Are You a Giffin

Either by blood or marriage ties? Do you know that the name Giffin stands high in the annals of American history? Do you know that they took an active part in the War of the Revolution, the war which resulted in establishing the "Land of Liberty, the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave?" Do you know that their pioneering helped to turn an Indian infested wilderness into some of the most fertile and productive lands in the State of Pennsylvania, and that they later were active and aggressive settlers in many of the States of the Far West? Do you realize the hardships which they had to undergo; the rough log cabins which both the men and their women-folk had to live in; the rough land which had to be cleared of stumps and underbrush after the lumber was removed; the tedious days, months and years given over to the fencing of these lands after securing title to them and often through expensive litigation; the building of well drained roads in order to sell their market crops; the problems of maintaining the health, the schooling, the religious and the cultural accomplishments of themselves and their children; and the arduous problems of every-day living? Was not this a terrible price to pay merely in some cases to eke out a bare existence? Is it any wonder in the early days that thousands upon thousands of emigrants remained in the eastern cities where life offered conveniences and comforts and greater freedom from Indian attacks?

Being so closely connected by such close ties to our forefathers, is it any wonder that we are proud to be one of them, proud to stand up and be counted with men and women of such distinction, proud to have our children know of the courageous, self-sacrificing, and self-denying lives which necessity, conscientious scruples and high ideals, forced them to lead? Are we not zealous in our daily lives to gently win over our children to the conviction that self-restraint and self-restrictions against the pit-falls of life and over-indulgence, result in character building and strengthening one's determination to lead a calm, well-poised, moral and upright life, not only for one's own good but for its influence upon the children and upon those of our associates whose will power is not sufficient to readily keep them out of trouble?

To get this unpretentious Giffin Family History into the hands of several hundred people who will be the most interested in it, we have gotten it out at a price which barely covers the cost of the printing, the cloth case binding, and the distribution. Once this is out of print, like the first, printed, paper-back pamphlet that was issued in 1897, it may be many long years until another Giffin Book is published.

We feel sure you will want to know how you can help in handing down this information to your children and to your children's children, so that they too can look back with pardonable pride to their family

Won't you help to explain away the excuses of those who know in their hearts that they should have the book, but who, for one reason or another, put off getting a copy? Won't you help get them to get the book and keep it for later generations and themselves

For the preparation of such a work as this, full and accurate information regarding the family descent are essential; and the writer lays no claim to such store of knowledge. Indeed, seemingly, it should have occurred to the members of the different family lines in naming your humble servant for such a task, that he had not had such close contact with the Giffin clans as would qualify him in any marked degree for such a task. For almost a third of his life he had been striving to acquire an education; for more than a third of his life he has lived in a foreign country; and during the last third of his life he has been so loaded down with work as to preclude his giving any considerable time or thought to the gathering of data, or to the cultivation of his codescendants, in order to inform himself regarding the history of the family of Andrew Giffin II, and his wife Janet Harvey. It was an entirely new line of work to him, and begun under the very serious handicap of a late start.

If, however, it was begun under the above handicap, it was begun with some enthusiasm, and with a willing mind to do a considerable amount of honest hard work. It was soon impressed upon him most emphatically that the subject of the family history had been almost entirely neglected; and as well, that the day for securing authentic material regarding the family history had been lost. The only positive data available was that contained in the brief treatise prepared by Uncle William Giffin, and presented to the

*Giffin Family*ⁱⁿ America

Family Reunion held in 1897. His information was largely drawn from his memory, and had been gathered through personal contact with the children of Andrew Giffin II, all of whom he had known well; and from their children, his own cousins and their children. Born in 1820, he had lived, except for a very few years, in the immediate vicinity of the home of his grandparents. He had worked and played with his relatives; had attended the weddings of many of his cousins; and had bid God speed to not a few of them when they left the old home neighborhood to seek homes in the far West. His knowledge was of that intimate, personal character which gives living interest to the story told.

It is altogether different now. There are very few individuals, members of the family, living today who were born prior to 1850; and these few are widely scattered. They rarely ever come in contact with each other. None of them live in the immediate vicinity of the former home of Andrew Giffin II. The only way open to the gathering of data for a family history was by correspondence. Scattered over almost every State in the Union it was no small task to get in touch with members of the Giffin lines; the correspondence was necessary with entire strangers in most cases; and but few have sent in data. Instead of taking up the subject in a spirit of co-operation and helpfulness the name of someone else was, in many cases, suggested as one who would be able to furnish endless stores of information. Exceptions there were to this rule, certainly; but the fact remains that there was not manifested by many, any marked response to requests for accurate, authentic data even regarding the immediate members of their families.

More than three hundred letters and postal cards were sent out, and these as a precautionary measure, bore the address of the writer. Answers came promptly to perhaps ten per cent of letters. In most cases a second communication, or a third was necessary to bring an answer; while in a few cases as many as four or five requests failed to get a response of any kind.

The contribution herein made to the history of our family is given gladly, with the hope that the work may be continued along lines indicated in the body of this work. To this end a number of blank pages are bound in the volume in order that individuals of the several family lines may record any data of interest regarding the descent. In this way important data can be preserved, and made available for future use. As is remarked in the history of the family there is no such thing as rest, stagnation, in the growth of history, whether it be of the individual, of the family or of the clan; it grows constantly; and material lost is hard to replace a generation later. There is an eternal present in history, just as there is a point on the circumference of the rapidly revolving wheel which is always in contact with the road bed, and makes movement possible.

No good reason presents itself for dedicating this book to any one in particular; rather my inclination is to present it to the Giffin Family Clan and suggest that they make the best of it until other family records are available.

An Historic Sketch*

History, whether it be of the individual, of the family, of the clan, or of the nation is of slow but constant growth. It accumulates year by year and generation by generation; through a process of winnowing and testing inherent qualities are developed, and in time set in the line; and these qualities, at last, determine in good part the place accorded to the individual, or to the aggregation of individuals in the clan or in the nation. History, in the long run, plays no favorites; she is parsimonious in dealing out favors to her subjects. The unearned increment so constantly referred to by Henry George, regarding properties and their values, does not enter into the assignment of place in history. Rather a place must be earned by each individual if it is to be held, in the annals of time; the niche occupied by the individual is very far from a matter of chance; he is forced to earn his place, or he drops out of the race; he loses his chance.

This statement obtains in the history of Andrew Giffin I and his descendants. The family took its origin in southwestern Scotland, in the days when the conditions of life were meager and hard; and when only too often, it was a struggle for mere existence; of hard striving to hold, if possible, one's place in the sun; with everything seemingly pitted against the individual, and intent on pulling him down to defeat. Yet the struggle developed qualities which fitted the individual and the clan for further effort, for continued existence; and later for reward. The gathering of material and the editing of family history was scarcely considered; and it is only in the very recent past that family and local history has been at all attempted. This is true of the Giffin family, and it was only on account of the virile qualities of their sturdy forebears that an honorable place has been accorded to them in the history of our country, and in the marvelous development of our national life.

While the family traditions linked the family to Scotland as the place of our origin, the link was no stronger than a vague tradition until a comparatively recent period. Nor is this to be wondered at, when we remember that easy and inexpensive communication is but a thing of yesterday. It was the hard conditions obtaining in Scotland and north Ireland which nerved the hardier spirits to leave the bleak hills of their native land to emigrate to the new continent, and there face new and strange difficulties and dangers in building homes and rooting their families in the wilderness. Travel was scarcely, if at all, harder in the colonies than in the old world during the closing decades of the sixteenth century and the opening of the seventeenth. Mail facilities were practically unknown, and where they existed at all were irregular and extremely expensive; money was a scarce commodity the world over; and the struggle for a bare existence called for all the natural resources, both material and spiritual, of the individual. It was not at all strange, therefore, that in Scotland and Ireland, and in the Colonies, but little heed was given to the preservation of historical data, or to the keeping up contacts with connections of the different branches of families. A separation of but a few miles served as a barrier to contacts of nearly related branches of families; and in the course of two generations blood relatives of near degree became strangers to each other. The Giffin family, as happened to most of those coming to the Colonies, had but scant opportunity for the preparation of any authentic history of the descendants of the earlier comers to the New Continent.

The first effort to secure historical data regarding our family, so far as is known to the writer, was made by Uncle William Giffin, of the fourth American generation, in the year 1897. He was familiar with the traditions of the family; familiar with all the older members of the connection at that time. Since then quite a good deal of reliable historical data has been gathered; and considerable effort has been expended on editing and systematizing the material in hand. Our former kinsman, Atty. George H. Rankin, deceased in 1928, made a most valuable contribution to this fund of authentic information, after many years of title searching of Court records and property transfers by deeds, wills, intestacy statements, together with church and cemetery archive data; and to him the writer is indebted for much of the material in this work.

It is to Dr. Joseph W. Giffin to whom we are indebted for securing the historical origin of the Giffin family in Scotland. Dr. Giffin is pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Cleveland, Ohio. It is due to his efforts that we have certainty as to the place of the origin of our earliest ancestors, their family characteristics, and as to their religion.

In the year 1923, Joseph W. Giffin, D. D., visited Scotland to search out, if possible, the birth place of our ancestors, and to determine the degree of consanguinity of the Giffin families in western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and south eastern Ohio. It would seem that he was more successful as to the former objective than as to the latter. He found the old Giffin estate, the old Giffin castle, and the present Giffin mansion house. I quote from Dr. Giffin's History of the Ohio and West Virginia branches of the family: "Giffin Station on the line of the Glasgow and Ardrosson railroad, is about twenty miles south of Glasgow, Scotland. Around it lies what is known as the "Giffin Estate." It consists of 885½ acres of land. Following the demise of the recent owner, Mr. Patrick Giffin, the estate was being sold in small farms." Dr. Giffin does not so state, but undoubtedly the breaking up of the estate is due to the extremely high rates of taxation obtaining throughout the British Isles since the World War.

Dr. Giffin further states "A small part of the wall of Giffin Castle was pointed out to me. It stands on the very edge of a rocky precipice. It will, however, soon be obliterated entirely, as this part of the estate has been leased to a development company; and building stone is being taken out in large quantities. Two miles from Giffin Station stands Giffin Mansion house, a large, handsome granite building of some thirty-five rooms built in the Scottish baronial style of some fifty years ago. It is a substantial structure, and is in excellent repair."

Dr. Giffin met and talked with a number of gentlemen bearing the name Giffin. The name is invariably spelled Giffen; and in all the old records of Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, it is oftener spelled with an E than with an I. In the later records, however, it is uniformly spelled with an I. From these gentlemen he secured interesting details regarding the early family history. All these men pointed to Giffin

Castle as the original home of their ancestors. From one of these, named Kintyre, he was able to trace the family, or at least a part of it, down to the extreme south western part of Kintyre Peninsula, a long, narrow tongue of land jutting out from the south western coast of Scotland. This gave him, almost undoubtedly, an indication as to the religion of our forbears in Scotland; and as well an explanation as to why a part, at least, of the family, should have left their native heaths, and migrated to Kintyre, so far removed from their ancestral habitat.

County Argyll lies in the Kintyre Peninsula. The Marquis of Argyll, a Scotch Covenanter, had large land holdings in Argyll County. He gave a helping hand to all Covenanters in distress on account of their religion. After the Restoration, especially during the reigns of Charles II and James II, persecution of the Covenanters was common, and extremely bitter. As the Marquis of Argyll protected them, many of these left their native places and settled on his lands to secure his protection from their enemies. How large a part of the Giffin family settled in Argyll, or how long they remained, is not known, perhaps the larger number returned when persecution ceased; some of them took root in Kintyre and remained permanently; many of the hardier spirits turned their faces toward the New World, rather than return to the region of Giffin Castle, and face all the difficulties as to properties, and title thereto, after long years of absence from the ancestral region.

James II died in 1701, and religious persecution ceased after this event. Conditions in Scotland, however, were still turbulent in the extreme and many of the sturdy yeomen who had been exiled from their native land turned their faces westward; and while we do not know certainly just when the first of our ancestors migrated to the colonies, we do know that it was not many years after the organization of the Province of Pennsylvania under Penn that ANDREW GIFFIN I settled in Cumberland County, in the region of Big Spring on Conodoniquet Creek. Penn had secured tentative ownership of the Province in 1689. It was not, however, until 1701, that he secured full control and opened the region to settlers. The fact that Penn was a Protestant and pledged religious liberty to all settlers turned the faces of many Scotch settlers to the Province, among them ANDREW GIFFIN I. Just when he arrived at Big Spring we do not know, nor do we know whether he came direct from the region of Giffin Castle, or from Kintyre Peninsula. We do know certainly, however, that he had settled in Cumberland County prior to the year 1742, as he had already been in the section long enough to court an Irish girl, Agnes Nesbit by name, to whom he was married on March 26, 1742, and from this date she takes her place in the line of our ancestors. He died in 1768.

The first child of the couple, John Giffin, was born March 17, 1743, and the birth was duly registered in the Cumberland County record. No other births are recorded until that of our ancestor, Andrew Giffin II. He was born in 1757, but the month or day are not given. It is not probable that no other children were born to the couple during the fourteen years elapsing between the birth of the eldest son, John, and that of Andrew Giffin II. We know that at least two daughters were born during this period, as bequests were made to Halinda and Martha Giffin in our ancestor's will. To each of these daughters he willed "one mare, one saddle, two cows, one bed and bedclothes"; and the nature of the articles would seem to indicate that at the time of the writing of the will these daughters were already married. It is very probable that there was some confusion as to the records resulting from the organization of the new county of Cumberland out of parts of Lancaster and Chester counties in the year 1750; and that this may have been the cause of the omission of some births from the records; it is perhaps more likely that daughters did not occupy as important a place in the mind of Andrew Giffin I as did his sons. English laws of inheritance seem to have influenced his mind as well as it did the minds of all the early settlers from England and Scotland.

Andrew Giffin II, born in 1757, was but a lad of ten or eleven years of age when his father died in 1768. The eldest son, John, was married in 1762. He crossed the mountains with his bride that same year to Westmoreland County. He seems, however, to have made one or more trips back to Cumberland County prior to and after his father's death, as he was named with his mother as executor of his father's will; and inherited a farm from him. His name appears in the tax lists for some time after his father's death; but does not appear after 1770. The will of Andrew Giffin I was not probated until four years later, in the year 1772. No reason is assigned for the delay. The will itself is interesting, and indicates that the writer was Scotch to the core; and that he had amassed quite a goodly store of property, real and personal, by his shrewd care and thrift.

Andrew Giffin II, eleven years old at the time of his father's death, is not mentioned in the public records until the year 1774, when he appears on the list of taxables at the age of 17. His name appears regularly from this date until his removal to Washington County in 1797.

There appears to have been quite a considerable migration of the Giffins from Scotland to Cumberland

The GIFFIN Family

County (locally called "Scotland" district), following the coming of Andrew Giffin I to the region of Big Springs on Conodoquet Creek. Between the year 1742 the time of his appearing in the records, and 1800 the following names are found in the records: William Giffin, almost certainly the brother of Andrew Giffin II is met with frequently. Other names appearing are James Giffin, Eleanor Giffin, Jennet Giffin, wife of Robert Giffin, Samuel Giffin, Elizabeth Giffin, Frances Giffin, and others. The fact that the number of persons bearing the name Giffin had increased so considerably seems to indicate, though it does not prove it, that all those bearing the name Giffin were in some degree related to our ancestor, Andrew Giffin I. He had in all probability kept in touch with the family connection in Scotland, or down on the Kintyre Peninsula; and that, when at later dates, members of the clan migrated to the Colonies, they quite naturally gravitated to the section where the earlier settler had taken root. Some of the later comers seem to have remained for quite a number of years in Cumberland County; others for shorter periods; and then moved westward. So constant was this trend that in 1800 the name Giffin does not appear in the records of the taxables.

Andrew Giffin I remained in the immediate region of Big Springs from the time of his first arrival until his death in 1768, a period of about thirty years. This is attested by the appearance of his name in the public records when he was married in 1742; and by the payment of taxes from year to year. It is true there is a break in the records between 1750, the year in which the new county of Cumberland was organized, and 1762, due to the transfer of records. He was a land owner and paid taxes from year to year. He seems to have engaged in real estate dealing to some extent, as the acreage on which he was assessed varied from year to year. It is also probable that during most of this period taxes were levied on cleared land only, and that he held quite a considerably larger acreage than his assessments would indicate. For instance he was assessed in 1767 on 120 acres; while in 1770 the widow and the sons John, Andrew II and William were all taxed, the widow on 200 acres, and the son John on 100 acres. It is not probable that in so short a period of time the real estate holdings of the widow and the eldest son should have almost trebled. The reasonable explanation seems to be that about the time of the death of Andrew Giffin I, a change had been made in the tax laws; and that where formerly only cleared lands were assessed, now all lands were subject to taxation.

Andrew Giffin II was a mere lad at the time of his father's death. He was not more than sixteen when the will was probated. He seems, however, to have taken up activities on his own account immediately upon the settlement of the father's estate, and showed himself capable to meet all demands made upon him. He engaged in farming and stock raising. We do not know when he was married, but it was probably in the year 1779, when he was twenty-two years of age. The woman of his choice was Janet Harvey, who outlived her husband by three years. They were prospered in worldly affairs, were blessed with ten children, and were esteemed in the community in which they lived.

The year in which Andrew Giffin II first paid taxes was one of unrest and anxiety. Rumors of war were rife, indeed had been rife for some years, although a semblance of peace had been maintained. The Stamp Act of 1765 had inflamed the public mind; the Boston Massacre had, in 1770, deepened this resentment against the British crown; the Boston Tea Party in 1773 indicated clearly that the patience of the Colonies was well nigh exhausted; the battle of Concord and of Lexington in 1775 convinced the entire population that war was inevitable; and serious preparations for it were begun. It was probably due to the uncertainty as to the future which led our ancestor to give his attention to land speculation rather than exclusively to farming. He seems to have felt that it was prudent to have his possessions in portable form in the event of a long continued struggle. A lad of nineteen when the news of Lexington and Concord were broadcasted over the land, he seems to have already had a rather clear vision of the consequence, the immediate consequences of the war; and had begun to set his house in order.

There can be no question as to the patriotism of Andrew Giffin II, or of his loyalty to the cause of the Colonies, as he saw service in the armies of the Continental Congress. The Archives of Pennsylvania, 5th Series, Vol. 6, Page 29, show that Andrew Giffin II served as a private soldier in the Company of Captain Jack, 1st Battalion, Col. Arthur Buchanan, in 1776. He seems to have been mustered out that same year. In Vol. 6, Page 66, he appears as a private soldier in Captain Fenton's Company, 1st Battalion, Cumberland County, Col. James Dunlop, from Newton Township, in 1779. Again his name appears in Captain Fenton's Company, from Newton Township, Cumberland Militia, under Col. Samuel Culbertson, in 1782. There is no indication as to the term of service under each of these enlistments. The term was not perhaps long, as during the entire war the plea of the commander in chief was that men be enlisted for longer periods, if possible for the duration of the war; and while this was never secured, it is yet true that as a rule the men served for considerably longer periods than their enlistment called for, due to the fact that they were not paid off, and so held on in the hope of getting their pay. In all, it is very probable that our ancestor served from three to four years in the army.

During the dozen years intervening between the close of the war and his emigration to Washington County, we have no detailed account of the activities of Andrew Giffin II. Naturally active and energetic, and with the restlessness awakened by his experiences in the army, it was not at all strange that he should not have given all his attention to farming. A little thought on the part of those who remember the close of the Civil War will make it plain that it was very hard for many of "the Boys in Blue" to settle down to the humdrum tasks of civil life; closer at hand in time, we know that it was not easy for many of the boys who served overseas in the World War to settle down to civil tasks and to civil obligation. War exercises a destructive influence, a disturbing influence on the life of any nation; and is a very decided disturber of the habits of the individuals engaged in it. Andrew Giffin II did not escape this influence.

Returning to civil life our subject engaged once more in farming and to some extent in real estate dealing. In this he seems to have been quite successful; and while still in Cumberland County had amassed what, in those days, must have been thought of as considerable wealth. At all events, just prior to the migration of the family to Washington County, he sold his farm for the tidy sum of six thousand four hundred dollars, $6,400.00 spot cash, as attested by the records of Cumberland County. None of his personal property was included in this transaction; it was his farm alone of 224½ acres which was sold to one Felix Wise. All his live stock, implements, household goods he retained and brought with him to Washington County.

We do not know for what reason the Giffin family decided to leave Cumberland County, and move to the far West, for Western Pennsylvania was at that time the extreme far west. It could not have been on account of the comparative fertility of Cumberland and Washington Counties, as the land he secured in the latter was far inferior to the soil of the Conodonoquet Valley; it could not have been on account of land values altogether, as, while undoubtedly, lands were somewhat higher priced in the older settlement, the difference was not sufficiently higher to have tempted the family to migrate. It is probable that restlessness resulting from his war experience may have influenced him to some extent; the larger factor, however, entering into the decision to migrate seems to have been just plain "western fever."

There is one subject which does not lend itself easily to explanation namely the church relations of the family. They were of Covenanter Stock. During all the years of residence in Cumberland County, and with Presbyterian churches within easy reach of the family, neither the name of Andrew Giffin II nor of his wife, Jane Harvey, appears on the roll of members of any one of these. The Big Spring church was organized in 1737. Rev. Thomas Craighead was pastor of it in 1739. Rev. John Blair succeeded him in the church. William Giffin, likely a younger brother of Andrew Giffin II, is mentioned in the making out of a call to Rev. Samuel Wilson in 1776, but the older brother is never mentioned in connection with the church. Yet there is no reasonable doubt but that the family worshipped in Big Spring church. The probable explanation of this is almost certainly that not much attention was given at that time to church records and to enrollment of members. Even today, with vastly improved records and much closer attention given to enrollment of members, it is not easy to determine at all times, who are and who are not to be considered members. The probable explanation of the non appearance of the names of the family on the records in Big Spring is that they were Scotch, therefore, Presbyterians; they attended divine service, therefore they were members of the church; and no one was sufficiently interested in the subject to raise any question as to their church status.

The decision of Andrew Giffin II to migrate to Washington County seems to have been taken rather suddenly. His older brother John, had already moved in 1762, to Westmoreland County. In 1796 our ancestor visited his brother accompanied by his eldest son, William. The father and son, after visiting John, went on to Washington County. A farm of 400 acres was purchased from Thomas Fawcett. A spring crop was put in. Then the father returned to Cumberland County to bring out the family, the son William remaining to look after the crop and care for his father's interests.

Upon the return of the father to Cumberland County, arrangements were speedily made for the migration. Live stock was rounded up, household goods were packed in the farm wagon, and the family was off, to a good start, for the far west. The trip from Cumberland to Washington County was at that time no holiday journey. Today it can be made in a comparatively few hours over magnificent hard surfaced roads, in a smooth running auto, through most magnificent country. Our ancestors made the trip in a springless wagon, over almost blind trails, not in a day but in a weary succession of days. There were no accommodations other than those carried with them by the emigrants; and no protection from the weather save that of a covered wagon.

T h e G I F F I N F a m i l y

The family was not alone in the migration. The writer remembers well hearing his great grandfather, John Giffin, tell of the considerable number of families with whom they travelled. They were no weaklings, these emigrants. The families in covered wagons which a generation or two later filled the trails of the far western plains and mountain trails were not harder or more self-reliant than they. The journey was made in safety, and in due time the new home was reached, and new conditions and new neighbors faced.

Our forbears had a family of nine children when they crossed the mountains. William, the eldest, was already on the new homestead. Then came Nancy, Jane, John, Mary, Andrew, James, Eleanor, and Hervey, the last a babe in arms. One child was born to them in their western home, namely Rebecca.

There is no clew as to what part of the new farm was cleared. It is almost certain that by far the larger part was heavy forest, and the job was cut out for the large family in building up a home and a productive farm in the wilderness. Two additional farms were purchased not long after the time the family reached their new home. A part of one of these farms is now the property of William F. Boyce; the other known as the Ralston farm, is the property of the heirs of James McPherson.

The newcomers seem to have fitted readily into the new environments. They were prosperous in outward estate; and the youngsters seem to have entered naturally into the social life of the new community. They attended the old Robinson Run Presbyterian church, although their attendance was probably not regular on account of the distance, and of the almost impossible roads. We are met by the same difficulty as to their connection with the Robinson Run church as met us in Big Spring; and the explanation is the same; the newcomers were Scotch, they were therefore Presbyterian; they attended divine worship, therefore they were members of the church, and no questions were asked as to letters of dismissal from the old church back east.

Young people married at an earlier age at the opening of the nineteenth century than they do today. There is a wise saw which says there are two kinds of love: love proper and love improper. In the former the individual wants to get married because he is in love; in the latter case the individual is in love because he wants to get married. And there is a world of difference between the two ideas. In earlier days our young people got married, and faced their difficulties and solved their problems as they arose in actual experience; today the tendency is rather to worry along for years before making up their minds to commit themselves matrimonially. The young people of the Giffin family seem to have gone on the former principle.

Andrew Giffin II died Dec. 10, 1812. He was buried in the cemetery of the Robinson Run Presbyterian church. His wife survived him three years and was laid away at his side. Their tombstones are standing, are decorative, and in an excellent state of preservation. Through the courtesy of former George H. Rankin, Esq., already mentioned in this sketch, photographs of the burial lot and of the tombstone are available; and the last resting place of our revered forbears is definitely determined.

With a single exception the children of Andrew Giffin II married at an early age. William, the eldest son, was the first to marry, taking to wife Esther Willson. The sons upon marrying settled on land belonging to their father, or willed to them at his death. There was not, however, the same thoughtful provision for the daughters when they married and established their own homes, nor were they provided for in the father's will so generously as were the sons.

T h e G I F F I N F a m i l y

This was true in the disposition of his estate by Andrew Giffin I; and his example was followed by his son Andrew. English law controlled in such cases, as our own laws of inheritance had not as yet been formulated. This partiality no doubt gave rise to many heart aches, and perhaps even to estrangement. Yet withal there was a kindly ruling and compensating providence which in good part equalized the seeming injustice done to the daughters; for they as a rule married the sons of farmers, who willed, as a general rule, their landed estate to their sons; and the daughters received in large part their inheritance not from their parents, but from their parents in law. The Hansons and the Fawcetts and other families into which the Giffin daughters married, were as a rule land owners, and these made provision for their sons, and incidentally for their sons' wives. It is to be borne in mind that woman's rights was not as yet an issue in the public mind, even though there were some rumblings of discontent which boded a change as to the status of women.

It resulted naturally as the daughters of Andrew Giffin II received no part of the landed estate that their descendants should have begun to scatter from the immediate home neighborhood at an earlier period than did those of the sons. It is true this scattering did not begin during the lives of the mothers, at least not to any large extent; in the second generation, however, upon the death of the mothers, the dispersion was rapid, and very widely extended in its reach. The opening of the West had already begun before the Civil War; and although the far west then scarcely reached to the Mississippi River, there was a decided trend toward the new states of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. Not a few of the descendants of Andrew Giffin II were counted among these emigrants, especially of the descendants of his daughters. The lure of rich, cheap land was the primary cause of their migration, yet other influences were fermenting in their minds. Just as a reckless, adventuring spirit had led our forbears ever towards the West. It had moved Andrew Giffin I to leave Scotland a hundred years earlier to seek home and fortune in the Colonies; it led Andrew Giffin II from the quiet of the Conondoniquet Valley to the extreme West some sixty years later; and the same adventuring spirit now wrought mightily in the younger generation of the Giffins, sending them westward.

The descendants of the male members of the family of our ancestor held to the home neighborhood for practically a generation longer than did those of the daughters, but in the third generation from our common ancestor, there resulted a broadcasting which sent them to the ends of the earth. They went East, North, South, but principally Westward, a few of them to other lands. At a recent biennial reunion of the clans in Washington County, there was present a young man born in Missouri, engaged in business in Warren, Pa., whose grandmother was born almost within sight of the old Giffin homestead, yet who without mental reservations calls Missouri her home state. In seeking data regarding the different branches of the family, a letter came from a lady who had made her home for many years in the sunny south, and who used the expressions "we all" and "you all" quite as naturally as one to the "manor born." More, perhaps, of the descendants of our forbears are found in Western Pennsylvania than in any other State of the Union; but Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, even far away California count them by the score, some of them by the hundreds. It is not always easy to follow the ramifications of the family, as all trace of the name Giffin has been lost through intermarriage with other patronymics; yet incidents of a trivial nature, not unfrequently discover a descendant of our revered ancestor.

There are certain physical characteristics which obtain especially in the male descendants of the Giffins, and which have not been obliterated in the wide ramifications of family descent. They are generally of a sandy complexion, with blue or grey eyes; few of them are of conspicuous height. As a rule they would be classed as of medium stature, sturdily built, of rugged frame, robust health, spare rather than fleshy, and of extremely long life.

The Christian names obtaining among the Giffin descendants not unfrequently discover a strain of Giffin blood. Rebecca, youngest daughter of Andrew Giffin, named her second son Andrew Giffin McPherson; and a multitude of others of the different family lines have followed her lead in naming their children. Other names also have held in the family. Andrew, and John, and Harvey, and William; Nancy, and Jane, and Janet, and Mary, appear in all the family lines. And the same is evidently true in the family descent back in Scotland. Some months ago the writer received a letter from a Presbyterian minister in Edinburgh, Scotland, signed Andrew Giffin. Indeed if you meet a man anywhere who rejoices in the name Andrew you will be safe and justified in asking if he is connected with the Giffin family.

The earlier generations of the family were in large part farmers. In Western Pennsylvania especially was this true. In the fourth and fifth generations from our ancestor, however, there has been a steady trend toward other lines of endeavor. The development of our industrial life has contributed to this tendency, and many are now engaged along industrial and mechanical lines. A comparatively small number have engaged in mercantile pursuits; some have entered the professions of law and engineering; more have taken up medicine and dentistry; a very considerable number of the male lines have engaged in teaching, and the female teachers of the family descent are legion in numbers; some have entered the ministry; indeed there is scarcely a line of honorable human endeavor in which there are not found representatives of the Giffin stock.

Reference has been made to the migration of a part of the family in Scotland in Argyll County on account of religious persecution under Charles II and James II. They were Covenanters; and sought the protection of the Marquis of Argyll, who stood as a rock for religious freedom. The remnants of the clan in Scotland are still Presbyterians; and in our own country the line is predominantly Presbyterian. Some are still members of the Covenanter church; a larger number are United Presbyterians; while a much larger number of them have abandoned the Split P's and are today just plain Presbyterians without frills of any kind. A goodly number of them are found in other communions, but such cases have, as a rule, resulted from intermarriage with families belonging to other branches of the church universal, or as a matter of convenience as to attendance or divine worship. The important thing to be kept in mind is that the family in all its branches has been distinctively religious. Family religion was almost second nature in the earlier generations in Western Pennsylvania. The old family Bible, well worn, was always in evidence in the home. Family worship was a cherished institution. Attendance on public worship was a stern duty. The Shorter Catechism was regularly taught to the child.

It was the idea of the writer to prepare a rather full history of all the lines of the ten children of Andrew Giffin II and his wife Janet Harvey. It is rather remarkable that all of the ten children of the couple save the fourth son, James, have left very extensive and widely branched families. It was a large, not to say impossible task to get full information regarding all these branches.

It was therefore decided to prepare a history of the origin of the family, giving its authentic connection with Scotland; and a somewhat fuller statement of the history of our common ancestor, Andrew Giffin I, his marriage in Cumberland County; and following this with the fuller statement given regarding our immediate ancestor, Andrew Giffin II, in Cumberland County, and in Washington County. This is followed by a brief history of each of the ten children with a reasonably full genealogical statement of the lines of each one of these. No attempt has been made to give dates either of births or of deaths.

The work of preparing this resume has been a new experience, and on the whole, a pleasant one. The writer knows his ancestors and his contemporaries of the family descent better than he did two years ago; and feels an interest in them that is altogether new. More it has been learned that the history of a family is a constantly flowing stream. Deaths are occurring daily almost, yet births by far outnumber the losses. The family grows and scatters; new interests and new lines of endeavor occupy the attention of the individuals and only by careful painstaking study can the lines of descent be followed; for no man liveth unto himself. We are bound up in the whole bundle of life and it is ours to discharge each one his duties as a part of the great whole of human life, and contribute our part to the progress of the race.

Isaac Boyce.

The Index by Symbols

The Library Index System is used in this section. It gives both (1) the order of birth and (2) the generation in America. Each name has a separate number (or symbol) made up of one or more figures, each of which is one of the figures one to nine, J for ten, K for eleven, L for twelve, M for thirteen, etc. This whole number (or symbol), gives the order of birth in the family. Thus for Hervey Giffin, 149, the last figure (9) shows he was the ninth born in his parents' family. The figure 4 shows his father, Andrew Giffin II, symbol 14, was the fourth born in that family, and the figure 1 shows his grandfather, Andrew Giffin I, symbol 1, was the first born in that family. In the latter case, it is assumed he was the first born, being the only one recorded.

The generation in America is at once apparent, as there is but one figure in a symbol for each generation. Thus the three figures for Hervey Giffin, 1-4-9, place him in the third generation; the four figures for William B. Giffin, 1-4-9-2, place him in the fourth generation; the five figures for Ella McKee Giffin Fritz, 1-4-9-2-2, place her in the fifth generation, etc. Thus the parents and the children can be traced either forwards or backwards by their separate symbols, no two of which can duplicate. The child always has one more figure in his symbol than the parent.

William Giffin and Esther Willson Giffin

The subject of this group is one of the ten children of Andrew Giffin II, of the family's second generation in America, the latter's father, Andrew Giffin I, having emigrated from Scotland to Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, prior to 1742.

THIRD GENERATION IN AMERICA

William Giffin, eldest son of Andrew Giffin II, was born in Cumberland County in the year 1780. He crossed the mountains with his father in 1796, and visited his uncle, John Giffin who had settled in Westmoreland County in 1763. From Westmoreland County the father and son continued on to Washington County. It seems that they either arranged for the purchase of a farm, or actually purchased it in 1796. They put in a crop that same year. The father then returned to Cumberland County, leaving the son in charge until the coming of the family over the mountains to the new prospective home. This was quite natural, for the son although but sixteen years of age, had had a frontier experience which had early developed in him, self-reliance, initiative and capabilities of no mean order; and he seems to have discharged all the responsibilities laid upon him to the entire satisfaction of his parents.

T h e G I F F I N F a m i l y

William remained under the paternal roof tree only a short time after their settlement in Washington County. The date of his marriage to Esther Willson is not recorded, but it could not have been later than the year 1800. He settled on the farm now owned by the heirs of William Patterson. Six children were born to them, Eliza Jane, Andrew, Willson, Nancy, Hadassah and Rebecca. The husband and father died in 1837; the wife and mother in 1848. THIRD GENERATION IN AMERICA

Andrew Giffin, third son of Andrew Giffin II, was born in Cumberland County, Pa., March 27, 1788, and came with the family to Washington County in 1797. He inherited the home farm of his parents, although he removed from it at least once; having, seemingly, made an exchange with his brother-in-law, Thomas Hanson, for the farm now owned by the heirs of Jos. Hickman. Later he bought the farm inherited by Hervey Giffin, now owned by William F. Boyce; at the same time selling to his brother, Hervey, the farm he had acquired from Thomas Hanson. Although these transactions were consummated in the early years of the nineteenth century, none of the older members of the entire descent can give any explanation of them. Certainly the trading spirit manifested by Andrew Giffin I, and his son had not died out in their descendants. Later Andrew Giffin secured the old home farm, and ended his days on it.

James F. Giffin, third son, born Feb. 16, 1841, died at the opening of the Civil War in 1861.

It is rather remarkable that of the ten children born to Andrew Giffin II, and Janet H. Giffin, but one of the lines has entirely disappeared. No one of the others has dropped out of the history of the family. The family of James Giffin and his wife Jane Harvey has been blotted from the long line of descendants of our common ancestors. Blessed with the means to give their children every advantage which money could furnish, it was nevertheless their sad experience to see them all taken away while they themselves were in vigorous health; and to see all their hopes dissipated. Truly, "His ways are past finding out in His dealings with His children."

Mary Giffin and Isaac Jamphrey

The subject of this group is one of the ten children of Andrew Giffin II, of the family's second generation in America, the latter's father, Andrew Giffin I, having emigrated from Scotland to Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, prior to 1742.

The larger part of the descendants of Isaac and Mary G. Jamphrey is scattered widely in the middle west, especially in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, and some in Kansas and Nebraska. Having moved to the west when communications were not easy or convenient, they seemed to drop out of the knowledge of the other lines of descent of their ancestor, Andrew Giffin II; and their contact were so broken that within two generations, the data on the major part of this family has been lost. This great number speaks well for their virility.

Jemphrey may be the correct spelling. Further data requested.

The Index by Symbols

The Library Index System is used in this section. It gives both (1) the order of birth and (2) the generation in America. Each name has a separate number (or symbol) made up of one or more figures, each of which is one of the figures one to nine, J for ten, K for eleven, L for twelve, M for thirteen, etc. This whole number (or symbol), gives the order of birth in the family. Thus for Hervey Giffin, 149, the last figure (9) shows he was the ninth born in his parents' family. The figure 4 shows his father, Andrew Giffin II, symbol 14, was the fourth born in that family, and the figure 1 shows his grandfather, Andrew Giffin I, symbol 1, was the first born in that family. In the latter case, it is assumed he was the first born, being the only one recorded.

The generation in America is at once apparent, as there is but one figure in a symbol for each generation. Thus the three figures for Hervey Giffin, 1-4-9, place him in the third generation; the four figures for William B. Giffin, 1-4-9-2, place him in the fourth generation; the five figures for Ella McKee Giffin Fritz, 1-4-9-2-2, place her in the fifth generation, etc. Thus the parents and the children can be traced either forwards or backwards by their separate symbols, no two of which can duplicate. The child always has one more figure in his symbol than the parent.

Hervey Giffin and Margaret Boggs Giffin

The subject of this group is one of the ten children of Andrew Giffin II, of the family's second generation in America, the latter's father, Andrew Giffin I, having emigrated from Scotland to Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, prior to 1742.

THIRD GENERATION IN AMERICA

Hervey Giffin, 149, s. Andrew Giffin II, was born in Cumberland County, Aug. 6, 1796. He was a babe in arms when the family emigrated over the Indian infested Allegheny Mountains and settled in Washington County in 1797. He was a lad of sixteen when his father died in 1812 and left him with heavy responsibilities on the farm. And he had but reached his majority at the time of his mother's death in 1815.

He inherited the farm now owned by William F. Boyce, Boyce, Pa., and by deed dated Mar. 22, 1827, conveyed 118 acres for $1357.00 to his brother, Andrew. On the same date he purchased the larger farm now held by the heirs of Joseph Hickman, consisting of 206 acres and for which the purchase price was Twenty-five Hundred and Seven Dollars. It is quite interesting to note that five acres of this tract was within a few years sold back for more than the whole farm cost, viz, $3000.00. Most of this land is very fertile and has justified its cost in the early days and has paid for its maintenance and upkeep each year for over a hundred years of consecutive operation. Hervey Giffin made this purchase, apparently, with the settled conviction of "getting himself a thrifty wife and raising his own family." The same year, on Oct. 29, 1827 he married Margaret Boggs, whose family also were large holders of farm land, and there, on "Wimbleton Farm" they lived for a number of years and there, some, perhaps all of their nine children were born. Mary, William B., Jane, Eleanor, Emily, Samuel, Louisa, Maria, and Lemuel. Of these, Jane, Maria and Lemuel died at an early age. The others survived the death of their father, which occurred on Oct. 9, 1857.

In 1850 Hervey Giffin built a colonial, center hall brick home on the Brownsville Road, now in Knoxville, Pittsburgh. The widow with her family lived there until her passing away, April 9, 1872, and some of the family until 1895. For many years it has been the headquarters of the Elks Club. Directly opposite is Giffin Avenue, the main street of a model suburban home section which was laid out in the early part of this century by some of the grandsons of Hervey Giffin, whose aim was to eliminate small lots, to prevent irresponsible parties from erecting frame houses which increase the fire hazard and endanger the lives of those who live in them, to prevent apartments and rows of houses with little or no front and side yards, to require a wide set-back or building line, to require stone or brick construction, to enforce a minimum construction cost, to the end that there might be reasonable uniformity in the values of the houses and in the social status of their owners. Giffin Avenue is one of the highly restricted streets of the South Hills.

T h e G I F F I N F a m i l y

There is a space of over a hundred feet between the houses on opposite sides of the street, giving the effect of a parked boulevard, with spacious lawns, terraces, floral effects, etc. In 1923, about a generation later, Pittsburgh adopted its Residential Zoning Laws which aims at the same purpose, and which has been of great help to the home owner in many ways. It is interesting to note that of the original 400 acres comprising the Giffin Farms, only about nine acres remain and this the city may take over for a park. The balance includes the desirable portions of Knoxville and Mt. Oliver districts. Part of this tract was granted by the Penns to Hervey Giffin and the early surveys show it to be in a direct projected line south of the Tenth Street Bridge and about a mile from it.

of Andrew Giffin, deceased, late of Washington County, Pa., together with the probate thereto attached, as the same remains of record in my office. Given under my hand and official seal at Washington this fifth day of April, A. D., 1864.

Note: The will was drawn on September, 1812, his death occurring the following Dec. 12th. It was evidently dictated by the testator, and written perhaps by one of the two witnesses. He states, in the opening sentences that he was "weak in body" but "of sound mind," etc. This is evident from the grasp he had of his affairs and by the fact that he was unable to sign his Will. No question was raised, evidently, as to the validity of the Will, as it was accepted by all the legatees; and distribution was duly made at no great length of time after the testator's demise. In the main the heirs had received their inheritance before the death of the father; and it is interesting to note how clearly he recalled the loans made by him to them, mentioning the debts to be charged against each.

No hint is given as to the nature of the sickness which was preying on Andrew Giffin II at the time of the drawing of his Will. The fact that he was unable to sign it would perhaps indicate that he may have suffered a stroke and that he was incapacitated thereby until his death which occurred a little over three months later. To some the fact that he did not sign his Will, may indicate that he was unable to write. This seems beside the question as he had been not only an active and successful farmer but had made a business of buying and selling farms and real estate, which require a highly specialized knowledge of legal forms and phraseology. Moreover the fact that his parents were Scotch and Irish, and Protestants as well, makes it likely that he had acquired a practical and substantial education. His Will indicates his interest in education, wherein he made provision for the schooling of his youngest child, Rebecca, stating that she shall be taught "to read and write, and carried through the five common rules of Arithmetic." The other children probably had as good teaching. Itinerant teachers travelled through the communities, and gave simple instruction to the children of the more prosperous and the more ambitious families; but the main reliance of the children for an education was their parents; and the probabilities are strong that our ancestor and his wife took care of the education of the older children; and these in turn aided in the instruction of others

Certified Copy of the Will

I DO HEREBY CERTIFY that the above is an intelligent copy of the Will of Andrew Giffin II according to the Official Records of the County of Washington, Penna., this 24th day of January, 1933.

Attest.

The GIFFIN Family

Giffen Poems

The following verses are from the "Book of Songs" by Judge Wylie W. Giffen, of Guthrie, Okla., a descendant of John Giffen, son of Andrew Giffin I, and a brother of our own Andrew Giffin II. John settled in Westmoreland County. Judge Giffen, we have it from no less an authority than his cousin, William W. Giffen, a realtor of Pittsburgh, is a national legal authority on railroad management. He has two hobbies, his verses and his Giffin relatives, and it can be said in his favor that of the two, he likes the latter the best, and never tires of visiting a Giffin wherever he finds one. So if you like his verses and tell him so, look out to have a visitor in the near future. And a Scotch American Giffen can have just as much personality even if his forefathers spelled the name Giffen.

Thoughts of the Old Home

My thoughts go back to the old home,
With all my main and might,
Though scenes have changed so
round the place,
The sun shines just as bright.

The loved ones all have gone afar.
From out the dear old home,
But we in mem'ry gather there,
No matter where we roam.

I Like a Boy

I like a boy most anywhere,
Most anywhere I like a boy,
He's strong to lift my manhood care,
And fill my heart with youthful joy.

The farmer boy's a sturdy lad,
His whistle through the meadows
 ring
He bids the heavy heart be glad,
More gay than morning lark he sings.

In town's a boy I love to meet,
A place where sunrise is not known,
He helps make glad the City street,
His cheerful voice I'd love to own.

What would the city really be
If whistling boys were driven away
It then would have no place for me,
I would not stay another day.

California Gold Rush

Across the plains men hurried fast,
Through many a rugged mountain pass,
Though dangers oft, and trials great
They reached the sea with Golden Gate.

They found the gold for which they sought,
But gold is oft too dearly bought,
A mighty state, by western sea,
Not dreamed of then, has come to be.

Our Historian

We are indebted to the Rev. Isaac Boyce, D. D., for his splendid work in compiling this book. Securing the data has entailed writing countless letters over a long period of time and the laborious work of verifying and simplifying the copy matter for publication. He has added the result of his search through local and national history to secure the interesting and informative articles concerning the Giffin Family which are given herein. A word of appreciation is in order. Don't be backward, folks.

The Giffin Reunion Association

has been in active existence about fifty years. It holds a regular biennial reunion in Washington County near where Andrew Giffin II Family first settled west of the Allegheny Mountains. There are seldom less than two or three hundred present and shelter is provided, rain or shine. Lunch is served from well-filled baskets and there is varied entertainment, speakers and music; furnishing a never to be forgotten day. The Secretary will gladly mail you notices of meetings in advance. Send in your name while you have it in mind.

This Book For Sale At Cost

It is a limited edition and most of the copies were paid for before it was printed. While they last, the balance of the copies are for sale. Due to necessity no more books can be printed at this time.
