FOREWORD

The 300th anniversary of the transplanting of the Griswold family from England to America seems a fitting time to record one's gratitude for the heritage of the past, and his obligation to the future. More appropriate ways of doing this will readily occur than publishing a family lineage. But if any apology seems necessary, let it be found in the homage which the present must always pay to the past.

By way of preface the compiler in a work like the present must disclaim any assumption of authorship. The material used is necessarily borrowed. There can be no pretense to originality. Indeed, the value of such a work must be in proportion to its faithfulness to existing records and authorities. Without burdening the pages with citations the compiler acknowledges his obligations for having used freely the following sources, to which reference may be made for fuller details: Solihull and its Church, Pemberton; Historic Connecticut, Allis; Ancient Windsor, Stiles; The Griswold Family, Glenn E. Griswold; Ohio Historical Collections, Howe; Stories of Ohio, Howells; Old Northwest Genealogical Quarterly, Vol. 6, No. 4; Magazine of American History (1884).

A growing interest in genealogy is attested in America by the organization and rapid growth of historical societies, like the Sons of the American Revolution, and numerous family associations, showing that the historic sense is far from decay. In this connection one must commend the work, aims and objects of the Griswold Family Association, and urge affiliation on the part of all who are eligible for membership.

Ad Gloriam Dei. A. D. 1939.

I. IN ENGLAND

The use of surnames became general and imperative by the 12th century of our era. Of necessity they were descriptive and informative, distinguishing a person by occupation, character, or habitat. Orthoepy was not then an art, nor orthography a science, so the family name appears in various guises, such as Greswold, Grissolde, Gryssould; John de Greswalde appears of record in 1288; William de Grosewold in 1349.

By the beginning of the 14th century the Griswolds, who probably came with the Teutonic invaders, were well established in Warwickshire, heart of Anglo-Saxon England, as an ancient and aristocratic family, with a crest and coat-of-arms. The arms are described as "Argent, a fess Gules, in chief two greyhounds courant proper," said to be preserved in a window in the east end of the nave of the church at Solihull.

Various members of the family are described as "of Solihull," "of Longdon Hall," "of Malvern Hall." Distinguished clergy and lords of the manor appear at intervals. In 1437 King Henry VI granted custody of Solihull to a Thomas Greswold. Tradition, which usually has some fact for a basis, associates three Griswolds with Edward I, whose favor they had won by distinguished bravery in the Crusades. Later the King recorded that of all his dogs he was fondest of his greyhounds from the Griswolds of Solihull.

So it appears plausible that the family name may very well have been originally Greysweald, derived from the Icelandic grey, signifying dog or greyhound, plus the common Anglo-Saxon weald, or wold, signifying woods. Hence the arms and crest of the family who lived in a woods and raised the favorite kind of dogs for royalty.

II. EDWARD (1)

Emigration from England to America was practically completed during the first half of the 17th century. Edward, son of George Griswold, together with his brother Matthew came with the Rev. Ephraim Huit's Warwickshire party in 1639 (when Charles I was having his troubles with Parliament), arriving at Windsor, Conn., about Aug. 17. He was born in England in 1607; m. there about 1630, Margaret, whose surname is unknown. She died Aug. 23, 1670. Her uncut gravestone, marked "M.G. 1670," is readily discernable and is said to be the oldest in the cemetery at Clinton, Conn. Edward was granted 29 and $\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land at Poquonock, but did not remove there till 1642, after the Indians' title had been fully satisfied. His home stood near the highway at the top of the hill, his acreage being bounded mostly south and west by Stony brook; east by the river. In 1663 he moved to Hammonasset, later called Killingworth, and now known as Clinton, Conn. In keeping with family traditions and his own energy and character, Edward took an active part and was an influential man in public affairs. He served as deputy to the General Court; built the old fort at Springfield; served as Justice of the Peace. As a member of Sessions he met with his brother Matthew and his own son Francis. He was recognized as the most prominent man in the new settlement and must be given full credit for its organization. He was its first deputy to the General Court. He was largely instrumental in organizing the first church in Clinton, and was its first deacon. He also served on a committee to establish a Latin school at New London. With over 300 acres he was a large land holder, in keeping with the aggressive spirit of those English settlers to acquire immense estates. In 1673 Edward married second a widow and mother, Sarah Bemis, of New London. He died at Clinton, 1691, in his 84th year, his burial place being unknown. There is an unmarked space next to Margaret's grave where possibly may rest his ashes.

Of his children, all by his first wife, the first five were born and baptized in Kenilworth Parish, England; the others are recorded at Windsor, Conn.:

III. GEORGE (2)

Born in England, 1633, he came to America when his father brought the family in 1639, six years old; m. Mary, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Holcomb, of Windsor, who d. Apr. 4, 1708; 1649 he lived at Poquonock, six miles from Windsor, where he made large purchases of land from the Indians, who on account of his honest dealing never molested his family. He was an extensive land owner; freeman in 1654; an active and eminently respected citizen, who did not aspire to political office; contributed to the poor in the other colonies; had a warehouse on the north side of the rivulet near the ferry, trading with England and the West Indies; d. IV. THOMAS (3)

Born at Windsor, Conn., Sept. 29, 1658; m. Hester, daughter of Job and Mary (Wolcott) Drake, and grand-daughter of Hon. Henry Wolcott. Incidentally, it is recorded of this Job Drake that as early as 1664, having become involved in a church difficulty, he was imprisoned through the illegal action of a church which professedly had for its excuse for defection from the Mother Church of England religious liberty and freedom of personal conscience. He had to appeal to the governor. Said to have been called "Ensign," d. Jan. 29, 1727. Children:

Thomas, b. Dec. 10, 1682; m. Abigail Sackett; d. Mar. 7, 1753.

V. SAMUEL (4)

Born at Windsor, Conn., Aug. 7, 1685; m. (1) in Simsbury, Deborah Holcomb, daughter of Benajah and Sarah (Enno) Holcomb, who was born Oct. 26, 1690, and d. Dec. 22, 1715; m. (2) in Simsbury, Elizabeth Gaylord, daughter of Lieut. Nathaniel and Abigail (Bissell) Gaylord, who was b. July 28, 1693, and d. Jan. 4, 1764. He d. May 16, 1777, his death being caused accidentally when an ax by which he was dragging a log to the fire-place suddenly gave way, he fell backwards, the shock proving fatal; and he was only 92 years old! In person he was only a little above middle height; eyes, hair, and complexion light; an enterprising and influential man in all public affairs; served in the General Assembly and many places of public trust; resided on his farm of some 500 acres at Simsbury, beautifully located in the bend of the Farmington River where it breaks through the Talcott Mts. The beauties of the location were marred later by the erection of the manufacturing town of Tariffville, which is only a short distance from the old farm site of Samuel's. Griswold Mills is said to have been located there. Samuel was a man of genial disposition and of great industry. Children:

Susannah, b. Jan. 15, 1714; d. infant.

Samuel, b. Dec. 12, 1715.

Elizabeth, b. Aug. 31, 1718; m. Haynes Woodbridge.

ELISHA (5), b. Oct. 25, 1731; m. Eunice Viets; d. Mar. 13, 1803.

VI. ELISHA (5)

Born at Simsbury, Conn., Oct. 25, 1731 (contemporary with George Washington); m. Eunice, daughter of John and Lois (Phelps) Viets, and grand-daughter of Dr. John and Catherine (Myers) Viets, who was b. Nov. 24, 1742, and d. Aug. 20, 1823, at the home of her daughter Deborah, Lanesboro, Mass. A great deal might be said in behalf of this determined and pious mother who must have been a firm believer in the virtue of constant work for everybody; whose sons had to do knitting when other employment was lacking, two of whom became clergymen—one of them a distinguished Bishop in the Protestant Episcopal Church, who could read when he was only three years old. Elisha was confirmed in the Church after his marriage. He was of outstanding good sense and of domestic, home-abiding habits; d. Mar. 13, 1803. Children:

Elisha, b. Dec. 26, 1762; m. Rispah Mitchelson; served in Rev. War.

Sylvia Arabella, b. Nov. 17, 1781; m. Rev. Jasper D. Jones; d. Jan. 27, 1858 (at res. of dau. Mrs. Orville Griffin, Granby, Conn.).

VII. EZRA (6)

Born at Simsbury, Conn., Dec. 6, 1767; m. Ruth, daughter of Capt. Lemuel and Ruth (Woodford) Roberts, who was b. Jan. 24, 1768, and d. May 31, 1847. Being a member of the Scioto Company, with his family he removed from Connecticut and settled in central Ohio. He left Simsbury Sept. 15 and arrived at Worthington Oct. 29, 1803, being 44 days enroute. The journey was made in a wagon drawn by oxen, over almost impassable roads and through an unbroken forest, and although other members of the colony were provided with teams of horses, such were the conditions of travel that the naturally slowly-moving oxen completed the journey the sooner by several days, and enabled Ezra and his family to be the first settlers in the town. The story of how he made that perilous journey under very hazardous conditions would be extremely thrilling. In a springless wagon drawn by oxen were, besides himself (no one knows how much of the way he had to walk or repair roads), his wife, his household goods, necessary supplies, and his six children, the latter ranging in age from 8 months to 13 years. He had to travel approximately 650 miles, ferrying across at least four major rivers, fording numerous streams, crossing several massive mountain ranges that even today tax the power of an automobile. Speed was desirable and he averaged less than 15 miles a day, ending in a lonely wilderness, where merciless and treacherous savage Indians still lurked. Perhaps some day some one having obtained accurate knowledge will preserve for posterity in a permanent form this example of steadfast heroism, patient endurance and persistent perseverance which they might do well to emulate. There in the township of Sharon, on the slopes of the winding Olentangy, he enshrined his lares and penates in a homestead made more venerable and sacred by the toils and tears and joys of one hundred and thirty-six years, still unalienated.

Ezra Griswold was a plain-looking, well-built man, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches in height, always spare in flesh, rather thin face, but generally healthy and very athletic. In his youth he seldom met with a man who could excel him in those manly exercises which were then the universal sport of the young. He was a devoted adherent of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and although he had never received a liberal education, but with the aid of his excellent mother, was mainly self-taught, on two occasions he was engaged in religious controversy, in defense of the doctrines of that Church, as having the sanction of Christ and His apostles. He sometimes indulged himself in the composition of poetry, of different styles, confining himself mostly to objects of satire. He was admirably qualified for public employment, but was of a retiring, domestic nature, and was never called to any higher office than that of Justice of the Peace, in which capacity he served for many years, and enjoyed the universal respect of all who knew him best. Being active in the state militia, he was commissioned Captain in 1806 by Governor Tiffin. He was one of the founders and original trustees of St. John's Episcopal Church, Worthington, as well as its first parish clerk and also reading clerk. Being a man of irreproachable integrity and dependability, Ezra, among other activities, acted as banker for the community, and after the war of 1812, when business was handicapped by a scarcity of currency, issued two series of paper monies over his own signature. These were in denominations of 6¼, 12½, 25, and 50 cents, and 1 and 2 dollars, all of which he later redeemed.

All the circumstances of trial and achievement suggest a man of high principle and purpose, and of firm conviction, besides great courage and gigantic energy. That he died a young man—he was only 54—with no known chronic complaint, must be attributed to premature physical exhaustion due to an overtaxed constitution. He d. Oct. 2, 1822. His grave-stone in St. John's churchyard has this quaint inscription: "With his family he came to Worthington, Ohio, October 29, 1803, and were the first settlers in the town." Children:

Ruth, b. Aug. 23, 1790; m. Noah Andrews; d. Oct. 28, 1856.

VIII. GEORGE HARLOW (7)

Born at Simsbury, Conn., May 21, 1795, he was eight years old when he came to Ohio with his father; on his 25th birthday m. Mila Thompson, daughter of Judge William and Anna (Beldin) Thompson, who was b. June 17, 1798, and d. Feb. 21, 1871. The marriage was solemnized by the Rt. Rev. Philander Chase, first Bishop of Ohio. He continued to reside in the homestead which his father had erected about 1816 at the northeast corner of the public square. He is said to have been of unusual size and strength; acquired the title of "General" on account of his interest and activity in the militia, being commissioned to successive military positions up to and including Brigadier General—Adj. 5th Reg. 2nd Brig. 7th Div. Sept. 17, 1821; Colonel 2nd Reg. 2nd Brig. 7th Div. Dec. 14, 1826; Brig. General 3rd Brig. 16th Div. July 18, 1831. He was postmaster at Worthington 1843-49 and 1853-57; recorder of the village on its incorporation in 1836; mayor in 1837 and again in 1847; and for more than fifty years one of its most influential citizens. He was a meticulously correct business-man, keeping remarkably full and detailed records and minute memoranda. He was much interested in the cause of education, being one of the founders and promoters of the Worthington academy, of which institution he was treasurer for many years. Being a man possessed of superior mental endowments, he exerted a potent influence over his fellow-men, and early became and long continued a prominent and highly-respected citizen. On account of his well-known character as a correct business-man, he was almost constantly the recipient of offices within the gift of the people, and always discharged the duties pertaining to them with ability and fidelity. SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

No doubt if diligent search were made, or if all the facts were known, proof of eligibility to membership in the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution might be established through numerous patriotic ancestors. However, the record of Captain Lemuel Roberts, great-great-grandfather of the present generation of Griswolds, is well known, easily accessible, and quite sufficient for the purpose.

See "Military Record of Connecticut".

This Capt. Lemuel Roberts married Ruth Woodford, by whom he had eight children: Lemuel Jr. married Roxe Gillet, and lived in Bloomfield; Ruth married Ezra Griswold, and removed to Worthington, Ohio; Hannah married Augustus Filley, and lived in Bloomfield and Torrington; Samuel married (1) Elethea Calkins; (2) Pamela Patchin, and lived in Sharon, Conn.; Lois married Zopher Topping, and moved to Ohio; Eunice married James Goodwin; Hezekiah died in infancy; Hezekiah II married Harriet King.
