

The Dillon Family

D I L L O N

This famous Irish family has the same ancestry as the English Dillons, originating in Normandy and coming to England soon after the Conquest of William I (1066-1100). Robert le Dillon was the first of the name to settle in Ireland, arriving during the reign of Henry II (1135-1187) in the service of Prince John, who later became King of England. The Dillons' first holdings were in Wexford and Longford, but eventually they obtained property in West Meath. As centuries passed, the Dillons, like many other Anglo-Norman families, by frequent alliances with the native Irish became patriots of their adopted country and were often in opposition to the English government. The Ancestral Coat of Arms of Dillon displays a shield of silver upon which is a red lion similar to those in the arms of England. Around the lion are placed three red crescents. Crescents usually indicate a Crusader ancestor.

DILLON

A great deal of pleasure and work has gone into the compiling of this family history. Every effort has been made to be very accurate and authenticate as much of the information as possible.

Some of the many letters that were sent asking for dates were not answered, so some of the information is not complete.

Zylpha Van Leuven's family indicates that there might be two other children of Peter and Lydia (Clemmons) Dillon. Only the names of Uhl and Dar are available, so for the present will keep searching.

Further research on several leads could take us farther back in the family history. When these can be verified more pages can be added to this outline.
