the shield and the motto was changed to: "ad alta virtue," to indicate that branch. The selection of the roebuck deer as an emblem on the escutcheon is significant, for these deer pair for life and live in families.

James Hanna (1749-1813) was the Scottish-American ancestor of many Hannas today; he was a grandson of the Hannas of Castle Sorbie. He migrated, with his family, from Ulster to Pennsylvania before 1760. He died at Canonsburgh, Pennsylvania, and is buried there, 1813. He married Anne Campbell (1760-1833), who was descended from the Clan Campbell of Argyll. They had twelve children, most of whom grew up and had large families of their own. The Hanna Family was Presbyterian in Scotland, Ulster, and British-America; even today wherever Hannas are found the majority of them are of this denomination. One of their twelve children was Moses Hanna.

Moses Hanna was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, in 1799, and died in Washington County, Ohio, in 1879. He married a lady of Scottish descent, Mary Elisabeth Watson, whose ancestors were connected with the Highland Clan Buchanan. They had six children; the first son was named John Watson Hanna.

John Watson Hanna was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, in 1823, and died in Clarington, Monroe County, Ohio, in 1850. He married a lady of Scottish descent, Mary Elisabeth Bonar, whose ancestors were allied with the Highland Clan Graham. They had two children: John Denning and Mary Elisabeth (1847-1924). Both John Watson Hanna and his young wife died of typhoid fever in the summer of 1850, and the two small children were reared by their grandparents, i.e., the Watsons.

John Denning Hanna was born in Monroe County, Ohio, June 23, 1850, and died, and is buried, in Marietta, Ohio, May 23, 1897. He married a lady of Highland Scottish descent, Mary Elisabeth MacClannahan (originally MacLennan).^{*} Mary died in 1879. They had three children: Loren, Flora, and Minnie. John Denning Hanna remarried, 1880, Ada Woodburn, and seven children were born to this union: Alexander Watson, Mary Martha, Clara, Ralph, Anna, John, and Fanny.

Loren Hanna was born in Marietta, Ohio, 1873, and was killed there in August, 1902. He married, 1897, Theresa Grace Gertrude Schmidt (1873 -), the fifth daughter of Anton Phillip Schmidt (1831-1906) and Anna Clara Stuhl Schmidt (1830-1899), formerly of Austria. Loren Hanna was reared in the Presbyterian faith, but later attended the Congregational Church in Marietta; his wife is a member of the Marietta Presbyterian Church. One son was born to this union, Julian Anton Hanna.

Julian Anton Hanna was born in Marietta, Ohio, October 17, 1898.^{} He attended the public schools there and later studied at West Virginia University at Morgantown, West Virginia. In 1917 he began his work with the Pure Oil Company, Dawes, Kanawha ^{*} MacClannahan may be spelt: MacClanahan, McClannahan, McClanahan, MacClanan, MacLennan, McLennan. It is derived from the Highland Clan MacLennan (or Logan). MacClellan is a corrupted form of MacClannahan, although the Maclellans are known to be a sept of Clan MacNab.

County, West Virginia, and retired in the fall of 1951. He married, first, August 1, 1924, at Cheylan, West Virginia, Myrtle Lee Dunlap. His wife of twenty-five years died 1949. In June of 1950 he married, second, a widow, Dorothy Simmons Tacy of Huttonsville, Randolph County, West Virginia, where they reside. They attend the Presbyterian Church. He is a Thirty-two degree Mason, Scottish Rite, and his avocation is writing history. Three children were born to Julian Anton and Myrtle Lee Dunlap Hanna: James Arthur M., 1925; Marion, 1929; Grace Lorraine, 1931.

Reverend James Arthur MacClellan Hanna was born in Marietta, Ohio, November 18, 1925.* He attended the public schools at Dawes and East Bank, Kanawha County, West Virginia; he entered Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio, in 1943 and completed his work for the A.B. degree in 1948. He served in the Armed Forces in the U.S.A., France, and Germany, 1944-1946. He graduated with the B.D. degree at the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Louisville, Kentucky, in June, 1951, having been taken under the care of the Presbytery of Athens, Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., in April of 1948, when a member of the First Presbyterian Church in Marietta. During his seminary training in Louisville he served the 161 year old Pennsylvania Run Presbyterian Church, Route 1, Buechel, Kentucky, from September, 1948 to June 1951; his successor was the Reverend Edwin Bell Hanna, a distant kinsman. He was ordained by the Presbytery of Athens in the Marietta Church, June 8, 1951, and inducted as pastor over the Oak Hill and Horeb Presbyterian Churches, Oak Hill, Ohio, (Jackson County) on June 10, 1951; he began his work there when he accepted a Call from the Churches in February of 1951. He is the author of A History of the Hanna Families of Scotland, North Ireland, America 1150-1955 (privately printed) and The House of Dunlap (1955).

* The name MacClellan (or MacClannahan) was assumed in honour of his great-grandmother, Mary Elisabeth MacClannahan, who married John Denning Hanna. The family is entitled to wear the tartan of MacLennan or Logan.

son of Captain Alexander Dunlop (1716-1744) and Anne MacFarlane Dunlap (1715-1786), grandson of Alexander and Antonia Brown Dunlop of Dunlop, Ayrshire, Scotland, great-grandson of James and Elisabeth Cunningham Dunlop of Dunlop, Ayrshire, Scotland, great-great-grandson of James and Margaret Hamilton Campbell Dunlop of Dunlop, Ayrshire, Scotland. *

COPY OF OLD WILL

In the name of God, Amen. This 25th day of February, one thousand and eight hundred and four, (1804), I, John Dunlap, of Rockbridge County, State of Virginia, knowing the uncertainty of this life and being of sound mind and memory and being desirous to settle my estate, do make this my last will and testament in form and manner following and by this will is expressed:

First: I allow my body to be decently interred, the expenses to be paid out of my estate.

Second: I allow my debts to be paid out of my estate.

Third: I give and bequeath to my beloved wife, Ann Dunlap, her body clothes, two beds and bedding of clothes, a new saddle and bridle, one mare named Mobroe, my saddle horses and one sorrel yearling colt, one brown yearling filly, six cows and calves, and all of the sheep, one negroman named Ben, and one negro boy named Young Phil, and one negro girl named Fan and child, my cupboard and all of the furniture in it, my house Bible, Gray's explanation of the new Testament and Isaac Ambrosea Looking to Jesus, her pocket Bible and two other small books, likewise my dwelling house and land that lays on the east side of the big calf pasture river. The river is to be the line and a fourth part of all of my movable estate after what I mention to my children, this I leave to her, her heirs, executors and assigns forever.

* Copy of the Will of John Dunlap (1738-1804) was sent to the author by Mr John Hyde Dunlap, Jr., of Williamsport, Ohio (1956).

Fourthly: I give and bequeath to my son, Alexander Dunlap, my right and title and interest to one-half of fourteen hundred and eighty-six acres of land lying in the State of Kentucky, near the big bone lick, to be divided equally in quantity and quality. The other half of said land I give my right and title and interest to my daughter Elizabeth Gay, and also my silver knee buckles I give to my son Alexander Dunlap. This I give to them and their heirs forever.

Fifthly: The old Chillicothe town on the west side of the Ohio on Paint Creek, in Ross County, containing three thousand acres of land belonging to me, I allow to be divided in four lots to be equal in quality and quantity and to be drawn as a lottery, my daughter Elizabeth Gay to have five hundred acres and her son to have two hundred and fifty, making one lot. My son James Dunlap, one lot, my daughter Ann Bratton one lot, my daughter Mary Hodge, five hundred acres, and her son Samuel Hodge two hundred and fifty acres, making one lot, this I leave to them and their heirs forever.

Sixthly: I give and bequeath to my son James Dunlap all of my body clothes, one bed and bedding of clothes, one saddle and bridle, one gray horse, and one gray mare, also one tract of land containing The Cold Sulphur Springs, also a part of my tract of land lying on the Big Calf Pasture to be divided by a line to begin at foot of a hill near to where the road to Cold Springs crosses the branch, the first line, thence along the foot of the hill to the fence, thence a straight line to the mouth of the dry run, thence to Wm. Dunlap line, and two hundred dollars, this I leave to him and his heirs forever to be his share of the estate.

Seventhly: I give and bequeath to my daughter Ann Bratton, two negro slaves, one Abby and the other Adam, and a part of my land on the Big Calf pasture river joining James Dunlap to run with his line to the river, thence up both sides of Bratton's run up to my plantation called Peter's Place, except a piece of land that lays above a small branch that empties into Bratton's Run near a clearing on the south-east side, all the land lying above that branch I allow to my daughter Mary Hodge, to be added to Peter's Place, this I give to her and her heirs forever and one-fourth part of my movable estate.

Eighthly: I give and bequeath to my daughter Mary Hodge two negro slaves, the one named Minty and the other named Polly, four cows and four calves and two year-old cattle, a plantation on Bratton's Run called Peter's Place and one small tract of land containing sixty-six acres lying on the Meadow Run a branch of Bratton's Run, one negro boy named George. This is to be equally divided between my daughters Ann and Mary and also one-fourth part of my movable estate, this I leave to her and her heirs forever.

Ninthly: I give and bequeath to my daughter Elizabeth Gay one-fourth part of my movable estate to her and her heirs forever.

Tenthly: I give and bequeath to my son John Dunlap fifty-one pounds for which I have his bond. This I give to him and his heirs forever.

Eleventhly: I as to the rest of my land here I allow to my beloved wife Ann Dunlap to sell it and divide the money arising therefrom between her and the children whichever has the most need, give them the largest share, one tract joining the Cold Spring Place containing nine hundred and ten acres, also one tract on Bratton's Run of one hundred and sixty acres, and my half of two thousand acres including the iron ore bank of which Alexander Campbell has the one-half, my wife to make the title to each tract sold.

Twelfthly: I leave twenty dollars to the trustees of the Lebanon Meeting House to be laid out in helping to raise a gallery in said house for the use of negro slaves.

Thirteenthly: I allow eight dollars to each slave here mentioned to be laid out in clothes, to wit: Old Phil, Young Phil, Ben, Philip and Fan.

Fourteenthly: I constitute and appoint my beloved wife Ann Dunlap my executrix of this my last will and testament. Witness my hand and seal this the twenty-fifty day of February, one thousand eight hundred and four (1804).

APPENDIX C

CLERGYMEN IN THE DUNLAP FAMILY

The Scottish father and mother longed for one of their sons to become a "man of the cloth." Perhaps this longing came from the ingleside of a Scottish mother who worked, watched, and prayed for the welfare of her hardy sons and daughters. The list of clergymen in our historic family makes the Scotch heart beat a wee bit faster. The pioneer ministers were called from the ranks of men who dug peat, mined, handled trowells on walls, hammered iron on anvils, squared timber with giant axes; however, many were called from the lowlands as well as from the highlands while tending their flocks. These "men of the cloth" were never slip-shod in their training. They diligently prepared themselves in an academic undertaking no matter how hard the schooling appeared. In so doing they could better communicate a fervour that had academic meaning in the best Scotch (and Genevan) tradition. They were well equipped "to preach an ancient Gospel to a modern world."

A brief biography of these clergymen would be vibrant with informality and humour. The minister who wore the silken black gown and the Genevan bands (tabs) was not always the dour Scot as many would have us believe. Virginia, Pennsylvania, and the Carolinas were British possessions wherein Ayrshire and Ulster and the Highlands were always around the corner. The first and second generation Scotsman was still a member of three spheres of influence, i.e., Scotland, Ulster, and America, and indeed until this very day his descendants so remains!

The Scotch Presbyterian cleric always knew that breeds and bloodstreams figured in history. Many a minister in the new world had behind him a saga of adventure, hard labour, recreation, and heart-break, all that have gone into his share in the making of his parish. Indeed, a great deal of old fashioned virtues lay behind the clerical attire and a noble horse. Most of the educated ministers possessed land and forest, along with their brains, The Psalms of David, enterprise, and brawn. Some one has written that at the beginning the Indian chief lived hardly more simply than the first settlers.

God, in His infinite wisdom, has been and is gracious in selecting from the Dunlaps many of his ministers. Though hundreds do not bear the family name their mothers and grandmothers and great-grandparents were of the Dunlap heritage and they are entitled to it, as much as a Scotsman, who does not even bear the Scottish family name, is entitled to wear the tartan of his Scotch ancestor no matter how remote!

May the teachings of Jesus Christ, as they are interpreted by John Calvin and John Knox and the Westminster Confession of Faith, be kept pure by the House of Dunlap through its clergymen today and forever !

APPENDIX E

DUNLAP-MacKEE-HUTCHINSON-GORDON CONNEXIONS

A letter, dated January 4, 1940, to mother from our second cousin, Mrs. Josephine McKee Green (daughter of Mother's first cousin, Ellen McKee, who married her cousin David McKee, of Indiana) written from the George Washington University School of Medicine, Dept. of Pathology, Washington, D. C., where she was, at that time, an assistant in the Library, gives what Dunlap information I have.

She wrote that Robert Dunlap's daughter Ann married David McKee, son of John McKee, "the Pioneer"; and that this David and Ann McKee were the parents of Miriam McKee who married James Wilson Claggett and became, with him, the parents of Zerilda Jane Claggett Hutchison, our grandmother Hutchison. This makes our grandmother Hutchison the daughter of Miriam McKee; granddaughter of Ann Dunlap McKee; and great-granddaughter of Robert Dunlap; who thus, becomes your own three-greats-grandfather Dunlap.

If the above Robert Dunlap is the one first named on the Rev. J. Arthur's paper you enclosed, you have, also, a four-greats-grandfather Alexander Dunlap, and a five-greats-grandfather, McFarlane (first name not given.)

One item given in Josie McKee's letter above may be of real service to Mr. Hanna: i.e. that in 1938 she visited the registrar, a Miss Butler, of Western College at Oxford, Ohio, to see the old family Bible of David and Ann Dunlap McKee, which she was sure would always be well cared for as Miss Butler was descended through Margaret McKee McMurtry, a sister of Miriam McKee Claggett. If Mr. Hanna has not already done so, he should, doubtless, see this Bible. Josie called it a "wonderful treat" to see it.

I have corrected Mr. Hanna's spelling of Grandmother Hutchison's first name, and marked out the "Harrodsburg" after Father's name. I know he never lived in Harrodsburg. I believe Grandfather Gordon lived at Pinckard in Jessamine County at the time of Father's marriage, August 27, 1873, but am not sure; it might have been Midway, Kentucky, where he taught for a time.

A distant cousin of ours, descended from Robert Wilson, a Miss Mattie R. Davis, 230 Arlington Avenue, Lexington, Kentucky, is much interested in genealogy, and may be able to give more dates than I can. I have a copy of the records in the Alexander Hutchison Family Bible.

Miriam McKee Claggett was a daughter of Ann Dunlap and David McKee, who was a son of John McKee, "the Pioneer." Miriam McKee married James Wilson Claggett, Ninian Claggett and Euphron Wilson, who was a sister to James Wilson, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, a writer of the Constitution of the U. S., and a Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court at its creation; born September 14, 1742; died August 28, 1798 at Edenton, North Carolina. Ninian and Euphron came from Maryland to Fayette County, Kentucky, locating near Athens.

Miriam McKee and James Wilson Claggett moved to Elkton, Tood County, Kentucky, and reared the following children: Wilson, who married Mary Robinson near Greenville, Muhlenberg County, Kentucky, and died there during the Civil War, leaving descendants in that vicinity; Ann Eliza, who married Thomas H. White near Elkton; Zerilda Jane, who married Alexander McPheeters Hutchison of Woodford County, Kentucky, October 6, 1847; John; James; both of whom I have no data; Mary Euphron, who married a Hobson and moved to Vincennes, Indiana; Lutitia McKee, who married a Malin and moved to Illinois or Indiana; David McKee, who became a Major on the Northern side in the Civil War, winning a gold-handled sword for gallantry—"Uncle Mac's" sword was not fully appreciated by his father's family because, as they said "it was on the wrong side"—; Sarah Ellen who married William Rice, a teacher of Southern Kentucky, brother of the famous preacher, David Rice; Marian, who married Robert McCord of Vincennes, Indiana; and Henry, whose descendents live near Elkton and Hopkinsville, Kentucky.

The father of the large family above, James Wilson Clagget, having become blind in his later years moved, with his wife Miriam McKee, to the home of their daughter, Zerilda, "Hillside" in Woodford County, Kentucky, where he died December 23, 1870. His body rests in the Hutchison Family graveyard at "Hillside." He was born January 7, 1890. His wife died later while visiting her daughter, Lee Mahin, and was buried there. I am sending, with this, a copy of the records on the stones in the Hutchison Family graveyard at "Hillside", and also a copy of the records in the Hutchison Family Bible.

The children of Alex. and Zerilda Hutchison are all dead, as are all the children-in-law. The eldest, Emma A., married her schoolmate (after his Civil War service as a boy-soldier) in the High School at Pinckard, Kentucky, conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Gordon, later her parents-in-law. From his father's school at Pinckard, this soldier boy despite post-war conditions for all Southern people, with not "bonus" or "G. I. bill", secured the degree of M. D. from the Medical school of the University of Louisville, Kentucky and became a well-known physician Dr. John Gilbert Gordon of Walnut Hill, near Lexington, Kentucky. Their only child, Thomas Hutchison Gordon was a successful farmer of Mercer County near Harrodsburg, Kentucky. His wife, three children, 4 children-in-law; four grandchildren, one grandson-in-law, and one great-granddaughter survive him. All live in or near Harrodsburg, Kentucky.

The next child of Alexander and Zerilda Jane Hutchison, Alice Belle, also married her schoolmate in the same school. Like his 15 months older brother, a confederate veteran, Angus Neal Gordon made his way from Pinckard to Washington College, Lexington, Virginia, to which General Lee was soon to add his illustrious name. He stayed there six years without coming home; sometimes tutoring in a private family for his board, sometimes sharing in a students' group-housekeeping club; one whole winter term, dropping out of college to take charge of a small local school. He got his A. B. in 1873 as valedictorian of his class, winning at the same time the orators' heavy gold medal of the Graham-Lee Literary Society. The same year, having secured a school at Shelbyville, Kentucky, he consummated at "Hillside" the long engagement that had extended since "Pinckard" days. The gold medal was his pre-nuptial gift to his bride, which, many years after their own golden wedding and his death, May 5, 1925, she made a pre-nuptial gift to their eldest granddaughter, Catherine Gordon Dixon, of Bartlesville, Oklahoma, daughter of their lawyer-son, Robert Lee Gordon, vice-president and counsel of the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Co. of Bartlesville. A. N. Gordon made the last payment on money borrowed for his education after his marriage. Alice Belle Hutchison Gordon was the kind of wife and mother whose family rise up and call blessed. She reared nine children to maturity, and helped her husband make a school home at Alleghan Academy near Lexington, Kentucky, for as many as 20 boarding pupils at a time. Before going to "Alleghan", he had been adjunct professor of mathematics at Central View at Richmond, Kentucky, later merged with Centre College at Danville, Kentucky, and principal of Bethel Academy at Nicholasville, Kentucky. Later, he took his private school, always an English and Classical College-Preparatory School for boys, into Lexington, Kentucky at 180 East Maxwell Street then to Glen Airy near Frankfort, then back to 180 E. Maxwell Street, Lexington; from which they retired to a well-earned final home in Florida in September, 1915. Alice Belle Hutchison Gordon celebrated her 98th birthday in her home church in Archer on October 2, 1949 and passed away 7 weeks later, to the day, on the early morning of November 21, 1949. A preacher-son, Rev. Angus N. Gordon, D. D., pastor Bowling Green, Kentucky Presbyterian Church, and five daughters survive her, as well as six grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren.

Alexander and Zerilda Jane Hutchison's son, Andrew James, married Catherine Hieatt of Versailles, Kentucky. He was a farmer at Warrensburg, Missouri, where one daughter survives them. Their second son, George Alexander Calvin Hutchison, married Eugenia Barkley of South Elkjorn near Lexington. They are survived by George Barkley Hutchison, Washington D. C.; Frank Young Hutchison, Houston, Texas; and Lucille H. Callahan of LaGrange near Louisville, Kentucky. After the death of his first wife, George Alexander Calvin Hutchison married Rose Jelf of Nicholasville, now deceased, where he was for many years a druggist. (I neglected to say above that besides his one daughter, Alice Belle Hutchison of Warrensburg, Mo., Andrew James Hutchison is survived by one grandson, John Andrew Webb, who is employed all over the country in the U. S. Geodetic Survey; and by one great-grandson, Andrew Cleveland Webb.) George Barkley Hutchison, a graduate pharmacist, is doing administrative work in the National Public Health Service. His son, George Barkley Hutchison, Jr. is a graduate physician doing research work in Boston. Besides him, George Alexander Calvin Hutchison has six other grandchildren, all married, and five great-grandchildren.

Marian Ella Lee Hutchison and her husband, C. M. Holloway, moved to Florida in the early 1900s, and are buried near their home at Micanopy. Their eldest son, Charles Alexander Holloway, was connected for many years with the Florida State Board of Health as a Sanitary Inspector of Marion County. He died at his home in Ocala, May 18, 1952, and is buried there. He is survived by his second wife, two sons, two daughters, all married except the eldest, Charles Alexander Holloway, Jr., and by five or six grandchildren.

The second child of Marian Ella Lee Hutchison Holloway, Grace McCallie, married Harvey A. Bullock, and moved to El Paso, Texas. They have three children living, Betty, unmarried, William, and Mary Lee. The last two are married and live in California. The Bullocks have at least two grandchildren, probably more.

The third child of Marian Ella Lee Hutchison Holloway, a son, George Hutchison

Holloway, is somewhere in Indiana and unmarried.

The fourth, Marian, married Howard C. Roller, and lives in Cincinnati. Her children are Howard C., Jr. and Margaret Lee, who is married, but I do not know the name, or whether there are children.

The fifth child of Marian Ella Lee Hutchison Holloway is a daughter, Jane Hutchison. She became, by her own endeavors, a graduate nurse; but, later, married Charles R. Jones of Crawfordsville, Indiana where they live, or, possibly, in Indianapolis.

This finishes the list of the five children of Zerilda Jane Claggett and her husband, Alexander McPheeters Hutchison, with their descendents so far as the writer knows.

It should be stated here that there is a fully accepted tradition in the Alexander McPheeters Hutchison and Zerilda Jane Claggett Hutchison family that Zerilda's father, James Wilson Claggett, was named by his mother, Euphron Wilson Claggett, for her distinguished brother, the signer of the Declaration of Independence. Ninnian and Euphron Claggett evidently came to Kentucky very early as there is record of their buying land from Daniel Boone, Sr. in 1894, of land granted Daniel Boone in 1785. Ninnian Claggett was the son of William Thomas Claggett, the first Episcopal Bishop of Maryland.

We have a copy of Ninnian's will, from "Will Book A. page 275 of Fayette County Kentucky Court Records". It was made, or dated, July 28, 1805, evidently only a short time before his death. It was probated in Fayette County, October Court, 1805.

Duphron Wilson Claggett was living in 1828. She is believed to have died at the home of the Gays in Woodford County, and may be buried at Pisgah or in a family burying ground.

The above is due to research made by Cousin Mattie R. Davis, 230 Arlington Avenue, Lexington, Kentucky.

APPENDIX F

Letter of Thomas Dunlap of Philadelphia now residing in Lexington, Virginia to Mrs. Tate Sterrett of Bell's Valley, Virginia, June 17, 1896

Madam:

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 17th. inst., June, 1896. I am glad to furnish any information in my power for any friend of our mutual friend, Mrs. Mary Dunlap, for whom and her family, my Mrs. Dunlap and I both, have the highest admiration and respect. I regret that I do not know more about the early history of the Dunlap family in Scotland, but can give you some and obtain more for you, I hope.

First, the Dunlaps and Dunlops are two distinct families in no way related.*

The Dunlap family are Highlanders from time immemorial, members of the Clan Campbell, followers of their chief, Rob Roy, and rendering fealty to him and his successors, "The McCallum More" of the clan, whose head is, and has been for years, the "Duke of Argyle" of whose immediate family, our branch of the Dunlap family claims to be, and I am informed, rightly, the lineal and legitimate descendants and heirs to the title, now occupied and enjoyed by another branch of the same.

The Dunlops are Lowlander people, principally from Midlothian and the neighborhood of Glasgow and the Clyde. They were agriculturists of note for that country and celebrated for the production of a celebrated cheese, known as the "Dunlop Cheese".

Our progenitors were, I fear, rather celebrated for border raids and raising cattle, for hard knocks and hatred to their Sassenach or British neighbors, to whom they were, we are told, "holy terrors" to use the present vernacular.

Second, what I know about our branch of the Dunlap family, which I believe to have been that from which my Grandfather and the Dunlap brothers to which Miss Kerr's interesting letter refers, originated, is as follows:

* According to Rev. J. Arthur Hanna Dunlop and Dunlap are one and same; they are not two distinct families.

 The Dunlap Family is "Highland" only as it served as a Sept of the Campbells of Argyll not by birth except intermarriage.

At the time of the Stuarts, the Argyleshire branch of the family, and who were then the Duke of Argyle and family, followed the fortunes of that monarch, and were attainted of treason in consequence, with result that another and the present branch of the family, members of the Clan Campbell, and cousins, were awarded the title from their submission to Great Britain, and as above stated, have since held it. The original Dunlaps either escaped to Ireland, and from thence to America, or were in hiding in Scotland until they came to America, which, I am informed, they did just at the beginning of the Revolution, and that of them there were five brothers, which corresponds with your account.

My Grandfather was Dr. James Dunlap, for many years a physician of long practice in Philadelphia, especially in the latter portion of his life, during the Yellow Fever epidemic of 1793. He married Juliana Comley and had a large family of sons and daughters, the youngest of whom, Thomas Dunlap my father, was born in the Yellow Fever summer. Dr. James Dunlap was cotemporary with Dr. Physic, the elder Wood, Dr. Francis of New York, and physicians of that period. His brothers went to what was called West and South, and probably were those you named, although I certainly do not know it. I do know there is a strong family resemblance in all their descendants, especially in the children of Mrs. Mary Dunlap with our branch-Miss Maud being the image of a sister of mine, now deceased, and the family resemblance I see in some of the Kerr's Creek Dunlaps as well as in Mrs. Mary Dunlap's husband's portrait.

This is to be noted, as this family is said to have always preserved its facial resemblance, the cousins of the present Duke of Argyle branch, the Marquis of Lorne, Walter Campbell his brother, and other members of the family having remarked it when here.

It is understood that those cousins are Campbells, taking that name from the tribe or clan, when the Dunlaps were attainted of treason for their fidelity to the House of Stuart.

Of the brothers who went South and West I never knew anything except my Father's saying such was the case. Of our branch, vis. that which grew up in Georgia, some of the sons went to Texas, and one particular, afterwards General Dunlap was engaged with Gen. Sam Houston in the revolution which resulted in the independence of Texas and its annexation to the U. States. This General Dunlap was at my Father's house in Philadelphia about 1842 or 1843, as well as I can remember, and then went into all family genealogy, but as I was somewhat younger then than now, I cannot recall it.

My Father had the Argyle Coat of Arms always in use, and proved by the College of Hereldy in Great Britain his right to the same. It consists of a galley or "lymphed" on the shield, surmounted by a scroll with a Boar's Head and the motto, "No obliviscaris", which has been variously construed to mean, never to forget the deeds of your ancestors, never to forget the injury, and never to forget your friends, and may I presume, be taken at will as meaning either. I will endeavor to find and send you a print of this Coat of Arms and Crest, but for myself am prouder of the fact of American Citizenship than of Scottish Nobility, and that my ancestors fought in every war of the U. S. from the Revolution down, and that my Father and myself have kept up the custom. I must ask your pardon for my discursiveness, but in conclusion would say that I believe the Dunlaps of Argyleshire are all one family and rightly heirs of the Dukedom - that the five or six brothers emigrated about the same time and are those you refer to and my Grandfather; and I intend to investigate further and endeavor to get from one of my sisters further information from family records, which I will transmit when received. I like your desire to get all the genealogical history for your child that is possible, and believe if every one would do this, we would have valuable knowledge which is now lost, and as "blood is surely thicker than water", I take great interest in all my "kinfolk".

I would be very much obliged for any further information Miss Kerr may possess, and will endeavor to look up the history of the Kerr family in Scotland further.

With my compliments to your good husband, whom I have the pleasure of knowing, and with the hope in which Mrs. Dunlap joins me, that when you next come to Lexington, you will favor us with a call. I am, Madam,

Very respectfully yours,

Thos. Dunlap

THE VALLEY OF VIRGINIA

Leonard C. Helderman, Ph.D., George Washington Patron of Learning. New York: The Century Company, 1932. 187 pp.

Pp. 96-105.

A Scotch traveller once wrote during his visit to Virginia in 1857:

“I could have fancied myself in Scotland. The hills, the river ((James)), the people, the kirk ... It is strange to find in Virginia united, and yet distinct, the woraces that in old times strove together in our island.”

“The real history of the Valley opens with the migration of the Scotch-Irish. This virile and aggressive race, fleeing from economic and religious conditions in Ulster, sought a friendlier environment in America. Like their brethren in distress, the “poor palatines” of the Rhineland, they entered at Philadelphia, sought the back counties of Pennsylvania, and gradually pushed down the Shenandoah Valley, whose rolling slopes reminded them of the heathered hills of Scotland.

“From 1734, when the enterprising Robert Harper opened his ferry over the Potomac at the Maryland gateway, the Scotch-Irish movement into the Valley continued, until a half-century later men were talking of a James River Company to bring tide-water and back country into contact. Deep in the Valley in 1777 they “laid off a town ...thirteen hundred feet in length and nine hundred in width,” and in the flush of Revolutionary ardour called in Lexington, after the New England village whose fame was ringing throughout the land.

“This sturdy people “quick to think, strong to act, and above all filled with the spirit of enterprise” made ideal frontiersmen in the Valley and “Founders of States in the more distant wilderness beyond.” Wherever they went they fought the Indian on the frontier and smote the “evil doer” among them, with the same quick, nervous energy of a New England puritan. As untamed by a century of Ulster as the Orangemen of North Ireland remain to this day, they had something of the stern spirit of those Scots who swore a covenant in the earlier days - something of the unbending character of ((Rev.)) John Knox who looked upon the face of no man in fear.

What more natural than that this tough race should cause trouble for those who defended things as they were? They grumbled at quit-rents, showed small respect for the gold lace of Philadelphia gentlemen; and indeed, as an agent of William Penn complained, caused him ten times as much trouble as any other people. Even the great proprietor himself spoke of the unknowns who came to America and "with an excess of vanity think nothing taller than themselves but the trees." For this reason the historian of the American frontier has said that "the quality of temper which caused trouble for the proprietors, made also for independence and courage...and in their political activity they showed the result of long training in self-ruling Churches where the Presbyterian order created institutions of representative government."

American democracy and the American character were being born in the back country of the American Colonies. Small wonder, then, that they should be so forward in border warfare and the movement for independence. Small wonder that Andrew Lewis of Augusta should command at Point Pleasant on the far Ohio, and that the raw levies of Campbell and McDowell should appear in force at King's Mountain and thrust Colonel Ferguson headlong from that high place whence he had boasted "all the rebels out of hell" could not drive him.

The rugged simplicity of small farmers was the dominant note in this Valley culture, rather than the cavalier elegance of broad plantations fringing the lower James. Here that plain Jacksonian Democrat Sam Houston was born, to rise in later years from an Indian chief to the presidency of a republic. Here Cyrus ((Field)) McCormick cultivated his hills while with the ingenuity of a Connecticut Yankee he experimented on a reaper to revolutionize agriculture the world around. Slavery even in its palmyest day was never the peculiar institution of the Valley, nor was its social and economic life ever dominated by the hauteur of cotton magnate and plantation system. This was the Cohee section of Virginia, whose tone of life contrasted so sharply with Tuckahoe or old Virginia beyond the mountains - a contrast which struck an observant traveller as late as the summer of 1816.

James K. Paulding, literary associate of Washington Irving, expressed the difference as a debate. The cohee good wife looked askance at the "fine lady of the Tuckahoe, because ... my lady gives herself airs and wears such mighty fine clothes when she goes to the Springs." The elegant lady of the plantation, on the other hand, looked with fine scorn at the plain good wife "industriously mending a pair of breeches," and marveled at the sight of "her daughter pulling flax, or weaving, or turning a great spinning wheel." The farmer and the squire had hot words. The farmer thought that tide-water had too many political privileges, that the Valley should be better represented in the legislature, and that a man was a man for a' that. The squire was of the opinion that property, position, and pedigree rather than numbers should count, and that withal the people of the Valley were a set of "ignorant blockheads."

It was a debate which reverberated in the Valley and on the western border until King Numbers won over King Property and John Letcher of Lexington rose from a carpenter's bench to a governor's mansion. It was a part, also, of the grand debate of American politics which brough Andrew Jackson to the White House and a Harvard doctorate and caused Daniel Webster to apologise for not being born in a log cabin. For these reasons historians have found the origins of American democracy in the up-country.

In this Valley simplicity, however, some observers saw, or thought they saw, a contracted spirit something akin to the sour austerity of the Genevan Calvin. Men had long before observed that the Scots were solemn persons, and their dour tempers had excited the lively satire of Restoration bards, the gibes of Cavaliers, and the heavy wit of Dr. Johnson. The pedantic James Stuart remembered John Knox and angrily recalled "how they used the poor lady my mother ... and how they dealt with me in my minority." But this sapient monarch also observed, without intending to be complimentary, that a Scotch presbytery "agreeth as well with monarchy as God with the devil." And Charles Stuart, the second of the name, remembered their contempt for his philandering and was wont to declare that "presbyterianism was not a religion for gentleman."

Samuel McDowell, of pure Scotch-Irish descent, the veteran of many a war and convention and charter member of the board of Liberty Hall, grew to manhood in the Valley. After the Revolution he moved with the flow of people over the Wilderness Road toward another Lexington, where horses had already become a passion, and amid the gayer tempo of the Kentucky Blue-Grass Region he saw through a different glass. He remembered the Valley folks as persons of exaggerated piety, Scotch clannishness, and a tendency to frown on "innocent amusements."

Another representative of the Blue-Grass, John J. Crittenden, had a warm controversy in the dining-hall of Washington Academy and found that conduct was emphasized as well as learning. Already suspected of fighting a duel and known to have thrown a biscuit at the steward, he ate during the blessing and the shocked steward threatened to slap his face. This young man, with his Kentucky blood now thoroughly aroused, seized "two knives from the table ((and)) went toward him in a menacing manner," vowing that he had rather be "expelled from the Academy, and from heaven than submit." But he was promptly placed on trial before a stern Scotch-Irish board unaware of his future greatness. His defence that had the biscuit been edible it could not have harmed the steward showed a great future as a lawyer. It did not impress his judges, however, and, he was forthwith expelled and finished his education in the more genial environment of William and Mary.

Many years later a lowland Virginian saw the Scotch dourness but no Irish vivacity. To him the cedars of Lexington were "as unsentimental as mathematics," the very streets looked hard, and the grim portals of the Church were "as cold as a dog's nose." Inside houses he sat on uncomfortable but precious antiques. From the walls of tomb-like rooms "solemn engravings of Oliver Cromwell, Stonewall Jackson, and the Rock of Ages" stared sternly at him.

((Thomas)) Woodrow Wilson once told his secretary Joseph Tumulty that he had two sides to his nature - the Scotch with its coldness, its tenacity, and its selfrighteous exclusiveness; and the Irish with its warm generosity and its passionate sympathy for distress. ((Actually, of course, there is no Irish in the Scotch-Irish.)) The world which heard him talk of covenants and saw the unbending Scotchman fight for a new freedom at Washington and a new diplomacy at Paris, seldom saw the limerick-making Irishman quickened into tears at the sight of human misery or the touch of human sympathy. And so it was, no doubt, with his kinsmen of the Valley. These "bold and indigent strangers from Ireland" have always had "a passion for justice." However prosaic they may have been in the creative arts, they have stood out in the fields of public affairs."

DUNLAP

The Dunlaps from northern Ireland came to A. early in 18C. One John Dunlap was Capt. of 1st Troop of Philadelphia Horse. He started the first daily paper in America, "Pennsy Packett". He was a Printer by trade and served as Printer to the Convention in 1774 and was the first to print the Declaration of Independence. He was also printer to first Congress. He was born in Strabane, Ireland--"Men of Progress" (Indiana) by Will Cumback & J. B. Maynard, 1899 Publ. by Indianapolis Sentinel.

Alexander Dunlap M.A. (often meant clerical Dignity but not found as Presby. minister in Ulster) signed petition to Gov. Shure of N. E. in 1718 (322 signers) agreeing to transport self to excellent and renowned Plantation upon obtaining from his Excellency suitable encouragement. Petition brought by Boyd MacFarlane from Worcester. They settled in Coleran, near Worcester in 1738.

Robert Homes, b 1694, mar Mary Franklin, sister of Benjamin, 10/1719, returned to A. from The Scotch-Irish in America by Henry Jones Ford, 1915.

APPENDIX I

The Dunlop (Dunlap) Line, Americana. Somerville: The American Historical Society, Inc., Vol. XIX, October, 1925, No. 4. pp. 553-559.

Dunlop-Dunlap Arms - Argent, an eagle with two heads displayed gyles.

Motton - Merito. (Deservedly).

The surname Dunlop (Dunlap) originated in the estate of Dunlop in Aryshire, Scotland, which is still in the possession of the family.

The first on record is Dom. Gubielmus de Dunlop, who sat on an inquest to settle a dispute between Dom. Godfredus de Ross and the borough of Irvine, in the year of 1260. In 1296, Neil Fitz Robert de Dunlop signed the Ragman Roll. James Dunlop was in possession of Dunlop in 1351. He was succeeded by John de Dunlop who had a charter from Hugh de Blair, dated 1407. From Alexander Dunlop, in the reigns of James I and II of Scotland, the succession is traced to the nineteenth century. James and Alexander are the usual names of the possessors of the estate.

Alexander Dunlop was among the Scots of the Plantation of Ulster, and was living in County Down in 1653, and Adam and Alexander Delap, a common variation of Dunlop, were living in County Antrim at the same date. Dunlop, Delap, Dulap, and Dunlap, all of the same Scotch family, are used almost interchangeably in the early New England records, as well as the ancient archives of Scotland and Ireland, where many of the Scotch branches had removed.

(I) "William Dunlap of Ireland and Sarah Boon late of Great Britain, now in Boston, married Jan. 1, 1813," says the Boston, Massachusetts, records, he being one of the very earliest of the Ulster emigrants to the America colonies. He married (second) as William Delpa, Jane Tompson, September 15, 1726. Hugh Delap, who died in Dedham in October, 1745, aged twenty-seven, may be a son of the first marriage and Brice (or Price) Dunlap, who married at Boston, August 5, 1745, is very probably a son. Children:

1. William, married, Jan. 1, 1740, Rose Jemmerson.

2. George of whom forward.

(II) George Dunlap (also given Dunlop, Delap and Dunlap) from Roxbury, 1775-79, appears on the Boston records furnished by the ministers: "George Dunlap (Delap) and Agnes Carr, married by the Reverend Thomas Prince, April 18, 1745. George Dunlop (Delapp) and Jean (intention, Jane) Harris, of Milton, married, April 17, 1757."

He had Ann, of whom forward.

(III) Ann Dunlap, daughter of George and Agnes (Carr) Dunlap, was born in Boston, October 12, 1748, and died August 4, 1821. She married, April 28, 1769, at Boston, Nathaniel Bradlee.

Dear Art:

The letter will probably arrive a day late but better late than never. Well, Congratulations on your Thirtieth Birthday; seems quite a spell since the day your were born on a cold snowy day in Marietta in 1925, tis true that, time waits on no man. As I now meditate and review the past, it was a great event to us, first the marriage, thence the First Born, a choice which was granted and we were thankfully due. Years have sped by and may we say with a heartily frame of mind, they were all good years and enjoyed by our happy family, there crept in some tension, some sorrow, loss of loved ones, but the good deeds far superceeded any depression, for which we are thankful. So beyond doubt, The All Power, has provided the way through faithful vision and I trust the future will contain more and more good deeds from a good world for ages to come.

Regardless of circumstances, may I send much love and affection to you and your work and I hope all as well as myself are equally proud.

Oft times I have wondered why your good Mother couldn't have stayed with us and been a life witness as she had planned your life that materialized, but as God has ruled she shall view all in His spiritual way without our companionship, and it is well we shouldn't interfere with biased thoughts. But be joyful and thankful.

May your health be such that you always can continue.

Yours most affectionately

"Dad"

DUNLAP

Notes from "A History of Monroe County, West Virginia," by Oren F. Morton, B. Lit. Staunton: McClure Company, Inc., 1916. 510 pp.

p. 9. South of the sources of Dunlap Creek, Peters Mountain takes the place left vacant by the breaking down of the Alleghany Front.

p. 10. Potts Creek precinct is drained by the upper course of Potts Creek, a tributary of Jackson's River. North of the series of saddles running westward from Peters Mountain are Cove and Back creeks and Sweet Springs Run, all which unite to form Dunlap Creek, another tributary of the same river.

p. 18. In many localities in Monroe arrowheads and stone implements are numerously found. There was a flint quarry at the mouth of Stinking Lick and another a few miles east of Peterstown. On the Dunlap farm near the mouth of Hans Creek was once a burial mound. It was about 60 feet across and contained many relics. Among these were sheets of mica that seem to have been used to cover the faces of the dead. An excavation in Union in 1889 for the foundation of the new M. E. Church revealed 14 skulls and at least one complete skeleton. With the bones were found such relics as the Indians are accustomed to deposit in their graves. Many isolated graves have been observed and some of these have been dug into. The Shawnee grave was customarily lined with flat stone and covered with the same. Above it was fashioned a mound of earth and stone.

p. 28. The surveys (1774) along Indian Creek extend from the mouth nearly to the source. The preference given to this locality was not accidental. From Covington all the way to the mouth of this stream was an Indian trail, as good as the bridlepaths by which the settlers came to the mouth of Dunlap. Another circumstance was that Byrnside (James Byrnside, surveyor) had spread the news of this promised land among his friends on the Cowpasture and Bull pasture

p. 39. McCLENAHAN. Captain McClenahan, commanding one of the Greenbrier companies, was mortally wounded at the battle of Point Pleasant, 1774.

p. 69. JAMES HANNA was a member of the Grand Jury, in May of 1781, county of

p. 85. NICHOLAS HANNA, listed in Surveys and Patents, 1050, Brushy of Second Creek, 8 miles from Sweet Springs, 1787.

p. 113. CAPTAIN JOSEPH HANNA, JAMES HANNA (commissioner of the public tax), were from Greenbrier County concerning the division of Greenbrier County 1799.

p. 142. Abstracts from the County Record-Books, Order-Book, Sweet Springs District County.: 1800 - Thomas Fife and Robert Rowe to judge work on courthouse. If they do not agree, Alexander Dunlap to act as umpire, his decision being final.

p. 143. 1803.- Order for clerk's office; to be 14 by 16 feet in the clear, built of stone and fireproof. Plans to be made by Alexander Dunlap and John Hutchinson.

p. 146. 1830 - James Dunlap ordered to build porch to courthouse.

p. 153. In August, 1863, General Averill with his Federal cavalry started from Winchester and raided up Dunlap Creek as far as Callaghan's. All the saltpeter works within reach were destroyed. He reconnoitered toward Sweet Spring, but at 4; A.M., in the morning of the 26th, he moved toward White Sulphur, intending to seize the law library belonging to the Court of Appeals at Lewisburg, so that it might be used in the river counties of the state.

p. 193. Alexander Dunlap voted in the election of April 1, 1802 for the overseer of the poor.

p. 195. The first tavern license was granted to Patrick Boyd in 1800. Robert and James Dunlap in 1824.

p. 202. Sweet Springs is the oldest, most permanent, and most interesting of the watering places of Monroe. James Moss, said to have been the first settler on the upper course of Dunlap, reared his cabin about 1760 near the mineral spring.

p. 210. Dunlap Campbell a brother of T. S. Campbell - Red Sulphur Springs.

p. 215. Alexander Dunlap, was a citizen of Monroe who was authorised with others to open subscription books in order to build a canal across the Alleghanies. This was futile but it shows a determination to secure a better commercial thoroughfare. A more practical plan was the incorporation in 1817 of a turnpike company to build a road from the mouth of Dunlap to the Great Falls of the Kanawha.

p. 216. The Newburn and Red Sulphur Turnpike was incorporated in 1836, not required to sand or gravel its road-bed, and was permitted a grade of five degrees. In 1840 it was revived and given two more years. The incorporation of the Red Sulphur and Blue Sulphur Turnpike came also in 1836. The capital was $ 12,500 in 250 shares. The commissioners for Red Sulphur were James A. Dunlap, James Harvey, John H. Vawter, William Adair, Jr., and Thomas Fowler, or any three of them.

p. 245. In 1836, James A. Dunlap, school commissioner, was directed by special law to pay over all moneys received since March 7, 1826, for the purpose of rebuilding the academy.

p. 246. In 1826, James A. Dunlap, as treasurer of the board, held in his custody $2,571.10 in school funds.

p. 249. Union Academy was incorporated Jan. 27, 1820. One of the trustees named in the Act of Assembly, and who had power to fill vacancies in their board was Alexander Dunlap.

p. 266. In the Militia System of Colonial Virginia. The ensign, a commissioned officer having charge of the colours and ranking below a lieutenant, was dispensed with after the war of 1812. Alexander Dunlap, an Ensign, under J. Byrnside, 1799.

p. 265. James Alexander was a Lt. of Cavalry in 1798; Michael Alexander was a Capt. in place of Nimrod Tackett in 1803. Andrew Alexander was a Capt. in place of M. Alecander 1815, resigned 1818.

p. 266. Lt. Henry Erskine, resigned in 1815. Capt. Michael Erskine, in place of James Meadows, 1824.

p. 289. List of Scotch names in Monroe County: Alexander, Dunlap, Erskine, Graham, Jarrell, etc.

p. 487. Benjamin G. Dunlap signed a petition of 1852 addressed to legislature of Virginia.

p. 481. Residents of 1799 in Monroe County. It is to be remembered that in 1799 Monroe did not extend into the Valleys of Potts and Dunlap Creeks. Alexander Dunlap (1 S) One slave.

p. 467. Sherrifs: 1818 - Alexander Dunlap. Deputys: Robert Dunlap, James Dunlap. 1820 - D. Robert Dunlap. 1823 - D. Robert and James Dunlap. 1835 - D. Addison Dunlap. 1837 - D. Alex. Dunlap, Jr. 1841 - D. Addison Dunlap and Alex Dunlap. 1845 - D. Addison Dunlap.

p. 464. Monroe County Justices - Appointed. Robert Dunlap, 1828. James A. Dunlap, 1840. William Erskine, 1845. James Alexander, 1799.

p. 462. Delegates from Monroe to Virginia Assembly. 1823-1826: Wm. Vass and

p. 438. Confederate Soldiers: Addison Dunlap, Thurmond's Rangers; Charles H. Dunlap, Thurmond's Rangers, 2nd Sergeant; Henry Dunlap, Bryan's Battery, Pulaski County, Va; R. A. Dunlap, Bryan's Battery, Red Sulphur, West Va.; W. A. Dunlap, Bryan's Battery.

p. 423. Charles H. Dunlap was a third lieutenant, in Lowry's Battery, which left Greenville, then Centerville, in June of 1861. The company was attached to the 13th Battalion of Light Artillery. It disbanded at Christiansburg, a few days after the surrender of General Robert E. Lee, April, 1865, the men were eulogised by General Echols for their bravery and faithfulness, and were told to be good and obedient citizens after their return home.

Genealogic and Biographic Data:

p. 421. ISABELLA E. DUNLAP. She married in 1847 Joseph Zoll (b. 1820) son of William Zoll (1783-1857) who married Jane E. Mr. Morton in his work says: "In the public life of Monroe and in professional and business careers the members of this connexion have been conspicuous."
p. 300. ALEXANDER.

This family was the first to settle where the county seat was established. Owing also to is intermarriages with other leading families of Monroe, the Alexander connexion has been very prominent in local annals. James, Sr., who lived in Beverly Manor, is mentioned there as early as 1746 and was a captain in the Old French war. James, Jr., (1750-1814) visited this region before his settlement in 1773. He located on land which he understood was to be conveyed by a man from Penna., but that personage failed to appear. His first house was built on the hill just east of Union. The second year he started for the Valley, and from the summit of a knob the couple saw their cabin in flames. It was the year of the Dunmore war. The second house was build on what became the main street of Union, and third "Old Hundred," was low down on the western slope of Green Hill. It was afterward the home of Matthew Alexander, and was burned before 1907. The cemetery at the top of the knob is on land granted by the pioneer. He was a member of the Greenbrier Court in 1784 and was sherriff in 1793. Two years before Union was founded he took out a tavern license. His wife was Isabella Erskine of Scottish descent.

Children:

1. Andrew Alexander (1773-), married Phoebe Bracken in 1805.
2. Jane Alexander (1775-), married Alexander Dunlap 1764-1841).
3. Catharine Alexander (1776-), married Richard Shanklin.
4. Matthew Alexander (1777-1825), married Elisabeth J. Marshall.
5. Michael Alexander (1779-1857), married Mary Benson in 1801.
6. Henry Alexander (1782-1866), married Elisabeth Cathron, and second Frances P. Burrell.
7. Elisabeth Alexander, married John Byrnside.
8. Mary Alexander, married Henley Chapman.

(Jane, Catharine, Henry, and Michael had each a James, and by will each of these grandsons had a legacy of $ 50.00.)

Michael (1779-1857). M. May Benson in 1801.

John E. Alexander, married Jane Miller.

Michael C. Alexander, married Sarah MacFadden.

Rev. William M. Alexander, D.D. was born in Union in 1861. He was graduated from the Washington and Lee University in 1884 and from Union Theological Seminary in 1887. He was chosen Moderator of the 55th General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church and was well qualified for such a position.

p. 191. When Monroe County was organised it had nearly 4000 people and not even a village. About a mile from the courthouse to the south James Byrnside had made a home about 1762. In 1774, James Alexander, then a young man of 22, built a cabin a little north of the town. He soon sold a part of his land to Michael Erskine. But so late as 1799 there does not appear to have been any dwelling within the present town limits except that of Alexander himself. That the farm became a town was solely because it was chosen for the seat of government of the new county. On the second day of the first term of the Monroe court, Alexander entered into a bond to convey one acre as a courthouse lot and ten acres adjoining as a town site. The bond was made out in favour of Williams Haynes, John Gray, John Byrnside, James Handley, and James Alexander, acting as town trustees. The sherriff was then ordered to letout the building of a log courthouse and a stone jail.

p. 193. In 1806 James Alexander deeded one acre for a courthouse lot and 25 acres for a town site, so long as the ground should be used for such purposes.

APPENDIX P

COPY OF DEED MADE BY THOMAS DAVIS AND SARAH MEANS DAVIS HEIRS.*

"This deed made the 26th day of February, 1877, between James W. Davis and Sarah Davis, his wife, Thomas Davis, Liona Davis, Harriett Davis, Elijah Midkiff and Minerva Davis Midkiff, John Ballard and Jane Davis Ballard, Franklin and Sarah Davis Dunlap,  Benjamin Callahan Davis and Ruth Davis, his wife all parties of the first part, and Nicholas Dunlap of the second part Witnesseth: that the said parties of the first part for and in consideration of one dollar in hand paid, receipt of which is hereby acknowledged do grant unto the party of the second part all their rights, title and interest in and to all the lands of which Thomas Davis (deceased) siezed or possessed, situate lying or being on the waters of Davis Creek, County of Kanawha, State of West Virginia, containing three hundred acres more or less. The said James W. Davis, Thomas Davis, Liona Davis, Harriett Davis, Minerva Davis Midkiff, Jane Davis Ballard, Sarah Dunlap and Callahan Davis, being children and heirs at law of the said Thomas Davis (deceased) and the parties of the first part covenant with the party of the second part that they will warrent generally the property hereby conveyed.

Witness the following witness and seal:

James W. Davis and Sarah Means Davis his wife:
also first cousin.

Thomas Davis, Liona Davis, Harriett Davis, Elijah
Midkiff and Minerva Davis Midkiff, Benjamin Callahan Davis and Ruth Davis his wife.

Jane Davis Ballard and John Ballard.

Recorded in deed book No. 32, Page 350 March 3rd, 1877

(signed) Joel S. Quarrier, Clerk"

* Copied from Deed Book Number 32, Page 350, March 3, 1877, by Arthur Buell Davis of South Charleston, West Virginia, for the author in July of 1956.

 See pages 305, 307, 308.

From the records of Arthur Buell Davis of South Charleston, West Virginia, in a letter to the author, dated July 11, 1956:

Jane Davis was married to John Ballard, August 22, 1855.

Medora Davis was married to Lewis Bays, December 14, 1848.

Sarah Davis was married to ((Franklin)) Francis Dunlap, May 4, 1859.

James W. (Uncle Jim) Davis and his cousin Sarah Means, ages 23 and 21, were married March 9, 1860.

John Means (Cleaver John), youngest brother of Sarah Means Davis, married to Martha Clark, September 16, 1849.

Annaiias Means was married to Mary Jane Mallory, May 23, 1860.

Liona Davis was married to George Stevens in 1877.

Benjamin C. Davis, 24, and Ruth Craley, 19, were married August 24, 1865.

John R. Means (father unknown to me), 26, married, March 15, 1865, Caroline Dunlap.

"Cousin Arthur: Here is an exact copy of deed made by the heirs of Thomas Davis in 1877. Grandfather must have died or was killed in the fall of 1876 as the deed was made in February, 1877. I am sending you the picture of your great-great-grandmother, Sarah Means Davis, probably taken about 1875. It shows good except for the breaks in the tintype it was made from.

I looked through the book you mentioned* and it shows only the Tom Davis who owned the land at the mouth of Davis Creek in 1794. He was from Lincoln County, Kentucky, as shown in the deed book and gave another Davis here in Charleston the Power of Attorney to transact all his business here. He seemed to have had several land grants from the governor of Virginia as stated in the power of attorney.

There is no record that will connect him up with Grandfather L. Thomas Davis although it is possible he may have been related in some way. . . .

Respectfully yours,

(signed) A. B. Davis" **
