OF THE FAMILY OF

BENJAMIN DU BOIS,

OF CATSKILL, NEW YORK.

BEING AN ADDITION TO THE

HISTORY OF THE DESCENDANTS OF LOUIS AND JACQUES DU BOIS,

AS GIVEN AT THE BI-CENTENARY REUNION

HELD AT NEW PALTZ, ULSTER COUNTY, N. Y. 1875.

PRESS OF PETER ECKLER,

PREFACE.

SINCE the printing of the "DU BOIS REUNION," comprising the papers read at New Paltz, August, 1875, and other additional papers relating to the Du Bois Family, a desire has been felt by some of the descendants of BENJAMIN DU BOIS to print the Titles and Conveyances of his landed estate at Catskill.

These documents possess considerable local and family interest, and being printed in uniform size and type with the "Reunion," can be readily preserved along with it.

To make the line of Wills complete for the whole period the family has been in America, the wills of Louis, the first settler, and of his son Solomon, through whom the Catskill branch descends, are also given.

In copying these wills and deeds and transcribing church records of our history, we have endeavored to copy verbatim et literatim, believing that veritable transcripts from the originals, with all the old peculiarities of expression and varied styles of spelling, would be preferable to amended copies made in accordance with the rules of modern orthography. In spelling the name "Du Bois," for instance, it will be observed that it is spelled quite differently as it occurs in different places in the same document, and it will also be noticed that Huybartus Du Bois, who signs his name correctly in some places, uses "his mark" in others. Capital letters also are often introduced where they do not properly belong, and sometimes they are omitted where they should have been employed. In some cases words are missing, but the sense will readily supply the deficiency. No effort has been made to correct or amend in any particular, but to give true counterparts of the original records.

The Genealogy is made as complete in names and dates as our present information allows, some items of personal history being added. It is, however, still imperfect, and any corrections or additions would be gladly received by the compilers. Such as it is, we hope it may prove acceptable to the Family, and awaken among us a desire to perpetuate the memory and imitate the virtues of those from whom we are descended.

I give & devise unto Each of my daughters Rachel and Helena, the sum of $500, to be paid to them, their respective Executors, Administrators, by my Executors herein after named, (and of the monies which I have rec'd & which is yet due me from Benj. Van Orden for lands which I have lately sold unto him,) but I shall hereafter, before my decease, give or cause to be given unto my said daughters Rachel & Helena, or to any of them, any sum or sums of money ; in such a case it shall be considered as so much paid of the moneys given & divided to them, & shall be deducted from the several sums given to them, or Either of them, by this my last will & Testament.

Lastly, I do hereby Constitute and appoint my Son in law Michael Phillips, and my friend Samuel Van Vechten, Executors of this my last will, hereby revoking all other wills and Testaments by me heretofore made.

Signed, sealed, and published by the within named Huybartus Dubois, the testator, as for his last will and testament, in the presence of us, who at the request and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our several names as witnesses.

DESCENDANTS OF BENJAMIN DU BOIS,

OF CATSKILL, GREENE CO., N. Y.

EXPLANATION.—The Generations are numbered from the first which settled in America, and also from the first which settled at Catskill. In order to distinguish persons of the same name from one another, and also to furnish means to trace ancestry and posterity, a number is applied to each DuBois at the record of birth. These numbers are continuous throughout, and from Benjamin (3) downward, they run through the successive generations. The order of the families is fixed by the order in which the names of sons having issue occur in the record of the previous generation. A little attention will enable any one to trace the line of either ancestors or descendants. Descendants of other names are given as far as known directly in connection with the name of the female from whom they spring.

1. LOUIS DuBois, the first of the family in America, was the son of Cretian or Christian DuBois, and was descended from a Huguenot family in the province of Artois, (now know as the "Department of Pas du-Calais,") France. Louis was born at Wicres near Lille, Oct. 27, 1626. He left France, whose laws were inimical to the free enjoyment of his protestant faith, taking refuge in Mannheim, Germany, where Oct. 10, 1655, he married Catherine Blanshan, and in 1660, along with his wife and two young children, Abraham and Isaac, immigrated to this country. He lived at Hurley near Kingston, N. Y., until 1677 when he removed to New Paltz, N. Y., as leader of a colony of Huguenot settlers. He returned from New Paltz to Kingston about 1687, and died there 1695. He was the father of ten children, seven sons and three daughters. (See his Life and Times in "Reunion.")

2. SOLOMON DuBois was the fifth son of Louis, b. 1669, d.

1759. He acquired a large landed estate in New Paltz, and also at Perkiomen, Penn., and at Catskill, New York. He married Treintje Gerretsen and was the father of eight children, four sons and four daughters.

3. BENJAMIN DuBois was the third child and second son of Solomon ; born at New Paltz ; baptised by Rev. Johannes Petrus Nucella at Kingston, N. Y., May 16, 1697 ; witnesses Gerret Wynkoop and Hilletje Gerretson ; died at Catskill 1767. Married by Rev. Petrus Vas, Sunday, March 30, 1721 to Catharine Suylant or Seiland, of Hurley, N. Y., bap. at Kingston, Apr. 8, 1696, by a transient French minister. Benjamin settled at Catskill, about 1727, we do not know the exact date. The homestead was on the west bank of the Catskill, a short distance above the toll bridge. His family was intimate with that of William Loveridge, and tradition says that they intermarried, but we have no evidence to establish its correctness. Benjamin's residence was a well known locality, and is referred to in old deeds locating property on the opposite side of the creek : certain lands or corners were said to be opposite, or above, or below the house of Benjamin DuBois. My great Uncle, John DuBois at the Point, was a lad some seven years old at his grandfather Benjamin's death, and remembered him distinctly. I once asked Uncle, how Benjamin appeared ? and was told that he was, perhaps, a little less than average height and weight, and of active and energetic habit. He was all his life a subject of the English government, and no doubt a loyal subject, as he was a well known and respected gentleman. He was an earnest churchman, and probably more a Dutchman than a Frenchman. His mother and his wife were pure Dutch, and they changed the family tongue, probably, though they could not change the family traditions. My great uncle, John DuBois, would often lament the neglect of "our mother tongue," meaning the Dutch, and when reminded that we were of French, not Dutch descent, he seemed hardly to comprehend the words, so thoroughly had the mother's influence made itself felt. We may suppose that in early life Benjamin could use the French, but we have no evidence in the matter. Some further notices of him may be found in the "Du Bois Reunion."

4. SARA, Baptised by Rev. P. Vas at Kingston, Jan. 11, 1722. Witnesses Guylben Suylant and Zara Crispel. Married by Rev. G. W. Mancius, April 4, 1743, to Christian Overbaugh. Issue.

I. PETRUS OVERBAUGH, bap. by Dom. Mancius, Feb. 12, 1744. Wits. Jerry Overbach and Maria Overbach. (K. R.)

II. BENJAMIN OVERBAUGH, bap. Dec. 26, 1748. Wits. Benjamin DuBois and Catharyntje Seiland. (S. R.)

III. CATHREYNTJE OVERBAUGH, bap. Dec. 8, 1753. Wits. Huybartus DuBois and Cornelia Hallenbeck. (O. C. R.)

5. SOLOMON, bap. by Rev. P. Vas, Kingston, Feb. 23, 1724. Witnesses Solomon DuBois and Treintje DuBois. M. Sept. 27, 1749, Margaret Sammons of Ulster Co., N. Y. (K. R.) Died before July 4, 1760.

Solomon lived in the old stone house at Katerskill, pictured in the "Du Bois Reunion." Tradition misled us to suppose that this house was the original homestead of Benjamin DuBois, (3.) This Katerskill house, however, must be very ancient, as can be safely inferred from marks and initials and dates in the stones. Solomon was a blacksmith : his shop stood a little westerly from the house, and blacksmith cinders could be seen there thirty years since. A waffel-iron of his make, bearing date of 1754, remains in the Eckler family.

His wife was a sister, probably, of his brother Isaac's wife. He is referred to in the first will of his father, made July 4, 1760, as deceased. His son Benjamin and his three daughters were young children at his death. We do not know that his widow ever remarried.

6. HUYBARTUS, bap. by Dom. Petrus Vas of Kingston, Oct. 10, 1725. Wits. Theunis Oostrander and Margyrjen Suyland. Died early in 1809, m. Cornelia Hallenbeck of Coxsackie who died Aug. 25, 1795, aged 68 years. Her tombstone was standing in 1874 just back of Mrs. Hopkins' residence in West Catskill.

The name as given on the Kingston Church Record at his baptism is spelled Huygbartus. He was generally called Allibartus by the old people, but uniformly wrote his name Huybartus. His home was at first at the "Point" but afterwards at the old homestead of his father Benjamin, where he died at the venerable age of about eighty-five years. He was the survivor of his father's family, and is remembered by his great grandson Benjamin P. DuBois, now (1877) living upon the same place. He probably built the stone house at the "Point," which was removed by John DuBois in 1822, to give place to the present brick house. All of Huybartus' children were born at The Point, and in 1760 his father wrote a will giving to him the farm he there occupied, and to his youngest brother Isaac, the homestead farm on which the father lived and died. But this will was never admitted to probate. (We have the original document from Mr. John Van Vechten of Leeds.) Two years later Benjamin (3) made a new will which was executed, and gave the homestead farm to Huybartus and the farm at The Point to Isaac, the sons having between 1760 and 1762 exchanged places, and the father spent the last of his days with Huybartus instead of Isaac.

We have very few incidents of Huybartus' life. Benjamin P. remembers his venerable appearance, dressed in knee breeches and the three cornered hat. That hat he remembers with special distinctness from the fact that it was used smartly about the legs and back of the youngster to correct his mischiefs. It is said that the daughter Helena married against her father's wish, and was discarded. Afterward when he lay very sick, she brought her young babe to his bed side to crave pardon, but he silently turned his face to the wall. If this story is true, it shows a stern nature, not an unusual thing in the old times. In his will, however, he does not discriminate against this daughter. Huybartus was always spoken of with respect by our grandparents. Will recorded Feb. 25, 1809, and admitted to probate at Catskill by Dorrance Kirtland, Surrogate.

The following is a fac-simile of the signature of Huybartus Du Bois, copied from papers still in existence. In signing his Will Huybartus uses "his mark," a singular custom of those times, occasionally used even by those who could write. Benjamin Du Bois (3) sometimes made "his mark." Its use in this case, however, may have been caused by severe indisposition.

7. CORNELIUS, b., probably, at New Paltz, before the removal of his father to Catskill, Sept. 14, 1727, bap. by Rev. P. Vas, at Kingston, Nov. 12, 1727, wits. Cornelius DuBois and Magdalena DuBois. We cannot now identify these witnesses; from their names we infer they belonged at New Paltz, d. Catskill, June 5, 1803, m. Nov. 12, 1751, Catharine Vanderpoel of Kinderhook, b. Feb. 26, 1727, d. Mar. 27, 1778. The notice of Cornelius given in the "Reunion," is deemed in the main sufficient. To that account of him one or two items might be added. The intercourse between Catskill and Kinderhook was at that time quite intimate. Some of the Vanderpoels stood as witnesses at the baptism of four of Cornelius' children and the old people constantly referred to the close relationship kept up in those times with the Kinderhook relatives. Cornelius was a man of considerable means, and was often applied to for the loan of money. It is said that persons on the village side of the Creek, would call him out from his house on the opposite bank, and receive from him verbal orders for money in the village. The proverbial honesty of those times did not guarantee the memory of his creditor, and this watered stock often remained unpaid. His oldest son Benjamin also involved him in serious pecuniary losses, by certain transactions not creditable to the son's prudence, to say the least. Whether Benjamin's Jersey wife, who was always called "A great Lady," really deserved the bitter feelings of the family, which she bore along with her husband ever after this, we are unable now to determine. Cornelius' record of his own wife's death is peculiarly devout: it is thus in the Dutch, "Ano 1778 mert 27, is myne vrow in Den Heeren outslapen." We would read it in English "March 27, 1778, Now is my wife sleeping in the Lord." His oldest son was at this time only twenty-five, and his youngest child, Annaetje, nine years. He lived twenty-five years a widower, and died greatly beloved by his relatives and respected by all. We give herewith a fac-simile of his signature.

A fac-simile of the signature of Cornelius Dubois, written in a cursive script.

8 ISAAC, born, probably, at Catskill: the first child born there after the arrival of the family. He was, probably, baptised at Kingston, though there is no record of it, a break occurring in the records between 1730 and 1732. His tombstone in the family graveyard at The Point, gives his birth June 1, 1731, and his death Feb. 23, 1795. His marriage is thus recorded at Kingston: "1752, May 23, Isaac Dubois, young man, living at Albany, with Lena Sammons, maiden, living at Schawegonk." The term Albany refers to Albany County, within whose bounds Catskill then was. Isaac was the youngest of Benjamin's sons. He remained upon the homestead until about 1761 or 62, and then removed to The Point, on the place previously occupied by his brother Huybartus.

"The Point" is the term always applied by the old people to the south shore of Catskill Creek, rising from the marshy ground and opposite the beginning of the "Long Dock."

Latterly the name is applied by the public to the steamboat landing at the end of Long Dock, which was originally a small island called "Boonpjes Hoek." The Point was the site of an ancient Indian village, unmistakable evidence of which may yet be found in the peculiar dark colored soil and the numerous instruments of stone of Indian manufacture found there. These Indians were noted among the early discoverers and navigators of the Hudson as "a gentle and loving people." Their number here must have been considerable. Their burial ground was near the edge of the bluff, about one-third of the way from The Point to Hopenose, where distinct evidences remained in our boyhood attesting this use of this spot by the Indians. They seem also to have buried on the North shore opposite the Point. The first white settler at The Point, and probably the first white resident in the township, was Claes Teunisse, nick-named Uylen Spiegle, or in English Owl's Looking-Glass, a name which cannot be considered complimentary to his good looks. He has had the honor, however, of impressing an ugly name for many years, at least, upon the lands and waters of his plantation. The Creek now called John DuBois' Creek, was in our boyhood always called "Uylen-Kill," and the Marsh "Uylen-Vly." Claes Teunisse may have settled at the Point as early as 1640 or 1650. What other occupants it had until it passed into the ownership of William Loveridge in 1682, we are unable to say. It was purchased in 1728 of Gisbert Lane and his wife Hannah, daughter of Loveridge, by Benjamin DuBois (3). It was then occupied first by Huybartus (6) and then by Isaac (7), sons of Benjamin DuBois. At the death of Isaac DuBois in 1793, after a residence of some thirty-five years at The Point, the place passed into the possession of his oldest son John, who held it forty-six years till his death in 1841. It then remained in the family of his son Joel until 1859, when it was sold to Jacob Van Orden.

Henry Brace, Esq., in his "Outline of History of Catskill," along with an extended notice of the Catskill DuBoises, gives the following estimate of Isaac: "Isaac DuBois, after the death of his father, led a life of ease. Two or three slaves, with the occasional and moderate help of their master and his sons, did the needful work of the farm, sowed and harvested the wheat, planted and gathered the maize, made the hay, tended the small patches of flax and tobacco, sheared the sheep, killed the hogs, cut and rode in the wood. The truth is, this man, among his other virtues, had the characteristic virtue of the Dutch yeomen of the valley of the Hudson—he was contented with such things as he had. His estate produced or gave him the means of buying whatever his moderate wants required, and a life of toil would have given him only greater wealth, for which he did not crave.” We give a facsimile of his signature.

12. RACHEL, unmarried, d. at the advanced age of 99 years at Katerskill. The Indians were numerous about Catskill when Rachel was young. Occasionally they were troublesome. At one time a party of them surrounded the house of Solomon Du Bois as if with hostile intent. Rachel happened to be home alone: she quietly closed all the doors and windows but made no demonstration of any kind. After prowling around for a while the Indians seemed to suspect that the house was well defended, and so fearing to make an attack went away.

Mr. Peter Eckler of New York, in whose father's family old Aunt Rachel passed her declining years at Katerskill, remembers hearing her sing, in his childhood, the old Dutch Nursery Song, which is no doubt familiar to many of our readers:

Trippe, troppe, troontje,
De varkens in het boontje,
De koeyen in het klaver,
De paardjes in het haver,
De eendjes in het water plas,
De gansen in het lange gras—
Ik wou myn mantje zoo groot was.

A literal translation would read substantially as follows:

Trippe, troppe, troontje,
(This line is untranslatable, being equivalent to "fol de rol" in English.)
The hogs in the beans,
The cows in the clover,
The horses in the oats,
The ducks in the water puddle,
The geese in the long grass—
I wish my little man was so big.

(Tossing the child to the required height while singing the last line. If the child were a girl, "meisje," which means little girl, would be substituted for "mantje," little man.)

* From the manuscript notes of Henry Brace, Esq., (Author of "An Outline of the History of the Town of Catskill, etc.,") we learn that Barent Staats Salisbury was, during the Revolutionary War, a captain of militia. He fought at Germantown and at Monmouth, and his order-book is in the possession of his grandson William of Catskill. Capt. Salisbury and his wife Sarah were buried at Jefferson, at the edge of the hill behind the house once occupied by Abner Austin. About the year 1860 their remains were disinterred by their grandson, and re-buried in a private grave-yard adjoining the public cemetery in Jefferson. On the stone at the head of the new graves is the inscription, "Barent S. Salisbury, a prominent American Officer during the Revolution. Died April 11, 1794, aged 54 years."

13. BENJAMIN, bap. Caatsban, June 26, 1749, witnesses Benjamin Du Bois and Catharine Suylant, d. unmarried.

14. JOHN, b. d. m. Caty Dies, dau. Madam Dies and sister of Jennette, first wife of John Du Bois, Son of Isaac. John, son of Huybartus, often wrote his name John H. and his cousin John, son of Isaac, wrote his John I., the middle letter being taken from their parents respectively.

15. TREINTJE (Catharine) b. Oct. 21, 1753, d. Aug. 24, 1839, m. first Gosie Hermance, and had issue, I. Lanah Hermance.* II. John Hermance. Lived together to advanced age unmarried, Katerskill. III. Polly Hermance, m. Ira Canfield. IV. Rachel Jane Hermance, bap. at Caatsban, Feb. 16. 1782, wits. Abram Hoffman and Rachel Du Bois, m. Dec. 3, 1800, by Rev P. Labagh, Benjamin Sole. Issue, Robert Sole and Rachel Jane Sole, who lived at John Du Bois' after he married their grandmother. Treintje m. second, Michael Phillips. No issue. M. third, John Du Bois. No issue.

Quite a remarkable train of circumstances are connected with the life of this Treintje or Catharine. She was born at "The Point," where her father then lived, in the name of Du Bois. Her first husband died leaving her with four children. By her second husband, Phillips, she had no children. Her third marriage was with her cousin John Du Bois, when she was sixty-three, and this was his fourth marriage, he being fifty-six years old. This marriage brought her to the place and name of her nativity. She lived happily with John Du Bois twenty-three years, and her own children and grandchildren found welcome and shelter at "The Point," quite as pleasant as those of her husband. She was seven years the senior of her husband John Du Bois, and died before him

* LANA was of a remarkably cheerful and social disposition, and very fond of society. Her home, in a romantic valley on the banks of the Katerskill, midway between the falls and the village of Catskill, was the scene of many rural festivities and innocent merry-makings. She was a great favorite and confidante of young people of both sexes, who ever found in her a willing and sympathetic listener to the narrative of their hopes or fears, their tales of joy or sorrow: and many momentous subjects, of which the great world took little heed, but of strangely engrossing interest to the parties concerned, were sagely discussed by the young men and maidens of this vicinity, in her comfortable, quaintly-fashioned dwelling, which was beautifully shaded by a grand old Oak—one of the largest and most symmetrical trees we ever beheld. Her memory will be recalled with pleasure by all who enjoyed her hospitality, and none will forget the old snuff-box which was her constant companion, and from the use of which she seemed to derive great consolation.

though at a greater age, viz. eighty-six. She was a favorite of her father Huybartus, if we may judge by the large landed estate left her by his will. She was a woman, as we remember her in her old age, of quiet habits, but of energy, decision, and warm heart.

In addition to the war record of Barent Du Bois, as given in "Du Bois Reunion," we have evidence from the Pension Office that he established a service of seventeen months during the war under Capt. Benjamin Dubois, Capt. Delavan, Col. Anthony Van Bergen, by testimony of Peter Bogardus, Zopher Weeks, and Benjamin Van Orden. "He alleged service at different times, during the entire war as a scout and express rider and as a minute man under Capts. J. Witbeck, Van Schaick, and Fowler, and under Generals Sullivan, Hand, and La Fayette, but could establish seventeen months only, the remainder being shown by traditionary evidence."

I add to this the remarks of Jas. D. Pinckney, in his "Sketches of Catskill."

"As years passed on I became more intimately acquainted with the good old Captain, and have spent hours in hearing his stories of the barbarities committed by tories and savages, and of combats in which he had borne no unimportant part. In all these stories he managed to introduce his beau ideal of a warrior—'Old Murphy'—in such a way as to induce the suspicion that he might have been a coadjutor of the 'Schoharie Indian killer.' " Elsewhere he says of him, "He seemed a friend to everybody but tories and indians." After the war he was a skipper or Master of a Sloop, until his strength failed him. I remember him as a man of rare social qualities. When he visited us in Kiskatom the house was lively while he remained.

John Du Bois survived his fourth wife only five years, when in his eighty-second year, he died and was laid away in the family grave yard with the remains of his four wives, under the shade of the apple trees in the orchard his own hand had planted. John Du Bois was no ordinary man. The limits of his own lands and neighborhood formed, indeed, the circuit of the principal acts of his life, yet they were so marked as to leave an impress on the memories of his posterity to the third generation. With an indomitable will and courage that few would dare to withstand, he became the acknowledged leader in the neighborhood, as well as the ruler of his own family. His opinions and acts were always respected, because well founded in wisdom and justice. He was stern in demeanor and uncompromising, so that his will and word in the family and over all his possessions were supreme ; none ever ventured to dispute or question it, yet he was of a generous and kind heart, just and upright to exactness in all his dealings.

The residence of John Du Bois at "The Point," was, in the recollection of his descendants of the second and third generation, like an old times Baronial Hall. His personal appearance and habits were well in keeping. He was fully, perhaps, a little over six feet in height, well proportioned and strongly built, of a presence impressive and commanding, sometimes stern, an aspect aided by a voice which, as he chose to use it, could be literally said to roar, but always approachable, reasonable, and gentlemanly. A mean word or act seemed impossible to his nature. He wore to the last the small clothes, the knee breeches, with great silver buckles, tight stockings, and low shoes. When Ann S. Stevens, who spent a fortnight at his house preparing matter for her story of "Mary Derwent," described him as wearing silver buckles on his shoes, he exclaimed, "Ah! she's got the buckles off my knees and put them on my feet."

His farm of more than three hundred acres was, in its arable parts, under good cultivation. The orchards and gardens abounded with fruits and vegetables, a great herd of cattle furnished a supply of milk and butter, domestic fowls of all kinds were plenty on the premises, and wild fowl in the Uylen Kill, and fish and eels could be had as they were wanted from the Creek and the River. The soil seemed specially adapted for fruits, and with the southern exposure such grapes, such pears, such peaches, such apples, such plums, and among others those immense magnum bonums grew there, as we boys of the third generation never tasted elsewhere, and never expect to. If you wanted to ramble, there were the farm roads or the great orchards, or the cedars upon the Roefenje where you could find plenty of stone arrow heads, or Jim's path to the Hopenose, overlooking the river, the creek, the village, and westward the glorious Catskills. If you wanted to ride in true rustic style, there was the wagon going to the big meadow for hay, or to the Kalkberg for wood; or if you wanted to row there was the boat at the dock, and the oars by the pear tree. And if you were tired of all this, you could sit on the stoop and watch the river craft, through that long slim mahogany-cased spy glass, or the four-horse stages dashing down the Long Dock to meet the steamboats. Or if nothing outdoors pleased you, you could go into that great north sitting room, with the two full length portraits, in oil, of Madam Dies and her brother, in childhood, suspended in immense oval gilt frames, and the female face in china, hanging over the mantle board, and Aunt Treyntje would interest you in the habits and fashions, and pranks of young folks before the Revolutionary War, or Uncle John would entertain you with stories of the Indians and Tories of that unsettled period. Or if still you were restless, you could pass into that great Kitchen with its wide fire place and its glistening pewter and copper utensils, and the two colored women, "On" and "Bet," who had both been slaves, and the first one as black as the chimney back, would give you some new ideas of life among the lowly well toward a century of the past.

All this, which may sound to some so much like fancy, is nothing but simple fact. Such was the style of life at "The Point" fifty years ago, as the compilers of these records remember it. And there was not only plenty for the family and servants, but plenty and room for those needing them. At John Du Bois', the orphan children of John Mallory, who married Areyaantje, a sister of his third wife, found a home; there Cornelius, the oldest son of Abraham Du Bois, was living at the time of death; thence supplies of milk, and butter, and eggs, and meat, and fruits of all kinds, were ever finding their way to the houses of many relations at the village needing these things. James, who became insane in early manhood, was for many years a great care to the family, but the thought of sending him to an Asylum probably never occurred to a single one of them, and Jennette, with her two daughters, lived half a lifetime at her father's. The writer of this received at John Du Bois', a noble hospitality, passing there a long winter attending school at the village, when compensation was not even permitted to be named.

A gentleman of the old school was John Du Bois. Few, if any, like him remain, or are even possible, in habits and surroundings in these changed times. May his descendants and kindred imitate the cardinal virtues so conspicuous in him, and which, whatever changes occur in outward things, may be the common heritage of all who strive to honor God and serve their fellow men.

The farm at the "Point," came into the possession of the Du Boises in 1728. We have seen that it was first occupied by Huybartus (6), probably about 1748 or 1750. Isaac (8) went there about 1761 or 2, being then thirty years of age. He had been married about twelve years, and took with him his four young children Lana, Achie, John, and Joel. Possibly the last named was born at the "Point." Isaac died in 1795, and the farm, by will, fell to John, then thirty-five years of age, and having four children, Isaac, John D., James, and Jennette, the oldest fifteen and the youngest four. Twelve days before his father's death, he married Catharine Bronk of Coxsackie. The farm remained in the occupation of John Du Bois, until his death in 1841, when it was divided, by his will, among his children. His son Joel and family left the old place in 1859, after it had been one hundred and thirty-one years in the ownership of the Du Boises. The place of original settlement, (Ben. P. Du Bois) purchased in 1720, still remains in the occupancy and ownership of a Du Bois.

Peter M. Eckler born January 12, 1788, died June 30, 1876. His father's ancestors emigrated from Hesse-Cassel, Germany, his mother descended from an English family named Morris. Mr. Eckler passed his life as a farmer. He was of a quiet unostentatious disposition, honest and upright in his dealings. He lived to a good old age and passed his declining years in the enjoyment of a comfortable competence. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and during the later years of his life received a pension for his services from the U. S. government.

Nellie Eckler (35) was a woman of frank, kind and social disposition. She devoted her life to her family and the welfare of her children. She took special interest in all that related to the history of the Du Bois family, and could have furnished before her death many interesting facts and old family traditions which are now unfortunately lost. She died at the age of 76, beloved and regretted by her relatives and friends.

After his death the widow again married to John Bogardus, brother of Jacobus Bogardus, and lived near the head of Main St., Catskill. Peter lived on the old place of Benjamin (3).

Peter L. (Lowrens, 42) served an apprenticeship at the Tannery of Jonathan Palen of Palensville, Greene Co., N. Y. The year after his marriage, 1826, he removed to Tougore, in Olive, Ulster Co., N. Y., where he bought a farm, and built a large tannery. He was postmaster there under Jackson and Amos Kendall ; was a prominent man in that part of the county, and did an extensive business until ruined by the hard times of 1837. He then closed up his business, sold out, paid all his debts in full, and moved to Shokan, N. Y., where he filled an important position in a large Tannery until his death.

Mr. Du Bois was quiet and unassuming, but one of the best and most exemplary of men ; so regarded and referred to among those who knew him best ; by men of all classes and opinions. He was so universally respected and beloved, not from any particularly genial or social characteristics, for he was a man of few words, but from the honor, uprightness, and thorough excellence there was about him. He was a worthy and warm-hearted Methodist, but wholly unsectarian. His funeral was largely attended at the M. E. Church in Shokan, and the Roman Catholic Irishmen of the Tannery, who were never known to attend a Protestant funeral or go inside a Protestant church, attended in a body.

“Early in life he went to New York as clerk or accountant in a well established mercantile house, and there was, perhaps, no young man who ever left our town with more flattering prospects than James Du Bois. No tidings of him ever reached home which were not satisfactory to his parents and friends, and honorable to himself; and a bright future was anticipated for him, when the news arrived that he had become suddenly deranged. I never knew the cause—it was said by some that intense application to business had affected his brain—by others that an unmerited reproof from one of his employers had so rudely shaken his extremely sensitive temperament as to unsettle his mind. He was brought back to the old homestead, and it is said that for many years he never spoke a word! Yet, day after day at a certain hour he would make a circuit of his father’s farm. In the pleasant Spring time, in the burning Summer, in the mellow Autumn, and in the bitter cold and snows of Winter, he would traverse that same route, making a round of miles, and return to his chamber, where he would remain in moody silence for the next twenty-four hours, then to resume his solitary walk over the well-beaten track, which came to be known as “crazy Jim’s path.” Many years subsequently, (at the death of his father), he suddenly resumed the exercise of speech, and, as though to compensate for his long silence, he became really garrulous. He abandoned his daily walk, and frequented the Village, but his reason never returned.”—Jas. D. Pinckney’s “Sketches,” 1868.

Lanah Hunter became a widow when her oldest child, Joel Du Bois, was three years of age, and her youngest, Jennette, an infant of one year. Henceforth she lived solely for her children. With very little means she managed by industry and prudence to keep them by her and give them a good common school education, and a thorough training in piety and right living. She had her reward in the respectability of their positions, the excellence of their characters, and the deep veneration with which they cherished her in age. Joel D. was at first a clerk in a country store at Pine Bush, N. Y. He found employment a year or two in Greene County, N. Y. He then entered the employ of Carpenter, Mailar & Co., Merchants and Freighters, Newburgh, N. Y. He was employed by this firm as clerk in the store, and as clerk, and as captain of a freight barge, and was for awhile in charge of a Passenger steamer between Albany and New York. He engaged in the wholesale Butter and Cheese business in New York, in 1844, with Jay, Adams & Co., and then Hunter, Adams & Co. In 1875 he assumed the entire business in his own family under the firm of Hunter, Walton & Co., 164 & 166 Chambers St., N. Y. Their sales during the last ten years have averaged about $1,000,000 annually.

Capt. Cornelius Du Bois enlisted in the 33d Ill. Volunteers, (Normal Regiment) Aug. 15, 1861. Served in that Regt. as private, corporal, and sergeant, till Nov. 4, 1863, when he received a commission as 2d Lieut. in the 53rd U. S. Colored Infantry. From 2d Lieut. was promoted to Captain in same Regt., May 24, 1864, and served in that capacity until mustered out March 8, 1866, at Vicksburg, Miss. Commanded the Post at Goodman, Miss., from Oct. 23, 1865, to the time the forces were withdrawn. The circumstances attending his appointment or detail to this Post, were of a very flattering nature to him as a reliable and faithful officer of the U. S. Army. The campaigning of Capt. Cornelius was principally in the states of Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi. He took part in the battles of Fredericktown, Mo., Coche River, Ark., the battles about Vicksburg, viz: Grand Bluff, Magnolia Hill, Jackson, Champion Hill, Black River Bridge, the charges on Vicksburg, and quite a number of other smaller engagements. He had the honor of carrying the Regimental Flag in the charge on Vicksburg May 22, 1863, after all the color guards were killed or wounded. He took it from the extended arm of the last one of them who fell, and who cried "Take the Flag." His captain and himself both sprang forward to take it, the Capt. being a little in advance, when a grape-shot grazing his knee caused him to falter and almost fall, and Cornelius seized the flag and proudly bore it aloft all the day. It was a thrilling occurrence. and one long to be remembered.

After Vicksburg surrendered and he was commissioned in a Colored Regt., he was placed on garrison duty at Vicksburg, Jackson, and adjacent towns. For a length of time he was chief picket officer at Vicksburg. While in command of the Post at Goodman, Miss., his fellow officers of the Regiment were in the habit of saluting him jocosely as "Capt. Du Bois, Sheriff of seven counties."

At the close of the war Capt. Du Bois built and opened a spacious Summer Boarding House, called "The Pine Grove House," in Palenville, at the entrance of Katerskill Clove, one of the most romantic of locations at the foot of the Catskills, some twelve miles from Catskill village.

SKETCH OF FAMILY OF JOHN D. DU BOIS.

John Dies Du Bois, son of John Du Bois and Jennette Dies, was named for his maternal great uncle John Dies, an officer in the British Army. His grand mother, Jane Dies, commonly called Madam Dies, was a daughter of James Goelet, a Frenchman, an East India Merchant Trader of the early days of New York. One of the sons, James G., was named for him. John D. received the common school education of those times, and lived on his father's farm until his 23d year, when on the 15th Feb'y, 1807, he married Rebecca, daughter of John Overbaugh a farmer, whose lands joined those of his father.

His father, a few years after his marriage, set off from his ample domain about 100 acres, and built him a house. The ambition of John D. was quite satisfied in successfully tilling and cultivating his land. Though he possessed a large share of mechanical genius, as was shown by the erection, on his farm, of a work shop, which he supplied with an ample stock of tools, even to a Turning Lathe, quite rare in those days. These enabled him with the aid of his six boys, as they grew up, to provide, from his own designs, all the implements needed on the farm, even to the Spinning Wheel, and Loom used in the manufacture of his wool and flax into fabrics for the clothing of the family.

The children of John D. were Lewis, Philo, Ann Jennett, William, James Goelet, Addison, and Frederick N. The boys all inherited largely of the genius of their father, and took strongly to mechanical pursuits.

Lewis, after learning the trade of a carpenter, became a master builder, and erected many buildings and dwellings now standing in his native village. Not finding ample scope for his ambition in his native town, in 1836 he removed to the city of New York, and there pursued the business of a builder.

Philo after acquiring the same trade, under the instruction of his brother while in Catskill, in 1835 removed to Buffalo, N. Y., where, for a time, he worked at his trade. But shortly, as opportunity offered, he embarked in the mercantile business, and opened a Grocery Store, with his cousin, Sam'l H. Du Bois, as partner.

Not meeting with success, the partnership was dissolved. Another cousin, Alfred Du Bois, engaged in the manufacture of Silver Ware in Buffalo, at this time died. The settlement of his business was placed in the hands of Philo Du Bois. By the time the settlement was completed, he acquired sufficient knowledge of the business to carry it on himself, which he did quite successfully for about 37 years to the present time.

William, while learning the trade of a Tailor with Mr. Decker of Catskill, was taken sick, and died of Typhus fever in his 18th year.

James G., after spending part of a year at the carpenter trade with Peter Shaurman, Master Builder of Catskill, was led by circumstances to abandon it, and accept a clerkship in 1837 in the store of Garret N. Abeel, West Catskill. Over a year later, on receiving a more favorable offer from Wm. W. Van Loan, a grocer in the village, he changed his situation to a store offering better opportunities to acquire mercantile knowledge, where he occupied the position of salesman and book-keeper till the fall of 1840. At this time he accepted an offer and engaged for two years with Messrs. F. C. & A. Hall of Portland, Alabama, as Salesman and Book-keeper in their country store. Left New York in Oct., in company with Mr. F. C. Hall, proceeded by ship to Mobile, and steamer over 200 miles up the Alabama river to Portland.

At the end of this engagement in the fall of 1842, he made a visit to his cousin, Barent Du Bois, long a resident of Tallapoosa Co., on the Tallapoosa River, Ala., where the winter was spent very agreeably in witnessing the running of Saw and Grist Mills managed by his cousin's slaves, and taking part in catching Cat Fish, weighing 5 to 30 lbs., Indian style, in Box Traps and in a grated sluice way on the great rapids of the Tallapoosa. Some time was also spent in hunting and shooting deer and wild Turkeys, which were found quite plenty in the "Piney Woods."

In the spring of 1843, he returned to Portland, remaining a few weeks. Owing to impaired health from the effect of malaria, having suffered severely from Fever and Ague, he concluded to return to the north, which he did via. New Orleans, the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, Lake Erie, and Buffalo, arriving home in June.

In the fall of 1843, Lewis and James G. commenced in the city of New York, the construction of machinery for the manufacture of Doors, Sashes, and Blinds. In the Spring following, they hired suitable room with Steam Power, set up their machinery, and made the first Doors, Sashes, and Blinds ever made by machinery in the city of New York. The success of their first year's experience, warranted the purchase of lots 22 and 24 Bethune St., and the erection of a factory suited for a growing business, which was confidently anticipated.

The success of the second year fully sustained their most sanguine expectations, and dissipated all doubts of the feasibility of producing the very best work in this line by machinery, though few of the first class builders were willing to venture using the work at the start, thinking nothing but hand made work was safe to use, such was the prejudice against the introduction of machinery in this, as also in other lines of business.

On the 25th of July, 1846, in the middle of the day, while the building was filled with material, and men at work, it took fire, and was entirely destroyed, scarcely giving time for the workmen to escape. Having but partial insurance, and with a large amount of contracts unfinished, the material for which was now entirely destroyed, they were left largely in debt, and practically insolvent. No way for the future seemed practicable, but the humiliating one of a compromise. The plan of compromise, after being well digested, was proposed at a meeting of creditors, offering to pay fifty cents on the dollar, retain the small amount of insurance to be used in rebuilding, and reasonable time after a renewal of the business to make the promised payments. All of which was finally granted.

The copartnership was now increased by the addition of a younger brother, Addison, who was also a practical mechanic, having acquired the trade of carriage making under the instruction of Wm. Cater, at Catskill, he having removed to the City in 1844.

The business, henceforth, was carried on by the three brothers, under the firm name of J. G. Du Bois & Co., and proved even more prosperous than before the fire, so that they were able to meet, not only the compromised claims of fifty cents on the dollar, at maturity, but in less than five years after the fire, they called the old creditors together and paid the remaining fifty cents, making 100 cents to every dollar contracted. In 1852 they contracted for the sale of the Factory and lots in Bethune St., and purchased 8 lots on 30th St., where they built a much larger factory than the one just sold. In the Spring of 1853, they took possession of the new factory, with improved machinery, where the business was continued by the three brothers uninterrupted and successful, till the death of Lewis, May 24, 1876.

Frederick Nelson, the youngest son, having also a genius for mechanics, engaged with his brother Philo at Buffalo, and learned the trade of a Silver Smith. After thoroughly acquiring a knowledge of the business, in 1855 he went to Chicago, with the necessary tools and machinery, and started the manufacture of silver ware, the first in that city. He pursued it with moderate success till 1861, on the breaking out of the rebellion, which so damaged the business as to cause him to abandon it.

Having previously invented machinery for crushing Gold ores, he decided to try the chances of gold mining. In 1862, he proceeded with his wife and two children to the Gold mines of Colorado, settling at Black Hawk, in the Rocky Mountains. Here he successfully filled, 1st. The position of foreman in a machine shop, 2d. Foreman in an Ore Crushing & Refining Works, 3d. Superintendent of the Boroughs Gold Mining Co., and 4th. Builder, Conductor, and part owner of the Colorado Ore Reducing Works. The Company having been organized by his three brothers in the city of New York, with a capital of $50,000. These works he operated for nearly two years, producing over $50,000 in gold from the native ores. Unfortunately the works took fire and were entirely destroyed, without any insurance. The parties in interest decided not to rebuild the works. Thus ended his five years struggle after fortune in the Gold mines of Colorado. At the end of another year he returned with his wife and daughter, their only remaining child, to the city of New York, having lost their only boy while in the mountains. Here he took a position in the factory of his brothers.

In 1871 J. G. Du Bois & Co., extended their business by engaging in the manufacture of Lead Pipe on their premises in 30th St., the brother, Frederick N., taking charge and superintending the manufacture of the Lead Pipe. His experience in that position, after four years observation and practice, enabled him to produce, with the aid of the Hydraulic Press, the valuable invention of the Plumber's Seamless Wrought Lead Trap, for which Letters Patent were granted, fully securing to him the exclusive right of the invention, although for over a year his right was contested by another party claiming the same. In August, 1877, Frederick N. Du Bois engaged on his own account in the manufacture and sale of his Patent Plumber's Trap, hiring room and steam power of his brothers in 30th St., New York. His improvement of the Plumber's Trap, is of such generally acknowledged superiority over all others, that the sale of the article, at equal prices, has superseded every other kind.

Ann Jennett, the only daughter, married in 1837 Peter Whittaker, who purchased the interest of the brothers in the homestead, and afterwards purchased other land adjoining, making a farm of about 150 acres. This land they cultivated and managed very successfully with their two boys and three girls till 1860, when Ann Jennett died.

SKETCH OF REV. ANSON DU BOIS.

The subject of this notice remained on his father's farm until his twentieth year. During the last four of these years, his father was often absent on official business, and his elder brother, Warren, out of health, so that upon Anson devolved most of the labor and management of the place. All of his winters, however, were spent in school. During the winter of 1838-9, he attended Ross' Academy in Catskill, enjoying the noble hospitality of his great uncle, John Du Bois. The next winter he taught the Bethel District School in Kiskatom, and the following winter, the Common School near his father's. He experienced religion in his nineteenth year, and united with the Reformed Dutch Church of Leeds, under the pastorate of Rev. Brogan Hoff. His sister, Emily Ann, was in a decline, and the brothers, Warren and Anson, agreed that one of them should study for the ministry, leaving it unsettled which one should do so until after the sister's death. This occurred in April, 1841, and Warren's health continuing delicate, he suggested that Anson should undertake the work. The consent and blessing of the parents were obtained, though the father protested that he did not see how it was possible to secure an education without funds, and these he could not furnish.

Anson left home on May 12, 1841, accompanying some friends to Austinburg, Ashtabula Co.. O., where he at once entered the "Grand River Manual Labor Institute." He had then about fifty dollars and a few clothes and books in a small wooden chest, which he had made to contain them. He remained two years at Austinburg, supporting himself entirely by his own daily labor for the Institute, and by chopping cord wood during one winter vacation, and teaching a District School the next. He came East at the end of the first year, and by the efforts of his father, was recommended by the Classis of Greene to aid from the Van Benschoten Fund for the education of young men for the ministry. But as there were no moneys in hand, he returned again to Ohio for another year. The discipline at Austinburg and the effort to change the habits of a hearty farmer's lad of twenty to those of a student, proved too severe for his health, and Anson returned from the west in 1843, ready, apparently, to fill a consumptive's grave. Home and rest, and old pursuits, however, with heaven's blessing, did wonders, and in the fall of 1843, he entered the Freshman Class of Rutgers College, New Brunswick, N. J. He now received one hundred and twenty dollars yearly from the Van Benschoten Fund, and this, with steady work during vacations as a farm hand, or for the Carters, or Amer. Tract Society, or Amer. S. S. Union, in their special lines, and with one term of teaching a select School at Saugerties, N. Y., was sufficient to carry him free from debt entirely through the course of both College and Theological Seminary.

He left the Seminary in June 1850, was licensed and ordained as a Home Missionary by the Classis of Greene, and by the middle of July was at work among the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence. During his four year's labor there, the church building was completed, lands were secured, and a parsonage built, entirely by his efforts; and a church of twenty-one members organized in connection with the Classis of Cayuga.

Refusing solicitations to more comfortable settlements, Mr. Du Bois in 1854, accepted the call of the Second Reformed Church of Kingston, N. Y., which had been lately distracted by internal dissensions, and had now remaining an actual membership of sixty persons, and a debt of thirty-four thousand dollars. This work, on a salary of eight hundred dollars and no parsonage, with wife, infant son, and aged parents to care for, was not over much attractive in a worldly view. But the Lord blessed it. The membership rose to one hundred and eight during a five year's pastorate, with a deduction of nearly fifty by dismissals and deaths ; the debt was in part paid, and the balance so disposed of as to occasion no burden to the congregation at large ; and the Sabbath School advanced from fifteen or twenty children, all told at the outset, to one hundred and twenty-five at the close.

In the Spring of 1859, the Board of Domestic Missions nominated Rev. Mr. Du Bois as their Corresponding Secretary, in place of Rev. John Garretson, D. D., resigned, and the nomination was confirmed by General Synod. The duties of this position occasioned the breaking up of very tender ties at Kingston, and his removal to New York. But the work was not as congenial as the pastorate, and after a service of three years he resigned the position, and accepted an urgent call, at three-fourths of the salary, from the Second Reformed Church of Schenectady. This church, like that of Kingston, had been divided and almost broken down by internal dissensions. The work was entered on with hearty interest, and was crowned with a good degree of success ; a debt of four thousand dollars was removed, a very commodious suit of rooms for Sabbath School and Week evening services were built upon the rear of the church and connecting with it, and ninety-seven additions made to the membership or about one-third more than the whole membership at Mr. Du Bois' coming. A debt of $2000 was, however, finally left on the church property.

On resigning the pastorate of Second Schenectady, Aug., 1869, Mr. Du Bois removed to Amelia Court House, Virginia, and opened a Classical and English School. A large Hollandish immigration was promised at this point, but the families actually arrived becoming reduced to a small number, and no prospect of increase from the Old Country, the enterprise was abandoned in the fall of 1870. In December of that year Mr. Du Bois accepted a unanimous call from the venerable Reformed Dutch Church of Flatlands, Long Island, which ranks with the first formed of our Dutch churches after New York and Albany, having been regularly organized in 1654, and erected its first church edifice, on the spot still occupied, in 1663. He still labors in this field. Mr. Du Bois buried both his parents, his wife and infant son, and his youngest brother while pastor at Kingston. He was again bereaved of his wife in Brooklyn, N. Y., while Cor. Sec., and of her son, at the age of four years, in Schenectady. He was married again in General Synod at Syracuse, June, 1862. He was made President of General Synod at New Brunswick, N. J., 1865, and received the Doctorate from Union College the same year.
