The history of the Goddard family in England was compiled by Clark LaMotte Goddard. His sudden death in 1905 made it necessary that another should continue what he had begun.

As I had been much interested in the genealogy, had obtained some data concerning the American part of the family, and had access to records in the Newberry Library in Chicago, Illinois, it became my pleasure as well as my duty to finish the work so enthusiastically begun by Clark LaMotte Goddard, (No. 57.)

Frances Melanie Goddard Holmes, (No. 47.)
5641 Beacon St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

“Godard, a proper name derived from the Saxon good and the Dutch nature, signifying one endowed with a compliant and divine disposition of mind.”
(Goddard Genealogy.)

Webster’s Dictionary—Common English and proper names: “Goddard, (O. Ger.) Pious, virtuous. Ger. Gotthart (got’ hart); D. Gotthard (got’ hart); Fr. Godard (go dar’).”

(Clark LaMotte Goddard, 1903).

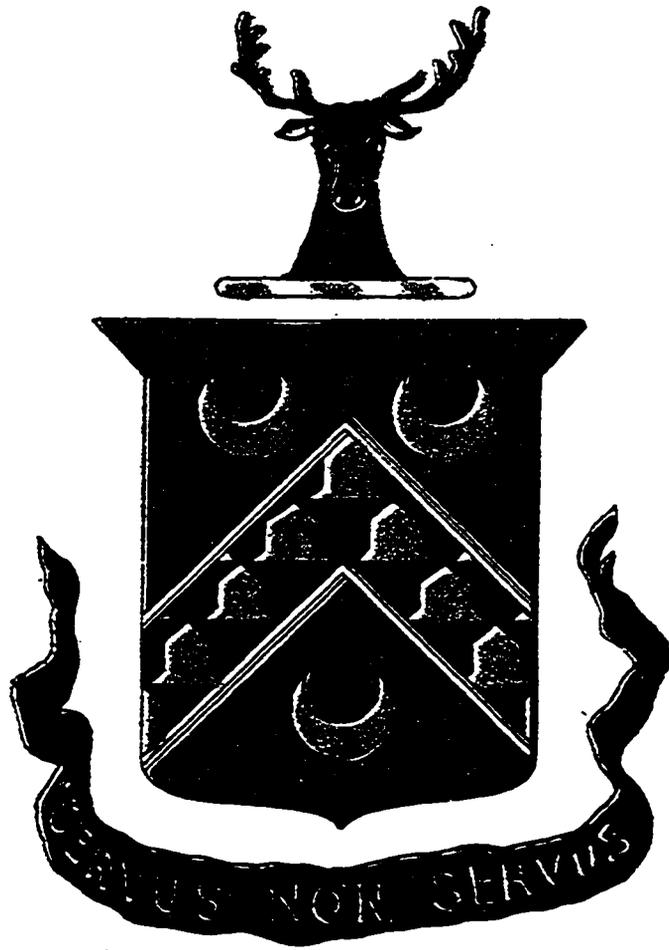

ARMS—Gules, a chevron vair between three crescents agr.

CREST—A stag’s head affrontee, coupé at the neck gu. attired or.

MOTTO—Cervus non Servus.

(Copied from Burke’s Landed Gentry, seventh edition, 1886.)

(Clark LaMotte Goddard, 1903).

(Extract from letter from Clark LaMotte Goddard to Frances Melanie Goddard Holmes, dated November 4, 1903).

“I was very glad of the information you sent. Although I had it in another form in a book published by William Austin Goddard in 1833, I was glad to have it corroborated.

I have been fortunate in securing a manuscript by Samuel Aspinwall Goddard, a descendant of the William who came in 1665, that went to England to live and there traced the connection between the English and American families.

I have received some help from a grandson of his, an architect in London, England, whose address I obtained from the Rev. Edward H. Goddard, of Cliffe Pypard, England, who is a direct descendant of the old line.

The English genealogy is published in Burke's Landed Gentry and gives the name of Edward Goddard, of Englesham, the father of the William that came to America in 1665.

You will see by the leaves that I send you that we are a “long family.”

While it does not make us any more important, it is a pleasure to be able to trace our ancestry so far back.

The fact that Goddard is a Saxon name makes me suspect that some of the name came from “the Low Countries” with the Saxons that invaded and conquered England, with the Angles.”

(Extract from letter from Clark LaMotte Goddard to Frances Melanie Goddard Holmes, dated May 2, 1904.)

“I obtained the arms from John Goddard Clark, who is a relative in the 17th century on father's side, but not on mother's though he bears my name reversed. He has been in the Bank of California over 40 years. He loaned me the cuts and I had a few printed for distribution to the family.

When in France with Malcolm on a bicycle tour in 1902, I met an English clergyman. Upon exchange of cards, he remarked that the name was very familiar as he had a dear friend of that name. I got his name and address, Rev. Edward H. Goddard, of Clyffe Payard, England. I wrote him after my return, and found him to be one of the last of the original Goddards who had an estate of over a thousand acres. Through him, I learned of the Goddards of Swindon, England, who have an estate of over three thousand acres.

Curiously, Malcolm and I circled 'round within 20 miles of this estate on our wheels and saw the "Goddard Arms" among the inns mentioned in the guide book but had no idea of any family connection.

The die which printed the arms on this paper, I got from Rainald William Knightly Goddard, of London, a descendant of the American branch who returned to England."

(Extract from the manuscript of Samuel Aspinwall Goddard, a descendant of William, of America, who made his home in England after 1817. Date of manuscript, March 17, 1845.)

The family of Goddard, or Godard, as it was anciently spelt, is of a very great antiquity. It derives its origin from a Saxon source, possessed property in England previous to the conquest, and is recorded in Domesday*. Subsequently to this, some of the family resided in Hants, and these Goddards are recorded in the Winton Domesday as residing and possessing lands there, temp. Henry I.

*The Domesday book, or simply Domesday, was the first great English record published at the cost of the nation, made by direction of William the Conqueror and finished in 1086. It treats of the different classes of persons, of lands and owners. The original is in Westminster.

After this period, becoming more numerous, the family appears to have separated, one branch having settled in the counties of Leicester and Norfolk, time of King John. (Recorded in Chancellors rolls, 3d year, King John, 1202.)

In 1233, Thomas Godard held lands in Middleton, county of Norfolk.

In 3d of Edward III, (1327-77), a fine was levied on the lands of Nicholas Godard, of the same place. Lands were conveyed to Nicholas and Walter Godard, 3d of Richd. II. About this time, Walter Godard was Lord of Denvers, having married the heiress of that family. His heir, Robert Godard, held a Lordship in Walpole and was buried in Kensington church in 1448. Of this family was Sir John Godard, Governor of Louviers, in Normandy, 6th Henry V. (See Bloomfields Norf.)

In the reign of King John, 1202, we gain the first authentic information of the settlement of the Godard family in Wilts.

Walter Godard-ville, or Godard-vil, who for some purposes appears to have added to his originally Saxon name the Norman termination of ville, (which his descendants as readily discarded) held tenements and lands in Chippenham and Albourn in the county of Wilts. We also find grants of land to him in the time of Henry III at Bornten in the county of Northampton, at Pedrisham in the county of Dorset, and at Liskeree. In 1234, an injunction was issued to the said Walter Godard-ville from Henry III to send horses and arms and assistance to the Earl of Brittany. He died at a late period of the 13th century, and from him lineally descended.

John Godard, of Poulton, (see extract from Burke.)

A letter from Rainald William Knightly Goddard, grandson of Samuel Aspinwall Goddard, to whom I sent copy of the above for verification, says, May 4th, 1903, "The first five names you give in preceding page are more or less incorrect. Walter Godard-ville left only a daughter. Robert Goddard, buried at Terrington, Norfolk, was no connection. He belonged to the Norfolk Goddards, whose arms are on the title page of Austin Goddard's book."

There is an estate in England, at Clyffe Pypard, that has passed from father to eldest son for about three hundred years. The present owner is a daughter and at her death the estate will pass out of the name. There is another estate at Swindon that has been in the family nearly as long, but has not passed directly from father to eldest son. It is now owned by Major Fitzroy Pleydell Goddard, son of Ambrose Goddard, M. P.

(Clark LaMotte Goddard, 1903.)

GODDARD LINEAGE IN ENGLAND.

John Godard, of Poulton and Uphams, Co. Wilts, living 1368-1434, held property at Upham, as per family deed dated 1429. His son and heir,

John Godard, of Poulton and Upham, was father of

Walter Godard, of Cherill, living 1460, whose son

John Godard, of Upham and Clyffe Pypard, is stated in the visitation of Wilts by Robert Tresswell, Bluemantel, 1569, to have married Elizabeth, daughter of William Beringer, of Manningford Bruce, Wilts. He died 10 March, 1545, leaving issue.

Thomas Godard, of Upham (and of Ogbourne) Wilts, 2d son of John Godard, of Upham, (see Goddard of Clyffe), by his wife Elizabeth Beringer, living temp. Henry VIII, m. 1st, Anna, sister of Sir George Gifford, Co. Berks, and was succeeded by his son,

Richard Goddard, who resided in a handsome mansion at Upham, which had belonged to John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, was said to have been granted by him to the family of Goddard.

He married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Walrond, Esq., of Albourn, and had (with a daughter Elizabeth, m. Louis Pollard, Esq., of Newenham) three sons, I, Thomas, his heir; II, Edward of Engelsham, m. Priscilla, daughter of John D'Oyly, Esq., of Chiselhampton; III, Richard of Upham.

Edward Goddard, of Engelsham, farmer, born in Norfolk, England, about 1600, was once very wealthy, but reduced by oppressions during Civil War.

Married Priscilla, daughter of John D'Oyley, Esq., of Chiselhampton. (G. G. and B. G.)

His house was destroyed by a Company of Cavaliers. He escaped in disguise. There were ten children who lived to become men and women.

We have no record of children except William Goddard, beginning the American Genealogy.

KEY.

It will be observed that every descendant of this genealogy has a number placed opposite his name on the left hand margin of the page.

Now, in order to find the descendants of any person on this list, run over the pages until you find, in the center, the number previously given to this person, and immediately under the name will be found the list of the children of such person.

For instance, take the name of Jabez Goddard, who is number 28 on the left hand margin, and then run down the center of the pages until you come to the number 28 over his name. There you will find the list of his children, numbered 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, on the left hand margin. In this manner any family can be traced.

Paul Goddard lived in Conway, Massachusetts, where he was born, until he was twenty-one years old, when he came to New York, where he spent the rest of his life. During the first three years of his residence in New York, he taught. The family of four children all dated their conversions to one evening when some young friends came in to converse and pray with the family. This was in Paul's thirteenth year, and he lived a Christian life sixty-seven years. He used to walk four miles to church, and often stood during the whole service. Mr. Goddard was a farmer, and one of great industry, energy and wisdom in the management of land and the care of stock. Starting out in early manhood to make a fortune, the method that he adopted was by toil, economy and industry, to win it.

He cleared his farm in York, N. Y., lived first in a log house, and afterward erected one of brick. The men are rare who perform such an amount of labor as he did, while, at the same time, he was interested in the welfare of the community and giving for the kingdom of God. In all his busy life he found time to lead his family in morning prayers.

His strong, ambitious manhood was regulated and directed by the divine chart he had early accepted for his guidance, and his old age was serene and hopeful. For over fifty years he lived on his farm, and then removed to Lima, N. Y., where he died in his eighty-first year, gathered as a shock of corn fully ripe.

Children of Paul Goddard and Diantha Grover, his wife.

- No. 45 William Henry Goddard, b. Jan. 26, 1837; m. Elizabeth J. Harmon, (b. Dec. 28, 1840) Jan. 6, 1864; d. Jan. 31, 1908, in Morgan Park, Ill., buried in Sioux Falls, S. Dak.
