The FINLEY LEGEND

ACCORDING TO Gaelic tradition* the Scots derive their name from Scota, a daughter of the Pharaoh of the Exodus, who married Milesius, descendant of Phenius who was king of the Scythians of Egypt.

When the age of the world was 3501, Milesius, a mighty warrior, saw a green island from the top of a tall tower (—such eye-sight—) and chose the most stalwart from among his splendid band of thirty-two sons, four, to conquer the distant land.

They made the dangerous journey in thirty ships, conquered the race Tua-tha-de-Danaan then in possession and duely assumed sovereignty. Irish genealogy begins with this legendary settlement and the four great race-stems to which the lines of leading Irish families converge are Heber, Itá, Ir and Heremon, the four sons of Milesius.

It is from Heremon, the thirty-seventh in descent from Adam, through Japeth†, that the legendary Finley ancestry is traced.

The old and historic name is of pure Milesian origin; through the house of Heremon, the foundation is co-equal with that of the HyNealls, sept of Ulster, the chief families of which have for generations ruled as the Ardrihs of Erin.

The Finley lines connect with the Royal House of Scotland in the time of Malcom II, whose third daughter

The Finley Legend

Donada married Finlay McRuari, Earl of Moray, lineal descendant of Fiarchar Fada, king of Dabriada, and of Lorne, the first King of Scotland. Of this union about 1005 A.D. was born Machedia McFinlay or Macbeth, King of Scotland 1039–56, who married Gruoch, granddaughter of Kenneth III.

Scotch traditional bards tried to make a villain of Macbeth as one may witness in Shakespeare's plays based on good story material rather than fact.

Macbeth did not assassinate Duncan, though the latter was slain in battle between their mutual forces at Elgin in 1039. Macbeth ruled quite wisely and liberally for his time# until 5 December 1056, when he was slain in a battle with Malcom Canmore in Aberdeenshire.

His death was calamitous for Clan Finley; they were outlawed and hunted down, escaping extinction by assuming the Farquharson name and tartan. The Clan Finley did not emerge from obscurity as a clan in right and name until 1236. At that time, Archibald, second son of Fearchar, head of Clan Fionnladh and sept of Clan Chattan, greatly distinguished himself at the battle of Largo in Ayrshire on 2 October 1236.

From this point the Clan rose again but the mantle of royalty had been lost, never to be regained.

INTRODUCTION

THE PURPOSE Of this book is to collect in one place the scattered data on the Finley Clan, particularly the Finleys of Applecreek; it is admitted that there are many branches unrecorded herein. This is partly because some are unknown, some are indifferent, some wouldn't want their history published and finally some wanted to be paid for letting me print their biographies. (I am almost certain that these latter are of pure Scotch blood.)

The numbering system is as follows: the first of the numbers is the generation numeral; the second is a family number and is the same for all brothers and sisters of any one family; the third numeral group is an arbitrary serial number. A "†" is used to designate the serial number of the parent for reference purposes.

One of the clan suggested I tell only the good points as it would make a smaller book. I have endeavored to be as truthful as was possible withal a bit politic as I still have a desire to retain my original features.

I would appreciate very much hearing from any member of the family in regard to any additions, corrections to or criticism of the book.

HISTORICAL

ALL FINLEYS Are of Scotch-Irish descent. Even though the name may have a variant spelling such as Finlay, Findlay or Findley, all spring from the Clan Finley, one of the most ancient and honorable of the Scottish Clans. The oldest known spelling was Finleg, later rendered Finleigh and with the beginning of written records assuming its present form.

In the Gaelic, the spelling was Fionnladh, meaning "Son of Fergus;" Fionn meaning "Fergus" and ladh meaning "child, boy or son."

In the ancient days the Clan was one of the influential and most powerful in the highland federation. It antedates the Camerons, Stewarts, Campbells and existed prior to many of the better-known Clans. In 1030 A.D. its chief was Finleigh, Mavomor of Ross, whose domain included much more territory than is included in the present shire.

His son, and successor, was MacBeth, immortalized by Shakespeare. MacBeth was a lineal heir to the throne of Scotland. A party combined against him, to secure his downfall and assassination.

After his death the Clan Finley was declared illegal for some years. The Clan and tartan were known then as "Farquarson."

THE CLAN FINLEY

One Rev. John Finley, the last martyr to Christ's Crown and Covenant, was burned at the stake in Edinburgh just prior to the expulsion of James II.

Due to persecution, the greater part of the Clan removed to the Ulster counties of Ireland. Some measure of relief was gained from the Toleration Act of 1689 but conditions became worse with the accession of the throne by Queen Anne. The Scotch-Irish were practically outlawed by the Test Oath of 1704.

The largest immigration movement to America started early in the Eighteenth Century. Legend has it that a large group of the Clan came over in a chartered ship in contrast to the usual passage of indentured servants, debtors and jail-birds.

The ancient crest was a boar passant and motto: "Cor Nobyle Cor Immobyle;" (A noble heart is an immovable heart.) The generally accepted arms illustrated elsewhere in the book are: argent, on a chevron azure, between three rose gules, two swords points downward and conjoined at the pommels. Surmounted by a dexter hand and sword proper. Motto: "Fortis in Arduis."
