of

GLOVER CLANS

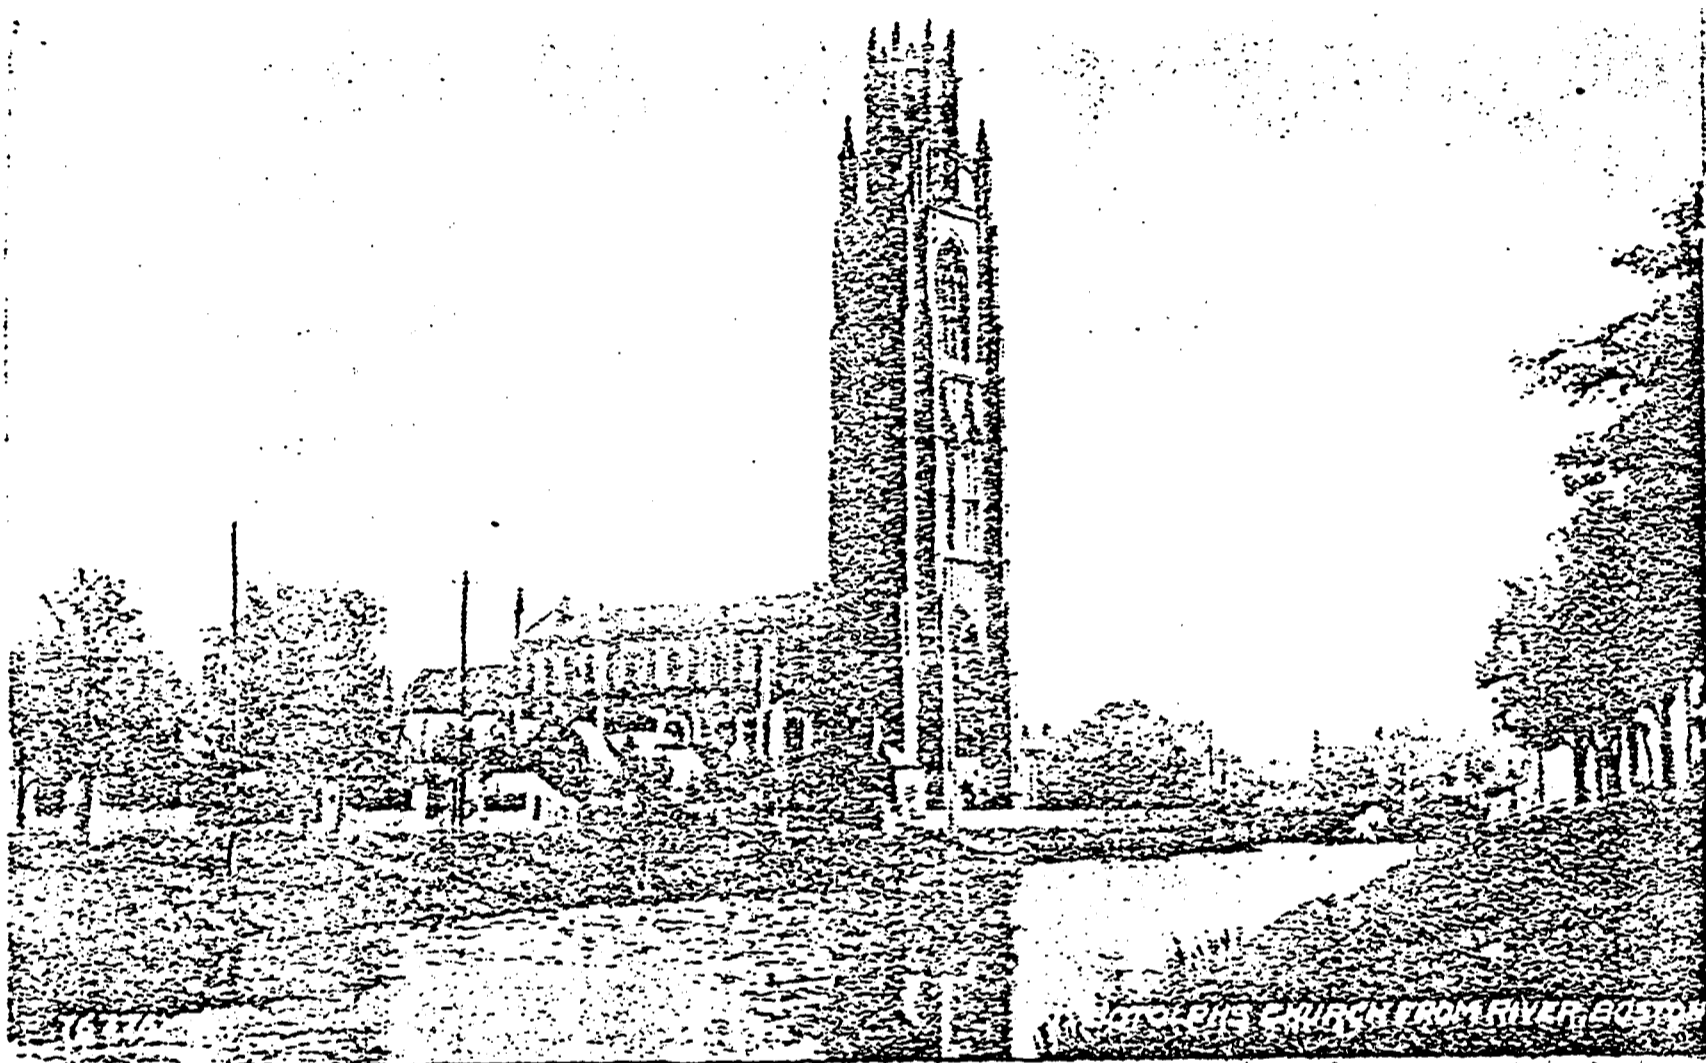

Greetings

INTO the hocus-pocus focus of this Twentieth Century maelstrom this tribute to the sturdiness, energy and good citizenship of the Glover Clan is launched as a testimonial of respect to our progenitors, and as an encouragement to coming generations to continue in the footsteps of their forefathers to carve out for themselves niches of worthiness in the corridors of time, and withal helpfulness to their fellow countrymen.

Dedicated to the memory of my beloved father and mother, William Henry Hobart, and Eliza Jane Glover, by Charles Mortimer Glover, who has compiled, published and copyrighted this volume, this Twenty-fifth day of December, Nineteen hundred and thirty-eight.

ELFIN FOREST, SANTA BARBARA, CALIFORNIA

Saint Botolph's Sixteenth Century church in Boston, Lincolnshire, England, where John Cotton was Vicar (1585-1652) before he went to America. This is the ancient seaport from which our ancestors sailed for America long before the days of steam navigation.
Visited while spending eighteen leisurely months in nine countries in Europe.

FIRST GENERATION IN AMERICA

CHARLES GLOVER, of Boston, Lincolnshire, England, came to America and settled at Salem, Massachusetts, in the year 1632.

First wife, ELIZABETH, died, March 6, 1647.

Children—ELIZA, born May 13, 1640. Baptised at Salem.

MARY, born May 23, 1642.

SAMUEL, born June 21, 1644.

Second wife—divorced 1649. Died soon after.

Third wife—ELIZABETH SAUNDERS, widow, whom he married February 12, 1650.

Soon after this marriage he removed to Southold, Long Island, where a tract of land was granted him on Hallock's Neck to be used as a shipyard. He also possessed a splendid farm at Eagle Neck, as early as 1658. He followed the shipbuilding industry until he died in January, 1665.

SECOND GENERATION

SAMUEL GLOVER, Lieutenant, son of Charles Glover, of Southold, Long Island.
Born June 21, 1644, died May 29, 1715.

Married—SARAH, daughter of Thomas Moore, of Southold, Long Island.

That the Glover Clan has been adventurous since the first of the name pushed off from Boston, England, before the days of steam may be gathered from the fact that there are nine towns in the United States by the name of Glover, which indicates that some member of the clan must have been early on the ground. Gloversville, New York, has no connection with the clan.

SEVENTH GENERATION

THADDEUS B. GLOVER, son of Ezekiel Glover, born December 23, 1787, died October 2, 1842, Orient.

Married—EXPERIENCE COCHRAN, born February 19, 1789, died August 31, 1872.

"Our Old Orchard Home," at the corner of Main street and Harbor lane, Southold, Long Island, New York, was where my childhood's happy hours were spent. The original house, said to have been built about 1665, is still standing. The east end of Long Island was still a part of the New Haven colony; New York was still New Amsterdam, and the United States had not come into existence. Adjoining this old house my father built a spacious, Mansard, slate-roofed mansion, and the old orchard took on new life. Here, within a half-mile of beautiful Peconic bay, with a bevy of brothers and sisters, youthful joys filled every hour. Boating, bathing, tub-racing, fishing, clamming crowded days with pleasure. Proud of my red-topped, copper-toed boots I trudged to district school through summer dust and mud, and braved the fairyland of sleet and snow in winter. Vacation time found city cousins enjoying the beauties of the country with us, and these were joyous times indeed. Clam-bakes on the bluffs of Long Island sound but two miles distant; braving breakers that dashed upon a beach of pebbles that flashed colors of every gem; gathering pond lilies and beach plums, and picking huckle- and blackberries engaged our youthful energies.

NETTIE IRENE GLOVER, daughter of William H. H. and Eliza Fisk Glover of Southold. Born at Southold, Long Island, New York, November 30, 1864, died at Amagansett, Long Island, New York, May 25, 1919.

“Oak Lawn,” the Peck home, in Southold, hid its many acres behind a high evergreen hedge, and extended from the main street to the banks of the Creek, encompassing a race track where County trotting exhibitions took place. Rarus was bred and raised within two miles. My Uncle Israel was responsible for the planting of elms that grace the main thoroughfare making of the town what one might call “the loveliest village of the plain.”

Under these trees, as a boy, I attended Town Meetings, and visits at “Oak Lawn” with Aunt Nancy and many cousins was always a source of delight. A huge cider press, operated by horse power, was a marvel to me, and spearing eels and crabs at the creekside filled many a sunny hour.

From "Glover Memorials and Genealogies," published by Anna Glover of Stoughton, Mass., in 1867, the following is taken:

"There have been found to be six original progenitors or American ancestors of the name of Glover — four only of whom are here memorialized. Of Charles Glover, of Salem and Gloucester in 1632, and subsequently of Southold, Long Island, N. Y., and of Henry Glover, who settled early in New Haven, Ct., there has been a large amount of information gathered and their descendents traced as far as practicable; but they could not be noticed in this volume, without too much increasing its size." This book, published so long ago, should prove of vast interest to those interested in Glover ancestry. In this Genealogy of Glover Clans the descendents of Charles Glover, of Salem and Gloucester, have been noticed so far as they have come to my attention.

Additions and corrections will be welcomed. The compiler of this chronicle lives alone in a cabin at an elevation of 2500 feet in the Santa Ynez mountains overlooking the city, Pacific and its islands.
