*Arms.*¹ Azure, a chevron argent, two estoiles d'or in chief, crescent argent in point.

¹ Copy certified by Public Librarian at Valenciennes, and by the Alderman (April 6, 1903), and stamped with the seal of the Public Library, seal of the City, and the seal of the French Government.

The first of the name of whom we have authentic record was Collard Henno, of Mons (the capital of the ancient county of Hainault), whose presence at the reception of Burghers, in Valenciennes, is given in the Registry of Burghers of that city under the date of February 7, 1463.

The immediate ancestor of the American family was, however, his great-grandson, Jacques Henno, who was lieutenant of the guard formed by the Huguenot citizens of Valenciennes to resist the Spaniards; and who, after the capture of the town, fled to England, toward the end of the 16th century.

¹ Records of Threadneedle Street church, published by the Huguenot Society of London; and extracts from documents relating to the Huguenot immigration of the 16th and 17th centuries in the British Museum.

² Jacques Hennot, late lieutenant of the military guard of Valenciennes, surrendered twice at Tournai, the first time with Guy de Bres (the celebrated Huguenot preacher, executed there in 1567), the second time after the death of the latter. He was then taken under guard toward Lisle, but escaped through the intervention of a band of Huguenot horsemen, after which escape all trace of him was lost by the authorities. He was pursued by order of Theodore Cresia, commandant of the Italian Cavalry (under the Duke of Alva), who gave instructions to capture the body of Jacques Hennot wherever he might be found, promising an honorable sum to any one who should deliver him dead, or a double amount if the said Hennot should be delivered alive. ("Confiscations et ordonnances concernant les troubles survenus à la fin du VXI Siècle)—Royal Archives Brussels), where, also, is found the decree confiscating all the lands and goods of said Jacques Hennot, and branding him as an outlaw. The next trace of him is in the documents of the British Museum relating to the religious wars of Flanders. There among the names of the refugees is found that of Jacques Hennot, late lieutenant of the military guard at Valenciennes. This Jaques Hennot settled in an English Province; his son John, however, repaired to London, where we find the record in the archives of the Threadneedle Street church of the baptism of James Hennot, son of John Hennot, on August 21, 1625. This last-named James Hennot is inscribed in the Historical Record of the British Museum as having left London for North America in 1648. "Archives Threadneedle Street Church," vol. ii., 1576-1624. State papers, etc., 32091-32096 (from 1086 to 1760), and especially from 1571-1624. British Museum MSS.

With him, at the time, was his son, Jean Henno, who afterward married Catherine Joné, and whose son (the grandson of Lieutenant Jacques Henno), Jacques² [or James] Henno, 3d, emigrated to America in 1648, and settled at Windsor, Connecticut.

The name is spelled variously Henne, de Henne, Hennot, Henno, and later, in America, Enno. It was not spelled Eno until about 1700.

THE FAMILY IN AMERICA

The name has been variously spelled on this side of the Atlantic, Enno, Eno, Enos [Enoe—rarely]. Major-General Enos added the final s to his name in spelling, although he did not pronounce the s, and the Rhode Island branch of the family has always retained that form. From the Rhode Island family came the Delaware Enos.

6) JAMES ENNO, son of Jean Henno and Catelaine Joné, who founded in America the family that bears his name, was a native of London. He was baptized August 21, 1625, in the Threadneedle Street Huguenot church. He sailed for America in 1648, and settled in Windsor, Connecticut.

The first American mention of James Enno is a record in "Windsor Church Records" of his marriage to Anna Bidwell, August 18, 1648. There has been found no record of his arrival in this country, but his grandson, Samuel Eno, of

Windsor, who seems to have been a man of property and influence, and who was nineteen years old when his father died, and thirty-three years old when his mother died, was therefore probably familiar with the history of his grandfather, and caused a tablet to be erected to his memory in the Old Windsor burying ground with the following inscription:

“In memory of Samuel Eno, Esqr. and Eunice, his wife. He died August 17, 1778, in the 83d year of his age. She died May 7, 1792, in the 84th year of her age. And also Eunice, daughter of the deceased, who died March 23, 1757, aged 9 days. And also Sam’l Eno, son to Mr. Samuel Eno, junr., who died Feb. ye 27, 1789 in the 4th year of his age; and also Mr. James Eno who came from England and settled in Windsor A. D. 1646, and died July 11, 1682. His wife died Oct. 7, 1679. Also James Eno 2d, who died July 16, 1714—his wife died March, 1728, and was buried in Simsbury, old burying ground. Also Lieut. Dan’l Eno, died Dec. 9, 1797 in the 56th year of his age.”

He received a grant called Massacoe.¹ He lived in Windsor, as did his son James 2d, but both owned lands in Massacoe or Simsbury, which was an appendix of the plantation of Windsor and was not incorporated as a separate town till the year 1670. He owned an island in Simsbury River, near Scotland, about twenty-one acres, which he gave to his sons James and John. This island, with fifty acres of land, was granted to him in 1660, "by Mr. Henry Clark and Mr. Matthew Allyn appointed by the Cort," and John Moses and others had also land then granted them in like manner. (Simsbury Records, lib. I, p. 90.)

"In the year 1660, James Enos had fifty acres of land and an Island granted to him within the limits of Simsbury by Mr. Henry Clark and Mister Matthew Allyn apoynted by the Cort and John Moses and others had also land then granted to them in like manner, a true cobby. had by Mister Henery Clark and Mister Mathew Allyn.”

In April 1666, James Enno and John Moses, acting as agents for the town of Windsor, bought from Nassahegan, sachem of Poquonnoc, a tract of twenty-eight thousand acres, for which service the town granted him lands known as Tilton’s Marsh, situated under the Simsbury mountains.

In 1664, James Enno with six others presented a petition to the court asking for church privileges and baptism for their children. Signed by William Pitkin, of Hartford; Michael Humphreys, of Windsor; John Stedman, of Hartford; James Enno, of Windsor; Robert Reeve, John Moses, of Windsor, and Jonas Westover, of Windsor. This petition, written and signed, is still preserved at the State Library in Hartford.

Inventory of his estate offered at Hartford by his widow, and his son James and relict Hester Enno appointed administrators July 19, 1682. His children agreed to the distribution of his estate, and John Mandsley, Return Strong, and John Moore set out to the widow her £20, given by jointure to her and housing and lands according to the jointure (she being his 3d wife), and the remainder ordered to be delivered to his children forthwith, the children agreeing to pay the duties against the estate.

Record of deeds to James Enno and John Enno occur from 1660 to 1690, but the following record indicates that John afterwards moved to Jersey. Died July 16, 1714.

Married, December 26, 1678, Abigail Bissell, daughter of Samuel and Abigail (Holcombe) Bissell. She was born July 6, 1661, and died April 19, 1728. It is probable that the Bissell family is of Huguenot origin, but the founders of the American branch came directly from England. John Bissell was in Windsor, Connecticut, before 1640, and died October 3, 1677. Samuel Bissell, third son of the preceding, was born in Windsor, and died May 17, 1697. He married, June 11, 1658, Abigail Holcombe, daughter of Thomas Holcombe; she died August 17, 1688. Her father was a freeman of Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1634, and a member of the constitutional convention of Connecticut in 1639. Abigail Bissell, daughter of the preceding, married James Eno.

& Phelps. From small beginnings this concern grew to large proportions and became one of the leading wholesale dry-goods houses in the metropolis. Continuing until 1850, the firm was then dissolved, and Mr. Eno thenceforward devoted himself to his real estate interests that had gradually grown to large proportions. He was one of the founders of the Second National Bank and was connected with other financial enterprises. He was a man of fine instincts and generous impulses. Among his many benefactions were a public library, costing fifty thousand dollars, and a town farm with buildings to his native town of Simsbury.
