THOMAS EAMES' FAMILY

INTRODUCTION.

This labor I commenced more than four years ago with a desire to make as complete a record of the Births, Marriages and Deaths of the Eames family and descendants from the first Eames that I could get any knowledge of to the present generation, as could be obtained in this country. I have found in the prosecution of this work untold difficulties, disappointments and trials, that at times almost compelled me to give it up, and were it not for earnest wishes and promises of some that felt the strong desire for a family record that impelled me on, I think I should have given it up.

It may seem a small work to look at and it is small in amount, but let any one look back only four generations and see what progress they could make to get a correct history of their ancestors. I have had much correspondence, and have spent time and money to get the amount that is here. But I have spent no time to investigate any of their virtues, vices, private, or public history. But in all my investigation for names and dates, I have found none that were ashamed to own their relationship.

I find from the "History of Framingham," from which I have largely quoted, that "Thomas Eames came from England at the age of 12 years, and at the age of 22, married Margaret, and settled at Dedham, in Massachusetts, where they had three children. His wife died in 1660, and he married Mary Paddleford in 1662, and then removed to the town of Sherburne, which soon after formed a part of Framingham, and where they had six children. It was at this place the event took place as related in the King Philip war, or as was called the Indian war in Massachusetts.

"Some interest attaches to this Indian community, not only from their proximity to this town, but from the part they took in the destruction of Thomas Eames' house in Framingham, the only event of Philip's war particularly connected with the town, which will soon be related. The Indians of Magunkook, with those of the other praying towns, were brought under serious suspicion at the opening of the war. The greater part of the Christian Indians were disarmed, and sent to Deer Island, where, according to Gookin, they suffered extreme hardships. The inhabitants of Magunkook were among those who most readily yielded to the enticements of Philip, so that after the war their plantation was broken up.

"The formidable combination under King Philip, spread consternation through the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts, and threatened a general ruin of the whites. The designs of that crafty chieftain had been suspected as early as 1671, which led to the dangerous expedient of a general disarming of the Indians. The first act in the tragic war which followed, was the attack upon the people of Swanzey, June 24, 1675. Others succeeded in various places, until the memorable Narraganset fight, on the 19th December, 1675, upon the issue of which, Philip retired into the western parts of Massachusetts.

"A few weeks after that event, occurred the incident we are now to relate. Thomas Eames, who a few years before had leased the "Pelham Farm," at Sudbury, settled, near 1670, within the bounds of the Plantation of Framingham. He built his house on the southern slope of Mount Wayte, between the Sudbury river and Farm pond, at a distance of about seven miles S. W. from the ancient town of Sudbury, and about three miles E. from the Indian town of Magunkook. A partial depression of the surface, with the surrounding apple trees, still indicate the spot, which is upon the farm of Mr. Harrison Eames. His family consisted, at the time now referred to, of a wife and nine children. On the 1st February (some accounts say the 2d) 1675-6, during the absence of the father, who had gone to Boston to obtain a supply of ammunition, a party of about twelve

Indians, headed by Netus, approached the house, one of them remaining in the corn-fields at a distance, probably as a watch. Tradition states that two of the children were surprised at the well, and seized ; and that the mother, who had resolved never to be taken alive, made a brave resistance, and being employed at the time in making soap, poured upon the assailants the boiling fluid. The Indians soon succeeded in firing the house, and either killed or took captive the entire family ; at the same time destroying the barn. with the cattle and stores.

“ We learn from the confession of the Indian actors in this domestic tragedy, that near the month of June following the event, the two daughters of Mr. Eames were “at a great hill about midway between Watchusett and Penecooke, in good health, and not in a starving plight ;” that Mattahump had one of the daughters, and Pumagen the other. They were supposed, in August, to be in the neighborhood of Fort Aurania, (Albany.) Respecting the subsequent fate of the captives, we know little more than that two sons and one daughter were happily restored to their desolated home and friends. Tradition throws an air of romance upon the fortunes of Margaret, the daughter. The colonial government having despatched some agents to obtain the release of captives detained in Canada, one of their company was in his own turn captivated by the attractions of the daughter of Mr. Eames, whose release he had obtained, and whom he soon after made his wife. ; The Cambridge Records are authority for the fact, that Joseph Adams married Margaret Eames, in 1688.

"The following inventory exhibits the particulars of the loss sustained by Mr Eames

"The actors in the affair we ha<sup>e</sup> related, did not long escape the hands of justice. Netus, the leader of the party was killed March 27th, at Marlborough, by a party of English under the command of Lt Jacobs, and his wife was sold. Amcocken, another, was dead before the close of summer. August 11th a warrant was issued by Thomas Danforth, magistrate, for the arrest of "Joshua Assatt, John Dublet, son-in-law to Jacob, William Jackstraw and two of his sons, the name of the one Joseph, also Jackstraw's wife, all of whom late of Moguncog Indians." Three of them, viz., William Wanuckhow, alias Jackstraw, and his two sons, Joseph and John, were taken and examined by Mr. Danforth the 14th of the same month, before whom they made confession of the act, assigning as its cause, "their missing of corn, which they expected to have found at Mongoncocke." They also accused two others, Joshua Assatt, then absent in the English service at Marlborough, under Capt. Hunting and Awassaquah, who was sick "at the Ponds." The three were committed to prison, and Joseph was indicted, with probably the others, who were tried September 18th. How many of their accomplices, if any, were afterwards brought to justice, does not appear. Gookin states that "three were executed about Thos. Eames his burning." The execution took place the 21st of September. "Two of the murderers," according to the petition of the Eames' sons, "Old Jacob, a chief man sometime at Natick, and Joshua Assunt, returned and were pardoned, and lived at Natick many years after." The close of this war of so disastrous issues to the Indians, undoubtedly dictated a course of forbearance and clemency to the accused; since justice had already been satisfied by the blood of three of their accomplices.

For the severe loss sustained in this affair, computed, as we have, at £330, (a large sum for those days,) Thomas Eames received a small indemnity. The General Court granted him, "various considerations thereunto moving," 200 acres of land. He also sued the Indians at law, and obtained from them a tract of 300 acres. But no recompense in land or treasure could restore to him his desolated home. He survived the calamity a few years, and died about a week before the fourth anniversary of the event of Jan. 25, 1680, aged about 62."
