The Arms of Dexter

PREFACE.

To the Descendants of Richard Dexter:

The history of this branch of the Dexter Family was begun over fifty years ago by the late John Haven Dexter of Boston, who spent many years in compiling data for same, which he presented to the late Orrando Perry Dexter, who commenced his exhaustive researches on this subject while an undergraduate at Christ Church, Oxford, and whose tragic death at the hands of an assassin Sept. 19, 1903, on his estate at Dexter Lake, Franklin Co., N. Y., prevented the publication, by him, of his life's work. In order that these priceless records should be preserved for posterity, I was retained by Henry Dexter, Esq. of New York, father of said Orrando Perry Dexter, to arrange his notes and obtain from the various members of the family data necessary to complete the Genealogy down to the present time. I have received the utmost courtesy from a large proportion of the descendants of Richard Dexter, who have kindly filled out lengthy charts of their immediate ancestors and supplied whatever was in their power to give regarding their respective branches. I regret, however, that in some instances, I have been unable to obtain such gratifying results, as, owing to indifference or lack of knowledge, certain members of the family have failed to reply to my queries. The notes of John Haven Dexter, appearing exactly as he left them, are marked in every instance by a dagger(†). The late Orrando Perry Dexter being desirous of giving his authority for each and every statement in this Genealogy, the reader is hereby referred to the annexed table of references.

Very respectfully,

HENRY L. MILLS.

Fairfield, Connecticut,

July 1 1904.

INTRODUCTION

The Dexter Family has been closely identified with the history of Ireland from the beginning of the twelfth century; they have intermarried with the most prominent families there, and have held many of the most important offices. Richard de Excester, the progenitor of all the Irish Dexters, died in 1269, and was Governor and Lord Justice of Ireland. The family probably emigrated to Ireland from Devonshire, as the name implies that they lived in or near the cathedral town of Exeter. The name has undergone a series of orthographical changes, as we find it spelled de Excester, Dexcestre, Dexcester, Dextir, Decetir, de Exon, de Exonia, de Exeter and finally Dexter. The chief branch of the family lived at Carrickdexter until its heiress Genet Dexter, married and carried its landed possessions into the Rockfort family. Another heiress Margaret Dexter (alive in 1585), married Michael Cusacke and brought to him the Castle of Rathaldron, about two miles from Carrickdexter. On this latter piece of land, now in the possession of the Marquis of Conyngham, in the town of Slane, there are still the ruins of a house called Castle Dexter. The Arms granted to this family were, ar. two chev. az. a canton gu. Crest, a tree, pendant therefrom two weights. (See frontispiece).

Richard Dexter, who was admitted an inhabitant of Boston (New England), Feb. 28., 1642, came from within ten miles of the town of Slane, Co. Meath, Ireland, and belonged to a branch of that family of Dexter who were descendants of Richard de Excester, the Lord Justice of Ireland. He, with his wife Bridget, and three or more children, fled to England from the great Irish Massacre of the Protestants which commenced Oct. 27, 1641. The family tradition of their exodus from home includes a rather cannibalistic reference and is as follows: "Fleeing from the aforesaid Massacre, they stopped at a house over night, and after supper the little girl of the house came in where they were to play with the baby; while she was so doing, she said to them: 'My Mamma makes pies out of such little fingers and toes as these.' This so frightened them, that they could not sleep, and, after they thought everyone else was asleep, Richard crawled out of the window, his wife handed out the baby, he helped her out, and they continued their flight. The other children (two or more) seem to have been sent ahead, in the first stage of the journey, in some way, and for some reason, probably with relatives or friends of the family to England, from whence they sailed for New England. From Dublin to Drogheda, there were a great many Protestant families, mostly freeholders of the Pale, who appear to have been very well off, and were not plundered for nearly a month after hostilities began. A large proportion of these inhabitants, we learn from authorities on both sides of the question, fled as soon as possible with all the valuables they could carry to England. The letter written from Dublin, Jan. 4, 1642, and printed with the 1812 Edition of Temple, estimates that at the beginning of the Rebellion, Dublin was half Protestant, two-thirds of them were poor, and of the well off, "one half are departed with their estates into England for safety." Temple also states that the flight to England was so extensive, that by December, 1641, the prices for passage rose to an exorbitant figure. In Gilberts' History of the Irish Confederation, Vol. I., pages 246-248, will be found a complaint that the Lord Justices permitted the Protestants to escape with their wealth and families.

When Richard Dexter and family left England and by what vessel, we are unable to state, but he could not have remained there long, as we know he was living at Boston prior to Feb. 28, 1642.

The antiquity and prominence of the Dexter family in Ireland may be seen by the following copies of records of the Charter Roll, Patent Roll, and Ulster's Office, Dublin Castle.

EARLY IRISH RECORDS RELATING TO THE DEXTER FAMILY.

Confirmation by the King of a grant made by Philip de Monte Gomeri (Montgomery) to Richard de Exonia (Exeter) of land (specified) in Connaught, dated 4 Aug., 9 Edw. I, 1281.

CHARTER ROLL 9. EDW: I. UNICA PARS. NO. 5.

For Richard de Exonia.—The King to his Archbishop and others greeting. We have inspected the Charter which Philip de Monte Gomeri granted to Richard de Exonia in these words. Know all men both of the present and the future that I Philip de Monte Gomeri have given and granted and by this my present charter confirmed to my Lord Richard de Exonia and his heirs or his assignees one townland in Connaught—which is called Moyletrath which my Lord the King gave to me with all its appurtenances—for him and his heirs or his assignees to have and to hold in chief from my Lord the King—with moors, pastures, waters, and all liberties and free usages pertaining to the said townland;—freely, quietly, happily, peacefully, entirely, honorably and heriditarily for ever, and for this, to my Lord the King and his heirs Richard himself and his heirs or his assignees are to give the twentieth part of the service in fief of one soldier for all service, suit in court, collection or demand. And in order that this my grant and concession and this confirmation of my present charter may possess enduring strength for ever I have added to the force of this document by impressing upon it my seal.

Witneses thereof are Lord Peter de Ingolisma, Master Walter de Bathonia, Lord Hugo de Kendale, Master Alano de Certonia, Andrea de Valetor, William Russell, William de Stanewell and others. Moreover we having ratified and made acceptable the grant and concession aforesaid as far as in us lies, both for ourselves and our heirs grant and confirm them just as the aforesaid charter in reason bears witnes.

Brus, Hugo son of Otto and Richard de Bosco and others.
Given at Tilbury on the fourth day of August.

Inquisition taken after the death of Richard de Exonia the elder. The jury find that Richard de Exonia the younger—son of the aforesaid Richard—holds his father's lands in Connaught (specified) (with two writs). Dated 26th June, 29 Edw: I, 1300.

INQUISITIONS POST MORTEM, 29 EDW I. NO. 147.

John Wogan Justiciar of Ireland was not able by reason of of other businefs of our Lord the King to make in person the inquisitions and valuations concerning which mention is made made in this brief of our Lord the King but has enjoined upon Richard de Exonia Viscount of Roscomon in whose bailiwick the tenements mentioned in the briefs are contained, to make the aforesaid inquisitions and valuations and he has sent them to the aforesaid Justiciar.

Edward by the grace of God King of England, Lord of Ireland and Duke of Aquitania to his Justiciar or his deputy greeting. Richard son and heir of Richard de Exonia deceased has made known to me that when in our brief we had enjoined upon Robert de Ufford at that time our Justiciar of Ireland that he should cause to be assigned and delivered by my gift, to the same Richard his father, thirty libratae of land, a portion of our lands in Connaught with a reasonable valuation to be made thereupon, and the same Justiciar under the authority of this order had caused thirty libratae of land to be delivered to the same Richard according to the valuation made thereupon by the Justiciar himself, the same Richard before he could obtain our charter died. In consequence of this event the aforesaid Richard has requested us to condescend to grant to him our charter bearing upon this. Wishing therefore to be informed as to these premises we enjoin upon you that by the oath of honest men and those legally qualified of these parts, through whom the truth can be better learned, diligently to make inquiries as to what lands and tenements the aforesaid Richard has held in Connaught by the aforesaid assignment and delivery and of what character and in what way and for what service and who now hold them and how large is the yearly income from every source and whether the aforesaid Richard held our charter for these aforesaid lands and tenements or not, and that you should send to us without delay,—under your seal and the seal of those through whom the inquisition has been made—the inquisition made thereupon clearly and distinctly and with it this brief. Given under our hand as witnefs at Kemeseye on the thirteenth day of May in the year of our reign the twenty-ninth.

Edward by the grace of God King of England, Lord of Ireland and Duke of Aquitania to his Justiciar of Ireland or his deputy greeting.

Because we wish to be informed of the true value of the lands and tenements which Richard de Exonia deceased held on the day of his death—a portion of our waste lands lying between the castles of Roscomon and Randon by a grant from us for the rent of a fee by the terms of our feoffment. These after the death of Richard fell to Richard de Exonia his son by hereditary right. This Richard returned to our possession—just as he has given us to understand—these lands and tenements both because his Castle de Adlek was torn down and entirely destroyed by the Irish while it was in our hands and on account of the high rent which exceeded the true value of the lands and tenements. Also we desire to be informed as to the true value of the four townlands namely: Moynannan, Torpan, Monethassan and Sleschenethech adjoining so to speak the aforesaid lands and tenements. We enjoin upon you by means of the oath of honest men and those legally qualified of the aforesaid parts through whom the truth of the matter can be better known, to diligently investigate the truth more fully as to the premises and also to make a careful estimate of all the lands and tenements i.e. those which the aforesaid Richard returned into our hands, as has been said, as well as of the four townlands, namely how much they are worth yearly under all circumstances according to a true valuation of the same and how great is our income from this source at the present time. Moreover we enjoin upon you to inquire carefully by the oath of men of this character if it would be for our loss or prejudice or of any other whether or not we should restore to the aforesaid Richard the lands and tenements which he thus returned to us and whether or not we should grant to him these lands and tenements together with the aforesaid four townlands, for the same Richard and his heirs to have and to hold from us and our heirs in fee-farm forever. And if it should be for our loss and prejudice or of any other person, then for what loss and what prejudice and of whom, of what character and in what way. We also enjoin upon you to send us this estimate and inquisition made clearly and distinctly under your seal and the seals of those through whom they have been made and that without delay. Send also this brief. Given under our hand as witnefs at Kemeseye on the 13 day of May in the year of our reign the twenty ninth. †

Inquisition made according to the brief of our Lord the King of England at Roscoman in the month of March on the day following the feast of the birth of John the Baptist in the year of the reign of King Edward—the twenty-ninth—by the under-signed:

ROFFREY FURMENTY

These jurates declare under oath that our Lord the King enjoined upon Lord Robert de Ufford then his justiciar of Ireland that he should value and deliver to Lord Richard de Exonia the elder because of his continued and faithful service thirty libratae of land from the lands of our Lord the King in Connaught for him and his heirs to have and to hold for ever. Now the aforesaid justiciar by reason of this aforesaid mandate has made an estimate and has caused to be delivered seven townlands as given below to the same for him and his heirs to have and to hold in the aforesaid form—namely the aforesaid townland of Kylcoyssch, the aforesaid townland of Scregach-crynnyn, the townland of Bechach, the townland of Lysmorchethan and Cownach, the townland of Screnan, the townland of Ardmolan, the townland of Drumclogry, the townland of Nunchenach and Decolaghelyn, which same townlands were valued at thirty £ and the same Richard received them at that time as of the value of thirty £. They also declare that from the time when the aforesaid Lord Richard left the parts of Connaught and relinquished the care of these manors of our Lord the King, of Roscoman and Rendon, on account of persistent warfare they were absolutely of no value, and our Lord the King did not receive any income from other lands adjacent thereto up to the year of the reign of our Lord King Edward the twenty-seventh. They also declare, that no townland of the seven townlands aforesaid was worth in any way yearly more than forty solidi according to the true value. They likewise declare that the aforesaid Richard de Exonia the elder died before he held the charter of our Lord the King for the aforesaid lands.—They do not know for what service he ought to hold these tenements unless for homage and his own service for the reason that he did not have his own charter as has been said above. They also say that Richard de Exonia son and heir of Richard de Exonia holds the aforesaid tenements in the aforesaid form and that he has not had a charter therefor.

And the aforesaid jurates declare under their oath that Lord Richard de Exonia the elder held from our Lord the King as a fee-farm these townlands in Connaught, namely the townland of Tobyrnechalpye, the townland of Rathfarret, the townland of Briliscoths, the townland of Conylloscy, the townland of Narachtyn, the townland of Corkywrangyle, the townland of Corcroppan, the townland of Denguymacofsan, of which no one in any way was worth yearly more than forty solidi. They also say that the manor of Athleg of Richard de Exonia was destroyed while under the care of Lord Richard and this was done in the civil war of the Irish at Connaught.

They also declare that Richard de Exonia the son and heir of the aforesaid Lord Richard de Exonia returned the aforesaid tenements into the possession of our Lord the King both on account of the high rent exceeding the value of these lands and on account of the civil war of the Irish of all Connaught. They also declare that the townland of Moynannan, the townland of Torpan, the townland of Monetafsan and the townland of Sleschenethoch of which no one in the time of war was worth anything to our Lord the King or to anyone else but at other time was worth in every way yearly only forty solidi. They also declare that it is not for loss or prejudice to our Lord the King nor to any other person that our Lord the King should grant the aforesaid tenements to the aforesaid Richard according to the aforesaid valuation for himself and his heirs to hold for ever if the same Richard should wish to dwell in the same lands but it is to the advantage of the King and his tenants.

In the presence of our Lord the King through John Wogan his Justiciar of Ireland according to the valuation and inquisition made for Richard de Exonia.

Lord John Wogan chief Justiciar of Ireland for our Lord the King.

Inquisition and valuation of lands held by Richard de Exonia by the King's gift or grant in Connaught.

DEXTER GENEALOGY

1. RICHARD DEXTER b. about 1606 (Aged 60 yrs. or thereabouts, 27-(6)-1666)⁸⁹, d. in 1680 at Charlestown, Mystic side, as per William Boardman's petition, "admitted to be a Townsman" of Boston Feby. 28, 1641-2,¹ signed a remonstrance to the General Court, as an inhabitant of Charlestown, Mystic Side, May 16, 1648⁸², with John Greenland, the signature being a fine specimen of the hand-writing of the period. He resided there certainly until he purchased, Dec. 7, 1663, the farm in Malden. In deeds of 1667, he is called of Malden, and he lived there until after his son's death. From Jan., 1677-8, till his death he probably lived with one of his daughters, either Elizabeth or Ann (to which daughters he gave land he owned in Charlestown, Mystic Side); since, during that interval, when his residence is given, it is always Charlestown.⁸⁴ He and his wife Bridget seem to have attended the Malden Church. (The records of this church, prior to 1770, are, unfortunately missing, but Bridget Dexter, in 1650, signed a petition from the women of the Malden Church to the General Court.)⁸² He was in 1660 Constable of Charlestown, Mystic side.⁸⁹ His wife Bridget b. about 1612, (aged about 50, Sept. 16, 1662)⁸⁹ d. about 1675, is first heard of at the birth of their daughter Sarah.

† RICHARD DEXTER (First).

We find the above Richard Dexter to be the earliest of the name, in our own ancestral line, who came to New England.—According to the Boston Records—"Richard Dexter was admitted to be a townsman 28th of the 12th m^o. 1641"—being February, 1642, (Old Style). He signed a remonstrance to the General Court, May 16, 1643, with the inhabitants of Mistick side, against a proposed highway from Winnisimmet to Reading, as the Malden Records state.—It appears that he received a Deed from Edward Lane, of Boston, Mass. dated Dec. 7, 1663, of a Farm containing 40 acres, in Malden, Mass. the same (increased to nearly 200 acres) being now occupied (1852) by his direct descendants. He also received a deed as early as 1650, from Robert Long, and others of subsequent dates. He and his "Wife Bridget," gave deeds as early as 1666-7; one of which being given to "James Melins," who, as he says, "hath married my daughter Elizabeth,"—mariner, of Charlestown"—afterwards "supposed to be lost at sea."—Another "to my sonne John, of Charlestown, (1674), of all my farm-houses and lands, and appurtenances belonging, which I have in Malden, and which I bought formerly of Mr. Edward Lane; and half of my land and wood near Spot Pond, being part of the lot given me by the town of Charlestown—excepting one acre of marsh land near Blanchard's farm, and about four acres my dwelling house stands upon, for my daughter Ann Pratt's use, where her house now standeth,—John to pay him £10 a year during his life—£5 in money and £5 in indian corn and pork, at prices current, and 12 loads of wood, to be delivered at his dwelling house in Charlestown, with half of the apples":—the above four acres "to be laid out on the side of said farm, upward next the common." This deed is dated Feb. 24, 1674.—Another, "to my daughters, Elisabeth Mealing and Ann Pratt, of his messuage and tenements in Charlestown, on Mistick side—"the late James Mealings" being mentioned in it—dated January 1677.—Another, "to Benjamin Muzzy, my sonne in law, living in the place of Rumney Marsh, County of Suffolk" 1677.—Another, "especially in respect of the natural affection I bear to my grand child Richard Dexter Jr. sonne unto my late sonne John Dexter, deceased" in which "James Melins, supposed to be lost" and his daughter Ann Pratt, wife of John Pratt," are mentioned 5th Feb. 1678. Another "in consideration of the parental affection I do bear unto my daughter Ann Pratt and her children."—July 20, 1678. Another, "as an annuity during his life, by my daughter

Ann Pratt—July 22, 1678.—Another, “to Sarah Dexter, my daughter in law, for £5, land near Blanchard’s farm in Charlestown”—July 13, 1678.—Another “to Elisabeth Mealins, wife of James; if living—land in Charlestown.” Another, “to Elisabeth Mealins and her children, house and lands in Charlestown, Mistick side—July 22, 1678.”—The preceding deeds show that Richard’s wife’s name was Bridget—her name appearing in them as late as 1674; his only in those of 1677 and 1678, “of Charlestown,” those of a previous date stating him to be “of Malden,” which circumstance seems to indicate, that she probably died sometime between those dates.—That he had a son John, [who died Dec. 8, 1677—& who he, Richard, states was “deceased,” Feb. 5, 1678.]—a daughter Elisabeth [Melins]—a daughter Ann [Pratt]—a daughter Sarah, [Pinson] not mentioned in the deeds,—and a daughter Alice, [Muzzy]—which we have placed under his name as his children. It also appears that, he had a “grand-child, son unto his late son John Dexter, deceased—Richard Dexter, Jr.” and a “daughter-in-law Sarah,” who, (according to a record in the Clerk’s office in East Cambridge, of the birth of “Sarah, daughter of John and Sarah”) was the wife of John—who also had a son named John, [who died 1722, upon the “farm” in Malden—having possession of the same— $\frac{1}{4}$ deeded to him by his brother Richard, May 19, 1703, £60—and $\frac{1}{4}$ by his sister Sarah, then of Boston, May 6, 1697, £60—The latter John was styled “weaver,” in deeds, &c., and was the father of the Revd. Samuel Dexter, of Dedham, Mass.—It does not appear that John who died in 1677, made a will, being 38 only, may have been the cause of his omitting to make one; a circumstance which may account for his son John’s being in possession of “the farm,” he being the eldest son, and entitled to one-half of the same, at that period. An Inventory of whose estate was taken “20th of the 10th mo. (December), 1677, twelve days after his death, amounting to £320 9s. 0d,” including a bought servant £6 0s. 0d.

It is stated that Richard Dexter was a tythingman, probably of Boston, and we find in the Middlesex Court records he was styled Constable. He resided at Misticke 22d Sept., 1652, as Malden was then called; and was 68 years of age 1666, according to his testimony in Court in Middlesex.—It also appears by his last Deeds, 1678, that he was then a resident of Charlestown, and was consequently about 80 years of age—one of which being as an annuity during his life by his daughter Ann Pratt, July 22d, which may be supposed to have been his last, as we do not find his name upon any record of a later date.

2. JOHN DEXTER b. (1639) d. [g. s.] Dec. 8, 1677 at Malden. The farm in Malden, Richard Dexter (whose wife Bridget was then, probably, lately deceased) transferred Feb. 24, 1674/5 to his son John, reserving to himself for life a free rent. (The land in Malden where John Dexter's homestead stood still remains in the family.) At the time of the transfer, John Dexter's residence is given as Charlestown, where the birth of his daughter is said to have taken place. He was accidentally shot in the back Dec. 4, 1677, by Capt. Samuel Hunting, the wound causing his death.^{89,92}

WILLIAM BOARDMAN'S PETITION.

To the honoured County Court held at Cambridge 1-2-1684. We whose names are underwritten being requested by Will Bordman and Sarah his wife sometime the widow relict of John Dexter late of Mauldon deceased and by the advice of Thos. Danforth Esq. the honored deputy governor to inform his honored court concerning the estate the said John Dexter died seized of that a settlement thereof may be made for the good of the children and the late widow.

We humbly present as followeth first we find the whole estate by inventory for amount to 330 pounds whereof 110 in moveable the rest in housing and lands and the said John Dexter left three children two sons and one daughter the eldest about 6 yrs old and the youngest about one y^r old when he died and we find that they paid rent for the farm after his decease two years and half to his father Richard Dexter. We find that the said William and Sarah Bordman have disbursed for debts from that estate and reparations of housing and fences there-upon which was very much out of repaire 93 pounds.

Now if this honoured court judge meet to settle all the movable upon the said late widow now the wife of William Bordman forever (excepting and reserving one feather bed and furniture for the daughter of John Dexter when she comes of age) yet this will come considerably short of a quarter part of the whole estate and all so the said William Bordman and Sarah his wife in consideration of bringing up the children may have the improvement of the said farme till the children come of age and that then the housing and fences be left in tenantable repaire all which is submitted to your honours to determine.

Will of John Dexter, made Apr. 8, 1721, mentions wife Winnefred and three sons, Samuel, John and Richard. He probably had eleven children in all, as his grave-stone states that there are buried 'by him the bodies of eight of his children.'

† John Dexter, son of John (d. 1677), married Winnefred Sprague, of Malden, who was born Dec. 31, 1673, and died Dec. 5, 1752. Her son, Rev^d Samuel Dexter says, "She was a very pious Woman, strictly religious, lived in the fear of God, and died strong in faith, and full of comfort and joy."

The above John Dexter lived and died upon the "farm" or homestead in Malden—was styled "weaver," and was deacon of the church in that town;—he was also a captain of a company of foot under George I. whose commission we annex. He was a selectman of the town for the years 1709, 1710, 1716, 1717 and 1721—and was the moderator of a town-meeting in 1722, the year he died.—"There is a tradition," says M^{rs}. Palmer, in her account of some of the Dexter families, "that the parents of my grandfather [Rev^d Sam^l Dexter] having been bereaved of several young children, kept a day of fasting and prayer, previous to his birth, and when he was born, they called him Samuel, "asked of the Lord" [heard of God];"—She also says, "I do not know that afterwards they had any daughter, and but two sons, John and Richard." The account we have given on the preceding page of the children of John, was made in part from memorandums recorded by himself, probably about the time of their births and deaths; and the statement upon his gravestone in Malden—"and by him the bodies of eight of his children"—seems to be almost conclusive evidence that that was the number of his children—if Samuel was included in it—his remains being deposited, probably, in his tomb, at Dedham.

In the "Diary" of his son Rev^d Samuel Dexter he says—"Nov. 14, 1722.—This day, the Holy God, (whose ways are all perfect, and what he does is done in Righteousness for wise and holy ends), was pleased grievously to correct me, in removing from me my loving and tender Father by death." His illness having commenced "upon the 22d of October 1722"—His Will was proved at Cambridge, Middlesex, Dec. 10, 1722. In the same he also says—"Dec. 5, 1752. It pleased God, (who is holy in all his works, and righteous in all his ways) to remove from us (after great weakness and long languishment), our aged and honored Mother, Winnefred Dexter, by death, aged 79 years, wanting 26 days.—She lived thirty years and nine days after my father's decease. She was a very pious woman, strictly religious, lived in the fear of God, and died strong in faith, and full of comfort and joy."

By the Will of "Capt. John Dexter," we find he left all his real and personal estate to his wife Winnefred, for his children.—If she marry again, John and Richard to pay her £12 a year, during her life in money. He directs, "£100 to be paid to his son Samuel, in money, in two and four years; and £150 after his wife's decease, by John and Richard, £20 a year,—the reason he gives him no more, being, that he had given him learning and books; the balance of his estate, after his wife's decease to John and Richard, equally.—Winnefred Dexter, Executrix, and Samuel Sprague, his loving brother, her assistant,—April 8, 1721." The following is from an original receipt of Richard: "Malden, May 13, 1747. Received of my brother, John Dexter, (born 1705,) the sum of five hundred pounds of the old tenner: the first payment of thirteen hundred pounds, old tenner, for my Right in Reversion to the Real Estate that was our father's, as witness my hand.

Richard Dexter."

The Rev. Samuel Dexter's diary is still extant, in manuscript. Accounts of the Rev. Samuel Dexter's estate, naming the six surviving children, are at Boston.

[Note:] M^r. J. H. Dexter says she was a daughter of Thos. Smith a great navigator. I have not been able to carry her back of 16 June 1694 when she was widow and appointed admx. of William Gross of Boston.

O. P. D.

†Samuel Dexter (Rev^d) Son of John (died 1722) married Catherina Mears, July 9 1724, by M^r Benjamin Wadsworth, in Boston. She was the daughter of Samuel and Maria Catherine Mears, and was born Sept. 25, 1701, died June 10, 1797. Her maternal grandfather was Captain Thomas Smith, a mariner—a portrait of whom by himself, may be seen in the hall of the American Antiquarian Society in Worcester;—the portrait of his wife being also there, we believe, and that of his daughter Maria Catherine, mother of Mrs. Dexter is in possession of Misses Catherine and Rebecca Clapp, Dorchester.

He graduated at Harvard College, 1720, admitted to the church in Malden May 1, 1720, kept school at Taunton six months, commenced a school also in Lynn Feb. 1721, where he continued one year—and engaged in another in Malden for six months. After which his time was improved in preaching, his first sermon being delivered Oct^o 15, 1722, from Hebrews, 10:38, invited to settle in Brimfield, Medford, Westboro, (declined March 15, 1723) and Yarmouth; and was ordained in Dedham, as the fourth minister of the First Church in that town, now under the charge of the Rev^d Alvan Lamson, May 6, 1724 at a salary of £150—having received a unanimous call in the previous year—to which he gave the following reply:

Honored and Beloved,

Seeing that the Sovereign Jehovah, in whose hands are the hearts of all men, hath so far united the affections of the church and congregation in this place, that they have elected me (who am less than the least of all saints) to the work of the evangelical ministry among you, and hath inclined your hearts freely to offer, of your temporal good things so far as you have done for my support, I do therefore hereby declare (though with trembling, do I engage in so great a work, for who is sufficient for these things?) that I freely embrace your invitation, because I believe it to be my incumbent duty, and thankfully accept your offers, still relying upon your generosity, that as you have done so far you will further be spirited to do as my circumstances may require.—And now humbly hoping in and relying upon the gracious head of influences who liberally bestoweth the gifts and graces of his holy spirit to furnish and qualify me for the work of the ministry, let us strive together in prayer to God that he would make me skilful, faithful, and successful, that we may be crowns of joy to each other in the day of Christ's appearing.

That God would multiply grace, mercy, and peace to his people in this place, is the earnest prayer of him who would rejoice to spend and be spent in the service of your souls.

Samuel Dexter.

Malden, December 6, 1723.

In his Diary of Dec. 15, he says—"I gave my answer to the Dedham invitation though with much fear and trembling."

His ordination sermon was preached by the Rev^d M^r Baxter of Medfield.

He preached a sermon, Nov. 23, 1738, it being the 100th year of the incorporation of the town of Dedham, which was published.

He seemed to have been naturally averse to prominent positions, when invited to fill them, and generally inclined to seclusion; often alluding in his Diary to his being "very much straitened in prayer" and at times to his "suffering under very grievous, disheartening discouragements, extraordinary dullness and heaviness"; and says, "melancholly is so much my natural disposition that it makes my life very uneasy."—At a few months later date however, we find his "disheartening discouragements" were less "grievous" as the following extracts will show; "Nov. 22, 1723—This day was very cold. I communicated something of my mind to the young Lady—which I hope, (and I think I have reason to hope) may, through the smiles of indulgent Providence, be the Person in whom I may find the good thing, and obtain favor of the Lord.—I think I have not been rash in my proceedings—she is as far as I can find, a Woman of Merit—a woman of good temper, and of prudent conduct and conversation—and oh! Lord I would humbly wait upon thee for so signal a Blessing.

“Oct^o. 23, 1724. My companion is a kind, tender, and virtuous person, and I hope I have in her a good thing, which is from the Lord God, make her so to me.”

The father of his wife, Samuel Mears, who was born May 22, 1671 and died upon his birthday, May 10, 1727, kept a public house known by the name of the “George Tavern,” and was situated nearly on the line between Boston and Roxbury, and which was burnt July 31, 1775;—and afterwards the Sun Tavern in Corn-court, Dock Square, subsequently the Gov^r Hancock, Mrs. Braser.—In speaking of him, Mr. Dexter says—“He was in general, a just, honest man and very charitable for one of his capacity; had a very hard death—and I hope has exchanged earth for heaven.—My wife has lost a tender, loving father, and I have lost a very kind bountiful friend.”

Mr. Dexter's widow married Samuel Barnard, of Salem, in 1756, who died Nov. 21, 1762, in his 78th year, living with him about six years.—After his decease, she returned to finish her days in Dedham, in the family of her daughter, Catherine Haven, where she continued to be universally beloved and respected, and enjoyed a tranquil and happy old age—her remains being deposited in the tomb of Rev^d Samuel Dexter. She gave a Bible to the Church, a portion of which was to be read every sabbath.

Samuel Haven administered upon her estate July 6, 1797.

The following letters being of an early date, we transcribe from the original manuscripts in our possession:

DEDHAM, June 15, 1769.

Dear Son,

I have heard nothing from you of late—hope you are well, as through the goodness of God we are.—It looks very dull to me to think that I have lost a son [D^r Ebenezer Dexter] whom I tenderly loved; and his not being able to speak or signify what his thoughts of death, or what his hopes with respect to another life were add greatly to my grief—hope he was not unthoughtful or unprepared. God only knows I desire to submit to his holy, will, and humbly hope in his mercy. My thoughts are often with you, and the bereaved family, and earnestly beg of God to support and comfort, direct and assist as the case doth require; and that this affliction may be sanctified to us all, to make us more earnest to obtain the favor of God, through the merits of Jesus Christ, who is infinitely worthy and able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by him.—My Son, this is the one thing needful, which if we can obtain we cannot be unhappy, let death come sooner or later.—I hope you don't forget your mother, and your other friends at Dedham;—we don't forget you—we daily think of you—pray for you—and wish to you and yours, blessings temporal, spiritual, and eternal.

This from your affectionate Mother,
CATHARINE BARNARD.

†OBITUARY.

MRS. CATHARINE BARNARD.

Died in Dedham, June 10th, 1797, Mrs. Catharine Barnard, aged ninety-five years; an eminently good and pious Christian. From youth her life had been exemplary. Towards its close it became in an increased degree, instructive. They, especially, who were then her attendants can witness that the Scripture speaketh not in vain. "The work of Righteousness shall be peace and the effect of righteousness, quietness, and assurance forever."

Her first husband, by the side of whose relicks her remains are now entombed, was the Rev^d Samuel Dexter, of that town—her second, Samuel Barnard, Esq^r of Salem; with both of whom she lived in as much happiness as this imperfect state will admit of. By all who were acquainted with her she was greatly loved and respected; particularly by the friendly inhabitants of the place, where she was the kind companion of their much esteemed minister, more than thirty years, and resided a still longer time in a state of widowhood. As one generation passed off, the succeeding inherited the same affections.

The surviving sons and daughters, impressed with the ideas of her tender care of their early years, her serious instructions, her engaging example, and her fervent prayers for their happiness,—with tears, mingled with those of her more remote descendants, and relatives of every description, committed her to the dust; while all, with one consent, poured forth blessings on her memory.

While, perhaps, no one in so far advanced life ever experienced fewer of its inconveniences, none had more substantial comforts than Mrs. Barnard; among which should be recovered, as of weightier consideration in old age, a consciousness that as she merited, so she possessed the unceasing and unremitted attachment of all around her. But a habit of calm and rational devotion, produced by "the love of God in her heart, from a holy spirit given to her," was, above all other things, a source of enjoyment.

To one who had lived so long, to such good purposes, to one, who, though free from pain, was enfeebled by years and exhausted by the travel of life, "death was but the repose of wearied nature"; from which she will ere long arise to complete her journey to that holy city, of which such glorious things are spoken; there to be numbered with the children of God, and have her lot among the saints.—Columbian Centinel, June 21, 1797.

in and over His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England, &c. To John Dexter, gentleman, greeting. By virtue of the power and authority, in and by His Majesty's Royal Commission to Me granted, to be Captain General, &c., over His Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay, afore-said; I do (by these presents) reposing especial Trust and Confidence in your Loyalty, Courage and good conduct, constitute and appoint you the said John Dexter to be Ensign of the Foot Company in Malden, whereof Samuel Green is Captain, in the First Regiment of Militia, within the County of Middlesex, whereof the Honorable Spencer Phipps, Esq^r is Colonel. You are therefore carefully and diligently to discharge the Duty of an Ensign in leading, ordering and exercising said Company in Arms, both inferior Officers and Soldiers, and to keep them in good Order and Discipline: hereby commanding them to obey you as their Ensign: and yourself to observe and follow such Orders and Instructions, as you shall from time to time received from Me, or the Commander in Chief for the Time being, or other your superior Officers for His Majesty's Service, according to military Rules and Discipline, pursuant to the Trust reposed in you.—Given under My Hand and Seal at Arms, at Boston, the Fourteenth Day of June, in the Sixteenth year of the Reign of His Majesty King George the Second, Annoq Domini 1743.

W. Shirley.

By His Excellency's Command {
I. Willard, Secretary. }

The present John, who was styled Captain, was a Selectman of Malden 13 years and Representative to the General Court, 1663 and 1664, "When over four score years of age," says the History of Malden, "he was wont to say that he had heard his father (d. 1722) say, that he could not remember when the ancestral elm was a young tree." This tree being the first on the right hand, north west side of the avenue and next to the house—probably one of the oldest and most venerable in appearance in our country—a number of the trees having been set out by individuals belonging to several generations. An elm, supposed to be much older than any of those now standing, stood upon the opposite side of the avenue, and next to the house, but having become much decayed, it was taken down some years ago as a matter of safety. He was likewise town clerk several years, and a delegate to the Provincial Congress at Concord, as well as an active and efficient man during the Revolutionary War. Upon his gravestone in Malden burying ground are the following lines:

"In faith he lived, in dust he lies,
But faith foresees the dust shall rise."

Titus, his negro man-servant, died July 3, 1782. Minerva, his woman-servant, married to Cato, died April 5, 1765.

†ANECDOTE OF GEN^L WASHINGTON.

The following incident was related in the Bunker Hill Aurora, April 16, 1853. Its occurrence, it appears, was during the occupancy of the place by John Dexter of the Fourth generation, and communicated to the writer by Richard, his son.

Towards the fall of the year 1775, General Washington and staff visited Chelsea on horseback to view the features of the land thereabouts. They went from the camp in Cambridge, through Medford and Malden and stopped by the way for rest and refreshment at the residence of Mr. John Dexter, situated in Malden, by the brook, just before you enter the central village on the north side of the old road leading from Medford. This house was about fifteen rods from the street, and distinguished for its convenience and the beauty of its situation, having many stately elm trees growing in regular lines in an open park in front, besides others growing by the roadside near, and was thus well calculated to tempt a troop of weary horsemen on a summer's day to dismount, to enjoy the coolness of the shade, and the hospitalities of the mansion. Here, Washington and his suite alighted, and after hitching their horses under the trees, entered the house by invitation of Mr. Dexter, and partook of refreshments. When the party came out to remount their horses, one of the gentlemen accidentally knocked off a stone from one of the walls which ran along from the house to the street outside of the rows of trees. Washington remarked to him that he had better replace the stone. The officer having remounted replied, "No, I will leave that for somebody else to do." Washington then went quietly and replaced the stone himself, saying as he did so, "I always make it my rule when visiting a place to leave things in as good order as I find them."

This incident was related to us by Captain Richard Dexter, the son of the said John Dexter, who was a witness of the facts related, and at that time about nineteen years of age. Captain Richard was engaged in the privateering enterprises of the Revolution, and suffered severely as a prisoner in the old Jersey prison ship. He died in the year 1842, aged 86 years. Within a few years the old mansion has been taken down and a large and more fashionable building occupies its site. The old stone walls near the trees have also been removed, but the trees themselves, the growth of near two hundred years, remain to illustrate the liberality and taste of their founders, the first Dexters, who took possession of the premises in the year 1663. The place still remains the property of the lineal descendants of the same Dexters.

About the year 1786 he finally left Dedham, stayed at Marlborough and Roxbury, and in 1787 is found at Weston. From 1800 he lived at Mendon until his death. He was buried at Woodstock, Conn. Representative from Dedham to the General Court 1764 to 1768 inclusive. Elected to the Council each year from 1766 to 1774, he was rejected by the Governor in 1766, 1767 and 1774, but accepted the other six years. He m. June 28, 1748 (int. The will of the Hon. Samuel Dexter of Weston, dated Feb. 12, 1799, two codicils having been added at Mendon in 1802 and 1809, mentions his exact age, the fact that he was born at Dedham, children Andrew, Mary wife of John Bradford, Catharina Maria wife of Artemas Ward, and Samuel; grandson Samuel Dexter Ward; Samuel Dexter Ward son of his sister Mary deceased; brother-in-law Rev. Ephraim Ward, brother John Dexter, sisters Catherine Haven and Rebecca Clap.

†His father intended giving him a public education, and he was accordingly fitted to enter college, but as he preferred to go into the mercantile line, the idea of a college education was relinquished and he went to Boston as an apprentice in the store of Deacon Samuel Barrett, formerly John Barrett & Sons, near the Mill Bridge, Hanover Street. After he became of age, he commenced business for himself, in which he was very successful. He traded largely, for those times, at sea, and soon acquired sufficient property to retire from active employment, which he did, at about the age of 36. He went to Dedham, his native town, in 1762, and built a handsome house, where he lived for many years, "at ease in his possessions." He represented the town in the General Court, in 1764, '65, '66, '67, '68, '74, '75, and '85, and was town clerk and Selectman from 1764 to 1769. Soon after the commencement of the Revolutionary War, he left Dedham, and went with his family to Woodstock, in Connecticut, where he remained till the fears of himself and family respecting the enemy had subsided, when he returned to Dedham, and lived in his own house till the death of his wife. About a year after that event he sold his property in Dedham to Dr. John Sprague, and went to Marlboro, Mass., and boarded with Capt. Levi Holden, an officer in the war of the revolution, from whence he moved to Weston in 1786, and resided in the family of Enoch Greenleaf, for about two years, after which he remained in the family of his daughter (Mrs. Judge Ward) till Judge Ward removed from Weston to Charlestown, Mass., in the autumn of 1800, when he went to Mendon, Mass., and there passed the remainder of his days with his eldest son Andrew. At his death, his body, by his request, was carried to Woodstock and deposited in the centre of a piece of ground $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres, which he reserved when he left the town, though no one then knew for what reason, and by his own direction no stone tells where he lies. The preceding particulars are principally from a manuscript account of Mrs. Palmer. His funeral sermon was preached at Mendon, June 14, 1810, by Rev^d Sam^l Kendall, at his request, his text being, "The things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal;" in which he desired that no mention might be made of him, save only informing the assembly that it was delivered at his request, and that six hundred of the same might be printed. He also directed that a plain coffin might be made, and six of the poorest men of the town employed to carry him to his grave; that eleven gold rings with a lock of his hair in each be given to his relatives, and to several clergymen. The $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land in Woodstock, where he was buried, was to descend from minister to minister in that town, and no tree was to be allowed to grow upon it more than four years. His will, which is deposited in the Probate Office at

Worcester, and contained in a bound book of 37 pages, in his own hand writing, dated Feb. 12, 1799, contains a considerable number of bequests, among them the following:

- To Harvard College, for promoting a critical knowledge of the Holy Scripture, in three different bequests $5,000
- “ the town of Boston 350
- “ the Schools in Dedham 170
- “ Mass. Congregational Society 200
- “ Am. Acad^y of Arts and Sciences 200
- “ Agricultural Society 150
- “ Society for Propⁿ the Gospel 80
- “ Humane Society 50
- “ First Church in Dedham 35
- “ His brother John (void by death) 40
- “ Rev^d Dr. Kendall 40
- “ Pall Holders and Bearers 60
- “ Sick and Poor Persons 160
- “ S. D. Ward, his nephew a silver Can, S. D. C., which his Father chose always to drink from.
- “ S. D. Ward, his grandson, his portrait at the age of 66, at Mr. Lamson's in Dedham.
- “ Religious Societies in Marlboro and Weston, a Folio Bible, each, &c., all bequests exceeding $6,000.
- “ His sons Andrew and Samuel, and his daughters Mary Bradford and Catharine Maria Ward, $\frac{1}{4}$ each of his Real and Personal Estate.
- Andrew Dexter, Samuel Dexter, John Bradford and Artemas Ward, Executors.

He gave a clock to the First Church in Dedham in 1775, which place he left in 1785 and attended the Church of the Rev^d D^r Eliot, while he resided in Boston. According to the record we have of his and his wife's births he was seven years the youngest.

“He early distinguished himself,” says Judge Story, “in the struggles between the crown and the people of Massachusetts, previous to the Revolution, and for his public services was for several times elected to the Council by the House of Representatives, and as often rejected by the royal government of the province. He was at length admitted to a seat in the Council, by the prudence or the fears of the executive;

but in 1774 was again negatived 'by the express commands of his majesty.' Towards the close of his life he retired altogether from public affairs, and engaged in a profound investigation of the great doctrines of theology. At his death he bequeathed a handsome legacy to Harvard University for the encouragement of Biblical criticism; and upon this honorable foundation the Dexter Lectureship has since been established."

The following advertisement appeared in the Independent Chronicle, for the sale of his House in Dedham:

MR. DEXTER, OF DEDHAM,

Will sell his Real Estate in that town, but 10 miles from Boston, at so low a price, and on such easy terms, that whosoever may be inclined to possess it, will not find the time lost that may be spent in viewing the premises, and talking with the owner. The buildings are so well known, that anything in their commendation would be unnecessary.

The situation is delightful, the air healthful, the neighborhood agreeable: places for public worship are near at hand; the land is good, the water excellent, the fruit delicious. Provisions of all kinds are daily passing, and there is fine angling in Charles River.

Either 15 or 30 acres will be sold as may best suit the buyer.

After all this is said, it need scarcely be added, that the person who may wish to purchase, must apply speedily.

April 28, 1785.

THE DEXTER HOUSE.

DURING THE SIEGE OF BOSTON IN 1775-6—WASHINGTON
LODGED THERE AFTER THE BRITISH LEFT BOSTON.

DEDHAM, Oct. 3.—Hon. Erastus Worthington, clerk of the courts for Norfolk County and author of the History of Dedham, read a most interesting historical paper, entitled "The Dexter House during the siege of Boston in 1775-6," before the members of the Dedham Historical Society and invited friends tonight. The paper dealt largely with matters of local historical concern, as the Dexter House, as it was known in the days of the Revolution and as it is even yet styled, is still standing, a fine, solid old mansion, on the north side of High st., Dedham Centre.

Mr. Worthington in his paper said the house, the oldest in what is locally known as Dedham village, was completed for occupancy in the fall of 1762. It was built for and occupied by Samuel Dexter and his family, who removed to Dedham, Nov. 4, 1762. Mr. Dexter was a Boston merchant and retired from active business on his removal to Dedham. Connected with the house are many historic events which happened during the exciting period just before the Revolution and during the time of the siege of Boston by the British.

Samuel Dexter, so said the reader, was a leading public man in the Province of Massachusetts from 1770 to 1776. He served Dedham as a selectman, as a moderator of its town meetings and a deputy to the general court. Mr. Dexter served as a member of the provincial congress in 1774-5, and was in 1774 a member of the committee for the defence and safety of the province. In 1775 he was a member of the committee to draw up a resolve to be prefixed to the address to Gen. Washington upon his assuming the command of the American forces.

It was at the Dexter House, April 4, 1776, after the British had evacuated Boston, that Gen. Washington, on his way from Boston to New York, lodged.

Dr. Aaron Dexter had, besides, twins, born and died the same day in Feb. 1806. The will of Dr. Aaron Dexter of Cambridge, dated Feb. 17, 1827, mentions the six surviving children.

†Dr. Dexter graduated at Harvard 1776, studied medicine with Dr. Samuel Danforth, and made several voyages to Europe as a medical officer; established himself towards the close of the Revolutionary War as a Physician in Boston, and became much distinguished in his profession, was first Professor of Chemistry and Materia Medica at Harvard in 1783, till 1816, when he was appointed Professor Emeritus of Chemistry and Mineralogy, which office he held until his death. In one of his voyages, as mentioned above, he was taken prisoner by the British and carried into Halifax. After many hardships he was exchanged and returning to Boston, began the practice of his profession. His residence was in Milk Street, the stores built and partially occupied by A. & A. Laurence & Co., being upon estate. After leaving college he taught school for two months at Malden, and in the summer of '75 was an interested and intelligent witness of the battle of Bunker Hill from the Malden side of the river. (Analectic Mag., xi., p. 257.) He was an early member and promoter of the Massachusetts Historical Society and a member and promoter of many other literary and charitable bodies. He had a decided taste for farming, and owned for that purpose the large tract in Chelsea on which the U. S. Hospital now stands. See Bi-Centennial of Malden, Mass.,

p. 173, History of Malden, pages 629 and 812 and Massachusetts Historical Society Proceedings, pages 421-423.

He took an active interest in public affairs and served in the winter campaign in which the uprising known as Shay's Rebellion in 1787 was overcome.

Item. I give unto my son Samuel Lord Dexter, three thousand dollars to be paid him by my executors in twelve months after my decease. Also the improvement of fifty shares in Essex Merrimack Bridge during his natural life; and in case he should leave any natural heir of his body, lawfully begotten, my Will is that the said fifty shares be equally divided between them; but if he should die without such heirs, my Will is, that the said fifty shares be divided between my brothers, Nathan Dexter and John Dexter, as follows, viz.—three fourths part thereof to the said Nathan, and one fourth part to said John, and their heirs and assigns forever.

Item. I give unto my grand-daughter, Nancy Bishop, one thousand dollars, to be paid her by my executors, when she shall arrive at the age of twenty-one years; but if she doth not live to the age of twenty-one years, that then said money to be given to my brother Nathan and his heirs.

Item. I give unto John Tracy, son of John Tracy, Esqr., two shares in Essex Merrimack Bridge, if he should live to the age of twenty-one years; if he should not, my Will is that said shares be equally divided between his sisters.

Item. I give unto Joseph Somerby, school-master, two shares in Essex Merrimack Bridge, to him and his heirs, also my best Silver Can, my turtle-shell pinchbeck Watch, three of my best silver spoons, and one pair of gold Sleeve Buttons.

Item. I give unto the town of Malden, three hundred dollars, to be laid out to purchase a bell for the meeting house;—

also two thousand dollars to be put at interest for one hundred years, and the interest to be appropriated annually for the support of the gospel in said town of Malden.

Item. I give unto the town of Newburyport, two thousand dollars, to be put at interest by the overseers, and the interest to be given to such of the poor of the town as the overseers may think most necessitous, who are not in the work-house annually.

Item. I give unto my son Samuel Lord Dexter, and my daughter Nancy Bishop, all the rest and remainder of my estate, both real and personal, to them and their heirs; but if the said Samuel and Nancy should die without heirs, then my Will is, the same be divided between my two brothers and their heirs.

Lastly. I constitute and appoint Deacon Enoch Titcomb, and Nathan Hoyt, both of Newburyport, to be my sole Executors to execute this my last Will and Testament; and I order my Executors to pay all my just debts, and funeral expenses, and all the legacies that I have bequeathed; and I do hereby revoke all former and all other Wills by me heretofore made, this only to remain in force. The Newburyport Herald in alluding to his death, October, 1806, remarked, that "No one will impeach his honesty, and his numerous acts of liberality, both public and private, are within the recollection of all, while one of the items in his last Will, will be gratefully remembered. His reason left him two days before his death, but he has gone to render an account of his life to a just and merciful Judge." His residence was in High Street, Newburyport, one of the finest situations in the town, with about seven acres of rich, well cultivated land covered with fruit trees, and affording as fine a site as the eye could desire. The "Dexter House" was very large and commodious, and was, till some time after his death, surmounted by a large number of wooden statues of celebrated men as was also the fence and gateway, in the midst of which stood his own figure—all of which have been removed, and the house which was originally green, has been painted brown, and recently sold to Edward S. Rand, Esq., of N.

"Lord Dexter," as he was universally styled, was excessively vain and eccentric, and was often profuse of his money, which he had been uncommonly fortunate in amassing, if he was made prominent thereby—a propensity not entirely unknown in the characters of many of his species—generally for purposes of utility, however, and not without considerable liberality. He was one of the most illiterate men of his day, as his "Pickle for the Knowing Ones" will show; but he was remarkably shrewd and calculating in his business concerns, which it is well known were generally attended with great success. In the latter part of his life, he erected a tomb in the immediate vicinity of his house, with a request that his remains might be deposited in it, but his friends declined to comply with his desire, and he was buried in the ancient burying ground, with the rest of his kindred, a few rods from his mansion; his grave being very near the road, and upon the white marble head-stone is the following inscription:

In memory of
Timothy Dexter,
who died October 23, 1806,
Etatis 60.
He gave liberal donations
For the support of the Gospel,
For the benefit of the Poor,
And for other benevolent purposes.

His house was occupied as a boarding-house for a long time after his death—his daughter Nancy residing in it till her death, who, it will be seen, married Abraham Bishop, of New Haven, Conn. It was by the direction of her daughter, Mrs. Clark, that the house was entirely changed in its outward appearance some years before it was sold.

He advertised Lands in the Ohio Company for sale, and for Loan Office Certificates wanted. Apply to Capt. Swan, near the Mill Bridge, (Middle Street), January 8, 1789.

His will made May 23, 1821, left everything to his mother-in-law, Eunice Jenkins.

Andrew Dexter's will made Sept. 20, 1814, mentions wife and chn. as above.

†He was for sometime a merchant in Boston, and afterwards in Providence, but on leaving business he went to Mendon and resided there several years. After his father's death he removed to Athens, N. Y., where he died. He was married at Woodstock, Conn. May 5, 1778.

We have stated that he was a Merchant in Boston, without any further knowledge at the time of his being so; but having since met with the following advertisement, in the Massachusetts Gazette, and Boston Weekly News-Letter, of May 21, 1772, we give a copy of it to show his place of business, and the style of advertising at that period. It was enclosed in ornamental flowers, as they are called by printers, which gave it a distinguished prominence in the paper:

ANDREW DEXTER.

In Hanover Street, little to the southward of the Mill Bridge—goods of various sorts, wholesale and retail, fresh and new from different ports.—He could assert that they were bought with ready money—immediately from the manufacturers, and best of the several kinds that were ever imported—all this he could say, all this indeed is easily said.—But if he should add that shop-keepers might have his English Goods as cheap as from the Merchants in London, he fears that some folks would call it puffing, and others would give it even a worse name.—If his goods are cheaper than they are sold at any other shop in town, 'tis abundantly sufficient.—He will not, however, roundly affirm any such thing.—He only wishes good people, Country Shopkeepers in particular, as they pass along, would be kind enough to call and inform themselves. After they have viewed every article he has got, though they should not then chuse to purchase, even one of them, he will nevertheless own himself under great obligations, and will kindly thank them for having given him reason to hope, that at some future time, they will favor him with their custom.

His Store was probably near the entrance of Marshalls Lane, from Hanover Street—the Mill Bridge being a few rods below.

The following notice appeared in the Northern Whig, a newspaper published in Hudson, N. Y., and edited by W. L. Stone, afterwards of the Commercial Advertiser of New York City, of November 13, 1816: Died in Athens, on Tuesday morning last, aged 65 years, Andrew Dexter, Esq., only brother of the late Hon. Samuel Dexter of Boston. Not brilliant, but possessed of a strong and intelligent mind strictly upright in all his dealings, a tender parent, and a benevolent friend, he shared the esteem of all.

†Mrs. Bradford possessed a mind uncommonly strong, energetic, and discriminating. Her manners, all friendly, benevolent and kind were the index of her heart—sincere in every expression, and in every feeling she uttered. Her mind was deeply imbued with religion. As a speculation it engaged much of her thoughts and of course was perfectly liberal; and as a practice, it influenced the whole of her life. She sustained the relations of a child, of a wife, of a parent and a friend, therefore in perfect consistence with her excellent principles. Her life was long enough for all its purposes—for her friends it might have been lengthened out still for years to come.

Middlesex Deeds show that Katherine Dexter was the widow, and Katherine G., Samuel W., Franklin, Mary R., were the heirs of Samuel Dexter Aug. 29, 1816.

†He graduated at Harvard College 1781, and went into the profession of the law, says Mrs. Palmer, rose rapidly into professional notice, and was soon surrounded with clients and business. He passed the usual preparatory term of his law studies under the tuition of the Hon. Levi Lincoln, the elder, at Worcester, Mass. Soon after his commencement in the practice of the law he was chosen a member of the State legislature; afterwards to the House of Representatives and Senate of the United States; and was appointed Secretary of War, July 1st, 1800, and Secretary of the Treasury, Jan. 1st, 1801, being also a short time in charge of the Department of State at Washington. He was offered a Foreign Embassy by John Adams, which he declined; and an extraordinary Mission to the Court of Spain, by President Madison, in 1815, but declined the appointment. He drafted the eloquent answer of the Senate to President Adams' Address on the death of Washington. "Mr. Dexter," says Judge Story, in his charge to the Grand Jury of Mass. District, May, 1816, "was a man of such rare endowments, that in whatever age or nation he had lived, he would have been in the first rank of professional eminence. In his person, he was tall and well formed, of strong and well defined features, and bold in muscular proportions."

At the close of April, 1816, Mr. Dexter, with his daughter, was on a journey to be present at the marriage of his son (Samuel William) in Athens, N. Y., but died there of scarlet fever without witnessing its consummation. A discourse was delivered in Trinity Church in that place, on the Sunday following his interment, by the Rev^d Joseph Prentice, its Rector, in which he says: "His comprehensive mind, by the resistless force with which it seized its object, and by its almost intuitive perception of truth, however involved, evinced that it was cast in no common mould; and hence his powers and his views are utterly incapable of being measured by ordinary or contracted minds. His frame and features were highly masculine, his eye and countenance noble and expressive, his nerves uncommonly susceptible, and his feelings proportionately strong and delicate. As a counsellor, Mr. Dexter was pre-eminent, and as an advocate he stood unrivalled."

He was frequently called to Washington on professional business in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Samuel Dexter lived in Charlestown in April, 1798, where the "Dexter Block" now stands, and advertised his dwelling house and gardens at auction, Aug. 14, 1800.

The following account of the death of Mr. Dexter is copied from the Northern Whig of May 7, 1816, published at Hudson, N. Y., then edited by W. L. Stone, afterwards of the Commercial Advertiser, N. Y. City:

"Died at Athens, opposite this place, on the 4th inst., Hon Samuel Dexter, Esq^r of Boston, Mass., aged 55. I am informed by the physician who attended him from this city that his complaint was a scarlet eruptive fever, supposed to be similar to an epidemic prevailing in and about the city of Washington. It may be proper to state, that Mr. Dexter arrived here from Washington, accompanied by his family, in the steamboat, on Sunday the 26th ult., crossed directly to Athens, so visit his friends, and felt some indisposition that evening, but did not think it necessary to call medical aid until Tuesday; was able to walk his room until Friday afternoon, and suddenly closed his earthly existence at 7 o'clock on Saturday morning.

"He was buried at Athens on Sunday afternoon. The Common Council of this city had previously made arrangements for attending the funeral. At 4 o'clock the corpse, preceded by the clergy and attending physicians, and followed by the mourners, the Common Council of this city, the Trustee of the village of Athens, and citizens, moved from the house of Andrew Dexter, Esq^r., to the Church, where divine service was performed by Rev. Mr. Prentice. The funeral was attended by a numerous concourse of people, where silence evinced the solemnity of the occasion.

"The political life of Mr. Dexter has been somewhat mysterious and remarkable. Lips that once cursed him in the bitterness of malice, were reverently employed in extolling his talents; and his virtues. Hearts that once poured the vials of political wrath upon his character and person, were now actively engaged in placing him in the chair of state. But notwithstanding the violence of party, the change and virulence of opinions, his principles seemed to have remained not only unimpaired, but to have taken deeper root. Some of the leaves of the tree, may, in bud, have fallen—and the tenderest branches been bent—but the trunk has stood firm and erect amid the fury of the veering tempest. Upon the whole, he will be entitled to an honorable place in the assembly of statesmen. As a father, friend, advocate, his death will be more severely felt, and more deeply lamented. Among the distinguished luminaries of the law, he stood conspicuous, and shone with peculiar splendor. Perhaps no one has ever excelled him in legal science and forensic eloquence since the days of Hamilton."

†THE TOMB OF DEXTER.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Athens, New York, dated November 24, 1817, to his friend in this town (Boston):

As a further apology for not having sooner addressed you, I might mention, that my attention has been very much occupied for sometime past by the sickness and death of our mutual acquaintance, and my very dear friend, Gen. Haight: and by the building of a Tomb to receive the ashes of that distinguished Advocate and Statesman, the late Hon. Samuel Dexter.

At his decease, which took place, you will recollect, in this village, he was temporarily interred, under the idea that his remains should be removed to Boston. Two of his children however having since settled in this State, and one of them in this vicinity, Mrs. Dexter, on her last visit here, concluded to have her husband's remains deposited in a Tomb, to be settled in the burying ground, which lies on an eminence directly in the rear of the new Episcopal Church; which stands nearly central between the two wings of the village. Nothing now appears to distinguish the place where he lies, but a trifling elevation of the earth over the tomb.

I understand, however, that in the course of the ensuing year, a neat and suitable monument will be erected to his memory. This, as it will be in full view of the river for several miles in length, must be a very interesting object to such of his acquaintance and friends as may pass thus far up the Hudson. And it can scarcely fail of calling forth the pensive, pious and salutary reflections, of all who had enjoyed his society, or are capable of estimating his talents, and of appreciating the loss which his country, and particularly your Commonwealth, has sustained by the early death of this Great Man.

I have been several times deeply interested by the inquiries of distinguished persons from different parts of the union, who having some knowledge of him, and travelling this way, stopped for the purposes of giving his dust a locality in their minds: And while they spoke of him in the language of admiration and profound respect, their eyes fastened, with a kind of veneration, upon the turf that enclosed him, and the involuntary tear has, in some instances, started forth, as if urged by feelings of the deepest respect that the voice of Dexter can be no more heard.

I know not how you may be affected by subjects of this nature; but as to myself, the mere idea of providing a resting place for the ashes of so distinguished a fellow being; ashes which were once animated by so pure, so penetrating, so excursive, so powerful a mind, plunges me into the most painful and mortifying thoughts on the frailty of man, and for a season renders tasteless to my soul everything but sadness and solitude. —Centinel, Dec. 31, 1817.

OBITUARY.

†MRS. SAMUEL DEXTER.

Her deeds will her memorial be.

Seldom has death during the last half century bereaved us of one leaving such records of goodness as the late Mrs. Samuel Dexter. So well was her kindly heart known and appreciated, that when strangers in former times made this city their temporary residence, often disheartened and afflicted, they were reminded that one hospitable door was open to them, where they could meet a cordial welcome, and find all the delights of home, in which word is centred most that is dear to us. In her dwelling was seen all that taste and ingenuity could dictate: The flowers trained by her hand were ever in bloom to gladden the invalid and refresh the sick room; showing the cheerful disposition which collected the sweets from the rugged paths of existence, where most of us find thorns. The warmth of heart was visible in all the relations of life; those committed to her guidance, though in the lowest capacity, were treated with parental tenderness, and their sincere love was her reward. So entirely free was she from all selfishness, that no enjoyment was prized unless shared with others. If truth showed frailties in members of the community, she never censured them, having full faith in the efficacy of the Holy Spirit to renew the lost image of goodness in their souls. The poor had experienced her kindness so long, that they relied as confidently upon the stores set apart for them, as if in their own possession, her contributions were bestowed in so kind a manner that the wretched never lost their self-respect, or considered themselves mere objects of charity.

This faint outline of the character of our departed friend is but a shadow of the reality; those most intimately acquainted with her know that the constant practice of the many Christian virtues which she possessed in so eminent a degree, was the means of diffusing so much happiness to those around her, and which has endeared her memory to us all.

Dec. 19, 1762) of Marlboro, (Mass.); commenced his apprenticeship at the printing business in July or August, 1803, in the office of the Columbian Centinel, Benjⁿ Russell, proprietor and editor, where he remained about seven years; from whence he went into the dry goods store of Amos Laurence, No. 31, Cornhill, serving the remainder of his minority as a fellow apprentice with Abbott Lawrence, who continued with his brother Amos till he became of age, being then taken into co-partnership with him, under the firm of A. & A. Lawrence. John H. Dexter commenced business at No. 48½ Cornhill, the estate being formerly owned and occupied by Margaret Phillips, mother of John Phillips, the first Mayor of Boston, as a "shop-keeper" (d. 1789) in the dry goods business. From whence he removed, after a few years, to No. 52, the estate of Andrew Brimmer, formerly occupied by him. He afterwards formed a connection with his brother Lambert, under the firm of J. H. & L. Dexter, while located here, which co-partnership was dissolved in consequence of his becoming the Agent of Messrs. A. & A. Lawrence in England, as a purchaser of Merchandise on their account, leaving his brother again alone in the business, who continued in the same store till about 1820, where he relinquished business, and about a year after formed a co-partnership with William Almy, as Dexter & Almy, in the dry goods business in 1821, at No. 20 Cornhill, subsequently removing to Central Street and Liberty Square, retiring from business at the close of 1833. After leaving business, he made a voyage to Europe, in the ship George Washington, Captain Holdredge, sailing from New York, October 8, 1834, being absent about a year.

THE LATE GEORGE M. DEXTER.

At a special meeting of the wardens and vestry of Trinity Church, held on Thursday, November 28, 1872, the junior warden, Charles H. Parker, Esq., presiding, the Hon. Robert

C. Winthrop offered the following resolutions, which were seconded by John Codman, Esq., and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we have received with deep sorrow the announcement of the death of our respected associate, George M. Dexter, Esq., whose important and faithful services to our church for more than forty years as a member, a vestryman, and for a long time past as senior warden, had won for him our warmest regard and affection.

Resolved, That we shall ever cherish the memory of our lamented friend as a man of eminent purity and piety: of the most obliging and generous disposition, always ready and always active in good works, disinterested and self-sacrificing, a Christian gentleman, whose courtesy and kindness had endeared him to all with whom he was associated.

Resolved, That the unsparring devotion of Mr. Dexter to the interests of our church for so long a time, and particularly during the period of its recent changes and trials, has entitled him to be inscribed among its best friends and benefactors; and that we recommend to the proprietors that a tablet to his memory be placed on the walls of that new "Trinity" to which he had already given so much time and thought, and in the progress of which his loving care and superintendence will be so much missed by us all.

Resolved, That we will attend the funeral of our lamented associate at Emanuel Church at 12 o'clock to-morrow.

Resolved, That an attested copy of these resolutions be communicated to the family of our friend, with an assurance of our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement; and that the resolutions be also entered on the records of the vestry, be reported to the proprietors of the church at their next meeting, and a copy sent to the Boston Daily Advertiser for insertion.

Attest:

STEPHEN G. DEBLOIS,
Secretary of Trinity Church.

The Late George M. Dexter.—At a special meeting of the trustees of the Massachusetts Society for Promoting Agriculture, held at No. 42 Court street, on Friday, the 29th November, at 10 o'clock A.M., the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, Whereas, "it has pleased God in his wise providence" to remove from this world our associate and friend

George M. Dexter, a trustee of this society, we hereby record our deep sense of the loss which the society has sustained in the death of one so devoted to its interests and aims, and so competent to promote them.

Resolved, That the trustees, while lamenting the decease of a Christian gentleman and true friend, whose cheerful, amiable, benevolent and sympathetic character endeared him to all who knew him, yet recognize that the loss to us is gain to him who had reached "the allotted term of life, and departed ere his eye was dim or his natural force abated."

Resolved, That the trustees attend his funeral in a body at 12 M. to-day, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family with expressions of their profound sympathy and regard.

E. N. PERKINS, Secretary.

STORY OF THE LIFE OF ANDREW DEXTER.

BY COLONEL MICHAEL L. WOODS.

Andrew Dexter, the founder of the city of Montgomery, was born in Brookfield, Mass., March 28, 1779. He died in Mobile, a victim of yellow fever, Nov. 2, 1837. His ancestors were wealthy and distinguished people. His father, Andrew Dexter, was born in Boston about 1750. His mother, Mary Newton, the daughter of Simon Newton, of Newport, R. I. was born in that city March 21, 1757. His father and mother were married in Woodstock, Conn., May 5, 1770. His father was a most successful merchant. His mother was one of the most beautiful women of that day, and it is said the son resembled her in a striking manner.

His grandfather, Samuel Dexter, of Boston, was a leading man and compatriot of the Adamses and Hancocks. His maternal grandfather, Simon Newton, was a man of large wealth. He was born at Bristol, R. I., June 25, 1720. He married Mary Sigourney, Jan. 17, 1740. She was born at Newport, R. I., July 19, 1723. Simon Newton died Jan. 20 1808. His wife died May 13, 1810. They lived together in the marriage state 68 years, wanting one week only.

Mr. Dexter's father had but one brother, Samuel Dexter, who was born May 14, 1761, and graduated at Harvard in 1781. He was a member of Congress 1793-5, and senator 1799-1800. During the administration of John Adams he was Secretary of War, 1800, and Secretary of the Treasury, 1801, and for a short time also had charge of the Department of State. In 1812 he changed his party relations and became a leader on the other side, and was a candidate for Governor in 1815 and 1816 in opposition to Governor Brooks. He was offered the mission to Spain by Mr. Madison. He died in Athens, N. Y., May 3, 1816.

Mr. Dexter, the founder of Montgomery, graduated at Brown University with the highest honors of the institution in 1796. He studied law with his uncle, Samuel Dexter, and for a short time resided with him at Washington City, as his private secretary, while a member of the cabinet. After admission to the bar in 1800 he practiced law several years in Boston, and for some time was a partner of his uncle. He soon attained an enviable standing at the bar, but becoming successful in two or three enterprises foreign to his practice his imagination was so captivated by these new pursuits that he soon ceased to pay much attention to the law.

In 1807 he made a purchase, on favorable terms, of a highly valuable lot of land in the city of Boston. By subsequent purchases he added to this all the adjoining property, so as to embrace an entire square. Here, after tearing down the old buildings, he erected the magnificent Boston Exchange, covering nearly the whole ground and rising to the height of seven stories. This structure, the design of which was entirely his own, was admitted to be the most tasteful and elegant in the United States. The cost for building and furnishing was $800,000.

The plan and purpose of the building was alike unique. It was designed as a kind of a city in a city, or city in miniature which should concentrate in one focus the news, commerce, law literature and fashion of the metropolis of New England, combining under one roof the city, municipal and post-offices, law offices, brokers' offices, merchants' exchange and trading rooms, city assembly rooms, and one of the best hotels in the Union. It was finished in 1809, and was the pride of the city until entirely consumed by fire in 1825. (†Nov. 3, 1818.)

Mr. Dexter was at the same time president of the Boston Bank, and had under his control a very large number of the internal country banks. The Boston Bank redeemed the bills of these country banks on presentation, which arrangement gave greater uniformity to the currency. Mr. Dexter, however, extended his credit entirely too far, in the erection of the Exchange, the cost of which altogether exceeded his expectations, considering that the only hope of success rested upon the completion of the building, which would render the capital embarked in it available, and enable him to sustain himself; he strained every nerve to effect this object, and he always contended that he would have been successful in this, had it not been for an interested combination of brokers, who, by concerted efforts, obtained control of such an overwhelming amount of the country currency redeemable at the Boston Bank as to force the latter to suspend payment. The immediate consequence of this was the failure of Mr. Dexter for the immense sum of $1,200,000, exceeding in extent, it is believed, any failure which had occurred at that time (1809) in the United States.

Shortly before his failure, in 1808, Mr. Dexter married Charlotte Apthorpe, youngest daughter of Perez Morton, attorney general of Massachusetts, a lady of the most lovely and accomplished character. She died in this city, Aug. 17, 1819, of bilious fever, living only twelve days after her arrival from the North, to join a husband to whom she was truly devoted, and from whom she had been separated for two years. She was buried in Oakwood cemetery, being among the first females buried there.

Perez Morton, the father of Mrs. Dexter, was born in Plymouth, Mass., Nov. 13, 1751, and died at Dorchester, October 14, 1837. He was graduated at Harvard in 1771. He was a member of the Committee of Safety in 1775, and an active administrator of public affairs during the Revolution. In April, 1776, he delivered in behalf of the Boston civil authorities the formal oration over the remains of General Joseph Warren. This address, it was said, "though eloquent, was an elaborate ornate production." He studied law after the peace, became eminent in his profession, and was Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, in 1806-11 and Attorney General in 1811-32. In 1820 he was a delegate to the State Constitutional Convention.

The mother of Mrs. Dexter was Sarah Wentworth Apthorpe. She was born August 29, 1759. She married Perez Morton in 1781, and died in Quincy, May 14, 1846. She was a constant contributor of short stories to the Massachusetts Magazine, and gained quite a reputation under the pen name of "Philona," part of which was due to the laudatory comments of Robert Treat Paine, Jr., by whom she was styled the "American Sapho." She also published "Onabi, or the Virtues of Nature," an Indian tale in four cantos. "My Mind and Thoughts," reflections in prose arranged with great formality, and various other poems.

Shortly after his failure, Mr. Dexter removed to Nova Scotia, where Mrs. Dexter had relatives, among whom was the then Governor, Sir John Wentworth and a sister, married to a rich Provincial. Governor Wentworth was born in New Hampshire, and was a graduate of Harvard, 1755. He had been sent to England in 1765 to present petitions from his native province and in 1766 was made Governor of that Province, and "surveyor of the King's woods in America."

As Governor he gave a charter to Dartmouth College and endowed it with nearly 45,000 acres of land. He returned to England just prior to the revolution. After peace was declared he came to Nova Scotia and became Lieutenant Governor in 1762. He was given a baronetcy in 1795.

Mr. Dexter remained in Nova Scotia about eighteen months. While there, with the aid of his friends, he embarked in the manufacture of salt upon the Philip River, but did not succeed according to his expectations, principally from want of sufficient capital.

In 1810 Mr. Dexter returned to the United States and settled at Athens, on the Hudson River, where his brother then resided. Here he remained for six years, during which time his restless activity displayed itself in the greatest variety of pursuits. Among these were cutting ship timber from land belonging to his father; the manufacture of buck on a large scale for the New York market, the opening of marble quarries in the interior of the State, cultivation of the soil; the establishment of a large Academic Institution, to which he gave a portion of his personal attention, and experimental researches in natural philosophy with a view principally to useful improvements in the arts, particularly those connected with heat, and of water as a mechanical agent. Commenting upon this portion of his life, a near relative in 1848 wrote: "But fortune continued to frown upon his efforts and to withhold that golden crown which is seldom awarded unless as the meed of perseverance in a single pursuit."

In 1816 Mr. Dexter's father died, as already stated, his estate considerably impaired by the assistance which he had rendered his son in his unfortunate operations. By the death of his father, Mr. Dexter came into possession of a considerable amount of Georgia land script, which he determined to locate personally in the Alabama Territory. In pursuance of this plan he went to Washington, and thence to Milledgeville, where the Land office of the Territory was then located. It is reliably stated that he had, before arriving there, from information received in the City of Washington, determined to secure, if possible, that point on the Alabama River, now known as Montgomery, and adjacent lands. He was fully aware of the value of the point as a town site, and even before arriving there, as he declared afterwards, he had decided upon the general plan of his embryo city.

As this sketch is not intended to be one of the city of Montgomery, but one of the person who founded it, many facts connected with the early history of the city will be omitted.

The whole town was known for several years as New Philadelphia, a name which the relatives of Mr. Dexter say he gave it. It was soon changed to Montgomery. In laying off the town, Mr. Dexter purposely gave such a direction to the main street as to cause its alignment to coincide with the summit of a beautiful elevation, reserving upon the summit a square, which he confidently predicted would at some time be the site of the State House, giving to the elevation the name of Capitol Hill. Mr. Dexter also donated five acres for a cemetery. This now constitutes the south half of the "old graveyard," or "Scott free burying ground." To this donation Gen. John Scott in 1828 added five more acres.

Soon after the first settlement of Montgomery, Mr. Dexter embarked in what proved a very disastrous enterprise, the building of a set of mills on the Catona Creek, about eight miles from Montgomery. Shortly after the successful completion had been affected, which in that day had been attended with a heavy outlay, the whole affair was entirely swept away by a freshet.

This, together with some subsequent unfortunate building operations, etc., crippled Mr. Dexter so much that he was compelled to part eventually at a very low price, with nearly all the valuable lands near Montgomery, embracing several thousand acres, which he had secured by his Georgia script. In 1830 Mr. Dexter left Montgomery and was absent three years. A portion of this was spent in Mobile, where he obtained the confirmation of a great many valuable claims in and about the city for persons in whose behalf he acted, from the general government. He made at the same time some very profitable investments in the purchase of forfeited land certificates. For his exertions in this way he obtained a considerable body of waste lands in the environs of Mobile, which although intrinsically of no great value, was estimated and taxed in 1836 at about $100,000.

The larger portion of these three years was spent in the Mexican State of Coahuila and Texas. Here he purchased land script and located it, but the amount due to the government for the land, was paid by his heirs after his death to the Republic of Texas.

From his return to Alabama from Texas in 1833 to the time of his death, four years, he resided principally in Mobile, his attention occupied in land matters, particularly the establishing of old claims under the Spanish and French jurisdiction, many of which from the ignorance and neglect of the parties, had been overlooked by our government. By his success in this business he established in a short time a high reputation and his counsel and co-operation were secured in many of the most important cases. He was thus gradually returning to that sphere which was his true position, and from which he had been led in early life by the fascinations of a speculative enterprise. Here he had a field for the exercise of that research and patient power of investigation for which he was eminently characterized.

At the same time that he was thus occupied, he was engaged for the last two years of his life in the construction of a ruinously expensive saw mill near Mobile, to procure funds for which he sold or placed under mortgage all his estate in and near that city. His sudden death at the close of a year of general disaster, left his affairs, like those of so many at the time, in a state of hopeless embarrassment. As stated above, he died Nov. 2, 1837, at the age of 58 years, 6 months and 5 days.

He fell a victim to his benevolent and charitable impulses. Living in a healthful position eight miles from Mobile, the prevalence of the yellow fever could not deter him from visiting the city every day, and when there, of administering, as had always been his practice, to the sick. An acquaintance whose life had been despaired of, he determined to save if possible. He remained with him night and day, and shortly after his recovery had been affected, he was himself violently attacked by the fatal disease. He had such confidence in the strength of his constitution, which was indeed remarkable, that when attacked by the epidemic, he merely repaired to his office, where he usually slept when in the city. Here, attended by a faithful servant, he took medicine and communicated his condition to no one, no member of his family being then in that part of the country, after which, becoming sensible of his danger, he called in the best medical advice in the city. But the disease could not be arrested, and after an illness of only four days duration, he breathed his last. It has been written of Mr. Dexter, "that, it may be truly asserted, he never allowed an opportunity to pass of relieving the distress of a fellow-being," and as an instance, "that, on one occasion he explained a prolonged absence from home, when he was residing near Montgomery, in 1823, by stating that he had been detained in the "nation" (as the country inhabited by the Creeks was then designated) in endeavoring to save the life of a poor Indian at whose cabin he had happened accidentally to stop."

S. Newton Dexter was born in Providence, R. I., May 11, 1785. He died in Whitestown, November 18, 1862. His father Andrew Dexter, was the first manufacturer of cotton goods in the United States. His grandfather, Samuel Dexter, of Boston, left a bequest to Harvard College, the income of which now goes to the Professor of Biblical Literature. His great-grandfather, Rev. Samuel Dexter, a graduate from Harvard in 1720, was pastor of the Congregational Church in Malden, Mass., where he died in 1775. S. Newton Dexter was prepared for college under the instruction of Rev. Caleb Alexander, Mendon, Mass., who afterwards prepared the way for the chartering of Hamilton College by gathering funds and shaping public opinion. Soon after his admission to Brown University, Mr. Dexter gave up his plans for study, to accept a business engagement in Boston. In 1815 he removed to Whitesboro, where he lived for forty-seven years. In 1824, he undertook a very heavy contract on the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal. This occupied five years, and involved an expenditure of over two millions of dollars. In 1829 he became the agent of the Oriskany Manufacturing Company, and in 1832 the agent of the Dexter Manufacturing Company of Pleasant Valley. In 1835 he was elected a trustee of Hamilton College, and in 1838 president of the Bank of Whitestown. In 1840 he was appointed one of the Canal Commissioners and in 1850 one of the Managers of the State Lunatic Asylum at Utica. His first wife was Laura Northrup, of Athens, to whom he was married October 26, 1811. His second wife was Mrs. Martha Raymond Gold, to whom he was married February 3, 1848.

OBITUARY.

MRS. KATHARINE GORDON MCKAY.

Died at New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 10th, 1841, Mrs. Katharine Gordon McKay, daughter of the late Samuel Dexter, of this city.

The death of this lady is deeply lamented by those who knew her worth and loved her for her virtues. Deeply impressed with a conviction of the solemn responsibility of her sex, she sought ever to discharge with fidelity her high duties in all the relations of daughter, sister, wife, and mother, which she sustained. Her character was cast in no ordinary mould. It was marked by qualities that command respect and secure confidence and attachment. She was distinguished for independence and decision of mind—attributes so important in a woman, for a genuine honesty of purpose, and a mingled sincerity and frankness of manner which none could ever for a moment distrust; and her affections, sanctified by the chastening influence of affliction, and hallowed by Christian faith and hope, glowed with purity and power in her breast, making her thoughtful for others, forgetful of self, ready to improve every opportunity of usefulness which providence offered, and to contribute what she might to the comfort, happiness, and virtue of others.—Her charity ever commensurate with her means, had that quality which the Saviour approves—the left hand never proclaimed what the right had done. She was singularly free in all respects from ostentation or affectation.—The governing principle of her life seemed to be a simple earnest desire to know the truth and to do her duty.—Her thirst for intellectual acquisitions neither the cares nor the sorrows of life had extinguished.—Her mind was enriched by extensive reading and study.

She did not imagine that because she was a woman, it was not necessary for her to inquire and form a judgment and opinion for herself.—With a masculine vigor of intellect, she investigated for herself the profoundest subjects of moral and religious truth, and was ever eager to gather new light and fresh knowledge from whatever source it could be derived.—Her faith was the firm and honest conviction of her mind, the result of patient thought and earnest prayer.—It was also that “faith of the heart which is unto righteousness.”—What she believed to be true she aimed to embody in her character and apply to her conduct.—Within the last few years, a dark shadow had been thrown over her lot, by the death of an endeared husband, and two sons in the bloom of opening manhood, whose high principles and noble purposes and manly piety were an evidence that the mother had been faithful in her trust.—In these bereavements she manifested the strength of her faith by her calm and cheerful resignation to the divine will, and the holy energy with which she applied herself to the discharge of the duties that in consequence devolved upon her.—

While on a visit to a brother in New Brunswick she was seized with a disease incident to the climate which in a few days terminated fatally. To a character so formed, to a life so spent, death could never come inopportunately. She met it with unruffled calmness, with a faith firm as the throne of God, and a hope bright as his glory.

OBITUARY.

Samuel William Dexter was born in Boston, Feb. 18, 1792. He was the eldest son of the distinguished statesman Samuel Dexter: he graduated at Harvard in 1812. In May, 1816 he married Augusta Emilia Prevost, and lived at Athens on the Hudson. His wife and one son died in 1822; the other son died in 1849 unmarried. In August, 1824, he came to Michigan and located in the vicinity of the present village of Dexter. During that year he married Susan Dunham. In 1826 he brought his family to live in a house which he had built in Dexter, and the next year he lost both wife and son. In 1828 he married Milliscent Bond. Their house was used as a house of worship for many years, and also as a home for the different preachers who came to conduct the services.

Mr. Dexter established the first newspaper published in Washtenaw Co. in 1829, at Ann Arbor: It was called The Emigrant.

In 1826 he was appointed chief justice of the County Court, by Hon. Lewis Cass. In the same year he was solicited to become a territorial delegate to Congress, but declined the office. In 1826 Judge Dexter established a private post-office in his own house, and carried mail on horseback to and from Ann Arbor, once a week. He located Saginaw City and Byron in 1825.

Judge Dexter was an Anti-Mason, a strong temperance, and a thoroughgoing anti-slavery man. His time was occupied with his books, private and public charities, and the society of his friends. He was a fine scholar, because his studies did not terminate with the end of his college course. He was an incessant reader; a graceful and at times powerful speaker. For the last twenty years of his life, finding that certain points of the country round about were not supplied with regular means of worship, he preached to the people in various school-houses. Judge Dexter died at the old homestead in Dexter, Feb. 6, 1863.

Article taken from the Boston Transcript several years ago.

—————Claims for the honor of originating the transcontinental railroad idea have been made for many persons, but the distinction unquestionably belongs to S. W. Dexter, or to the man who wrote that article printed in 1832 in Dexter's paper, The Ann Arbor Emigrant.

Barlow had an article in The Intelligencer, a weekly newspaper in Westfield, Mass. in 1834 advocating a route across the continent over a course which the Northern Pacific followed very closely long afterward, but Barlow referred in that article to the contribution previously printed in The Ann Arbor Emigrant.

S. W. Dexter was also interested in getting the Michigan Central Railroad to run through Dexter—he gave free right of way through all his land, and worked for it in other ways.

†FRANKLIN DEXTER married Cath^{ne} Elisabth Prescott, Sept. 28, 1819, daughter of Hon. William Prescott, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Massachusetts, who was born Aug. 19, 1762, and son of Col. W^m Prescott, an officer at the Battle of Bunker Hill, who died Oct. 13, 1795. L.L.D. conferred upon Franklin Dexter at Harvard University July 15, 1857.

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF HON. FRANKLIN DEXTER. We have to report the death of the Hon. Franklin Dexter, which event occurred last night at his summer residence in Beverly. The deceased was the son of the Hon. Samuel Dexter, whose life has recently been so ably sketched in these columns by our correspondent "Sigma." He was born in Charlestown, Mass., about the year 1794, and graduated at Harvard College in the class of 1812. He selected the profession of his distinguished father, and after admission to the bar, was a partner of the late Hon. William Prescott, whose daughter he married.

Mr. Dexter has filled various public stations with great ability. He has been a member of the Boston City Council, has served in both branches of the State Legislature, and as the United States District Attorney for Massachusetts. He pronounced the oration before the authorities of Boston in 1819. He took deep interest in military matters, and commanded the New England Guards. His contributions to literature are numerous, and indicate good taste and culture. The pages of the North American Review give evidence of his interest in the Fine Arts and his rare gifts as a critic.

He was a liberal patron of Art, and the warm personal friend of many of our most gifted native artists. His taste was refined, and he was noted for his appreciation of the grand and beautiful.

Mr. Dexter occupied a high rank as a lawyer, and the acuteness of his mind and his powers as a reasoner were universally acknowledged in the courts. He was one of the counsel for the Knapps for the murder of Mr. White of Salem, and his plea on that occasion elicited much praise. He was more successful in his management of the case of Mrs. Kinney, in the Supreme Court of this County. Being blessed with a competency, Mr. Dexter some years since retired from practice and travelled in Europe.

He has taken much interest in political matters since the question of the extension of human slavery was agitated, and his influence has been freely given in behalf of the cause of freedom. He early took a decided stand on this question, and, without either radicalism or sectionalism, advocated the cause of liberty in the spirit of the founders of the Republic and the framers of the Constitution.

RECENT DEATHS.

SAMUEL G. DEXTER OF MALDEN.

Mr. Samuel G. Dexter, one of the most respected citizens of Malden and one of the largest real estate owners in that city, died yesterday afternoon at his home, "The Elms," on Elm street, corner of Dexter street, Malden. He was born in Malden in 1826 in the old Dexter place, which has been in the family since 1663. It is an old mansion of commanding appearance, leading to which is a fine avenue of large, old elm trees. General George Washington at one time was a visitor at this historic house, and rested under the shade of these noble trees. Among the heirlooms still preserved in the family is a tall silver tankard bearing the name of Paul Revere, the silversmith, who made it, and this tankard is now especially treasured from the fact that from it Washington refreshed himself. Mr. Dexter and his brother, the late Richard Dexter, owned a large tract of land at the West End, and did much to develop that section of the city, now the best residential section of Malden. Much of the original Dexter property was taken to form a part of the Middlesex Fells Reservation. Samuel Dexter was a descendent of the Dexters who came to Malden in 1600, and the property came to him through his grandfather and father. He never held any public office. For many years he was engaged in the woodenware business on Broad street, Boston, and will be remembered by many of the oldest merchants of this city. Later he was connected with the Cochrane Chemical Company, but the latter part of his life was given to the development of the real estate in which he was interested. He leaves a widow, son and daughter. His son, George P. Dexter, engaged in the real estate business with his father, and is now the last in the male line of the Dexter family, so long identified with the history of Malden. The daughter, Martha P., is now Mrs. James Elder Harris. The funeral service will take place on Thursday afternoon.

[Note 1.] The National Cyclopædia of American Biography contains the following sketch: Dexter, Henry, merchant was born at West Cambridge, Mass., Mch. 14, 1813, son of Jonathan Marsh and Elizabeth (Balch) Dexter, grandson of David Dexter, great-grandson of Richard, great-great-grandson of John, the son of Richard Dexter, who fled from Ireland when the massacre of Protestants took place there in 1641. At the age of fourteen he entered the publishing house of Lincoln & Edmands in Boston, where he served an apprenticeship of three years, and for three years he was second foreman in the printing office of Harvard University. In this way he secured an understanding of the Greek, Hebrew and North American Indian Texts, and of medicine and law, knowledge which came to be of much value to him in after life. In 1836 he removed to New York, where he first entered the employ of Grannis, White & Co., and later occupied a position in a hardware business conducted by the Whittemores, the inventors of the famous carding machine, in Boston, of which he was the agent for the New York house. In the fall of 1842 Mr. Dexter bought the interest of his brother's partner in the firm of Dexter & Tuttle, dealers in books, periodicals, and daily papers for $1,600, and the name became Dexter & Brother. At first only a small office was occupied, but the business increased so rapidly that a larger room was soon rented on Ann Street, and in 1850 the whole building was leased. In 1859 George Dexter and Henry Whittemore retired, and the firm of Henry Dexter & Co. was organized, with two young men who had been his clerks as partners. Three years later the partnership was terminated by the death of one of the partners, Mr. Dexter continuing the business alone. Subsequently he united with the firm of Hamilton, Johnson & Farrelly, under the name of H. Dexter, Hamilton & Co. In 1859 he conceived the idea of forming a company by consolidating all the leading newsdealers. The opposition of one particular dealer, however, prevented the consummation of the plan until 1864, when this dealer found it to his interest to come in. As according to the law at that time, it took seven to form a joint stock company, Mr. Dexter gave his brother one share so as to make the seventh, and the company thus started was the foundation of the present American News Company. Some of the original members are still connected with this company. All the funds necessary to carry on the business were supplied by Mr. Dexter, as the other members were entirely without means, except their respective businesses, and there was nothing out of which they could make capital, it being a purely commission business. From 1874-76 Mr. Dexter was residing in Torquay, England, and was requested to establish a branch in London. Within three days Mr. Dexter formed this company in connection with Willmer & Rogers, which has now become the International News Company. Under the new firm the sphere of trade was gradually extended throughout the United States, with important branches in Canada, England, France, Germany, the East Indies, Japan, China, and Australia. The American News Company now conducts over forty-six branches in the principal countries of the world. Mr. Dexter acted as president without salary, and after his resignation, in 1896, retained the largest interest in the company. During his early years he was active in reform and independent politics, and was elected on an independent ticket for four years to reform the public school system, and was one of the founders of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in connection with George P. Putnam, the publisher, who was the first projector. In his travels, which extended over nearly every part of the world, Mr. Dexter has exercised a wonderful retentive memory. Being a close observer, he obtained a knowledge of even the minute details of the various localities he has visited. He is a life director of the American Bible Society and the American Tract Society; a life member of the New York Historical Society, the Geographical Society, the Young Men's Christian Association, and the Children's Aid Society, the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, St. Luke's Hospital Society, the New York Christian Home for Inebriates, and the Charity Organization Society; a trustee of the Protestant Episcopal Church Missionary Society for Seamen, and the Midnight Mission, and a member of the Chamber of Commerce—to all of which he has contributed with a generous hand. He was instrumental in making the New York Exchange Bank national through his personal efforts with Secretary McCullough, and of which he was president for a short time. He is to-day a perfect representative of the fine old school of merchants, possessing in spite of his years such a vigorous vitality that his appearance is that of a man twenty-five years younger. Several able articles on politics and travel have appeared from his pen in the daily press; one in particular, giving his ideas in regard to the Dead Sea, was published in many magazines. He has fostered many young men in their early business struggles, and many a home has been made happier by his material help. Mr. Dexter was married at Southport, Conn., Oct. 11, 1853, to Lucretia Marquand, daughter of Orrando and Clarissa (Treadwell) Perry, of Easton, Conn., who died in August, 1899. By this union he has had one daughter and two sons. His son Orrando was educated in Harvard and Christ Church, Oxford. He took honors, and the degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him by special convocation.

[Note 2.] A biographical sketch of Orrando Perry Dexter, published for private distribution by James T. White & Co., Publishers, New York, 1904:

ORRANDO PERRY DEXTER, son of Henry and Lucretia Marquand (Perry) Dexter, was born in New York city, Oct. 31, 1854. During his boyhood he attended private schools in New York city and in Europe, and in 1869 he entered Phillips Exeter Academy to prepare for Harvard University. Early in his studies he showed marked ability in mathematics. In this connection, so well-known a mathematician as Prof. George A. Wentworth has this to say of him, under date of Jan. 7, 1904: "Mr. O. P. Dexter, who graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy in 1872, was the neatest and best mathematician that was under my instruction for the 33½ years during which I was professor of mathematics in the academy. Mr. Dexter took not only the regular course, but an advanced course. Professor James Mills Peirce, of Harvard College, who examined Mr. Dexter's papers for admission to Harvard College, took the trouble to come from his room in Holworthy Hall across the college yard to congratulate me on Mr. Dexter's brilliant examination, and assured me that Mr. Dexter's mathematical papers were the finest he had ever read since his connection with the college." He entered Harvard as a freshman, and petitioned the faculty to allow him to enter the sophomore, junior, and senior classes in mathematics, which they did, and he took highest honors. Up to that time such a thing had never been known in the history of the college. After spending two years in Harvard, he decided to go to Oxford University and devote himself more to the classics. He graduated in 1878, after a four years' course. He then entered the Columbia Law School and received the degree of LL.B. in 1880. The degree of A.M. was conferred upon him by Oxford in 1881 by a special convocation. During the same year he published a pamphlet of 36 pages, entitled: "The Division of Angles," of which the following mention was made in one of the scientific magazines at the time: "'The Division of Angles,' by O. P. Dexter, is the official publication of the mathematical theory of the very important discovery made by the author. This discovery is the solution of the problem, long ago practically abandoned by mathematicians as impossible, of dividing exactly, theoretically, and mechanically any angle into any number of parts. The simplest application of the problem, not solved by methods heretofore known, the trisection of an angle, or how to divide any angle into three equal parts, has been in great danger of becoming as hackneyed as that of 'squaring the circle.' It is believed that, besides the great addition it will be to mathematical and mechanical science, this discovery will prove to be of great practical value. For this purpose the discovery has been practically applied and patented, and an engraving showing a circle divided into seven equal parts by the patented machinery has been added at the beginning of the pamphlet. The simplicity of the mechanical arrangement is such that, after a machine for dividing an angle into three parts has been constructed, to increase its efficiency, for a greater division, no parts of new pattern are needed, but simply duplicates of parts already in use." Much of his time after graduation was given to genealogical research, and he made a very valuable collection of genealogical works. He had traveled over Ireland and England, collecting data relative to his own and other genealogies, and he had at his finger-tips the family trees of dozens of prominent American families. He had traced the ancestry of his family back to the twelfth century. He found that the head of the American family came from Ireland in 1642 to Malden, Mass., and his estate there is still in the family. The results of his researches concerning the Dexter genealogy are being prepared for publication. In 1884 he published "An Index to Savage's Genealogical Dictionary of New England." He was well acquainted with New England town records and was often consulted by those interested in genealogy. He was the first person to suggest that the records of Fairfield, Conn. (his mother's birthplace), be carefully safeguarded, and out of this suggestion grew the Fairfield Historical Society, of which he was a member. He loved nature and animals. This led him to seek a retreat in the Adirondacks, and in 1886 he made his first purchase in Franklin county, including Dexter Lake, started to build his summer home, and began to accumulate property for a preserve, which eventually led to his untimely death. He was very much interested in the preservation of the forests of the Adirondacks, in order to conserve the water-supply of the state. He got his greatest enjoyment out of life in planning for the enlarging and beautifying of his estate, and in communing with nature. He was unmarried. Several years before his death his father was anxious that he should marry, and urged him to do so, offering to buy him a fine house in New York if he would bring a wife to it. But he was a confirmed bachelor, though only 49 years old. He cared nothing for society. He had strong convictions on the liquor question, and was a total abstainer. He spent the summer of 1903 at Dexter Lake, and on Sept. 19th met his death at the hands of an assassin. The New York papers for several days contained lengthy accounts of the murder, and numerous motives for the commission of the crime. The murdered man was charged with being forever engaged in suits at law with his neighbors, had thereby earned their enmity, and that if someone of them had not shot him, at least no one was sorry that he was dead. Shortly after the shooting the New York Herald published the following interview with John P. Badger of Malone, N. Y., who was his warm, personal friend and had for years been his legal representative: "I wish to deny published reports that Mr. Dexter was probably shot by a person or persons with whom he had formerly had litigation. It is not true that Mr. Dexter was continually in litigation with his neighbors in Franklin county. At the time of his death there was but one case pending in court in which Mr. Dexter was interested, and the other parties involved reside in New York city. The motive of the crime has been more correctly drawn from other conditions and circumstances. Mr. Badger then related Mr. Dexter's recent purchase of land in St. Lawrence county and of the antagonism aroused. On the parts of several persons, feelings of intense hostility toward Mr. Dexter were entertained. They and their patrons and friends have engaged in such denunciations of Mr. Dexter for forbidding the use of the stream for floating timber as well-nigh bordered upon threats. To get a clear idea of the situation that has arisen out of this terrible crime in Franklin county, one must have a comprehensive view of the vast estate Mr. Dexter was building up in the wilderness of wild lands. His 'plant' as one may term it, consists of a fine cottage, a building for workmen to live in, from 6,000 to 10,000 acres of wild lands, a farm house about a mile and a half from the cottage on the highway, a lake three-fourths of a mile wide and a mile long, beside which his cottage stands. The forest for acres around abounds with deer; any one may see them upon the wooded hills while rowing or sailing on the lake. The lake itself is full of trout. The preserve offers greater temptation to the sportsman, perhaps, than any other estate in the North Woods. The cottage is furnished with everything for comfort that modern times can suggest or afford. It is a perfect little palace set in a wilderness. From this delightful retreat Mr. Dexter set out last Saturday at 12.40 P.M. to drive to Santa Clara, four and a half miles away, to get his mail at the post office there. He was alone. The stories that he had been in fear of an attack from enemies are untrue. He had no notion of being attacked, and his pistol is still lying on a shelf in his cottage, where it always was. It is not true that Mr. Dexter was hated by many residents of the country about. He had been in litigation with but few of them. I can remember one case in which Mr. Dexter caused a man to be arraigned before the grand jury charged with having set fires on his land. The grand jury did not bring an indictment and the man brought suit for malicious prosecution. I argued this case for Mr. Dexter, and the judge non-suited the case for malicious prosecution. That was a long time ago. One man who was in litigation with Mr. Dexter has since borrowed money from him, showing that he entertains no hostility toward him. The stories about Mr. Dexter building houses in open roads to blockade certain landowners to force them to sell to him are all untrue. He did at one time appeal from the assessment levied on his property by the board of tax assessors, but we succeeded in getting the members of the board to visit the estate, and they reduced the assessment and the affair was amicably adjusted. I want to say this: that while Mr. Dexter had certain asperities of manner which made him appear rather forbidding and distant to some persons who did not know him well, he was a good man, and never did any man a wrong intentionally. He never sought litigation, but he would never flinch from it if it were brought." The body of Mr. Dexter was shipped to New York, and the funeral service was held in St. Thomas's Episcopal Church. In accordance with his father's wishes, great simplicity was observed in the service. The burial service of the Episcopal Church was read by Rev. DeWitt L. Pelton, the assistant pastor. The burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery, where the body was placed in the Dexter family tomb.

*Arthur Fenner Dexter was born in Providence in 1835. He was the son of Samuel and Elmira Fenner Dexter, his mother being the daughter of Governor James Fenner. In boyhood he attended the public schools, but he was fitted for college at the Freeze & Lyon's school. Entering Brown University, he remained there two years and then went to Hamilton College, located in Clinton, Oneida County, New York, where he completed his collegiate course. He then entered the Albany Law School and after finishing his studies there, returned to this city and was admitted to the bar. He opened a law office in company with Francis Hoppin, and continued to practice his profession until the outbreak of the War of the Rebellion, when he was commissioned as Captain of Company A. First Rhode Island Detached Militia. On account of ill-health he resigned his commission and was mustered out of service August 2, 1861, returning to this city. For some years he attended entirely to the management of his property, but after the death of his mother in 1873 he became a member of the Oakland Beach Company and acted as Agent. He was afterwards the Treasurer and Agent of the Asphalt Block Pavement Company, which established extensive works in the city, and still later he was interested in the Manton Ship Windlass Company. In March, 1884, Mr. Dexter became the editor of the Evening Telegram, but this position he was obliged to relinquish after the lapse of a year on account of ill-health. Mr. Dexter was well known not only in Providence but throughout the State. He was several times one of the representatives of the Third Ward in the Common Council, and his services as a municipal legislator were characterized by honesty and purity of motive and disinterested zeal in behalf of the city and his fellow-citizens.

 Harvard, contains the following: "His family was among the original settlers of Oneida County. He came of the New England family of Dexters, a member of which gave to Harvard a considerable endowment more than a century ago. His grandfather, S. Newton Dexter, who was a nephew of Samuel Dexter, of President John Adams' cabinet, was one of the prominent and wealthy men [of his time. After his graduation in 1870, at Harvard, Dexter edited the Rocky Mountain News, of Denver, Colo. for two years, and, except for a few years spent abroad, was connected with the editorial staff of the New York Sun from that time up to the date of his death.

While abroad in the year 1890 he met his wife, a pianiste of reputation, and publisher of several musical works; a resident of New York, of old Knickerbocker parentage, her mother having been a Cowenhoven, of the family of early Dutch settlers of that name. . . . For the four years prior to his death, he was associate editor with his wife of the Parisian Magazine, of which they were the owners and originators, while filling at the same time his position as a night editor on the New York Sun. He was a man of fine moral sense, of high intellectuality, with a nature of the truest delicacy and refinement," &c. &c.

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF F. GORDON DEXTER.

OLD MERCHANT AND FINANCIER

Was in the Shipping Business with the Appletons Years Ago and then in Union Pacific with the Ames Family. He Owned Much Real Estate in Washington.

F. Gordon Dexter, of the famous Dexter family of lawyers and merchants, died at his residence, 55 Beacon street, on New Year's day, after an illness of several months' duration. He was 78 years of age, and the son of Franklin Dexter, one of the older leaders of the bar in the days of Daniel Webster, Jeremiah Mason and Rufus Choate.

F. Gordon Dexter was born in Beverly and lived there through his boyhood. He went into the importing business with William Appleton & Co., starting as supercargo on vessels on which they imported goods from the East Indies. Later he became interested in railroad projects. In association with the Ames family, Mr. Dexter was interested in the Union Pacific road and with other railroad properties, but of late years he had given his attention mostly to developing real estate interests, his holdings of Washington property being large.

At one time he was in partnership with Samuel Hooper, then a member of Congress.

He leaves two children, Dr. Franklin Dexter, professor at Harvard University, and Gordon Dexter, who has been associated with him in his office for the past few years.

The death of Mr. F. Gordon Dexter removes another of those old Boston merchants and business men who gave a unique distinction to this city in its earlier days. He belonged to the distinguished Boston family whose name he bore, and although he began his business career as a merchant, he later became connected with railroad building in the West, and was at one time prominently identified with the Union Pacific railroad, in close association with the Ames family. He was a fine type of a courteous and accomplished gentleman.

I., afterwards went to Boston and in 1846 opened a grocery store in Worcester, was eminently successful; in 1887 gave up his trade and has since devoted his time exclusively to developing his investments and managing his property. Although never prominent in public affairs, Mr. Dexter has been a member of the Common Council and of the School Committee. He has long been recognized as one of the most generous and liberal givers towards the Worcester Academy, where one of the dormitories is named for him, and where for thirty years there has been an annual contest in declamation for the Dexter prize. He has recently erected a soldiers monument in his native town of Charlton, and in the near future a handsome town hall and library combined will still further attest to his liberality. He has long been a member and prominent in the councils of the Baptist Church.

The Dexter Family.

DEXTER GENEALOGY. 1642-1904. Being a History of the Descendants of Richard Dexter of Malden, Mass., from the Notes of John Haven Dexter and Original Researches. By Orrando Perry Dexter, M.A., Oxon. Arranged by Henry L. Mills, New York: Press of J. J. Little & Co. The American News Company, selling agents. $10.00 net.

At the time of his tragic death on his estate at Dexter Lake, Franklin County, N. Y., in September, 1903, the late Orrando Perry Dexter was engaged upon the compilation of an elaborate and exhaustive genealogy of his family, the descendants of Richard Dexter, who was "admitted as an inhabitant of Boston" in 1642. The work thus so untimely interrupted has been completed by Henry L. Mills, retained for the purpose by Henry Dexter of New York, father of Orrando Perry Dexter, and is presented in a limited edition of 400 copies, with every elegance of print, paper and binding.

The Richard Dexter above mentioned came from Ireland (County Meath) and belonged to a branch of the family which under the name of De Excester had gone from England into Connaught in the reign of Edward I. and had reached some distinction, especially in the person of Richard De Excester, who was Lord Justice of Ireland. The late O. P. Dexter had gathered from the Irish Record Office many interesting documents relating to De Excesters or Dexters of this line, and quaint old transcripts of the charter rolls, Ulster Office reports, inquisitions, post mortem, &c., are printed in the first part of the present volume, occupying some twenty pages. The remainder of the 279 pages is devoted to the records of the American family, one of the most distinguished members of which was Samuel Dexter, who was United States Senator in 1799, and was in 1800 Secretary of War and then Secretary of Treasury. Yet another man of mark among many in the list was Andrew Dexter, who was the founder of the City of Montgomery, Ala. Altogether the book is most satisfactory of its kind, and is provided with an extremely copious index, a thing apt to be neglected in genealogical works—chiefly, one might suppose, because so absolutely essential to comfort in using them. The binding is in particularly excellent taste—black cloth with the Dexter arms in gilt in the lower right-hand corner.
