The author desires to express her appreciation of the kind assistance of those who have furnished her with information for this book. Especially does she acknowledge the valuable aid given by both William H. Googins, of Scarborough, and John A. Guilford, of Old Orchard, concerning the earlier members of the families in and about Old Orchard.

THE GOOGINS FAMILY IN AMERICA

APT. RICHARD BONYTHON was one of the first settlers of Scarborough^{Maine} and had a large patent of land four miles by the sea and eight miles inland in extent. His name first appears on the records in 1636. He was councilor in 1640, and present at the last court held under the authority of Gorges, in 1646. His house was noted as the place where the first court in Maine was held, March 25, 1636. He was a faithful and impartial official, who spared not his own son, but entered complaint against him for using insulting language against Mr. Richard Vines. Captain Bonython was held in high respect by the community and his associates in the council. His name does not appear in the list of inhabitants in 1653, and he probably died before that year. His descendants are now numerous and respectable.

Richard Foxwell married Winnefred, a daughter of Captain Bonython. He says (1640) that his father-in-law settled him on a part of his estate and gave him much freedom "for planting, fishing, fowling and the like," as by virtue of his patent he could, but was left on the Scarborough side of the town line. Mr. Foxwell was an enthusiastic and successful farmer, who had one of the most valuable plantations in the colony.

Though not aspiring to worldly honors, he served as a member of the "General Assembly of Ligon, in 1648"; also as commissioner and "clerk of the writs." He visited England before 1633, but came back that year. He died in 1676, aged 76.

Thomas Rogers was an inhabitant as early as 1638. He married Esther Foxwell, 1657. His house and plantation was at Goosefair, near the sea and the middle line of the patent. The early explorers of the coast mention his cultivated lands as the Rogers garden. He planted fruit trees and grape vines, and was probably "a gardener bred." From the remains of his orchard the town and famous watering place derives its name, "Old Orchard." Some of the trees were standing in 1770. The Indians made an attack on his house, and after a severe struggle, in which some of them were slain, they withdrew. Mr. Rogers immediately moved to Kittery with his family, and having left some goods in his house at Goosefair, his sons and others went to remove them, when they were all killed by the Indians, who then proceeded to burn the dwelling. The bodies of the slain were found upon the seashore and buried near the house lot. Thomas Rogers did not return to his plantation, but died in Kittery, leaving two sons.

Richard Rogers, son of Thomas, purchased a tract of land about half a mile square, lying between Goosefair and the middle line of the patent, in 1687, of James Gibbins; this he claimed, along with twelve acres of meadow given him by the town, lying on "the northeast side of Richard Cummings," in 1714, being then of Kittery. He made will in Kittery, Mar. 25, 1702, and mentions wife, Sarah, and children, Rebecca, John, Hannah, m. to John Tydie, and Thomas Hanson, son-in-law.

Richard Rogers, son of the preceding, made will in Kittery, July 10, 1737, in which he names wife, Eleanor, and children, Thomas, Esther, Dorothy, Lydia, Richard, Sarah, and Mary, wife of Patrick Googins, to whom he confirms land already given them in Saco, which his father had purchased of James Gibbins. (From Saco Valley Settlements and Families).

Patrick Googins, tradition says, came from Ireland at an early age, and was in the service of William Pepperrell, at Kittery. He was a woolen weaver by trade. It is said, through the influence of William Pepperrell, he obtained the hand of Mary, daughter of Richard Rogers, Jr., in marriage. He settled on the estate given him by his father-in-law at Pepperrellborough (now Old Orchard), what is now Ocean Park. He died there, Feb. 17, 1784, aged 84 years.

The name in old records is spelled in many different ways, such as Googins, Googin, Gowen, Guggins, Goggins, Googkins and Gookin. The last is found in many of the earlier records, as Capt. Daniel Gookin was in Virginia, also in Massachusetts Bay Colony, as early as 1631. Records show that he came from England and in this country they are a separate family.

In early times Biddeford and Saco was under the name of Pepperrellborough, and Old Orchard was a part of Saco until 1886.

The records of the family of Thomas Googins, who settled on the east bank of Skillins River, were given me by Mr. H. T. Fernald, of Amherst, Mass. He was not sure as to how exact they were. His uncle, the late Rev. O. H. Fernald, investigated the Googins families in that part of the State somewhat. His data was from members of the family almost entirely, having little opportunity to consult town, church, or public records. I have used them as they were, as the town records of Sullivan were destroyed by fire. They have nothing back of 1892.

I have given the descendants of each son by themselves, and they can be traced by the names at the head of each family.

David S.⁵, b. Aug. 18, 1843.
Henry F.⁵, b. Nov. 18, 1849.

All I could get of this family was as follows: David S. Googins, of Chicago, came from a little town near Bangor, Maine, the balance of the relatives living in the East, with the exception of one brother named Frank Googins, who came to Chicago and died there, about 1906. The other two brothers, Thomas and William Googins, live in Boston. There were two sisters, one named Hattie Barber, the other Mary Ann Fogg, both of Bangor. David S. Googins is a retired capitalist. His son, Joseph B. Googins⁶, is in the packing business, ranch business and other lines. He lives at North Fort Worth, Texas. Think that both daughters married second time.
