THE DWELLY FAMILY.

COMPENDIUM OF NOTES.

THE object in issuing this compendium is to bring before the notice of all interested in the subject an exact statement of all I know concerning the family, and by its absence what information I still require, for it would be very difficult to compile a satisfactory history from such meagre details as I yet possess.

Whenever I write to persons likely to be able to assist me with more information their first enquiry is of course as to the extent of the facts I have gleaned and what field I have covered in my researches. It is thus plainly to our mutual advantage that all these facts be printed. This course also tends to preserve the references to where full information may be found, and in the event of my proposed history not being able to appear, which I hope will not be the case, a future author, if such should appear, will be able to commence where I have left off, and so save the overlapping inevitable in such cases.

I shall be extremely obliged to my readers for any information about the Dwelly family not in the following pages. I especially want to know—

1 Meaning and origin of the name Dwelly?
2 Any ancestors of John Dwelly who was living at Kelston, near Bath in 1743. Where did he and they come from?

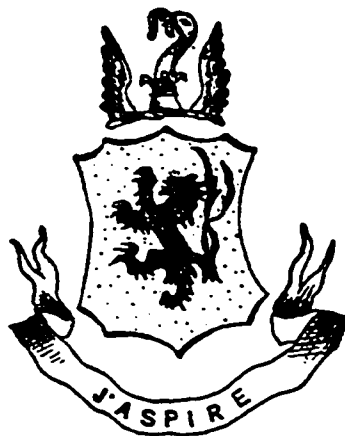

3 Connecting links to join up some of the chart pedigrees given herewith, and so make it possible for me to trace all living Dwellys to a common ancestor.

4 Birthplace and parents' names of Charlotte Lucas,

(whose name is entered as Lucas in her husband's handwriting in our family bible and in the War Office records, but Luckey in marriage register) who married Qr. Mr. Thomas Dwelly, Coldstream Guards, 25 June 1803 at St. George's Hanover Square, London.

5 Ancestry of Lt. & Adj. Robert Dorrell, 4th. Foot, killed at Guadelope, 1758.

There is a family tradition of the descent of the Dwellys from the baronial family of De Welles, and for a hundred years at least, this tradition has been regarded by us as a fact that could be easily proved and three generations have used the De Welles crest.* Up to the present I have neither been able to corroborate nor disprove the connection between the two names. I append the full arms of De Welles, so that if any Dwelly should happen to possess a seal, piece of plate, &c. bearing it, a clue might possibly be found to assist further research.

While pursuing my enquiries, I discovered an ancient deed in the Public Record Office, London, with seal complete, a most artistic gem to the genealogical antiquary, which I hope to reproduce in my history. It is about 1260, and the device on the seal is a bird flying and looking backwards.

I have just completed my index to the Somerset marriage registers published by Phillimore & Co., (except vols. 9 & 10 which I hope to start shortly,) and I shall be prepared to exchange two references of any surname for every reference of the name of Dwelly that is new to me.

* This was before the time when stationers began to "find" crests for anyone to order.

THE NAME DWELLY.

The first undisputed use of Dwelly as a surname I have come across is John Duelye, mentioned in Close Roll, 1229.

The cases of Roger de Doueliz or de Duuelie show from the de that Duuelie was simply the place-name Dowlish Wake, given in Domesday as Douelis.

It is quite possible, even probable, that the descendants of Roger and the other de D.'s if any, were called after their birthplaces, or some other place they were well known to be connected with. Fixed surnames were very rare at that early date.

Bardsley says D'Oyly is probably derived from Ouilli-de-Bassett in the canton of Falaise—written Oillei in the 11th. century—where the family originated. He does not give Dwelly under any of its modern spellings, although it appears in the Hundred Rolls, and he quotes them frequently under other names.

Albert Welles, the author of "History of the Welles family," published in New York in 1876, derives the names Welles, D'Oyley, &c. from the above mentioned Ouilli. D'Ouilli seems to me more like Dwelly than any of the others.

American members of the Family.

Most of the information about members of the family in America has been obtained from the genealogical notes compiled by Hon. Jedediah Dwelley, Hanover, Mass., for the History of the town of Hanover, pub. in 1910.

Mrs. Woodman, Fall River, and Mr. W. H. Dwelly of Boston, have also given considerable assistance.

Abner Dwele (1700—1732.) At the first important Annual town meeting of Hanover, held 2 Mar. 1727, he is mentioned as one of two drivers, and as one of a building committee of three who were to let out the meeting-house to build. It was to be 48ft. long, 38ft. wide, and 19ft. high between the joists, and to be completed by Oct. 1, 1728. He appears as Abner Dwelly at the time of the incorporation of the town. He was a selectman in 1730 and 1731. He died in 1732 by falling from a load of hay, his wife having predeceased him. He probably built the house on Elm Street, near Broadway, Hanover, now owned by L. Vernon Briggs, M.D. He made a non-cupative will in which he provided that the widow Bristow should have enough to purchase her a mourning gown.

Abner Dwelly (1733—1803) His children given in chart, but do not know if they are by 1st. or 2nd. wife. This family moved first to Western Mass., and later to Washington co. N.Y. Descendants numerous. Shall be glad to hear from any of them. He served in Revolutionary war; can details of his services be had? Lieut. Abner Dwellie's co. Mass. Bay Militia exped. to Manchester pd. Dec. 19, 1777, is mentioned in Cleveland Family, 1899, p. 2271.

Abner Dwelley, (1758—1826) Served in Revolutionary war. Details of services wanted.

Avis Dwelley, d. at Hanover, 1831, aged 90.

Benjamin Dwelley. Mentioned as one of the shipcarpenters employed in building the brig Dedalus in 1800, and the ship Garland in 1801, also in building the brig Fame and the ship Fame in 1801. Uncle to Capt. Nathan Dwelley and great uncle to Robert E. Dwelley of Hanover. (see History of Shipbuilding on North River, Boston, 1889, Briggs.)

Chas. H. Dwelley (b. 1842) Resides in house on Union st., built about 1730 by Joseph Curtis.

Daniel & Deborah Dwella, mentioned as father and mother of Elizabeth Graham b. Canajoharie, N. Y., Oct. 12. 1799, d. at Jackson, June 27, 1886, who m. David Cleveland (d. 1851) at Hebron, N.Y., Dec 28-9, 1820.—Cleveland Family.

Geo. C. Dwelley. joined the army for three years for service in the Civil War in 1861.

George Russell Dwelley, (1829—1907) Resided at and died in Arlington, Mass. He was a graduate of Harvard College in 1853 in the same class as President Eliot, and wrote a poem for the celebration. Was Town clerk & Town treasurer in 1857. Served on School Committee in 1857 & 1859. His life work was that of a High-school teacher and School Superintendent. Author of "a tribute to the Hanover Academy."

Hosea Dwelley enlisted for three months' service in Civil War, 1861.

James H. Dwelly about 1812 owned a house near the second dam erected by Mr. Reed above the mouth of Rocky Run Brook.

Jedediah Dwelley (b. 1698) resided at corner of Green and Pine Streets in what is now Norwell.

Jedediah Dwelley, Scituate, (b. 1737, m. 1763) was a soldier in the French war. Details of services wanted.

Hon. Jedediah Dwelly, (b. Feb. 28, 1834 in Hanover where he has always lived.) Educated in the public schools and at the Hanover Academy. At the age of 25 he was chosen selectman of his native town, and served in that capacity for 30 years. During the Rebellion he was Chairman of the Selectmen, the youngest chairman in the State. For 12 years he was a member of the school committee and was such when the high school was started. He was one of the committee under whose direction the present town hall was built. For nine or ten years he was special County Commissioner, and County Commissioner for 27 years, the greater portion of that time being the chairman of the board. Under his official care the Plymouth Court House was enlarged and remodelled, the jail built, the Brockton Court House built, and more roads and bridges built than under any man who ever held the office. He was a member of the several boards of commissioners to build, start and foster the Truant school at Walpole, for the counties of Norfolk, Plymouth and Bristol. He was representative to the General Court in 1865 and senator from this district in 1873 and 1874. No man who has lived in the town has been so long and so intimately connected with all that is best for the town and its interests. —History of the town of Hanover.

Capt. John and Hannah Dwelly mentioned as parents of Hannah Reade b. & d. at West Baylestone, Mass., who married as his first wife Laton (or Lotan) Cleveland at W. B., Mar. 27, 1823. He died at W.B. Aug. 28, 1875, aged 78—Cleveland family, i, p. 817.

John Dwelley (1693-4—1743) resided in Scituate. Father and 4 children died the same year.

Joseph S. Dwelley enlisted July 18, 1864 for one year's service in Civil war.

Joseph Dwelley (1813—1868) resided on Main st. Hanover in the house constructed by himself and now occupied by his grandson, J. Howard Brooks.

Joshua Dwelley of Tiverton (died c. 1759); his wife Elizabeth died c. 1771.

Joshua Dwelley (1735—1761) resided in Hanover, first on Hanover street on Woodward Hill, then on corner of Main and Union streets. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Details of his services required.

Joshua Dwelley purchased a house (about 1763) at corner of Main and Union streets, probably built about 1715 by Benjamin Curtis. He and his descendants have owned it to the present time.

Joshua Dwelley (1766—1847) resided in Hanover on Union street, where John H. Dwelley now resides; his children were born in Hanover.

Joshua Dwelley junr. was employed in 1826 to construct a town house "31 feet wide, 39 feet long and 11 feet between the joists."

Joshua and Deborah Dwelley mentioned as parents of Ruth Ann Baker, born at Salisbury, N.Y. Aug. 30, 1828, who married Ira Cleveland, Dec. 4, 1854—Cleveland family vol. iii, p. 2005.

Lemuel Dwelley (1764—1846) was for many years connected with the Curtis forge and associated with Geo. Curtis in the anchor industry ; he sold his interest to Curtis in 1839. Selectman 1827—4831. One of the committee chosen in 1823 to consider the subject of a poorhouse.

Lemuel Dwelley of Hanover married Ruth daughter of Benjamin Bailey (born about 1800)—Bailey genealogy.

Mrs. Mary Dwelley. In the early history of Hanover nearly all the clothing was made from the wool sheared from the sheep or the flax of the farmer's own growing. The author of the History of the town of Hanover remembers when Mrs. Mary Dwelley spun the yarn and wove the cloth which she made into a dress wearing the same for years.

Dr. Melzer Dwelley of Ashburnham, moved with his wife to Hanover in 1797 to the house on Hanover street now occupied by Alpheus N. Chamberlain, where he died. He practised medicine here until his death, Nov. 20, 1828, at the age of 57. His skilful services were in great demand for miles around. He is said to have left descendants in South Boston and Ashburnham. I shall be pleased to hear any new facts from or about any of these.

Captain Nathan Dwelley (1797—1882) was captain of the Hanover Rifle Co. for a time and resided in a house that stood on the location of "Hotel Josselyn." The Company was formed about 1816, and formed part of 2nd. regt. 1st. brig., 5th. div., Mass. militia.

Percy W. Dwelley lives in his father's house on Union street, built about 1730 by Joseph Curtis, and purchased by his ancestor Lemuel Dwelley.

Pearce Dwelley, whose wife was named Rose, was living in Tiverton in 1802, and later at Sloansville, Scholarioe co., N.Y.

Richard Dwelley probably came from England with his father John, was in Lancaster, Mass. in 1654 and in Hingham about 1660. He went to Scituate in 1665, and his farm was on the road leading from the Third Herring brook to the harbour, about a mile north of the former. He resided in the house formerly owned by Capt. Seth Foster, but now owned by Henry D. Smith, which house he probably constructed. He was a soldier in King Phillip's war (an Indian war) in 1676, and received a grant of land for his services between Comet's mill and the Plymouth road. He had a meadow at Till's Creek, which is subsequently known as "Dwelley's creek." He died May 27, 1692.

Richard Dwelley (born 1659-60) Winsor's History of Duxbury 1849 incorrectly gives Elizabeth Simmons as 2nd wife of this Richard instead of his father.

Richard Dwelley of Scituate left certain lands to his sons Joshua and Samuel adjoining the land of John Dwelley. A document dated 29 Jan. 1712, in possession of Mrs C.B. Woodman, Fall River, speaks of said Richard Dwelley as "late deceased." Joshua was living in Swanzey, (a few miles from Fall River (on opposite side of the Taunton river) in 1712. Another deed, also in possession of Mrs. W., records a transfer of land in Swanzey from one John Alger, a blacksmith, for the sum of £30 to Joshua Dwelley, Aug. 25, 1713. He moved later to Tiverton.

Richard Dwelley, great grandfather of Mrs. C.B. Woodman, Fall River, was a resident of Tiverton as late as Aug. 1, 1791, and died in Maulins, N.Y. He was a constable in Tiverton in 1784.

Richard Dwelley appears in 1666 in a list of constables for Duxbury—Winsor, p. 81.

Robert E. Dwelley (born 1825) Resides on Broadway, Hanover, near the Corners in house constructed by himself where Alonzo N. Josselyn has kept a hotel for the last 12 years. He celebrated the 60th. anniversary of his wedding in July, 1908.

Samuel Dwelle (born about 1729) of Sunderland in 1757, was in Deerfield, Mass. as early as 1770. He held 9 lots in the division of Conway, containing over 1,300 acres. He died in Con. 1816, married in Canton, Elizabeth, daughter of Stephen Billings. A "widow Dwelley" who died Mar. 1800, aged 92, was probably mother of Samuel. —History of Deerfield, Sheldon, 1896, vol. 2, p. 2.

Sarah J. Dwelly died 1893, aged 87.

William Dwelley lived in Hanover, Mass., near the junction of Elm street with Broadway in 1748.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES

which might possibly supply clues to further information.

Kidwelly was the surname of a few persons residing in Wiltshire in the 15th. and 16th. centuries, having a goat's head for their crest, and no doubt taking their name from a place in Caermarthenshire, but I have not been able to find any connection between either this castle, town or surname and Dwelly or DeWelles.

Welleys, Waleys, Wallis, Walsh, Welsh, Welch, Walls' &c. were names used by several families in S. Wales from the 13th. to the 15th. cent. They are different forms of one name, and mean foreigner.

The name Duuelie as written in old charters, would doubtless be frequently transcribed Duzelie, which would introduce a number of new forms with a very slight alteration in sound or spelling, among others Develie and Devile. If the forms Dewell, Duell, Dewall, Devyll, de Daivill, Wele, Welly, Wellys, &c. are the same name, I have many notes connected with them.

The place-name Dowlais, Monmouthshire, has been written Dowlas, Diueleys, Dyueleys and Byueleys

There is a place-name Dowally in Ireland, which probably has the same derivation as Dowally Perthshire, dubh-alla, black rock.

D' Evile lived in Yorkshire in 16th. century.

Sir John Deyvile was at Battle of Boroughbridge, 1322. It is spelt De euyle in original roll. His arms were a lion rampant on groundwork of fleurs-de-lis, and there may be a relationship to De Welles, or a connection between them and De Welles. Sir John Deyvill, at battle of Falkirk, 1298, had arms with a number of fleurs-de-lis in its composition and may have been related to the last.

Ansele Deyvile (De Vile) is in Hen, III. Roll.

Domesday for Somerset mentions Geoffrey de Valle, and Walter de Dowai.

William Douvile or D' Ovile and Hugh D' Ovile are mentioned by Collinson in 26 Edw. I. and 19 Edw. II., in connection with Christon, Somerset.

Robert Dolle nominated as one of the Attorneys of England of Nicholas, Abbot of Mont St. Michael in Normandy, Nov. 20, 1335. Pat. Roll, 9 Edw. III. m. 15, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

The curious surname of Doel evidently a corruption or De Dourle, which is found in an old Malmesbury deed. Probably also the Doels are connected with the ancient family of Dewell or De Wale, possessors of property in Bremelham during the 14th. and 15th. centuries. Roger Dewell was a yeoman in Norton Bavent, 1609—Guppy's Homes of Family Names.

John de Vallibus (or Vaux) was interested in Thurlestone (Suff) in 16 Edw. I. and held a manor and certain fees and lands there. Was he connected with the E., N. and R. Duelle who sold land in Thurleston, see p. 5, above?

Albert Welles, author of "the History of the Welles family" says—Euille or Welles bore the same arms with slight variations and bears the same analogy to the discerning eye. The name ramifies in many directions—Valibus, Welles, Lee, Millburn, Molbeck, Mollineux (or Miller,) D'Everaux, Wassa, Washbourn (afterwards Washington,) Burn, Hurtburn, Heburn, Waterton, Waters, Beck, &c.

One ancestor of the Welles family was named Everaux or Euille (a spring or water) in Normandy and originated also the root of Vernon (from ver, a spring) Richard de Welles or Euille took the name of Welles in England.

The Roll of Battle Abbey contains the name of this ancestor of the Welles family "R. de Euille." Everaux has the precise meaning of Euille or Welles, the name of the family of Hartburn, Durham, and that of the Warwickshire family Wyllys. The origin of the Welles family of Lincolnshire, barons by summons to Parliament, was in the Vaux (Baux, Bayeux or de Vallibus) family of France. It was founded in England after the Conquest by Harold de Vaux (a near connection of William the Conqueror) and his three sons, Barons Hubert, Ranulph and Robert, who were all surnamed de Vallibus. The descent is through the younger son Robert, whose grandson William had four sons, Robert de Dalston, baron, Adam and William de Welles, Lincolnshire 1194, and Oliver de Vallibus, prior of Pentney Abbey.

So far, I have not been able to find definite authorities for above statements. Can any reader oblige? Mr A. Welles' MSS. were dispersed at his death in America some years ago, and I have been quite unable to trace any of them although most anxious to do so. It is quite possible if any of them could be recovered that authorities for some of the statements made might be found marked on them. Any information as to their whereabouts will be gladly received.
