FOREWORD

This genealogical record relates to that branch of the Greenwood family in America which is descended from the brothers, Nathaniel and Samuel Greenwood, who emigrated from Norwich, England, about the middle of the seventeenth century, and settled in Boston, New England. They were both shipwrights by trade, sons of Miles Greenwood, a worsted weaver of Norwich.

Desiring to preserve a record of his early forbears, and believing that there is value in the annals and traditions of the past as they are handed down from one generation to another, the author of this volume gathered the material for it over a number of years, collecting the facts from original records and sources in this country. Members of the family in scattered parts of the world have generously contributed information, and others have given valuable assistance in special lines of research, for which very grateful acknowledgement is here made. In England much research was done, especially among the records of Norfolkshire and Yorkshire, with a view to tracing further, if possible, the English ancestry of Nathaniel Greenwood, the emigrant ancestor, and of establishing a final connecting link between the Norwich Greenwoods and the more ancient family of Greenwood of Greenwood-Lee near Heptonstall in Yorkshire, which the author was convinced were both of one ancestral stock.

Of the two brothers, Nathaniel and Samuel Greenwood, who came to Boston from the old city of Norwich, it does not appear that they came to America for definitely religious reasons. Though both brothers were sober God-fearing men, covenanting later with the Old South Church, they no doubt crossed the ocean, like many of that day, to better themselves, to escape the repressive influences in England, both economic and social, as well as religious; to build homes, and to spend their youth and energies amid the growing life and opportunities of the new colonies. By the year 1654 Nathaniel Greenwood, a young man of twenty-three years, was living in Boston and plying his trade of shipwright. He did well and shortly afterwards sent for his brother, Samuel, who joined him in the same trade. The immediate forbears of Nathaniel, in Norwich, were tradesmen and artisans. When Nathaniel Greenwood came to the colonies, he came furnished with a trade or craft, necessary in a new country which depended largely on ships and carrying trade for its sustenance. Shipbuilding was a useful and prosperous industry when he first acquired his shipyards and began to build up his business. He prospered and was soon able to acquire land and establish a home in the New World, that first hope in the heart of every man who seeks freedom and security in new lands.

The early Greenwoods in America were plain men, artisans, as we have said, and it is interesting to note in the succeeding generations that this craftsmanship continued to be a characteristic of the family manifesting itself in a variety of vocations. To the present day an aptitude for draftsmanship and a fondness for the water are to be found in Nathaniel's descendants which may be a remote inheritance from the business of shipbuilding. In the generations between we find John Greenwood, an early New England artist, who later went to London and was better known for his work as an etcher and mezzotinter; we also find Isaac, an ivory-turner of Boston, a contemporary of Paul Revere, and a maker of many things with his hands, ranging from the newly fashionable "umbrilloe" to the German flute and artificial limbs. Isaac Greenwood of Boston, moreover, was the first of his name to turn his hand to dentistry, probably employing extremely crude methods, a profession, however, which he handed on to his four sons, Isaac, John, Clark and William Pitt; the second son, John, became dentist to George Washington, and a grandson, Isaac John of New York, was eminent in the profession and was one of the first to receive a degree from the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery.

No great or stirring deeds may be found recorded in this volume, but men are here who have been useful in their sphere of life; "Ut prosim"—that I may be of use. Whether their lives be great or humble, a thread of purpose, of genius, of faith, is found running from generation to generation, from past to present, which brings to the changing life of each succeeding age something from the past, a spirit "known of old," born of the strength and simplicity of earlier days.

GREENWOODS OF NORWICH, ENGLAND

Church of St. Peter Mancroft, Norwich.

MILES GREENWOOD AND HIS SON MILES

MILES^b GREENWOOD, b. circa 1577, was the earliest progenitor of the Greenwoods of Boston, New England, that so far has been traced. He was a baker in the parish of St. Peter's of Mancroft in the City of Norwich, England. The record of his marriage is found in the parish register of St. Peter's, 21 October 1599, "to Anne Scath singlewoman of Barnham Broome, co. Norfolk." At a General Muster taken in Norwich, 10 August 1589, Miles Greenwood was enrolled as one of the servants (or apprentices) of William Rasse, baker, in Mancroft Ward. From the will of his kinsman, Edward Greenwood, Jr., of Norwich in 1608 it appears that Miles Greenwood was then living in Sudbury, co. Suffolk. He afterwards returned to Norwich, where he probably died, though the date of his decease has not been ascertained.

From the Norwich town records we find, 7 June 1637, that "he and his wife Ann, both aged sixty years, were examined as being desirous of passing to Rotterdam to see their son, William, and to return again in six months."

The following are some of the children of Miles and Anne (Scath) Greenwood according to different church records:

- I. Miles^a, bapt. 1 September 1600; m. Abigail; was buried 3 September 1658 in the Church of St. Michael at Pleas.
- II. Robert, bapt. 27 September 1601 at St. Peter's of Mancroft; buried from same church 29 September 1601.
- III. Robert, bapt. 26 September 1603 at St. Stephen's Church, Norwich.

- IV. Nathaniel, b. circa 1605; apprenticed 28 April 1620 to William Symonds, grocer; admitted as a citizen of Norwich 26 January 1626.
- V. William, apprenticed 1 November 1621 to John Robbs, worsted weaver, for seven years. He and his wife "for conscience sake" left Norwich under the episcopate of Bishop Wren and joined the English church at Rotterdam under the Reverend William Bridges, formerly of St. Peter's, Hungate, Norwich. Returning with others to England in 1642 he helped to establish the Independent Church at Yarmouth and Norwich.
- VI. Joane, bapt. 25 February 1607/8 at St. Peter's in Sudbury, co. Suffolk.
- VII. Mary, bapt. 11 December 1616 at St. Peter's of Mancroft in Norwich.

MILES^a GREENWOOD (Miles^b), bapt. 1 September 1600; m. Abigail———; d. September 1658.

Miles Greenwood was baptized at the Church of St. Peter's of Mancroft in Norwich, England. On 20 June 1618 he was apprenticed to John Robbs, worsted weaver, for eight years and was admitted as a citizen of Norwich, 3 May 1627, as evidenced by the following extracts from the Town Clerk's Office, Guildhall, Norwich, England:

"Md. that the Vth day of June 1619 John Robb's of Norwich, worstead weav. Inrolleth an Indenture bearing date the Twentieth day of June 1618 sealed by Miles Grenewood, whereby the said Miles putteth himselfe app'tice unto the said John Robbs unto the sience or occupacon for worstedweaver. And wth him to dwell tarry serve & abide from the day of the date of the said Indenture unto the fall and a terme of Eight yeares. Durynge all wch said tearme the said John Robbs covenanteth to teach or cause to be taught the said Miles Greenwood in the said science or occupacon of a worsted weaver. Finding unto him sufficient meate drinke & other neccessaryes durynge all the said tearme & in th'end thereof to give him doble Apparell."

"Miles Grenewood worsted weaver, former app'ntic Johis Robbes admissus est civis 3d May 1627."

The town records of Norwich state also that Mihil Greenwood, weaver, aged thirty-six, and his wife, Ann, aged thirty-six, and servant, Susanna Rath, desired to pass into Holland to seek work, by reason that work was scarce in England and desired permission to return again when work was more plentiful.

That he visited and traded with New England in the latter part of 1637 is evident from certain Chancery Proceedings in which Miles Greenwood brought suit against John Cockshall, merchant, for money which he claimed to be due to him. John Cockshall, or Coggeshall, was later governor of Newport Colony.

Miles Greenwood was of the Parliamentary party, according to tradition. He was buried in the Church of St. Michael at Pleas, Norwich, 3 September 1658 and on the 23 December following administration was granted in the Prerogative Court, London, to his widow Abigaell.

In the Pedigree, dated Norwich, 25 September 1723, preserved among Sir Isaac Heard's Miscellaneous Pedigrees in the College of Arms,¹ Miles Greenwood is erroneously represented as being originally from Greenwood in Yorkshire. A note attached to the pedigree says "he came very yong from Yorkshire. . . . He had the character of an Honest Understanding discreet, diligent man & of a very comely Body. The Arms I took from an Ancient Seal of His."

Children of Miles and Abigail Greenwood:

I. Miles, bapt. 9 September 1627 at St. Stephens in Norwich as "Millys, son of Millys." He was admitted a citizen of Norwich, 27 April 1650. His occupation, probably given in error, was set down as grocer. In the will of Bridget Greenwood, 1674, he is called "weaver" of the parish of St. Michael at Pleas. His own will, dated 14 October 1679 and proved 4 November 1681, describes him as "the elder worsted-weaver." By tradition, he was a chaplain or clerk and also a lieutenant in the Parliamentary Army. He was buried from St. Peter's at Hungate, 23 April 1681, his name on the record being "Michael," which often at that period took the place of Miles. His wife was his executrix, but her name is not given. Their children were:

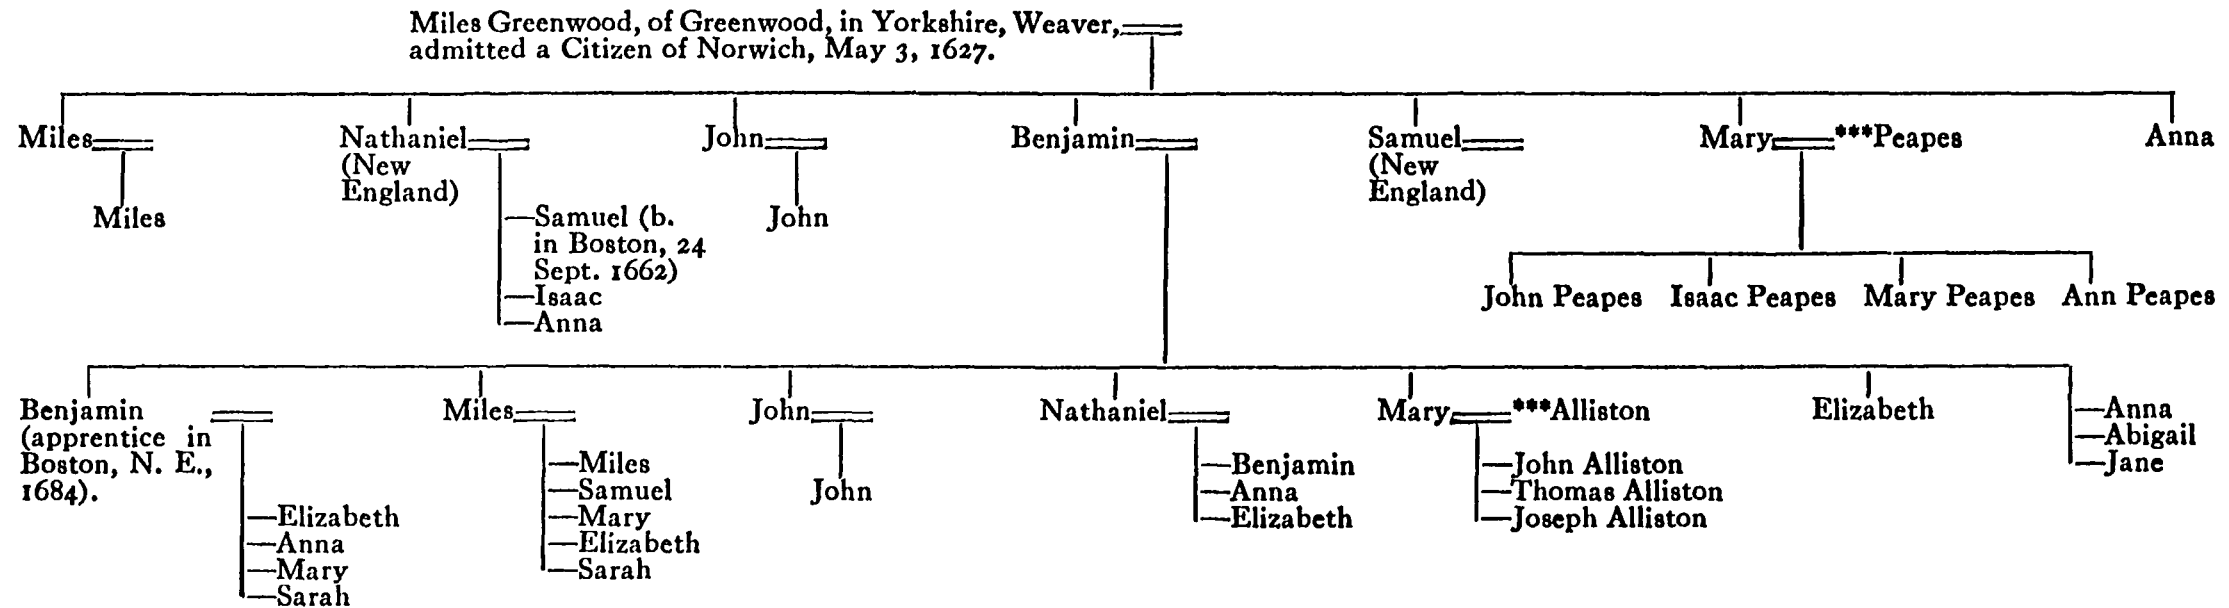

- (1) Miles, bapt. 1 February 1651/2 at St. Michael at Pleas, as "Michael, son of Michael."
- (2) John, bapt. 7 August 1653 at St. Michael at Pleas, as "John, son of Miles Greenwood." In his will dated 7 February 1698/9, proved 2 June 1699, he is styled "of St. Savior's, worsted weaver." He left a widow, Elizabeth, but no children.

- (3) Abigail, bapt. 11 March 1654/5 at St. Michael at Pleas.
 - (4) Anne, bapt. 25 September 1656 at St. Michael at Pleas.
 - (5) Benjamin. He was a grocer in the parish of St. Lawrence. His will was proved in September 1702. By his wife Elizabeth he had five children, Miles, John, Nathaniel, Elizabeth and Anne.
 - (6) Samuel.
- II. Mary, bapt. 4 December 1629 at St. Michael at Pleas; m. — Peapes and had John, Isaac, Mary and Ann.
- III. Nathaniel (1), bapt. 23 August 1631, who emigrated to Boston, New England, about 1652 and of whom a further account is given hereafter.
- IV. John, bapt. 2 September 1633 at St. Michael at Pleas. Probably it was his widow Alice, who married, 3 November 1659, in Boston, New England, Robert Porteous (or Portis), a founder of the Scot's Charitable Society, who died in July 1681. John Greenwood had a son John.
- V. Benjamin. Nothing is known of him except from the Pedigrees of Sir Isaac Heard above referred to, by which it appears he had the following children:
- (1) Benjamin. He was apprenticed to his uncle, Nathaniel Greenwood (1) in Boston, N. E., and is mentioned in his uncle's will, 1684. Nothing more is known of him except that he had four daughters, Elizabeth, Ann, Mary and Sarah.
 - (2) Miles. It was probably this Miles Greenwood of Norwich who was a barber-surgeon and whose will of 18 March 1733/4 was proved 6 June 1734. He left his daughter, Mary Gay £10, daughter Sarah £60, and appointed his son, Samuel, and his brother, James Bunn, executors.
 - (3) John. He had a son John.
 - (4) Nathaniel. He had Benjamin, Anna and Elizabeth.
 - (5) Mary, m. — Alliston and had John, Thomas and Joseph.
 - (6) Elizabeth.
 - (7) Anna, m. — Sterling and had William and Mary.
 - (8) Abigail.
 - (9) Jane.
- VI. Samuel (101), b. about 1646, who emigrated to Boston, New England, and of whom a further account is given hereafter.
- VII. Anna. She apparently came to Boston, N. E., and was still living at the beginning of the eighteenth century on the estate of her deceased brother Nathaniel (1).

PEDIGREE OF GREENWOOD

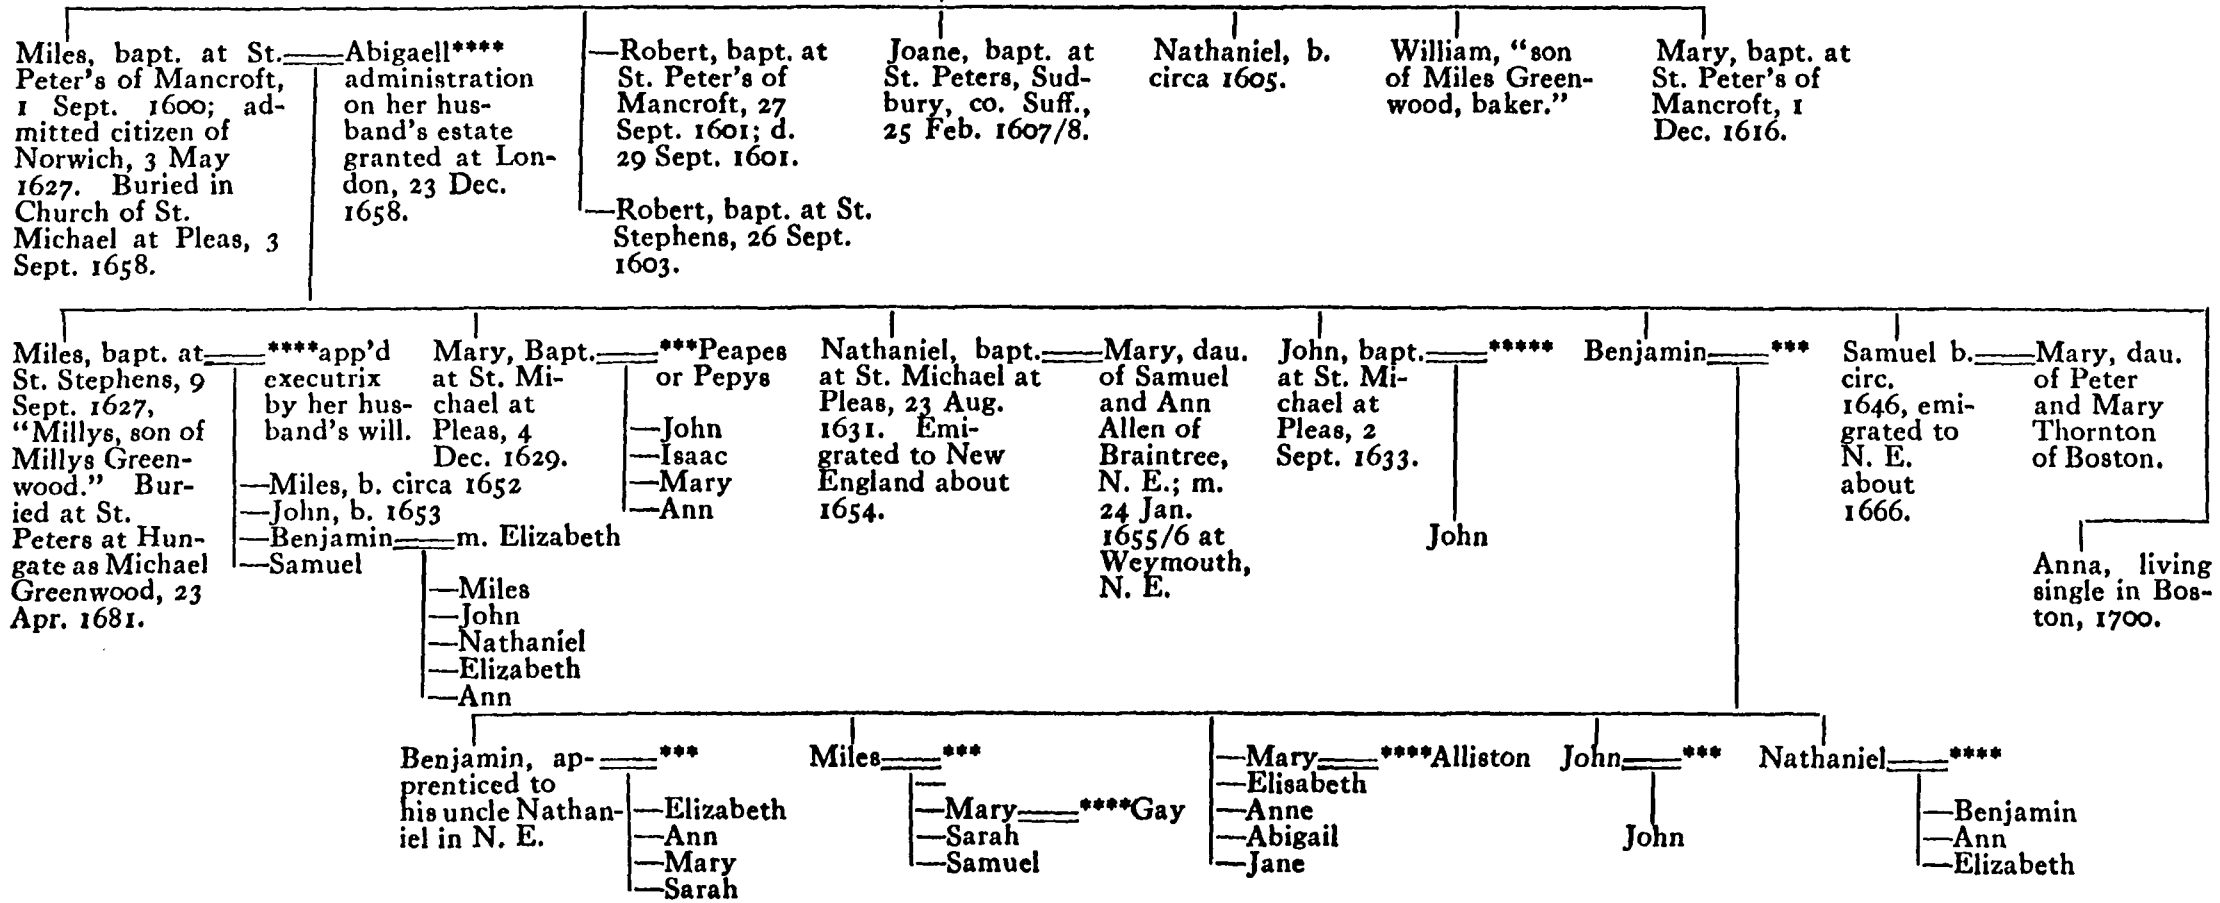

“Norwich, September 25, 1723. The foregoing is a Genealogical Table of ye Family of Greenwood in this Place. Miles Greenwood came very Yong from Yorkshire And as I find it in ye Public Records of this City was an Apprentice with Josiah Robbs, Worsted Weaver, and admitted a Citizen, May 3, 1627. He had the Character of an Honest Understanding discreet diligent man, & of a very comely Body. The Arms I took from an Ancient Seal of His.”

The original of the above is in a volume of miscellaneous pedigrees in the College of Arms, lettered on the back J. P. I. It is written within circles. The arms are a fess between three stars of six points (not mullets) in chief, and three birds in base. The birds are facing to the right side of the shield, the compiler evidently having copied them directly from a seal.

PEDIGREE OF GREENWOODS OF NORWICH, ENGLAND

Miles Greenwood, baker, of the parish of St. Peter's of Mancroft, City of Norwich, 1599-1601; alluded to in the will of Edward Greenwood of Norwich as "Miles Greenwood of Sudbury, co. Suffolk," 18 Apr. 1608.

— Anne Scath of Barnham Broome, co. Norf., m. at St. Peter's of Mancroft, Norwich, 21 Oct. 1599; living Dec. 1616.

COAT-OF-ARMS OF THE GREENWOODS of Norwich and New England

COAT-OF-ARMS

Before proceeding to the history of Miles Greenwood's descendants who settled in Boston in the seventeenth century, it may be well to give a brief account here of the arms as borne by the Greenwoods of Norwich, England, and their descendants in America.

The first printed reference to the arms of the Greenwoods of Norwich and New England which has been found, occurs in the Addenda of Edmondson's Complete Body of Heraldry, London, 1780, which describes them as follows: "Greenwood of Yorkshire and Norfolk, 1594." Argent, a fesse between three mullets in chief and as many ducks in base, all sable. Crest, a mullet sable between a pair of duck's wings of the last. Motto, "Ut prosim." The date is probably that of the grant of the arms. The Book of Family Crests in its Dictionary of Mottos gives the Greenwood motto as, "Ut prosim alias" (that I may be of use to others).

Among the manuscripts which came to the College of Arms in London in 1859 upon the death of James Pulman, Clarenceux, were the Miscellaneous Pedigrees which had been collected by the late Garter king-at-arms, Sir Isaac Heard, Knt. In Volume I, p. 221, occurs the pedigree of "Greenwood of Norfolk," dated 25 September 1723. It commences with Miles Greenwood "of Greenwood in Yorkshire," the father of Nathaniel and Samuel who came to New England. The names in this pedigree are written within circles and the following note is attached to the table: "Norwich, September 25, 1723. The foregoing is a Genealogical Table of ye Family of Greenwood in this Place. Miles Greenwood came very Young from Yorkshire. And as I find it in ye Public Records of this City, was an apprentice with Josiah Robb, Worsted Weaver, and admitted a Citizen May 3, 1627. He had the Character of an Honest Understanding discreet diligent man, and of a very comely Body. The Arms I took from an Ancient Seal of His." The arms as tricked out are the same as those upon the Greenwood tombstone in Copp's Hill Burying Ground, Boston, even to the peculiarity of an indented fess, and bear evidence of having been copied directly from a seal as the ducks are drawn facing to the right of the shield instead of to the left, the mullets or spur-rowels are pierced and six pointed. The compiler, however, has erred in describing Miles Greenwood as originally from "Greenwood, in Yorkshire," since he was baptized in St. Peter's of Mancroft, Norwich, 1 September 1600, being the eldest son of Miles Greenwood of that parish, a baker (later of St. Peter's in Sudbury, co. Suffolk). It was presumably to the father of this elder Miles that the arms were given if the year 1594, the date given in Edmondson, is that of their grant. This last named Miles was the earliest progenitor of the New England family that has been definitely traced. Two sons, Miles and William Greenwood, were both weavers of Norwich, as were many others of the name. At about this period Shakespeare alludes to the weavers in the words of Falstaff in the play of "Henry IV" (Act ii, s. iv), "A bad world, I say; I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything; A plague of all cowards, I say"; and in "Twelfth Night" Sir Tobey Belch says, "Shall we rouse the night owl in a catch that will draw three souls out of one weaver? Shall we do that?" (Act ii, s. iii.)¹

A number of these Norwich Greenwoods fought on the side of Parliament during the Civil War; they were akin to others of the name living in Norfolkshire towards the close of the sixteenth and beginning of the seventeenth centuries. Among their kindred were five brothers, Edward, Robert, Henry, Thomas, and Christopher, all in the Christian ministry:

Edward Greenwood was Rector of Great Dunham from 1580 until his death in 1591. His son, Edward of Norwich, in his will proved in 1608 mentions "Miles, son of Miles Greenwood of Sudbury."

Robert Greenwood, B.A., St. John's College, Cambridge, 1582, was Rector of Heydon from 1576 until his death in 1601.

Henry Greenwood, matriculated at St. John's College, Cambridge, 1564, was Vicar of Hatfield Peverill, co. Essex.

Thomas Greenwood, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, 1588, of Fundenhall in 1591, and afterwards Rector of Castor. At the time of his death in 1638 he was supplying the place of Robert Peck, Rector of Hingham who, with some of his parishioners had fled to New England. His son, Nathaniel, was father of Thomas, baptized at St. Michael at Pleas, Norwich, 6 December 1646, probably the same Thomas Greenwood, weaver, who settled in Cambridge Village (Newton), Mass., and became the ancestor of a numerous race in the new world.

Another son of the Reverend Thomas Greenwood was John Greenwood, Sheriff of Norwich 1642, a great iconoclast and smasher of church windows during the Civil War. He held positions of trust under the Parliament and died 1649. His widow, Bridget of St. Michael at Pleas, died in December 1675, and mentions in her will dated a year earlier, "her husband's kinsman, Miles Greenwood, worsted weaver" of the same parish, referring to an elder brother of Nathaniel, the emigrant to Boston.

the death of Falstaff is mentioned in the play of "Henry V," which ended with the year 1422. Sir Toby Belch, however, may refer to the early puritans who gathered in Norwich around Robert Browne in 1580, though their first meeting, November 1572, was at Wandsworth in Surrey. The plays of "Henry V" and "Twelfth Night" were written 1596-1600.

Christopher Greenwood, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, 1582, Vicar of All Saints in Shottesham, died in 1608. His son, John, Rector of Brampton, was ejected and died 1663, leaving a will dated 28 July 1659 and sealed with his arms and crest, wherein he speaks of his gold ring with a stone in it and his arms cut thereon "which I do now wear." The arms in question being sable, a chevron ermine between three saltiers argent. Crest, a demi-lion rampant or, holding in his paws a saltier argent. These are the armorial bearings of the Greenwoods of Greenwood Lee, near Heptonstall, Yorkshire, and the fact of its being here used would bear out the belief that the Norwich and Yorkshire Greenwoods were of the same family. (See Will No. 214.)

The earliest occurrence of any importance of the name of Greenwood in Norfolkshire is that of Richard Grenwode, Rouge Croix Pursuivant to Henry, Earl of Richmond, who on his accession to the throne in 1485 bestowed upon Grenwode the office of Bailiff of Richmond Fee (Swaffham, co. Norfolk), for services "as wele beyonde the see as within this oure reaume of England." The grant was "during pleasure" and shortly after was given to Thomas Blake for life. Richard Grenwode, Rouge Croix, accompanied Sir Robert Willoughby in the spring of 1489 to Brittany to the assistance of Duke Francis II, who had aided Henry of Richmond during the ascendancy of the House of York. Hostilities were not resumed, however, and the English forces returned after a truce had been published by the Rouge Croix, who continued in office till 1495 or later.

The baptismal name of Miles, or Mylles, and at times even recorded as Michael, has been frequent for three centuries among the Greenwood family of Norwich and their New England descendants. We find, however, Miles Grenwode, a taker and fuller, of Tyverton, co. Devons, in 1515; another by name of Miles was Alderman of Grantham, co. Lincoln, who died 1637, and left a nephew of the same name to inherit the paternal estate at Crooklands, co. Westmoreland. Others of the name originated in Fakenham, co. Norfolk, and were long connected during the eighteenth century with the Salt Office in London, among them Miles Greenwood, Jr., who was born in St. Andrews Parish, Holborn, and died there, November 1768, aged eighty years. The family name of Greenwood has been written synonymously with Grimwood, but more frequently as Greenhood or Greenheade, as on the records of Cambridge Village (Newton), Mass., in 1665; it also occurs earlier as in the chancery case of Oliver Greneheade of Crooklands, co. Westmoreland, in the time of Elizabeth; John Greenhood or Greenwood, the Brownist martyr of 1593; and Dns. Henricus de Grenehode, Vicar of Wakefield 1349.

The coat-of-arms used by the descendants of Nathaniel Greenwood of Norwich, England, who settled in Boston previous to the year 1654, first appears in this country as cut upon a slab of dark slate on the old family vault in Copp's Hill Burying Ground which was erected in 1722 by Samuel Greenwood, the eldest grandson of Nathaniel. The arms are: Argent, a fess sable, in chief three mullets, and in base three ducks of the same. Crest, a mullet between two duck wings expanded, sable. Motto, Ut prosim (that I may be of use). In the arms as cut upon the tomb the fess has the heraldic peculiarity of being indented or notched at either end.

Samuel Greenwood, who erected the tomb, was a merchant and influential citizen of Boston, holding a commission as Justice of the Peace under Governor Belcher. In July 1722 the Selectmen of Boston granted liberty to Thomas Hutchinson, Esq., Mr. Samuel Greenwood and Captain John Greenough to build each of them a tomb in the North (or Copp's Hill) Burying Place, on the southeast side, provided they take the direction of Mr. William Clark and Mr. Ebenezer Clough therein. Ninety years later, in 1809, the heirs of Samuel Greenwood conveyed their interest in the family tomb to the grandchildren of his brother, Professor Isaac Greenwood, and it has since remained in their keeping. The details of this transfer will be found in the account of William Pitt Greenwood (22).

There formerly existed several old colored drawings of these arms in the possession of the elder members of the family; but when or by whom they were executed is not known, nor what has now become of them.

One was seen in 1819 by John William Greenwood (the uncle of the author) in the cabin of a very aged negro near Andover, Mass., who stated that it had been given to him by his old master Mr. — Greenwood of Boston. Another was in the possession of Isaac Greenwood of Boston (13), and after his death was retained by his only daughter, Mrs. Mary (Greenwood) Gay, who died at Dedham 1839. In April 1789 a copy of this old drawing was done by a Mr. Grant, a painter of Boston, at the order of William Pitt Greenwood for his brother, Dr. John Greenwood of New York. It is still in the possession of the latter's great grandson, Joseph Rudd Greenwood of that city. The inscription upon the drawing is as follows: "He beareth Argent, a Fesse Sable, in Chief three Spur-Rowels, and in Base three Ducks of the Same, by the name of Greenwood." Upon the back Dr. Greenwood, alluding to the spur-rowels and the ducks, has written, "Fleetness accompany'd with Watchfulness—Greenwood who bare these arms was a Knight of the first Order."

HIS DESCENDANTS

FIRST GENERATION

I. NATHANIEL¹ GREENWOOD (Miles^a, Miles^b), bapt. 23 August 1631; m. 24 January 1655/6 Mary Allen; d. 31 July 1684.

Nathaniel Greenwood was the second son of Miles Greenwood, worsted weaver, of Norwich, England, and Abigail, his wife. He was baptized in the Church of St. Michael at Pleas, Middle Wimer Ward, City of Norwich. He was doubtless educated at the Norwich Free Grammar School (the upper room of the old Charnel Chapel at the west end of the Cathedral Church) under Thomas Lovering, A.M., Master of the school for many years. He was a shipwright, but we have no certain knowledge of where he served his apprenticeship. From various entries on the Boston records it appears that before 1668 no one was allowed to open a shop there or set up in business for himself without a license unless he had served a seven years' apprenticeship in the trade he professed and had been admitted an inhabitant of the town, under penalty of 20s. a week. Nathaniel Greenwood, who would have commenced his apprenticeship about 1645, would have been of age in August 1652 and entitled to the freemanship of the town. It may be that he had been an apprentice in Yarmouth, a neighboring town of Norwich, which from a very early period had enjoyed a good reputation for shipbuilding; or he may have been sent to New England, or brought out by Nehemiah Bourne, who was in England in 1644. The first occurrence of his name to be found on record in New England is as a witness, together with John Brimblecombe, to the will of George Davis, blacksmith of Boston. The will was signed 23 September 1654 and proved 25 April 1655. Davis left a widow, Barbara (coexecutor with Daniel Turell) and two sons, Samuel, later a mariner of Boston, and John, a tailor of Boston, from both of whom Nathaniel Greenwood subsequently purchased property at the North End.

Nine Weymouth marriages performed by Captain William Torrey from 29 June 1655 to 5 January 1657/8 were recorded at Boston 1 April 1658. The first of these is "Nathaniell Greenwood of Boston and Mary Allen of Brantrey married by Capt. Torrey 24: (11): '55," i.e. 24 January 1655/6. Samuel Allen, a sawyer, and Ann his first wife, mother of Mary (b. 1634),¹ were among the first settlers of Braintree (now Quincy), Mass. Samuel was the son of George and Catherine Allen. George Allen was Deputy for Sandwich 1640, '41, '42. He was buried 2 May 1648² and his widow, Catherine, married (2) John Collins. In his will, dated 2 August 1669 and proved 16 September following, Samuel Allen states: "5 ly, I doe give and bequeathe unto my son-in-law, Nathaniel Greenwood, three pounds, to be paid unto him or his three years after my decease." Sarah (b. 30 January 1639), another daughter of Samuel Allen, became the second wife of Captain Josiah Standish, third son of Captain Miles Standish.

Nathaniel Greenwood followed the trade of shipwright, a most profitable business at that time. "In 1640," says Drake, in his History and Antiquities of Boston, "affairs had taken such a turn in England that a general want of foreign commodities began to be felt here, and the people saw that they must build their own ships and do their own business at sea. Mr. Hugh Peters stirred up some to join him at Salem in building a ship of three hundred tons; and this example was followed at Boston, and one of half the dimensions was built there. The work was accomplished with difficulty, owing to the want of money, but the shipwrights received for their wages such articles as the country produced." This ship was the Tryall, built by Captain Nehemiah Bourne, whose shipyard was subsequently conveyed to Nathaniel Greenwood. Perhaps the earliest in the trade at Boston was Matthew Chaffey, who became a freeman in 1637 and removed in 1649 to Newbury, where he had purchased the large farm of Dr. John Clarke.

Nathaniel Greenwood probably attended the First Church, and after 1669 the Old South, but the baptisms of his children are not recorded. His wife joined the Old North Church, which has the following record: "Sister Mary Greenwood, wife of Nath. Greenwood, joyned to us on 18th 11m. 1662." Prospering in his business, he sent out, or went himself to England about 1666 for his younger brother, Samuel, a ship-carpenter, and also for his nephew, Benjamin Greenwood, whom he received as his apprentice.

In 1658 he began to invest in landed estate. His first purchase was a small bit of land 29 by 20 feet situated some 60 feet east of the road running to Winnisimet Ferry (later called North, then Middle, now Hanover Street), 27 feet north of White Bread Alley (now Bartlett Street). Beginning in 1673 he started to purchase more extensively, buying waterfront property east of Ship Street (later Anne, now North Street), whereon were located his wharves and shipyards. In 1676 and 1677 he added to these purchases land running to the westward of Ship Street for a distance of about 160 feet in all and varying from 40 to 60 feet in width. The greater part of this purchase was made from Edward Page in October 1676, the purchase including the old brick mansion house, garden and pasture land. In this house Nathaniel Greenwood later died. It is now No. 376 North Street, although very little of the original house remains. He also purchased some thirty-seven acres of land and meadow in Braintree in 1677 from John Savill. In these deeds he is consistently referred to as ship-carpenter or shipwright. By 1683 he had extended his purchases to a plot of land at the corner of the road running to Winnisimet Ferry and White Bread Alley, adjacent to the piece he first purchased in 1658, so that his holdings ran all the way through from Ship Street to the Winnisimet Ferry Road.¹

Nathaniel Greenwood and Thomas Peck, Senior, both shipwrights, were chosen Water-bailiffs on 14 March, 1669/70; he was again chosen 13 March 1670/1 and 11 March 1671/2. Water-bailiffs, as first established, "kept the flats clear of wood, logs, timber or stone, to the annoyance of vessels, unless the same were marked by a beacon or pole." The fine for the offense was 10s. Ends of streets and wharves were to be kept clear of lumber and goods that had remained over forty-eight hours. No filth was to be thrown into the Cove; penalty 20s. No ballast to be cast out into the Channel or upon the flats; penalty £10. No fire to be kindled within three rods of a warehouse or wharf or wood pile, etc., and no vessel at wharf or in dock to keep a fire after 9 P.M. or before 5 A.M.; penalty 10s.

On 16 March 1673/4 Nathaniel Greenwood was chosen with Samuel Walker and others as Constable, a post almost equal to the present Captain of Police. The tax bill made out by him in the fall of 1674 for division of the town of Boston was published by the Boston Record Commissioners in 1876. His name appears on a petition to the General Court, dated 22 February 1675, relative to the War.¹ He was appointed, 24 April 1676, one of a Committee of Inspectors, within the precinct of Constable Robert Bronsdon, to prevent excessive drinking and disorderly conduct in private and unlicensed houses of entertainment. He visited Norwich, England, in 1676-77, when he deposed before the High Court of Admiralty that he was a shipwright, aged 45, and had lived in New England for twenty years. He took the Oath of Allegiance in Boston 11 November 1678 before Governor John Leverett. Nathaniel Greenwood was chosen fifth (with prefix of Mr.) of a board of seven Selectmen composed of Lieutenant Daniel Turell, Deacon Henry Allen, Lieutenant Theophilus Frarie, Captain Thomas Brattle, John Joyliffe, John Miriam, Sr., and himself, all men of prominence and standing. He was one of the Selectmen of Boston during the years 1680-1, 1682-3 and 1683-4, and he was one of the "perambulators" who, on 29 April 1683/4, ran the line between Rumney Marsh and Lynn, Malden and Reading.

In Copp's Hill Burial Ground is the following inscription:

TOMBSTONE OF NATHANIEL GREENWOOD,

In Copp's Hill Burying Ground, Boston

Died 31 July 1684

On 25 September 1684 Timothy Prout, ship-carpenter of Boston, aged about sixty-four years, testified that he was a witness to the will of Nathaniel Greenwood which was made about a week previous to his death, and that said will was read at Mr. Greenwood's house on the evening after his burial and was then placed in the hands of the widow for safe keeping, but had subsequently become lost. By said will the testator left to his eldest son, Samuel, his new brick house with half the garden and half the shipyard, said Samuel to pay his mother £5 per annum for her life; to his son, Isaac, the other half of the shipyard on south side below the highway, and his ordinary college expenses to be paid out of the whole estate during the time of his abode there; to his daughter, Anna, when of age, his two houses with the lands belonging to them, the one which he had built himself and the other bought of John Griffen; to his wife the dwelling-house in which he was living, with all the rents, half of the garden and the shop which Samuel Saxton was renting, together with all the lands at Braintree, and all the moveables, provided she did not marry again. To his brother, Samuel Greenwood, £10 to be paid a year after his decease, and to "cousen" (old form of nephew) Benjamin Greenwood, £5 to be paid when "his time is out." The other witnesses, Samuel Saxton (son of Thomas Saxton, miller and inn-holder of Boston), Obadiah Gill (son of John Gill, mariner of Dorchester), and Thomas Barnard, carpenter (son of Matthew Barnard), deposed to the same, to which also the widow, Mary (Allen) Greenwood, and the three children, Samuel, Isaac and Anne above mentioned, acquiesced. The estate was valued at £1,160.10,¹ his widow and son, Samuel, being the executors.

Mrs. Mary Greenwood was married secondly, 12 June 1690, at her own house, by Chief Justice Samuel Sewall, Esq., "about seven o'clock in the evening," as he says in his diary, to Captain Theophilus Frary. She thereupon released all claim of dower on the estate of her deceased husband, Nathaniel Greenwood, upon the payment to her annually during life of £10 N. E. money. Captain Frary was a Boston gentleman of eminent piety and refinement, and distinguished for his public services to the army in the Narragansett War. He was chosen Ruling Elder at the organization of the Old South Church in 1669, and ordained Deacon 8 November 1685. At the burial of a Mr. (Samuel?) Lillie in 1688/9 (probably the father-in-law of Captain Frary's daughter, Mehitable) he interrupted the burial service which was being read according to the new Episcopal form by the Reverend Robert Ratcliffe, for which offense he was put under bonds and was at great cost. He was often a Selectman and was a Representative in 1689, '93, '95 and '99, and may be said to have belonged to what was then the aristocracy of the colony. Circumstances indicate that Captain Frary's house might have been the headquarters of the opponents of Andros in 1689, and he is suspected of an agency in drawing Captain Daniel Fisher and his other Dedham relatives and friends to seize and bind the tyrant the day after he surrendered; his son-in-law, Andrew Belcher, moreover, was one of the Committee of Safety in this same insurrection of 1689.

Captain Frary, by his first wife, Hannah, daughter of Jacob Elliot and niece of the Apostle Elliot, whom he married 4 June 1653, had several children. He died 17 October 1700 "about 3 o'clock past midnight," says Sewall, "aged near 72 years," and was buried in the Granary ground. Three daughters only survived him and became the executrices of his will. They were: Hannah, who, as the widow of Isaac Walker of Boston (d. 19 October 1688), married 13 February 1689 the Honorable Andrew Belcher (whose first wife, Sarah Gilbert, had died 26 January 1688/9) and brought up his family of young children, among whom was Jonathan, the future Governor (1730-1741), who, as will be seen hereafter, engaged Samuel Greenwood, a great-grandson of Mrs. Mary (Allen) (Greenwood) Frary, as his private secretary 1740-'42; Abigail (b. 5 September 1662), who married Barachiah Arnold; and Mehitabel (b. 4 February 1665/6), who, before 1685, had married Samuel Lillie. On 15 January 1700/1 Mrs. Frary, who had been left £10 per annum by her second husband's will, released all claim upon his estate on the payment to her by her three step-daughters of £100 cur-

SECOND GENERATION

2. SAMUEL² GREENWOOD (*Nathaniel*¹ (1), b. 24 September 1662; m. circa 1687 Elizabeth Bronsdon; d. 16 July 1721.

Samuel Greenwood was a shipwright of Boston. On Bonner's Town Map of 1722, Grant's and Greenwood's Ship Yards are located at the North End, running out from Ship Street, between Battery and Salutation Alleys, not far from the North Battery. About 1687 he married Elizabeth Bronsdon (b. 27 August 1670), daughter of Robert and Bathsheba (Richards) Bronsdon, merchant of Boston,¹ his next neighbor. He was a Water-bailiff 14 March 1691/2; in 1694 a Tithing man; in 1700 one of the clerks of the Market; Surveyor of Highways in 1707; a Canvasser of the Rates and Taxes in 1708, '11 and '14; a Fire Warden in 1712; Selectman four times, 1715-'18. The following entry is taken from the Massachusetts Archives: "We the subscribers by warrant from his Excellency ye Governor have viewed the several vessels above named and materialls to them belonging, and the sums set against each vessel's name is their true valuation according to the best of our judgements. Dated in Boston this 9th Seper. 1710, Nathl. Cary, Charles Chambers, Samll. Greenwood."

The above refers to one pink and five open sloops taken into her Majesty's service by direction of the Honorable General Francis Nicholson and Council of War for transporting Her Majesty's stores of war in the designed expedition against the French at Port Royal (afterwards Annapolis Royal), which sailed from Nantasket on the 18th and resulted in the capitulation of Port Royal on the 2nd of October following. The three gentlemen appraised charges to the amount of £524, to be paid by Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island, not including other charges that could not be adjusted until the expedition should be ended, and their doings were approved by a Council of War 11 September 1710. Subsequently the above gentlemen, together with Major Thomas Fitch and Oliver Noyse, were appointed a committee to provide stores, etc., for the train of artillery in the same expedition to Canada.

After the reduction of Port Royal in October 1710, General Nicholson "went to England to solicit another expedition against Canada," says Hutchinson. There was general surprise at his return to Boston on the 8th of June following with orders to the various provincial governments "to have their quotas of men in readiness for a fleet which was expected to arrive in a few days after. . . . This was short warning."

"June 14, 1711—And. Belchar, The Commissary General, having signified his desire of Assistance in his office for the present extraordinary occasion, and having mentioned Mr. John Coleman as a person suitable and acceptable to him; It was ordered in Council that Mr. John Coleman be dismissed from the Committee of Transports and Mr. Samuel Greenwood be Inserted in the Committee in his place. John Addington, Sec.

"Sent down for concurrence. John Burrill, Speaker, Ho. of Rep."

The unsuccessful result of this expedition is a matter of history.

On the 11th of March 1711/2 Mr. Samuel Greenwood was one of a committee appointed to select the ground and oversee the building of a schoolhouse at the North End of the town. The site chosen was at the corner of North Bennet and Love Streets on lands bought from Mrs. Susanna Love, and the second Free Grammar School was built there at the expense of Captain T. Hutchinson. It was demolished in 1792. In 1718 Samuel Greenwood was on a committee to consider the state of the fortifications of the town, to repair the North Battery and to report if advisable to plant a battery at the end of the Long Wharf.

He and his wife, Elizabeth, were admitted members of the “Old North” Church, 13 August 1710, though Mrs. Greenwood had previously covenanted at the “Old South” on 22 March 1690/1, when her first son, Samuel, Jr., was baptized. Samuel Greenwood appears to have been a prominent member of the former church when, in 1713, some of the congregation desired to establish a separate meeting-house, afterwards known as the “New North,” and settle over it the Reverend John Barnard. This movement was strongly opposed by Doctor Increase Mather and his son Doctor Cotton Mather. The latter, in a conversation on the subject with Doctor Barnard said: “Mr. Barnard, do you think we could easily bear to have the best men in our house leave us, as Capt. (John) Charnock, Capt. (Gilbert) Bant, Mr. (Samuel) Greenwood, Mr. (John) Ruck, and it may be counsellor (Thomas) Hutchinson and Mr. Troisel? No Sir, we cannot part with such men as these.”

On division of the estate of the late Robert Bronsdon, 6 January 1707, Samuel Greenwood received £80 for his trouble and pains as an executor during the minority of his brother-in-law, Benjamin Bronsdon. He and his wife, Elizabeth, acknowledged having received a one-quarter share in money and goods amounting to £440, and as their share of the real estate, there was set off to them a certain messuage or tenement, with the land belonging to it, at the North End of the town in a place called the Narrow Lane (later White Bread Alley, now Bartlett Street), southerly 40 feet, east 76 feet, on house and land in possession of Widow Bronsdon (later in possession of Benjamin Bronsdon and Thomas Gouge), north 36 feet on a piece of ground called Tuttle’s pasture (later land of Samuel Holland), and west 58 feet by land of Richard Henschman and Richard Honeywell (later land of Amos Breed). This came afterwards to Professor Isaac Greenwood (7).

In January 1717 Benjamin Bronsdon and his sister, Sarah, wife of William Clark, having sold a certain piece of the Sea Wall, “out Wharffs or New Wharffs” commonly so-called, 58½ feet in length, to Samuel Greenwood and his wife, Elizabeth, and her sister, Mary Evans, widow of Jonathan Evans, the latter parties in turn sold to the former a certain part of said Sea

Wall and Wharfs, with the flats belonging, 45 feet in length, to the Northward of King Street Pier, north by wharf and flats of John Charnock, south by wharf and flats of heirs of John Cooly, deceased.

Samuel Greenwood gradually bought in from the other heirs all the land in Boston originally held by his late father, Nathaniel Greenwood. He had also extended his landed property westward to North Street by purchases from the heirs of John Tuttle.¹

In 1721 Samuel Greenwood removed temporarily from Boston to Roxbury to escape the smallpox which was raging with great severity in the town, having been brought there about the middle of April from Barbadoes via Saltortugas. The following notice appeared in the Boston News Letter of 24 July 1721: "On the 16th (being the Lord's Day) died at Roxbury, Mr. Samuel Greenwood, in the 59th year of his age. He was a Gentleman of Uneffected Piety towards God and Benignity towards Men; a true and steady Friend to the Religious and Civil Interests of the Country; and one that served this Town in the quality of an Assessor and Townsman, for several years together with great faithfulness. He was a tender Relative, a faithful Friend, a good Neighbour, and a Lover of all good Men; and as such was much beloved and is much Lamented at his Death. He was interr'd at Roxbury the Tuesday following with becoming Decency and Respect." His will was dated 7 March 1721, with a codicil 6 May following, and was admitted to probate 11 August 1721.²

Four portraits mentioned in the inventory we may suppose were those of Samuel Greenwood, his wife, Elizabeth, and his parents, Nathaniel and Mary (Allen) Greenwood. They are now lost, though that of Samuel appears to have been in existence as late as 1810, when his great-granddaughter, Mary (Greenwood) Gay (23) of Dedham, Mass., writing 18 April to her brother John Greenwood of New York, says: "I have sent the picture as you desired. 'Tis Father's Grandfather, Greenwood his name. He was a head Ship Builder who was wealthy and employed men to work for him." Where the portrait was sent has not been ascertained. It had probably been obtained from Mary Greenwood of Marblehead, his eldest granddaughter, who died in 1812, aged eighty-two years, from whom the family tomb was bought in 1809. Little if any of the old Greenwood plate mentioned in the inventory is supposedly in existence, although William H. Montague, Esq., of Boston, in an interesting letter of 9 January 1860, speaking of George H. Gay, son of Mrs. Mary Gay, says: "He left by will (1840) all his property to his wife; among his effects there were several articles of silver plate that had been handed down from your great-great-grandfather. I believe (but am not certain) that they had the Greenwood arms engraved upon them."

In the Boston News Letter of 11 September 1721 occurs the following advertisement: "All Persons that have any Claims on the Estate of Mr. Samuel Greenwood of Boston, Shipwright, lately deceased, are hereby desired to send in their Accompts to Mr. Samuel Greenwood, one of the Executors of the last Will and Testament of the Deceas'd, now residing in Roxbury, in the New Lane behind the Greyhound; and such as are indebted to the said Estate are also desired to adjust and balance the same. N. B. There is considerable quantity of choice Cotton Wool to be sold by the Bag or Retail, at a reasonable Rate, by the above said Samuel Greenwood, and that People may be fully satisfied that there is no danger of any Infection, they are desired to take Notice that it came from St. Thomas', where the Small Pox has not been for diverse years, and that it was never landed at Boston but conveyed by Water to Roxbury, and that said Greenwood has never had the Distemper himself, but removed out of Boston purposely to escape it. Note also that at the same Place you may be supplied with Saltersuda and Bag-Salt, Sugar, etc. etc." A curious combination!

Mrs. Elizabeth (Bronsdon) Greenwood, widow of Samuel Greenwood, survived him but a few months and died 9 December 1721, aged fifty-two years.¹ She was buried in Copp's Hill Burying Ground, where her son, Samuel, Jr., obtained permis-

- X. Joseph, b. 5 June 1709; d. 19 June 1709.
- XI. Joseph, b. 18, bapt. 20 August 1710 at Old North Church. The first mention found of Joseph Greenwood is on the Middlesex County records 9 March 1733, when he is a grantee of an undivided one third of a certain lot of land in Sudbury from his brother Samuel, guardian of Noyes Godfrey of Cambridge or Sudbury, a non compis mentis person. In March 1738/9 Mr. Joseph Greenwood was chosen Constable of Boston, but is not mentioned again in the City Records save that in the February Visitation or General Walk of the following year for the second or Fleet Ward he was the Constable who accompanied the Justices and his brother Samuel Greenwood, who was Overseer of the Poor. Being sued for debt by Samuel, the latter obtained judgment in January 1738/9 for £662:7:7. On 14 February 1738/9 Joseph Greenwood, gentleman of Boston, for £600 gave to Samuel Greenwood of Boston a deed of a brick house with land, wharf and flats at the North End, on Ship Street. On the same day Samuel Greenwood and wife, Mary, sold to Joseph Greenwood, gentleman of Boston, a parcel of land called the shipyard, with the flats before it, valued at £800. This he advertised for sale 17 July 1739.

On 1 January 1739/40 Samuel recovered judgment against Joseph and this last described lot, being levied upon and appraised at £716:17:0, was received in full of the execution. The 21 January 1741 the lot was reconveyed by Samuel Greenwood, Esq., to his brother, Joseph Greenwood, gentleman of Boston, for £715:7:0, who on the following day sold the same for £1300 to Joshua Cheever, Esq., of Boston, "together with all my wharfland flats near Ship Street in Boston, bounded North on land and flats of Joseph Grant; West on brick tenement, wharf and land of Samuel Greenwood; South on passageway and on the Bason, down to that part of the Wharf commonly called the Island; and Easterly on the Harbor; "as the same is more particularly described in the Division of the Estate of my Honoured Father, Samuel Greenwood, late of Boston, shipwright, deceased, to and among his children and heirs and also in a plan of my said late Father's Estate herewith recorded & reference to them being had will more fully appear with all buildings thereon." No such plan has been found on file and it was probably never recorded.

Nothing further is heard of Joseph Greenwood until 21 July 1746, when his name appears among the creditors' claims filed against the estate of his brother, Samuel, for £69:1:0 upon its final settlement, after which his name is not found again in Boston.

During the year 1755 four military expeditions were simultaneously on foot in the Colonies against the French: one to Fort DuQuesne (afterwards Fort Pitt) under General Braddock; another, which he had planned, to the Fort at Niagara, to be commanded by Governor Shirley of Massachusetts; a third to Nova Scotia under Colonel Monckton; and a fourth against Fort Frederic and the enemy's encroachment at Crown Point, to be commanded by Major General William Johnson of the New York Colony. In all save the first, Massachusetts took an important part. Joseph Greenwood of Boston was among those mustered in on September 25 and sent as an additional force in support of Johnson (later Sir William Johnson) at Crown Point and Ticonderoga. He served under Captain Lawrence White of Barnstable from 15 September to 17 December 1755.

In 1758 Massachusetts and the neighboring provinces again raised forces which joined the regular troops under Lieutenant General Abercrombie in an expedition against Ticonderoga, in all 16,000 men, constituting the largest and best appointed army which had been drawn together in the Colonies. They attacked the French at Crown Point, July 8, but were repulsed with severe loss and retreated back to the head of Lake George. Joseph Greenwood was a private in the company of Captain William Angier,¹ of Cambridge, Colonel Joseph William's Regiment, and, according to the billeting roll, he was also a private in Captain Salmon Whitney's Company, Colonel Jonathan Bagley's Regiment, on the march home from Lake George. Joseph Greenwood served from 1 May to 3 December 1758 and was reported discharged 1 November 1759. He was also a private, "51 years of age," in the company of Captain Giles Harris, of Boston, under Colonel John Thomas, which was stationed at Halifax, Nova Scotia, from 1 July to 25 December 1761.

3. ISAAC² GREENWOOD (*Nathaniel*¹ (1) b. circa 1665; m. 6 September 1694 Anna Lynde; d. 1701.

Isaac Greenwood graduated from Harvard College in 1685. He was a mariner and shipmaster. Edward Bricknell (Brignall) sold Isaac Greenwood, 28 January 1688, one third of the pink, Mary, 80 tons. Robert Bronsdon and his son, Joseph, were witnesses, sworn to 23 August 1692.

It is possible that he went to England about 1693 and there married, his wife and child dying before his return to Boston in 1694, as we find on the records of St. James, Clerkenwell, London, the burial of Elizabeth, daughter of Isaac Greenwood, 27 February 1692/3, from Goswell Street.²

On the 1st of September 1694 Isaac Greenwood, mariner of Boston, sold for £130 New England currency to his brother, Samuel Greenwood, Jr., shipwright of Boston, land bequeathed to him by will of his late father, Nathaniel Greenwood. The witnesses were Elias Maverick and John Marshall.

Isaac Greenwood married Anna Lynde, b. 24 July 1674, daughter of Lieutenant Colonel Joseph and Sarah (Davison) Lynde of Charlestown.

In Sewall's Diary, 1695, he says: "This day, May 8, we have News of the Taking of Seven Vessels by a small French Pickeroon. One is a Briganteen, Mr. Greenwood, Master, out of which had £1000 Money. Neither of the Frigates is yet got out." Captain Greenwood was probably a prisoner for some time.

Isaac Greenwood died abroad in 1701. In July of that year administration was granted on his estate in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, London, to John Grinda, one of his principal creditors, and to Anne, relict of said Greenwood, at Boston in New England. In Boston his widow was appointed administratrix of his estate 6 October 1701, her father and her brother, Nicholas, being bound as her securities. She married again, 11 September 1702, John Phillips, Jr., as his second wife. He was a mariner (b. 23 March 1673, d. 4 November 1756), the son of Colonel John Phillips of Charlestown, the Admiralty Judge and Treasurer of the Province, by his first wife, Catherine Anderson. His sister, Abigail Phillips, was the first wife of Reverend Cotton Mather.¹

Mrs. Mary (Lynde) (Greenwood) Phillips presented her account as administratrix of the estate of her first husband, 28 October 1707, which was approved and recorded. Her second husband, by whom she had six children, died 4 November 1756, she having predeceased him.

Children of Isaac and Anna (Lynde) Greenwood:

Anna Greenwood's first husband was James Green, a mariner, b. 15 December 1664, the eldest son of James and Rebecca (daughter of Thomas and Ellen Jones of Rumney Marsh) Green. He died soon after their marriage. Anna married secondly Nathaniel Henschman (b. 1655), son of Captain Daniel Henschman by his first wife Sarah. He was a merchant and bookbinder of Boston; a freeman of the city, 15 May 1690; one of the tithing men, 1696, 1706, 1715, 1718; constable, 1698; and assessor, 1708. Mrs. Henschman was buried in Copp's Hill Burying Ground. Her husband died in July 1749 at Lynn, aged ninety-four years. Administration on the estate of Nathaniel Henschman, Gentleman, who died intestate, was granted (Salem) 12 September 1749 to his son, Reverend Mr. Nathaniel Henschman, Jr. He is styled in the proceedings "late of Lynn, mercht." He had land in Boston fronting on the way leading to the North Battery near to Merry's Point.

Children of James and Anna (Greenwood) Green:

- I. Rebecca³ Green, b. 19 May 1688 in Boston; m. 24 June 1711, Isaac White; d. 13 September 1782. She was married, by Reverend Doctor Cotton Mather to Isaac White, who was born 25 April 1686, son of Lieutenant John and Elizabeth (daughter of Elder John Bowles) White of Roxbury. Before her marriage, Rebecca Green quitclaimed, 26 October 1710, for £50 all interest in the estate of her grandfather, Nathaniel Greenwood, to the only surviving executor, Samuel Greenwood (2). Isaac White's will was dated 4 September 1758 and probated 19 September 1759.¹ When the British troops took possession of the town of Boston, Mrs. Rebecca (Green) White went to the home of her son, John, in Charlestown and continued in his family until she died, at Billerica 13 September 1782, aged ninety-four.

Children of Nathaniel and Anna (Greenwood) (Green) Henschman: all born in Boston:

- II. Nathaniel³ Henschman, b. 31 March, bapt. 7 April 1695 at Old North Church; d. young.
- III. Mary Henschman, b. 13, bapt. 18 April 1697; died, says Savage, "many years after at the ho. of a sec. s."—i.e. her brother, Rev. Nathaniel Henschman. (She was still living in 1715.) She, or her step-aunt, Mary, step-sister of Nathaniel Henschman, Sr., became the third wife of Hon. Timothy Lindall in 1750. He was a merchant of Salem and Boston, whose first wife, Jane Pool, died in 1710, and whose second wife, Bethia Kitchen, died 20 June 1720. He died in Lynn 6 February 1767, aged eighty. The records say that he married "Madam" Mary Henschman.² In all probability Timothy Lindall's third wife was Mary, daughter of Nathaniel Henschman, Sr., who would have been fifty-three years of age at this time, and her step-aunt seventy-eight years of age. There was no issue by this marriage.

Nathaniel Henschman graduated from Harvard College in 1717. He was a minister of Lynn. The following epitaph was written on his demise:

“Three times aloud the summons hath been blown,
 To call Lynn’s watchmen to the highest throne.
 First Whiting left the church her loss to weep;
 Then Shepard next resigned his peaceful sheep;
 Our other shepherd now gives up the trust,
 And leaves his charge to slumber in the dust.
 A few fleet years, and the last trump will sound,
 To call our Henschman from the silent ground.
 Then we who wake, and they who sleep must come,
 To hear the Judge pronounce the righteous doom.”

He left two sons by his first wife and three daughters by his second wife.

MARY CHARNOCK DEVEREUX, 1710–1794

Widow of Samuel Greenwood

THIRD GENERATION

5. SAMUEL³ GREENWOOD (*Samuel*² (2), *Nathaniel*¹)
b. 15 August 1690, bapt. 22 March 1691 at Old North Church;
m. (1) 8 August 1717 Mary Fitch; m. (2) 1 December 1726
Mary Charnock; d. 22 February 1741/2.

Samuel Greenwood graduated from Harvard College in 1709. He was a merchant and shipwright of Boston. On 8 August 1717 he married Mary Fitch,¹ b. 28 May, 1698, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Hett) Fitch of Boston. The ceremony was performed at the Brattle Street Church by Reverend Benjamin Colman. Samuel Greenwood was captain of the Town Militia in 1721, and in 1722 joined the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. He was made Lieutenant of the Corps in 1724. He was one of the first to be inoculated against smallpox in 1721. In his account of the smallpox, published in 1730, Doctor Zabdiel Boylston observes: "Nov. 18, I inoculated Capt. Samuel Greenwood, about 31, Mr. Isaac Greenwood, 18, Mr. Obadiah Ayer, 32, Capt. (Joseph) Prince, 28, and Mr. Lyman's Negro Woman, 30 years old; all these had the Small-Pox at the usual Time, of a kind, distinct Sort, but few in Number, and they soon did Well."

In the summer of 1722 Samuel Greenwood bought a plot in the Copp's Hill burying ground and built a tomb having the Greenwood coat-of-arms cut on it, which tomb in later years passed by purchase to the heirs of his younger brother Isaac.²

Mary (Fitch) Greenwood died 21 July 1724,³ and Samuel married (2) 1 December 1726 Mary Charnock, the ceremony being performed by Reverend Cotton Mather of the Old North Church. His second wife was born the 9th, baptized the 19th of March 1710, daughter of John and Mary Charnock.⁴ Samuel Greenwood was Overseer of the Poor 1725-'37, and Justice of the Peace in 1736, after which his name appears with the suffix, Esq. On 22 February 1741/2 a petition signed by Samuel Greenwood, Esq., Captain John Goldthwaite, and others was presented to the Selectmen for license to erect a wooden meeting-house at the corner of Bennett and Hanover Streets, and was approved. This was the Tenth Congregational Church, of Reverend Samuel Mather, and was a split-off from the Old North Church to which, after the minister's death in 1785, they returned on the very date of his death.

Samuel Greenwood died 22 February 1741/2, intestate, and on 23 March following administration of his estate was granted to his widow, Mary, and his son, Samuel Greenwood, gentleman. The Boston News Letter of the latter date contains the following notice: "All that have any demands on the Estate of Samuel Greenwood, late of Boston, Esq., deceas'd, are desir'd speedily to bring in their claim to Mrs. Mary Greenwood and Samuel Greenwood, Administrators on said estate, and all Persons that are indebted to said Estate are desired to pay the same to said Administrator. N. B. If any Person has any Books belonging to said Estate, they are desired to return them."

Among the books were doubtless Reverend Samuel Willard's Compleat Body of Divinity, a folio published in Boston 1726; Mather's Life of the Reverend Cotton Mather, published in 1729, and Prince's New England Chronology, published in 1736, to all of which Samuel Greenwood was a subscriber.

He died insolvent. Doctor William Douglas, in his Summary of History, states that in 1741 there was "at one and the same time" upon the stocks in Boston forty topsail vessels, amounting to about seven thousand tons. From about this period shipbuilding rapidly decreased, and Douglas attributes the decline "to Mr. Shirley's faulty government," the latter having succeeded Governor Belcher in office during this same year. This probably accounts for the insolvency of Samuel Greenwood. The estate was declared insolvent 28 February 1743 and commissioners were appointed on behalf of the creditors, the administrators having been authorized, 17 August 1742, to sell so much of the real estate as was necessary to pay the debts of the estate. Samuel Greenwood died possessed of a considerable estate for those times, his personal property being valued at £1,006,¹ and his real estate at £4,600. This was offset, however, by large liabilities and on the final settlement of the estate creditors were allowed only 14s. on the pound. The administrators sold all of the real estate owned by the deceased, including the old Greenwood Mansion House, which was purchased by Moses Tyler in 1745.

His widow, Mary (Charnock) Greenwood, notwithstanding the insolvency of her husband's estate, was by no means badly off in her own right. She inherited part of the estate of her brother, William Charnock, in 1744. On 17 February 1747 she sold to Ephraim Mower, cooper of Boston, for £2300, Bills of Old Tenor, two dwelling houses, warehouse and wharf at the North End, a piece of land about 30 by 182 feet "with flats lying before the same towards the Cove, she being a true, sole, and lawful owner of the same." On 8 January 1754 she, with the other heirs of her brother, William, sold to Eliakim Morse of Medfield 237 acres in Rutland, Worcester Co., Mass., and on 1 July 1756 the heirs sold to John Murray of Rutland 27 acres in the first settled part of Rutland. On 3 February 1757 the widow, Mary (Charnock) Greenwood, sold her remaining interests in Rutland to Captain Joseph Prince, mariner of Boston, whom she married as his third wife, their intentions being recorded 13 January 1757. He died 20 January 1758, aged sixty-three years, and was buried in the Granary Burial Ground. His will, dated 20 January 1758, was proved 27 January 1758. The instrument "impowers Rev. Thomas Prince of Boston to sell my share in real estate of Mr. Jonathan Loring, dec.; monies to be paid to Extr. To wife, Mary Prince, all those lands in Co. Worcester which she conveyed to me 3 February 1757 before our marriage yet remaining unsold. To her, all household stuff and goods she brought me, the 1/3 of my real Estate (except as above) for her life, as in lieu of Dower."

He left bequests to his daughter, Sarah Province,¹ and to his grandchildren, children of his daughter Sarah Province, to his children, Joseph, Isaac, Caleb, James, Mary, Elizabeth and Abigail. To his daughters, Elizabeth and Abigail, he left "all wearing apparel that belonged to my former wife, Mary Prince."

The executors were his daughter, Mary,² and her husband, Joseph Bollard. The children mentioned above were those of his two former wives. His first wife was Mary Ashley who died in October 1721, aged thirty years; his second wife was Mary Townsend who died in March 1755, aged fifty-nine years.

The "Widow Prince" was married 21 January 1762 by Reverend Samuel Mather to Captain Humphrey Devereux of Marblehead as his third wife. Captain Devereux was born 7 December 1702 and died 21 January 1777. By his first marriage he was the father of Doctor Humphrey Devereux, Jr., whose daughter, Abigail, was the wife of Chief Justice Samuel Sewall of Marblehead.³

In 1772 Copley painted a portrait of Mrs. Devereux, which was sent to England and exhibited, gaining the artist so much credit as to induce him to visit that country. The portrait is now in the possession of the daughters of a great-great-grandson of Mrs. Devereux, Frederick Daw Greenwood (45) in Wellington, New Zealand. John Danforth Greenwood (28) heard his father relate that Sir Joshua Reynolds would mount a table, closely examine the picture for some time and, descending, exclaim: "Ah, Copley does not paint like that now!"

Mrs. Mary Devereux died 22 July 1794⁴ in Marblehead, aged eighty-five years, leaving no issue by her two later marriages. Her estate was administered by her son-in-law, Captain Peter Green, 12 November 1794. The estate was declared insolvent 12 April 1795 and order of distribution was made 9 November 1796.

Children of Samuel and Mary (Charnock) Greenwood:

10. IV. John ⁴, b. 7, bapt. 10 December 1727; m. 17 December 1769 Frances Stevens; d. 16 September 1792.
- V. A child, still-born 24 August 1729.
- VI. Mary, b. 1 April, bapt. 2 May 1731; d. 30 September 1812. Reverend Samuel Sewall (son of Chief Justice Samuel by his wife Abigail Devereux, granddaughter of Captain Humphrey Devereux) wrote in 1864 that he had in his possession a handsomely bound volume entitled The New Whole Duty of Man, which was a gift on 1 January 1800 from an aged maiden lady whom he used to call "Aunt Molly Greenwood." On a blank leaf was written "The Gift of Mrs. Mary Ann Symmes to her hon'd Mother Mrs. Mary Devereux." The donor was the second wife of Captain Ebenezer Symmes, whose first wife was Mrs. Mary Devereux's youngest daughter Hannah Greenwood (12). Mary Greenwood died 30 September 1812, aged eighty-two years and by her own request was laid in the Devereux tomb at Marblehead.
11. VII. Elizabeth, b. 21, bapt. 24 December 1732; m. 16 June 1763 Captain Peter Green; d. June 1811.
- VIII. William, b. 29, bapt. 30 July 1738; probably d. young.
12. IX. Hannah, bapt. 5 October 1740; m. 21 March 1763 Captain Ebenezer Symmes; d. 16 April 1768.

6. ELIZABETH ³ GREENWOOD (*Samuel*² (2), *Nathaniel*¹), b. 21, bapt. 24 April 1698; m. (1) 8 November 1721 Samuel White; m. (2) 7 May 1740 Benjamin Edwards; d. 29 April 1753.

Elizabeth Greenwood was born in Boston, Mass., and baptized at the Old North Church. On 8 November 1721 she became the second wife of Samuel White, merchant of Boston.

He was born 7 June 1688, son of Captain Samuel White by his second wife, Hannah Lewis (probably a sister of Josiah Lewis of Eastham), and married (1), 5 November 1712, Anne Drew. He was the brother of Philippa (White) Carter, who married, as her second husband, Samuel Greenwood (102), and of Prudence White, first wife of Captain Thomas Porter, whose second wife was Elizabeth (Bridger), widow of Miles Greenwood (101-V). Samuel White died 12 February 1732, and administration of his estate was granted to his widow 20 February 1732. She married secondly, 7 May 1740, as his third wife, Benjamin Edwards, sea captain and merchant. The ceremony was performed by Reverend Samuel Mather. Benjamin Edwards was born 15 December 1685 and married (1), 10 December 1706, Hannah Harwood; (2), 14 May 1730, Bathsheba Evans, daughter of Captain Jonathan Evans and his wife, Mary (Bronsdon), cousin of Elizabeth (Greenwood) White. Mr. Edwards was the founder of the New Brick Church in 1718. He died 26 August 1751 and administration of his estate was granted on 16 September 1751.¹

Elizabeth (Greenwood) (White) Edwards died 29 April 1753. Administration of her estate was granted 15 June 1753 to her two sons, Samuel White, gentleman of Medford and Francis White, merchant of Boston. She had no issue by her second marriage.

Children of Samuel and Elizabeth (Greenwood) White:

- I. Samuel⁴ White, b. 17, bapt. 19 August 1722 at Old North Church; m. (intentions 21 September 1749) Sarah Leith of Medford; d. 29 December 1758. He was probably the Samuel White who graduated from Harvard in 1740. He resided in Medford, Mass., where his name first appears in 1749. He is recorded in deeds as "gentleman." He died 29 December 1758, administration being granted to his widow 15 December 1760. There is no inventory on record and the estate is represented as insolvent 23 March 1761. John Bishop was appointed guardian of his children, Samuel and Isaac. The latter was the Isaac Greenwood White who obtained permission in March 1780 to go to Nova Scotia and return in four months for the purpose of recovering or taking care of the estate of his uncle, Francis White deceased, late of Halifax.

- II. Elizabeth⁴ White, b. 23 January,¹ bapt. 2 February 1723/4; d. young.
- III. John White, bapt. 25 July 1725. Living in June 1737 when he was placed under the guardianship of his mother.
- IV. Francis White, bapt. at the Old North Church 16 April 1727. A merchant of Boston in 1753. He later removed to Halifax, N. S., where he died 25 October 1769. Being "sick and weak in body," he made his will 23 October 1769 and it was proved four days later. He left several personal bequests including £15. for the purchase of a "Baptizing Bason" for the dissenting church in Halifax. He left the remainder of his property, real and personal, to his "next heirs at law, to be divided among them in such just and equitable manner as the Law directs." His inventory is on file. Francis White was probably a bachelor.
- V. Elizabeth White, b. 27 January, bapt. 2 February 1728/9. She was living in 1737.

7. ISAAC³ GREENWOOD (Samuel² (2), Nathaniel¹), b. 11, bapt. 17 May 1702; m. 31 July 1729 Sarah Clarke; d. 12 October 1745.

Isaac Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized in the Old North Church. He graduated from Harvard College in 1721. The 18 November 1721 he was inoculated for smallpox by Doctor Zabdiel Boylston, and in 1722 he published anonymously in Boston a pamphlet entitled "A Friendly Debate; or a Dialogue between Academicus, and Sawry & Mun-dungus (William Douglas and Francis Archbald), two Eminent Physicians, about some of their Performances." It was on smallpox inoculation and was answered by a pamphlet from William Douglas, M.D., being "a short Answer to Matters of Fact, etc., misrepresented in a late doggerel Dialogue, etc."

After graduating from Harvard, Greenwood studied divinity, and on the 22nd of December 1722 he was admitted a member of the Old North Church. In the spring of 1724 he visited England and soon began to preach in London with some approbation.² There Isaac Greenwood attended the lectures of

² Letters of Thomas Hollis, 30 May, and 7 June 1725.

Doctor John Theophilus Desaguliers,¹ whose courses on Experimental Philosophy and Mathematics delivered in London at that time were popular and were attended by many of the learned and the great of the day. In a copy of Franklin's Works the following remark is to be found in the handwriting of Doctor John Greenwood (21) of New York, "My grandfather Greenwood was a pupil of Doctor Desaguliers of London." Isaac Greenwood showed so much industry in the pursuit of knowledge, as well as ability in preaching, that he attracted the interest of Mr. Thomas Hollis, the friend and patron of Harvard College, to whom young Greenwood had been introduced. The talent and zeal displayed by the young man had "made a favorable impression on that friend of transatlantic Dissenters." Mr. Hollis had provided in his will for the establishment of a Harvard professorship in Experimental Philosophy and Mathematics, but was induced by the ability shown by his young friend to carry out the design during his own lifetime.² On 10 February 1725/6 Hollis writes thus to Reverend Benjamin Colman of Boston: "You have seen by former hints in my & Mr. Greenwood's letters who is the man I have in view in this work. I have discoursed him many times, and have had him examined by Mr. Hunt, Mr. Watts, Mr. Neale, and Mr. Ingraham, and am encouraged to think he may come over to you in July or August next well qualified as an instructor of youth in these sciences." Just previous to this, plans for the conduct of the new professorship, which had been drawn up by Doctor Isaac Watts and others, and including his own rules and orders for the same, had been sent out by Hollis to the Corporation of the College for their consideration. These communications having been received by the Corporation, they returned thanks to Mr. Hollis "for his repeated bounties to the seminary, and in a very particular manner for his most generous and surprising proposal of a Professorship of Mathematics and Experimental Philosophy to be settled and supported among us; and for his fixing his eye on the worthy Mr. Greenwood, a son of the College, for that service.”

The plans were taken under consideration 8 June 1726, and by September following the Corporation and Overseers' Boards having “concluded their alterations and amendments of the rules and statutes, ordered them to be ‘drawn out fair upon parchment and transmitted to Mr. Hollis for his final approbation.’” But a cloud had meanwhile arisen over Greenwood's prospects who, as Quincy expresses it, “though unquestionably a man of genius and learning was also eccentric, improvident, and fond of display,” and early in July 1726 Hollis expresses some doubts concerning him “by desiring the Corporation to examine him as though he were a stranger, and not to be rash in promises to him at first.” “I advise you,” he adds, “to make due trial of him for your own satisfaction. He has not pleased me of late. Only you may know that if you recommend, I accept; but not else.”

Young Greenwood, attracted no doubt by the life and fashion of the Capitol, had indulged in some extravagances of dress and expenditure, and had incurred debts, which distressed his friend, and caused this change of attitude on the part of the patron of Harvard. Mr. Hollis writes again, 27 July: “Greenwood's carriage and behaviour have greatly grieved me, and so much more because I know not where to find one to fill up the place we have proposed for him, nor where you will find one. There is a gentleman bears me company, . . . I have talked to him of it. But, as he is professedly a Baptist, I lay that thought aside; knowing it will not be acceptable in your College; remembering how heinously some of you took it formerly that I should name a Baptist equal to a Presbyterian. Though it be a term of reproach with some, I bear it, and bind it about me as an ornament. . . . When you have seen and discoursed with Mr. Greenwood you will be better able to judge of the case, and how to act, than by my letters.”

Isaac Greenwood returned home by way of Lisbon in Captain Prince's vessel, sailing 5 July 1726. It has been said that soon after his return to Boston he received an appointment in the Old North Church, but no authority is found for such a statement. It may be that he was invited to preach on some occasions during the winter of 1726, as appears by letters sent from Boston at that time by Reverend Benjamin Colman to Mr. Hollis. However, so far as has been learned, he was never ordained. In 1726 he issued a prospectus of "An Experimental Course of Mechanical Philosophy." A copy of this prospectus, bound up with some old pamphlets, is to be found in the Library of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston.

When Mr. Greenwood applied to the Corporation in November relative to his being chosen for the contemplated professorship, that body was unwilling, in consequence of Hollis' late letters, to act decisively in the matter, but hoped that the affair could be so settled and arranged that he would ultimately be fixed in the chair. Alarmed at the prospect of having a Baptist professor forced upon them the Corporation had immediately written to Mr. Hollis not to nominate one of that persuasion, and in his reply to Doctor Colman, 9 January 1726/7, Mr. Hollis says: "I notice you desire me not to send you a Baptist Professor. I am sorry to see such a caveat. The gentleman I had in my eye, in case Mr. Greenwood disappointed us, is of as catholic temper as Mr. Hollis. But that is now over. Only I add, some of you are not worthy of him. What has the dispute of baptism to do to enter into one Professorship or the other. But where persons are prejudiced, no good thing can come out of Nazareth. Pray have kinder thoughts of some of our Baptists. We are not all of dividing principles, though some defame us. We bear it. . . . I take notice what you and others write concerning Mr. Greenwood. . . . And if the Corporation shall be unanimous in electing him and recommending of him to me, I think I shall accept him as my Professor." Upon receipt of this letter the Corporation proceeded, on 12 May 1727, to the election of Isaac Greenwood as Professor of Mathematics, fearful that "a Baptist might be forced upon them." President Wadsworth has the following entry in his diary: "Mr. Isaac Greenwood, to him I sent Nov. 21 1727 ye votes of ye Overseers referring to wt ye Corporation did Oct. 30, about ye Professor of ye Mathematicks, I desired him forthwith to repair to ye College and enter on ye duties of his office.”

Of the plans sent over by Mr. Hollis for the regulation of the new professorship the one adopted contained the following requirements: 1—“That the Professor be a Master of Arts, and well acquainted with the several parts of the Mathematics, and Natural and Experimental Philosophy; 2—That his province be to instruct the students in a system of Natural Philosophy, and a course of Experimental, in which is to be comprehended Pneumatics, Hydrostaticks, Mechanicks, Staticks, Opticks, etc., in the elements of Geometry, together with the doctrine of Trigonometry, with the general principles of Mensuration, Plains and Solids, and the use of the Globes, the motions of the heavenly bodies according to the different hypotheses of Ptolemy, Tycho Brahe, and Copernicus, with the general principles of Dialling, the division of the world into its various kingdoms, with the use of the Maps, etc.”

The Boston News Letter of 22 February 1727/8 has the following notice: “Cambridge, Tuesday, Feb. 13. This Day at 10 A.M. The Honourable and Reverend Overseers of the College met with the Corporation in the College-Hall, to inaugurate Mr. Isaac Greenwood, into the Office of Professor of Mathematicks, and Natural and Experimental Philosophy, lately founded by that great and living Benefactor to this Society, Mr. Thomas Hollis, of London, Merchant. . . . Mr. Greenwood took the Oaths and made the Declarations required in them, and then pronounced a Latin Oration. The Rev. Mr. Appleton pray’d, and singing part of the 104 Psalm concluded the solemnity. After which the Overseers & Corporation repair’d to the Library till the Public Dinner in the Hall was ready, where all the Gentleman Spectators of the Solemnity were handsomely entertained.” Prince, in his notes referring to the ceremony, says it took place “ye very Day ye Dr. C. Mather Died” (13 February 1728). Professor Greenwood and his brother, Samuel, were both subscribers to The Life of Dr. Cotton Mather, which was published early the following year.

In a memorandum of Mr. Hollis, dated 31 July 1727, we find that he had already sent out donations to the College (exclusive of non-vendible gifts) to the amount of £4,900 of New England currency, which invested at 6 per cent was producing annually £294, which he desired to be laid out as follows: £80 apiece per annum to the Divinity and Mathematical Professors; £20 to the Treasurer (Mr. John White) or Accomptant of the College; £100 to ten poor students of Divinity, and £14 to supply deficiencies. In 1732 his nephew, Thomas Hollis, added to the salaries of the two professors, making them £100 per annum. Governor Belcher, writing to Mr. Thomas Hollis 25 October 1732, says: "And I am again to own with great gratitude the new instance of your generosity to Harvard College in the fine machines, etc., from Homans.¹ I was at College this week and had an ingenious lecture upon it from the Hollisian mathematical professor."²

In 1734 Professor Greenwood proposed delivering a course of sixteen lectures on the "Orrery, Armillary Sphere, Globes and other Machines, Instruments, and Schemes, made use of by Astronomers, Accompanied with a great variety of Phys. Experiments and Curious Remarks."

In 1736 the Professor's name appears among the subscribers to Prince's New England Chronology, published at Boston.

Reverend Benjamin Wadsworth, the venerable and worthy president of Harvard College, died 16 March 1737, aged sixty-eight years, having held the position almost twelve years. On the 19th of April the Corporation agreed to ask the Counsel and consent of the Overseers to their proposition "to proceed with all convenient speed to elect a successor" to the presidential chair. This proposition was not concurred in by the Overseers on the following Tuesday, 26 April, who advised that after the two Boards had devoted the forenoon of Wednesday in the succeeding week to prayer, the Corporation should then proceed to elect a president. According to Quincy, on this same day, 26 April, Professor Greenwood was called before the Overseers charged with intemperance and, confessing the same, cast himself on the lenity of the Board and proffered his resolution to reform. It may be that the charge against Professor Greenwood was made at this particular time in order to act as a check upon an anticipated choice in his favor for, according to a manuscript diary of Reverend Joseph Sewall, at the ensuing meeting on the 4 May, the Corporation was equally divided between "Mr. H. and Mr. G." for a successor. The former was the Reverend Edward Holyoke of Marblehead, who was finally elected; the latter, according to Peirce, was Professor Isaac Greenwood, though Quincy suggests that it was the Reverend Joshua Gee of the North Church, Boston. Professor Greenwood had been married by Reverend Joshua Gee, 21 July 1729, to Sarah, daughter of Honorable Doctor John Clarke. She was connected with the Hutchinson family through her mother, Mrs. Sarah Clarke, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Oliver) Shrimpton; and her stepmother (Doctor Clarke's second wife) was the sister of Edward Hutchinson, treasurer of the College. Doctor Clarke's third wife was the widow of President Leverett, and after the death of Doctor Clarke she married in May 1731, as a third husband, Doctor Benjamin Colman of the Brattle Street Church, whose first wife had also been a Clarke. Some influence therefore may have been exerted in these quarters in favor of Professor Isaac Greenwood.

Nathan Prince, an older graduate than Professor Greenwood, had been complimented by Doctor Chauncey as a mathematician, a philosopher, a classical scholar and a logician. Doctor Eliot speaks of him as a "candidate for the professor's chair," though his juniors, Greenwood and Winthrop, were preferred to him successively. By casting a vote, therefore, for "Mr. G." as president, he may have hoped to open a way for his own advancement. Moreover, his brother, Reverend Thomas Prince, was the colleague of Doctor Sewall at the Old South Church. Whether the "Mr. G." referred to by Doctor Sewall in his diary was Doctor Gee or Mr. Greenwood, it would appear that Sewall himself, as well as Prince and Hutchinson were in "Mr. G.'s" favor at the Corporation meeting, 4 May 1737. Reverend William Cooper, colleague of Doctor Colman in the Brattle Street Church, and brother-in-law of Reverend Joseph Sewall, was next proposed but declined "the honor and trust." By the beginning of June, both Boards finally concurred in the unanimous election of Reverend Mr. Holyoke, who was inaugurated 28 September following.

Towards the end of the year (1737) Professor Greenwood was again charged with intemperance and after several postponements of the matter, owing to lack of concurrence in the vote, on the part of the Overseers, he was removed from his professorship 13 July 1738. He was succeeded by Doctor John Winthrop, who had graduated from Harvard in 1732. Whether the conduct of Professor Greenwood warranted these extreme proceedings,¹ or whether other influences conspired against him, does not appear at this late date.

"In scientific attainments," says the Christian Examiner (Vol. VII), "Greenwood seems to have been well qualified for his Professorship. But of his literary qualifications² the only evidence remaining is a discourse on the mutability and changes of the material world read to the students of Harvard in April 1731 upon the news of the death of Thomas Hollis, Esq., of London, the most bountiful benefactor to the society. His views are somewhat in advance of the age in which he lived and, though in some respects imaginative, are both elevated and philosophical and consonant with those pursued some years after (1736) by Bishop Butler with so much skill and renown in his Analogy of Religion to the Constitution and Course of Nature. This discourse cannot be read without exciting emotions of sorrow and regret for the early ruin of a mind which has left indications of possessing loftiness and capacity."

On 31 July 1729 Professor Greenwood was married by Reverend Joshua Gee at the Old North Church to Sarah Clarke. She was born 11, baptized 16 May 1708, daughter of the Honorable Doctor John Clarke of Boston by his first wife, Sarah Shrimpton (daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Oliver) Shrimpton). Sarah Clarke received £400 by her father's will on the occasion of her marriage, and on the distribution of his estate in 1730 she received £1,864:17:4 and two lots at the South End of Boston, as her one fifth share thereof. Her aunt was Mrs. Elizabeth (Clarke) Hubbard, who became the second wife of Reverend Cotton Mather; her grandfather, Honorable (Doctor) John Clarke, was said to be a nephew of Sir Richard Saltonstall, and the only son of Doctor John Clarke from Colchester, co. Essex, England, the first regular practitioner of Boston; her mother's father was Captain Peter Oliver, of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston.¹ Through this marriage the Greenwoods were connected with the families of Mather, Hutchinson, Williams, and others prominent in Colonial New England.

After his removal from Harvard College, Professor Greenwood resided in Boston, whither he removed from Cambridge about September 1738. His petition to open a school in town "for the instructing of Youth & others in the Mathematicks and other parts of Learning," was granted by the Selectmen 20 September 1738. The following advertisement occurs in the Boston Weekly News Letter for 2 to 4, and 16 to 24 November 1738:

"Such as are desirous of learning any Part of Practical or Theoretical Mathematicks may be taught by Isaac Greenwood, A.M. etc., in Clark's Square,² near the North Meeting House, where Attendance will be given between the hours of 9 & 12 in the Forenoon, & 2 and 5 in the Afternoon.

"N. B. Instructions may also be had in any Branch of Natural Philosophy, when there is a Number sufficient to attend."

From the Boston Weekly News Letter for 22 to 30 March, and 5 to 12 April 1739:

“Such as are desirous of learning any Parts of the Mathematicks whether Theoretical, as the demonstrating Euclid, Appolonius, etc., or Practical, as Arithmetic, Geometry, Trigonometry, Navigation, Surveying, Gauging, Algebra, Fluxions, etc., Likewise any of the Branches of Natural Philosophy as Mechanics, Optics, Astronomy, etc., may be taught by Isaac Greenwood, A.M. etc. at the Duke of Marlborough’s Arms in King Street over against the Golden Fleece, Boston, where Attendance is given from 9 to 12 A.M. & 3 to 6 P.M.

“N. B. If any Gentleman, or particular Company of such, are desirous of private instructions relating to the Premises at their respective Places, Attendance will be given out of the aforesaid Hours of teaching.”

The above was inserted in the next issue, 12 to 19 April 1739, with the alteration “at Mr. Brown’s, a little below the Golden Fleece, on the opposite Side, in King Street, Boston, next to Deacon Waite’s.”

“A Discourse, showing the Analogy and Harmony between the Body natural & the Body politick, or what agreement there is between Blood & Money, Shewing that as the Life & Health of the natural Body depends upon a due Proportion of Blood both as to Quantity & Quality, so also the very Being, Peace & Tranquility of the Body-politick or Commonwealth, depends upon a due Proportion of Money, both as to quantity and Quality. As also a Comparison between the principal Parts of the natural Body, and principal Parts or Members of the political Body or Commonwealth. Sold by J. Edwards & S. Eliot in Cornhil.”

“Such as are willing to encourage a Course of Philosophical Lectures with a great Variety of Experiments, by Isaac Greenwood, A.M. etc., are desired to leave their Names at Capt. Henschman's, Mr. Edwards's, Mr. Butler's, Mr. Dennis's, Shops, Booksellers or at Mr. Brown's Shoemaker next door to Deacon Wait's, where the Course will be performed. And at those Places Minuits of the Articles & Experiments with the Conditions of the Course, may be had gratis."

A letter to Professor Isaac Greenwood from Benjamin Franklin, written in 1740, was in preservation until about 1817, when it was destroyed, as is supposed, among the papers of his great-nephew, John Greenwood of London.

Isaac Greenwood was undoubtedly gifted and possessed attainments of a high order; unfortunately the indulgence of a weakness seems to have marred what might otherwise have been a fine and even brilliant career.

Mr. Greenwood ceased to be a member of the Old North Church in 1742.¹ The following year, 10 November 1743, while the frigate Rose was at Boston, he shipped as an able-bodied seaman and was rated as such until his discharge at Charleston, S. C., 22 May 1745. According to family tradition, though rated as a common seaman, he acted in the capacity of a chaplain. In support of this tradition it may be stated that no seaman would have carried on board the effects and wardrobe mentioned in Isaac Greenwood's inventory. The Rose from its size was not entitled to a chaplain, but if the Captain wished such a personage on board he had power to ship him as a common sailor and appoint him to a chaplain's position pro tempore. In July 1686 Mr. Buckley, chaplain of the frigate Rose, was offered 20 shillings a week if disposed to assist Mr. Robert Ratcliffe, the first Episcopal clergyman in Boston, in conducting the services then held in the Library chamber of the Town House. The Rose, Captain George, had arrived 15 May 1686, bringing out Ratcliffe and a new charter and commission giving to Major Joseph Dudley the title of President of the Massachusetts Colony, and to other gentlemen that of Councillors. The Rose arrived off Charleston Bar on the night of December 16, 1744, from a cruise, with a 400-ton prize, The Conception. A long account of the action and the richness of the prize occurs in the South Carolina Gazette of Charleston of the 24th.

On 31 December 1744 and 14 January 1745 the following notice appears in the above-named paper:

“Such as are desirous of being instructed in Arithmetic, vulgar or decimal, Merchants Accompts, Geometry, Trigonometry, Surveying, Navigation, Gauging, Dialling, Geography, Astronomy, Algebra, Conic Sections, Fluxions, or any other part of MATHEMATICS, or NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, may have an opportunity thereof by ISAAC GREENWOOD, A.M., etc., who will attend for that purpose, at his Chamber in the House where the Surveyor General keeps his office, in Simon’s Alley from the Hours of 9 to 12 in the Forenoon, and 3 to 8 in the Evening.”

On 6 May 1745 it was advertised that on Friday the 10th, on board H.M.S. Rose, “now riding in the harbour before Charles Town,” will be paid to the captors the last share of prize money due them from the French ship called The Conception, lately taken by the said ship Rose, Captain Thomas Frankland, Esq., Commander. On 22 May, Isaac Greenwood received his discharge and when he received his wages a charge of 6 shillings was entered against him for tobacco. On 1 June, the Rose, convoying a large fleet, sailed for England.

Mr. Greenwood continued to remain in South Carolina, though at a very inauspicious season. We have the following news from the American Magazine (Boston) of November 1745: “Thursday 14 (November). Extract of a Letter from Charlestown in S. Carolina, October 17.—‘The Sickness here has carried off vast Numbers of People, especially Strangers or People who have not been above a year or two in the Province; some by the Black Vomit, others by the Yellow Fever, some by the Nervous and another more malignant than either.’ . . . “Tuesday, 19 (November). On the 12th of October past, died at South Carolina, after three Days Illness, Mr. Isaac Greenwood, the late ingenious and learned Hollisian Professor of the Mathematicks and Philosophy at Cambridge.”

Professor Greenwood died intestate; a paper to the following effect is the only instrument found on record at Charleston: “On April 2, 1746, were sworn before Thomas Dale, Esq. (a Justice of the Peace in Berkley County, S. C.), Samuel Stevens, Thomas Newton, and Jonathan Badger, as three appraisers for the Goods and Chattels (ready money only excepted) of Isaac Greenwood, deceased, as shall be produced to them by the Administrator upon his Estate, namely, Gideon Norton.” From the inventory,¹ it is quite evident that the Professor was unaccompanied by his family, though judging by the mathematical and philosophical instruments, etc., with him, it may have been his intention either to lecture or to settle in the Province. Administration on the goods of Isaac Greenwood, late of His Majesty’s ship Rose, widower (sic), deceased, was granted in London, 26 May 1746, to James Crocket, lawful attorney of Gideon Norton of Charleston, S. C.

On 14 June 1727 Isaac Greenwood sold to Samuel Harris land in North Street (now Hanover) at the North End, by which deed it appears that the “9 foot Alley” (now Hanover Avenue) frequently mentioned in connection with the Greenwood estate was laid out by the children of Samuel Greenwood. This deed was witnessed by Samuel White and Samuel Ioens.² On 30 August 1738 Isaac Greenwood sold to his brother, Samuel Greenwood, land on Ship Street bounded in part by the “9 foot Alley.” This land was to the south of the Mansion Lot and the “9 foot Alley” and had three brick tenements erected on it. On 4 October 1738, Isaac Greenwood confirmed the sale of land on North Street to Samuel Harris.

A portrait of Isaac Greenwood, probably painted by Peter Pelham or by John Smybert (whose wife, Mary, granddaughter of Nathaniel Williams by his wife, the widow Mary (Oliver) Shrimpton, was a cousin of the Professor’s wife) came finally to the galleries of the Columbian Museum in Boston. This building was destroyed by fire 16 January 1807, though many of the paintings were saved, and soon after Mr. Ethan A. Greenwood, while collecting funds for rebuilding the Museum, visited New York bringing with him the portrait in question which he sold to Doctor John Greenwood, a grandson of the Professor.

Mrs. Sarah Greenwood, of Boston, the widow of Professor Isaac Greenwood, executed a deed, 4 April 1747, for £125 O. T. to Hugh Hall, Esq., of Boston, for two plots of land partly marsh near the old fortifications which were at the Neck, viz.: One lot with salt water on the west, bounded east on Orange Street, 96 feet front, south by land or marsh of Elisha Cook, Esq., and north by John Gibbon's land. The other piece, opposite to the former, was bounded west by Orange Street, south by land and marsh of Elisha Cook, Esq., east by the sea, and north by John Gibbon's land, the southerly and northerly lines running down to low-water mark in each lot. The deed was witnessed by Thomas Greenough and Pitts Hall, and acknowledged 10 April 1747 by her, coram John Fayerweather, Esq., J. of P. These lots were Mrs. Greenwood's portion of the landed estate of her late father, Doctor John Clarke, as distributed in 1730. They extended across the peninsula and are now in the heart of the city. On 16 June 1768, Mrs. Greenwood appointed her son, Isaac Greenwood (13) of Boston, her special attorney to execute a deed or deeds of two lots in Spencer, Worcester County, one containing $53\frac{1}{2}$ acres and the other 44 acres, being the lots assigned to her at the division of Doctor John Clarke's lands among the other heirs, 20 October 1744. The instrument was witnessed by her daughter Sarah Greenwood and Belcher Noyes, son of Doctor Oliver and Ann (Belcher) Noyes. About 1770-73, Mrs. Sarah Greenwood sold to John Southgate for £26:13:4, one-fifth part of her two upland lots and one lot of meadow in Spencer, viz.: "Nos. 62 and 78, originally laid out and drawn on the right of John Clarke, Esq., and is that part of said upland lots drawn for my share in the division of said lots, being No. 5 containing about 100 acres, and my share in the meadow being in common with the other shares, and also all my right in the cedar-swamp.”

At the time of her decease Mrs. Greenwood was in Falmouth (Portland), Maine, visiting her son, John. Her tombstone in the southwest end of the old East Cemetery of this town is of dark slate with the usual figure of a winged death's head roughly carved at the top; it bears the following inscription:

“In memory of

Her tombstone in the East Cemetery, Portland, Maine, bears this inscription: “Here lies Buried / the Body of / Mrs. Sarah Greenwood / of Boston / who died July 28 / 1773 / aged forty-two years.” The Essex Gazette (Salem) 7 August 1773 says: “At Falmouth, Casco Bay, Mrs. Sarah Greenwood, aged thirty-six (sic) years, Daughter of the late Mr. Isaac Greenwood, Professor of Mathematics in Boston.”

Family tradition relates that he received a liberal education and was a teacher of mathematics at Newport, R. I. He is doubtless the Thales Greenwood who married, 1 January 1761, Mary Livermore, the ceremony being performed by Reverend Samuel Haden at the South Church in Portsmouth, N. H. She was born 24 November 1737, daughter of Judge Matthew Livermore by his wife Mary, daughter of Reverend Nathaniel and Sarah (Purkiss) Rogers, of Portsmouth. After her father's death she occupied his house in Portsmouth for some years.¹ Thales Greenwood was an Episcopalian. His grandniece, Mary (40), the widow of Reverend Samuel Barrett of Roxbury, Mass., in 1864 wore a mourning ring with the almost illegible inscription "T. Greenwood, August 1766, ae. 29." His death is confirmed by a letter, dated 22 September 1766, from Mrs. Devereux of Marblehead to her son, John Greenwood (10) of London. Thales' widow administered his estate in October 1766. There is no record of any children.

8. SAMUEL⁴ GREENWOOD (Samuel³ (5), Samuel², Nathaniel¹) b. 18, bapt. 22 May 1720; m. 10 November 1746 Martha Brown; d. circa 1775.

Samuel Greenwood was baptized at the Old North Church, Boston. He graduated from Harvard College in 1739. When Governor Belcher resigned the chief chair of state in August 1741, and retired to Milton, it appears that Samuel Greenwood was residing in Belcher's family as private secretary. The ex-Governor sent a letter by him in December 1741 to Major Samuel Sewall inviting him and Colonel Jacob Wendell to dine with him the next day. Not hearing from the gentlemen, he wrote by another person to be informed "when they would be up," and on 21 December 1741 he again wrote to Major Sewall¹ by Samuel Greenwood saying, "I send this messenger on purpose to bring Colonel Wendell and you over tomorrow." The gentlemen referred to were assisting Belcher in arranging his private affairs which were then in great confusion. His means having become much reduced while in office, it is probable that the ex-Governor soon after found that a secretary was not a necessary member of his household, for he writes to Colonel Wendell² from Milton, 30 August 1742 (about a year before he returned to London by way of the mastships) as follows: "I have once & again asked your kind regards to the young gentleman that brings you this, who is sober, diligent and good tempered, and (as you see by these letters) writes a good hand and is capable of assisting any gentleman who wants help in his counting House. You are so full of benevolence, not only to your own relations, but to mankind in general, that I know you will serve him if you can; and as he is quite out of all business, it will be an act of great goodness & generosity in you if anything fall in your power for his imployment. . . . P. S. Altho' I have already spoke to you in favour of the young gentleman (Mr. S. Greenwood) who brings you this, you will give me leave to renew my request in his behalf. He is sober, diligent, good tempered and writes a good hand, and is capable of assisting any gentleman in his counting house, and as he is out of all imployment, it will be an act of great goodness in you to serve him by recommendation, or other ways if it may fall in your way & you'll oblige your ready friend & Serv't.—Jona. Belcher.”¹

Of Samuel Greenwood's subsequent career little is known. When Belcher was Governor of New Jersey his secretary was Jeremiah C. Russell, later a prothonotary of Sussex County in that province. In March 1741/2 Samuel Greenwood, with his stepmother, Mrs. Mary (Charnock) Greenwood, was appointed an administrator on the estate of his late father, Mr. Samuel Greenwood of Boston. In 1743 he was a subscriber to Reverend Charles Chauncey's Seasonable Thoughts on the State of Religion in New England. He married 10 November 1746 Martha Brown, the ceremony being performed by Reverend Roger Price in King's Chapel. She was the daughter of Robert Brown, distiller of Boston, who was born 20 August 1695, the son of William and Mary (Jacklin) Brown; and whose wife Martha was a granddaughter of Abraham Blish, Jr., of Boston, and his wife Martha. Abraham Blish, Jr., was one of the founders of the Brattle Street Church.

Samuel Greenwood's name appears on the settlement of his father's estate, filed 1 December 1747, as a claimant for the £20 left him in 1721 by the will of his grandfather, Samuel Greenwood, to be given to him when of age. Nothing further has been learned as to this Samuel Greenwood. He is starred as dead in the Harvard College Catalogue, 1776.

JOHN GREENWOOD OF BOSTON AND LONDON, 1727-1792

Painter and Mezzotinter

From a portrait in mezzotint by W. Pether
"The friendly Mr. John Greenwood"

In a receipt book of Thomas Hancock is found the following: "Boston, January 9, 1748, Recev'd of Thomas Hancock, Esq. Sixty Eight pounds Sixteen Shillings Old Tenor in full for Mr. Stephen Apthorp. (Signed) Benj'n. Greenwood."

Marriage intentions were recorded in Boston 9 April 1756 to Mary Melendy, b. 17, bapt. 29 April 1733, daughter of Thomas and Lydia Melendy. Thomas Melendy, born 13 November 1707, had a second wife, Mary Wakum, whom he married 19 June 1741. He was admitted to the New North Church 17 March 1728/9, and was a son of William Melendy of Charlestown, whose wife Sarah died 12 February 1743/4, aged seventy years, and was interred in Copp's Hill Burying Ground.

Benjamin Greenwood was a corporal in Captain Richard Atkins' company, Colonel Joseph Williams' regiment, serving from 3 April to 24 September 1758 in the campaign under Major General Abercrombie against the French at Forts Carillon and Frederic (Ticonderoga and Crown Point). The regiment, in which his uncle, Joseph Greenwood, also served, participated in the unsuccessful attack of July 7th on the French works. Benjamin was reported "discharged Sept. 16." His stepmother, Mrs. Mary Devereux of Marblehead, in a letter of 27 October 1760 to her son, John Greenwood (10) in Amsterdam, mentions the deaths of his brother, Benjamin, and his cousin, Samuel White of Medford.

Child of Benjamin and Mary (Melendy) Greenwood:

16. I. Miles⁵, b. August 1758; m. 21 March 1782 Charity Bemis; d. 20 February 1823.

10. JOHN⁴ GREENWOOD (Samuel³(5), Samuel², Nathaniel¹) b. 7, bapt. 10 December 1727; m. 17 December 1769 Frances Stevens¹; d. 16 September 1792.

John Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at the Old North Church. In 1742, just after his father's death, when scarcely fifteen years of age, he was apprenticed to Mr. Thomas Johnston of Boston, an artist in water colors, heraldic painting, engraving and japanning. He engraved some book plates and painted an escutcheon and arms for the funeral of Honorable William Clark. His son writes: "After two or three years spent in the duties of his business, his genius showed itself. . . . His company was sought and his time occupied in painting the portraits of his friends. I think I have heard him say that he did not remain long with Mr. Johnston after this period. His fame was not confined to his own town, but extended all over America; and Mr. Benjamin West, several years afterwards, upon his acquaintance with him in London, said he had heard so much of him that he felt a greater desire to see and know him than any other person."

Among the works of Mr. Greenwood still preserved in Boston and vicinity are portraits of John Cutler, Honorable Benjamin Gerrish of Salem and his wife Margaret (Cabot) Gerrish, Reverend Samuel Phillips of Andover, and Doctor Ezekiel Hersey of Hingham. The portrait of John Cutler (formerly owned by William Appleton, Esq.) represents him as a young man seated at a musical instrument, and bears the name of the artist but no date. The Gerrish portraits were painted in 1747 when Gerrish was thirty-seven years old.¹ The Phillips portrait is signed "J. Greenwood, pinx't" and was held by the late Jonathan Phillips; it has been engraved for Bond's Watertown Genealogies. The portrait of Doctor Hersey is ascribed to Greenwood, and in 1877 was hung in Memorial Hall at Harvard. It represents the Doctor sitting "in dressing-gown and slippers, looking like a mild astrologer."² The New England Historic Genealogical Society has a portrait of Ephraim Turner by John Greenwood, and another of Turner and one of his son, Thomas, supposed to be by the same artist. Another portrait painted by "J. Greenwood, Boston, 1749" represents Mrs. Elizabeth (Fulford) Welshman, the widow of Captain William Welshman, mariner, who died at sea in 1772.

In 1750 John Greenwood purchased from Benjamin Rolfe of Haverhill some 150 acres of land at Lunenburg, Worcester Co.,

Mass. In the deed he is styled "of Boston, painter." He sold this land for £20 to John Moffett, of Boston, 25 October 1752, and three weeks later left Boston, sailing for the Dutch Colony of Surinam in the snow, Rebecca, arriving there on the 16th of December. In a journal of the voyage he says: "New style November 16, 1752, set sail from the end of Clark Wharf about 8 o'clock, from whence we had three cheers from a number of Spectators which made the Heavens ring again; but poor I could scarce join with them being almost drowned in tears from parting with my friends. But being animated by the first shout I made a shift to hollow stoutly; the others and I soon found that my tears were like the Wing'd Cloud, etc. Everything appears very pleasant—the wind fair and enough of it at S.W., which looked likely to last. At 10 o'clock we came abreast to the lighthouse, took leave of the Pilot, and made sail. Set our Spritsail, Trisail, Mainsail and Staysails and were crowding her along as fast as possible; but Alas! how fickle is the wind,—Off comes a squall from the Shore which makes all smack again: 'Rye! Masser: I see no such before.' It just gave us time enough to receive it—get the ship before the wind,—the Sails all down on the Cap. The height of the Whirlwind ran ahead of us about twenty yards, which, had it taken us, would have split our sails to pieces."

He had long determined to spend some time in Europe, where he could consult the works of the great masters whose celebrity urged him onward in a pursuit wherein he hoped to attain success. It is not quite clear why he chose first to visit the northerly shores of South America, but certainly his juvenile productions would be better received there than among the cultured people of Europe accustomed to the works of the best artists. While in Surinam he executed 115 portraits for which he received prices amounting to over 8,000 guilders of Holland. His son writes that he left Surinam "with a high reputation as an artist, much esteemed and valued for his personal character and social qualities, taking with him 3,000 guineas, a larger sum then than it would be thought now." He has been described at this time as "of a tall, well-proportioned, manly figure, and handsome countenance, and as quickly gaining friends by his abilities, agreeable manners and amiable temper.”

With an ardent desire to perfect himself in the art of mezzotinting, John Greenwood quitted the Dutch Colony 17 April, arriving at Amsterdam 19 May 1758. Here he studied with Michael Elgersma. He finished some two dozen portraits in crayon and oil, and did several subjects in mezzotint, some of which were heightened by etching. In 1760 he produced his own portrait, a tinted drawing, which is now in the New York Public Library.¹ He made many pleasant acquaintances among the artists of Holland and was spoken of, not only for his social qualities, but also for his skill and rapidity of execution with the pencil, and was instrumental in the reëstablishment of the Holland Academy of Art. Among the friends he gained were John Blackwood, an English merchant who dealt largely in paintings, and Captain William Baillie, an engraver and noted connoisseur. In September 1762 he was engaged in purchasing paintings for Sir Lawrence Dundas, Bart.

John Greenwood left Amsterdam 25 July 1763 in company with Mr. Peter Fouquet, Jr., and passing through Antwerp and Brussels reached Paris in ten days, from which city they started for Calais on 11 September. From Mr. Greenwood's memorandum books it is quite evident that the trip was one combining pleasure with business; they visited the public and private galleries enroute, were hospitably entertained by many of the leading artists, and picked up a number of excellent paintings with which to tempt the British market, where a revival in the collection of works of art had lately shown itself. They arrived in London 15 September, and we gather an idea of his activities there from the following extracts from his journal. On 6 October he writes: "At Home ye morning drawing, began ye head of Rembrandt's and went at 3 o'clock with Mr. Miller to Richmond, about 10 miles from London," etc. Tuesday, 18 October: "Staid at home all ye morning, Dined with all ye Artists at ye Turk's Head, it being ye celebration of ye Festival of St. Luke, sup'd at Do.—and returned at 12." On the 26th, after considerable trouble, he got some of his paintings from France out of the Customhouse. Saturday, 5 November: "Went to Mr. Blackwood's and rode with Reynolds to ye Foundling Hospital, Saw ye pictures and dined there with 80 Artists and others, being ye festival day of ye Artists,—retired at 10 o'clock." On the 8th, he got some more of his boxes out of the Customs. They included four paintings of Lucas van Uden, for which the sum of £153:8:8 was paid. On the 19th November, he attended the sale of Lord (Earl) Waldegrove's effects, that nobleman having died a few months before. 24 November: "At home all ye morning, dined at MacArdell's¹ and paid him for (Jan.) Punt's plate, etc. (150) prints £23:5:0." Friday, 25th: "Went into ye City, Dined at New England Coffy-house with ye Americans, Saltfish," which ceremony he seems to have religiously performed each succeeding week. By the 19th, he had finished the mezzotint plate on which he was engaged, and notes: "Recv. (for) 2 doz. Rembrandt's Father at 1/6—£1:16:0." The next day, he notes: "Rec'd. £10:10:0 (from) Boydell for my Plate." Friday, the 23rd, he again regaled himself on "Saltfish with ye N. England men at ye Turk's Head."

At the close of the year John Greenwood returned to Paris, executing various commissions, among which was the purchase of a "peruke" for Mons. Smibert, "le meme que dernièrement fait, dans la rue de Tournon près du Palais du Luxembourg." In January 1764 he painted the portrait of a Miss Lormell. He reached London again early in February 1764, in company with the Chevalier Stapleton, bringing another lot of paintings which he had purchased for himself and Mr. Fouquet. He sold the following pictures to Sir Lawrence Dundas, at the prices quoted: A small Vanloo, £16; a large van de Velde, £200; 2 Wouvermans, £110; and a Teniers, £90. On April 1st he announced that all his pictures were sold. In May and September he was again in Amsterdam, returning with a cabinet of birds and more pictures, which he sold early in February 1765.

At this time there had been existing for some thirty years in the metropolis a Society of Artists of Great Britain and Ireland who had an Academy in St. Martin's Lane. This was the immediate successor of Sir James Thornhill's private academy which he had opened in his own house about 1724, on the failure of his attempt to get a Royal Academy established. The members had given an exhibition of their works in the spring of 1760 in the Strand, opposite Beaufort's Buildings, at the rooms of the "Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce in Great Britain." In the following year the exhibition took place in the "Great Room" of Mr. Cock, an auctioneer, in Spring Garden, Charing Cross, and here it continued to be held for some years. It was suggested by Hogarth in 1761 that the society be called the "Free Professors of Painting, Sculpture and Architecture." A Royal Charter was granted to the society 26 January 1765, and it was known thereafter as "The Incorporated Society of Artists of Great Britain." During the succeeding years John Greenwood, who had reached London in the fall of 1763, displayed a number of his paintings at the exhibitions given, and in March 1765 he was elected a Fellow of the Society. Subsequently a somewhat indiscriminate admission to membership in the Incorporated Society gave rise to an adverse party and led to the founding of the Royal Academy in 1768. The Academy had a membership limited to forty artists, which was later extended, Sir Joshua Reynolds being chosen the first president. Mr. Greenwood continued with the parent Society.

In 1767 John Greenwood exhibited "A Head in Crayon." At the ninth exhibition of 1768, he placed on view his mezzotint after the original of Frans van Mieris in the Hague Gallery, being a portrait of that artist and his wife in which he is pinching the ears of his little dog. A larger dog is at the woman's knees, near a table. Quincy, in his History of Harvard College, speaks of "two curious Egyptian mummies for the Museum" received from Mr. Greenwood of London. The latter, under date of 1 August 1769, in some memoranda of his life, notes a "letter of thanks" from the College, followed in the succeeding month by one from Mr. John Winthrop, the Hollisian Professor of Mathematics.

John Greenwood was married, 17 December 1769, by Reverend Mr. Vincent, at St. George's Church, Hanover Square, to Frances Stevens of that parish, whom he first saw the 4th of June previous. She was born 18 January 1744, the eldest daughter of William and Frances (Scrivens) Stevens of Northampton, England. In the marriage license Mr. Greenwood is called "of St. James, Westminster."

About the year 1770 the well-known patron of art, Alderman Boydell, held an "exhibition of drawings from many of the most capital pictures in England" at Mr. Ford's Great Room in the Haymarket. These were published in the form of engravings, the three volumes containing fifty prints in mezzotint, including Nos. 267 and 268 by Mr. Greenwood, being The Happy Family, after van Herp and Old Age, after van Eckhout, to cost six shillings each. Mr. Greenwood had been and was still issuing most excellent mezzotints, including portraits and general subjects, some after his own design and others after Rembrandt, Teniers, Metzger, Verkolje, Buys, Hone, etc. Special attention may be called to his plate of Mozé Henriques which was executed in Holland in 1761 after a portrait by himself; this is heightened by etching. Ten years later, we have the superior mezzotint of Miss Amelia Hone holding a teacup, from a portrait by her father, Mr. Nathaniel Hone. Among other of his works might be mentioned the heads of Whitfield and Wesley in 1769 and 1770.

From this time on he devoted more of his time to his business as art dealer, for which his knowledge of languages and acquaintance on the continent rendered him peculiarly well fitted. Accordingly, we find him quitting London, 14 July 1771, for a journey in Holland and France on behalf of his patron John Stuart, Earl of Bute. His notebook filled with numerous sketches taken during the tour, with some memoranda added by his wife who accompanied him, is still preserved. In the summer of 1772 he was again in France and visited Rouen, Paris, etc. His change of occupation did not lessen his interest in the Society of which he was a member, and at their fourteenth exhibition held in 1773 at their New Room, near Exeter Exchange, he placed on view a piece entitled A Gipsy Fortune-Teller, done in Crayons. He was now located on Margaret Street, Cavendish Square, having moved there early in 1771, and his name has the suffix "F. S. A." The next year, 1774, he exhibited two paintings—Palaemon and Lavinia from Thomson's Seasons, and a Full Length Portrait of a Young Lady; in 1775, Portrait of a Lady in Crayons; in 1776, two pictures of a Boy's Head.

Copley, who had left New England in June 1774, enjoyed the hospitality of Benjamin West during a short stay in London, and while there received a visit from Sir Joshua Reynolds before setting out for Italy. From Rome, 7 May 1775, he addressed a letter to John Greenwood which appears in Copley's Life, by Apthorp. In December following, he was back in London and, a quarterly general meeting of the Society of Artists having been held on the 5th at the Old Slaughter Coffee House, it was resolved "that Mr. Greenwood do wait on Mr. Copley—requesting the continuance of his attachment to this Society." Copley, however, pursued what appeared to him the better course and sent a "Conversation," as a group of portraits was then called, to the Academy Exhibition of 1776. He was elected an Associate in November of that year and an Academician in 1779. Mr. Greenwood was at this time a Director of the Society of Artists and so continued almost up to the time of his death; he also held other important positions. The prosperity of the Society of Artists was now on the wane. After 1791 the Society gave way before its more powerful and aristocratic rival, the Royal Academy, with whom its papers and records were deposited in October 1836 by the last surviving member, Mr. Robert Pollard. It was at the twenty-second exhibition in 1790 that Mr. Greenwood displayed his last painting, A Landscape and Figures; it represents the “Seven Sisters,” a circular clump of ancient elms at Tottenham, embracing a view of the artist’s summer cottage with himself, on horseback, and his wife and children. It is a large painting measuring 4’ by 2’ 8”, and it is still in the possession of the family of his grandson, the late John Danforth Greenwood of Motueka, New Zealand.

In October 1774 John Greenwood visited Germany in company with Mr. Bissel, where he purchased the collection of the famous general Count Johann Matthias Von Schulembourg of Zell, and also that of Baron Steinberg. The next summer he was again in Holland and Germany.

In 1776 Mr. Greenwood was occupying the rooms which had belonged to Ford in the Haymarket; a few years later he removed to Little Queen Street, and in 1783 to Leicester Square where he built a commodious Room adjoining his dwelling house, which communicated with Whitecombe Street. Here in January 1786 he began a forty nights’ sale of the large collection of engraved portraits belonging to Joseph Gulston, M.P., and in April 1790 he sold off at the Golden Head in Leicester Square (the residence of the artist, Hogarth), for the benefit of Mrs. Hogarth, a number of pictures and prints executed by her late husband. Among these was the Sigismonda painted in 1758, which was bought in by Boydell for 56 guineas; fifty years later it brought 400 guineas. Shortly after the death of Sir Joshua Reynolds, who had been a near neighbor, residing at 47 Leicester Square, Mr. Greenwood disposed of a great quantity of the duplicate prints of the Italian and Flemish schools, from which Sir Joshua had been accustomed to derive assistance.

Mr. John Greenwood’s death occurred at Margate, Kent, and is thus referred to in the Gentleman’s Magazine: “September 16, 1792—At Margate, Mr. Greenwood, auctioneer of Leicester-square. He will be sincerely lamented by a numerous circle of friends, to whom he was justly dear by the inflexible integrity of his conduct and the kind and interesting simplicity of his manners.” He was buried at Margate 20 September 1792, and administration was granted 8 October 1793 to the widow in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, London. His portrait, a half length in mezzotint, by W. Pether, was later published. It is inscribed, "the Friendly Mr. John Greenwood," and bears the insignia of his occupations—an artist's pallet and brushes, and an auctioneer's mallet. Another portrait, three quarter length, by Lemuel Abbot, a miniature by Henry Eldridge and miniatures of himself and wife by Grimaldi are in the possession of the family of his grandson, John Danforth Greenwood.

John Greenwood had perhaps imbibed some taste for heraldic matters from his early teaching in Boston, and on the title page of a book containing some notes of family history he had drawn the arms of the Greenwoods of Norwich, England. His son John, however, substituted the arms and crest of the Greenwoods of Greenwood-Lee, co. York, impaling them with Charnock and Stevens quarterly, viz.: 1 and 4 argent, on a bend sable 3 cross-crosslets of the field, for Charnock; and 2 and 3 party per chevron, azure and argent, in chief two falcons with wings expanded or, for Stevens; being the family bearings of his grandmother and mother.

After her husband's decease, the widow resided for a time on Villiers Street, in the parish of St. Martin in the Fields, co. Middlesex, and afterwards at Barnet, in the same county. She died at Turnham-Green, then a hamlet in the parish of Chiswick, 31 March 1808, "without a sigh, with the tranquility of an infant," writes her son. Her remains were interred in the churchyard of St. Nicholas, at Chiswick, in a grave one foot to the south side of Hogarth's tomb. Administration was granted to her son, John, 25 November 1808, in London.

Elizabeth Greenwood was born in Boston and accompanied her mother to Marblehead on her mother's third marriage to Captain Humphrey Devereux. Her husband, Peter Green, was a mariner of Marblehead. He was baptized at that place 2 July 1721, the son of Peter and Charity (Tucker) Green. He married first, 25 July 1744, Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel Harris of Marblehead whose estate was divided in 1751.¹ Captain Green bought a pew in the New Meeting House at Marblehead in 1764. He died there in December 1803, aged eighty-three, "for many years a sea-commander & of established integrity."² Elizabeth was probably the Mrs. Elizabeth Green who died in Boston June 1811, aged seventy-nine.³

Symmes married, second, Mary Ann Stevens of Turnham-Green, London, whose sister, Frances, had married John Greenwood (10). The only child of Captain Symmes by his second marriage was Mary Ann Symmes, born in Boston 15 August 1775, who married 22 April 1802 her cousin, John Greenwood, Jr. (17), of London. Captain Symmes died intestate 1776.

His widow, Mary Ann (Stevens) Symmes, came to Boston and on 21 September 1779 became the third wife of her late husband's brother, Colonel Andrew Symmes. He was born 19 March 1735; married (1) 20 October 1763 Lydia Gale; married (2) Mary Holmes, who died before August 1774. By his first wife, he had a daughter, Lydia Symmes, who married, 2 July 1795, Jonathan Snelling. Their son, Andrew Symmes Snelling, born in Boston 19 July 1797, a merchant who came to New York, was the father of Frederick Greenwood Snelling.

Isaac Greenwood, Jr., was born in Cambridge, Mass., 9 May 1730,¹ though in a letter from Dedham, dated 31 May 1800, which he wrote to his son, John, in New York, he says: "I was 70 years old the 25th of this month." He was baptized in the First Church. Of his early education we learn nothing, yet he may have served an apprenticeship with Deacon Thomas Greenough, mathematical instrument maker of Boston, who died 1 May 1785, aged seventy-five years. They were related, inasmuch as Greenough's wife, Martha, a daughter of William Clarke, was a first cousin of Isaac's mother.

Mr. Greenwood pursued the business of mathematical instrument maker, ivory turner, importer of hardware and umbrella factor; he also carried on dentistry to a limited degree. In 1771 he advertises in the Boston Gazette from May to August as "Isaac Greenwood, Turner," at whose shop located at the North End, "next door to Dr. Clark's" on Fore Street (a continuation of Ann or Fish Street), "Umbrilloes are made and sold. . . . Ladies may be supplied with all sizes, so small as to suit misses of six or seven years of age, and as low as eight shillings 1.m. apiece. He has oyl cloth and near jointed ditto for men. He mends and covers old umbrilloes, and sells new sticks for ditto." This advertisement had the head and bust of a lady with a parasol over her, somewhat similar to the one in the Centinel in 1788. It must have been about this time that the rare Paul Revere print, an illustration of which appears herein through the courtesy of the American Antiquarian Society at Worcester, Mass., which now owns the original, was used as a business card by Isaac Greenwood.

The umbrella or umbrello, an article of Eastern luxury, found its way to Rome and was long in use throughout modern Italy, especially among horsemen, as a protection against the heat of the sun. Adopted by other countries along the Levant, it passed from Spain and Portugal to their American colonies. In France the terms parapluie and parasol were adopted. The umbrella is mentioned by Ben Johnson and other English writers in the seventeenth century as an article of luxury. The Glossographica Angl. Nova, 1707, and early English dictionaries described it as "a sort of Skreen that is held over the Head for preserving from the Sun or Rain, also a wooden Frame covered with Cloth or Stuff to keep off the Sun from a Window"; the "New Eng. Dic. 1731 by J. K." limits its use to women. Some of the English coffee-houses, however, kept one for the use of their customers—a heavy, unwieldy article with cane ribs, covered with waxed cloth or oiled silk; in some churches one was kept for the minister's use at funerals in wet weather. About 1750 Jonas Hanway, the philanthropist and traveller, returning from Persia, made himself conspicuous by carrying a parapluie through the streets of the metropolis; a quarter of a century later, Edward Oxnard says in his journal: "obliged to borrow an umbrella to shelter myself from the rain. It is an article much used here (England) for that purpose by ladies and gentlemen. At Bath they are contrived in connection with a walking-stick so as to be very handy." Long before this, however, the article had been in use in the English Colonies of North America; about 1730 mention is made of a "Tycken umbrella" being among the personal effects of Governor John Montgomerie of New York at his residence in the Fort. Before its general introduction, however, small parasols formed of oiled muslin of various colors imported from India and called "Kitisols," were used by some ladies in America though, curiously enough, considering the name, for rainy weather only.

In the Continental Journal and Weekly Advertiser of 20 April 1780, the following notice shows that Isaac Greenwood was beginning to turn his attention to dental work:

"Gentlemen and Ladies that may want Artificial Teeth, may have them made and fixed in the neatest manner, without the least pain by Isaac Greenwood, Ivory-Turner, at his house in the Main Street,¹ between the Old South and Seven-Star Lane, at the South End of Boston; they help the Speech as becoming as the natural ones.

☛ "Ladies, wax rots your Teeth and Gums, throw it away. Come and have your Teeth cleansed, and if done in time, saves them from rotting and parting from the Gums.

"N. B. Said Greenwood continues to make Artificial Leggs and Hands, Turns in Ivory, Bone, Silver and Wood. Makes Fifes, German Flutes, Hautboys, etc. etc.

☛ "Ladies please send your Umbrelloes to be mended and cover'd."

Later, he advertises as ivory turner, dentist, etc., from his shop in Washington Street, corner of Franklin, all kinds of articles made of ivory; cash given for "live teeth" and sea horse teeth.

Isaac Greenwood was the first of his name to take up the profession of dentistry, which was in its beginning at that time. In the light of a present-day specialized and scientific dental profession, his methods appear crude and primitive, but he naturally employed the methods and appliances then at hand. It will be found later that others of the name followed in his steps, including four sons, two of whom took leading positions in their profession in New York and Boston.

In 1757 Isaac Greenwood married Mary I'ans.¹ She was born 15 May 1726.² The following confused traditional account relative to the I'ans family was obtained from Mrs. Jane Weaver (Greenwood) Langdon (35): "The mother of Mary I'ans was thrice married; her first husband, — Parker, was the father of Captain Parker,³ who commanded one of the earliest, if not the first East Indiaman that entered Boston harbor—he wore a gold-laced hat, cocked of course; the second husband, — I'ans, was sent to settle some business in Ireland, or was an officer in the garrison there, where his daughter, Mary, was born (this part is doubtless correct, as her friends used to tease her about her Irish blood); her father returned to England when she was some eight months old; the third husband was probably an officer in some garrison town, as Mrs. Mary (I'ans) Greenwood was accustomed to speak of the band which, when a little girl, she had heard playing while the family were dining. Mary I'ans, after her arrival at Boston and previous to her marriage, lived at Nahant. She came out to this country on the ship of her stepbrother, Captain Parker, accompanied by her two sisters or stepsisters, one of whom, Martha, married Thomas Walker, merchant, and removed to Montreal, Canada; the other married Robert Woolsey, merchant of Quebec." Mrs. Mary (Greenwood) Gay (23) of Dedham, in a letter to her brother, John Greenwood (21) of New York, dated 21 April 1816, writes: "If you go to Canada in July you can inquire if Madam Walker is still alive; she is Mother's sister; her son was Judge Walker of Montreal; he is dead; Aunt Woolsey, who used to write me, is dead; her husband Woolsey lives in Quebec."

³ Probably Robert Jenkins Parker, who was sponsor at the christening of Isaac's first son.

The I'ans arms and the Greenwood arms, drawn on one card, were in the possession of a Miss Barrett of Roxbury in 1860, but the former are unreliable, having been drawn as late as 1840 by some "heraldic quack" in Boston, and taken from Burke's Armory. They were the arms of the I'ans of Whitestone, Bude Haven, Cornwall, "gules on a bend argent 3 Cornish choughs sable" with crest a rampant lion holding an anchor.

The Boston Gazette of 12 March 1770, in giving the list of the wounded at "the Boston Massacre," prints the following notice: "Mr. Samuel Maverick, a promising youth of 17 years of age, son of the widow Maverick, and an apprentice to Mr. Greenwood, Ivory-Turner, mortally wounded, a ball went thro' his belly, & was cut out at his back. He died the next morning." i.e. 6 March, 1770. Young Maverick lived with his mother, widow Mary Maverick, at the corner of Union Street and Salt Lane. He was a grandson of John Maverick, importer of lignum-vitae and other hard woods, whose store, the "Cabinet & Chest of Drawers," was on Middle Street, next to property owned by Elizabeth Clarke, who married Colonel Robert Hale of Beverly. Widow Hale died in Boston 23 September 1795, aged eighty-six years, leaving her entire estate to her "beloved kinsman and Nephew Isaac Greenwood of Boston, Gentleman, etc. for his use & improvement the whole of his natural life," and at his death to be equally divided between his widow and children, or the survivors of them.

From 1773 to 1775 Isaac Greenwood resided on Salem Street; his son, John, in his memoirs, speaks of "a church that stood next to my father's garden," while his son, William Pitt, used to point out the locality of the old house on the east side of Salem Street between Tileston Street and Christ Church. It was probably next to this last building.

Pursuant to an Act passed 5 April 1776, Isaac Greenwood was apprehended to be one of the inhabitants of Boston inimical to the interests of the United Colonies and of the Massachusetts Colony. Certain Justices of the Peace were appointed to examine the accused and either hold them to bond for their good behaviour, impeach them for trial, or commit them to jail, according to the nature and aggravation of their several crimes.¹ But, though Mr. Greenwood favored the royal cause at the outbreak of the Revolution, he took no active part therein; moreover, his wife and many of his connections were staunch patriots, therefore we may believe that he was merely held to bond by the authorities until the departure of the British troops. Soon after the hostilities began, Mr. Greenwood heard that his son, John, had run away from Falmouth (Portland), where he had been sent to stay with his uncle, and that he had joined the rebel army before Boston. Anxious to obtain his release or procure a substitute, he desired his wife to proceed to the American camp for that purpose. On boldly applying to the Governor for a permit to leave the town, Mrs. Greenwood was refused. She immediately declared that "she would go without it, if they fired after her every step she took." She was quite small, but very pretty, and old Gage was so struck by her great spunk and courage that he not only allowed her to leave but sent a guard with her until she was free from danger. Mrs. Greenwood arrived at Cambridge the day before the affair at Bunker Hill, and the next morning beheld her young son for a few minutes only as he was hurrying through to join his company on the field of action, for he had been on a furlough to visit his grand-aunt, widow Hale, at Andover. John refused to quit the army. His mother, after believing him killed in battle, was obliged to remain some time in Cambridge, as she was unable to pass into Boston in conformity with a resolution passed 24 June 1775, although she possessed influential friends and relatives in the Provincial Congress and elsewhere. After the arrival of Washington, and through his intercession it is said, Mrs. Greenwood was allowed to leave the American camp for Boston. She was the only person to whom such a favor was accorded during the siege. On the records of the Records of Court of Inquiry are not preserved in City Clerk's Office. 32 N. E. H. & G. Reg., 45.

Third Provincial Congress, 11 July 1775, is the following entry: "Resolved, That this Congress has no objection to Mrs. Mary Greenwood having a permit to go into Boston." The favor was the more to be appreciated as it had been refused on July 1st to Daniel Murray of Rutland, who petitioned on behalf of his sister and two brothers, although the parties were recommended by the Commander-in-Chief.¹

After the war Mr. Greenwood continued in business for some years. Among the articles enumerated in his invoices from London from 1783 to 1788 are buckle-brushes, tooth-brushes, common fishing rods and rods that form a cane, whip thongs, swish-whips and chaise-whips, waiters round, square and oval, Roman fiddle strings, German flutes, bone-headed rattans, and all kinds of cane ferrules, strings and tassels. From the quantity of the last mentioned, one would suppose that canes and umbrellas were largely manufactured by him.

In the Columbian Centinel for the 27th of April 1785, Mr. Greenwood speaks of the "success he has experienced in the dental art," and invites the continuance of patronage at his place of business at 49 Marlborough Street, or at the homes of his customers; and in the same paper for 3rd of May 1788, a similar and even more detailed announcement appears as follows:

"Isaac Greenwood, Dentist, Acquaints the publick that he has Removed from No. 49 to No. 19, Marlborough Street, opposite Messrs. In Directories, after 1795, we find Isaac Greenwood, Dentist, on Garden Court, and in May of that year he announces his removal from No. 19 Marlborough Street to the North Square, the next house but one to the Northward of the Reverend Doctor Lathrop's, where he continues to practice in the various branches of his profession. In the Columbian Centinel, 14 May 1796, the following announcement occurs:

“Umbrella Manufactory, in the street leading from North Square to Fleet Street (Garden Court). Umbrellas are made & sold—old Frames repaired and covered with oil Cloth or Silk—Also at the above Manufactory—Electrical Machines and Medical apparatus made and repaired—also a variety of Turned Work, in ivory and wood. N. B. Electrical Machines, with Medical apparatus to let.

An Apprentice wanted above—a lad of 15 or 16 years of age, and good recommendation.”

Under his apprentice Daniel Hewes, the umbrella business was removed in 1798 to No. 55 Marlborough Street. Subsequently, Mr. Greenwood imported hardware, etc., from London, and a book with memoranda of his invoices is still preserved. In 1799 there were only three registered dentists in Boston: Isaac Greenwood, near the Old North Square; his son, William Pitt Greenwood, opposite the head of the Mall, and Josiah Flagg. The Tax List of 1796 gives a description of the property he then owned.

The New York Star, 10 November 1837, has the following item: "The first electrical machine which Franklin used he had made at Boston by old Mr. Isaac Greenwood, mathematician, son of Professor Greenwood of Harvard College, and father of the late John Greenwood, dentist of this city." This account was frequently confirmed by John's elder brother, Isaac (20), during his lifetime. In giving credence to this family tradition, we must remember that Isaac Greenwood was not born until 1730, some years after Franklin had left Boston as a young man and gone to Philadelphia. He returned to Boston from time to time, and is said to have made his first experiment there in 1746, and it is quite probable that Isaac Greenwood, then an enterprising lad with a gift for mechanical contrivance, became interested in Franklin's experiments. Especially does it seem very possible that Franklin at an earlier date may have been among those to attend the experimental lectures of Professor Isaac Greenwood of Harvard on mathematics and philosophy.

About the year 1791 the portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Greenwood were painted by William Lovett,¹ artist of Boston, and sent on to their son, John, who had settled in New York. That of Mr. Greenwood represents him with a copy of Hunter on The Human Teeth lying open at his left hand, from the forefinger of which swings a pair of spectacles by their crossed bows. The accuracy of the painting as a likeness may be judged by the following incident: John Greenwood had been in the habit of holding up his little daughter Jane towards the portrait and telling her to kiss Grandpa, and when, during the ensuing year, Mr. Isaac Greenwood visited New York for the first time since the war, the child, who was playing before the house, ran towards him as he approached, crying for a "kiss, Grandpapa!"—much to the old gentleman's delight, for he had contemplated taking the family by surprise and never expected such a greeting. Mrs. Greenwood's portrait represents a demure, placid old lady in a white cap and lavender ribbons, dressed in a russet gown cut square and low at the neck, with a thin white kerchief pinned over the breast, holding in her hand an ivory snuff-box, which had been made on a lathe by her husband, and bore a miniature of her only daughter on the lid.

The old couple visited New York for the last time about the year 1798. During the year 1800, Mr. Greenwood removed with his wife and daughter to Dedham and built a cottage upon a lot leased from the Episcopal Church. Writing to his son, John, about this time he says: "As to our situation, etc., Mr. Bull will inform you. I wish you could see it, I feel very happy in it—and when I reflect on the happy situation all my children are in, and how much more favored I am than many that I know, I call to mind what I learned in my youth—what shall I render to my God for all his gifts to me—I have nothing to render but a contented mind."

Isaac Greenwood died at Dedham, 18 October 1803, aged seventy-three,¹ and was buried 23 October 1803 in the tomb at Copp's Hill. By his will, wherein he is styled "Gentleman," he leaves his widow, besides her legal dower and thirds, the use and improvement of his dwelling-house at Dedham, and also the use of all the plate and furniture therein for life; the residue of his estate, real and personal, was left for division between his four sons and daughter, the widow being appointed executrix.

Mrs. Greenwood survived her husband many years and was cared for in her old age by her daughter, Mrs. Mary Gay (23).

¹ Records of Episcopal Church of Stoughton.

She died at Dedham, 11 October 1820, aged ninety-five years, and was buried on October 15th,¹ in the family tomb at Copp's Hill. William H. Montague, Esq., of Boston, in a letter to Isaac John Greenwood (56) says: "Your great grandmother was a small woman; she had the habits and attire that bespoke the gentlewoman, while I am writing I can see her in my mind's eye, sitting so prim in her easy chair, with a black silk dress that in these days money would not buy—then the white starched ruff (not collar) and the white plaited cap as white as the driven snow. She was really a gentlewoman of the old school, which have now all passed away." She left her entire property, amounting to a little over $4,000, to her daughter, Mrs. Mary Gay. In the inventory, dated 17 April 1821, is listed the house $800.00, furniture $15.60, and 33 ounces, 19 dwt. of "Old silver worth only its weight" consisting of two cans and three spoons and a pair of old-fashioned sugar tongs. Mrs. Mary Gay bought in from the other heirs the dwelling house at Dedham together with its furniture and contents, or rather, her brother William Pitt Greenwood and the heirs of her brother, John, made no claim for the articles, among which were several family relics including the silver-mounted dress sword of her grandfather, Isaac Greenwood of Boston, the coat-of-arms, and the old silver. A pair of plainly chased, gold sleeve-buttons, marked on the inside "M. I. to I. G." were in the possession of Isaac John Greenwood (56), great-grandson of Mrs. Mary (I'ans) Greenwood, until August 1860 when he was robbed of them in Canada.

IV. Thales⁵, b. 24 December 1762, bapt. 19 January 1763; sponsors, John and Thales Greenwood and Esther Scurlock. In 1779 he was a fifer in the company of Captain Caleb Champney, enlisted in the service of the United States to do guard duty in and about Boston under Honorable Major-General Gates, his service lasting for two months and twenty-one days from 1 March 1779. Towards the close of the Revolutionary War, Thales Greenwood died at Santo Domingo, W. I., where he had been seized with yellow fever, expiring in the arms of his brother, Isaac, who had just arrived. His natural daughter, Sukey Greenwood, born 15 November 1781, who is mentioned in the will of her great-grandaunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Hale, was brought up in the family. She married, 25 June 1797, Daniel Hewes, Jr., of Boston, who had been apprenticed to her grandfather, Isaac Greenwood, in the turning business.¹ She died 8 June 1799, aged 18, leaving no issue.

V. Clarke, b. 8 March 1764, bapt. 25 June 1766; sponsors, William Holland, Sarah Greenwood and Joseph Eayres; d. 15 February 1810. In early life Clarke pursued the business of ivory turning in Boston, but in 1788 he was called to New York by his brother, John, who gave up to him a profitable trade which he had established there as mathematical instrument maker and ivory turner. John carried on the profession of dentistry alone, while Clarke continued at the old business in which he prospered and acquired a competent fortune. He died, a bachelor, 15 February 1810, and was interred in the receiving vault at the southwest end of St. Paul's churchyard, New York City. This vault now lies under the rear end of the Vestry office, at the corner of Church and Fulton Streets.

14. JOHN⁴ GREENWOOD (Isaac³ (7), Samuel², Nathaniel¹), b. 29 March, bapt. 1 April 1733; m. 2 November 1762 Mercy Clarke; d. ———.

who was married, 2 November 1762, to Mercy Clarke, at Trinity Church, Boston, by Reverend William Hooper, though the entry on the City Records says he was a son of John and Martha Greenwood. Honorable William Willis of Portland, then President of the Maine Historical Society, says in 1859: "It is evident from the facts which you have collected, and which are preserved here, that John Greenwood took the female part of his father's family to this place (then called Falmouth), where they all died, and that he must have been here as early as 1765. He was a cabinet-maker and bought the lot, on which he erected his house, of Samuel Proctor's estate, 9 September 1772, for £26. Oct. 4, 1773, his house was raised. It was three stories with brick ends and was one of the best houses in town, but the war came on and on October 18, 1775, most of the houses in the village were wantonly burned by Lieutenant Captain Mowatt (the British commander). The Greenwood house was preserved, but all business was prostrated in the town, and the building was not completed. . . . Sept. 5, 1783, he sold the house and lot to Joseph Jewett for £500, who finished it, put on an addition back, and kept a store in the east room on the street, where he did a large business. Mr. Greenwood continued to occupy the house, although it was unfinished, up to the time of its sale, and perhaps longer, for Mr. Jewett did not move into town from Scarborough until Nov. 1786. I do not find on our records any memo of Mr. John Greenwood's marriage or death; he probably came here married and left the place previous to his death. I find in an old diary in my possession the following entries: '1770, Dec. 19, Mrs. Greenwood died of Consump., ae. 31; 1771, Aug. 16, Mr. Greenwood's Servant girl, ae. 14; 1773, July 28, Sarah Greenwood, Consump., ae. 40; 1776, May 23, Mrs. Greenwood, deceas., ae. 68.'¹ Previous to the Revolution the only attempts to use brick in Portland were in the houses of John Butler in King Street and John Greenwood in Middle Street. The latter house was situated on the southerly side of Middle Street between Captain Pearson's lane to the east and Fish Street to the west (now Willow and Silver Streets). It was demolished in 1855 or '56 to make room for the new hotel constructed in 1859 by Honorable John M. Wood."

John Greenwood (21) says in his Revolutionary memoirs that in the early part of 1774 "at the age of 13, I was sent eastward to a place called Portland, 150 miles from Boston, to live with my father's only brother who I was named after. He was a cabinet-maker by trade, but had concerns in the shipping business also and was looked upon to be an able or rich man; his wife was dead, but he had no children and I was his favorite. My uncle was lieutenant of an independent company and of course I was engaged to play the fife while they were learning to march." Mr. Willis, who could find no evidence of such a company, thinks it was probably a temporary organization of persons banded together during the troublesome times, very probably the "Cadets."

In the East Cemetery of Portland is the following inscription:

"Here lies buried the Body of
Mrs. Mercy Greenwood Wife to
Mr. John Greenwood
Died 17th Decr. 1770
Aged 27 years."

The date of John Greenwood's death is uncertain, as there is no mention of him in the Probate Records of Portland or Boston, and no mention of him or his family in the records of the oldest Episcopal Church of Portland. There was a John Greenwood who had the grant of a city lot at St. John's, N. B., during the Revolutionary War, but the name does not appear again either in the Registry or Probate Records between 1785 and 1823.

15. ELIZABETH⁴ GREENWOOD (Isaac³ (7), Samuel², Nathaniel¹), bapt. 1 May 1737; m. 13 September 1765 William Holland; d. 11 September 1783.

Elizabeth Greenwood was born and baptized in Cambridge and went later, with her mother, to her brother's home in Falmouth (Portland), Maine, where she was married 13 September 1765 to William Holland by Reverend Thomas Smith, Congregationalist of the First Parish. Her husband was a trader who lived in the house occupied in 1849 by Doctor Durgin in Exchange Street, Portland. It then stood on Middle Street where Exchange Street enters it. Mr. Holland later failed in business, which event is thus recorded in Reverend Doctor Smith's Journal: "1769 February 2, Holland is torn to pieces by (Seth) Hinckley and other creditors." On 15 March 1772 Mrs. Elizabeth Holland acknowledged the Covenant. She died, according to family records, 11 September 1783, ae. forty-six, in Portland, though Willis says "September 13," in his edition of Doctor Smith's Journal.

Children of William and Elizabeth (Greenwood) Holland were:

- I. William ^s Holland, d. 23 August 1770, ae. two years.
- II. William Holland, bapt. 3 May 1772 in the First Church.
- III. Wilkes Holland, bapt. 24 September 1775.

FIFTH GENERATION

16. MILES⁵ GREENWOOD (Benjamin⁴ (9), Samuel³, Samuel², Nathaniel¹), b. August 1758; m. 21 March 1782 Charity Bemis; d. 20 February 1823.

Miles Greenwood was born in Boston and was undoubtedly the son of Benjamin Greenwood (9).¹ He was early apprenticed to Gershom Swan, chair-maker of Menotomy (now Arlington), but he did not serve his full time, as he left his master and joined the American Army soon after the battle of Lexington. The following anecdote, which he used to relate, clearly evinces the patriotic spirit with which he was imbued: "When the British troops were about to move from Boston to Concord to destroy military stores, their movement was anticipated, and it was agreed that a company of Minute Men should be alarmed, when they came, by the ringing of a churchbell near where he (Miles) lived. His Master was the Sexton and directed him, if at any time in the night, he should hear a signal-gun fired near the house, he should go immediately, and ring the bell! The troops came in the night (18 April 1775), the gun was fired, and he ran up into the belfry, and rang with his hands upon the bell-wheel, while the troops passed directly under the eaves of the Church, he and they in full sight of each other. He always supposed they regarded the bell ringing as a sign of rejoicing rather than alarm; otherwise, with a single shot they might have silenced him forever! He rang, however, until the town was thoroughly astir; nor, in his excitement, did he discover that his haste had sent him there with no scrap of clothing on but his night-shirt!"

Miles Greenwood enlisted 4 May 1775 for eight months as a private in Captain Benjamin Locke's company, of the 15th Massachusetts Bay Regiment of Colonel Thomas Gardner, afterwards the 37th Regiment of Foot commanded by Lieutenant Colonel William Bond, in the "Army of the United Colonies." Previous to the battle of Lexington, Miles Greenwood was one of Captain Locke's company of Minute Men, which had been organized in the northwest precinct of Cambridge (Menotomy) prior to the outbreak of the war, consisting of a small number of noncommissioned officers and privates, twenty-five of whom were residents of the town.¹ As late as 1877 the original roll was in the possession of the family of the late Delmont Locke. The name of Miles Greenwood occurs thereon, and it can scarcely be doubted that he, as well as the rest of the company, engaged actively in the conflict of the 19th of April. It was at this point on their retreat that the British troops were particularly harassed, and nowhere on the route was the carnage greater on either side. Colonel Thomas Gardner enlisted a new regiment after the Lexington fight, which was ready May 26th and commissioned 2 June 1775. Just a month later the Colonel died, 3 July 1775, from a mortal wound received at the Battle of Bunker Hill. Miles Greenwood's name appears upon a "Return," dated Camp Winter Hill, 6 October 1775, and his signature is upon a coat-roll dated at the same place 27 December 1775, now in the Secretary of State's office, Boston, Mass. It also appears upon a receipt for pay, bearing date Camp Winter Hill, 1 January 1776, in the Massachusetts Revolutionary Rolls. At the time of his enlistment he was seventeen years of age and five feet five inches in height. A memorandum upon the margin of the Return indicates that he was a participant in the famous Quebec expedition. He was a private in Captain William Adams' company, Colonel Thatcher's regiment of militia which, at the request of General Washington, took possession of Dorchester Heights, 4 March 1776. His name occurs as a private "fit for duty" on a Return of the condition of Captain John Walden's company, Colonel Ebenezer Brook's regiment, dated "Camp, Oct. 31 1776." It also appears on a Return of this last company, "Called into service on the 8th of December 1776 and stationed at Noodle's Island"—service as a private, thirteen days. In the same capacity he served thirty-six days, beginning 12 January 1778, in Captain Benjamin Blaney's company of Colonel Brook's regiment of guards at Cambridge, and was afterwards a private in Captain Stephen Frost's company, Colonel Cyprian Howe's regiment, doing service in Rhode Island two months and twenty days from 10 August 1780.

After the cessation of hostilities Miles Greenwood married, 21 March 1782, in Watertown, Mass., Charity Bemis.¹ She was born 21 February 1755 in Watertown, daughter of Joseph and Ruth (Simon) Bemis.²

He was a man of intellect and "tolerably well educated for one of his time." Though always poor he was desirous of doing all that he could for the education of his children. His wife died in Watertown 10 April 1818, aged sixty-two years, and he died there 20 February 1823, aged sixty-four. No probate records are found for his estate.

- II. Miles, b. 10 December 1784; d. unmarried 23 October 1816. He left home in early manhood not long before the War of 1812. The 12 March 1812 he was commissioned 1st Lieutenant in the 16th Regiment of Infantry, under the command of Colonel Cromwell Pearce (a Pennsylvania regiment), and on 16 April 1813 he was made Captain. He was in active service on the northern and western frontiers during the whole war, with only four or five weeks' furlough. His regiment was with General Zebulon Montgomery Pike's Brigade in the attack on York (now Toronto, Canada) which resulted in the capture of that place, the company to which Miles Greenwood was attached being in advance at the time of the blowing up of the Fort by the retreating enemy. In the assault General Pike and Captain Lyon were among those killed, and upon the death of the latter, Lieutenant Greenwood, of the same company, was promoted to the rank of Captain. His commission bears the date of the victory, according to a family account; though according to Gardiner's Dictionary of the American Army, Greenwood was commissioned Captain some eleven days before, on 16 April 1813, in the place of Captain Lee promoted.

After the war he retired from the army in March 1814 and sailed for Port-au-Prince, Santo Domingo, where, in company with some brother officers, he proposed opening a trading house with New York. He was there but a few weeks. On his return passage with plans partially arranged, he died at sea of cholera 23 October 1816, unmarried. From his small pay in the army he had economized sufficiently to keep his younger brother, Thomas Jefferson, in school at Albany about two years.

John Greenwood endeavored for some years to carry on his father's business in London as an art dealer, but he was unsuccessful and became involved in financial difficulties. To escape the excise and until affairs could be settled with his creditors, he even resorted to the use of an assumed name and for more than a year (1797) he was known as Mr. Ellis. In his difficulties Greenwood was given shelter by William Grimaldi, between whose family and that of the Greenwoods an intimacy had long existed. William Grimaldi, the elder, who held rank as the Marquis of Grimaldi (a title which he did not use, though it was resumed later by his son, Stacy) was the grandson of Alexander, sixth Marquis of Grimaldi, a Genoese by birth who died in London in 1732. In the Grimaldi home at No. 2 Albemarle Street, two doors from Piccadilly, John Greenwood continued to live with his young family until the summer of 1805, when he removed to lodgings at Paddington, and later to the city.¹

The 24th of November 1799 Greenwood and Grimaldi entered into a partnership as auctioneers, for a term of seven years, as "Greenwood & Co.," Mr. Grimaldi being a silent partner. Their rooms were on Whitecombe Street, Leicester Square, and business commenced with every prospect of success. In September 1801 a vase which was considered a great work of art and was valued at 300 guineas, even attracted royal attention, a member of the royal family calling at the Rooms to inspect it. Several other vases of a similar kind and numerous articles of vertu having arrived from France and Italy, the Rooms were relined with new baize and cards of admission were issued for a five days exhibition prior to the sale, including two views by candlelight. There was a rush of visitors and Mr. Greenwood received many very flattering compliments from the gentry for his taste in getting together what was allowed to be "the most superb collection of Elegancies that ever was exhibited in England." Mrs. Grimaldi, writing to her daughter 17 February 1802, says: "Yesterday morning there were nineteen Coronets at the door at one time; in the evening there was free admission, when the Crowd of people around the door was just like getting into the Play House. They were obliged to have a Constable in the Passage to keep out the Mobility." The sale finished on the 20th, but perhaps the vases did not meet with a purchaser very promptly for during the public "Illumination" of the following July, Mrs. Grimaldi says: "We made, I assure you, a very brilliant appearance, with our Vases and lamps, they attracted general attention and admiration."

John Greenwood married, 22 April 1802,¹ at St. George's, Hanover Square, his cousin, Mary Ann Symmes. A wedding dinner was given for the young couple by Mr. Flint Stacey, Cranford Bridge, whence the bridal party set forth the next morning for Mr. Love's at Margrave in Berkshire, and later made a short trip to France. Mary Ann Symmes was born in Boston 15 August 1775,² daughter of Captain Ebenezer³ and Mary Ann (Stevens) Symmes. After her father's death in 1776, she was placed under the guardianship of his cousin, Doctor Samuel Danforth, and she probably went to England about a year before her mother. Under date of 7 July 1793 John Greenwood notes, "Mrs. Symmes arrived," doubtless alluding to his maternal aunt, Mary Ann (Stevens) Symmes, who was then the wife of Colonel Andrew Symmes of Boston, brother of her first husband. Miss Mary Ann Symmes was in England in January 1797, at which time she acknowledges receipt of money from her guardian. Her miniature by Grimaldi, 1799, was exhibited that year at the Royal Academy in a frame with five others, and that of John Greenwood was in the exhibition of 1800 framed with four others.⁴

By the autumn of 1803 business was beginning to stagnate throughout the Kingdom; in the previous May, Mrs. Grimaldi writes, "Everything is very flat in Whitecombe Street." Mr. Greenwood, who now had a wife and child to care for, and having some talent with the pencil and brush, took up copying and began work on a Dutch piece by N. Berchem, but in less than three months we hear that "Mr. G.'s fever for copying pictures is gone off." He then thought of starting an advertising paper for auctioneers, but the idea was abandoned fearing the government would interfere with a plan which checked one source of its income. At a later date, however, he successfully carried out this enterprise.

It was thought at this time that the death of Mr. James

Christy, the prominent auctioneer, which occurred in November, would lead to the reestablishment of Mr. Greenwood's business, since his opinion was regarded as ranking next to that of Mr. Christy in the judgment of pictures; little was done, however, and affairs dragged on through the following year. In May 1905 Mrs. Grimaldi writes to her son, William, Jr., who had returned from Hamburg, where he had been in business for several years, "I sincerely congratulate you on the increase of business in W. Street; may it continue. Attention and assiduity on the part of Mr. Greenwood would yet recover the business." In November 1805 a move was made to Rooms at No. 16 Old Bond Street which he had been anxious to secure for over two years; but the change made little improvement in business, and the firm of John Greenwood and William Grimaldi was Gazetted, 22 September 1807.

One of the assignees in the proceedings was a Mr. Barton Greenwood, a lawyer and an old friend of both families, but in no way related to John Greenwood. The dwelling house at No. 2 Albemarle Street was offered for sale at public auction, but Mr. Grimaldi succeeded in saving his freehold property from being sacrificed. Subsequent to this there was a break in the social intercourse between the two families, although some business relations existed at intervals for a few years.

After this John Greenwood considered accepting a position as head clerk at Christy's, chiefly to superintend the picture sales, but he gave up the idea, and through the influence of the auctioneer, Mr. Hermon, he secured the position of manager or secretary of the Auction Mart at a salary of about £300 per annum. This Mart was on the plan of Garraway's Coffee-House on 'Change Alley, and was a room built by subscription of the auctioneers on the corner of Throgmorton Street, facing the Bank. Mr. Greenwood's advertisement appeared in the Times of 8 September 1808 and subsequent issues. About May 1812 he commenced the publication of a weekly newspaper entitled The Auction Register, designed for advertisements only at 1/ per number. He was still connected with the Auction Mart at the time of his death.

Mrs. Greenwood died 20 September 1814,¹ aged forty years, at Turnham-Green, and was buried in the Chiswick churchyard near the grave of her husband's mother. Mr. Greenwood died 1 June 1815, aged forty-three years, at the residence of a friend of the family, Miss Daw of Turnham-Green, and was interred at Chiswick in the same grave as his wife. Their tombstone stands just west of Hogarth's tomb.

Pilkington's Dictionary of Painters, followed by Hobbes' Picture Collector's Manual, Gould's Dictionary of Artists and Bryan's Dictionary of Artists assert that John Greenwood, the artist, who died in 1792, was the father of Mr. Greenwood the scene painter, thus making him the same party alluded to by Byron (1808) in his "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers" as follows:

"Lo! with what pomp the daily prints proclaim
The rival candidates for Attic fame!
In grim array though Lewis' spectres rise,
Still Skeffington and Goose divide the prize.
And sure great Skeffington must claim our praise,
For skirtless coats and skeletons of plays,
Renown'd alike; whose genius ne'er confines
Her flight to garnish Greenwood's gay designs;
Nor sleeps with 'Sleeping Beauties,' but anon
In five facetious acts comes thundering on."

His eldest son, John Danforth (28), who was about twelve years old at the time of his father's death, never heard that John Greenwood had been connected with any theatre in the capacity of scene painter, although he had many friends connected with the theatrical profession. According to Ralph Wewitzer's Theatre Pocket Book (London, 1814), there was a Mr. Thomas Greenwood living at that time who was the chief scene painter at Drury Lane, and the son of an older scene painter of the same name.

Children of John and Mary Ann (Symmes) Greenwood:

28. I. John Danforth ⁶, b. 4 January 1803; m. 18 May 1831 Sarah Field; d. 13 June 1890.
- II. Frederick Symmes, b. 5 October 1804; d. 10 July 1821. He was born in the parish of St. George, Hanover Square, London. After the death of his parents, he came to Jonathan Snelling of Boston, Mass., and was adopted by Mr. Samuel Torrey of the firm of Torrey, Symmes and Company, Boston, who was childless. (His mother's half-brother, Andrew Eliot Symmes, was a member of this firm.) Frederick died a year after from scarlet fever, 10 July 1821,¹ and was buried in the Torrey tomb, Old Granary Burying Ground, Boston.
- III. Frances Harriet, b. 1 September 1806 at Paddington; d. 13 January 1807.

18. JAMES ⁵ GREENWOOD (John ⁴ (10), Samuel ³, Samuel ², Nathaniel ¹), b. 20 May 1775; m. 30 October 1806 Elizabeth Carr; d. 30 January 1816.

James Greenwood was born in London. His health failed when he was eighteen years old and his mind became temporarily clouded. Early in 1795 he attempted to engage in business, but his trouble returning he was removed to Hoxton. In July 1797 he had recovered, and the following year he obtained a business position. Not succeeding very well, however, he sailed in November 1802 for the West Indies and settled for a time at Kingston, the capital of St. Vincent, one of the Windward Islands, where he found employment and sent remittances back to his brother, John. In 1803 he went to Demerara, which had been taken that year from the Dutch, and acted in an official position as Dutch and French interpreter.

While there he married Elizabeth Carr. In 1810 he removed with his family to Portland, Maine, and soon afterward to Boston. He continued to live there as a translator, accountant, and scrivener, manufactured blacking, and also sold snuff, music-blanks, stationery, etc.

James Greenwood always kept up a correspondence with William Grimaldi, Jr., of London, and Mrs. Grimaldi writes to her son, 16 June 1803, as follows: "How are you to be envied, my dear William, in the privilege of corresponding with such a man, such a model I may say."

James Greenwood died 30 January 1816 and was buried in King's Chapel burying grounds. He died in poor circumstances, as is evidenced by his inventory which, the widow declining to act, was filed the following March by Colonel Joseph May, who had befriended him from the first. Mrs. Greenwood did not long survive her husband. She died 6 January 1817, aged forty-two years, "a stranger," says the entry, and was buried in King's Chapel burying grounds. Her small estate was administered by Colonel May, who thereafter kindly took care of the children.

Children of James and Elizabeth (Carr) Greenwood; all baptized at King's Chapel, Boston:

29. I. Frances Elizabeth ⁶, b. 8 January 1808, bapt. 17 July 1814; m. 29 May 1838 Professor Solomon Stoddard, Jr.; d. 23 March 1883.
30. II. Louisa Caroline, b. 2 December 1810, bapt. 17 July 1814; m. 31 May 1843 George William Bond; d. 23 September 1891.
31. III. James, b. 19 July 1812, bapt. 17 July 1814; m. (1) 23 March 1840 Sarah A. Hudson; m. (2) 19 September 1848 Lucretia M. Palmer; d. 10 March 1900.
- IV. William David, b. 24 June 1814, bapt. 17 July 1814. He went West as a boy and remained there. He died in California, near Sacramento.
- V. Samuel, b. circa February 1816; d. 6 November 1816, aged nine months.¹

19. SAMUEL ADAM ⁵ GREENWOOD (John ⁴ (10), Samuel ³, Samuel ², Nathaniel ¹), b. 20 February 1780 in England; d. 21 November 1810 in India.

Samuel Adam Greenwood went to India at the age of fifteen, sailing 9 July 1795, where he held a position in an office at Bengal and studied Hindustani and Persian. The next year he was a Cadet under the Bombay presidency, and a Lieutenant, 30 January 1798. He was at the taking of Seringapatam in May 1799, and Commissary to some of the troops in the fall of 1801. In the second Mahratta War he was in the battle of Assaye, 23 September 1803, when the combined forces of Sindhia and the Nagpur Rajah were defeated by General Arthur Wellesley, at which time Greenwood was Adjutant of his battalion. He was a Captain in the Second Regiment of Native Infantry, 25 July 1805, having obtained his army rank the 28th of April previous. During that year he was Senior Assistant under the Resident, Major Walker, at the Court of the Gaekwar of Baroda, a powerful Prince of the Mahratta Confederacy. He was also Paymaster of the troops. In November 1807 he was seriously ill, and in January 1808 went to Malabar for a few weeks to recruit his health.

In May 1808, William Grimaldi, Jr., on a voyage to India, met a fellow passenger, Captain (afterwards Colonel) Brackley Kennet, one of the 3rd Native Infantry, whose views he gives in a letter home: "He speaks very highly of Captain Samuel Greenwood as being a fine man, a good officer, who will now never have occasion to join the Army again, as there is no doubt of his always possessing some such official situation as he now holds. Indeed, he seems to speak confidently of his succeeding to the Residency, of which he is now only Assistant, upon Major Walker's resignation, and finally that he will undoubtedly realize a very considerable property in India."

An issue of the British Mercury in Calcutta, 1810, says that a revolution having started in the Government of Cutch, a detachment of the subsidiary forces stationed in the Gaekwar's dominions marched from Kaira to oppose the designs of the usurper, Tutteh Mahommed, against the Rajah of Mandvi. They reached the shores of the Gulf of Cutch and were about to cross when the natives, alarmed, compelled Tutteh to conclude a treaty with the Rajah, "which was negotiated under the direction of the British resident, Captain Greenwood," and only awaited the sanction of the Bombay Government. Captain Greenwood, who was in ill health at the time, died before the treaty was ratified.

Captain Samuel Adam Greenwood died of fever, 21 November 1810, at Cambay, India. An obituary given in the Supplement to the Asiatic Register, 25 December 1810, says: "The approbation of his employers was the only but valued consolation he lived to enjoy, and alas! while rapidly advancing to public eminence in his own profession, and in the line of service in which he was engaged during recent years, in the possession of an approving conscience and the respect and esteem of a numerous circle of friends, it pleased Providence to remove him to a better world." A monument was erected for him in Bombay. The seal which he used reads, in Persian, "Sâmawîl Azam Grînwahd, Sanat 1222." (A.D. 1807-'08.)

Captain Greenwood left a son Charles, a half-caste, born about 1803. He was sent to his uncle, John Greenwood, in England just before his father's death. He died of consumption at Turnham-Green, and was buried at Chiswick, 31 October 1814.

20. ISAAC⁵ GREENWOOD (*Isaac*⁴ (13), *Isaac*³, *Samuel*², *Nathaniel*¹), b. 13 October, bapt. 3 November 1758; m. 1 May 1788 Deborah Langley; d. 21 October 1829.

Isaac Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at King's Chapel. He was with Samuel Maverick, his father's young apprentice, at the time of the Boston Massacre, 5 March 1770. Maverick had dropped young Isaac's hand but an instant, and was in the act of throwing up his arms and exclaiming, "Fire away, you d—— lobsterbacks!" when he received his death wound. Isaac subsequently beheld the "Destruction of the Tea" in Boston harbor, 16 December 1773. He served an apprenticeship to his father both in dentistry and in the mechanical arts pursued by him. In 1775 we find an advertisement of "ladies' umbrellas for sale" by Isaac Greenwood, Jr., in Salem.¹

He favored the patriotic cause and served during the war in various capacities on board several private armed vessels. On one occasion, being confined as a prisoner in the old Crown Street sugarhouse, New York, he escaped by digging under the walls and across the street into the cellar of an opposite house, whence, emerging in the night, he reached the riverside and swam safely across to Paulus' Hook. In mid-stream he slept for a few hours on the deck of an anchored sloop.¹ At another time, probably early in 1782, being on the brigantine New Broom, the vessel was captured in the West Indies and Greenwood was confined in the prison ship at St. Johns, Antigua. Having been removed to the hospital on shore, he escaped in the dress of an English naval officer and, with the assistance of two friends, took possession of a sloop manned by five negroes and a white captain and proceeded to the island of Montserrat, which had surrendered to the French in February 1782.² He served in the privateer New Broom, Captain Israel Bishop, sixteen guns, which sailed from New London in the summer of 1778. About 1781 he was on the Brutus, Captain W. Coles, from Salem. A full account taken from his Journal may be found in the New York magazine Literary Companion, August 1821, and in the appendix of The Revolutionary Services of John Greenwood by Isaac J. Greenwood (New York, 1922).

After the war he endeavored to establish himself as a dentist in New York, advertising in Rivington's Gazette, December 1783, as having recently arrived in the city. Not succeeding as well as he expected, he sailed for Charleston, S. C., in the Grace, Captain Armour, 1 March 1785, but soon returned to Boston. In June 1787 he commenced practice at Providence, R. I., where he also carried on mathematical instrument making and the hardware business. He acquired some property near the corner of Aborn and Westminster Streets and built a mansion-house on a hill overlooking the town.

From the Providence Gazette and Country Journal, 21 June 1788:

“Isaac Greenwood, Dentist, Cures all Complaints incident to the Teeth and Gums, substitutes artificial Teeth in the neatest Manner, and doubts not but nine Years Practice has afforded him Experience sufficient to execute every Part of the above Art with the greatest Ease and

Isaac Greenwood married, in Newport, R. I., 1 May 1788, Deborah Langley.¹ She was born 9 June 1768, daughter of William and Sarah Langley of Newport.²

In 1791 he was in Norwich, Conn., for a short time, at the Brown Tavern. “He at first intends remaining four days, but being ‘honored with more applications’ than he could attend to in so short a time, his stay extends to several months.”³

Upon the death of his brother, Clarke, 15 February 1810, Isaac Greenwood removed to New York and continued the business of mathematical instrument making in which the former had been engaged at 126 Front Street. In December 1811 he petitioned the House of Representatives for an increase of duties on import of mariners' and purveyors' magnetic compasses. During the year 1814 he was one of the citizens actually engaged in throwing up intrenchments on the heights of Brooklyn, Long Island.

Isaac Greenwood was of a curious, eccentric and at times querulous nature; indeed, his father used to attribute his vagaries to the effects of a severe sabre blow received upon the head during the war. His wife died 16 February 1828, and he did not long survive her. He died sitting upright in his easy chair at the Washington Hotel in New York, 21 October 1829. In his desk were found directions for his funeral and another paper with the following inscription:

PROFESSIONAL CARD OF ISAAC GREENWOOD
 When located at 126 Front Street, New York, 1810-1818

“I direct that the within dirge be read at the tomb of my interment & no other—by any respectable man who will please to read it: In the midst of life we are in death & there is not a moment of our existence that we can call our own. Our life is a round of contrariety and this counteraction of the human system on itself must bring to dissolution our present form & mingle us with the dust. Our Almighty Father in his divine providence has taken to himself the soul of our brother and left us for a time to mourn his absence in this life, but not without hope of a blessed immortality. As all men are doom'd to undergo this change, we should often call to mind that in a few days, and perhaps hours, we shall be summoned to the like fatality, and may God in his infinite goodness give us fortitude of mind to meet the messenger of our earthly mutability and, having faithfully done our duty here, may we depart in full assurance of being well received into the society of beatified spirits, there to enjoy eternal bliss in the immediate presence of Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, Amen.

Aside—Please to read it loud & distinct.

ISAAC GREENWOOD.”

His will, dated 10 March 1828, and proved 28 October 1829, describes him as “Mathematical Instrument Maker” of Brooklyn. He leaves his sword used during the Revolution and his portrait to his son, John, and excludes from his will any children his son, Thales, might have. His portrait, painted in Providence as a young man, was altered about 1821 and inscribed “aged 63.” Isaac Greenwood was a member of the Providence Association of Mechanics and Manufacturers, established 1789, and delivered an address before the Society (1798–’99), a copy of which has been presented to the library of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston.

Children of Isaac and Deborah (Langley) Greenwood; all born in Providence, R. I.:

- I. William Langley ⁶, b. 17 May 1789. He was first a printer with Gould & Company, law-book publishers, Wall Street, New York; in 1813 a notary public in Albany, and afterwards at Gould's store in the same place. He possessed considerable talent and was an able writer. He died unmarried at Jamaica, L. I., 8 September 1832.
- II. Thales, b. 6 October 1790. His uncle, John Greenwood, obtained a position for him in the United States Navy; he was appointed a midshipman, 1 January 1808, and was stationed upon a gunboat in Newtown-Creek, L. I. There were over fifty of these boats at the time in the harbor of New York. Thales was a wild youth and did not retain his commission long; he was dismissed 6 November 1809. In August 1813 he was reported a prisoner-of-war at Dartmoor, England. After his release, he shipped frequently as a seaman from New York. In 1820, having broken his thigh, he was laid up in the hospital at Liverpool, England, and arrived thence at Boston on 5 October 1820. The following November he sailed for New York, and that is the last learned of him. By his father's will he was left certain bequests, to be revoked if not heard from within seven years. He was probably lost at sea.
- III. Isaac, b. 13 November 1792. From October 1812 until he came of age, he was a clerk with Colonel William Blodget, merchant, opposite the "Turk's Head," Providence, R. I. He was a fine, noble, promising young man. Later he was in the employ of I. & N. Heard, merchants, in New York, and through his industry acquired a small fortune. His confining occupation caused him to contract a disease which terminated fatally 2 June 1822.¹ His will, dated 3 August 1821, was proved 4 June 1822.
- IV. Clarke, b. 23 October 1794; d. 25 September 1795.
32. V. Mary, b. 16 December 1796; m. 3 July 1823 Samuel P. Brown; d. 15 July 1879.
33. VI. John, b. 6 November 1798; m. (1) 31 July 1823 Catharine Dobbins; m. (2) 1 September 1836 Fanny Lammar; d. 11 December 1887.
- VII. Louisa, b. 12 January 1801. Lived with her brother John. Died unmarried 12 December 1883.
- VIII. Deborah, b. 17 August 1803; d. unmarried 2 May 1852 in Providence, R. I.
34. IX. Sarah Urania, b. 26 July 1805; m. 1 February 1825 James Van Nostrand; d. 31 October 1826.

John Greenwood

From Crayon Drawing of 1806, at age of 46.

21. JOHN⁵ GREENWOOD (Isaac⁴ (13)), Isaac³, Samuel², Nathaniel¹), b. 17 May, bapt. 8 June 1760; m. 22 March 1788 Elizabeth Weaver; d. 16 November 1819.

John Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at King's Chapel. He was educated in the rudiments at the North Writing School under old Master John Tileston. He remembered seeing the landing of the British troops on the 1st of October 1768 with their drums, fifes and colors. Having gone astray from the colored house-servant on that occasion, he had to be found by the town-crier with his bell. When about ten years old he had learned to play upon an old fife for his own amusement, and he was employed as a fifer in the militia company of Captain Martin Gay. He saw the tea destroyed in Boston Harbor, and soon after this event, 16 December 1773, he was sent to Falmouth (Portland), Maine, to learn the cabinet-making trade from his uncle, John Greenwood (14). A small chest of drawers which he made while there is still preserved in the family. He became fifer of an independent company of Cadets of which his uncle, John, was lieutenant.¹

Hearing of the battle of Lexington while in Falmouth, John ran away from his uncle's home and travelled on foot to Cambridge, a distance of one hundred and fifty miles, and there enlisted, 3 May 1775, for eight months, as a fifer in the company of Captain Theodore T. Bliss of Brimfield, Mass., quartered at the house of Reverend Winwood Serjeant of Christ Church, Cambridge, who had fled to Kingston, N. H. On the day of the battle of Bunker Hill, 17 June 1775, this company was joined to the 12th Massachusetts Regiment of Colonel John Patterson of Stockbridge, Mass.,² and covered the retreat of the American forces with two field pieces. During the siege the 26th Foot was stationed on Prospect Hill and was one of the six Massachusetts regiments constituting the first brigade of the central division and reserve at Cambridge under Brigadier General William Heath.

John Greenwood was soon appointed fife-major. He took part in the repulse of the foraging party that landed on Lechmere's Point, 9 November 1775, and also in the destruction of the houses at Charlestown, 8 January 1776. On this last occasion, General Howe and many of the British officers were witnessing or taking part in General Burgoyne's play, entitled "The Blockade of Boston," at Faneuil Hall, and the sudden cry of alarm caused by the burning of the houses in Charlestown threw the whole audience into confusion. John's father and mother were in the house at the time.

After the British abandoned Boston, the 15th Regiment was ordered to New York and encamped on Staten Island. On 21 April 1776 they sailed for Albany with three other regiments under General William Thompson and arrived at Chambly on May 13th. Patterson's regiment was ordered to Montreal, where the Colonel, during the absence of General Arnold at Sorel, held the command. On the 16th he dispatched a detachment from his regiment, under command of Major Henry Sherburne, to the relief of the Cedars, a small fort about forty-five miles southeast of the city. On the 18th, while looking for teams, Captain Bliss was taken prisoner, but was rescued the next day. Two days later, Major Sherburne, while advancing, fell into an ambuscade, and after fighting bravely the party surrendered to Captain Foster and his body of Regulars, Canadians and savages. Foster now advanced boldly upon Montreal, but Arnold, who had returned, immediately marched against him. The Indians retreated in confusion and John Greenwood was appointed to accompany the American guide (a British deserter) for the purpose of reconnoitering. Together they tracked the enemy as far as Fort Anne and, returning, reached the main body at La Chine by daylight. As his bateaux had to be brought up through the rapids, Arnold was not ready to embark at Fort Anne in pursuit of the enemy until near sunset on the 26th; the boats were gotten off as soon as possible and to Greenwood, who had severely gashed his foot on a stone while reconnoitering, was given the command of a blunderbuss in the bow of one of them. The General was in a canoe paddled by two Caughnawaga Indians, a party of two hundred having joined the Americans at La Chine. On approaching the opposite shore, the enemy were found to be advantageously posted, and opened fire on the boats and canoes from the two brass six-pounders which had been taken at the Cedars; the Americans retired and during the night a cartel was agreed to, four captains being retained as hostages, among whom was Captain Bliss. The British were now rapidly concentrating their forces and advancing from Quebec along either side of the St. Lawrence, and on the 15th of June 1776 the Americans, retreating from Montreal, closed the Canadian campaign. After suffering many hardships and deprivations in their retreat down the lake, the 15th, with three other New England regiments, encamped on Mt. Independence opposite Ticonderoga in August, and towards the close of November were ordered to set out on their weary march for the Delaware. They reached Newton, the headquarters of Washington, on 20 December 1776, and on Christmas night crossed the river and took part in the attack upon Trenton. Greenwood says in his memoirs that by the side of the two brass six-pounders, with which the enemy endeavored to form a battery in King (now Warren) Street, there lay seven dead Hessians and a drum; the drum was such a novelty, being made of brass, that he stopped to examine it, at the same time securing a sword from one of the bodies. The 15th Massachusetts was ordered to conduct the Hessian prisoners down to the ferry and transport them over the river; the Hessian band was also taken, from one of whose number young Greenwood obtained a manuscript music-book which is still preserved.

His time having expired and John Greenwood being worn down by fatigue and sickness, he left the army, 27 December 1776, though the entire regiment was much attached to him and he was offered an ensigny to induce him to stay. He journeyed homeward, partly on foot, partly on the back of an old nag which he had purchased for eleven paper dollars, and crossed the Hudson at King's Ferry.

During the years 1777 and 1778 he was engaged for a time in codfishery. He enlisted again at Boston, 13 February 1778, as fifer in Captain John Hinckley's Light Infantry Company, Lieutenant Colonel Andrew Symmes' Detachment of Guards, under Major General William Heath, and was discharged the 13th of May after three months' service. Early in January 1779 he shipped on board the privateer Cumberland, Commander John Manley, 18 guns, 130 men; his position united the duties of steward's mate and midshipman. Towards the end of the month they were taken by the English frigate Pomona, 36 guns, and confined in the dungeons at Bridgetown, Barbadoes. After an incarceration of five months John Greenwood reached the French island of Martinique on a cartel, and through the kindness of his father's cousin, Captain Winslow, whom he met there, he obtained a passage homeward.

In November he shipped again from Boston with Captain David Porter (father of Commander David Porter) in a vessel carrying 28 guns, 150 men, and during their cruise in the West Indies thirty prizes were taken. While undergoing repairs in the harbor of Port-au-Prince, the vessel sank and Greenwood proceeded homeward on the letter-of-marque brig General Lincoln, 6 guns, 25 men, commanded by Captain John Carnes of Salem, on which he acted as carpenter. The General Lincoln was taken, 21 May 1780, by the frigate Iris (formerly the U. S. ship Hancock), 32 guns, Captain James Hawker, on its way from Charleston, S. C., to New York. By skillful manoeuvring Greenwood managed to escape when landing at New York and soon after went to New London on a cartel. His next voyage was on the letter-of-marque Aurora, 16 guns, Captain David Porter, which visited the harbor of Port-au-Prince in the West Indies and L'Orient, France, and returned safely to Boston. After another voyage to Tobago, Greenwood commenced trading on the Chesapeake, but was soon taken by the notorious bargeman and pirate, Whaland. Together with two other men, however, he succeeded in recapturing his schooner and reached Baltimore with his prisoners in safety. He afterwards sailed from Baltimore for St. Eustatius as master of a schooner carrying six guns, but off Antigua he was overhauled by the British ship-of-war Santa Margareta, 44 guns, Captain Elliot Salter, and carried into Kingston, Jamaica, and thence to New York, from where he was conveyed on a cartel to New London.

This was the fourth time he had been made a prisoner of war. After this he made several trading voyages to the southward and eastward on a coasting schooner for Samuel Richards, a hardware merchant of Boston.

The war had now terminated and after the British troops had evacuated New York, John Greenwood proceeded to that city. Unable to procure any position on shipboard he commenced the business of turning and cane making, which he had learned from his father. After making some rather unprofitable trading trips to Charleston, S. C., for his friend, J. Quincy, he took over from the latter his store and business at No. 199 Water Street, at the northeast corner of Wall Street, opposite the old Coffee House of Cornelius Bradford, and there established himself as a mathematical instrument-maker and ivory-turner. To these branches he soon added the practice of dentistry. He succeeded so well in the latter profession that he sent for his brother, William Pitt (22), and in 1788 for his brother, Clarke, to whom he gave up the mechanical part of his business. He rapidly became eminent in the profession of dentistry.

In 1789 he became surgeon dentist to George Washington, who had been inaugurated in New York on April 30th of that year. Because his name has come down to the present generation as the "surgeon dentist" of the first President, it is usual, mistakenly, to throw on the shoulders of John Greenwood the censure for Stuart's portrait of Washington, justly criticized for its constrained and distorted mouth. John Greenwood made dental apparati no better and no worse than his contemporaries in the same mechanical art. The outward lateral pressure from the curved spiral springs which united the upper and lower mandibles when in the mouth was always being exerted at its full force. But so long as any natural teeth stood firmly in the jaws and passed through the solid bonework of these mandibles, holes being made in them for that purpose, they acted as so many stiff pegs to resist the outward pressure and prevent its showing in the projection of the lips. Such natural teeth did exist in Washington's mouth, the last one being removed, as it appears, during the winter of 1795-'96. It was just previous to this that Washington gave sittings both to Rembrandt Peale and Gilbert Stuart. The portrait by the former artist shows no distortion of the mouth. Stuart, however, was not pleased with his effort, and other sittings were accorded him about April 1796 when the President was wearing another set of ivory teeth which, meanwhile, had been manufactured for the emergency by a practitioner of Philadelphia named James Gardette. This latter set was soon rejected and the services of Mr. Greenwood again brought into requisition. Letters to him are extant giving particular directions, accompanied by diagrams, about the formation of the new mandibles, so as to obviate as much as possible the now, almost unavoidable, bulging out of the lips. The above statement is corroborated by the following letter, dated Philadelphia, 27 March 1859: "Dear Sir—In answer to yours of the 22nd, Washington sat to me in the Autumn of 1795—and at the same time to Stuart, having then in his mouth the Teeth made by your Grandfather in 1790. Not satisfied with this Portrait, Stuart painted another Portrait in the spring of 1796, when the General had in his mouth an Ivory Sett made by James Gardette, which caused his mouth to be changed. Dr. Harris, of Baltimore, showed me one half of your Grandfather's set, small and beautifully made, telling me that the other half was in your father's possession—and I have been told that the rejected sett, made by J. Gardette, is in the possession of a Gentleman in Savannah. Respectfully yours, Rembrandt Peale."

John Greenwood was evidently the leading dentist of New York in 1800. Here is his advertisement as it appeared in the directory of that year:

"J. Greenwood, dentist to the late President George Washington, informs the public that he continues to perform every operation incident to the teeth and gums, from the fixing-in of a single tooth to a complete set. The approbation which the late illustrious Washington was Extract from George Washington's letter: Jan. 6, 1799.

“I shall always prefer your services to that of any other in the line of your present profession.”

“N. B. His prices are very moderate, as no person can exceed him in facility and neatness of performance.

“J. Greenwood may be consulted at his home, No. 13 Park, which is the fourth door (toward St. Paul's Church) from the theatre.”

So the dentist's chair in which George Washington sat was within a stone's throw of the church pew which is on the itinerary of every sightseer in New York.

On the presentation of his portrait in 1847 to the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, a letter of thanks was received by his eldest son from Dean W. R. H. Andy which said, in part: “The Faculty value the Presentation most highly, not only in consequence of the distinguished individual himself, but most especially as being the Father of American Dentistry, as well as the Dentist to the illustrious Father of our glorious Republic. But they value it most highly in another sense—And that is its being ever present before the eyes of the student, constantly and silently, tho' yet as powerfully pointing to an individual whose eminence in the profession it should be his pride, as well as the height of his ambition to attain to.” The portrait was a copy from one by William Lovett of Boston.

A copy of the New York Star in 1837 has the following: “A Curious Historical Fact—The first rough model of a steamboat made by Fulton in this city was cut out of a common shingle, shaped like a Mackerel, with the paddles placed further in front than behind, like the fins of a fish. The paddle-wheel had been first put in the rear, on the sculling principle, but was abandoned on consulting with Mr. Greenwood, the well-known ingenious dentist of this city, now deceased, in whose possession the model remained for many years. Old Admiral Landais, whom many of our readers recollect as the enemy of Paul Jones, was also in frequent consultation with Greenwood at the time. He recommended the paddle-wheel to be placed in the stem and to be moved by a tunnel-shaped sail, which was to catch the wind even when it blew directly ahead, and thus communicate the power by reaction to the wheel." In support of this account, it may be said that the author of these notes always heard that his grandfather, John Greenwood, came out from France in 1806 on the same ship as Robert Fulton, and that later on they had consultations over the right place for the paddle-wheel (fore or aft) on the proposed steamboat, and used a flat shingle for a model.

John Greenwood was married by Dr. John Rogers in the Presbyterian Church to Elizabeth Weaver, 22 March 1788.¹ She was born 6 March 1764, the second daughter of William and Jane (Coesart) Weaver of New York.² Her father, a well-to-do and influential citizen, is the person whom Gordon mentions in his American Revolution as having been "wounded in the calf of his leg by a cannon-ball" on the night of the 23 of August 1775 when the British ship Asia fired upon the Battery. William was the only surviving son of Samuel Weaver, Esq., who came from England with his wife, Anne Nettleton, and their infant son. He was admitted a freeman of the City of New York 10 April 1722.

John Greenwood died at his residence, No. 11 Park Row, near the Theatre, 16 November 1819, aged sixty years, having suffered some months previous from a stroke of apoplexy. "He was a venerable man of great originality and shrewdness of mind on all subjects, a great reader and deep thinker, generous and chivalrous in disposition, of ready wit and full of the lore and anecdote of the past."³ Though stern and decided when necessity required, his character was ever marked by a most lively and cheerful temperament, at once warm, open-hearted and impulsive; he was, moreover, possessed of great ingenuity and foresight, while the fact of his having been four times deprived of everything he possessed in the world bears evidence of an energy and perseverance indomitable and untiring. In his own memoirs occur the following words: "Whoever reads these lines which I have hastily written, will I hope profit by them and learn contentment. Seek not to deprive another of this great blessing, but always be ready rather to suffer yourself than to give offence; for, though I well know this may seem an impossibility, yet we may in some degree mitigate our own faults. That we have faults who will deny—'tis in our nature, and he that is without them, let him heave the first stone!" The best portrait extant of Mr. Greenwood is a crayon profile done by M. Roy in Paris in November 1806, from which a small copper-plate etching was made by the artist with Doctor Greenwood's name and address engraved thereon, the cards struck from this being distributed among his customers. A miniature on ivory, earlier than either of the portraits described, was done in 1788 by John Ramage, of New York, and it represents him in scarlet coat, white silk embroidered waistcoat and powdered hair.

Among other provisions in John Greenwood's will, dated 8 July 1815, is found the following: "Item: I give unto my eldest surviving son my gold watch and chain with that valuable relict hanging to the chain, the only or last Tooth that remained growing in the mouth of our late and worthy President George Washington, which tooth he sent to me from Mount Vernon, Virginia State, as may be seen in his own handwriting now in my possession. The said Tooth must be kept as a relict and given to the next male Heir of my children." This relict, as well as a number of the original letters of George Washington to Doctor John Greenwood, are still in the possession of the family.

The Park Theatre was burned 25 May 1820, and the next day the following card appeared in the Daily Advertiser: "The widow of John Greenwood, and family, respectfully take this public manner of expressing their sincere thanks to the members comprising the different Fire and Hose Companies of this city, as well as to their friends who, on this occasion, used their strenuous and unremitted exertions to prevent the conflagration from destroying their property south of the Theatre, and through which, they are happy to say, it has been entirely saved."

Mrs. Elizabeth (Weaver) Greenwood died in New York, 13 January 1831, aged sixty-six years, and was buried in the grounds attached to the Presbyterian Brick Church, corner of Nassau and Beekman Streets, by the side of her husband. When the building was demolished in 1856 their remains were removed to the Greenwood vault in the Marble Cemetery, New York, and later transferred to Greenwood Cemetery.

William Pitt Greenwood was born in Boston. He learned the various occupations pursued by his father, and in 1787 is mentioned in the will of his grandaunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Hale, as an "ivory-turner." In 1788 his brother, John, invited him to come to New York and assist him in his business of mathematical instrument-maker, but after a short time there he went to Savannah, and soon returned north and was practising dentistry in Salem, Mass., in 1790. In 1796 he was established in Boston in the same profession; he and his father, Isaac Greenwood, and Josiah Flagg being the only three registered dentists in the city at that time.

He was married, 23 July 1796, to Mary Langdon, by Reverend John Clarke of the First Church of Boston. She was born 14 August 1775, daughter of Captain John and Mary (Walley) Langdon of Boston, and sister of Thomas Walley Langdon, who married Jane Weaver Greenwood (35).¹

From the Boston Mercury of 6 June 1797, it appears that Doctor Greenwood then combined with his profession of dentistry the sale of pianofortes and guitars. In 1798 he occupied a brick house in Common Street, opposite the Park Street Church, belonging to William Phillips, Jr., and later resided for a while at the corner of Fleet and Garden Court Streets in the house which his father had recently occupied, the site being opposite the garden of the residence of Governor Hutchinson. Doctor Greenwood used to point out the spot, a few rods from his father's earlier residence on Salem Street, next to Christ Church, where a battalion of British troops were quartered in 1775. He and an aged friend, Mr. Cazneau, saw them march off "in high feather" on the morning of June 17th, and saw many brought back wounded in the afternoon. He also remembered seeing the mortally wounded Major Pitcairn as he was carried through Charter Street. In 1805 Doctor Greenwood resided in Cole Lane, afterwards known as Portland Street, where he remained for some years.

It was through the interest and energy of Doctor William Pitt Greenwood that the old Greenwood tomb in Copp's Hill Cemetery was preserved in the family, and was repaired and restored about 1808. As has been stated in an earlier account, this plot had been purchased in 1722 by Samuel Greenwood (5), grandson of Nathaniel, the immigrant, who had built the original tomb and had the Greenwood coat-of-arms cut upon it. As restored by William Pitt Greenwood, the tomb is a massive rectangular structure of granite, enclosed by an iron railing. It is situated on the southerly side of the cemetery, on the west side of the pathway running north and south, about 25 feet north from Hull Street. It is near the southeast angle of that portion of the ground purchased in 1707 from Judge Samuel Sewall; in this part are to be found the most ancient tombs. The easterly side of the path alluded to was a wall overlooking ground purchased in 1809 and then laid out as the New North Burying Ground. On the heavy granite coping of this wall opposite the Greenwood tomb was originally cut the name and date "SAMUEL GREENWOOD MDCCXXII." The tomb has now been furnished at one end with heavy wooden doors over which is carved the name Greenwood, and upon the granite slab over the whole a small cross has been cut in relief. Into that end of the tomb which faces the pathway the old dark slatestone entablature, bearing the family arms, has been inserted; no date is apparent on the slab; the left-hand upper corner has been fractured and subsequently repaired, and the number upon the slab is "No. 57."

Mr. William H. Montague of Boston furnishes a lively anecdote relating how Doctor Greenwood rescued the family tomb from passing into the hands of strangers. While making a visit to the cemetery on the Fourth of July 1808, Doctor Greenwood found workmen busy invading the sacred precincts. He immediately demanded by what authority they were "disturbing the bones of his ancestors." The person who was in charge of the work claimed that his employer had recently acquired title to the property from an old lady who lived in Marblehead. Forbidding the workmen "at their peril to disturb the tomb further," Doctor Greenwood without loss of time took horse and chaise and proceeded to drive the fifteen miles to Marblehead, accompanied by the Honorable William Sullivan, an eminent counsellor-at-law of the day in Boston. According to Mr. Montague, "from the temperament of Doctor Greenwood and from what he related to me he did not suffer the grass to grow under the horses' feet until they reached Marblehead." The old lady in question was found to be his father's cousin, Miss Mary Greenwood (5-VI), "single-woman and spinster," who on the 18th of February 1807 had sold to Andrew Eliot Symmes of Boston, for $30, "all that tomb and the land belonging therewith, situate in the North burying place, on or near Copp's Hill, so-called in Boston, there erected by my late father, Samuel Greenwood, or belonging to him at his decease, in or near the southeast corner of the said burying-ground and distinguished by a stone over it which bears the name of Greenwood and coat-of-arms dated 1722, or however otherwise described, with the privileges and appurtenances thereof. Witness: Isaac Mansfield, Justice of Peace." ¹ The result of Doctor Greenwood's intervention was that after Mr. Symmes had reconveyed the tomb to Miss Greenwood, that venerable lady, 3 April 1809, sold to Isaac, John, Clark and William Pitt Greenwood and their sister, Mrs. Mary (Greenwood) Gay, children of her cousin, Isaac Greenwood (13), "all right which I and the other children and descendants and heirs of my late father Samuel Greenwood, late of Boston, dec., who was the uncle of said Isaac, dec., had, have, or might have to or in a certain Tomb in the North Burying Place, at or near Copps' Hill etc., now in the seisin and possession of said Wm. Pitt Greenwood, etc. Witness: Nathan Bowen, Justice of Peace, Joseph H. Sewall, Essex. Acknowledged before said Bowen by Mary Greenwood, 27 February 1810." ² Doctor Greenwood, as stated before, thereupon proceeded to repair and rebuild the upper part of the tomb, and caused the old slab bearing the coat-of-arms to be reset in one end.

In 1816 William Pitt Greenwood, Thomas Parsons and Thomas Barnes were practising dentistry in Boston. In 1832 Doctor Greenwood removed to Roxbury. About 1842 he received the degree of D.D.S. from the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery. The American Journal and Library of Dental Science for September 1842 states that Doctor William P. Greenwood was present at a meeting of the American Society of Dental Surgeons lately held in Boston, and continues: "Doctor Greenwood has been a practitioner for upwards of fifty years, and although he is eighty years of age, his step is still elastic and his mind possessed of the vigor and freshness of youth. After the adjournment of the evening session of the first day of the meeting, he gave a highly interesting account of the state of the profession fifty years ago in this country. At that time, he said, the meaning of the word dentist, in many places, was hardly known, and consequently little or no attention was paid to the use of the means for the preservation of the teeth. . . .” In 1845 he was elected resident member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, Boston.

Doctor Greenwood returned to Boston before his death, which occurred there 10 May 1851, on the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birth. He was buried in Copp’s Hill Cemetery. His portrait was later in the possession of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Latham Hayward,¹ and a miniature was in the possession of his granddaughter, Miss Barrett of Roxbury. His industry is well evinced by his unaided success in life; his honesty and truthfulness were unbounded, the least shadow of deception or unfairness calling forth his severe condemnation upon the transgressor, be his position ever so high, his kinship ever so near. He possessed great energy of character and action, which is illustrated by the following anecdote: It was proposed on one occasion to give the officiating clergyman of a certain church in Boston leave of absence for three months on account of ill health. The church committee, comprising the wealthiest men of the society, voted that the edifice be closed for the time. Doctor Greenwood, who was a constant attendant and a great advocate of churchgoing, opposed this movement on the ground that those of the society who possessed no country seats to go to should not be deprived of attending their own church, and declared that he himself would go, even if he went alone. No heed was given to his words which were regarded as a mere whim, whereupon the following Sunday Doctor Greenwood went to the sexton, directed him to open the church at the usual hour and, entering, occupied the desk and read through the entire morning service with the old sexton as sole congregation. This he did not have to repeat, for on the next Lord’s Day a minister was provided, and some were heard to express the wish that there were more men like Doctor Greenwood.

Mrs. Mary (Langdon) Greenwood, his widow, died 5 June 1855 and was buried in Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge. Allen in his American Biographies says: "Her mind received the first culture, and she had great excellencies of character." Her miniature as a young girl with light curls and a straw flat tied down under her chin was in the possession of her daughter, Mrs. Hayward of Roxbury.

It is related of Mary Greenwood that when a young girl she wished to learn to play upon the guitar. Her father refused to gratify what he thought was a mere whim, whereupon, with the inherent ingenuity of the family, she constructed one herself from an old bellows and some string. With this rude affair, rivalling in its primitiveness the testudo of Hermes, she soon became so skillful that her father was induced to import a regular instrument for her. She was accustomed, it is said, to read over the Waverly Novels once a year, and was a personal friend of Hannah Adams, the authoress.

Her husband, George Gay, merchant of Dedham, Mass., was born in that place 16 December 1772, the son of Timothy (1746–1823) and Abigail Shuttleworth (1748–1824) Gay. He died of black fever 24 November 1805.³ George Gay was descended in the fifth generation from the ancestor, John Gay, as follows: John, Jonathan, Jonathan, Timothy; it appears that the Mary Gay who married John Ventiman Greenwood (119) in Nova Scotia was descended from the same ancestor in the sixth generation as follows: John, Nathaniel, Ebenezer, Martin, Samuel; which would make George Gay and Mary (Gay) Greenwood third cousins, once removed.⁴

After her husband's death Mrs. Gay lived in Dedham for many years and cared for her aged mother until the latter's death in 1820. In May 1829 she removed to Providence, where her son was in business, and in 1832 she went to Boston with him, where she became a member of the Federal Street, or Twelfth Congregational Church. She remained in her son's home in Washington Street, Boston, until her death in 1839. Her property was left to her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Eliza Gay, who died without issue and bequeathed it to a nephew, William

- II. George Henry Gay, b. May 1804, bapt. 5 December 1805 at the Episcopal Church, Dedham. He was baptized as Henry Gale Gay, but his name was changed by act of Legislature, 24 February 1818, at his mother's request. He started in business in Dedham and Boston, but in 1829 removed to Providence, where he went into business for himself. Here he studied and learned the profession of dentistry with a Doctor Flagg. During the winters of 1831 and '32 he attended medical lectures in Boston and continued the study of dentistry with Dr. Flagg's brother. He married, 4 June 1835,¹ Eliza A. Carlisle of Providence. He then settled in Boston, where he became successful in his profession. The Boston Medical Journal for 3 April 1839 has the following notice: "Some very ingenious specimens of workmanship in gold have been shown us of late, intended to remedy the effects of cleft palate. Doctor George H. Gay, an operative dentist, who resides at No. 252 Washington Street, Boston, seems to have given particular attention to this kind of mal-formation, which he has found means to remedy in a way that calls forth our admiration." Soon after his mother's death he removed his residence to Dedham, while he continued his office in Boston. He died soon from hemorrhage of the lungs, 28 June 1840, at the early age of thirty-six years. He was buried from the Stone Chapel in Boston, his cousin, the Reverend Francis W. P. Greenwood, officiating. His widow died 10 October 1847, aged forty-seven years.

Mary Greenwood's first husband, Edmond Wellington, was baptized 23 August 1772, son of Thomas and Elizabeth (Dix) Wellington² of Waltham. She was his second wife. He married (1) 20 September 1794 Eunice Adams, who died 25 December 1806, aged thirty-nine years, leaving six children. He was a butcher in Watertown, Mass.

Edmond Wellington died in Milton, Vermont, and his widow married (2), at Lowell, Mass., 30 September 1834, Henry Bailey of Salem, N. H. She died in Lowell, Mass. There were no children by the second marriage.

Rebecca Greenwood was born in Newton, Mass. Her husband, Nathaniel Prentiss Banks, was superintendent of a cotton factory in Waltham. He is said to have woven the first cotton cloth in the United States. Mr. Banks died in Waltham 24 April 1857, aged seventy-three years and eight months. In the death records he is listed as a carpenter, parents unknown. The death certificate of his son, Hiram, says Nathaniel was born in New Hampshire.³

Children of Nathaniel Prentiss and Rebecca (Greenwood) Banks:

- I. Nathaniel Sartle Prentiss⁷ Banks, b. 30 January 1816; m. (int. 13 March 1847) Mary I. Palmer; d. 1 September 1894. At an early age he went to work in the cotton mills, from which fact in later years there clung to him the name of "the Bobbin Boy of Massachusetts." In 1837 he was working in a large machine shop in North Cambridge. Admitted to the Bar in 1848, he opened an office in Boston and was elected that same year to the Legislature of Massachusetts as Representative from Waltham. In 1851 he was elected to both the Senate and the House in Massachusetts, but took his seat in the House and was chosen Speaker to which position he was reelected in 1852, and in the fall was elected a Member of Congress by the Democratic party. In 1854 he was again a successful candidate for Congress by a seven thousand majority. In 1856 he was chosen Speaker of the House. From 1857 to 1860 he was Governor of Massachusetts, elected by the Republican party. On 16 May 1861 he was appointed Major General of Volunteers in the United States Army. He served throughout the Civil War and resigned in May 1864.¹ He was a member of Congress 1853-7, 1865-73, 1875-77, 1889-91; LL.D. Harvard 1858, Williams, and Amherst 1860. Mr. Banks died 1 September 1894. He had several children, of whom only a son and two daughters survived him. He was a cousin of Elias Howe, Jr., inventor of the sewing machine, who was born in Spencer, Mass., in 1819. A statue of Governor Banks was unveiled at the State House, 16 September 1908.

- II. Rebecca⁷ Banks, b. 26 April 1818; m. at Waltham 25 November 1841 Nathaniel Carter Sanger of Portsmouth, N. H. He was baptized 9 August 1818, son of Daniel Sanger by his third wife, Emma Carter.²

His marriage to Eliza M. Burroughs took place in Waltham, Mass. She was born in Amesbury, 24 March 1800 and died 18 June 1876. Speaking of his own life, Reverend Thomas Jefferson Greenwood observes: "From my boyhood up to my 29th year I was employed almost exclusively in the cotton manufacturing business, and was for several years in the position of Overseer in Newton, and last, in Lowell; my leisure time always being occupied in intellectual pursuits more congenial to me than the post of a practical 'Operative.' By such means I obtained what little preparation I had for the Gospel Ministry. Near the commencement of my labors in the ministry, I spent about six months in Hingham, where our little boy died February 22, 1830. In the month of June following, I was ordained as a Universalist minister, and pastor of the Universalist Church and Society in Marlborough, Mass., where I remained fourteen years. During this period I was twice elected and served two years (1840 and 1843) in the State Senate of Massachusetts. In 1844 I removed to New London, Conn., and became pastor of the Universalist Church in that city. Here I remained until November 1848, when I removed to Dover, N. H., where I sustained the Pastoral Charge about ten years, and in May 1858 I removed to this place (Malden, Mass.) where I still reside."

It appears that at one time, probably about 1858, he was nominated by the Democratic Convention of the 6th Massachusetts District as a candidate for Congress to run against his nephew, General Banks.

The 225th anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company was held in Boston 2 June 1863. During the exercises an original hymn and a Patriot's Prayer by the Reverend Thomas Jefferson Greenwood were sung. He delivered the annual sermon at the Chauncey Street Church, after which a dinner followed at Faneuil Hall. He died 12 September 1874, in Malden, Mass.¹

John Danforth Greenwood was born in London at the residence of William Grimaldi in St. George's Parish, Hanover Square. He was christened 8 February 1803, his godfathers being William Grimaldi and Thomas Danforth. Mr. Danforth, son of Honorable Samuel Danforth of Cambridge, Mass., was a Loyalist. Mr. Grimaldi painted a miniature of John Danforth Greenwood as a boy with a tambourine "for my friend Mrs. Greenwood."

John attended the children's school kept by Miss Daw at Turnham-Green. Both parents having died by 1815, he was brought up by Miss Daw and later attended Cheam School. He studied surgery with Mr. Thomas Graham of Turnham-Green and attended lectures in London in 1823 and 1824. His uncle, Captain Samuel Adam Greenwood, offered him an appointment in India, but instead he spent a year in study at Paris and Edinburgh through the liberality of Doctor Sproull, his uncle's friend. In 1826 he returned to London, where he obtained his diploma from the College of Surgery. He located at Mitcham, Surrey, eight miles from London, and eventually succeeded Doctor Parrott, the medical practitioner of that place.

Doctor Greenwood was married in Mitcham Church, 18 May 1831, to Sarah Field. She was born 15 November 1809, daughter of John Field, wax bleacher of Lambeth. A few years after their marriage he was threatened with pulmonary disease and temporarily gave up his profession. They lived for a time near London and also at Charenton, near Paris. Meeting with reverses of fortune, he set out for New Zealand in the Phoebe with his wife and nine children, and arrived there early in 1843. At that time it had been a colony for only a year or two, and life went on in two tents while he was building "Woodlands" from trees felled on the spot where the house was built. John Danforth Greenwood and his wife were always helpful and sympathetic with the neighbors, English and Maori, to whom their house, the only large one in the place, was never shut. He was the doctor, magistrate and referee in any difficulty, quarrel or sorrow. In those days his services as a physician were often rendered gratis, and a ham or a cheese was not an unusual fee for mending a broken leg many miles distant through the swamps. He held the position of Member of the Council for two years, and for some time edited the Nelson newspaper. He became Inspector of the Provincial Schools, having been chairman of the committee appointed to inquire and report on the subject of education. He was offered the post of Principal of Nelson College, which he accepted. On leaving it about 1865 he was appointed Sergeant-at-Arms to the House of Representatives at Wellington, the duties of which office carried him to that place every year for three or four months. In 1877 he resigned on a pension and resided upon his farm in the lovely, fertile valley of Motueka, province of Nelson, until his death. Some colored sketches from the pencil of Mrs. Greenwood, of the farmhouse and surrounding scenery, are in the family of her husband's cousin, Mrs. Solomon Stoddard (29) of Northampton, Mass. A view of the Alpine-like valley of Motueka, with the snow-capped Mt. Arthur in the background, may be seen in Hochstetter's New Zealand (Eng. Edition, 1867). When Doctor and Mrs. Greenwood celebrated their golden wedding on the 18th of May 1881, they had living eleven children, thirty grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.¹

Mrs. Sarah (Field) Greenwood died at Motueka 13 December 1889. Her obituary says that she was full of life and vigor to the last days of her life, having but recently returned from North Island in various parts of which she had been visiting her children, and that when she died "she passed to her rest a model wife, mother, and colonist whose memory will to their life's end be honored by all who knew her, whether casually or intimately, and by the latter the most."

Doctor Greenwood survived his wife by only six months and died at Motueka, 13 June 1890, aged eighty-seven years. His obituary says that the funeral services were read by the Bishop of Nelson and that it was a most effective scene, as there was a large gathering of white-haired old men from all parts of the district who had assembled to pay this last mark of respect to an old and honored friend, and "a more genial friend and companion it would have been impossible to meet."

Frances Elizabeth Greenwood was born in Barbadoes, W. I. When she was two years old her parents removed to Portland, Maine, and soon after settled in Boston, where she was baptized 17 July 1814 at King's Chapel. Her father and mother both having died by 1817, she was brought up in the family of Mr. Solomon Stoddard at Northampton, Mass., and educated at the Hartford Female Seminary, where she was a pupil in 1828 under the Beecher sisters. She married in Northampton, 29 May 1838, Professor Solomon Stoddard, Jr. He was born 29 November 1800, eldest child of Solomon and Sarah (Tappan) Stoddard; Yale College 1820; Professor of Languages at Middlebury College, Vermont; collaborator with Professor E. Louisa Caroline Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at King's Chapel. Her parents having both died before she was seven years old, she was adopted by Colonel Joseph May of Boston and lived with him until his death, which occurred on 27 February 1841. On the 31st of May 1843 she became the second wife of George William Bond of Boston.¹

George William Bond was born 22 June 1811, eldest son of George and Ann Sigourney (Hammet) Bond. He was educated at the Boston Latin School and at the famous Round Hill School in Northampton, Mass. After spending some years in the counting room of Daniel Denny, he was admitted as a partner in the firm of Whitwell, Bond & Company, then one of the leading business houses of Boston. He married (1), 11 January 1833, Sophia Augusta May, by whom he had three sons and a daughter. His wife died 16 November 1841. In 1837 he formed a partnership with his father and brother, and in 1843 became senior partner in the firm of Bond, Wyman & Arklay, engaged in the Dundee business. On 31 May 1843 he married (2) Louisa Caroline Greenwood. They resided in Roxbury, Mass. "After 1848, Mr. Bond was engaged in the wool brokerage business, being the senior partner in the firm of Geo. Wm. Bond & Co. He became a remarkable expert in wools and was twice employed by the United States Government to prepare standard samples of wool for the use of the customs officers. His report upon the classification of wools is recognized as the highest authority upon the subject. Harvard University in 1874 conferred upon him the honorary degree of A.M., President Eliot at the time remarking that it was in recognition of 'his public spirit and of his thorough knowledge of the important industries of wool growing and manufacturing.' Mr. Bond was one of the original members of the Church of the Disciples and was the lifelong friend of, and fellow worker with, the late James Freeman Clarke. He was chairman emeritus of the pastoral committee of that church at the time of his death. He worked conscientiously for the poor and suffering and he was always ready to aid his good wife, whose life closed only a few months ago, in her countless gentle charities.”¹ He died 29 May 1892, aged eighty-one years.

James Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at King's Chapel. He was adopted after his mother's death in 1817 by Colonel Joseph May. He went South about 1836, and at the outbreak of the Civil War he was in business in Montgomery, Ala. Sacrificing everything, he came North, arriving in New York the same day Fort Sumter was fired upon. Thereafter, for twenty-nine years he was connected with the Thames Iron Works at Norwich, Conn., during which time he was a leader in the religious affairs of the community. Brown was taught the business of mathematical instrument making by Mary Greenwood's father in New York, and later carried on the business himself in Water Street. He then went into the hardware trade, in which he was at first successful, but, unfortunately, he later met with reverses due to speculation in lumber. Subsequently they moved to John Greenwood was born in Providence, R. I. In 1811 he was attending William H. Bogle's School in New York, being at that time under the care of his uncle, John Greenwood (21). In 1813 he began the study of law under Colonel Aaron Burr, who was then located in Vesey Street, New York. The form of the original attest is as follows:

“This Agreement testifieth that John Greenwood, 2nd, born the sixth day of November in the Year of our Lord one thousand and seven hundred and ninety eight, by and with the consent of his father Isaac Greenwood, hath put him-

 JNO. GREENWOOD & ISAAC GREENWOOD [SEAL]
 JOHN A. SMITH (Master in Chancery).”

John Greenwood was a practising attorney in Colonel Burr's office at 61 Vesey Street as early as 1818. He left him before the stipulated time had expired, and in 1819 continued business at his father's residence, 130 Front Street. In October of that year he was called to the Bar. Mr. Greenwood rapidly became successful and rose to eminence in his profession. In 1824 he went into partnership with Edgar Evertson, their law firm continuing for five years. About 1828 he removed his residence to Brooklyn, to which city he withdrew all his business some ten years later. In 1833 the village of Brooklyn obtained an amended charter through his efforts. He was Supreme Court Commissioner and Master and Examiner in Chancery, and afterwards City Counsellor in 1842. He was appointed to the position of First Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, King's County, on 27 January 1843, which office he continued to fill with the highest honor until his resignation, which went into effect 31 December 1854. He then resumed the profession of law in company with Richard H. Tucker, Esq., of Brooklyn, retiring from active work in 1867 and confining himself to reference cases.

John Greenwood married, 31 July 1823, Catherine Dobbins. She was born in 1801, second daughter of James and Margaret (Ridell) Dobbins¹ of New York. Catharine Dobbins was a cousin of Margaret and Mary McKay, who married Clark (37) and Isaac John (36) Greenwood, respectively. Her mother, Margaret Ridell, came to this country about 1795 from County Armagh, Ireland, with her sister, Elizabeth Ridell. They were nieces of Reverend Doctor John Ridell, of the Associate Reformed Church, and clerk of the first Pennsylvania Synod. The two girls lived in New York with their cousin, Doctor John Ridell. Margaret married James Dobbins, a grocer, and Elizabeth (b. 27 May, 1777), married John McKay, a china merchant of New York, father of Margaret and Mary McKay. Mrs. Catharine (Dobbins) Greenwood died 26 July 1835.

John Greenwood married (2), 1 September 1836, Fanny Lammar. She was born 9 January 1813, daughter of Joseph Lammar, and educated in Vienna in the Roman Catholic faith. Her father was a furrier in Maiden Lane as early as 1809. She died 1 December 1881 and was buried in Greenwood Cemetery.

Judge Greenwood was not an orator, but he was an easy and forcible speaker. His language was carefully chosen and was ever precise and elegant. His most famous public effort was his defense of Colonel Aaron Burr, an address delivered at the Academy of Music before an overwhelming and distinguished audience. The theme and the occasion were significant and long remembered. Judge Greenwood was possessed of an ample fortune. His accomplishments as a jurist and a linguist were not more pronounced than his talent for music. At one time he was organist of the Church of the Saviour. For many years he was President of the Hamilton Literary Association, out of which grew the Hamilton Club. He was an incorporator and the first Vice-President of the Long Island Historical Society, second Vice-President of the Philharmonic Society, and one of the early members of the Board of Education. He was a director and a member of the Executive Committee of the Academy of Music, a Trustee of the City Hospital and a Director of the Nassau Fire Insurance Company. Judge Greenwood died, at his home in Brooklyn, 11 December 1887, aged eighty-nine years.

Jane Weaver Greenwood was born in New York City. Her first husband, David Mills Ross, was a young lawyer of some promise who had studied with Richard Riker, the City Recorder. He died 18 May 1824, aged thirty-nine years. His widow married (2) Thomas Walley Langdon of Boston, a former Smyrna merchant and trader.

Thomas Walley Langdon was a son of Captain John Langdon and Mary Walley, only daughter of Thomas and Mary (Kneeland) Walley, of Boston.¹ Captain Langdon's sister, Joanna (wife of Ebenezer Frothingham), was the mother of Reverend Nathaniel L. Frothingham, D.D.; his son, John Walley Langdon (d. 17 April 1854), was the father of the well-known merchant, Joseph Langdon of Smyrna; of his seven daughters, Mary married Doctor William Pitt Greenwood (22) of Boston, Elizabeth married William Lovett, the artist, of Boston, Anne Hurd became the second wife of John Bellows of Boston, Abigail Harris married Giles Lodge, merchant of Boston. Thomas Walley Langdon was a man of much information and of pleasing converse, and an able linguist. During the War of 1812 while running a supercargo from Norfolk, Va., to Lisbon, he was taken prisoner by the Magicienne, Captain Gordon, and carried into Gibraltar. He was in Smyrna during the rebellion of Ypsilanti 1822-'30, and witnessed some of the sufferings of the Greek inhabitants. He died in New York 17 December 1860, aged seventy-nine years.¹ Mrs. Langdon did not long survive her husband. She died 29 April 1861, aged seventy-two years, leaving no issue. They were both interred in the Langdon vault in St. Paul's churchyard, New York.

A handsome portrait of Mrs. Langdon and her hand-embroidered muslin wedding gown and lace veil are in the possession of the author's family, and another more beautiful portrait of her is owned by Charles H. Voorhees (60-I).

36. ISAAC JOHN⁶ GREENWOOD (*John*⁵ (21), *Isaac*⁴, *Isaac*³, *Samuel*², *Nathaniel*¹), b. 17 July 1795; m. (1) 28 November 1822 Sarah Vanderhoof Bogart; m. (2) 17 July 1832 Mary McKay; d. 14 May 1865.

Isaac John Greenwood was born in New York. At an early age he attended the school of Isaac Kingsland at 44 Barclay Street, and later he was sent to the schools of Gad Ely and Elbert Pickett. In 1807 he went to William H. Bogle's in Vesey Street, and in 1809 to John De La Noy. Mr. Bogle, who taught the higher branches of an English and classical education, had come to New York in the expectation of filling a vacancy in the faculty of Columbia College. About 1810 Admiral Pierre Landais, a friend of his father, was anxious to instruct young Greenwood in naval architecture, but he preferred a mercantile life and entered the shipping and commission store of Jackson & Whitehorn at 103 Front Street. Soon afterwards he received a severe wound in the right thigh, accidentally inflicted by his brother, Clark, with a pair of snuffers. While recovering from its effects he applied himself to the study of French, Spanish and Italian with D. V. Dubayle. He also took up drawing and water colors with Signor Nicolo Calyo, who was a pupil of Rudolpho, painter to Murat. Isaac John Greenwood excelled in drawing and in later life added to it the accomplishment of oil painting.

Having recovered from his injury he joined a troop of horse and learned the cavalry menage and broad-sword exercise from Colonel John Amelot De La Croix, who kept a military school in the old circus in Anthony Street, near Broadway. In 1811 the firm of Jackson & Whitehorn failed, and Greenwood devoted the following year to the study of mathematics, surveying, practical gauging and navigation, first with Mr. D. P. Adams and later with Mr. James Thompson. Early in 1813 he went with the firm of Benjamin L. Swan & Company (later Otis & Swan), and during the three years spent with them became well acquainted with mercantile life. He visited Canada for the firm in the winter of 1814-'15. When he was nineteen years old he received a painful injury caused by a scuttle door falling upon his head while he was assisting in the rescue of some property at the conflagration of St. George's Chapel in Beekman Street. He suffered from the effects of this accident for some years.

In August 1816 he left the firm of Swan & Company and went with Gardner & Van Antwerp at 169 Broadway. A year later he opened a retail drygoods store at 13 Park Row; in March 1818 he went to Savannah, but he soon returned, on account of the illness of his father, who died the succeeding year. After making the above trials of a mercantile career, Mr. Greenwood turned his attention seriously to the profession of dentistry and began practise in the fall of 1818 at 13 Park Row, and later occupied his father's old office at No. 3 Ann Street.

In June 1814 he entered Captain Charles McKenna's First Company of the Independent Battalion of Governor's Guards, First Brigade of New York State Artillery, the corps being then composed of three companies. In October 1819 he became fourth corporal of the same company, and in March 1821 he was sergeant under Colonel Theodore F. Brett. This organization was an independent battalion of the New York State Artillery until 1817, when it was organized into a regiment known as the 14th Regiment of Artillery, James B. Murray, Commandant, and Daniel E. Dunscomb, Major Commandant. On the 22nd of June 1820 Isaac John Greenwood was elected a member of the New York State Artillery Company. In the records of the Adjutant General's office in Washington it is shown that he "served in the War of 1812 as a private in Captain James B. Murray's Company, in the Battalion of Governor's Guards (Dunscomb), New York State Artillery. His service began September 2, 1814, and ended December 3, 1814." Forty years later he received government warrants for "Service in War of 1812" of land in Lewis and Hardin Counties, Iowa.

Mr. Greenwood married (1) 28 November 1822 Sarah Vanderhoof Bogart, the ceremony being performed by old Dominie Zachariah H. Kuypers. She was born 4 December 1804, daughter of John Gilbert and Jane (Earle) Bogart of New York. She died 18 May 1829. On the 27th of that month he removed his office to 14 Church Street in the rear of St. Paul's churchyard, where he had been living since 1825. After his wife's death he travelled for a time in Europe.

He married (2) 17 July 1832 Mary McKay,¹ born 24 December 1815, the youngest child of John and Elizabeth (Ridell) McKay of New York. John McKay was a china merchant, born in 1766, came to America from the north of Ireland in 1783, married in 1803 Elizabeth Ridell (b. 27 May 1777), the ceremony taking place in Christ Church, New York. He died 2 October 1819.

In 1833 Mr. Greenwood removed with his family to the residence which he had built at No. 71 Warren Street, where they lived for about ten years. In August 1839 he retired from the active practise of dentistry to which he had given twenty years of careful work and study. He had become eminent in his profession and on his retirement held as prominent a position as his father, Doctor John Greenwood (21), had held before him. In March 1841 he was elected a member of the American Society of Dental Surgeons, which had been established the previous year. He was given the degree of M.D. by Shurtleff Medical College of Alton, Ill., in March 1842, and during the same month the degree of D.D.S. was conferred on him by the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery.

¹ Dutch Reformed Church Records, New York City.

Several of Doctor Greenwood's treatises connected with his profession have been published; some of them will be found in the American Journal and Library of Dental Science. He wrote a manuscript translation of De Labarre's Mechanical Dentistry, as well as an original work on Dentition, Dental Surgery, etc. (1828), both copiously illustrated with his own drawings. During the year 1831 he travelled in Great Britain and France, compiling from the notes he took a large quarto work in manuscript, richly adorned with engravings and original sketches.

About 1845 he removed from Warren Street to No. 51 Murray Street, and in the spring of 1855 he moved to West 14th Street, which was then the upper portion of the city, and resided there until his death, ten years later, at the age of seventy. He was buried in Greenwood Cemetery. His widow, Mary (McKay) Greenwood, survived him many years and died 27 January 1899, aged eighty-three years.

Clark Greenwood was born in New York. As a boy he attended a number of schools, beginning at an early age at Mrs. Kingsland's in Vesey Street and probably terminating his studies in 1811 at Slocumb's. During the years 1815-'16 he was employed by the firm of Otis & Swan, merchants, and in 1817 he went into partnership with his brother, Isaac John (36), in the drygoods business at 13 Park Row. Within a few months, however, he turned to his father's profession of dentistry. It was at this time that he suffered the loss of one eye while casting a mould in the workroom. The accident was caused by the spattering of the refuse metal which he had thrown down among some damp ashes. Had it not been for this misfortune Clark Greenwood would probably have entered the navy, as he was a lad of fine spirit, and a dashing, daring humor.

By close attention he became a skillful dentist noted for the neatness of his workmanship. He was an ingenious turner at the lathe. During the years 1819-'24, he was practising at 3 Ann Street with his brother, Isaac John, but living at 13 Park Row.

Clark Greenwood married 7 September 1822 Margaret McKay. She was born in New York 24 October 1805, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Ridell) McKay, and older sister of Mary McKay, who married Clark's brother, Isaac John.

In 1824 his office was at 12 Church Street, and in 1825 at 20 Vesey Street. In 1832 he moved with his family to 200 Fulton Street, where he resided until 1835, when he removed to his farm in Jamaica, Long Island, where he had built a comfortable home. He died there 6 May 1838, aged forty-one years, and was buried in Greenwood Cemetery. After her husband's death Mrs. Greenwood returned to New York, where she resided until her death, 12 January 1898, aged ninety-three years. She was interred in Greenwood Cemetery.

38. FRANCIS WILLIAM PITT ⁶ GREENWOOD (William Pitt ⁵ (22), Isaac ⁴, Isaac ³, Samuel ², Nathaniel ¹), b. 5 February 1797; bapt. 3 November 1805; m. 18 May 1824 Maria Goodwin; d. 2 August 1843.

Francis William Pitt Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized in King's Chapel. He was fitted for college at the Latin School. He graduated from Harvard in 1814, taught school during the winter of 1814-'15, and then began the study of divinity under Doctor Henry Wane, Hollisian Professor of Divinity at Harvard College. He was ordained at the New South Church (Congregational), 21 October 1818, as successor to Reverend Samuel C. Thacher. The following year his lungs became affected and he was obliged to discontinue preaching. He went to England in May 1820, remaining there about a year and a half, during which time he kept a journal which was later published with other fugitive pieces under the title of Greenwood Miscellany. He returned to Boston in September 1821. Not being fully restored to health he gave up his calling, having been formally dismissed from the New South Church on 24 January 1821. He went to New York in April 1822 and shortly after that to Baltimore, where he edited a small monthly periodical entitled Unitarian Miscellany, which had been conducted by Reverend Jared Sparks, from whose pulpit he preached.

Reverend Francis William Pitt Greenwood married 18 May 1824 Maria Goodwin (or Gooding). She was born in 1792, daughter of Doctor Lyde and Abby (Levy) Goodwin of Baltimore, and sister of Captain Charles Gooding-Ridgeley of the United States Navy who had taken the name of an uncle, Charles Ridgeley, of Baltimore, to whom he was heir.¹

Mr. Greenwood returned to Boston in July 1824 and was requested to resume his duties at the New South Church. Feeling that his health did not warrant assuming entire charge, he accepted an invitation to become assistant to Reverend Doctor James Freeman at King's Chapel. On 29 August 1824 he was inducted as Unitarian minister of that church, and at the close of the year 1825 Doctor Freeman retired from the pulpit. Doctor Greenwood continued to preach there with great success until his last sermon, delivered in May 1842, at which time his health began to fail rapidly. He had received the degree of S.T.D., and became a fellow of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and of the American Academy in 1839. He died 2 August 1843, in Dorchester, Mass.

Doctor Greenwood was greatly admired in Boston for his talents and learning, as well as for his individual worth and merit. His theological writings and essays include the following publications: The Classical Reader, published in Boston, 1826, with G. B. Emerson; Essay on the Lord's Supper, first and second editions, 1824 and 1827; and Lives of the Twelve Apostles, 1828. His Collection of Psalms and Hymns for Christian Worship was published in Boston, 1830, and has since passed through numerous editions. In the spring of 1832, Doctor Greenwood preached a series of eight discourses on The History of King's Chapel, of which church he was then junior minister; these were published the following year. On 22 November 1835, he preached the funeral sermon of his colleague, Reverend Doctor Freeman, which later appeared in print. In 1837 Doctor Greenwood visited Cuba for his health, and a beautiful description of the principal fruits of that island from his elaborate and graceful pen appeared in the second volume of the Boston Journal of Natural History (1839). In 1840 he edited the Sacred History of the Seasons, by Reverend H. Duncan. His Sermons to Children was published in 1841, and Sermons of Consolation, his last work, in 1842. Two volumes containing selections from his sermons were published in 1844, after his death, and in 1845 the Greenwood Miscellany, being principally contributions to periodicals.

On the 1st of October 1843, Reverend William Furness, pastor of the First Congregational Unitarian Church, delivered a discourse entitled Communion With the Unseen, which was published in Philadelphia that year, and from which the following extract is taken: "How well do I remember how Mr. Greenwood was wont to fascinate and charm his hearers by the simplicity of his manner, by the tone of his voice, so musical, so deep, and so touching, and the graces of a spirit of rare beauty and refinement. In all the relations of life, in public and in private, there was an habitual artlessness in him that won respect and love. He was for some time before his death confined to his room, and there, in serenity and cheerfulness, he awaited the approach of the great change. In this season of weakness, in the spirit of Him who, at the approach of death, was found comforting his followers, he prepared for the press and published a valuable volume of Sermons of Consolation, and used such little strength as he had in carving out crucifixes from various rare kinds of wood, and these memorials of Jesus he gave to his friends as humble mementoes also of himself."

In 1845 his congregation placed a marble bust of Doctor Greenwood in King's Chapel. The entablature bears the following inscription:

"Rev. Francis William Pitt Greenwood, D.D.
The Colleague and Successor of Dr. Freeman
as Pastor of this Church.

Chosen July 11, 1824. Settled Aug. 29, 1824.

Died Aug. 2, 1843. Aged 46 years.

Endowed with rare powers of observation and expression, his services in the pulpit were distinguished for their beauty, truth, and persuasiveness. The natural earnestness of his manner left no doubt of his sincerity; the justness of his thoughts no room for censure; and the practical beauty of his language no opportunity for objection. His character, as developed through long years of lingering disease, corresponded with that of his writings; it was truly Christian, consistent, and attractive. His people have placed this bust in affectionate commemoration of his wisdom and his virtues, March, 1845."

A portrait of Doctor Greenwood by Joshua H. Haywood, 1840, is in the Memorial Hall of Harvard College.

His widow lived for many years at her home in Boston and died intestate 6 April 1878.

39. ALFRED⁶ GREENWOOD (William Pitt⁵ (22), Isaac⁴, Isaac³, Samuel², Nathaniel¹), b. 5 February 1801, bapt. 3 November 1805; m. 8 May 1837 Martha Bourne Crocker; d. 20 April 1868.

Alfred Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at King's Chapel. He graduated from Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., in 1820. His cousin, John William Greenwood (21-VI), attended the same school and was in the junior class at that time. Alfred Greenwood graduated from Harvard College in 1824 and then studied for the ministry at Andover Theological Seminary. He was a Calvinist. He was afterwards a missionary, preaching and teaching in Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. While in Illinois he was lost at one time, remaining four days and nights in the wilderness. He returned to Boston in January 1836 and the following May was ordained minister for West Church, Barnstable, Mass., where he continued until 1840. He was at this time an Orthodox Congregational minister.

Reverend Alfred Greenwood married, 8 May 1837, Martha Bourne Crocker. She was born 10 August 1804,¹ daughter of Kenillim Crocker of Sandwich, Mass.

Mr. Greenwood subsequently settled in Natick, Mass., where he took up farming. About 1865 or '66 he removed to Grantville in the town of Needham, Mass., where he died 20 April 1868.² His widow died 21 May 1890. They were both buried in Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge. 56. ISAAC JOHN⁷ GREENWOOD, 2nd (Isaac John⁶ (36), John⁵, Isaac⁴, Isaac³, Samuel², Nathaniel¹), b. 15 November 1833, bapt. 11 April 1835; m. 23 October 1866 Mary Agnes Rudd; d. 16 December 1911.

Isaac John Greenwood, 2nd, the author of this work, was born at No. 71 Warren Street in New York City. He was christened by Dominie Jacob Schoonmaker of Long Island. He studied (1842-'49) under Professor Charles Anthon at the Columbia College Grammar School in Murray Street, and graduated from Columbia College in the class of 1853, taking his degree of A.M. in 1857. In 1854 he was with the hardware firm of Oakley, Fox and Company in Cortlandt Street, and in 1855 with the silk importing house of Nicholson and Wright in Cedar Street. A mercantile life proving uncongenial, he took up the study of chemistry in the laboratory of Professor R. O. Doremus, attached to the New York Medical College, and became assistant to Professor Doremus during the years 1857-'58.

He married Mary Agnes Rudd, the ceremony being performed at the Middle Dutch Church by Reverend Thomas DeWitt, D.D., assisted by Reverend Joseph T. Duryea, D.D. She was born 11 January 1847, daughter of Joseph and Eliza Emmeline (Barnes) Rudd of New York. Joseph Rudd was born 29 November 1810 at Burton-on-Trent, co. Gloucester, England. He came to this country in 1815 with his parents, Richard and Mary (Hanwell) Rudd. Subsequently, Joseph Rudd became a successful jeweller in New York. In his business career he was known and esteemed for his integrity and high character. He died 28 November 1882 at the home of his daughter, Mary (Rudd) Greenwood, 216 West 14 Street, New York City.

Isaac John Greenwood, 2nd, was a member of the New York Historical Society 1858; American Numismatic and Archeological Society 1859, of which society he was a vice-president and incorporator; corresponding member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society 1859; American Geographical and Statistical Society 1865; Long Island Historical Society 1871; corresponding member of Buffalo Historical Society 1872; Prince Society (Boston) 1873; American Museum of Natural History 1874; New York Genealogical and Biographical Society 1874; Metropolitan Museum of Art 1874. He became a member of the Consistory of the Collegiate Reformed Dutch Church of New York in 1881. Mr. Greenwood was not engaged in any profession. He was a lifelong student of American Colonial History, spent much time in research, and contributed frequent articles to the historical and genealogical magazines. His more important books were a life of Captain John Manley, United States Navy 1776-1783 (C. E. Goodspeed, Boston, 1915), and The Circus, Its Origin and Growth Prior to 1835 (Dunlap Society, 1898). He belonged to the Sons of the Revolution and was a member of the University Club of New York City.

Mrs. Mary Agnes (Rudd) Greenwood died 31 October 1890, and Isaac John Greenwood, 2nd, died 16 December 1911 at his home No. 271 West End Avenue, New York; both are interred in Woodlawn Cemetery.

PART III
SAMUEL GREENWOOD AND HIS DESCENDANTS

FIRST GENERATION

101. SAMUEL¹ GREENWOOD (Miles^a, Miles^b), b. circa 1646; m. circa 1670 Mary Thornton; d. 19 August 1711.

Samuel Greenwood was born in Norwich, England. He came to Boston about 1666 to join his brother, Nathaniel, in his business as a ship-carpenter. About 1670 he married Mary, daughter of Peter Thornton of Boston, and probably the widow of a Mr. Wright. Her father, Peter Thornton, came to New England in 1635 at the age of twenty, and had a son, Joseph, born 5 (2) 1647. Peter Thornton died in 1651, and administration was granted to his widow, Mary, 9 February 1651. By a verbal will he left her his small estate valued at £45: 17s.¹

“Mary Thornton, now Greenwood,” was admitted to the Old South Church of Boston, 16 December 1670. By his marriage to Mary Thornton, Samuel Greenwood probably acquired the property at the north end of Boston which he and his wife sold to his brother, Nathaniel, 22 August 1677 for £100 N. E. currency and which was reconveyed to Samuel by the executors of Nathaniel’s estate, 22 November 1688.² He is called “ship-carpenter” in the deed. Samuel Greenwood took the oath of allegiance before Deputy Governor Simon Bradstreet, 21 April 1679, and was received as a member of the Old South Church, 31 December 1680. He was one of the twelve members constituting the first fire engine company organized in Boston, 27 January 1678/9. The engine had recently arrived from England and was under the care of Thomas Atkins, carpenter.

In 1684 Samuel Greenwood was bequeathed £10 by the will of his brother Nathaniel (1) of Boston, who also left £5 to “cousen Benjamin Greenwood,” his apprentice. This Benjamin was evidently a son of another brother Benjamin, of Norwich, England.

² Suffolk Deeds, Lib. X, 153.

The 24th of June 1689 Samuel Greenwood was chosen one of eight constables in Boston; the 11th of March 1694/5 he was chosen a tithing man for District No. 1 in Boston; the 10th of March 1701, Clerk of the Market; in 1689, 1702 and 1706, "Mr." Samuel Greenwood was chosen one of the selectmen of the town, but he declined to serve the last term; in 1708 and 1711 he was an assessor.

Samuel Greenwood died 19 August 1711. His gravestone inscription in Copp's Hill burying ground reads:

"Here lyes ye Body of Samuel Greenwood aged about 65 years died ye 19 of August
1711"

Judge Samuel Sewall calls him in his diary an "honest Christian." He died intestate, and on 22 January 1723/4 administration was granted to his son, Nathaniel Greenwood, shipwright. An inventory was taken on 28 February 1723, which valued the estate at £159:7:11, including a house and land valued at £125. The inventory may have included only the widow's third share, as no mention is made of the shipyard, flats and wharfs.¹ The administrator asked an allowance for repairing and fencing the deceased's house and land in Boston, also for cash paid the widow to relieve her and supply necessities from 1717 to 1723, and for her nursing, funeral expenses, coffin, gravestone, expense of wine, gloves, etc., amounting to £51:5:8½. Hence, we infer the widow Mary (Thornton) Greenwood died towards the close of 1723.

Children of Samuel and Mary (Thornton) Greenwood:

102. I. Mary², b. 30 December 1673, bapt. 4 January 1673/4; m. (1) Thomas Wright; m. (2) 28 January 1713 Thomas Potts; d. before 1734.
- II. Anna, bapt. 9 November 1675; m. (1) 15 November 1705 Benjamin Frost, the ceremony being performed by Reverend Cotton

Mather. She married (2) 13 October 1715 Captain Thomas Scott (or Scoot), "of Great Britain," this ceremony also being performed by Reverend Cotton Mather. Captain Scott was a mariner of Boston. He died 3 September 1733, aged about fifty years. His widow died 6 May 1734. By his will, dated 29 May, and proved 11 October 1733, Captain Scott appointed his wife, Anna, executrix and left her all his goods, chattels and personal estate. The witnesses were Thomas Potts, Nathaniel Greenwood and Hannah Potts (102-II). Captain Thomas Scott and his wife were buried in Copp's Hill Cemetery. They left no children. Mrs. Scott's will, dated 21 February 1733/4, was proved 20 May 1734. Being "advanced in years and infirm in constitution," she leaves her small estate as follows: After her just debts and funeral charges have been paid, wearing apparel to be divided equally among her three sisters, Priscilla Clark, Abigail Harris, and Elizabeth Greenwood, wife of Nathaniel Greenwood (106), and the residue of her estate of all kinds to be divided in five parts: one fifth to brother, Nathaniel Greenwood, mastmaker of Boston; one fifth to sister, the widow Priscilla Clarke of Boston; one fifth to sister Abigail, wife of Captain William Harris of Boston; one fifth to deceased sister Mary Potts' two daughters—Mary Beale and Hannah Potts—equally between them; and of the remaining one fifth, one third to sister Elizabeth Greenwood, wife of brother Nathaniel, and two thirds to "my deceased brother Samuel Greenwood's son, whose name is Saml. Greenwood." Her brother, Nathaniel, was executor and the witnesses were Caleb Parker, Joseph Snelling and Nicholas Lush.

103. III. Samuel², b. 6 March, bapt. 10 March 1677/8; m. 7 September 1710 Philippa (White) Carter; d. 10 December 1711.
104. IV. Priscilla, b. 13 June 1680; m. 1707 Josiah Clarke; d. 12 March 1756.
- V. Miles, b. 12, bapt. 17 September 1682; m. 25 September 1707 to Elizabeth Bridger by Reverend Ebenezer Pemberton of the old South Church. Miles Greenwood evidently died without issue surviving, as his name is not found again. His widow is probably the same Elizabeth Greenwood who became the second wife of Captain Thomas Porter, the ceremony being performed 10 September 1711 by Doctor Cotton Mather. Captain Porter's first wife was Prudence White, born 5 October 1681, daughter of Samuel and Hannah White of Boston. She died 3 July 1709. Captain Porter died 11 April 1738, aged sixty-three years, and was buried in Copp's Hill Cemetery.

SECOND GENERATION

102. MARY² GREENWOOD (*Samuel*¹ (101)), b. 30 December 1673, bapt. 4 January 1673/4; m. (1) Thomas Wright; m. (2) 28 January 1713 Thomas Potts; d. before 1734.

Mary Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized in the Old South Church. She married (1) Thomas Wright; on 28 January 1713 she became the second wife of Thomas Potts, a mariner.¹ His first wife's name was Martha, by whom he had a son, Robert Potts, born 23 August 1709.

Child of Thomas and Mary (Greenwood) Wright:

He was born 14, baptized 17 February 1716/7 at the Old North Church, son of Captain Samuel and Hannah (Leach) Harris, and grandson of William and Hannah Harris of Boston. He was a mariner, living as late as 1758. Mrs. Harris survived her husband and died 24 December 1783. She was buried in Copp's Hill Cemetery.

103. SAMUEL² GREENWOOD (*Samuel*¹ (101)), b. 6 March, bapt. 10 March 1677/8; m. 7 September 1710 Philippa (White) Carter; d. 10 December 1711.

Samuel Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at the Old South Church. He was a mariner, as appears by the following deposition:

Samuel Greenwood married 7 September 1710, Philippa (White) Carter. She was the widow of John Carter (b. 8 May 1678, son of Ralph and Susanna Carter), to whom she was married 6 November 1699. Philippa was the daughter of Samuel White, merchant and mariner of Boston, by his wife, Hannah (Lewis). Among their other children were Prudence, who became the first wife of Captain Thomas Porter (his second wife was Elizabeth (Bridger) Greenwood, widow of Miles Greenwood (101-V), and Samuel, b. 7 June 1688, whose first wife was Elizabeth Greenwood (6).

Samuel Greenwood was buried in Copp's Hill burying ground, where his gravestone bears this inscription:

“Here lyes the body of Samuel
son of Samuel and Mary Greenwood aged near 34 years died Dec. ye 10

His widow, Philippa Greenwood, was married for the third time, 15 June 1714, to James French of Great Britain, the ceremony being performed by Reverend Cotton Mather in the Old North Church. She had four children by this marriage.

Children of Samuel and Philippa (White) (Carter) Greenwood:

- I. Ralph ³, b. 4 December 1711, bapt. 3 February 1711/2; d. young.
- II. Samuel, b. 4 December 1711, bapt. 3 February 1711/2; m. 5 February 1740 Mary Harris (probably daughter of Owen and Susanna (Love) Harris, b. 12 March 1716/7). Samuel Greenwood was a shipwright. His widow married, 4 July 1745, Samuel Vaughan, shipwright of Boston, aged forty-five years, whose first wife was Elizabeth Leach. Vaughan died intestate and his widow, Mary, was appointed sole administratrix in 1757. There is no record of any children of Samuel and Mary (Harris) Greenwood. A Mrs. Mary Vaughan died September 1799, aged seventy-eight years.¹

104. PRISCILLA ² GREENWOOD (*Samuel*¹ (101)), b. 13 June 1680; m. (int. 6 December 1707) Josiah Clark; d. 12 March 1756.

Priscilla Greenwood was born in Boston. Her intentions of marriage with Josiah Clark were published in Ipswich, Mass. Mr. Clark was an innholder in Salutation Alley in 1723. He died 27 August 1726, aged forty-five years, and was buried in Copp's Hill Cemetery. His widow, Priscilla Clark, was allowed by the Selectmen on 7 July 1727 to retail "Strong Drinks in Salutation Alley." She died 12 March 1756 and was buried in Copp's Hill Cemetery.

Children of Josiah and Priscilla (Greenwood) Clark:

- I. Josiah ³ Clark, b. 29 November, bapt. 3 December 1710 at Old North Church; d. in September 1711, aged nine months, buried in Copp's Hill Cemetery.
- II. Priscilla Clark, bapt. 17 December 1712 at Old North Church; m. 30 March 1738 Joseph Snelling; d. 2 August 1791. Her husband was born 20 April 1695 and died 1 July 1748. He had a mansion house and lot in Salem Street and a house and lot in Salutation Alley. His will, dated 23 May and proved 27 July 1748, mentions ten surviving children. He was buried in Copp's Hill Cemetery. Two daughters, Priscilla and Mary Snelling, married Nathaniel (108) and Samuel (111) Greenwood, first cousins of their mother.

- III. Josiah³ Clark, b. 1, bapt. 17 January 1713/14 at Old North Church.

105. ABIGAIL² GREENWOOD (Samuel¹ (101)), b. 13, bapt. 20 April 1690; m. 15 August 1717 Captain William Harris; d. August 1773.¹

Abigail Greenwood was born in Boston. She was married by Reverend Joseph Sewall of the Old South Church to Captain William Harris "of Great Britain." He was born circa 1692.

Children of William and Abigail (Greenwood) Harris:

- I. Abigail³ Harris, b. 18 June 1718 in Boston; m. 23 November 1738 Nathaniel Langdon; d. December 1792. Mr. Langdon was born 14 September 1695 and died 27 December 1757. They had twelve children and were the grandparents of Mary Langdon, wife of Doctor William Pitt Greenwood (22), and of Thomas Walley Langdon, who married Jane Weaver (Greenwood) Ross (35).²
- II. Mary Harris, b. 19 March 1720.
- III. William Harris, b. August 1729; d. 28 June 1730.
- IV. Samuel Harris, b. circa 1731; m. 17 November 1763 Lydia Thornton; d. March 1802. He was a mastmaker apprenticed to Nathaniel Greenwood (106). His wife, Lydia, was born 3 September 1728, daughter of Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Gilbert) Thornton. Ebenezer Thornton was the grandson of Reverend Thomas Thornton (b. 1607; d. 15 February 1700 in Boston), and son of Timothy and Experience Thornton. Timothy was born in England in 1647 and died 19 September 1726. Ebenezer was baptized 12 January 1690 in Boston and died 12 June 1750 in Watertown. He married, 15 May 1721, Elizabeth, daughter of Captain Thomas and Elizabeth (Ballat) Gilbert.³ Samuel Harris carried the mast-makers' flag at the reception to President Washington in Boston, October 1789. This flag is still preserved in the family. He was a Sandemanian. His son, Isaac, married a second cousin, Eunice Greenwood (116). Samuel's will was dated 28 March 1799 and proved 29 March 1802. His widow was probably the widow Lydia Harris who died 31 January 1828, "aged 91," in Boston, though she would then be aged ninety-nine years. According to deeds of her children, she was still alive in 1822.

106. NATHANIEL² GREENWOOD (*Samuel*¹ (101)) b. 29,¹ bapt. 30 April 1693; m. 3 September 1724 Elizabeth Ventiman; d. 1780.

Nathaniel Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at the Old South Church. He was a ship-carpenter or shipwright. From about 1723 until March 1749 he was in partnership with Joseph Snelling in the mast-making business. After that time he appears to have been in business alone; in 1758 his mastyard was in Lynn Street.

He married Elizabeth Ventiman. She was born 8, bapt. 9 January 1703/4 at the Old North Church, daughter of Captain John Ventiman, formerly of Portsmouth, N. H., and his wife, Elizabeth Smith, whom he married 13 July 1699. Mrs. Ventiman died 14 February 1709/10, aged about thirty years, and Captain Ventiman married (2), 9 November 1710, Mary Reed. He had six sons and two daughters.

Nathaniel Greenwood administered the estate of his father during the year 1724. In 1726 he was a subscriber to three copies of Reverend Samuel Willard's Compleate Body of Divinity, and in 1736 to Prince's New England Chronology. In January 1729 he bought the beach and flats adjoining his own land at the North End for £115. He and his wife, Elizabeth, with his nephew, Samuel Greenwood (103-II), shipwright, his two sisters, Anna, wife of Captain Thomas Scott, mariner, and Priscilla, widow of Josiah Clark, and his brother-in-law, Thomas Potts, as guardian of his own daughter, Hannah Potts, a minor, and William Beal with his wife, Mary (Wright) Beal, sold for £150, 6 January 1731/2, a lot 46 feet wide on the north side of Salutation Alley, to William Harris, Nathaniel's brother-in-law. On 8 June 1735 he bought of Benjamin Fish a lot bounded by his own land on the south and by North Street on the east. On 14 July 1737 he bought of William and Sarah Peirse, for £135, a lot bounded on the south by Lynn Street, 20 feet, and extending to low-water mark. In March 1757 he purchased seventeen acres of land at Woburn, Middlesex County, about ten miles north of Boston, and subsequently acquired further estate in that locality. In 1754 Nathaniel Greenwood was attorney in fact for Giles Harris and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Verein) Snelling. In connection with these parties an extract of an interesting conveyance may be found in the Appendix.¹

Nathaniel Greenwood was a captain in the militia. During 1755 and 1756 he was Overseer of the Poor. John Larrabee, the captain of Castle William, who died 14 February 1762, named as one of the executors of his will his "much respected friend, Capt. Nath'l Greenwood." He was one of the commissioners appointed to divide the estate of Doctor John Clarke of Boston, who died in April 1768. The list of the Sons of Liberty who dined at Robinson's Liberty Tree Tavern in Dorchester, 14 August 1769, the anniversary of the Stamp Act Riot, contains the names of Captain Greenwood, Samuel Grant, John Hancock, Esq., Samuel Henchman, John Langdon, John Langdon, Jr., Timothy Langdon, Paul Revere, Captain Ebenezer and John Symmes, Doctor Joseph Warren, Samuel and John Adams, the Otises, James Bowdoin, the Quinceys, etc.

Nathaniel Greenwood belonged to the "North End Caucus," the most important political club in the town at the time. His name appears among the number of merchants and prominent citizens of Boston who, 30 May 1774, sent in an address expressing their entire satisfaction with his administration to Governor Hutchinson, who was about to depart for England.² Mr. Greenwood and his son, Samuel, also signed a congratulatory address, 7 June 1774, to General Thomas Gage on his succession to Governor Hutchinson's post. They were also protestors against the proceedings of the Boston town meeting held the 27th of June.

Captain Nathaniel Greenwood of Boston is mentioned in the tax list of 1775 as a non-resident of Woburn and charged 1s. 1d. The disturbed state of affairs at this time caused him to leave Boston, and in 1777 and '78 his name is given on the local and state tax rolls as a resident proprietor of Woburn, or that part thereof known after 1799 as Burlington. After this, being well advanced in years, he evidently resided with his eldest son, Nathaniel, Jr., first in Wenham and later in Beverly, until his death in 1780 at the age of eighty-seven years. His will,¹ dated 25 January 1779, and proved in Salem 5 September 1780, fails to mention his sons, John and Samuel, both of whom were probably Tories, although John may not have been alive at this time. His sons, Nathaniel, Jr., and Miles, were appointed executors. Nathaniel accepted the trust and was required to give an inventory of the estate in three months from the proving of the will; this was not done, however, until 1792. The widow, Elizabeth Greenwood, who became blind, died in Beverly, September 1793, aged ninety years. The notice of her death appeared in the Salem Gazette of 1 October 1793.

"Nathan. and Mary," while in the town records in the Registrar's Office, where no middle name occurs, he is entered as the son of "Nathaniel and Elizabeth." On 15 May 1761 he enlisted in Captain James Gray's company, and in the records of that company is reported "22 years old; Deserted." There is no further record of him, and he was not mentioned in his father's will, dated 25 January 1779. Possibly he was the John Greenwood "some-time since of Boston, soldier with Captain Samuel Holland," whose son, Thomas, was baptized in Portsmouth, N. H., 29 December 1771.¹

111. IX. Samuel³, b. 11, bapt. 13 September 1741; m. (1) 17 July 1762 Eleanor Hornby; m. (2) 2 August 1764 Mary Snelling; d. 12 January 1826.

X. Peter, bapt. 3 October 1742. He was one of the crew of the Alliance, Captain Pierre Landais, according to a list taken at the Texel, Holland, 3 October 1779. This vessel had arrived on 17 April 1779 at Nantes with prisoners to be exchanged for those from the Mill Prison, Plymouth, by cartel. Many of the latter took service on the Alliance, but Greenwood's name is not found among them. He probably shipped previous to her departure from America. He had evidently taken part in the conflict which resulted in the capture of the Serapis. The Alliance sailed from L'Orient in June 1780, reached America 13 August, and the crew were discharged on the 21st. It is reported that Peter Greenwood subsequently died of suffocation in the hold of a privateer while a prisoner.

112. XI. Joseph, bapt. 15 January 1743/4; m. 18 July 1765 Margery Reed; d. 1779.

XII. Benjamin, bapt. 22 June 1746; m. 27 April 1777 Elizabeth Glover, in the Second Baptist Church, Boston. She was born 7 September 1750 in Quincy, Mass., daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth (Bass) Glover. Benjamin Greenwood was in Lieutenant Jabez Hatch's company, Major Andrew Symmes' Boston regiment, serving five weeks from 12 May 1777, while guarding stores in and about Boston. He died without issue, and his widow married Thomas Caldwell of Ipswich, Mass., on 1 May 1787, by whom she had two daughters. Elizabeth (Glover) (Greenwood) Caldwell died 25 November 1825.²

THIRD GENERATION

107. ANNA³ GREENWOOD (*Nathaniel*² (106), *Samuel*¹), b. 14, bapt. 18 September 1726; m. 22 September 1748 Robert Treat; d. 31 January 1790.

Anna Greenwood was baptized in the Old North Church. She was married in the Old South Church by Reverend Joseph Sewall, D.D., to Robert Treat. He was born 27 March 1725, son of Samuel Treat, cooper, and his second wife, Mary (Sears) (Street) Treat, and a great-great-grandson of Governor Robert Treat of the Connecticut Colony.¹ Like his father, Robert Treat was a cooper; he was also a culler of staves in Boston during the years 1752-'56. He probably went to the Penobscot, where he had a cousin, Joshua Treat, who was armorer at Fort Pownell. He is said to have died in Boston, after which his widow removed to Haverhill, Mass., where she died 31 January 1790.

Children of Robert and Anna (Greenwood) Treat:

- I. Anna⁴ Treat, b. 13 August 1749; m. 12 March 1771 Joseph Harrod; b. 20 May 1832. Her husband was born 4 November 1747, son of Benjamin and Phoebe (Stevens) Harrod. He was a jeweller. He moved from Boston to Haverhill, where he died 22 May 1828. Their second daughter, Anna Harrod, was married 7 May 1805 to Judge Thomas Boylston Adams, brother of President John Quincy Adams.
- II. Bessie Treat, b. ———; m. Gardiner Davis; resided in Waldoboro, Maine, where Mr. Davis or his son was base drummer in the Waldoboro Light Infantry in 1810; d. ———.
- III. Samuel Treat, b. ———; d. 15 November 1777. He was killed in the defense of Fort Mifflin, at Mud Island, near Philadelphia. He had been a private in the Boston Artillery Company and was Second Lieutenant in Captain John Callender's company of artillery at the Battle of Bunker Hill. He afterwards rose to the rank of Captain-Lieutenant. In the attack on Fort Mifflin by the British, 11 November 1777, the assault was so severe and destructive that the garrison was compelled to retire on the 15th of November after a brave resistance of four days. Among the killed was "young Captain Treat, who was killed by a cannon ball while defending his post with the intrepidity that would have done honour to an old soldier."¹

108. NATHANIEL³ GREENWOOD (*Nathaniel*² (106), *Samuel*¹), bapt. 3 September 1732; m. (intentions 15 May 1766) Priscilla Snelling; d. 25 July 1823.

Nathaniel Greenwood was baptized in the Old North Church. He was a sailmaker of Boston. In 1763 he was Ensign in Captain John Gore's company, Colonel Joseph Jackson's Boston regiment. His wife, Priscilla Snelling, born in 1732, was the daughter of Joseph and Priscilla (Clarke) Snelling. Joseph Snelling was a mastmaker, and was a former partner of her father-in-law, Nathaniel Greenwood.

On 23 June 1769 one hundred and forty-two of the Freeholders and inhabitants of Boston petitioned the Selectmen against the insult of quartering troops on the inhabitants of the town. Nathaniel Greenwood, Jr., his brother-in-law, John Marston, Paul Revere, Joseph Warren and others were among those who signed the petition. After the commencement of the Revolutionary War, Mr. Greenwood may have resided for a while in Woburn with his father, but in 1777 he was paying taxes in Wenham, Essex County, Mass., to the amount of £2:5:8. Formerly, pious people called Wenham "Aenon near to Salim, because there was much water there"—(John 3, 23). Nathaniel Greenwood, Jr., Gentleman of Wenham, bought of Joseph Woodberry, housewright of Boston, 3 May 1777, for £250, a dwelling-house, barn and outhouses in Beverly, Mass., and about one and a half acres of land. This deed was recorded in Salem, 8 April 1782.² On 7 March 1778 he bought 6¼ acres of swamp and upland of Caleb Balch, Gentleman, for £143. In the deed he is described as sailmaker of Beverly. Three days later he bought of Benjamin Shaw, mason, land adjoining. On 16 September 1782 he again purchased land of Caleb Balch, this being some five acres on the easterly side of the road leading to Beverly Ferry, bounded northwest on the highway and southwest on his own land. These last three deeds were recorded 7 July 1783.¹

In 1777 his name was on the tax list of Beverly as it had been in Wenham, and he continued to be assessed personally in Beverly until 1794, when he moved to Boston; thereafter, until 1804, the tax was paid by agents. His house in Beverly is said to have been at the corner of Conant and Dodge Streets and to have been a place of entertainment for the officers of the army. Here also, at times, the Amity Lodge of Masons met. Deeds recorded in 1793 and 1794 describe Mr. Greenwood as "Gentleman of Beverly," but in an advertisement in the Salem Gazette, 5 August 1790, when he was a commissioner for settling the estate of Jonathan Perkins, shoemaker, he states that the business will be attended to at the house of "said Nathl. Greenwood, innkeeper in Beverly." While in Beverly he was very influential in church affairs.²

About 1794 or '95 Nathaniel Greenwood returned to Boston, where he continued his business as sailmaker and resided in Salutation Alley. He lived in a quaint little house built in 1690, which formerly belonged to the estate of his father-in-law, Joseph Snelling, who died in 1748. The other heirs quit-claimed their interests to Nathaniel Greenwood, Jr., in 1806. There is an illustration of the house in Porter's Rambles in Old Boston, page 271. Porter says that in 1887 it was one of the two or three oldest houses standing in Boston, and is known to some of the present generation as the old house of Nathaniel Greenwood and his interesting family. Three of his daughters were married there in 1802 and a fourth one three years later.

On 3 September 1798 Nathaniel Greenwood and wife, Priscilla, Rebecca Snelling, Josiah Snelling, baker, and wife, Mary, of Boston, heirs of Joseph Snelling, conveyed a lot in Lynn Street to Caleb Platt, housewright of Boston. On 25 February 1800 the adjoining land was sold to Caleb Platt by Nathaniel Greenwood, sailmaker, and Miles Greenwood, Gentleman of Boston, executors of Nathaniel Greenwood, deceased. On the same date the same executors conveyed other land in Lynn Street to Nathaniel Ally, shipwright.¹ On 23 April 1800 Nathaniel Greenwood, sailmaker, Elizabeth Marston, widow, Miles Greenwood, Gentleman, all of Boston, and Samuel Greenwood of Halifax conveyed to William Tomkins, housewright of Boston, a piece of land in Lynn Street, Nathaniel Greenwood's wife, Priscilla, having relinquished her right of dower.²

From the Boston interment lists it appears that "Priscilla Greenwood died 17 September, 1817 of old age, ae. seventy-nine years, of the family of Benjamin (which name is probably an error) Greenwood, and was buried on the 19th instant at the North Church cemetery." Nathaniel Greenwood survived her but a few years and died "of old age," 25 July 1823. He was interred the following day by the side of his wife. He died intestate, leaving an estate appraised at $4,854. Letters of administration were granted to his son-in-law, Isaac Harris, 27 October 1823.³ The estate, including the old house in Salutation Alley, went to his four surviving daughters and the children of his fifth daughter, Rebecca, late wife of Robert Lash.⁴

Elizabeth Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized in the Old North Church. She became the third wife of Captain John Marston. He was born 26 February 1715, son of Nathaniel and Mercy (Marston) Marston of Salem and Boston.² He married (1), 1740, Hannah Welland, and (2), 1751, Elizabeth (Welland) Blake. By the first marriage he had three daughters who died young; he had no issue by the second marriage. He served as Lieutenant in the siege of Louisburg, 1745, in Captain Charles King's Fifth Company of the Third Massachusetts Regiment from York County, Maine, where by reason of his gallantry he was made Captain. He settled in Boston as proprietor of the "Golden Ball Inn" as early as 1757. Here Washington and Lafayette were entertained. The inn was located in Merchants Row, opposite the Town Warehouses, near the dock. Here, in 1757, he had two of the First or Royal Regiment quartered on him. In 1768 he was one of twelve Town Wardens, and the following year he signed a petition to the Selectmen declaring that the law of the land made ample provision for the security of life and property, and that the presence of the troops was an insult. He is said to have been a member of the "Boston Tea Party." In December 1774 Captain Marston was one of the Committee of Inspection to carry the Resolutions of the Continental Congress into execution, and in May 1775 he was chairman of a committee to purchase muskets, etc. In the same year he became landlord of the "Bunch of Grapes," located in King Street (afterwards State Street), corner of Mackerel Lane (afterwards Kilby Street). There he was cautioned in 1778 for allowing gaming in his house, such as playing backgammon.³ He continued as landlord until his death, when his widow succeeded him. His son, John Marston, Jr., about the year 1830, wrote to a cousin,

Mrs. Thomas Boylston Adams (daughter of 107-I), of a Thanksgiving Day gathering which occurred in his home about the year 1766, when he was ten years old. The letter bears no date and he writes, in part, as follows:

“The only children present, were, on that occasion, your aunt Bessie Treat, and myself. We were anxiously looking for the company as they arrived. And first came our dear old grandfather Greenwood (Nathaniel, 106) with the countenance of a saint, his silver locks flowing on his shoulder, his cambrick neckcloth tucked through the button hole of his coat. And next our venerable grandmother (Elizabeth Ventiman Greenwood), with a rich brocade, so substantial it might have stood alone; yet, with the address of her sex, she would occasionally raise her dress, so as to discover a scarlet broad cloth skirt with a broad gold lace round the bottom. Then came my aunt Bowers (Eunice, wife of Ephraim Bowers) in a rich dove colored damask dress. I have since seen many Duchesses while in England, who with all their diamonds were vastly her inferiors in beauty and dignity of port and elegance of manners. She was at this time a widow. Next her sat my good aunt Treat (Anna Greenwood Treat), your worthy Grandmother: dressed in a brocade the color of which I have forgotten. There too was her noble husband, my uncle Robert Treat, your Grandfather, dressed in a blue coat, scarlet vest, black small clothes, and white hose. He had the face of an Apollo! with the dignity of Mars. There were also your uncles Nathaniel (108) and Samuel (111) Greenwood in plain suits—their brother Miles was approaching to a Maccaroni—what we now call a dandy. His coat was scarlet with a dash of gold lace. He was naturally fond of dress, but at that time he was secretary to the Governor of Nova Scotia, in which position a young man would wish to appear well dressed. And last, but not least my beloved father and mother (109)—their portraits are familiar to you. When we recollect, my dear Cousin, our worthy ancestors, who were possessed of high moral worth and most of them of deep and ardent piety, should we not feel proud of our progenitors? On this occasion my father invited other guests. On this occasion I remember the Rev'd. Mr. Allan, an English Patriot, James Otis—well known in the history of the Revolution—Dr. Young and some others. At nine o'clock the company were ushered into the supper room. The first course was served on highly polished pewter. The second on the finest of china. The knives and forks had silver handles. The candlesticks were of pure silver. The table was of polished oak, and covered with the finest linen damask.”¹

Captain John Marston died 23 August 1786² leaving an estate of £2000. His widow, Elizabeth (Greenwood) Marston, died 25 February 1826. Her portrait is in the possession of the Marston family of Philadelphia.

Children of John and Elizabeth (Greenwood) Marston:

- I. John⁴ Marston, Jr., b. 27 March 1756 in Boston; m. 4 August 1784 Ann Randall of Newport, R. I. She was the daughter of Matthew Randall of London. John Marston, Jr., was a ring-leader in the Boston Tea Party. He later became a Colonel in the Army. He was the father of Admiral John Marston, U. S. N., and sixteen other children. He died in Taunton, Mass., 13 December 1846.
- II. Eunice Marston, b. 7 February 1759; m. (1), intentions recorded in Boston 1 April 1779, Lazarus Goodwin; m. (2), John Watson of Plymouth. Her first husband died 27 June 1795, aged 43 years.
- III. Nathaniel Marston, b. 10, bapt. 12 April 1761 at the New Brick Church. He was an officer in the Revolutionary War and as a Captain was stationed at Charleston, S. C., in 1790, where he married, September 1790, Lydia Brown, and died 11 August 1792 without issue, according to the Marston genealogy. However, the Boston Probate Registry Records show his will dated 28 August 1792, probated 11 September 1792, his widow, “Sarah,” being the executrix. The Boston Registrar’s Records state that Nathaniel “Mardon” died August 1792.

110. MILES³ GREENWOOD (Nathaniel² (106), Samuel¹), b. 31 December 1736, bapt. 2 January 1736/7; m. (1) 16 June 1767 Sarah Hall; m. (2) 12 January 1772 Mrs. Elizabeth (White) Elkins; d. 8 November 1814.

Miles Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at the Old North Church. In the summer of 1761 a great part of the regular troops were required for an expedition against the French Islands in the West Indies, and the Massachusetts Bay Colony was called upon to assist in the supplying of provincial troops to serve in their stead on the continent. Though meeting with great opposition, it was voted to raise three thousand men. Miles Greenwood enlisted, 18 April 1761, as a lieutenant in Captain Giles Harris' company, Colonel John Phillip's Boston regiment, in which he served the usual term of eight months. His brother, Joseph, was a private in the same company.¹ Miles Greenwood was secretary to the Governor of Nova Scotia about 1766, according to a statement made by John Marston, Jr., his nephew.

He was married, 16 June 1767, in the First Baptist Church of Boston, by Reverend Samuel Stillman, to Sarah Hall. She was born in Boston, 3 June 1749, daughter of Andrew, Jr., and Sarah (Callender) Hall of Medford and Boston, and granddaughter of Andrew and Abigail Hall of Medford. She was baptized, 15 April 1753, in the First Baptist Church of Boston. The record of her death is missing.

In Boyle's Journal of Occurrences in Boston he notes under 10 July 1768, "in the Evening, Very severe Lightning with Thunder and Rain. The House of Mr. Miles Greenwood at West Boston was struck and very much shattered, the Pewter in the Kitchen melted, Mr. Greenwood and his wife forced by the Lightning from one side of the Room to the other and a child in the Cradle thrown out of it, but neither of their Lives lost." This child must have been Andrew (117).¹

On 16 August 1769 the Selectmen approved and recommended Miles Greenwood for a license to sell strong drinks at his house near the Fortification. At that time there was a Guard House near the Entrance Gates at the South End of the town, and the Selectmen built a Watchhouse nearby (opposite Mr. Robert Pierpont's house) for a Constable and four men, to keep a check on the disturbances and depredations of the soldiers. Mrs. Sarah (Hall) Greenwood probably died about 1769, when her second son, Miles, was born, and about that time Miles Greenwood moved to Salem, where, as a merchant, he engaged in the shipping trade. Family tradition says that he was in the East India trade, but it appears more likely that he was engaged, after the war, in trade with London.

The marriage intentions of Mr. Miles Greenough (sic), late of Boston, now resident of Salem, and the widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Elkins of Salem, were entered on the Salem records 28 December 1771. On the Boston records, the marriage intentions of Miles Greenwood of Boston and Elizabeth Elkins of Salem were entered 1 January 1772. "Mr. Miles Greenwood and Mrs. Elizabeth Elkins, both of Salem, were married 12 January 1772." She was the daughter of John White, Sr., of Salem, who died about 1782. Her first husband, Captain Thomas Elkins, a shipmaster, was born in 1738 and died 17 March 1764. He was a son of Captain Thomas Elkins and wife, Martha, who was a daughter of Richard Derby of Salem by his wife, Martha, daughter of Colonel Elias Hasket. He left among his effects a negro boy valued at £45. They had two daughters, Martha and Elizabeth Elkins. Martha, the eldest, married (1) 4 March 1780, William Pynchon, Jr.; (2) 22 March 1788, Joseph Grafton; (3) George Stuart Johannot, son of Francis and Mary (Johnson) Johannot of Boston. Mr. and Mrs. George Stuart Johannot adopted Martha Grafton Greenwood, daughter of Miles Greenwood, Jr. (118). Mr. Johannot died in 1839, aged eighty-five years, and his widow died 27 May 1840, leaving no issue.

On 15 June 1773 Miles Greenwood, living in Derby Street, Salem, advertises salt for sale on the sloop Molly, then lying in Salem Harbor, Joseph White (his wife's brother), Master, from St. Eustatius and Turks Island. In July 1774 a similar advertisement appeared, except that the vessel was the brigantine Tartar, same master. In February and March 1775 he advertises "Turks Island Salt, for which Fish will be taken in Payment," and in the Salem Gazette, 12 February 1784, appears the following: "Imported in the ship Astrea from London, by Miles Greenwood and to be sold at his shop, opposite the burying point in Salem, by wholesale and retail, an Assortment of English Goods, consisting of Broad-clothes, Beavers, Irish Linens, Chintz, Ribbons, Sewing Silks, Thread, Needles and Pins, China and Glass Ware, and Tea."

On 2 April 1777 Miles Greenwood, merchant, bought of Joseph Motley, mariner, a messuage in Salem for £600 lawful money. On 21 April 1782 Joseph Lambert and wife, Mary, Miles Greenwood and wife, Elizabeth, Joseph and Henry White, all merchants of Salem, and Sarah Fairfield (widow of Doctor William Fairfield) of Wenham, heirs in part to the estate of John White, Sr., late of Salem, gave to John White, Jr., a quitclaim of the deceased's estate, which John White, Sr., had inherited as heir to his daughter, Rebecca Giles, deceased, and which was given to her by her husband, Captain Eliezer Giles, deceased, being a piece of land on the north side of Derby Street opposite the North End of the Long Wharf of Richard Derby, Esq., with all buildings thereon, the consideration being the assumption by John White, Jr., of all claims against the estate.¹

From a petition on file at the Massachusetts State House it appears that on 2 August 1776 Miles Greenwood of Salem and partners petitioned for a supply of seven hundred pounds of powder, as they were about to fit out a privateer schooner called the True American. The following extracts are from Force's American Archives:¹

“PETITION OF ELIAS HASKET DERBY AND OTHERS

To the honourable the Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay in New England:

The Petition of Elias Hasket Derby, Miles Greenwood, and Joseph White, all of Salem, in the County of Essex, and State aforesaid, humbly showeth:

That your petitioners are now fitting out, and have almost completed for sea, a private sloop-of-war, called the Revenge, of ninety tons burthen, to be mounted with twelve guns, from four to six pounders, owned by the subscribers, and whereof Benjamin Warren is intended to be master, to be manned by eighty men, to be victualled with thirty barrels of pork, fifty barrels of beef, and seventy barrels of bread, and to be provided with eight hundred pound weight of powder and one thousand shot. Your petitioners' humble prayer, therefore, is that the above mentioned BENJAMIN WARREN may be commissioned Captain of the said private sloop-of-war Revenge. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

“PETITION OF MILES GREENWOOD

To the honourable the Council of Safety of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay:

The Petition of Miles Greenwood of Salem humbly showeth: That your petitioner, in company with JOSEPH WHITE, ICHABOD NICHOLS, and JONATHAN INGERSOLL, all of said SALEM, hath fitted for sea a private sloop-of-war called the Revenge, burthen ninety tons, whereof BENJAMIN DEAN is intended to be commander, mounted with eight carriage guns carrying a four pound shot, navigated by sixty men, provided with three hundred pounds weight of gunpowder, five hundred shot, twenty barrels of pork, twenty barrels of bread, twenty barrels of beef. Your petitioner's humble prayer, therefore, is that the said BENJAMIN DEAN may be commissioned as Captain of the said private sloop-of-war Revenge. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

SALEM, OCT. 25th, 1776.

MILES GREENWOOD.

In Council, Oct. 26th, 1776.

Read, and ORDERED, That the prayer of the Petition be granted, and that a Commission be issued out to the said BENJAMIN DEAN within mentioned, as a Commander of the said Sloop called the Revenge, he complying with the resolves of Congress.

JOHN AVERY, *Deputy Secretary.*¹

Hunt's Merchants Magazine, Volume 36, page 156, says: “One of the first armed vessels that sailed from Salem during the Revolution was the sloop Revenge, one of Mr. Elias H. Derby's West Indiamen, armed with ten guns. She appears to have taken on her first cruise four Jamaicamen laden with 733 hogsheads of sugar, beside other cargo, and by an account settled with Miles Greenwood, of June 24, 1777, Mr. Derby appears to have realized a fourth part of the proceeds.”¹

On 6 June 1776 Miles Greenwood was commissioned as First Lieutenant of Captain Richard Ward's third Company in the First Essex County Regiment, Colonel Timothy Pickering, Jr.² He was afterwards Captain of a company in Colonel Jacob Gerrish's Regiment of Guards. This regiment was stationed at Cambridge for several months beginning 11 November 1777. During this period Captain Greenwood attests two rolls of the company, one dated from "Camp on Winter-Hill, February," the other dated 3 April 1778. He was commissioned 25 July 1778 as First Lieutenant in Captain Samuel Flagg's Company of Volunteers from Salem, for the Rhode Island Expedition under Major General Sullivan.³ This failed owing to lack of coöperation on the part of the French fleets, and the Americans were forced to retreat from their position near Newport.

At a meeting of the Freeholders of Salem in September 1779, Miles Greenwood was elected Captain of the 2nd Foot Company of Militia, and it was voted "that he be recommended to the Governor to be appointed and commissioned as such." This was one of the four companies of foot at Salem.

An orderly book of the Regiment of Artillery raised for the defense of Boston in 1776 mentions a court-martial case in February 1778 at headquarters in Boston in which Captain Greenwood was appointed Judge Advocate. Lieutenant Colonel Paul Revere was among those sitting on the court-martial.⁴ Mr. Miles Greenwood was one of the four Representatives for Salem at the first General Court held under the new Constitution; he was also chosen for the second General Court at Boston, 29 May 1782, and again 26 May 1784. The following day he was on a committee to report a bill for regulating the exports of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The 29th of October 1784 he was on a committee to consider what further measures could be adopted for perfecting the revision of the Laws of the Commonwealth and to report on the same. On 7 February 1785 he was charged with a message from the House of Representatives to the Senate relative to choosing three gentlemen as Councillors to fill vacancies in the Honourable Council.

During the Revolution Miles Greenwood lost three vessels in succession, by which he became much reduced in circumstances. His grandniece, sister of Captain (later Admiral) John Marston, writing to her brother, says: "Good old uncle Miles, who, you no doubt remember, dined with us every Sunday. He was the youngest brother of our dear and venerable grandmother (109). He had two sons, Miles and Andrew, by his first wife, who was a Miss Hall of Medford, Mass. Uncle Miles lived in Salem and was a Merchant extensively engaged in the East India trade. He lost his property, which much depressed his spirits and he came to Boston, where by the exertions of our dear father (John Marston, 109-I) he obtained a highly respectable situation in the Massachusetts Bank which he retained to the day of his death, enjoying the full confidence of all the officers associated with him. One of them sportively wrote the following epitaph:

‘Here lies interred our discount clerk
Once Sound Greenwood, now dry as bark.’

I daresay you remember his gentlemanly deportment, and the peculiar neatness of his dress."

Captain Marston says: "He was the only person I ever saw wear a scarlet coat." Nevertheless, for all his coat, he was an active and determined patriot.

According to the interment list Miles Greenwood died in Boston 8 November 1814, residing at the time in John Burbeck's family, and was buried in the Granary Cemetery. Administration was granted, 28 November 1814, to his son Andrew Greenwood, Esq., of Boston.

It appears that Miles Greenwood separated from his wife, Elizabeth, 24 July 1785, after a union of over thirteen years, on the grounds of property.¹ He resided in Boston and she kept a store in Salem, and later went to Wenham where, in July 1800, as "Elizabeth Greenwood of Wenham, gentlewoman," she bought a messuage of twenty-five acres for $1,900 of Thomas Louis. The deed was recorded 6 October 1800. She afterwards returned to Salem where, according to the town records, she died 10 November 1811. Her will dated 27 August 1811 was proved 3 February 1812. Her grandson, Charles Saunders, was the executor.

Miles Greenwood had no issue by his second wife.

Children of Miles and Sarah (Hall) Greenwood:

117. I. Andrew⁴, b. 1768; m. 25 October 1809 Ann Harrod; d. 15 November 1816.
118. II. Miles, b. 1769; m. Mrs. Leah (Demarest) Gurnee; d. 12 January 1831.

III. SAMUEL³ GREENWOOD (*Nathaniel*² (106), *Samuel*¹), b. 11, bapt. 13 September 1741; m. (1) 17 July 1762 Eleanor Hornby; m. (2) 2 August 1764 Mary Snelling; d. 12 January 1826.

Samuel Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at the Old North Church. He was a follower of Robert Sandeman, a Scotchman who came to Boston from Glasgow in 1764. The Sandemanians held their first meeting at the Green Dragon Tavern. The sect continued until 1823 in Boston. Many of the Sandemanians were Loyalists and went to Halifax. Samuel Greenwood signed the congratulatory address to General Thomas Gage, 7 June 1774, on his succeeding Hutchinson as Governor. He was a protestor in Boston, 29 June 1774, and in 1776 accompanied the Royal Army from Boston to Halifax, where he continued to reside until his death.

Of his first wife, Eleanor Hornby, to whom he was married by Reverend Andrew Elliot of the New North Church, little is known. His second wife was Mary Snelling, daughter of Joseph and Priscilla (Clark) Snelling of Boston. Her brother was Josiah Snelling, a baker of Boston, and her sister was Priscilla Snelling, who married Samuel's brother, Nathaniel Greenwood. She died in Boston, 21 September 1774, aged thirty-one years and was buried in Copp's Hill Burying Ground.

Samuel Greenwood went to Halifax in 1776, taking his four small children with him. He was a mastmaker there for many years, and resigned his business to his eldest son some years before his death. His great-grandson, James Tidmarsh Greenwood of Halifax, said of him: "He was a peculiarly gentlemanly person and much liked and respected. After he was eighty he made two voyages to the Mediterranean for his health (an undertaking infinitely greater than now), and came home with a budget of traveller's stories. . . . He was a very active, athletic man and retained his power to his death. In his, I think, 84th year, he walked 'round Bedford Basin, a distance of eighteen miles, and after his return in the afternoon 'thought he would go down and take tea with Betsey' (Mrs. Elizabeth Wisdom, his daughter), who lived at the lower end of the town; there was a little affectation in the latter part. His death was the result of injuries sustained in a severe fall, his leg being broken." He died 12 January 1826, aged eighty-five years.

- III. Elizabeth, b. in Boston 1772; m. circa September 1790 Edward Godfrey Wisdom of Halifax, house carpenter; d. 3 January 1861, aged eighty-nine years, leaving no issue.
- IV. Mary, b. in Boston circa 1774; m. Samuel King of Boston and had six children, of whom Mrs. Mary (King) Buttrick alone survived in 1871.

112. JOSEPH³ GREENWOOD (Nathaniel² (106), Samuel¹), bapt. 15 January 1743/4; m. 18 July 1765 Margery Reed; d. 1779(?).

Joseph Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at the Old North Church. He was a cooper. He married Margery Reed, the ceremony being performed by Reverend Thomas Brown of the Second Church, in that part of Woburn which is now Burlington. She was the daughter of Swithen (b. October 1711, d. 19 February 1790) and Margery (Perry) Reed (intentions 16 September 1737 in Boston), who came probably from Wales and settled first in Nottingham West (formerly Dunstable, now Hudson, N. H.), and moved afterwards to Woburn, Mass., where he purchased a farm in 1740.¹ His widow died 25 May 1806, aged ninety-five years.

Joseph Greenwood owned a dwelling house and lot in the North End of Boston which he mortgaged to his father-in-law, 12 December 1766, for £120. The mortgage was discharged 6 October 1768 and on the same day he and his wife, Margery, sold the property for £106:13:4 to Fortescue Vernon, merchant of Boston.² On 9 October 1770 John Reed and Martha, his wife, of Spencer, Worcester County, Mass.,³ sold Joseph Greenwood, cooper of Boston, for £500, a farm of eighty-five acres in Spencer with buildings thereon. The next day, Joseph and Margery Greenwood reconveyed the same farm to John and Martha Reed for £200 on the condition that "it is hereby to be understood that the present writing is to be in force no longer than the duration of the natural lives of the said John Reed and Martha, his wife, and that upon their decease this writing is to become null and void, and of no kind of force in law whatever; and furthermore, if the said John Reed and Martha, his wife, should survive the said Joseph Greenwood, that this writing is to be enforced no longer than during the natural life of the said John Reed and Martha Reed, his wife, as aforesaid, but that the heirs of the said Joseph Greenwood shall, after the decease of the said John Reed and Martha Reed, his wife, as aforesaid, quietly and peaceably enjoy the aforementioned premises in the same manner as they might and would have done if this writing had not been made and executed." The deed was recorded 17 October 1770.

On 1 September 1779 John and Martha Reed of Spencer conveyed by warranty deed, for £2,000, to Samuel Denny of Leicester, Worcester County, fifty-four and one-half acres in the northeast part of Spencer, "being a part of the land I now dwell on," with an orchard on the same. It would be interesting to know if Joseph Greenwood or his wife was alive in 1779 when this latter conveyance was made, and whether the property was lost to his heirs. John Reed of Spencer died 31 January 1787. In his will dated 1 August 1777 and proved 6 November 1787 he gives to his wife, Martha, the whole of his real and personal estate during her natural life, and to his son, George Reed, if alive at his decease, six shillings. His wife was appointed executrix with "power and liberty to dispose of all that may remain of my estate at her decease as she may think best." No inventory of the estate is on record. His widow died 13 November 1791, aged eighty-two years.

Joseph Greenwood is mentioned in the will of his father, Nathaniel, dated 25 January 1779, but the date of his death is not known. Probably his widow was the Margery Greenwood of Boston whose marriage intentions to William Prumble (North Church), 9 April 1780, were recorded. If so, Joseph Greenwood died in 1779. On 15 January 1788 administration on his estate was granted in Boston to his son, Peter Greenwood, mariner of Boston, then in his twenty-second year, but no inventory or account is on record.

Priscilla Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at the New North Church. She was married by Reverend Mr. Kibby, from her father's home in Salutation Alley, to Elisha Wild of Boston. He was probably the son of Samuel and Susannah (Hayward) Wild, who was born 17 October 1759.² Elisha Wild was a tailor. He died 26 November 1815, aged fifty-six years.

He was struck as he was stepping from the ladder to the turret and died 4 April 1864.³ His wife died 24 August 1857 at Boston. They had a son and three daughters.

115. REBECCA SNELLING⁴ GREENWOOD (*Nathaniel*³ (108), *Nathaniel*², *Samuel*¹), bapt. 2 November 1777; m. 17 November 1802 Robert Lash, Jr.; d. 13 March 1810.³

Rebecca Snelling Greenwood was born in Beverly, Mass. She married Robert Lash, Jr., probably son of Robert and Johanna (Brown) Lash (m. 9 February 1765). Mr. Lash, Sr., was a man of "literary tastes, a courteous and hospitable gentleman of the old school." His house in Salutation Alley was the second from that of Nathaniel Greenwood (108). Over the gateway was a fine head of Julius Caesar carved by Simeon Skilling, who carved most of the figure-heads issuing from the Port of Boston for many years. There are examples of his work in many of the churches, notably the Corinthian capitals of the New North Church. Porter in his Rambles in Old Boston (1887) says, "The parlor (of Mr. Lash's house), with its large fireplace set with Scripture tiles, was in the rear of the house on the sunny side overlooking a grass garden which extended back to the Methodist meeting-house." Mr. Lash was teller of the Boston Bank for more than sixty years and a deacon of the New North Church. He died 4 October 1818 aged seventy-seven years, and was buried in Christ Church cemetery.

Children of Robert and Rebecca Snelling (Greenwood) Lash:

- I. Rebecca Greenwood⁵ Lash, b. in Boston 22 October 1803; d. unmarried in Chelsea, 25 October 1902.
- II. Mary Ann Lash, b. in Boston February 1805; d. unmarried in Chelsea, 2 December 1889.
- III. Charlotte Lash, b. in Boston 30 December 1806; m. John Sawin; d. 21 December 1884. Her husband was an inventor and clock maker of Boston. He was associated with Willard, the celebrated clock maker. Mr. Sawin was born 13 September 1799 in Roxbury, son of John Pierce and Abigail (Partridge) Sawin, who were married in Roxbury, 16 December 1798. He died 28 March 1863 and was buried under Christ Church, Salem Street, Boston. Mrs. Sawin was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, Everett, Mass. A daughter, Susan L. Sawin, lived in Chelsea, Mass.
- IV. Elizabeth C. Lash, b. in Boston November 1808; d. unmarried in Chelsea, 13 July 1895.

116. EUNICE⁴ GREENWOOD (Nathaniel³ (108), Nathaniel², Samuel¹), b. 1781, bapt. 20 May 1791; m. 29 October 1802 Isaac Harris; d. 11 April 1849.

Eunice Greenwood was born in Beverly, Mass., and baptized in the Second Congregational Church. She married Isaac Harris, the ceremony being performed at the First Baptist Church of Boston by Reverend Samuel Stillman. Isaac Harris, mastmaker of Boston, was born 1 April 1779, one of ten children of Samuel Harris, mastmaker, who had served an apprenticeship with an uncle, Nathaniel Greenwood (106). It appears, therefore, that Samuel Harris was a son of Captain William Harris who married Abigail Greenwood (105) in 1717, and that Isaac Harris and his wife, Eunice Greenwood, were second cousins. Isaac Harris, Robert Lash, John Snelling, John Lewis, Isaac Parker and William Savage, all still living in 1852, were the six boys who, in 1792, received the first Franklin medals at the North Grammar School. Isaac Harris is said to have first applied in this country the important improvement of making ships' masts in sections, and he constructed the first shears used at the Navy Yard in Charlestown for placing the heavy masts of war vessels in position.¹ He put the new sticks in the old frigate, Constitution, in 1812. This ship had been successfully launched on 21 October 1797 after two former attempts. On September the 20th, the day first appointed for the launching, the Stars and Stripes were bent on and hoisted by two workmen employed on the vessel, namely, Isaac Harris and Samuel Bentley, much to the wrath of Commodore Nicholson, who was absent at his breakfast and had expected to reserve the honor for himself. On the 29th of December 1810, when the Old South Church was on fire, Isaac Harris succeeded in reaching the roof and extinguishing the flames, for which he received a silver pitcher. He was a member of the City Government, Fire Warden, and Representative in the Legislature. Porter, in his Rambles in Old Boston (1887), says that Isaac Harris bought in 1815 the large brick house on North Bennett Street, built a century before, and continued to live there until his death in 1869. "No man in this century has been identified with the North End by residence and occupation for a longer period or with more honorable record than Isaac Harris." In a pamphlet entitled "Rich Men of Massachusetts" (1851), by A. Forbes and J. W. Greene, he is described as a "prudent, industrious, worthy man," with a fortune valued at $100,000. Mr. Harris died 8 June 1869.

117. ANDREW⁴ GREENWOOD (*Miles*³ (110), *Nathaniel*², *Samuel*¹), b. 1768; m. 25 October 1809 Ann Harrod; d. 15 November 1816.

Andrew Greenwood was born in Boston and educated at Dummer Academy, Newbury, Mass., where he was fitted for college under the celebrated master, Samuel Moody. Owing to his father's reverses, Andrew abandoned his classical pursuits and returned to his father's home in Salem, where he studied law. After his admission to the Bar he went to Charleston, S. C., but while there his health failed and he made a voyage to the West Indies. Shortly after his return to Salem he removed to Bath, Maine, where he established himself as the first lawyer of that town. He continued his practise there until his death in 1816, except for two years, 1800-'02, at Portland, Maine. Andrew Greenwood was a Federalist. In 1800 he delivered a eulogy at Bath on the death of Washington, which was printed in Hallowell. He received the degree of A.M. from Bowdoin College in 1808 and was an Overseer of the College 1800-'16. In 1813 and '14 he represented the town of Bath in the General Court of Massachusetts, Maine being a district of that state at the time. His legal abilities are highly spoken of in Willis' History of the Law, the Courts and the Lawyers of Maine. (1863).

His wife, Ann Harrod, was born 15 November 1779, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Harrod of Newburyport. She was a cousin of Ann Harrod, born 1774, daughter of Anna Treat (107-I) and Joseph Harrod of Haverhill, who married Judge Thomas Boylston Adams of Quincy in 1805.¹

“Andrew Greenwood, Esq., departed this life Nov. 15th, 1816, in the 49th year of his age. Erected by the Bar of the County of Lincoln of which he was a respectable member, as a tribute of regard to his talents and virtues.

To a mind ardent and vigorous, was united a brilliant imagination which eminently qualified him to take a conspicuous rank at the bar. As a citizen he was attached to his country and its laws. In private life his manners were amiable and his sense of honor scrupulously correct.”

His widow, Ann (Harrod) Greenwood, was living in Chicago in 1863 with her daughter, Mrs. Buford.

He was born 5 July 1808, son of Waldo and Catharine (Treat) Peirce of Frankfort, Maine,¹ and died 16 December 1854. His widow married (2) Major General Buford. He was born 13 January 1807 in Woodford County, Kentucky, son of John and Nancy (Hickman) Buford, and grandson of Simeon Buford who emigrated to Kentucky in 1789 from Bedford County, Va. He died 28 March 1883.² His wife survived him and was living in Chicago in 1895. She had no issue by either of her marriages.

118. MILES ⁴ GREENWOOD (Miles ³ (110), Nathaniel ², Samuel ¹), b. 1769; m. about 1797 Leah (Demarest) Gurnee; d. 12 January 1831.

Miles Greenwood was probably born in Boston, though possibly in Salem, Mass. He attended Dummer's Academy in Newbury, Mass., and in 1787 ran away from home and joined the expedition fitted out by certain merchants of Boston for the purpose of opening up the western fur trade. The expedition sailed 30 September 1787 and consisted of a privately armed ship, Columbia, under Captain John Kendrick, with a ninety-ton sloop, Lady Washington, in charge of Lieutenant Robert Gray, for a tender. Becoming separated after rounding Cape Horn in January 1788, they rendez-voused in Nootka Sound, in September of that year, and stopped there throughout the winter and following summer. At that time, Bodega y Quadra, the Spanish Commandant from California, was holding the place. Miles Greenwood being a handsome, lively fellow and a good dancer, it is said that he was selected as a partner for the Governor's wife at some of the entertainments. Captain Kendrick and Lieutenant Gray exchanged vessels in the fall of 1788. The latter proceeded in the Columbia to Canton and arrived finally at Boston, 10 August 1790, with an exchange cargo of tea, etc. Financially the expedition was a failure, but the Columbia was the first vessel to carry the American flag around the globe. Both vessels had explored the waters adjacent to Nootka Sound, and, perceiving indications of a great river, Gray made a second voyage to the locality. On the 11th of May 1791 he discovered a large stream to which he gave the name of his vessel, Columbia. Captain Kendrick in the Lady Washington explored the northwest coast and islands in the Pacific. In 1791 he made a voyage to the South Seas. Never having returned to the East, he was accidentally killed in 1797 by a salute fired off Hawaii.

Miles Greenwood probably returned with Lieutenant Gray on his first or second voyage, and is heard of next in New York state, where he taught school in a place formerly called Jockey Hollow in Orange County, west of Greenwood Lake, near New Milford in Warwick township. Here he met and married about 1797 Mrs. Leah (Demarest) Gurnee, a widow. She was born 19 July 1771, daughter of Cornelius and Margaret (Demarest) Demarest. Her father, Cornelius Demarest, fought in the Revolution in the company of Major Wisner's Scouts under Colonel John Hathorn. He afterwards settled in Warwick, N. Y.¹ He was the son of Samuel Samuelson Demarest and his wife, Leah Davidse Demarest. His will, dated 6 December 1821, and probated in Orange Co. 22 May 1823, mentions his daughter Leah. She was the mother of a daughter by her first husband, who married Captain Alexander Thompson of the New York & Liverpool packet line.

Miles Greenwood removed to Paulus Hook, N. J., and kept a tavern near the ferry. Paulus Hook was formerly owned by the Van Vorst family. In 1802 there was only one house there, but in November 1804 it was bought by a company who laid it out in blocks and streets, and it must have been about this time that Miles Greenwood located there. From 1808-'14 he was in the grocery business in New York City, and for the next three years he kept the Union Hotel at 68 William Street, where he had formerly carried on the grocery business. In 1817 he moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he became interested in the socialistic views of Robert Dale Owen. Miles Greenwood and his wife separated in 1823, when he joined the communist society started by Owen about that time in New Harmony, Indiana. Upon the failure of this scheme he returned to Cincinnati and lived with his son, Miles, until his death, 12 January 1831. He was talented and literary, but somewhat eccentric in the last years of his life.

John Ventiman Greenwood was born in Boston. In 1776, at the age of ten years, he and his father accompanied the British troops to Halifax, N. S., where he continued to reside until his death. Eventually, he succeeded his father in his business as mastmaker. He married Mary Gay, daughter of Samuel (b. 1754, Harvard 1775), who went to Fort Cumberland, N. B., presumably as a Loyalist; he was Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and died 21 January 1847. Mary (Gay) Greenwood died 21 February 1837.¹

Mr. Greenwood was for many years the head of the Sandemanian Church in Halifax. "His death was in keeping with his life,—on a Sunday morning he had given out the Hymn, had sat down, but when the hymn was ended his soul had flown to the God he loved." Stark says, "Those now living who have ever been with these Sandemanians . . . will never forget the calm Godly faces of such men as old Mr. Howe, Mr. Greenwood and Mr. Mansfield. Strange to say, none of the Howes and very few, if any, of the other families have followed in the track of these good men and women as to creed. It is to be hoped that many of them have been influenced for good by what they may have recalled of such worthy ancestors. Old Mr. Greenwood fell dead in the room while reading, and Mr. Mansfield died the same day from some accidental cause."²

Mr. Greenwood's will, dated 26 April 1842, mentions his wife Mary, daughters Anne and Mary, son Edward G. W., merchant of Halifax, granddaughter Elizabeth M., daughter of Andrew Richardson, and his sister Mrs. Elizabeth Wisdom. His widow and son were executors.

Peter Greenwood was born in Boston and baptized at Christ Church. When he was fifteen years old he shipped on the eighteen-gun sloop, Wintthrop, Captain George Little, for six months from the time of sailing from Boston, 19 March 1781.

He was married in Trinity Church, Boston, by Reverend Samuel Parker to Mercy Thompson Degills. On 5 February 1800 he sold out all his interests in the estate of his grandfather, Nathaniel Greenwood, to the executors for $175.00. His name appears in the Boston Directories first as a mariner and later (1807) as a laborer. He was buried, probably, in Boston, 17 August 1818 as one of the City's poor (no age given).¹

122. SARAH MILES⁵ GREENWOOD (Andrew⁴ (117), Miles³, Nathaniel², Samuel¹), b. 30 November 1810; m. 25 October 1834 Honorable George Lunt; d. 20 July 1842.

Sarah Miles Greenwood was born in Bath, Maine. Her husband, George Lunt, was born 31 December 1803 in Newburyport, Mass., son of Captain Abel and Phoebe (Tilton) Lunt, and graduated from Harvard College in 1824. He was an eminent lawyer, poet, author and journalist, and several times member of the State Legislature. Mrs. Sarah Lunt died 20 July 1842. Her husband married (2), 4 December 1845, Emily Ashton, by whom he had several children, whose births are recorded in the Newbury Vital Records. Mr. Lunt removed to Boston in 1848 and died in Scituate, 16 May 1885.¹

Miles Greenwood

of Cincinnati, 1807-1885.

Child of Edmund Burke and Mary Eliza (Greenwood) Owen:

- I. Edmund C.⁶ Owen. He was a flour merchant of New York City and lived in Brooklyn from 1861 to 1873, at which time his name disappeared from the City Directory.

124. MILES⁵ GREENWOOD (Miles⁴ (118), Miles³, Nathaniel², Samuel¹), b. 19 March 1807; m. (1) 6 May 1832 Miss Howard W. Hills; m. (2) 1836 Phoebe Jane Hopson; d. 5 November 1885.

Miles Greenwood was born in Jersey City, N. J. He lived in New York City with his parents when a child and removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, with them in 1817. During the years 1825-'29 he lived with his father at New Harmony, Indiana, on the Wabash, where Robert Dale Owen, the Scotch Socialist, had established his Communist Society in 1824. He was then sent to Pittsburg by the Community to learn the iron business. Upon his return he established a foundry at New Harmony, but it did not succeed and he went to Cincinnati. Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper for April 25, 1857, says: "Twenty-five years ago Miles Greenwood went to Cincinnati a poor young man and started a blacksmithery on the outskirts of the town. He now employs 450 men, pays $3,500 for wages weekly, affords support to 1,200 persons and turns out $600,000 worth of work annually. Last week he gave a grand feast to his people to celebrate the quarter century." Cist observes, in his Cincinnati in 1859: "Miles Greenwood's manufactory, well known as the Eagle Iron Works, on the corner of Canal and Walnut Streets, extending northward to Twelfth Street, eastwardly to Main, and on the west to Jackson Street, embraces in its operations, besides its iron and brass founderies, machine shops, a steam heating department, etc., and gives constant employment to about five hundred hands, its operations having never been suspended for a single business day since its establishment in 1832. . . . There is not probably in the United States, and certainly in no other country, so wide a range of articles manufactured in any one establishment."

In the year 1854 a movement was started in Cincinnati to reorganize the fire department, abolish the volunteer companies, establish the pay system and to introduce the steam fire engine. "The change encountered much opposition at first from the incredulous adherents to the old system and was only finally carried through and established on a firm and successful basis by the perseverance and ability of one man—a man of tried energy and experience and who, happily, possessed the unrestricted confidence of all parties to the controversy to which the introduction of so radical a change in a long-established custom had given rise. To Miles Greenwood, a public-spirited manufacturer who gave the time and labor of two years to its government and organization, the city of Cincinnati, and prospectively the whole country, is indebted for the triumphant introduction of that admirable fire system for which the city has been now for several years distinguished. Not only was all opposition to the innovation speedily silenced, but the entire voice and approbation of the community was heartily won over to its support. Not a man could now be found to consent to even a temporary return to the old irresponsible and turbulent volunteer system."¹ He used to boast that in thus abolishing the old-fashioned fire-engine house and its attendant vices he had done more for the cause of morality than many preachers. During the establishment of the new system, one of the difficulties "to be met was to obtain the services of a chief engineer to the new organization so as to carry it successfully into effect. On being applied to, Miles Greenwood consented to serve in that capacity until the contemplated change should be fully carried out and all resistance to the reform should cease, devoting his well-known energies to the cause, and not only paid out of his own means an assistant engineer but generously assigned his salary for his entire term of office to the treasury of the Ohio Mechanics' Institute."²

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Greenwood contracted for the rifling of the old smooth-bore muskets and, during Governor William Dennison's administration in Ohio, 25,324 smooth bores were thus changed at a cost of only one dollar and a quarter per gun. His machines were able to rifle three thousand muskets a day. The Greenwood Rifle thus manufactured became quite popular, and the troops considered it the equal of the Enfield in precision and range, and also more destructive, as it carried a heavier weight of metal. The State having only thirty-three smooth bore six-pounders, twenty-seven of these were rifled; twelve additional batteries were contracted for, and the casting of the guns was immediately begun by Miles Greenwood. At the beginning of the war he also made twelve anchors for pontoon bridges on twenty-four hours' notice from General John C. Fremont.

Miles Greenwood gave a banquet and ball, 19 March 1862, to the employees of his extensive establishment and their families, upwards of eleven hundred persons being seated at the table. At the head of the main room in Jefferson Hall, where the feast was given, was the inscription:

"THE EAGLE IRON WORKS
HER RIFLE MUSKETS AND BRONZE CANNON ARE DEATH TO TRAITORS."

During the entertainment a fine large American flag was presented to Mr. Greenwood on behalf of his employees.

The Cincinnati Daily Commercial of 20 March 1862 says: "Mr. Greenwood is eminently a practical man and yet with all this he has not been swallowed up by all this business, but has kept alive a feeling for the beauties of nature and art, as the adornment of the ground surrounding his residence, and the paintings upon the walls of his house testify. It is this faculty of keeping alive with the spirit of the time and the sympathies of the people that has enabled Mr. Greenwood to succeed in enterprises which it was sometimes declared would fail. In this way, too, he has managed to keep a full complement of hands almost constantly employed, even through the dullest seasons."

The New York Times, 22 October 1862, states: "One iron-turret monitor harbour and sea-vessel, to be called the Tippecanoe, is contracted to be built by Miles Greenwood, Esq., at Cincinnati, and two of the same kind and size are contracted to be built by the Niles Works at Cincinnati—one to be called the Catawba.”

The New York Journalist, 23 December 1862, says: “Miles Greenwood of Cincinnati has made for the army and navy twenty-nine batteries of brass guns (bronze field guns) at a cost to the government of $252,000.”

The buildings of the Iron Works were destroyed by fire in 1852, and during the Civil War they were set on fire three times due to the fact that the works were employed entirely on behalf of the government.

In 1869 Miles Greenwood was President of the Board of Directors of the Cincinnati and Southern Railway.¹

Wills and Parish Registers

EARLY NOTES

The family of Greenwood in England is said to originate with Wyomarus,¹ a person living in the year 1154, who had been attached to the household of the Empress Maud as caterer or purveyor. The land whereon Wyomarus became located, in the western part of the manor of Wakefield in Yorkshire, was then held by Isabel, who was the sole heiress of the ancient Earls of Warren (de Warenne) and a kinswoman of the Empress. Nothing is known of the antecedents of Wyomarus, but assuming that he was of good birth, from the position he held, it is ventured here to suppose him to have been a near relative, if not a grandson, of Wybomarc, Lord of Ask, and Chief Steward of Stephen, Earl of Richmond.

Before proceeding further it may be well to give a brief sketch of the ducal family of Brittany, or that portion of it which followed the fortunes of the Norman Conqueror in England and was honored with the Earldom of Richmond. Hawise, daughter of Richard Sans Peur, third Duke of Normandy, married Geoffrey, Duke of Brittany, to which title their son, Eudo, succeeded in 1066, and died in 1077. Eudo, by his wife, Agnes (daughter of Alanus Cagnart), had several sons, of whom Alain le Roux, in recompense for his services in the conquest of England, received from his second cousin, Duke William, four hundred and forty-two lordships and the title of Earl of Richmond. Alain le Roux also received the hand of the Duke's daughter, Constance, in marriage, and he built the Castle of Richmond in Yorkshire on the banks of the River Swale. He died in 1089 without children and was succeeded by his brother, Alain le Noir. The latter also died childless in 1093 and his younger brother, Stephen, Count of Pentiviae, became the third Earl of Richmond. Stephen spent little of his time in England, and died in 1137 at a very advanced age. His son and successor

(by his wife, Avicia, daughter of the Earl of Guingamp) was Alanus le Sauvage, who assisted King Stephen in his contest with Maud the Empress. This Earl died in 1146, leaving a son, Conanus le Petit, by his wife, Bertha, daughter and heiress of his kinsman, Conanus le Grosse, Duke of Brittany, who died 1148. Bertha married secondly Eudo, Viscount Porhoet, who assumed the title of Duke of Brittany, but was afterwards dispossessed by his step-son, Conanus le Petit. The latter was now both Duke of Brittany and Earl of Richmond. He married Margaret, the granddaughter of King David of Scotland, and at his death (1171) left a daughter, Constance, wife of Geoffrey, the third son of Henry II, and mother of Prince Arthur of Brittany.

According to the general survey made at the close of the reign of William the First (1085-'86), Wyhomarc, "homo comitis," held extensive possessions in Yorkshire—at Easby, Harmby, and Leybourne—received from Alanus, the first Earl of Richmond. During the Saxon rule the two former places had been manors held by Torfin, a mesne lord under Earl Edwin of Mercia. Lands under the Normans were reckoned by carucatae, or so much as sufficed for one plow, including meadows, pasture and buildings for householders and cattle; there was also the carucis or pratum; that is, the meadow for oxen employed on the plowed lands; the silvae or woodlands; and the waste or uncultivated lands. On these demesnes we usually find so many villani, who held under a species of tenure, and the bordarii or boors, who had merely a hut and a small piece of ground. A list of Wyhomarc's extensive possessions, including meadowlands and woodlands in various localities, together with the "villani" and the "bordarii" who held tenure from him, is found recorded in Domesday Book.

Wyhomarc, Dominus de Ask, assumed his title from the fact that much of his possessions lay in the vicinity of the Ask, a small tributary of the River Tees. The name is probably of British origin from Ascth or summus, referring to the high and remote source of the stream among the mountains which bound the vale to which it gives name.

From their vast possessions the de Asks were liberal contributors to the religious institutions in that section of the country, and to Wymar or Guiomar is attributed the foundation of a Benedictine priory at Hipswell, and also an anriche, or abode of an anchoress, at Richmond. In the year 1088 Stephen, Count of Pentiviae, before attaining the title of Earl of Richmond, founded the Abbey of St. Mary at York, to which his Chief Steward (or Sewar) Wymar gave the Chapel of St. Martin at Richmond, where a cell of Benedictine monks from the Abbey were then fixed, with John de Poppylton as their first prior. The gift was confirmed by Pope Eugenius the Third in 1146. To this Priory of St. Martin at Richmond, Earl Stephen gave two sheaves of corn growing upon his demesnes in the township of Catteric, while Wymarus, the founder, gave two parts of all his tithes of corn of all his demesnes at Colburn; two parts of his farm tithe at Couton-east (Athlow-Couton), and all his tithes in the four Coutons; two sheaves of corn grown upon his demesnes at Dalton (Dawton) upon Teyse, four carucates of land in Edlingthorpe, two sheaves of all the corn grown upon his demesnes at Ellerton on the Swale, the same from his lands at Ereholm, and all his tithes in the district of Fletham and Kirkby. From Forset (north of Richmond) Earl Stephen gave two parts of his tithe corn of all his demesnes in that territory, and Wymarus gave one carucate of land thence, and also all his tithes from both the Hotons (Hutton), Layburn and Wicra, with two sheaves of all his corn, half a carucate of land, and the church at Thornton super Yore.

Camden in his Britannia mentions the village of Maverick, "where stood an Abbey built by the Askes men in old time of great name," but the building here situated in the deanery of Richmond was a priory or nunnery. WARNER, SON OF GUIOMAR, who is supposed like his father to have been attached to the household of the Earl of Richmond, gave to this Priory an annual rent of one mark out of his mill in Ellerton on Swale, a gift which was confirmed by WYMER, SON OF WARNER. Whitaker in his History of Richmondsbire says, "They had ample domain about their house, these wealthy ladies, and must have been objects of envy to their poor sisters of Ellerton, the remains of whose house on the narrowest scale of monastic architecture, are nearly opposite on the southern bank of the Swale." This small priory of Ellerton, in the deanery of Catteric (now parish of Downholm), was inhabited by the White or Cistercian nuns, and is thought to have been founded in the time of Henry II by this same Warnerus, son of Guiomar, or by his son Wymarus.

WARNER and his son, WYMARUS, granted to St. Leonard's Hospital at York the ninth sheaf of their demesne lands in Ellerton, and when King Edward I confirmed certain grants to this hospital in 1273 we find among them those of Wymarus of Eskelby.

ROGER DE GUNYMER (Guiemer or Guiomar) and WARNER, his brother, gave the town of Engelby (or Ingelby) to the Abbey of Fors on the Yore in the deanery of Catteric. It is said that the gift as made by HUGH, son of WYMAR and GARNARUS his brother, was confirmed by King Henry II, Alanus Earl of Brittany and fourth Earl of Richmond, and his father-in-law, Conanus Duke of Brittany; but this statement is erroneous, first in the name Hugh, and second in making Alanus and Conanus contemporary with Henry II, they having died some years before his accession to the throne.

Alanus III Comes Britt. & Ang. between the years 1137 and 1146 gave to Fountains Abbey¹ certain lands near Burton super Ior (Yore), and among the witnesses to the grant were Scollandus dapifer, Rualdo constabularius, and GUARINO FILIO GUIMERI. To this same Abbey ROGER BRETON DE MERKINGFELD, son of Roger de Gunymer, above mentioned, gave thirty-six acres from Merkingfeld, which is situated in the West Riding of Yorkshire in the vicinity of the Abbey; he appears to have been the father of William, who in 1271 confirmed all that this religious institution had of his fee. RALPH, son of ROGER, son of GUIMER, confirmed what his brother, ROGER BRETON, had granted, and also gave seven acres at Merking-feld, his house in that town, twenty acres of woodland between Thrimhongate and Brerclif, and four acres, north of the latter place. ROGER, son of RALPH, son of ROGER DE GUIEMER, confirmed all the gifts in Asmunderby and Merkingfeld accorded to Fountains Abbey by his father and uncle.

From the foregoing notes, drawn chiefly from Dugdale's Monasticum Anglicanum, the subjoined pedigree has been compiled, differing slightly from the one found among the collections of Peter Le Neve, Norroy, and published by Whitaker in his History of Richmondshire.

WYHOMARUS OR GUIOMAR

D'ns de Ask, attached to household of Alanus, first Earl of Richmond in England; living during reigns of William I, William II, and Henry I.

Having indulged somewhat in the imaginative, let us now take up facts alone. Whitaker, in his History of Leeds or Ducatus Leodiensis, speaks of "the very ancient family of the Greenwoods, descended from WYOMARUS who flourished anno 1154." As has been mentioned, he was attached to the retinue of Maud the Empress as caterer or purveyor,¹ but what time he served in that capacity is not mentioned. Maud may possibly have maintained a household during the period of her first widowhood in England, 1125-'27, surely so throughout her long contest with Stephen from 1139 to 1147, and we know that during the months of May and June 1141 she held her court as Queen, or "Lady of the English," being for a portion of that time in London. From 1139 to 1141 she lived principally in the Castle of Gloucester, drawing her resources from the war itself, or from the voluntary aid of friends, and being in such want of money that her very household and table were kept at the expense of Milo Fitz Walter, Governor of the Royal Castle of Gloucester, and hereditary Constable of England. When the Empress fled from London she took up her residence at Oxford. She was in England at the time of the accession of Henry II in December 1154 when, being "a princess of natural sagacity, improved by experience," she was declared President of the Council which he had formed to assist him in the weighty concerns of government; but having witnessed the consummation of her wishes in the coronation of her son she soon retired to the Continent and died at Rouen, 10 September 1167, aged sixty-five years. Arnulphus, Bishop of Lisieux, one of the Norman prelates present at the coronation of Henry, wrote the life of the Empress, but it has never been made public and the manuscript is still preserved in the Library of the College of Navarre at Paris.

Respecting the household officers of Maud, little information can be gathered. At one time her chamberlain appears to have been one Drogo, who had a grant of land and certain privileges at Lockswell (Lockwellam), co. Wilts., which was soon afterwards transferred to the Abbey of Stanly, and in the year 1138 at Devizes, William de Pontearch, Chamberlain, was a witness to the foundation charter of Bordsley Abbey, co. Worcs., established by his royal mistress. Her Sewar (or dapifer) was Robert de Courci, Lord of Stoke-Courcy, co. Somerset, who had served in the same capacity under Henry I and had been created one of the Great Barons at Westminster in 1133.

From the English Baronets of Thomas Wottan (vol. III, 1727) we find that another steward of the House to Maud was John Scott, Lord of Calverly (in right of his mother). He was the son of John Scott who came in with Maud, and who married "Larderina, daughter of Alphonous Gospatrick, Lord of the Manor of Calvery, and many other manors, and a person of great eminency." The second John Scott was living in 1136 and married the daughter of Sir John Lutterell of Hooton-Pannel, near Doncaster. He was the father of William (or Walter), living 1176, "who gave the vicarage of Calverly to the Chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary at York. . . . He married Joan, daughter of Sir John Swillington, by whom he had issue five sons," and through whom he was brother-in-law of Robert Grenewode, a grandson of Wyomarus the Purveyor.

The name Wyomarus is not infrequent on the ancient records, and as late as 1219 we find Wymarus, Seneschal of William, second Earl of Arundell, who held lands in the county of Norfolk from William de Ingelose. He was summoned with others at the desire of Hervicus de Ingelose to show by what right (quo warranto) such lands were held. (Vide Rotuli Litt. Clausarum, vol. I, 1833-'44.)

During the thirteenth century the English gentry began to assume surnames, since it was generally looked upon as a cause of reproach not to have a second or family name. These names were at first borrowed from the towns, manors, or castles of which the individual might be possessed, just as the Norman nobility were known by the names of their estates or birth-places upon the Continent. Even among this latter class it was not infrequent for a younger branch to drop the old patronymic on coming into possession of some English seat or estate. It may safely be assumed therefore, from the foregoing, that the Greenwood family of Yorkshire derived their name from the place where they were chiefly located for several centuries, namely Grenewode Legbe. That the family name existed from an early period is learned from a mention made in the Rotuli Hundredorum of "Adamus Grenewerd" living in the Hundred of Schyrayk, co. York., in 1275.

An increase in the number of coat-armors also ensued at this period, some obtaining this favor from having served in the crusades or in wars nearer home, and others taking with some slight modification "from the shields of those to whom they owed suit and service." It is possible that the arms borne by the Greenwoods of Yorkshire are of this period, although the date of their grant is not known.

Greenwood-Lee, Hey-Greenwood or Greenwood-hawe, and the Learings mentioned in the family wills recorded at York in the beginning of the sixteenth century, were situated in the far-famed vale of Calder, in what is now the township of Heptonstall (wapentake of Morley), West Riding of Yorkshire. This township, one of the two parochial chapelries of Halifax, consists of Heptonstall, Wadsworth, Erringdon, Langfield and Stanfield (called also Stansfield cum Routanstall, or cum Blackshaw). Heptonstall or Errington Park was inclosed by one of the Earls of Warren, but was disparked in 1449 and became subsequently the township of Erringdon. Within the chapelry the manufacture of worsted is extensively carried on, having been established as early as the reign of Edward III. To this occupation the town of Halifax owes its rapid growth; through the introduction of the Flemish manufacturers it had increased from but thirteen houses in 1443 to five hundred and twenty by the year 1540, and Camden describes the town in 1574 as "unusually extensive and populous."

The village of Heptonstall, though situated on a cold, barren site, difficult of access, commands a pleasing view down the rich vale of Calder. The name as derived from the Saxon hep (high) may mean the High Place. Here the Reverend Charles Greenwood, rector of Thornhill, founded a free grammar school and endowed it (1643) with lands and tenements of the annual value of £20. (See will No. 138.) The parochial chapel of Heptonstall, dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket, was probably built soon after the murder of that bishop (1170), but the original edifice was taken down and rebuilt towards the close of Henry VII's reign, about 1508, at which time, or immediately after, Richard Grenewod was chaplain.

Heptonstall was formerly a part of the parish of Halifax and came within the boundaries of the ancient manor of Wakefield, which ran westward from Normanton in Yorkshire more than thirty miles to the borders of Lancashire. According to Domesday Book, wherein it is called Wachefeld, the manor had been part of the royal demesne of Edward the Confessor, and at the time of the survey belonged to the crown. Some say that it was bestowed by William the Conqueror upon his kinsman, William de Warenne (Guarine), as a marriage portion with his daughter, Gundred. De Warenne took his name from the fief of Varenne, in the district of Saint-Aubin-le-Cauf, and received for his services after the conquest two hundred and ninety-eight manors in England. About the year 1078 he and his wife founded the Cluniac Priory of St. Pancras at Lewes in Sussex, and here he was buried in 1089, having been created Earl of Surrey a short time previous by William II. In regard to the manor of Wakefield, it is much more probable that it did not come into the possession of the de Warrens until 1116, when it was granted by Henry I to his nephew, William, the second Earl of Warren and Surrey, and cousin of Maud the Empress. This Earl, about 1120, bestowed upon the Priory of St. Pancras several possessions in Yorkshire, among them the church of Wakefield with the chapel of Horbirie, the church of Dewesbury with the chapel of Hertesheved, and the church of Halifax, etc.

William, the third Earl of Warren, after engaging in the conflicts at home, set out for the east in 1146 and was killed in Palestine in 1148, leaving an only daughter and heir, Isabel, who became the wife of William de Blois, Earl of Mortain, natural son of King Stephen. After the death of her first husband, Isabel married Hameline Plantagenet, base-brother of Henry II, and in this family the titles and possessions of the de Warrens remained until the death of John, the eighth Earl of Surrey in 1347, who died without issue. By his will the northern part of the estates including the manor of Wakefield, with

Hatfield, Sowerby, Dewesbury, Halifax, Hertonestal, Saltonstal, etc., reverted to the crown. The southern estates passed to his nephew, Richard Fitzalan 2d, Earl of Arundel. Camden tells us that the full title of this last Earl was "as seene in the circumscription of his seale, Earle of Warren, of Surry and of Strathern in Scotland, Lord of Bromfield and of Yale, and Count-palatine."

In 1362 Edward III bestowed all the lands beyond the Trent formerly belonging to the late John de Warren on his fifth son, Edmund de Langley, Earl of Cambridge, created Duke of York in 1385. His son and heir, Edward Plantagenet left no male issue, and the estates and honors passed to his nephew, Richard, son of that Richard Duke of Cambridge who was beheaded for conspiracy against Henry V. Richard, Duke of York, was slain at the battle of Wakefield (1460), and the manor of Wakefield now came a second time to the crown in the person of his son, Edward IV.

Throughout the entire period during which the manor of Wakefield belonged to the House of York, that is to say, for almost one hundred and fifty years, until the accession of Henry VIII in 1509, the pedigree of the Yorkshire Greenwoods as drawn up by Dugdale is very incomplete in detail, running from father to son through some seven generations, with little mention of marriages or collateral branches.

Upon the dissolution of the monasteries by Henry VIII in 1538, the site of the Priory of St. Pancras at Lewes, together with a very large part of its possessions, were granted to Thomas, Lord Cromwell, to be held of the King by knight's service. Among the lands thus granted in Yorkshire were the King's Manor of Halifax, with the rectory and advowson of the church, as well as all messuages in the parish of Halifax, Hep-tonstall, Tronflete, Wakefield, Cunsborough, Donyngton, Ovingden, Waddesworth, Langefeld, Staneland, Eland, Southowrom, Northowrom, Stanffeld, Russheworth, etc., etc. With the manor of Halifax and its appurtenances were included forty messuages, twenty cottages, two dovecotes, 2,000 acres of arable land, 500 acres of meadow, 2,000 acres of pasture, 1,000 acres of wood, 2,000 acres of furze and heath land, and 130£ rent. In 1540 Thomas Cromwell was arrested and condemned on a charge of high treason, chiefly by reason of his instrumentality in effecting the obnoxious marriage of the King with Lady Anne of Cleves. Upon his attainder all the estates above enumerated were forfeited to the crown, and it is said that the manor and rectory of Halifax and all its appurtenances were granted to the Queen. Anne of Cleves could not long have remained in the enjoyment of these possessions, however, since her marriage was very shortly declared null and void.

Under Queen Mary, in 1554, the manor of Wakefield was united to Lancaster, and the survey of that Duchy in 1577 mentions "Halifax cum Heptenstall." Subsequently, under Charles I, it was granted to Henry Rich, Earl of Holland, second son of Robert, Earl of Warwick.

A Rentale of the Lewes Priory¹ (St. Pancras), dated 17 December 1439, mentions among the owners of houses in Heptonstall, co. York: John Grenwode; John de Grenwodd de Grenwodlee, tenement called Grenwodlee, and three other tenements; Richard de Grenwode, two tenements; William de Grenwodd, two tenements.

A still earlier "terrier of the Priory of Lewes, 1298"² is on vellum about ten feet long and contains the names of tenants, descriptions of properties, rents and services, but there is no mention of the name of Greenwood or Heptonstall.

In 1775 Hey-Greenwood in Stansfield belonged to the Mitchell family; in 1868 it was occupied by three sisters by the name of Marshall, a family there located for over thirty years. In 1848 Greenwood-Lee was in the possession of John C. Sutcliffe, Esq., and in 1868 of a Miss Gibson. During the same year the Learings was in the possession of a gentleman to whom it had been bequeathed by his aunt, Mrs. Foster (a sister of William Halstead, Esq., of Halstead Green, Colden, Heptonstall). The Reverend Thomas Greenwood, who built a chapel at Slack, left a daughter, Elizabeth, who married John Foster of that place.

GREENWOOD ARMS AND PEDIGREES

A pedigree of the "very ancient family of Greenwoods" of Greenwood-Lee, Yorkshire, is given in Thoresby's Ducatus Leodiensis (1715). The pedigree was drawn up by Sir William Dugdale, Norroy King at arms, about the year 1661, and gives the descendants of Wyomarus, Achatour of the Empress Maud, from 1154 (1 Henry II) to 1536 (28 Henry VIII), extending through seventeen generations. What proofs were used in its compilation we do not know. From Whitaker's edition, published in 1816, we learn that the original manuscript, engrossed on parchment, with Dugdale's autograph attached to it, was at that time in the possession of Joseph Greenwood Clayton, Esq., of New Laithes, Yorkshire. When Thoresby saw it in 1713, the manuscript was in the possession of James Greenwood of York, who died that year. The arms entered upon this pedigree appear to have been a field sable, bearing a chevron ermine, between three saltiers argent. The simplicity of the device and color would denote the antiquity of the arms, but it is impossible to say when they were first adopted.

The above arms are to be seen in a window of University College, Oxford, in memory of the Reverend Charles Greenwood, who died in 1643. He was a fellow and a liberal benefactor of the college, and a direct descendant of the family at Greenwood-Lee. The arms are in a window of the ante-chapel—"sable, a chevron ermine between three saltiers (saltronels) argent."

The Reverend John Greenwood of Brampton, co. Norfolk, whose will was proved at Norwich in October 1663, bore the same arms upon his seal which was attached to the instrument.

These are the recognized arms of the Greenwoods of Yorkshire. With the crest of "a demi-lion rampant sable, holding a saltier or," they are on record at the College of Arms, London, as belonging to Greenwood of Greenwood-Lee and Learings, co. York, and of Brice-Norton and Chaselton, co. Oxon, 1634 and 1668, though the latter have a crescent for difference. Similar bearings are ascribed to the families of West Ardesley, Wrenthorpe and Stapleton, co. York; of Yarmouth, co. Norfolk, and of Burgh-castle, co. Suffolk, all of which flourished about the same time. Burke, in his General Armory (1847), describes the crest of the foregoing families as "a lion sejant sable etc." From the same work we find that the Greenwoods of Yorkshire, Derbyshire and Brookwood Park, co. Hants., bore the family arms with the crest of "a demi-lion or, holding between the paws a saltier argent," while to the Hampshire branch a crest differently tinctured has been assigned by the Book of Family Crests, namely, "a demi-lion sable, holding between the paws a saltier, humetté, or." The arms of William Greenwood of Burgh-castle, who died 1656, were "a chevron ermine between three crosses saltier, each charged with a crosslet."

The Greenwoods of Lancashire bear on "a field sable, a chevron ermine between three crosses paté or (or argent)." Another branch of the family bears "or, on a fesse gules between three leaves vert, as many escallops argent." As stated in a previous chapter, the Greenwoods of Norwich and Yorkshire (1594) bear the following: "Argent, a fesse between three mullets in chief, and as many ducks in base, all sable. Crest—a mullet sable, between a pair of duck's wings expanded of the last. Motto—'Ut Prosim.'" These are the arms borne by those of the race who emigrated to Boston.

An ancient Greenwood coat-of-arms is to be found in the south aisle of York Minster choir. It is cut upon a slab which rests over the remains of "Magister Thomas Greenwode, legum doctor," a resident canon of the church who died in 1421; the arms as there found were, "Argent, a cock proper."

Among the fine stained-glass windows of Warwick Castle, in one of the narrow galleries beyond the Chapel, the author has noted a pane bearing the arms of two different families of Greenwood: Quarterly 1 and 4, argent, a chevron ermine, between three saltiers sable; and 2 and 3, or, on a fess gules, three escallops argent between three leaves vert. The date below is 1675. Both of these arms are assigned to Greenwood by Burke; the second, however, mark the marriage to an heiress by the name of Selyock (or Shell-Oak), the arms being three shells and three oak leaves.

The various pedigrees which have come within the writer's notice are as follows: Greenwood of Wrenthorpe (near Wakefield), co. York, from the St. George Visitation of 1612, in the College of Arms, and a continuation of the same from the Dugdale Visitation of 1665, the family being then located at Stapleton (near Womersley), co. York; the same pedigree may be found in the British Museum in the Harleian Collection.¹ Greenwood of Westerton in West Ardesley, near Wakefield, co. York, recorded in the College, 1666, another copy occurs in the Harleian Collection.² From the Oxfordshire Visitation of 1634 we have Greenwood of Norton Brune and Chastleton in that county, descended from the family of Learings and Greenwood-Lee, among the Harleian manuscripts.³ Greenwood of Torrington, co. Devon (from co. Somerset), as recorded in the Camden Visitation of Devonshire, 1620, a branch of the family at Wincham, co. Somerset; though this pedigree is recorded at the College without arms, its armorial bearings will be found to be the same as those borne by the family of Greenwood-Lee.⁴ All these pedigrees are for the most part quite meagre in detail.

Besides the above the following pedigrees without arms are also recorded at the College: Greenwood of North Perrott (near Wincham), co. Somerset; Greenwood of Nether Blackshaw and

In a volume of Sir Isaac Heard's ("Garter"), Miscellaneous Pedigrees,¹ in the College of Arms, London, there is a descent of the Greenwood family of Norwich, dated "Sept. 25, 1723," bearing the arms already referred to in a previous chapter, and including the names of one generation born in the town of Boston, New England.

Proved 15 March 1621/2.
101. Robert Greenwood, the elder, of Woodhouse, but late of Westerton, Gentleman; dated 3 January 1622/3. My late son, James G., deceased, and my loving daughter-in-law, Marcy G.; Robert Greenwood (their son) of Westerton, my grandchild; and John, the son and heir apparent of said Robert; and Marcy, daughter of the same; my grandchild, James G. (son of James G., dec'd) and Jane, his daughter; Christopher Bainton, son of my granddaughter; my granddaughter, Mercy G., wife of Abraham Nailor; my grandchild, Rosamund G.; my two granddaughters, as yet unpreferred (unmarried), Anne and Rosamund Greenwood; Dorothy Linley, wife of Nicholas L., and Hester Linley, wife of Robert L. Proved 12 September 1623.

By deed of 1593 he gave out of his estate an almshouse and annuity to three poor women at W. Ardsley, co. York; and William Nailor, by will of 1682, gave to the same out of his estate. These charities were existing in 1816.

The pedigree of the Greenwoods of Westerton, co. York, has already been referred to as existing in the College of Arms and in the Harleian MSS. of the British Museum. They are descended from this same Robert Greenwood, Gent., an attorney of Westerton; he purchased lands in East and West Ardsley from Richard Peck, Esq., against whom, having brought a Warantie-Carte, he had judgment in 1572 (15 Elizabeth). He was also a defendant, together with Martin Brickhead and

Richard Peck, in a chancery suit ¹ brought by George Saville for commission to examine witnesses in perpetuum rei testimonium, concerning certain recognizances touching lands in Wakefield, York, purchased by plaintiff. In the will of Lawrence Nailor of Westerton, adjoining Ardsley, dated 16 January 1579, the testator "humbly desires Robert Greenwood of Westerton and John Fielde of Ardsley, Gentlemen, to be the supervisors." His wife, Alice, was a daughter of Richard (or Jonathan) Robertshaw of Heptonstall.²

102. William Greenwood of Colden in Heptonstall, clothier; dated 12 July 1621; Marie, his wife; Mary, Sara, Martha and Susanna, his daughters, and his sons, Samuel, William, John, Thomas and Luke. Proved 4 December 1623.
103. James Greenwood of Slack in Warley, Parish of Halifax; dated ———; Christabell, his wife; Abraham, his son; his men and maid servants. Proved 22 August 1624. At Slack, north of Halifax, was a chapel erected at the expense of Thomas Greenwood, who there preached gratuitously; his daughter, Elizabeth, married John Foster of that place. Date not ascertained; living probably in 1703.
104. Margaret Greenwood of Northouse, widow; dated 9 March 1624; John G., her son; Henry Brigg, her son-in-law; Edith, wife of William Hird of Shelf; her own sister, Grace Scawberd.
105. John Greenwood of Coulden in Heptonstall, webster; dated 1 June 1624; mentions his late brother, William G.; his brothers, Thomas and Luke G.; Mary, wife of his brother, Samuel G., and Ambrose, their son; John G., his brother-in-law; Sara Sutcliffe, daughter of Matthew S. of Heptonstall.
106. William Greenwood (no residence and no date); brother, Jeremy; cousin, Barbarie. Proved 22 November 1626.
107. Ambrose Greenwood of Halifax, yeoman; dated 10 November 1626; Ambrose, my son, had houses in Bradford and Ovenden; Daniel, Jonas, Esau and Jeremy, my brothers; my sister, Marie, wife of Michael Firth; my uncle, Abraham Sutcliffe, of Boothestone, and my cousin, John Mitchell, of the same.
108. Abraham Greenwood of Dewsburie, yeoman; dated 28 June 1627; his wife, Ellene; had land; Abraham, his son; his two daughters.
109. John Greenwood of Warley (Parish of Halifax); husbandman; dated 3 June 1629; Samuel, his brother; Marie, his wife.

FROM THE WILL OF REVEREND CHARLES GREENWOOD

Rector of Thornhill, Dated 14 July 1643, proved in the Consistory Court of York in November 1643

To be buried in Thornhill Church. To Anthony Foxcroft, Gent., of Elland Hall, Halifax & Thomas Radcliffe, Esq., Senior Fellow of University of Oxford, his Exec'tors, rents in trust for founding two fellowships & two scholarships in University College, Oxford.

James Greenwood, my late deceased father; Margery, my wife; to Sir Wm. Saville; John Greenwood and Luke Greenwood.

To John, son of Robert Greenwood (of Westerton); John Greenwood of Elfburgh Hall (in Sowerby); William Mitchell of High-Greenwood; Thomas Greenwood of Learings, and Richard Robertshaw (of Hepton-stall); Trustees for a Free Grammar-School in Heptonstall, and of lands in Colden for the maintenance of the same, etc. Thomasine, my sister, late wife of Richard Gibson, dec'd, and her sons, Richard Gibson, Gent., and Charles.

To Thomas Radcliffe, son and heir apparent of Sir George Radcliffe, Knt., Thomas Nettleton, Gent., of Leeds Hall (or Thornhill-Lees), in Thornhill, . . . during the natural lives of me the said Charles Greenwood, Margery, now my wife, and Margery (then wife of said Anthony Foxcroft, but since dec'd), daughter of said Margery, my wife.

John, son of Henry Ramsden, Clk, late Vic. of Halifax. To Margery Foxcroft, dau'r of s'd Anthony.

To my sister, Margaret; to children of my cousin, Elizabeth Waterhouse; to my nephew, Richard Gibson, Gent., and his brother, Charles.

Said Anth'y Foxcroft and Thomas Radcliffe, Executors; Sir George Radcliffe, Knt., and Edw'd Hanson of Woodhouse in Rastrick, to be Supervisors.

(Will of his wife, No. 169.)

The Reverend Charles Greenwood was descended from the Greenwoods of Greenwood-Lee, co. York, being the son of James Greenwood by his third wife, Cicely, daughter of Charles Radcliffe, Esq., of Todmorden, and aunt of Sir George Radcliffe, Knt. Charles Greenwood appears to have had two sisters who survived him, Thomasine, widow of Reverend Richard Gibson, clerk, and Margaret Greenwood, singlewoman. Charles Grenwoode matriculated at University College, Oxford, 2 June 1592, at the age of eighteen, he became a Fellow of the College and was one of the two Proctors of the University appointed 26 April 1609. In 1611 he accompanied Sir Thomas Wentworth, then at the age of eighteen, as tutor on a tour through France. Wentworth was afterwards the renowned Earl of Strafford. In March 1612 through the patronage of Sir George Saville, Bart., Greenwood was appointed Rector of St. Michael's, Thornhill (near Wakefield), in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

Charles Greenwood married about 1614 Margery Hounden, or Hovenden, widow, with two sons and four daughters. Her first husband, Christopher Hovenden, who died in 1610, was brother to Doctor Robert Hounden of Oxford; she was sister of the Doctor's wife, Catherine Powys, daughter of Thomas Powys of Abington. Christopher Hovenden was of Stanton Harcourt, co. Oxford; he left two sons, Robert of Stanton Harcourt died 1652, and John of University College, Oxford, died in March 1629/30.

In 1624 Sir Thomas Wentworth essayed to obtain for Mr. Greenwood, for whom he entertained throughout his life the greatest regard and respect, an appointment to the Deanery of Rippon. Wentworth was raised to the peerage in 1628 and was soon after appointed Lord Deputy of Ireland. During his absence in that country he referred much for the management of his estate and domestic affairs to the advice of Mr. Greenwood; a lengthy letter to the latter from his lordship is extant dated Dublin 27 November 1635 and signed "your most affectionate faithful friend Wentworth." His Lordship's sister, Anne, married Sir George Saville, Knt., who died in 1618 during the life of his father, Sir George Saville, Bart. Lady Anne died in 1633, whereupon her brother, under date of 29 December 1633, wrote a letter of most excellent and salutary advice to his young nephew, afterwards Sir William Saville, Bart., wherein he says: "In these and in all things else you shall do well to consult Mr. Greenwood who hath seen much and is very well able to judge, and certainly most faithful to you. He was the man your father loved and trusted above all men, and did as faithfully discharge the trust reposed in him as ever, in my time, I knew any man do for his dead friend, taking excessive pains in settling your estate without charge to you. His advice will be always upright, and you may safely pour your secrets into him, which, by the time you have conversed a little more in the world, you will find the greatest treasure this world can make any man owner of; and I protest to God, were I in your place, I would think him the best riches I did or could possess."

During his life Doctor Greenwood contributed £1500 to University College, Oxford. The front and part of the west side of this structure, being amongst the most ancient of the buildings, had fallen into decay and a new quadrangle was projected. With the Greenwood gift the west side, now standing, was begun the 14th of April 1634 and completed in about two years, a part of the work having been done in accordance with Doctor Greenwood's own design. His arms, "sable, a chevron ermine between three saltiers or saltronels argent," may still be seen in the north windows of the Ante-Chapel of University College and in other parts of the building. Doctor Greenwood during the later years of his life was much troubled with gout, cramp and palsy of the right hand, but he continued to reside in his rectory until his decease in 1643. His patron, the Earl of Strafford, had already met with an untimely fate, and his nephew, Sir William Saville, did not long survive. The latter gentleman was the last of his line to reside at Thornhill, as during the civil wars which ensued the old Saville family mansion was destroyed by the parliamentary forces.

From the will of Doctor Charles Greenwood it appears that he founded a free grammar school for the instruction of the poor children of Heptonstall and Wadsworth, and endowed it with lands and tenements then of the annual value of £20, and situated in Heptonstall township. He also left £100 per annum, to be raised from his estates for the founding of two fellowships and two scholarships in University College, Oxford.

Mr. Foxcroft, one of the executors and a relative, contested the legacy and was decreed to pay the college £2,000, "for the purchasing an annuity of £100" for the above specified purposes, but he unfortunately died before the amount was paid. In 1682 a suit was instituted by the college for its recovery, but it was declared by the Court of Chancery that the decree ought not to be served against the defendant, Foxcroft's son and heir.

Sir George Radcliffe, Esq., mentioned in the will of the Reverend Charles Greenwood, was a cousin of the testator, being the son of Nicholas Radcliffe, whose sister, Cicely, married James Greenwood of Greenwood-Lee, and their father was Charles Radcliffe, Esq., of Todmorden. This place was located in Lancashire, to the southwest of Greenwood-Lee, near the headwaters of the Calder. It was for some centuries held by the Radcliffe family, until sold in 1700 by Roger Mainwaring, Esq., who married the daughter of Joshua Radcliffe. Sir George Radcliffe was a gentleman commoner of University College, Oxford, and was created LL.D. in 1643; he was a friend of Wentworth, Earl of Strafford, and was imprisoned in the Marshalsea, London, 1640; a strong royalist, he was excepted from pardon by Parliament in 1648, and died in exile about 1657. Thomas Radcliffe, also mentioned in the will, was his only child. He entered University College, and as a gentleman commoner travelled in France with Abraham Woodhead, a Fellow of the same house, of which Radcliffe was afterwards Senior Fellow; he died in Dublin in 1679.

The Life and Correspondence of Sir George Radcliffe, by Thomas D. Whitaker, published in 1810, contains many allusions to his cousin, Reverend Charles Greenwood of Thornhill.

According to Act of Parliament passed 8 April 1653 wills were thereafter recorded at London, and the Act continued in force till the accession of Charles II in 1660.

OXFORD (FROM YORK)

151. Thomas Grenewood of the Parish of St. Giles in the city of Oxford; 27 July 1577. To his wife, Joan, his capital messuage called Newton Hall, in Wakefield, co. York, and all his other lands and tenements in the county of York, after the decease of his father, Thomas Grenewood (Will 43), during her life. Mentions his manor of Stapleashtowne, co.

Oxford; his rectory of the parsonage of Greenborowe, co. Buckingham, lately purchased of Jeffrey Morley; brother, William Greenwood and his daughter, Isabel Greenwood; cousin, John Greenwood; brothers, — Dobson, George Napper, Thomas Gonnell; sister, — Priestly. Speaks of his son but does not name him. Appoints his wife, Joan, and his uncle, Christopher Mychell of Castleton, clerke, executors; and his father, Thomas Greenwood, uncle, John Cupper of Glumpton, cousin, Robert Greenwood, and his friend, William Cliderow, supervisors. Proved 27 Sept. 1577. (See Inquest No. 3.)

A.D. 1577 Rowland Jencks, bookseller, of Oxford, was arrested for railing against the Commonwealth and against the established Religion. At the Oxford Assizes, July 4, he was sentenced to lose his ears, and upon the prisoner's removal from the Court-house, in the Castle-yard, an infectious damp or miasma arose among the people originating, as some supposed, from the prisons. This air killed many prominent persons there present, and in the course of a few weeks several hundred fell victims to its malignant influence. (Wood's Hist. & Antiq. of Ox. Univ., Vol. II, p. 189.) Among the persons present was Mr. Thomas Greenwood, who died the 20th of August following; he being a counsellor-at-law.

Among the Inquisitiones post Mortem at the Public Record Office (formerly in the Chapter House), London, is one held at Wakefield, co. York, 11 July 1579, after the death of Thomas Greenwood of Oxford, who died at Oxford, 20 Aug. 1577. Thomas Greenwood of Heptonstall, co. York, aged 4, was his son and heir. Had lands in Wakefield, Stanley, Allerthorp and Newton Hall in Newton. This latter Thomas Greenwood, Gent., probably matriculated in Magdalen Hall, Oxford, 23 Oct. 1590, at the age of fourteen; he was of Montness Inge, co. Essex, in 1612, and of Brize Norton, co. Oxford, in 1634, at the time of the Herald's Visitation, but the pedigrees in the Harleian MSS., British Museum, and in the College of Arms are imperfect. The arms borne were those of Greenwood-Lee, co. York. He was living probably at the time of his brother George's decease in 1651 (Will 152); according to the Visitation his son, Thomas, in 1634 was "plene aetat." Thomas Greenwood (son of Thomas, the counsellor, who died in 1577) married Grace, seventh daughter of Thomas More, Esq., of Barnborough, co. York, and of Moore-Place, alias "Cobbins," co. Herts., by his wife, Mary, daughter of John Scroope of Hambledon, co. Bucks. Her brother, Cresacre Moore (b. 3 July 1572), grandson of John and Ann (Cresacre) Moore, was great-grandson of the celebrated Sir Thomas Moore, Lord Chancellor under Henry VIII. Mrs. Grace Greenwood, widow, appears to have been living in 1612, when her cousin-in-law, Gregory Greenwood, Gent., of Brayles, co. Warwick, left her his watch. (Will 155.)

- 152. George Greenwood of Chasleton, Gent. No date. Son, George, and his wife, Hester; son, Walter; sons-in-law, Mr. James Thompson and Mr. Robert Austin; daughter, Sarah and her children, and children of daughter, Anne; brother, Mr. Thomas Greenwood; speaks of the will of his cousin, Mr. Gregory Greenwood, of which he and his brother, Thomas, were executors; appoints his wife, Elizabeth, executrix. Proved 26 April 1651.

Of his children it is probable that Thomas and Ellen, mentioned in Gregory Greenwood's will, died before their father. He himself, with rank of gentleman, matriculated at University College, Oxford, 1 Feb. 1593/4, aged 15; in 1636 he is styled of Chastleton, when his son, George, matriculated at Brasenose College 1 April 1636, aged 18. The latter was probably George Greenwood, Gent., of Chastleton, whose two sons, Henry and John, both matriculated at Oxford, the former at the age of 17 (13 Dec. 1678) being one of the "privilegiati" and a servant to the Provost of Queen's College, the latter at the same age (1 July 1681) at Christ Church College.

- 153. Walter Greenwood of Chastleton, Gent.; 3 Feb. 1670/1. Son, Walter; daughters, Anne, Sarah and Jane, all young. Speaks of the will of his late mother, Elizabeth Greenwood, of which he was executor. Proved 22 Nov. 1671.

- 154. Daniel Greenwood, D.D., of Studeley, co. Oxford; 11 March 1672. To his brother, John Greenwood, his lands in Crowelshawe, co. York, upon trust for certain purposes expressed in the will. To the minister and poor of Sowerby, co. York, rent-charge and £2 per annum (invested 1816 in John Priestley); nephew, Daniel Greenwood of Steple Aston, co. Oxford, and his brother, Nathaniel; nephew, John Greenwood; niece, Lydia, wife of — Dixon; nephew, Moses Greenwood; kinsmen, Edmund Tattershall and Timothy Bentley; cousins, Elizabeth Greenwood of Chastleton, widow (of Geroge), and her sons, George and Walter. Appoints his nephew, Daniel Greenwood, executor. Proved 12 April 1674.

This Daniel Greenwood of Studeley matriculated at Lincoln College, Oxford, 30 April 1624, aged 19, his name being entered as Daniel Greenwoode, son of Richard Greenwoode (plebeian rank) of Sourby, co. York (Will 82). He subsequently attained to the degree of B.D. and became a Fellow of Brasenose College, and was created a Doctor of Divinity 24 July 1649. Previous to this event we find that Doctor Samuel Radcliffe was ejected from Brasenose in January 1647/8 and Mr. Greenwood voted in as Principal by the Committee, on the 29th of February following, though it was not till April that his name was inserted in the buttry-book in the place of Doctor Radcliffe's, by the Chancellor of the University and the parliamentary visitors. This Committee for the Visitation and Reformation of Oxford University was appointed by "the blessed Parliament," 1 May 1647, Mr. John Greenwode, according to Wood's Annals of Oxford, being one of its members. Scobell's Acts of Cromwell (1658) calls him more correctly, Master George Greenwood (probably of Oxford; see will 152), and Thomas Barlow in his Pegasus or Flying-horse from Oxford speaks of him as "squint eyed Greenwood." It appears that the Fellows elected Thomas Yates, B.D., 13 July 1648, as Principal of the College, but he did not take his seat, Doctor Greenwood continuing to hold the office until ejected by the King's Commissioners, who reinstated Doctor Yates 10 August 1660.

Lord Pembroke, Chancellor of the University, died 23 January 1650, and in the following September Daniel Greenwood, D.D., Principal of Brasenose College, was nominated to the office of Vice-Chancellor by the Committee for the Reformation of the University; he succeeded to the position on October 12th, while on January 15th following, Oliver Cromwell was chosen Chancellor. Doctor Greenwood was again appointed Vice-Chancellor in November 1651, being "recommended to his office by the Chancellor's letters dated 2'd October," though in the subsequent year Cromwell nominated John Owen, M.A., Dean of Christ Church College, as Vice-Chancellor. A publication by Robert Whitehall called The Marriage of Arms and Art, 12 July 1651, being an Accompt of the Act at Oxon to a Friend (London 1651) describes the occasion of a great concourse of people gathered at the University which was attended by much unruly behaviour and "thrusting out of strangers" by the students, "during all the time of the solemnity in St. Mary's Church. Whereupon the Vice-Chancellor, Doctor Greenwood of Brasenose, a severe and choleric governor, was forced to get several guards of musquetiers out of the parliamentary garrison, then in Oxon, to keep all the doors and avenues, and to let nobody in, only such as the Vice-Chancellor or his deputies appointed. There was then great quarrelling between the scholars and soldiers, and thereupon blows and bloody noses followed."

According to Wood, Doctor Greenwood "was a severe and good governor as well in his vice-chancellorship as principality"; while Calamy (II, 59) says "he was a profound scholar and divine, and a circumspect governor."

The Uniformity Act coming out in 1662, Doctor Greenwood and his wife retired to Studeley, near Oxford, where they continued to reside until her death, after which he lived with his nephew, Mr. Daniel Greenwood, Rector of Steeple-Aston, near Dedington, co. Oxford, where he died 29 January 1673. He was buried in the chancel of the church at Steeple-Astor.

He mentions no children in his will, though I believe Burke in his Landed Gentry (II, 1074) states that one of his daughters married Henry Priestley (a Sowerby family) and had a son, Thomas, and a daughter, Jane.

Of the nephews mentioned in his will Daniel Greenwood, son of John, was born in 1628 at Sowerby, in the vicarage of Halifax, co. York. He matriculated as a pensioner¹ at Christ's College, Cambridge, 2 July 1645, and prepared there for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, but took that degree at Oxford 3 November 1648. Soon after, through the endeavors of his uncle, the Principal of Brasenose College, he was made a fellow of that college, several of the ancient fellows thereof having been ejected in that year for their loyalty. He received the degree of M.A. 29 May 1651 and soon after become rector of Steeple-Aston, by the representation thereunto of the principal and fellows of his college. He died suddenly of apoplexy at Woodstock and was buried in the chancel of Steeple-Aston near to the body of his uncle. Over the grave in the north wall of the chancel is a marble tablet bearing an epitaph for the said doctor and another for his nephew.

Of his children Daniel and Edward matriculated at Oxford; the latter at Brasenose College, 2 July 1675, aged 15; the former at the same college, 24 October 1673, aged 17—B.A. 16 June 1677, M.A. 30 April 1680, B.M. 5 July 1686, D.M. 30 June 1687. This Doctor Daniel Greenwood appears to have lived in the town of Northampton, and to have married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heir of John Dand, Esq., of Mansfield, co. Nottingham, by whom he had five children: Daniel, Elizabeth, Rosamond and two Maries, of whom Daniel and Mary survived their father. A monument was raised to his memory in the Church of All Saints by his widow, Elizabeth, who died 12 October 1714; he died according to the inscription 30 May 1711, aged 54. The monument bears these arms: Argent, a chevron ermines, between three saltiers sable,² quartering Azure, two garbs in saltier or—on an escutcheon of pretence Vert, a griffon segreant or, in chief three escallops of the second, impaling the same coat, for Dand. At the bottom of the monument are the same arms, impaling nine other quarterings.

Another nephew mentioned in the will of Doctor Daniel Greenwood, the Vice-Chancellor, was Nathaniel Greenwood, who matriculated at Brasenose College, 2 April 1653, no age given, and took his B.D. at the same college 16 November 1669. At Cottingham, co. Northampton, we find the following inscription: "Here lies the body of Nathaniel Greenwood, Bach. of Divinity, sometime fellow of Brazen-nose College in Oxford and Rector of this parish, who deceased the 23rd of May, Anno Dom. 1714, AEtat. su. 71." At the south corner of this stone, which is in the middle of the chancel, lies the body of John Greenwood, Gent., who was interred 3 January 1701, and was probably a brother of Nathaniel.

Another nephew of the Vice-Chancellor, Moses Greenwood, matriculated at Brasenose College 19 July 1659, no age given; B.A. 2 May 1663, and M.A. 6 July 1666; was Master of the school at Charlburg, co. Oxford, and died 1 March 1679/80. Among the inscriptions on the pavement of the cloister of Brasenose College occurs the following: "M. G. 1679."

Witness Goodwife Wadell her marke. Jane Wadell. William Lumley." Proved 6 Oct. 1609.

The Manor of Brentwood had been granted by Edward VI in 1553 to Sir Anthony Browne, a papist knight who by letters patent from Philip and Mary in 1557 here founded a free grammar-school, the master to be a priest nominated by himself and his heirs, etc., endowed with the parsonage of Dagenham, co. Essex, on the Thames, worth £400 per annum. Wright's Essex says, "The school is near the east end of the town, and the master's house which joins it, has a small garden and six acres of land.

¹ He signs with a mark, and must have been an old man.

The corporation seals form a double clasp-seal of silver, and are kept in an iron chest with the muniments of the school." Inquiry, however, proves that all the early records of the school have been now long lost or destroyed.

Henry Greenwood, draper, of Norwich, and sheriff 1571, in his will of 18 Dec. 1589 (No. 196) therein mentions "the children of his cousin, John Greenwood of Brentwood. This John Greenwood, it is presumed, matriculated as a pensioner of St. John's College, Cambridge, 27 May 1558, later removed to Catherine Hall, where he was eventually a fellow; B.A. 1561/2, M.A. 1565. Charles Cooper, Esq., says in a letter from Cambridge, 1863: "I make no doubt that John Greenwood of St. John's College and Catherine Hall was the Greenwood, master of Brentwood school, and I have made a note to that effect in our own copy of Athenae Cantabrigienses", of which work Cooper was the author. He had letters dimissory for his ordination from Matthew Parker, the second Protestant Archbishop of Canterbury; Brentwood was in the diocese of London. In 1590 he published at Cambridge his "Syntaxis et Prosodia, Versiculis compositae, studio et labore Johannis Greenwood, Cantabridgiensis, olim socii Arlae Divae Catherinae." One of his name was presented (1583) to the Rectory of All Saints, at Rackheath Parva, near Norwich, and there continued until 1587.

166. John Greenwood of Ramsden, co. Essex; 20 June 1657; grandchildren, Mary and Sarah Stevens, not 21; only daughter, Mary Stevens, executrix. Proved 16 April 1658.

Richard Greenwood, pleb., was born circa 1559 of Yorkshire, matriculated 1575, aged 16, at Lincoln College, Oxford; B.A. 1577; M.A. 1581; preacher at Rye 1581-'91; chaplain of the Lord Admiral and of the Bishop of Worcester; rector of Playden, Sussex, 1593.

168. Thomas Greenwood, yeoman, of Siddlesham; 24 April 1658; eldest son, Thomas; youngest son, Edward, not 21; daughter, Joan Greenwood. Proved 14 June 1658.

169. Margery Greenwood, late wife of Charles Greenwood, late parson of Thornhill (Will 138); dated 10 August 1643; to be buried as her executor may appoint. Mentions her son, Robert Hounden, and his wife, my daughter-in-law, and my grandchild, his eldest daughter; my grandchild, Edward Brabson, and his sister, Margery; Radclyffe West, kinsman and servant to her "loveing cozen," Thomas Radcliffe; her men and maid servants; her friend and kinsman, Thomas Radcliffe, brother to Saville Radcliffe of Todmorden (co. Lanc.). Proved at York 21 April 1646, having previously been proved at London 17 April 1645. According to the latter entry the name of her son appears to read "Robert Hevenden"; her kinsman, Thomas Radcliffe, is appointed executor, and her deceased husband, Charles Greenwood, is styled "late parson of Hull, co. York."

170. Abraham Greenwood of Northland, co. York, yeoman; dated 22 August 1654; mentions his mother, Alice G.; his elder brother, John; leaves his wife, Susan, executrix. Proved at London 7 June 1655.

York, and his children, Mabel and Emma. Speaks of Thomas Greenwood of Greenwood-hawe. Proved at London 8 February 1658/9.

WILTSHIRE

174. William Greenwood of Winterslowe; 1 Feb. 1620; sons Giles and William; wife, Joan, and son, Giles, executors. Proved 4 July 1621.

GLOUCESTER

175. Edmund Greenwood, yeoman, of Hampton Meysey; 10 June 1651; daughter, Ann, wife of William Moulder; sister, Dorothy Hewers; brother, John Greenwood, the elder, and daughter, Alice Greenwood, executors. Proved 16 April 1652.

WORCESTER

176. John Greenwood of the Parish of St. James in the County of Worcester; died 16 Feb. 1658/9. Nuncupative will 28 April 1660 [sic]. Son, John, not 21; daughter, Anice; wife, Bridget. Not proved.

SURREY

177. Ralph Greenwood, weaver, of the Parish of St. Mary Magdalen in Bermonsdy, co. Surrey; wife, Susanna; daughter, Susanna, and her illegitimate child, John Silkes, to whom he bequeaths a legacy. Speaks of the will of Henry Greenwood, yeoman, of the Parish of St. Andrews in Norwich. Dated 8 Sept. 1665; proved 6 Oct. 1665. Henry Greenwood by will, proved at Norwich, 25 Sept. 1665, left to his kinsman (nephew), Ralph Greenwood, 11 acres of land in Foxley, co. Norfolk. (Will 238.)

MONTGOMERY, WALES

178. William Greenwood of the Parish of Landinam, in the Deanery of Arwystley, diocese of Bangor. Mary, late wife of son, Francis; son-in-law, George Marple; grandchild, Jane, daughter of John Perkes. Wife, Ann, executrix. Dated 31 Jan. 1624. Proved 1 July 1625.

UNKNOWN

179. John Greenwood; 1570; desires to be buried in the churchyard of Whitlackington (Whitlton, co. Cumb.?); sons, Christopher and Thomas; daughters, Edith, Joan, Ann and Elizabeth; wife, Ann, executrix. Proved 19 Feb. 1570/1.
180. John Greenwood; 18 June 1655; brothers, William and Roger; sisters, Frances Sparkeman and Elizabeth Birstall; cousin, Henry Harvey, the younger, of Bridgewater (co. Somerset?). Proved 26 Nov. 1657.

LONDON

181. Robert Grenewood, citizen and paper-stainer of London; 16 June 1585; desires to be buried in the church of St. John Zachary, of London; wife, Margaret; son, John, citizen and grocer of London; nephew and godson, Robert; sons of son, John; sister, Joan, late wife of Henry Thompson; nephew, Samuel Thompson. Proved 18 Oct. 1585.

A list of the freemen of the various companies (1537) is preserved in the Chapter House, Westminster, and published in Allen's History of London; the name of John Greenwood stands 32nd on the list of painter-stainers. Stow's Survey of London (1633) states that there is a comely monument in the east end of the south isle of the parish church of St. John Zacharies, Aldersgate Ward, London, bearing the following inscription: "Here lieth buried within this Isle the bodies of John Greenwood, Citizen and Painter-Stainer of London, who descended of a younger house of Greenwood, of Greenwood ley in Yorkshire. And Elizabeth his wife, by whom he had many children; but at the time of their death left only one sonne and a daughter, Robert and Joane, which Robert, after many years spent in this Parish, was laid by his father and mother the 23 of June 1585. In memory of whom this Monument was erected by his sister's sonne, Samuel Thompson, the sixth of September 1602." It was destroyed in the great fire of 1666.

John Greenwood, painter-stainer of London, may have been a son of Richard Grenwode who was continued in his position of Rouge Croix by Henry VII at his accession in 1495. (p. 10.)

Among the Chancery Proceedings during the reign of Elizabeth, preserved in the Tower of London, 1558 to 1603, we have: "T. t. 11, No. 43"—Samuel Thompson, Plaintiff, versus Robert Cooke, alias Clarenieux, and Edmund Knight, alias Chester, executors, defendants. Suit—A claim under the will of (his uncle) Robert Greenwood, respecting a messuage in Fenchurch St., London.

When Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, was appointed High Steward of Bristol (1579), his arms, placed in the Council House, were painted in London by Robert Greenwood at a cost of £5, 5s. The painters had formed themselves into a fraternity as early as the reign of Edward III; their arms were granted in 1486 and confirmed 1531; their company, including that of the painter-stainers, was incorporated 1576 or '80.

- 182. Elizabeth Greenwood, widow, of the Parish of St. Sepulchre; 15 Sept. 1662; daughter, Elizabeth Greenwood, executrix. Proved 8 Sept. 1670.
- 183. Miles Greenwood of the Parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-West; 9 Oct. 1679; speaks of his farm and lands in Preston Richard, co. Westmorland, upon which he owes his cousin, Mr. Rowland Greenwood, £200, the said Rowland (Will 185) to sell the same, pay himself and give the surplus to testator's wife for the maintenance and education of his children. Appoints his wife, Alice, executrix. Proved 4 Dec. 1679. Miles, son of Richard Greenwood (living 1637), was heir apparent to the Greenwood estate at Crooklands, Heversham Parish, Kendal Ward, co. Westmorland; his uncle, Miles Greenwood, Gent., was one of the Conburgesses of Grantham, co. Lincoln, whose will is given in full under Lincoln wills.
- 184. Paul Greenwood, citizen and haberdasher of London; 23 June 1683; wife, Sarah; brother, Orell; sister, Mary Greenwood, alias Houkroyd, now or late inhabiting some part of Yorkshire. Proved 11 July 1683.
- 185. Rowland Greenwood, Gent., of St. Martin-in-the-Fields; Feb. 1693/4. Desires to be buried in the chancel of the church of Cheevening, co. Kent. Wife, Joice; son, Charles. Gives to the poor of the parish of Heversham (co. Westmorland), where he was born. Speaks of Dacre Park (Gillesland), co. Cumberland, and the rents arising from it. Appoints his kinsman, Thomas Tippinge, Clerk, Rector of Weston Colville, co. Cambridge, executor, and the Earl of Sussex, supervisor. Proved 23 Feb. 1698/9.

He was probably the son of Rowland Greenwood mentioned in will 183, born about 1640, married 1677 or '78, as second wife, Mrs. Joyce Mabb, widow, of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. He matriculated as a pensioner of St. John's College, Cambridge, 4 July 1616; B.A. 1619/20; M.A. 1623; B.D. 1638, and in 1637 he was appointed sole executor of the will of his uncle, Miles Greenwood, Gent., of Grantham, co. Lincoln, in the following words: "My well beloved Nephew, Mr. Rowland Greenwood, my brother, Robert Greenwood's eldest sonne and now vicar of Wim-bush in the county of Essex." (Will 205.)

Among the ministers ejected or silenced after the restoration (1660) was a Mr. Greenwood of Hutton Chapel, in Kendal Parish, co. Westmorland. Calamy says: "He was much valued as a preacher, but accused of some things that were scandalous by which his memory is blackened."

- 186. Miles Greenwood of York Buildings, in St. Martin-in-the-Fields; 27 Aug. 1767. Desires to be buried in the new burial ground in Gray's Inn Lane, in the Parish of St. Andrew's, Holborn, in which parish he was born. Had £3,500 in South Sea stock, and was connected in certain business transactions with Matthew Greenwood of Liverpool and Samuel Parker. Appoints his sister, Sarah, wife of Wm. Deverell, executrix. Proved —, Book, "Seeker," fol. 412. (See will of his father, Miles Greenwood, No. 204.) The Gentleman's Magazine for the year 1768 (Vol. XXXVIII, p. 542) states that Miles Greenwood, Esq., upwards of fifty years principal clerk of his majesty's salt-office, died 9 Nov. 1768, aged 80.
- 187. Thomas Greenwood, seaman, in the ship Tankerfield; will dated 12 Dec. 1705; proved 26 Nov. 1707; leaves all to his wife and executor, Rebecca.
- 188. John Greenwood, citizen and distiller of London; will dated 15 Dec. 1713; proved 23 Dec. 1713; desires to be buried in the Chapel of St. Giles, without Cripple-Gate, London. Bequeaths all his real estate and most of his other property to his daughter, Ann Greenwood; mentions his sister, Elizabeth Peddington, and his wife's parents, William and Anne Mayne.
- 189. John Greenwood of St. Stephen's in Coleman Street, London; dated 29 March 1724; gives to his three nieces, Elizabeth, now wife of John Chambers, Rosamond and Mary Greenwood, £1000, each. Mentions his cousin, John Greenwood of Sowerby, in the Parish of Halifax and County of York, and brother-in-law, Servington Savery, M.D. Proved 5 May 1724. Book Bolton, f. 112.

190. Matthew Greenwood of St. Andrew's, in Holborn, co. Middlesex; dated 30 Sept. 1728. Proved 6 March 1728/9. Bequeaths to his five children, not named, securities in South Seas and India stock, and gives to charitable institutions. A codicil dated 21 July 1729/(?) names son, Samuel, and appoints his son, Matthew, and William Sumpter, executors. (Will 191.)
191. Matthew Greenwood, Gent., of St. Andrew's in Holborn; 4 Feb. 1779; speaks of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Samuel Parker; sister, Ann Hipsley; nieces, Elizabeth Stowell and Ann, wife of Thomas Moody. Proved 21 July 1780.

One of the sources of public revenue arising during the reign of William and Mary was the excise on salt, first imposed in 1693. It was managed by the Commissioners of Excise and was probably a branch of the Customs. The office was in the York Buildings, London. During the last four years of the reign of George I (1723-'27) the average revenue was £6,762,643, of which sum the salt duty produced £185,506. One family of the Greenwoods appears to have been connected with the Salt Office for many years. Chamberlayne's Magazine Britanniae Notitia for 1710 gives the following: "Matthew Greenwood (Will 190), Correspondent to the Commissioners, and Clerk of the Securities, £90 per annum; also Assist. Secretary, £40; also allowance for a clerk to examine the delivery and score-books, and assist in making up the annual grand accompts of the salt duties £50. These positions he was still holding in 1728, when he was allowed £30 additional for his service in examining the Accompts of the Fishery, and preparing for them the Cash and General Accompts for the Auditor. He died 10 July 1729." John Greenwood (at £100 per annum) and Mr. Wm. Sumpter were the Accomptants in 1714. Probably the former was the same person appointed Consul at Leghorn, 13 Oct. 1722, vice Mr. Fuller resigned, and who died at Naples 20 Aug. 1723. (No will found at London.) Matthew Greenwood, Jun. (Will 191), was clerk in the office of Matthew Greenwood, the assistant secretary, in London; and for many years after he was collector of salt-duties in Liverpool, on a salary of about £100. Miles Greenwood (will 186) was assistant clerk to the Accomptants in 1723 at £60 per annum, and in 1728 he was one of the Accomptants at £70, with £20 for his service in preparing and stating the accompts of the Fishery. At the time of his decease in 1768 he was assistant billman, clerk of the Accomptant General, and correspondent of the Solicitor, at a combined salary of £220. W. Greenwood was clerk of the Deputy Commissioner in 1783, and in 1788 clerk of the Comptroller of the Salt Office.

192. John Greenwood, late of Leicester Fields in the Parish of St. Ann, Westminster, co. Middlesex. Administration on his estate granted to his widow, Frances, 8 Oct. 1793. Born in Boston, N. E., 7 Dec. 1727, he eventually settled in London as an auctioneer, and died 15 Sept. 1792. In his earlier years he was a portrait painter and mezzotinter. (New England Greenwoods, No. 10.)
193. Frances Greenwood, formerly of Villiers St., Parish of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, co. Middlesex, late of Barnet, same county, widow. Administration on her goods to son, John, 25 Nov. 1808. She died at Turnham-Green, co. Middlesex, 31 March 1808, aged 63, being the widow of John Greenwood, artist. (Will 192.)

BOSTON, NEW ENGLAND

194. Isaac Greenwood. Administration granted to John Grimla, one of the principal creditors, and Anne, relict of said Greenwood, at Boston in New England, July 1701. He was a son of Nathaniel Greenwood of Boston, shipwright, by his wife, Mary Allen. (New England Greenwoods, No. 1-III.)
195. Isaac Greenwood, late of H. M. Ship Rose, widower (sic), deceased. Administration on his goods granted to James Crocket, lawful attorney of Gideon Norton of Charleston, South Carolina, 26 May 1746. Although styled "widower" above, his wife, Sarah, daughter of the Honorable Doctor John Clarke of Boston, survived him. He left two sons, John and Isaac, of whom the latter only left issue. (New England Greenwoods, No. 7.)

To his son, William, half his bedsteads, half his cupboards, half his tables and stools, and all other woodwork, two silver bowls, two best salts and six pounds in money to put to the same to make them again, one of his best pots tipped with silver, his gold ring that hath the toad's eye in it, one great cushion of red velvet, two little cushions of red velvet, half the rest of his cushions not bequeathed, all his hangings hanging in his house and chambers of his messuage called the Maid's Head, and a dozen silver spoons with beads in the end, all to be delivered in one month after testator's death. Also £60 to be paid in yearly instalments of £10. To his son, John, three goblets of silver, two great salts of silver, one long cushion wrought with gold with two great tassels, two small cushions, one with velvet leeste about the side, and the other of cloth of tyssue. To his said sons, John and William, all his brass, latten, candlesticks, chaffing dishes, cupboards, tables, chests, forms, chairs, stools, cobirons, andirons, spits, tongs, and all other utensils of iron-work in his houses called the White Lion and Maid's Head,¹ to be equally divided. To son, John, his graven chest that hath a chain behind it, standing in the hall in the Maid's Head, which formerly belonged to his (testator's) wife's brother, William Lusher. Says he has entailed the aforesaid messuages, which, in default of male issue, shall revert to his daughters and their issue. To his sons, John and William, articles of bedding, etc. To daughter, Katherine, wife of Nicholas Dannock, £40. To daughter, Anne, wife of William Robinson, £40. To daughter, Margaret, wife of Robert Blackbourne, £40; also to said daughters articles of silver plate and furniture.

To his brother, Oliver, his best cloak. To his goddaughter, Elizabeth Corye, 40s when 21. To his sister, Helen, wife of John Syll, 40s. To each of John Greenwood's children, not married, 20s when 21. To the children of his daughters, Dannock and Robinson, each 10s when 21. To son, John, his scarlet gown and his best sad colored gown lined with foynes.

To son, William, two gowns, one garded with a large gard of velvet, and the other with a little gard of velvet. To Margaret, wife of Robert Kemp, 20s. To cousin, John Greenwood of Burntwood (Will 165), 40s, and to each of his children, 2s.

To grandchild, John Greenwood, his "Nutt that is garded with silver and gilt." To son, William, and his wife, each a mourning-gown of broadcloth, and to each of his three daughters the same. Appoints his son, John, executor, and makes him residuary legatee; and requests his three sons-in-law to be supervisors of the will. Proved 21 June 1591.

Henry Grenewode, freeman of Norwich, 1534/5 enrolled among the Archers of the city 29 Jan. 1535. On the 12th of Sept. 1542 the Mayor, Aldermen, &c., of Norwich agreed to furnish twenty-five men, their harness and provision, at one hour's notice, in the proposed expedition against the Scots, under the Duke of Norfolk; Mr. Greenwood's was the twenty-first name, for one man and harness. In 1571 Henry Greenwood, tailor and draper, of Norwich, was made Sheriff. In 1581 the impropriation of the Rectory Church of St. Peter's of Mancroft with all its appurtenances, which in 1569 had been conveyed to Charles le Grice of Brockdish, was conveyed by his son and heir, William le Grice of Norwich, Gent., to Henry Greenwood, Christopher Barret, and many others, as feoffees in trust for the parishoners of said parish, who purchased it of him.¹

In 1589, Mr. Henry Greenwood, Alderman, of Mancroft Ward (sick, blind, lame, and bedridden) was, at his own request, exonerated and discharged from office, and permission was granted for another man to be chosen alderman in his room.² Henry Greenwood was buried at St. Peter's 24 April 1591, and in this church are recorded the baptisms and deaths of some of his children, as will be noted later on. His son, William, Gent., appears to be the same who left a will recorded at Norwich 13 Dec. 1603. No trace is found of the "brother Oliver" mentioned.³

In regard to the three sons-in-law of Henry Greenwood, Bloomfield's Norfolk states that in 1600 Mr. Robert Blackbourn purchased Stalworthy's Manor in Windham, co. Norfolk, from John Bacon, Esq., of Hessel, and it continued in his family in lineal descent till the death of Edmund Blackbourn of Windham in 1736; about 1559 license was granted to Thomas Duke of Norfolk to alien the Manor of Carthuse Priory to Nicholas Dannock and his heirs, the latter dying possessed of it in 1576 and Michael being his son and heir. Nicholas Dannock, Gent., died 8 May 1617 and was buried in Yelverton Church, co. Norfolk; Wm. Robinson, Gent., was buried in St. Gregory's Church, Norwich, 11 April 1612, leaving a widow, Elizabeth, daughter of Christopher Layer, Esq., and widow of Thomas Corye, Gent.

197. Anne Greenwood of Lermingham, co. Norfolk, deceased; son William appointed administrator, 29 April 1617.
198. Richard Greenwood of St. Gregory, Norwich, deceased; Susan, his widow, appointed administratrix, 4 May 1635.
199. William Greenwood of Swaffam Market, co. Norfolk, deceased; brother, Henry, appointed administrator, 2 Dec. 1639.
200. John Greenwood, citizen and alderman of the city of Norwich, in the county of Norfolk; 6 Sept. 1649. Bequeaths to his wife, Bridget, houses and lands in Beccles in the county of Suffolk, and in Long Stratton, in Norfolk, also a house in Norwich, in the Parish of St. Michael-at-the-Pleas. To the children of his brother, Nathaniel Greenwood (not named) £200. To John Greenwood, £50 (doubtless his cousin), and to the five children of said John (not named), £30. To John, son of Moses, £40; and to the second son of the said Moses (not named), £20. To Abigail Greenwood, £20. Appoints (his cousin) Henry Greenwood of the Parish of St. Andrew's, Norwich, executor. Proved 25 Feb. 1659/60.

John Greenwood was sheriff 1642, alderman 1642/3.¹ In January of the following year Tofts, Greenwood, etc., were appointed to visit churches of Norwich and demolish scandalous pictures, crucifixes and images. "It is tragical to relate," says Bishop Hall (Hard Measure, p. 63), "the furious sacrilege committed under the authority of Lindsey, Tofts, the Sheriff, and Greenwood; what clattering of glasses, what beating down of walls, what tearing down of monuments, what pulling down of seats, and wresting out of irons and brasses from the windows and graves, what defacing of arms, &c., &c." This was in 1644, when the church government had been destroyed. 10 Aug. 1643 John Greenwood, Sheriff of Norwich, was appointed by the House of Lords as one of the committee for managing the affairs of the Associated Counties; in 1648 John Greenwood, Alderman of Norwich, was appointed by Parliament one of the Department Lieutenants of the City and County of Norwich.

The said John Greenwood was born at Caistor, Norfolk, 21 Oct. 1598, the son of Reverend Thomas Greenwood of Hingham, co. Norfolk (Will 237). The will of his widow, Bridget (Will 218), mentions "Miles Greenwood of Norwich, worsted weaver, her late husband's kinsman." The wills of his brother, Moses, and of his cousins, John and Henry, and their father, Reverend Christopher Greenwood of Shotesham, will be found under wills Nos. 245, 214, 238 and 234. John Greenwood was at one time settled at Brampton, co. Norfolk, as a minister, and his will is sealed with his coat-of-arms; sable, a chevron ermine between three saltiers argent. Abigail Greenwood was the testator's sister, although Miles Greenwood, father of the above named Miles, worsted weaver, had a wife, Abigail, living at the time, as will be seen by the following will.

- 201. Miles Greenwood; 23 Dec. 1658. "Ye three and twentyeth Day L'res of Ad'con was granted to Abigaell Greenewood, Relict of Miles Greenwood late of ye Citty of Norwich intestate deced to Ad'ster ye goods chells & debts of ye said decd shee being first by Com'on sworne truely to Adster etc." This Miles was the eldest son of Miles Greenwood, baker of Norwich, by his wife, Anne Scath of Barnham Broome, co. Norfolk. He was baptised at St. Peter's of Mancroft, 1 Sept. 1600, and became apprentice for eight years (20 June 1618) to John Robbs, worsted weaver. Of his children some were baptized at St. Stephen's, others at St. Michael at Pleas, and elsewhere probably; the eldest, Miles or Myllis (called even Michael), was mentioned in the will of Bridget Greenwood above, and was according to tradition a chaplain or clerk, and afterwards a lieutenant in Cromwell's army, he left a will proved 4 Nov. 1681 (No. 241). Of the other sons, Nathaniel, shipwright, emigrated to New England and settled in Boston before 1654. He was followed about 1666 by another brother, Samuel, also a shipwright.

202. Erasmus Greenwood, worsted weaver, of the precinct of the Cathedral, Norwich; 11 April 1726. Had land in Ditchingham. Son, Erasmus, not 21 years of age; daughter, Elizabeth, wife of John Carver of Norwich, worsted weaver; daughters, Jane and Mary; wife, Jane, and son, William, executors. Appears to have been well-to-do. Proved 5 Feb. 1726/7.
203. William Greenwood, late of Norwich; administration to his widow, Ann Greenwood, 3 June 1705.
204. Miles Greenwood of Fakenham, co. Norfolk (25 miles N. W. from Norwich); administration 13 April 1709 to Matthew Greenwood, who was also appointed guardian to Miles, Matthew (Jun.), and Sarah Greenwood, children of the deceased. The Reverend M. A. Atkinson, rector of St. Peter's, Fakenham, says that the parish registers date only from 1719, and that no name of Greenwood occurs on the burial register for fifty years subsequent. Miles Greenwood must have been born fully as early as 1660; his son Miles, Junior, was born 1695 and died in London 9 Nov. 1768, and had been for over fifty years principal clerk in the salt office. Item I give unto my niece Jaone Chambers, my sister Chambers her daughter marryed in Essex, the sune of five pounds.

Item I give unto Michael Hindes, my sister Carter's grandchild, the sune of tenne pounds.

Item my will is that the sune of fowerteene pounds due unto me upon bond by my brother Walter Simpson shalbe equally divided between the wife and the two daughters of my said brother Simpson, lying and being in Priston Richard in the county of Westmoreland as by the deed of bargain and sale thereof appeareth.

Item I give and bequeath one close of arrable or pasture, p'cell thereof adjoining uppon Rowbriggess, unto my nephew Miles Greenwood and to his heirs forever, together with one silver beaker to remaine and be to the said Miles and his heirs forever who shall successively inherit my father's lands in Crooklands aforesaid, and all the rest of the lands and the house thereunto belonging.

Item I give and bequeath unto my nephew John Simpson, the sonne of my brother Walter Simpson and to his heirs forever (rest missing).

Item I give and bequeath the sune of five pounds Of lawfull English money unto the Alderman and Burgesses of Grantham and to their successors as a testimony of my love and good will w'ch I have and beare unto the Corporation, and my will is that the said five pounds shall by my executor be put into a peece of plate of that value within twelve months next after my decease, and the said plate to remaine and be to the Alderman of Grantham successively for ever, desiring the increase of all true love and peace multiplied upon them and their posteritye.

Item I give and bequeath the sume of five pounds to be paid by my Ex'tor unto the poore of Grantham vizt. within six months next after my decease, to be distributed at the discretion of my Executor, Mr. Alderman and the rest of his and mine loveing brethen the conburgesses, desiring them to take especiall care and notice in the distribution thereof in the poore families and people living in the streete wherein I now dwell.

Item I give to every one of my servants remaining with me at the tyme of death tenne shillings a peece.

Item my will is that all and singular the severall legacyes and bequests before mentioned (for the payment whereof there is not in this my will any time limited) shall be paid by mine Ex'tor within two years next ensuing after my decease.

Item I do make and ordaine my well beloved Nephew Mr Rowland Greenwood, my brother Robert Greenwood's eldest sonne and now vicar of Winbish in the county of Essex, my sole executor of this my last will and testament hoping that he will be carefull to perform the trust by me reposed in him.

And all other my goods and cattalls as well real as personall by this my last will and testament not bequeathed, after my debts the legacyes paid and my funerall chardges and expenses defrayed and satisfied, I give and bequeath unto my said Executor.

And lastly I do hereby make and ordaine my welbeloved in Christ, and my auncient friends and acquaintance, Mr Hugh Wilkinson of Grantham, Clarke, Edward Watson and Henry Feareman, Gent., Conburgesses of the said Borough of Grantham, sup'visors of this my said last will and testament, desiring them to be ayding and assisting in their counsell and advice to my said Executor touching the good education of those fower parentless children before mentioned and in the due p'formance of this my last will. And my will is that if any doubt or ambiguity shall happen to arise touching the exposition of any clause sentence or thing contained in this my last will, that then the same shall be construed to all intents and purposes by my said supervisors. And I do give unto my said supervisors in testimony of my love unto them the sume of twenty shillings a peece, desiring them to accept the same with that good will and respect where w'th I give it unto them.

MILES GREENWOOD

Published and declared by me the w'th in named Miles Greenwood, to be my last will and testament, and likewise subscribed with my own hand the IXth day of June Anno dni. 1637, in the presence of Mr Hugh Wilkinson, of Grantham, Clarke, Edward Watson, Henry Cole, Henry Feareman, Gent., Conburgesses of the Borough of Grantham, Andrew Browne, Gent. and Edward Kirthin.

MILES GREENWOOD

Proved at Lincoln, October 10, 1637.

Among the Domestic State Papers of James I, Vol. 132, there is a letter from Miles Greenwood, alderman of Grantham, and others of that place, to the Council, 1 July 1622, stating that they had entrusted their contribution of £50 to Mr. Wicliffe to pay in.

In the St. George Visitation of Lincolnshire, 1634 (Coll. of Arms, MS. C. 23), his name occurs as one of the burgesses of Grantham, but no arms or pedigree were entered. He was alderman in 1615, 1622 and 1630. On a tablet in St. Wulfram Church his name occurs twice as a benefactor of the town, for the £1 left as by his will, and for a "silver cann and thirteen spoons"; this latter representing the legacy of £5, which he left as a testimony of love and good will to the alderman and burgesses of Grantham.

His native place, Crooklands, was in the Parish of Heversham, township of Preston Richards, Kendal Ward, co. Westmoreland. The charity of £1 per annum, which he left to the poor of this place, was invested 1816 in John Manners, who, though frequently applied to, had not then paid the donation for many years.

Nicholson and Burn's History of Cumberland and Westmoreland (London, 1777) mentions the above Greenwood and his charity, but no other person of the name, and states that the old parish church of Heversham was burned down by accident, in 1601, and all the monuments and parish registers utterly destroyed; it was rebuilt soon after.

206. Thomas Greenwood, gardener, of the Parish of St. Swithin, city of Lincoln; will of — 1706, mentions wife, Jane; mother, Elizabeth; son Henry; daughter, Jane, not 16; sons-in-law, John and Thomas Dawson; sister, Frances Chappell; brother, Bolton Greenwood.
207. Edward Greenwood of Grantham, co. Lincoln, yeoman; will 30 Aug. 1706, proved at Lincoln 6 Oct. 1706; to son, Edward, a house in Castle St.; to John, son of son John, a house in High St.; to son, Charles, a house in High St.; daughters, Ann Greenwood and Elizabeth Ladd; legacies to James and Robert Greenwood. Son, Charles Greenwood executor.

POST MORTEM INQUISITIONS OF YORKSHIRE

AS TO GREENWOODS

FOUND IN THE PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE (FORMERLY IN THE CHAPTER HOUSE)
BY H. G. SOMERBY, LONDON, MAY 4, 1866

1. Inq. held at Wakefield, 8 July, 14th Eliz. (1572), after the death of John Greenwood of Langfield, Parish of Halifax, who died 9 June, 1st Edw. VI, (1547). James Greenwood, aged 28 years (born 1519), at time of his father's death was his heir. Mentions land acquired of Christopher Greenwood. Manor of Langfield and lands in Wakefield.
2. Inq. held at Halifax, 4 July, 21st Eliz. (1579), after the death of Thomas Greenwood of Heptonstall, who died 24 January 1578-9. His son, John, aged at that time 36 years, was his heir. (Will 40.)
3. Inq. held at Wakefield, 11 July, 21st Eliz. (1579), after the death of Thomas Greenwood of Oxford, who died at Oxford, 20 (or 22d) August, 19th Eliz. (1577). Thomas Greenwood of Heptonstall, aged 4 years, was his son and heir. Had lands in Wakefield, Stanley, Allerthorpe and Newton. (Will 151.)
4. Inq. held at Kirby-Kendall, co. Westmorland, 23 Sept., 5th Chas. I (1629), after the death of William Greenwood of Old Hutton, yeoman, who died 25 December 1626. Robert Greenwood, then aged 40 years, was his brother and heir. Old Hutton was near Kendal. Miles Greenwood of Grantham, co. Lincoln, was from this section and his will (1637) mentions a brother, Robert. (Will 205.)
5. Inq. held at Bradford, 20th September, 13th Chas. I (1637), after the death of Robert Greenwood of Westerton, his son and heir being John Greenwood, aged 29 years (born 1608). Robert died 24 June 1637 and had lands in Westerton, West and East Ardesley, and Woodhouse. Robert (and his son, John) are mentioned in will of his grandfather, Robert Greenwood, Esq., of Westerton in 1623. (Will 101.)

The above John Greenwood, whose ten children are here recorded, was one of the principal burgesses of Yarmouth in 1577. In 1586, and again in 1612, he was elected one of the two bailiffs, whose office was similar to that of mayor. Palmer's History of Yarmouth (1874) says: "John Greenwood was a man of considerable importance in Yarmouth, and he died at Burgh Castle, a village in Suffolk, about four miles from Yarmouth, and was buried within the communion rails of the Church of Burgh Castle, as were also his son and grandson, with their arms—sable a chevron ermine, between three saltires, argent." There is a long inscription on the monument. William, the son of John, commanded a company of volunteer horse, under the Parliament, in 1648, and died in 1656. His son Thomas (of Gorleston and Burgh Castle) succeeded, and died in 1677, aged 56. These three generations appear in the pedigree from the visitation of Suffolk in 1664, which is given hereafter.

The records of apprentices and freemen of the town of Yarmouth have not been preserved previous to about the year 1700, and the only name of Greenwood found in them is Erasmus Greenwood who had been apprentice to Christopher Pegg, and was made freeman 5 September 1780. This Erasmus had property in the Parish of St. Giles, Norwich.

NOTE A, PAGE 17

PURCHASES OF LAND AND SHIPYARDS BY NATHANIEL GREENWOOD (1)

1. The first land bought by Nathaniel Greenwood was a piece conveyed to him by William Payne, 12 September 1658. This small piece was 29' E. & W., by 20' N. & S., and was some 60' E. of North Street and 27' N. from White Bread Alley. He later extended this by purchase from John Griffin, 18 February 1677 and 1 December 1683. The deed of 1677 is the only one recorded, but we learn of the others from a deed of conveyance given by Greenwood's daughter, Mrs. Anna Henschman, together with her husband, Nathaniel Henschman, merchant, in December 1700 (Lib. XX, f. 121). This being 29' 9" in front W. to street leading to Winisimet Ferry (i. e., North Street), and in rear 28' 9" E. on Robert Bronsden; on S. 83' on land (in 1706 of said Nathaniel and Anna Henschman), and N. (on land of children of John Tuttle, dec. in 1706). At Nathaniel Greenwood's death in 1684 he appears to have held the entire N. E. corner of North Street and White Bread Alley, running east on the latter some 83' and abutting on land of John Peirce. In January 1658/9 Nathaniel Greenwood was living on the small piece of land first bought from William Payne.
2. 26 March 1673 (Lib. VIII, f. 267), Nathaniel Greenwood purchased for a valuable consideration of Edward Page, cooper, of Boston and Elizabeth (Beamsley), his wife, a parcel of lands or flats (east of Ship Street) next the water side in Boston, being 26' in breadth, from the highway before the door of s'd Page's dwelling house, down to low water mark, running northerly along Edward Grant's land, with the highway west, Ed. Page south, and the sea east. Wit.—Edward Page, Jr.; Ack. 27 October; Rec'd 6 December 1673. "Postscript—The s'd Greenwood, by agreement between buyer and seller, is to maintain the highway between the s'd Page his house & the afore bargained premises."
3. 24 November 1673 (Lib. VIII, f. 277), Samuel Davis, mariner, sold Nathaniel Greenwood for £100 land at the northerly end of Boston "being part of that yard where the said Nathaniel Greenwood formerly hath and now doth build Vessels," running west on street or highway, north by Ed. Page, east by sea, south by John Davis, and ranging from said street down to low water mark. (This land was occupied in later years by Mr. Rhodes and before that by Cheevers.)

4. 29 July 1674 (Lib. IX, f. 288), John and Elisha Bennet of Rumney Marsh, in the Township of Boston (now Chelsea), mariners, sold to Nathaniel Greenwood, shipwright of Boston, and John White, joiner of Boston, for £180 upland and meadows (some 200 acres lying near the boundary lines of Town of Maulden and Lynn Common), at Rumney Marsh and also in Maulden. N. B.—Nathaniel Greenwood and wife, Mary, conveyed their share of the lands at Rumney Marsh 8 June 1680 for £104 current to said John White, joiner (Lib, XIV, f. 140).
5. 1 November 1675 (Lib. IX, f. 277), Ed. Page to Nathaniel Greenwood—Bond £132.10 secured by my now dwelling house, garden, etc., as it is now fenced, butted, and bounded upon Ed. Grant's land on the north side, and Samuel Davis on the south, and John Tuttle on the west, and the highway on the east, with a small parcel of flats to the eastward of the highway, butting upon the highway and to low water mark lying & being between the s'd Nathaniel Greenwood's land which he purchased of s'd Page and s'd Davis, lying & being in Boston in which I now dwell etc. Otherwise not being paid s'd Greenwood to make up amount to £210 and take premises.
6. 27 October 1676 (Lib. IX, f. 404), Ed. Page sold to Nathaniel Greenwood for £210 his dwelling house, lot and grounds attached, situated on the street next the water-side in Boston, and leading to the North Battery; easterly fronting on said street 37½' more or less; south by house & land of Samuel Davis, being in length 160' more or less, east to west; west by land of John Tuttle ("being on a breadth in the west end containing 65' more or less by a slip or strip of land running north full to the widow Turner's, with the privilege down to low water mark—with the Flats now belonging unto me, being 4 or 6 feet wide"); and on north by house and land of Edward Grant and widow Turner.¹ Recorded 4 Nov. 1676.
7. 30 May 1677, John Savell, joiner of Braintree, and executor of will of William Savell of same place, deceased—for £120 p'd by Nathaniel Greenwood to Mr. Richard Wharton of Boston, as part payment for a farm bought of heirs of Mr. William Tyng by William Savell and his partners, as appears by deed of Jan. 15, 1666, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged—sold to Nathaniel Greenwood of Boston, 37 acres of land and meadow in Braintree, being part of the farm bought by s'd Wm. Savell and his partners. N. B.—No record of sale of Braintree land in Boston or Dedham records.
8. 22 August 1677 (Lib. X, f. 153), Samuel Greenwood, ship carpenter of Boston, with consent of his wife Mary sold to his brother Nathaniel Greenwood, shipwright, of the same place, for £100 N. Eng. currency, his house, lot and grounds belonging thereto, bounded east by land of Jeremiah Fitch, west by Edward Gould, south by land of Mr. Symon Lynde 24', with the other side or front facing north 24' on the lane or street called Sudbury Lane, leading into the fields or pastures, running back on a straight line 56' and situated in Boston. N. B.—No deed showing the original purchase of this land by Samuel Greenwood (101) appears to be on record, but he probably purchased it from Jeremiah Fitch, glover, who bought it 1661 of Robert Wyand. It was reconveyed to Samuel Greenwood by the executors of Nathaniel's estate, 22 November 1686 (Lib. XIV, f. 95).

9. 1 September 1677 (Lib. X, f. 161), Samuel Davis for a valuable consideration sold Nathaniel Greenwood certain land at northerly end of Boston, being part of that yard where the said Nathaniel Greenwood formerly hath and now doth build vessels (west of Ship Street); situated southeast upon the highway leading to the North Battery, and in length by that highway 58'; running north by Nathaniel Greenwood's land, now in possession of Edw'd Paige and in length 44'; west by land of John Davis, now in possession of David Cummins and in length thereon the west side 38', butting on a four foot way that leadeth from the Street unto the house said Greenwood now doth dwell in, being a 3 square piece of land. Recorded 6 Sept. 1677.
10. 22 October 1677 (Lib. X, f. 207), John Davis, taylor of Boston, and wife Mary, sold Nathaniel Greenwood for £60 land (east of Ship Street) in Boston, fronting on the same highway or street mentioned above (leading to North Battery), 21' 7" abutting north on said Nathaniel Greenwood's own land; west on said street; south on land of Robert Brimsdon; east upon the sea, being at high water mark in breadth 26' 8", with privilege, etc., to low water mark. Recorded Oct. 23, 1677.
11. 18 February 1677/8 (Lib. X, f. 280), John Griffen, calker, and his now wife Susanna of Boston, sold to Nathaniel Greenwood of Boston, shipwright, for £10: 15, land in Boston, containing in breadth (fronting on a six-foot lane between said Griffen's and John Richard's lands), 20' abutting west upon said Griffen's land is there 27', abutting north upon said Greenwood's land is there 20', abutting east upon John Pearce's land & is there 27' with all the privileges, etc. Wit., Nich. How, John Maverick. Recorded Feb. 27, 1677/8.
12. Nathaniel Greenwood also bought land of J. Griffen, Dec. 1, 1683.

WILL OF SAMUEL GREENWOOD (2)

7 MARCH 1721

In the name of God, Amen, the seventh day of March in the year of our Lord 1721 being the seventh year of His Majesty's Reign I Samuel Greenwood Senr. of Boston in the County of Suffolk in New England Shipwright being sick and Indisposed in Body, but a perfect sound and Disposing mind and memory all praise be to God for the same, yet calling to mind my mortality and how fraile and uncertain my life is, it being appointed for all men once to dye Do make and Ordain this to be my last Will and Testament. That is to say, Principally and First of all I give and Recommend my soul into the hands of Almighty God that gave it me, hoping thro' the merits and Intercession of my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ to have full and free Pardon and forgiveness of all my Sins, and to Inherit Everlasting life. And my Body I Commit to the Earth to be decently Interred at the Discretion of my Executors hereafter named, nothing doubting but at the General Resurrection I shall receive the same Again by the mighty Power of God. And as touching such worldly Estate wherewith God hath been Pleased to bless me in this life I Give Demise and Dispose of the same in the following manner and form viz: First I will that all my Funeral Charges (which I leave to be at the Discretion of my Executors to give to whom they please) together with all my just Debts which I owe in Right or Conscience to any Person or Persons whatsoever shall be well and truly paid or Ordained to be paid in Convenient time after my Decease by my Executors hereafter named. Item. I Give and Bequeath to Elizabeth my Dearly Beloved Wife, all that Messuage or Tenement in part of which Daniel Eustace now lives, and One Third part of all my Plate and Household Goods, and to her heirs and assigns forever, together with the use or Improvement of my Dwelling House, which I now occupy and use of part of the Garden thereto, but not the Barn, or in lieu thereof the value of Four hundred and Fifty Pounds out of my Estate to use and Improve during her Remaining my Widow, or Natural life (the whole amounting to about One Thousand Pounds) But if she marry or at her Death, then the said House and use of the Garden or the said Four hundred and fifty Pounds to return to my children, and be Divided as my other Estate is hereafter ordained to be Divided. Item. I Give and Bequeath to my Eldest Son Samuel Greenwood Four hundred Pounds which he hath now in his hands in part of his Double Portion, hereafter Bequeathed unto him and to his heirs and assigns forever. Item. I give and Bequeath to my only Daughter Elizabeth Greenwood the Sum of One hundred Pounds, the value thereof out of my Estate, and to her heirs and Assigns forever besides her part hereafter Bequeathed to her. Item. I Give and Bequeath to my Son Isaac Greenwood the value of one hundred Pounds out of my Estate, and to his heirs forever or assigns forever besides his part hereafter bequeathed him. Item. I Give and Bequeath to my Youngest Son Joseph Greenwood the value of Two hundred Pounds out of my Estate and to his heirs and Assigns forever besides his Portion hereafter Bequeathed him. Item. I Give and Bequeath to Dr. Increase Mather of Boston, Clerk, the Sum of Ten Pounds out of my Estate and to his heirs and Assigns forever. Item. I Give and Bequeath to Dr. Cotton Mather of Boston, Clerk, the Sum of Ten Pounds out of my Estate and to his heirs and assigns forever. Item. I give and Bequeath to the poor People in the North End of Boston the Sum of fifteen pounds to be paid within twelve months after my Decease. Item. my mind and Will is, that with Convenient Speed after my Decease and before any Legacies are Deducted and paid that my whole Estate (except my Wife Accept of my Dwelling House) shall be prized and valued by Three Judicious solid Discerning Men chosen by my Wife and Children mutually, and that both Personal and Real whatsoever and wheresoever in all its parts and circumstances (not selling any of it to pay Legacies and Diminish it untill it be first Divided) after which I would have all the foregoing Legacies and Bequests paid, and the remainder together with the Four hundred Pounds my son Samuel hath received already and the four hundred and fifty pounds, or my Dwelling House which of them my wife refuses, to be Divided into five equal parts, two fifth parts of which I give and bequeath to my Eldest Son Samuel Greenwood aforementioned, including the four hundred pounds he hath already and to his heirs and assigns forever. Item. I give and Bequeath to my only Daughter Elizabeth Greenwood one fifth part of my said Estate and to her heirs and assigns forever, besides the hundred Pounds I have already bequeathed her out of my Estate. Item. I give and bequeath to my son Isaac Greenwood one fifth part of my said Estate and to his heirs and assigns forever besides the hundred pounds I have before bequeathed to him. Item. I give and bequeath to my youngest son Joseph Greenwood one fifth part of my said remaining Estate besides his two hundred pounds before given him, And to his heirs and assigns forever. Item. I will that after my said Wife's Decease or marriage that my Dwelling House or the said four hundred and fifty Pounds, which of them that she Accepts of, be also Divided as my aforesaid Estate viz: in five equal parts, two of which I give and bequeath to my Son Samuel Greenwood and one fifth apiece to my other three children viz: Elizabeth Greenwood, Isaac Greenwood, and Joseph Greenwood and to their heirs and assigns forever. Item. my mind and will is further also that to whomsoever my Unfinished Brick house shall fall I mean that at the end of my Dwelling House that they shall Improve a part of my Garden proportionable to the said Brick house, untill a Division of the said Garden and my Dwelling House be made, also of the Privy House, and my mind and will is also that my Children or their heirs or assigns or their Tennants Occupying their Housing which may fall to their Portion shall enjoy the use and liberty of my Pump and Passage to it, which is Situate by the Brewhouse. Also I appoint that the Two Passage ways down my Wharfs on the South and North side thereof shall lye open in Common as they now are forever except the heirs on both sides of the said Passages for their Convenience or advantage shall mutually agree to shut them up. And of this my last will and Testament I make, Ordain and appoint my three Sons Samuel Greenwood, Isaac Greenwood and Joseph Greenwood the Executors hereby making utterly null and Void all and every other former Wills, Testaments, Legacies, Bequests and Executors by me in any wise before now named, Willed, and Bequeathed Ratyfying this only to be my last will and Testament. In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal the day and year first in these presents written.

Samuel Greenwood and a Seal.

Signed, Sealed, Pronounced and Declared by the said Testator as his last Will and Testament. In presence of us. Benjamin Snelling, John Richards, Owen Harris. 1720/21.

Exam'd. John Roydell Reg'r.

Whereas I the Subscriber have Omitted in my last Will and Testament to make any mention of my only Grandson Samuel Greenwood I Do by these presents from the good will and affection which I bear unto him Signify and Declare it to be my will and Order that he have a Legacy of Twenty Pounds given to him out of my Estate And I Do by these presents Empower my Executor his Father to Take the Above said Sum of Twenty Pounds into his hands and when he comes of age to bestow it upon him. In Testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and Seal the Sixth day of May Anno Domini 1721.

¹ William H. Montague of Boston, in a letter to Isaac John Greenwood (56), dated 9 January 1860, stated that he was in his youth a playmate of George H. Gay, who lived with his widowed mother, Mrs. Mary (Greenwood) Gay (23) at Dedham, and that they frequently played with a silver mounted dress sword which belonged to one of the Greenwood ancestors of young Gay. The latter died in 1840, aged 36, and the family relics eventually passed to Mr. William Carlisle Nichols, who restored them to Mrs. William Pitt Greenwood of Boston, and Miss Louisa Greenwood (sister of Honorable John Greenwood) of Brooklyn, N. Y.

PAPERS AND ARTICLES WRITTEN BY PROFESSOR
ISAAC GREENWOOD (7)

In 1722 Professor Greenwood published anonymously a pamphlet entitled: "A Friendly Debate; or, A Dialogue between Academicus; and Sawry & Munndungus (Wm. Douglas and Francis Archbald), two Eminent Physicians, about some of their Performances." It was on the subject of smallpox inoculation and was answered by a pamphlet from William Douglas, M.D., being "a short Answer to Matters of fact, etc., misrepresented in a late doggerel Dialogue, etc." 8vo. Boston. 1722.

In the Harvard College Library there is a copy of an "Arithmetick, Vulgar and Decimal: with the Application Thereof, to a Variety of Costs in Trade & Commerce," published in Boston 1729, 8vo. Beneath the title is written in ink: "By Prof. Isaac Greenwood A.M. etc." This copy, after having been preserved in the family through several generations, was presented to the College on 15 November 1831 by Reverend Francis William Pitt Greenwood, a great-grandson of the Professor. The Library has another copy, presented by a lady in Maine, which has the inscription: "Charles Frost's book 1729." It also contains this pencilled remark: "by Isaac Greenwood—by some ascribed to Samuel Greenwood."

Also in the Harvard College Library is a copy of another prospectus issued by Professor Greenwood in 1729 for "A Course of Philosophical Lectures (twelve in number) with a great Variety of Curious Experiments; Illustrating and Confirming Sir Isaac Newton's Laws of Matter and Motion." This prospectus, together with the "Philosophical Discourse to the Students, etc." by Professor Greenwood (published Boston 1731), and other pamphlets bound under the same cover, was also presented a century later to Harvard College by Reverend Francis William Pitt Greenwood. It contains the autograph of Isaac Greenwood, probably that of the Professor's son. Another copy of the "Philosophical Discourse" is in the Library of the British Museum.

Several scientific papers communicated at times by Professor Greenwood may be found in the Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society. One is an article entitled, "A New Method for composing a natural history of meteors," wherein Professor Greenwood, foreseeing its great practical utility, proposes a plan for ascertaining the prevalence, extent, power, influence and prominent features of the winds peculiar to various sections of the globe. In another article of the Transactions occurs "A brief account of some of the Effects and Properties of Damp, in a letter to William Rutty, M.D., R. S. Secr." The letter is dated from Harvard College, 10 May 1729, and relates principally to observations made at the opening of an old well in Boston on 19 July 1727. In The Weekly News Letter, No. 30, Boston, from 20 to 27 July 1727, two columns are given up to a communication of Isaac Greenwood on the subject of foul air found in a well in which two men, Adam and James (O') Riordan were killed, and a third man, William James, restored and saved. In the same work occurs an "Account of an Aurora Borealis seen on the 22 of October, 1730 by Mr. Isaac Greenwood, Prof. of Math. at Cambridge, in N. E., communicated in a letter to the late Dr. Rutty, R. S. Secr.," dated Harvard College, October 24, 1730, with engraved diagrams after the original drawings.¹

A copy of the prospectus on a course of sixteen lectures on the "Orrery, Armillary Sphere, Globes and other Machines, Instruments, and Schemes, made use of by Astronomers, Accompanied with a great variety of Phys. Experiments and Curious Remarks," is in the Library of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and the lectures are alluded to in Felts' Annals of Salem.

A twenty-four-page pamphlet was published in Boston 1731, entitled: "A Philosophical Discourse, concerning the mutability and changes of the material world, to the Students of Harvard College (April 7, 1731) upon the news of the death of Thomas Hollis, Esq., the most bountiful benefactor of the Society, by Isaac Greenwood, A.M., Holl. Prof. of Phil. & Math., read at the desire of the President and Fellows.—To Mr. Thomas Hollis, nephew of the deceased Th. Hollis, Esq., the following discourse is with all due respect and humility dedicated by the Author."

DUTCH ANCESTRY OF SAMUEL P. BROWN, HUSBAND OF MARY GREENWOOD (32)

Laurens Van der Spiegel was baptized 29 November 1637 in Vlissingen (Flushing), Holland. A baker by trade, he settled when a young man in New Amsterdam and became a member of the Dutch Church in April 1660. He married, 21 April 1661, Sarah Webber, daughter of Wolfert and Anna (Wallis) Weber of Amsterdam, Holland. She had become a member of the New Amsterdam Church in October 1660. In 1673 and '74 Laurens Van der Spiegel was a Schepen of the City, which had been rechristened New Orange. He died 14 November 1683, and on 25 June 1685 his widow became the second wife of Johannes Provoost of New Albany. On 3 September Mrs. Provoost, being sick, executed a joint will with her husband. It was acknowledged before William Bogardus, Public Notary, and recorded in Liber 19, B, p. 180 of records in Surrogate's Office of New York (formerly Liber 19 in County Clerk's Office). She appointed her cousin, Reverend Henry Selyns, minister of the Dutch Church in Brooklyn, guardian of her children. Mrs. Provoost died 4 September 1685 and administration was granted on her estate 23 December following. Johannes Provoost married (3), 18 July 1687, Mrs. Anna (Mauritz) Van Nieuwenhausen.

Of the sons of Laurens and Sarah (Webber) Van der Spiegel, three had daughters named for their grandmother. Jacobus, the second son, married Anna Sanders and had two daughters, of whom Sara, the younger, was baptized 14 June 1702. Henricus, the youngest son, baptized 2 March 1681, married, 12 January 1707, Anna Provoost. She was baptized 11 February 1685, daughter of David and Tryntje (Laurens) Provoost. Their only daughter out of eight children, Sarah, was baptized 15 April 1716.

Johannes, the eldest son, baptized 27 January 1666, married, 16 April 1688, Marrisje Luersen of Voren. Their daughter, Sara, baptized 15 February 1696, married Robert Bartol and had a daughter, Sarah Bartol, baptized 18 March 1716, whose godparents were Rip Van Does, Johannes Jensen and Marrisje Van der Spiegel. Sarah Bartol married (1), about 1738, Abraham Blank; (2), 9 February 1752, Peter Utt. She died 14 July 1791 and was buried in St. Paul's Churchyard, New York. Her daughter, Sarah Blank, baptized in June 1746, married (21 May 1763, date of marriage license) William Brown. He was the son of William and Lea (Maas or Maes) Brown, who were married 17 September 1740. He was baptized in the Dutch Church 3 November 1742. According to tradition, Sarah Blank's husband, William Brown, was Commissary General in New York before the Revolution, and afterwards settled in the West Indies and remarried. Perhaps he was the William Brown, master of H. M. sloop Jamaica, who, with Captain John Lewis Gidion and Lieutenant George Peel, was appointed officer of the customs in New York. There was a William Brown, merchant of New York, who in 1762 with Nicholas Bayard owned the armed brigantine General Monckton. One of the name was in October 1776 an addressor of Admiral Howe and General Howe on their successful occupation of the city.

William Brown, Jr., son of the above William and Sarah (Blank) Brown, was brought up by his grandmother, Sarah Utt. He married Mary Haswell and was sexton of St. Paul's Church 1788-1817. His wife died 24 April 1857 and was buried in the family vault at St. Paul's. One of their sons, Reverend John Brown, born about 1791, was elected February 1878 Rector Emeritus of St. George's Episcopal Church, Newburg, N. Y., having been rector since 24 December 1815. Another son, Samuel P. Brown, born 17 September 1796, married Mary Greenwood (32).

EARLY PURVEYANCE

A gentle manciple¹ was there of a temple,
Of which achatours might take ensample
For to ben wise in bying of vitaille.—Chaucer.

The word achator (cater or caterer) has been derived by some from the Gothic cates, signifying dainties, delicacies, but its origin, with more likelihood may be assigned to the French acheter, to buy. It was a term formerly applied to that officer in the household of a King or nobleman who provided or purchased victuals and other necessaries, while that prerogative or right of pre-emption by which royalty was authorized to buy such provisions and necessaries at an appointed value, was styled purveyance. As early as the reign of Alfred, at the close of the ninth century, we read of the CYNINGES FEORME; that is, the king's feorm or purveyance, to which certain districts, lands, monastic domicils, etc., were subject, and which was collected by the reeves or sheriffs appointed for the purpose. From Grimm we learn that according to the oldest custom it was freely offered, by degrees precariously requested and lastly despotically demanded.

In the year 959 Edgar ascended the throne of his great-grandfather, Alfred, and from his time it appears that the reeves, whose duty it was "zealously to provide, and always rightfully gain for their lords," abandoned their righteous ways and became in very truth mere robbers who grievously afflicted and despoiled the poor to their own agrandizement. Accordingly, among the laws which Canute the Great passed in 1010 we find the following: "This then is the Alleviation which it is my will to secure to all the people of that which they before this were too much oppressed with. That then is first: that I command all my reeves that they justly provide ON MY OWN, and maintain me therewith; and that no man need give them anything as FEORM-FULTUM, unless he himself be willing. And if anyone after that demand a WITE (mulct or fine) let him be liable in his WER to the king." WER was the moneyed valuation set upon each person according to his rank.

When Edward the Confessor ascended the throne of his step-father, Canute, in 1042 he expressly ordained that the ancient ordinances and customs of the country should be maintained. During this reign Alfgarus was styled "regiæ procurator aulae," deemed equivalent to the office of steward; and we find that the town of Gloucester paid annually to King Edward twelve six-gallon measures of honey, besides a certain amount of money, and a quantity of iron and iron-rods for the purpose of constructing bolts and nails for the king's ships; while the town of Skipton, among the hills of Yorkshire, paid annually fifteen pounds provision of corn and other victuals.

William of Normandy having successfully maintained his claim to the English throne confirmed the old laws and furthermore enacted that no man should withhold hereafter that service or those dues which formerly he had been accustomed to render unto his lord or master. In Domesday Book, compiled towards the close of this reign, there is frequent mention of lands held subject to a PURVEYANCE for the king's table.

The Latin term Prebendarius was applied to the purveyors themselves, who frequently received grants of land in return for their services. For such services many estates were granted by the early Norman sovereigns under a tenure called grand serjeanty by which the tenant continued bound to render some special honorary service to the king in person, either at the time of the coronation or on some other stated occasion.

William of Malmesbury, the chronicler, states that the Norman Conqueror gave sumptuous and splendid entertainments on the chief festivals of the year, summoning thither by royal edict "all the principal persons of every order, that the ambassadors from foreign nations might admire the splendour of the assemblage, and the costliness of the banquets"; and that during the reign of William II, "military discipline being relaxed, the courtiers preyed upon the property of the country people, and consumed their substance, taking the very meat from the mouths of the wretched creatures."

The excesses of the king's purveyors were materially checked by salutary laws enacted by Henry I, who succeeded his brother in 1100 and remained on the throne for a period of thirty-five years; but during the turbulent reign of Stephen "all was dissension, and evil, and rapine" again; the barons, adhering to either party, sweeping the country for provisions, oppressed the poor, seized upon their goods and even tortured them to extract what little gold or silver they might possess. Much of this disorder remained unabated in Henry II's reign, till the tenants of the king's lands came at length to court, bearing plough-shares upon their backs instead of corn, and making heavy complaints as to their poverty and misery. The king thereupon reëstablished those salutary laws of his grandfather which restrained the rapacity of his purveyors, and "made a regulation for the followers of his court, at whichever of his possessions he might be resident, stating what they should accept without payment from the country-folks, and how much, and at what price, they should purchase; punishing the transgressors by a heavy pecuniary fine, or loss of life."

In the reign of King John, the Magna Charter (1215) makes provision that no constable or bailiff of the king shall without presenting payment take any corn or cattle of any man unless the seller may be willing to part with the same; and under Edward I further laws were passed to regulate the royal purveyance, which included the servitors of those lords and ladies of the realm who, like their royal master, had been accustomed to purveyance for their table.

In the year 1454 the office of the Catery under Henry VI was provided with a sergeant and a clerk, a yeoman for the King's mouth, four yeomen purveyors, three groom-butchers, a groom-pigtaker, a yeoman herder, a groom herder, a groom tallyman, and a seafisher. As far as provision for the table was concerned, the entire management of the king's household, from an early period, appears to have been under the direction of the Steward, or Seneschall du Hostiell. This personage was assisted by a Treasurer, or Comptroller, a Cofferer, and two Clerks of the Green Cloth, and these officers together formed the "Domus Compotis consilii et iudicii," known in Edward III's time as "Le graunt Garderobe du Hostiell du Roy," of which there is mention even in the reign of Henry I. The arms of this office were a key and a rod of silver, in saltier, on a field of green; signifying the power to close, open, and punish all other offices deriving their authority from it.

IN MEMORIAM

JOSEPH RUDD GREENWOOD

May 27, 1883–March 2, 1934

The following articles written at the time of his death, and a citation received by him during his war service are here recorded in memory of Joseph Rudd Greenwood by his sister, the editor.

JOSEPH RUDD GREENWOOD '05

“We record with deep sorrow the loss of our gallant classmate Joseph Rudd Greenwood, on March 2, 1934, at St. Louis, Mo., at the age of fifty-one years.

“Joe was born in New York City, on May 27, 1883, prepared at Hill School and was graduated with the class as a civil engineer. After a year as instructor in the Civil Engineering School at Princeton, he entered the employ of Ball & Wood Co., Elizabethport, N. J., and continued with that concern and its successor, Ballwood Co., at Passaic, N. J., first as assistant engineer and then as general manager, until 1915, when he continued in his profession as consulting engineer until 1917.

“In February 1917 Joe felt the call to service and joined the American Field Service in France where he served as ambulance driver with Section 8 from February 14, 1917 to June 11, 1917, on the Verdun and Champagne fronts; as sous-chef of the Vosges detachment (six ambulances) from June 11 to August 14, 1917; as sous-chef, instructor, at training camp at Mayen-Multiers, August 1917; as sous-chef, French Officers' Automobile Training School, Meaux, August 26 to October 3, 1917. As chef, Section 15, from October 10 to November 19, 1917, he served on the Champagne front. On November 17 he was commissioned first lieutenant in the U. S. Ambulance Service and was assigned to command Section 633 (old Section 15) from November 19, 1917, to January 3, 1918. He received citation Croix de Guerre, 124 Div. French Infantry, for meritorious work under bombardment and gas, night of December 18–19, 1917; also received letter of commendation from chief, Automobile Service, 2nd French Army. On January 3, 1918, he was made commanding officer of all U. S. Army Ambulance Sections attached to the 2nd French Army serving through the battle of Verdun from January 3 to October 30, 1918, having in the meantime been promoted to the rank of captain on July 26, 1918. He served in the St. Mihiel offensive, Meuse-Argonne offensive, September 26 to October 29, 1918. From October 30, 1918, to April 23, 1919, he was detailed as inspector attached to headquarters at Paris. He commanded troops returning to U. S. in April and May 1919. Sailed from Brest May 6, 1919, and received his discharge on May 23, 1919 at Camp Devens, Mass., after two years and four months' continuous service. Section 15 (later Section 633) which Joe commanded, received three citations for Croix de Guerre (palm and two silver stars).

"After leaving the service Joe resumed his profession as consulting engineer until 1922, when he became president and treasurer of New York Vitreous Enamel Products Corporation of Flushing, N. Y. He continued with this company until 1929 when he withdrew from active business.

"On May 24, 1919, at New York City, Joe married Ruth McCallum Dayton and continued thereafter to make his home in New York City.

"Joe was much interested in religious and philanthropic activities. He was a deacon of the West End Collegiate Church, a member of the consistory of the Dutch Reformed Church, the presiding body of the Reformed Dutch Church in New York City, a trustee of the Leake and Watts Orphanage in Yonkers, and of the Riverside Day Nursery.

"We all remember Joe as an effective worker, happy in his personality and relations with his fellow men, genial, considerate, serious-minded and yet with a fine sense of humor, courageous and well balanced. His courage and gallantry were never more splendid than in his last fight for health. As the result of severe illnesses of pleurisy followed by pneumonia during the last two years, a condition developed in one of his lungs which required its removal. These illnesses and this condition were due undoubtedly to exposure to gas in heavily bombarded areas in which Joe served, especially at Verdun. Undaunted and fully appreciating the seriousness of the situation, Joe calmly faced what was before him in the same gallant way he faced death so many times during the war—full of fight, confidence and faith. A gallant soldier, a Christian gentleman, and a beloved classmate has gone to his everlasting rest after a life of deeds well done.

"Joe is survived by his widow and his two sisters, Eliza R. Greenwood and Mary M. Greenwood. To them we extend our deep and understanding sympathy."

Le 18 Octobre 1918.

Le Capitaine Greenwood, Commandant de l'échelon Américain de la 2me Armée, est appelé à un autre poste par le Colonel Jones.

Je lui adresse au moment de son départ de la 2me Armée, mes bien sincères félicitations et mes remerciements pour l'aide constante qu'il a apportée au Service Automobile de la 2me Armée.

Se déplaçant sans compter, s'occupant de son atelier de façon active, visitant constamment les Sections Sanitaires Américaines et les Sections en Secteur, le Capitaine Greenwood laissera dans le souvenir de la 2me Armée, l'exemple d'un organisateur et d'un travailleur infatigable et d'un excellent camarade.

À plusieurs reprises, le Général Commandant de l'Armée et le Chef d'État-Major de l'Armée m'ont manifesté toute leur satisfaction à se sujet. Ces appréciations très justes et si méritées, je ne puis que les confirmer et les regrets que j'exprime à l'occasion de son départ sont le meilleur témoignage de l'estime générale qui l'a toujours entouré.

En souhaitant bonne chance au Capitaine Greenwood dans le nouvel emploi qu'il va occuper, j'espère qu'il gardera un bon souvenir du Service Automobile de la 2me Armée, qu'il viendra souvent le voir et j'adresse la bienvenue au Capitaine Bingham qui n'est pas un inconnu pour nous, et qui n'aura qu'à continuer ce qu'a fait le Capitaine Greenwood pour obtenir un résultat identique à celui de son prédécesseur.

THE COLLEGIATE REFORMED CHURCH OF NEW YORK

The Consistory of the Reformed Church records with a deep sense of loss the death, on March 2, 1934, of

DEACON JOSEPH RUDD GREENWOOD

Mr. Greenwood came of a family long associated with the Collegiate Church. Beautiful windows at the Middle and West End Churches commemorate the devotion of several of its members. Joseph was the son of Isaac John and Mary Agnes Rudd Greenwood. He was born May 27, 1883, and was baptized in the Middle Church edifice then standing at the corner of Lafayette Place and Fourth Street. Upon the completion of the West End Collegiate Church in 1892, the family membership was transferred to that congregation, and Mr. Greenwood made there his confession of faith in 1896. In 1924 he was elected a deacon in the Consistory and served in that office until the time of his death. In this office he was the lineal successor of his father, who had served as deacon and then as elder in the Consistory.

Mr. Greenwood won the high regard and sincere affection of all who knew him. To his singularly lovable personality was added an integrity of character, an unfailing courtesy and a clarity of judgment which inspired confidence. His classmates at Princeton testify that even in his college days his genial personality and fine sense of humor were balanced with serious-mindedness and judgment. These qualities broadened and deepened with the years and when he left us were at their best. Can we doubt that they find full employment in the Father's House?

Not the least of the qualities which marked his character was one which John Ruskin maintains to be the greatest of all, the grace of humility. He never put himself forward, yet when a task was assigned him he could be depended upon to fulfil it with conscientious thoroughness. In the World War he felt impelled to give his service before the United States entered the conflict. His courage and ability brought him chief command of the American Ambulance Corps, attached to the 2nd French Army, at Verdun and in the offensives at St. Mihiel and the Argonne. He received the Croix de Guerre for distinguished heroism under a gas attack. It may have been due to such continuous exposure in the heavily bombarded areas in which he served that he contracted the serious condition of the lungs which resulted in his death. The same high courage revealed in the hour of his country's need was manifested in the long travail of his last illness when with clear knowledge of what lay before him, he met the supreme challenge to faith and passed triumphantly through his suffering to life eternal.

Mr. Greenwood leaves with us, as the challenge and inspiration of his brief life, a noble record of service to God and his fellowmen. He was one of the most useful members of the Board of Trustees of the Leake and Watts Orphan House and of the trustees of the Riverside Day Nursery. Near his summer camp in the Adirondacks there is a beautiful church which might well serve as a memorial to him, for he was foremost among those who gave generously of their thought and time and money to build a house which should impress on the minds of those dwellers in the wilderness a sense of the beauty of holiness and afford an opportunity for Christian fellowship and worship through the long winter months.

His relation to the church of his fathers was marked by the same devotion. As an office-bearer worshipping at the West End Church, he gave of his help unstintedly in the maintaining of the work, ably and conscientiously serving as a member of the Finance Committee, showing interest in the Bible School, and encouraging the minister and all others in positions of responsibility in countless ways.

We recall with deepest gratitude his character and his service, and we commend to the care and comfort of God those to whom his passing has brought even greater sorrow than our own, and to whom his life was even a richer benediction.

On behalf of Consistory:

(Signed) HENRY EVERTSON COBB,
Senior Minister.

Adopted at a meeting of the Consistory
April 5th, 1934.

GREENWOOD OF GREENWOOD LEE IN THE TOWNSHIP OF HEPTONSTALL, PARISH OF HALIFAX AND WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE
FROM THORESBY'S DUCATUS LEODIENSIS

Arms—Sable, a Chevron ermines between 3 saltires argent.

¹ He gave in mortmain to the Prioresse of Kirkstall in pure alms 88 acres of land, 2 acres of meadow, 8 acres of wood and 9 s. 1 d. Rent in Wickersley, by which it seems he was Lord of Wickersley.

² Obviously an error in date as Edward IV was from 1461 to 1483. The Brook Collection of Yorkshire Pedigrees, No. 1, in College of Arms, says - Richard II (1385).

⁴ See Will No. 26.

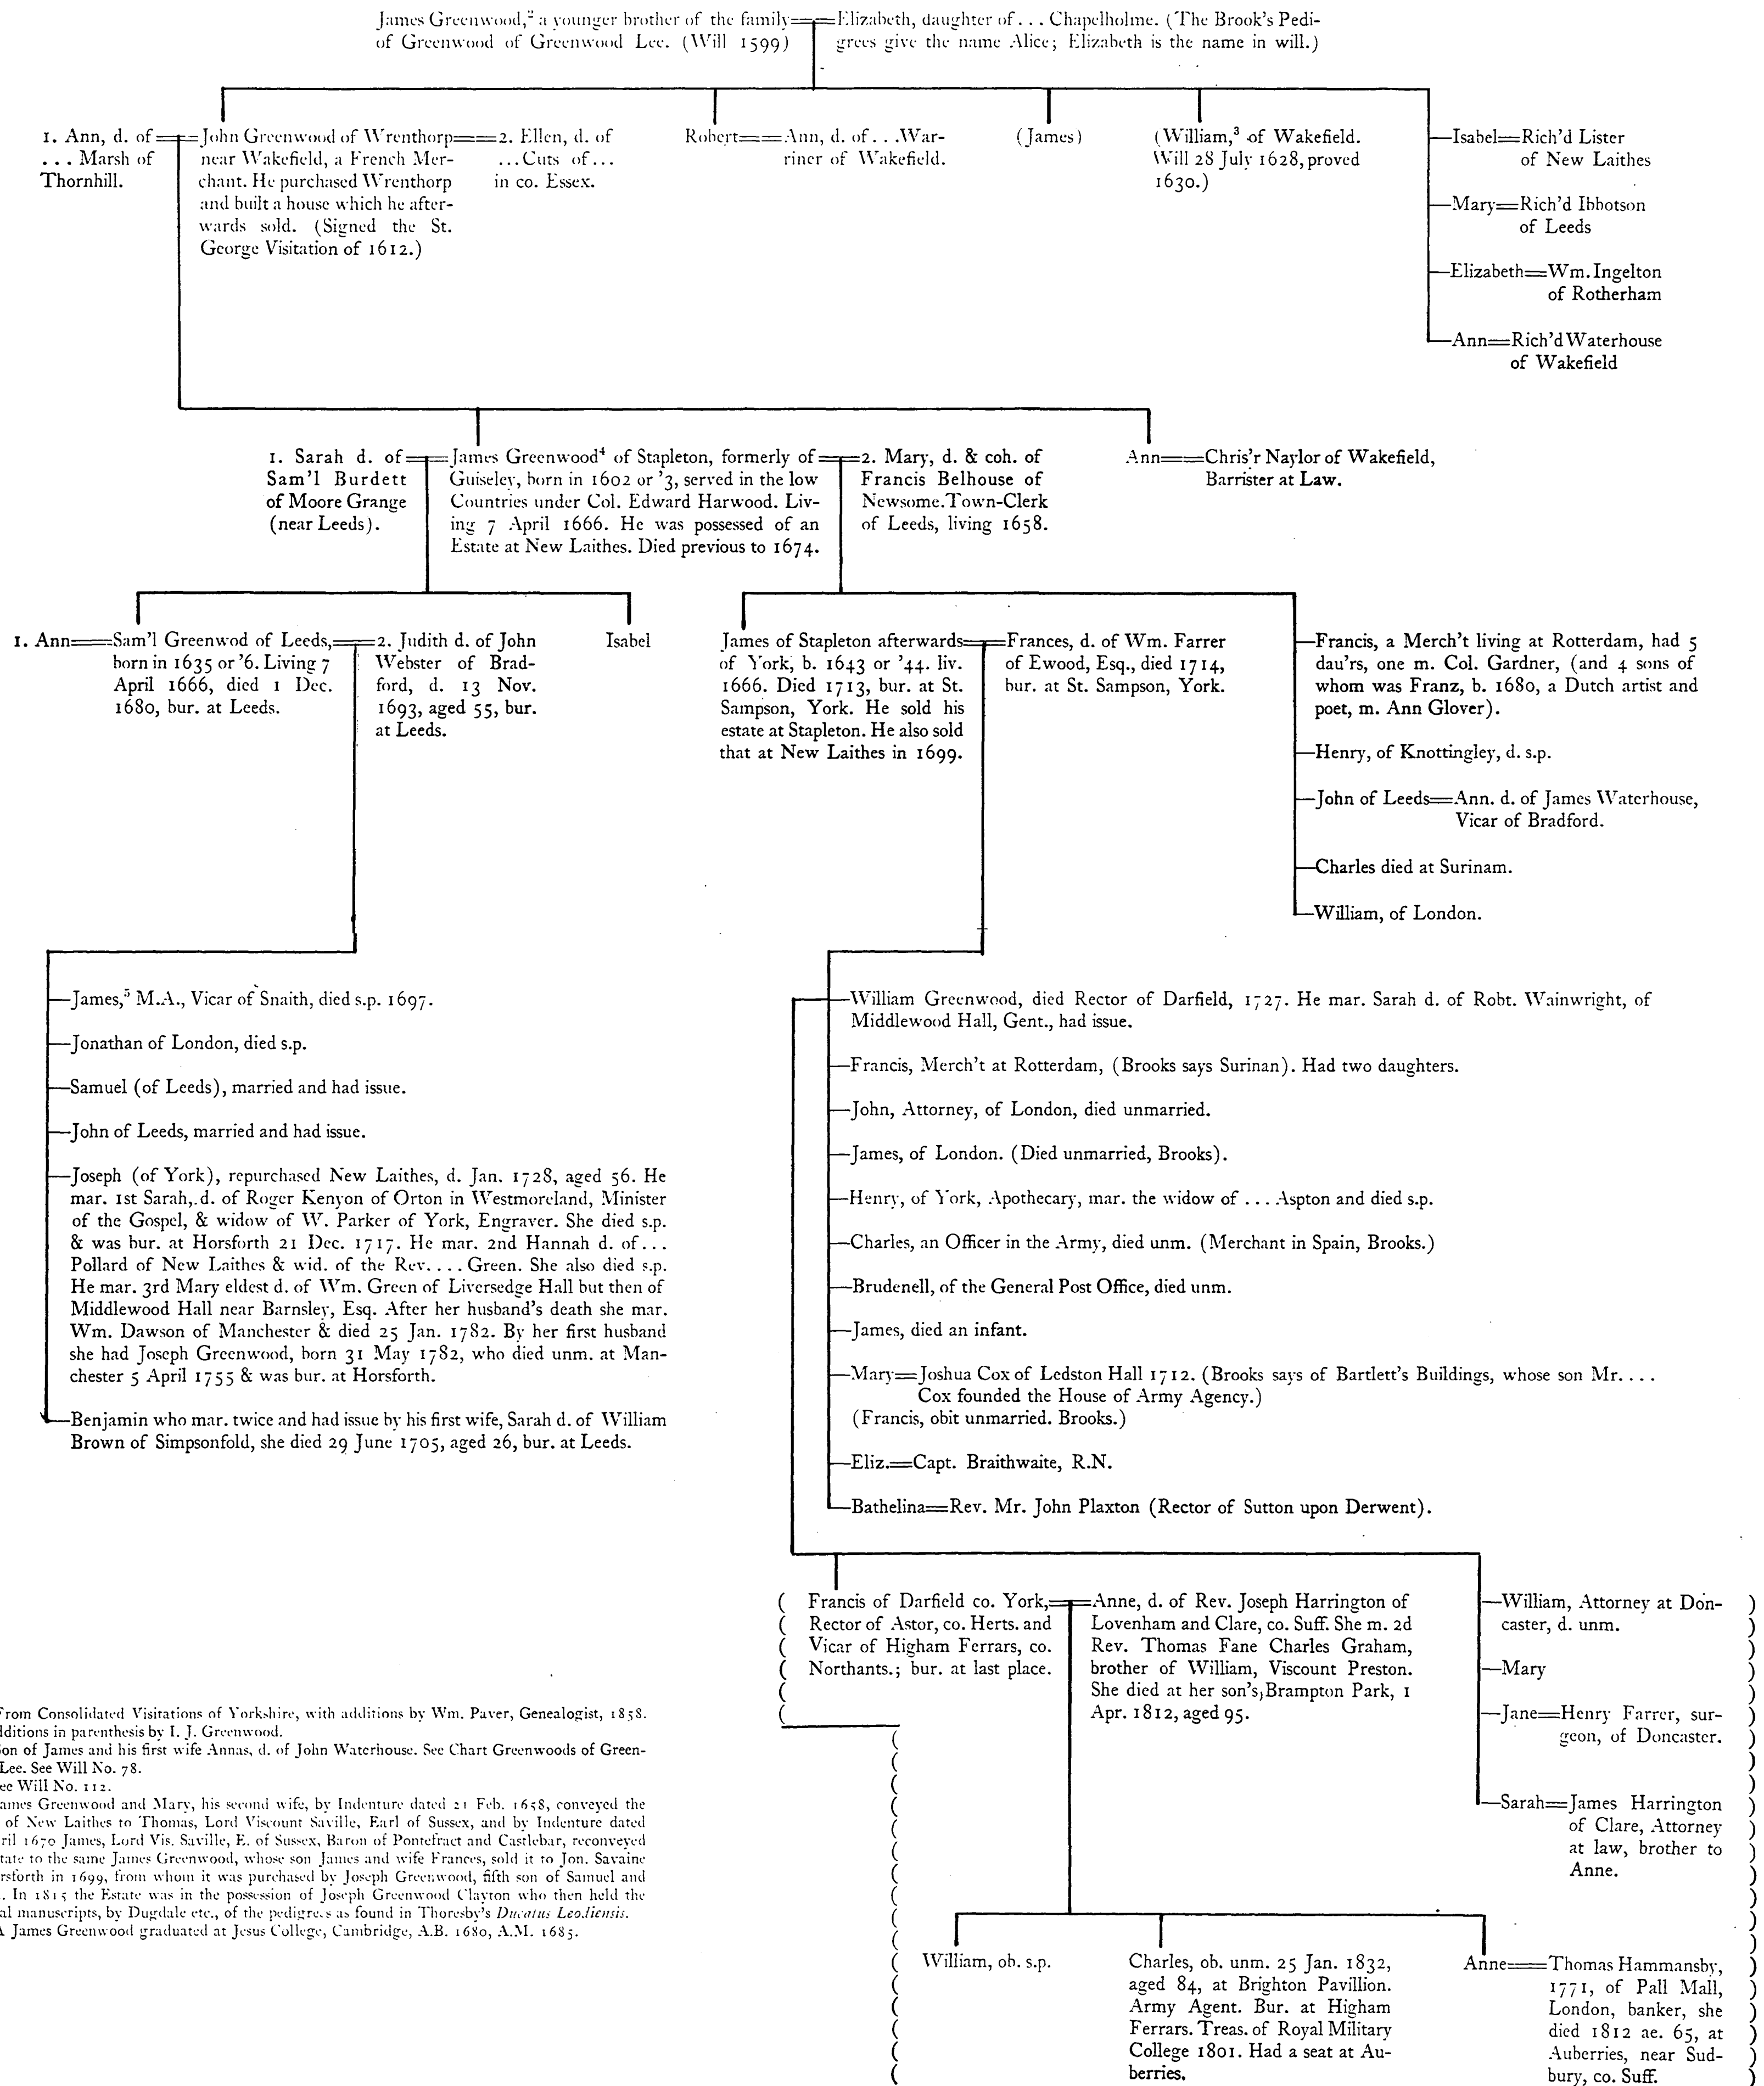

⁵ This name should be John. See Will No. 25 which mentions wife Jener and all children, father James, and brother James.

⁶ Probably John in prior generation was the priest. John and James in this generation apparently confused. See Will No. 25. A John Greenwood was Abbot of Beauchief 1516-1522.

⁷ See Chart of Greenwood's of Wrenthorp.
