TO THE MEMORY OF
WILLIAM GOODRIDGE, ESQ.,
the American Pioneer of 1636, this book is reverently and affectionately dedicated.

This work has been printed and published and is now offered to the Goodridge family and to all interested in American genealogy as a fitting memorial of its originator and compiler through whose tireless enthusiasm and loving labor its production has been made possible.

THE GOODRIDGE GENEALOGY is privately printed and published in a special edition limited to 275 copies.

EXPLANATIONS

On the following pages the Goodridge spelling of the family name has been adhered to generally. In a few instances the spelling Goodrich, bracketed, has been used in deference to the expressed wishes of some who have adopted that form. Where the usage of a particular branch has not been specifically indicated, the historical form Goodridge has been retained.

INTRODUCTION

PREFACE

FOR a long time there has been an ardent desire on the part of many members of the Goodridge family for a definite and adequate history of the clan, from its meagre beginning, through a struggling growth, to the influential position in civic and religious life, which it now occupies. In the endeavor of the writer to satisfy this demand many obstacles have been met. The meagreness of the record, which our forefathers thought it necessary to keep of their doings, is amazing. Women and children were often unnoticed and fathers and mothers by no means adequately. They had no thought for a posterity eager to know every detail. They were struggling for existence, and had little time to make records.

The work of collecting and tabulating the William Goodridge genealogy was begun by the writer some twenty-five years ago, but owing to pressure of other affairs it was not advanced rapidly. During the last five or six years a great amount of time has been given to it; especially in traveling over much of this country and England in pursuit of information. All the large libraries and many of those in the smaller New England towns have been visited. The labor has been considerable and the expense not small, but it has been a constant pleasure and, since this book is a love-offering, costing the family only for printing, binding and distribution, perhaps its errors and inadequate detail may not be regarded too severely. Many defects exist in it, some chargeable to correspondents, some to the printer, but more, we fear, to the compiler. It would be difficult, perhaps, even for the most experienced gleaner to gather and tabulate such a mass of material without manual lapse or error of statement. To this task the writer has given diligent, laborious, enthusiastic effort. If he has not succeeded to the satisfaction of all, his failure may be charged to frailty of judgment and inadequate ability; certainly not to failure in honest endeavor, unclouded by prejudice or preconception. It is only fair to ask that in estimating the value of the work that has been accomplished criticism may be tempered by forbearance and patience.

On ensuing pages the controlling characteristics and national life of the Anglo-Saxon before the migration in 449 A. D. have been given in brief outline, with some notice of his progress and achievement, both antedating and subsequent to the establishment of the Plymouth Bay and Massachusetts Bay colonies on our shores. The social life and position of the family over the sea are reviewed, followed by notice of the Goodridge name and how it came to have, out of a common source, various orthographies, and, lastly, an attempt at solution of some of the perplexing problems which surround the name in this country.

It is a pleasant duty to mention here the hearty and responsive interest manifested in this work almost by the whole family, now of large proportions. Sense of obligation to many members for great favors is not easy to convey in a sentence. Responses from correspondents over the entire country, and in foreign lands as well, have been spontaneous and cordial, and the aggregation of knowledge thus acquired has been far beyond expectations. Not infrequently appeals have revealed information which had been supposed irretrievably lost. This cordial responsiveness has rendered it possible to make this history far more nearly complete than had been expected or even hoped. Where all have done so much, it may seem unappreciative not to mention all, but since this would be impossible, a general acknowledgment must suffice for each to accept as personal.

Embarrassment and labor incident to the work have been greatly increased by confusion and errors resulting from the tendency of commentators to read into their writings forms of orthography that were never in original records. This may flatter family pride and seem to promote historic continuity of patronymic, but it is not the legitimate purpose of genealogy. On the following pages the constant aim has been to give names as used by the original possessor, or as found in original documents. This has necessitated frequent reference to the work of others and has brushed away or contradicted much unauthorized statement, or orthography employed by them. But truth rather than promotion of name orthography is the only safe course to pursue. Thus we advance historic accuracy and enlarge the volume of reliable knowledge.

As a rule female lines have not been carried beyond the particular generation into which a woman was born. This method promotes clearness, as it is more desirable to classify women with families to which they become allied by marriage. Also it is impossible to avoid confusion or even inaccuracy, in multiplying, to any considerable extent, names foreign to the main family. Nevertheless some women have made such important contributions to this work that the presentation of at least a moderate exhibit of their individual lines has been no less a pleasure than a duty, for to have omitted all reference to their immediate descendants would have been manifestly unjust.

The uniform orthography of Goodridge has been adopted, notwithstanding that we are descended from the great English family of Goodricke, and that some in this country have changed the spelling to Goodrich. We have been unable to find a single instance in the early records of Watertown and Boston in which Goodridge, or some slight modification of this form, was not employed. The adoption of this one form seems necessary in order to avoid confusion and inaccuracy. The labor and prolonged research, often involved in tracing broken lines and supplying connecting links is beyond belief. This labor is greatly increased by changed orthography. In some instances we have been unable to decide whether a given name was of the Connecticut or the Massachusetts family and therefore, most regretfully, have been compelled to leave it out, for we attempt only the genealogy of the descendants of William Goodridge of Watertown.

It must not be forgotten that these old records, widely scattered, are often faulty in some vital particulars, as in spelling or in the year or month or day, possibly all, or in the name itself. In cases where the records are conflicting as to some individual, we have adopted that which seemed to be most probably correct, sometimes, but not always, giving the one not employed.

With all its imperfections, and omissions, it is hoped that this attempt to collect the family records under one cover may prove of interest to a wide circle of descendants of William Goodridge and helpful also to those who may wish to affiliate with societies based upon Colonial or Revolutionary ancestry.

EDITORIAL NOTE

BEFORE Dr. Edwin Alonzo Goodridge died, in 1916, he had practically brought his labors upon the history of the descendants of William Goodridge to a successful conclusion—the culmination of an ambition that had largely engrossed his attention and commanded his talent for research during many years in the latter part of a busy professional life. The entire field within the limits of the undertaking, as projected by him, had been covered exhaustively, carefully and in a scholarly manner, and, on the whole, the result was as thorough, complete and sound as enthusiastic application, unwearied endeavor and historical acumen could make it. Most of the material collected in the long investigation had been well digested and systematically arranged genealogically, but, in the manuscript as it fell from his hand at last, there were some blank spaces remaining unfilled, some debatable matters left unsettled and, at some points, records not enrolled fully to latest dates; and the text had not been finally revised and edited for the printing.

Mrs. Goodridge, appreciating the genealogical value of the work and feeling that it should be permanently preserved for the satisfaction of the family and as a memorial to its compiler, entrusted the manuscript to the editor to be revised, edited, printed and published. The book as now completed, is, in all respects, the product of Dr. Goodridge—scope, plan, material, arrangement and treatment of subject. As indicated, the labor devolving upon the editor has been mainly in editing, revising to slight extents, directing the printing and, in general, supervising the production and distribution of the volume. Comparatively little additional research has been made. Obviously, more was impracticable in the short time at command and it was really unnecessary again to go over ground that already had been covered in the first instance as completely as might be.

The introductory papers in the volume are essentially as they were written by Dr. Goodridge. No alterations of consequence have been made in them. No more has been attempted than careful examination, slight changes and some re-arrangements along lines suggested by the author in his manuscript and his notes, with the purpose constantly in view of preserving the several monographs, in substance and in expression, as, manifestly, the author would have had them had he been permitted to give a final revision. They express his studied opinions, reflect his sympathetic spirit, reveal his intense love of the family to which he belonged and his pride in its ancestry, and exhibit his forceful literary style.

Special attention may fairly be invited to the Introduction, the paper on The Anglo-Saxon and the discussion of The Goodridge Name. These give evidence of careful study, clear reasoning and positive opinions. The controversial character of the essay on the Goodridge name is exceptionally interesting, and the arguments and conclusions of the writer in support of his contention for the Goodridge instead of the Goodrich form, cannot be seriously disputed. No room for doubt remains that, in their beginning, these two forms stood originally, in England and also in America, for two distinct families. Both names had common paternity, but as Dr. Goodridge has rightly insisted, the claim of primacy for Goodrich, of which Goodridge is merely an offshoot or perversion, is entirely without justification.

In agreement with these findings of Dr. Goodridge, it is proper here to emphasize that the acceptance of the Goodrich form by some of the descendants of William Goodridge has no warrant whatsoever in law or reason and has led to confusion that is well-nigh inextricable. Sons of a Goodridge father have changed their names to Goodrich, while other sons of the same father have consistently adhered to the Goodridge form. In the next generations, with the same immediate ancestry, some have called themselves Goodridge and others Goodrich. Historically, Goodridge is the one correct form for this particular family, and accordingly that has been adhered to throughout this compilation. That point has been singled out and expressly dwelt upon here for the reason that it was considered most important by Dr. Goodridge and is fundamental to the character and the construction of his book.

In entering upon consideration of the detailed history of the family, generation by generation, it is perhaps necessary to remind the reader that inexorable fate has pre-ordained that every book of genealogy must needs be prefaced with apologies for errors and shortcomings. The very nature of the subject compels this. Records—family, vital, church, town—are often scant, unreliable and contradictory. Names are spelled and misspelled in an infinite variety of ways. Dates may be absent or flagrantly in error, especially where, as is frequently the case, dependence must be placed upon uncertain individual recollections. Even tombstone inscriptions are not always veracious.

Hundreds of instances might be cited as witnesses of the difficulty that every truth-seeking, conscientious genealogist labors under and the impossibility of his hoping ever to achieve complete accuracy. Let one suffice by way of illustration. In 1897 and 1902, David W. Hoyt, of Providence, R. I., published, in volumes one and two, The Old Families of Salisbury and Amesbury, the work of the greater part of his lifetime. In 1916 he published a third volume of 181 pages, consisting entirely of supplementary information and conclusions, and correction of errors in the preceding volumes.

How then could the GOODRIDGE GENEALOGY escape the mischances common to its kind? Dr. Goodridge exercised patience, industry and meticulous care, but he was fully conscious that he could not expect perfection. In his Preface and Introduction he has testified to the discouragements that beset him and often rendered his best intentions nugatory. Much of the errancy that he deplored might have, indeed would have, disappeared if he had been spared to give attention to the final revision of the manuscript, for his familiarity with the material, which he had been years in collecting and living with, would have counted a great deal in this respect. But unfortunately that was not to be.

Other measures have been taken in order further to clear away possible errors and lapses still existing. During the progress of the revision and printing, copy and proofs have been sent out to members of the family with requests for rectification and additions. Some errors have been thus disclosed and corrected and some new material secured. In the main, however, the character of the responses obtained has been a tribute to the general excellence and accuracy of the work of compilation. But, had responses been more general, the records could have been even more improved.

As it stands, after full allowance has been made for all imperfections and shortcomings, the work is a distinctly important contribution to the literature of American genealogy. It conserves the annals of a family that has not before been reviewed in its entirety in this manner; a family which, for nine generations, has been a splendid example of the sturdy American stock that, sprung from English forebears, has contributed to the country it founded and developed, the most and the best in good citizenship, in devotion to democratic principles and in the dominance of Anglo-Saxon ideals upon the Western continent. It is a fitting monument to him who patriotically and lovingly conceived it and carried it out to near completion.

INTRODUCTION

FROM the dawn of history a dominating characteristic of human life has been the gravitation of its smaller units, like the family, into larger groups for mutual advantage and protection. Hence the clan or tribe. In process of time these smaller groups multiply and larger combinations result, out of which are formed kingdoms, republics and empires. But the upbuilding of these aggregations is marked by the equally compelling force of classification to meet constantly extending demands of specialization. Therefore arise kings, presidents and emperors, governors and statesmen, judges, professional men, scholars and artists, with the multitude of minor officers and laborers, all of whom are woven into the complex fabric of national life.

Into this life, accrues, through the centuries, a volume of achievement, honorable alike to the citizen, the family and the nation. Contributions to the industries, the arts, and the sciences, to say nothing of patriotism, military prowess and commanding place among the forces which sway modern endeavor, awaken in those to whom fortune has given a place among any particular people a natural pride of ancestry.

All history finds its ultimate attraction and value in the achievement of the individual. By him traditions and records of the family are guarded with a zeal equaled only by his solicitude for national integrity and honor. In their defense he would contend, give his life indeed, if need were. But, if this national life be among a people, the whole of whose long history is one unbroken story of brilliant achievement and noble battle for the best ideals of individual right and national progress, a battle in which the standards of personal virtue have been most exalted, individual rewards most honorable, and religious observance most fervent and devout, there is little wonder that we guard the records that attach us to such a race with a fervor and a devotion that no struggle can tire and that time cannot dim.

It is no small thing then that we may read our title clear to membership in the great Anglo-Saxon race, with its marvelous history of high standards and grand accomplishment. For a thousand years and more it has led the world in ideals of democratic policy and in defense of liberty and justice. From Bede to Gladstone and Lincoln there is one long array of commanding voice and courageous deed compelling the Anglo-Saxon of to-day. Not that he is always without fault. But, despite all errors, he has been foremost in the struggle that "government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth." His government has been the model of all democratic aspiration since the great charter, seven hundred years ago.

In America especially we find an absorbing interest in association with family and national life, for here it is that the Anglo-Saxon has wrought his finest deeds. Here it is that his achievements are graven in characters of indellible glory. Here it is that we find a record whose nobility is unequalled in all history. We may search the annals of the world and not find a people which has approached the Anglo-Saxon in America in the struggle for larger interpretation of ethical observance, or which has equalled him in planting the consciousness and love of personal liberty so imperishably in the hearts of men. The record for three hundred years is an unbroken and unexcelled marvel. A spirit of civic and religious ascendancy has transformed the forbidding wilderness into a luxurious garden, which is a priceless treasure house of material, civic and moral riches. This spirit has dominated the forces of nature, compelled the earth to disgorge, and enslaved the lightening to its will until the poorest laborer possesses comforts, even luxuries, beyond the ambition, the wildest dreams indeed, of the forlorn band of Mayflower devotees.

Greece had her Acropolis, Rome her Pantheon and we our Plymouth Rock, from which have come a thousand colleges and a million school houses and churches, and an intellectual and religious heritage unequalled in all time, and guaranteed by the proud consciousness of dominion and the civic pride of a united, liberty-loving, conservative body of an equal and loyal citizenship. Across the continent the spirit of the pilgrim has taken its course, undaunted by obstacle, unconquered by defeat, until, from the Atlantic and the Pacific and the islands of the sea it sends a glad tribute to the protecting care and fostering fatherhood of its dominion. As to the Britain, so of the Pilgrim is it true, that upon the glory of his empire the sun never sets.

But there are other prime incentives to the collection of old-time records. Whose pulse is not quickened, whose heart not warmed by the story of the family and its traditions, however meagre and simple? Whose memories are not stirred with pathos at mention of the ancestral home with its accumulated associations of family life, be they ever so humble? Narrow indeed must be that soul whose curiosity is not piqued to know somewhat of those ancestors whose blood courses in his veins, and who have bequeathed to him, as a priceless heritage, whatever is praiseworthy in the qualities upon which his life and its achievements have been builded. What incentive such knowledge to high ideal and noble action! Ambition of success may stimulate to courageous and praiseworthy action. But there is no more inspiring influence toward the attainment of personal worth than tradition, or history of the family, if that family have true nobility of character. Nothing so brings into relief the better elements of praiseworthy character on the one side, as compared with the demoralizing effect of mere wealth on the other. Riches in worldly goods are, indeed, a comforting and valuable asset in the flout and strain of life, but when considered in themselves and measured by the standards of moral and intellectual merit, they are less than dust in the balance over against nobility of personal virtue and the dominating force of character. If, however, material riches and virtue be combined in the same individual, then, indeed, may we bow in gratitude for the bounty which a generous Providence has lavished.

Great as is the incentive to collect and preserve these records on account of family interests or national honor, we owe even greater obligation to our descendants, that these annals should be perpetuated. Though we may lightly regard our own concern in them, we cannot be indifferent to the claim of posterity. When, to those who are to come after us, the years shall have brought understanding and comprehension of such matters, should they wish to review the trials, struggles, encouragements and victories of their forefathers, live for a brief hour with sisters and mothers of that heroic age and share with them its hopes, its sorrows, its griefs, its exaltations, they could only lament, in helplessness, our indifference and neglect. We should look well then that our children shall not be deprived of those links which bind them to a thrilling and ever-stimulating past. We deem it not only worthy of commendation but a matter of serious obligation, therefore, to gather up these threads of a story so absorbing, from misty tradition and dusty attics, and give them a place where they may be preserved, from time's pitiless oblivion, among the imperishable treasures which make the great volume of social attraction and national life.

If we are to be rewarded even by moderate success in the performance of this labor we cannot proceed too rapidly. Even now time, disaster or heedless neglect have destroyed much that we would gladly treasure. Hundreds of genealogies have been compiled here in America, and consecrated on the altar of family affection, none of which are complete—the great obstacle to their completion being chiefly the destroyer's withering hand. In many instances no attempt has been made to do more than assemble the record of one branch of the family. Had some member of each family begun the compilation of his genealogy at the beginning of the seventeenth century and bequeathed the labor to succeeding generations down to the present time, how different would have been the result! But, in spite of all embarrassments, the approval which this work has met has been gratifying, and it is hoped that those who stand at the doorway of later information may be stimulated to continue to assemble it for the generations still to come.

In undertaking the labor of collecting and publishing what it is hoped may be a fairly definite and authentic genealogy of the descendants of William Goodridge, who settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1636, the writer has been actuated by two main ambitions: first,—to preserve an adequate and fitting memorial to the stalwart manhood and religious devotion which impelled our forefathers to forsake homes and friends in the old country and carve new homes and plant a noteworthy civilization in an inhospitable wilderness; second,—to place before the present generation of Goodridges an authentic account of its relationship with the Puritan stock whose high ideals, religious fidelity and noble deeds are the heritage of an enlightened people whose later achievements are the wonder of the world.

In prosecution of the first desire the labor of assembling from old, half-forgotten records, buried, perhaps, beneath the dust of many years, a vast amount of detail obtained from a multitude of sources and verifying and arranging it into orderly, coherent, intelligible shape is herculean. One does not face the second purpose without serious misgiving of ability so to adjust the measure of admiration and judgments upon this people, that, on the one hand, we shall not too greatly magnify undoubted virtues, or, on the other, expose too flagrantly a life, which, viewed in the light of a better knowledge, and perhaps a truer religious conception, we may not be able wholly to approve.

One cannot be unmindful that many persons cavil at collections of this sort as being merely the product of affectation, or family vanity, void of public advantage, or true civic ideal. To this objection answer may be made that such chronicles are intended, mainly, for family use and are of absorbing family interest. They are, indeed, the outgrowth of an honest and a pardonable, if not altogether praiseworthy, family pride. More than this, they are intimately related to early New England history, really an essential part of that history, the pages of which, it may be, are not alone adorned with the names of famed personalities, but are luminous with the deeds of a doughty people. To have even humble personal relation to this history may afford a lively and a legitimate satisfaction. To the true child of New England, how every unimportant word, every gesture, every foot-fall of these ancestors is cherished and enshrined in love and reverence! As time widens the distance from the pioneers who redeemed and peopled the wilderness, enduring hardships unthinkable from flimsy shelter, scanty raiment and meagre sustenance, the words and deeds of the humblest of them become priceless indeed to their descendants.

But beyond all this, these annals are weighted with an undoubted public value. One of the saddest commentaries upon the history of bygone peoples is the meagreness of its details and the uncertainty of its statements. What would we not give for a chronicle that should present a true and reliable picture of the ancient world? What do we know of the civilizations whose wreckage strews the long pathway of early races? We ransack the world for the merest scraps of knowledge of those who once thought and spoke and loved as we do. Too often over all we must write the legend, "Buried beneath the oblivion, which carelessness and fire and war and time have wrought." We cannot then invoke too zealously these traditions and records, or, too jealously, guard the meagre knowledge which such annals contain.

THE ANGLO - SAXON
THE GOODRIDGE NAME

THE ANGLO-SAXON

FULLY one-third of the entire population of the world is under Anglo-Saxon dominion, which, notwithstanding all its imperfections, still stands for the highest type of sovereignty yet reached, while its ideals constantly beckon on to even loftier attainment. It is not yet senile. Decay has not begun its attack though twenty centuries have elapsed. There is no other such instance, or one approximating it, among civilized nations. Such a record would be interesting to us were our own history not identified with that of the race; doubly so since it is. That we are thus a part of it, seems to render examination of the causes which have made the Anglo-Saxon what he is, essential to this history, in order that we may know, as a family, somewhat of our heritage.

The early history of the Anglo-Saxon is shrouded in obscurity, but enough is known to enable us to outline the traits of his character with tolerable accuracy. There is little doubt that, in the beginning, at least four tribes were included under this name and that their country, before the migration in the fifth century, extended along the coast from the river Ems in Holland to the Eider in Denmark, possibly eastward as far as Kiel and Lubeck on the Baltic, and south a varying distance, sometimes perhaps as far as the Rhine. Of this territory, the Frisians inhabited the west part, at the mouth and along the eastern side of the Ems; the Saxons a short stretch of coast perhaps, and a larger division to the eastward and southward; the Angles from the Atlantic coast eastward to the Baltic, a somewhat smaller section than the Saxons; while the Jutes were north of the Angles and smaller both in territory and population. It can not be declared with positive certainty that this apportionment is correct, but it is reasonably accurate.

Ptolemy was the first to mention this people, though not because Rome had brought them under subjection, or had even attempted such a task. He was induced to study them, only from curiosity. They were a wonderfully independent, energetic race, whose courage never faltered at danger. They had fancy for any venture and fortitude for any hardship. In frail boats they made excursions thousands of miles up and down the coast and over to Britain long before the mythical Hengist and Horsa. In many ways were they remarkable. Never had they been brought under subjection to Rome, nor had they been conquered by the Goths and Vandals who swarmed the country east and south of them.

When first known, though not extensively, they lived in orderly, well-conducted communities administered by laws, in the framing of which, to a certain extent, the people had a voice, and which were intended to be equitable and just to all. According to their light they had some conception of democracy; indeed they cherished the idea out of which Anglo-Saxon self-government has grown. If we examine them closely we shall discover high spirit, resolute courage, unequalled fortitude, lofty patriotism, love of personal liberty and coherent organization. These are attributes of a great people and of an enduring stock.

Thus we see that the Anglo-Saxon was endowed, not only with capacity for great accomplishment, but, also, for long endurance, in his unrivaled spirit and potential force. Two thousand years or more he has challenged our admiration. How much longer? Who can tell? He seems only to have reached early manhood. The Celt, the Dane, the Norman; none of them have put shackles upon him. The cross has been his anchor, education his armor and defense his law. On this American continent his greatest achievement is being enacted before our eyes. Such is our inheritance. We would not be unmindful of the significance of its value or indifferent to the import of its possession. Not only does the fact that the blood of the Anglo-Saxon is in our veins, impel us to braver deeds and higher ideals, but the knowledge of that fact communicates to our children a consciousness of power that makes them irresistible and carries them by the mere impulsion of stock to brilliant attainment.

THE GOODRIDGE NAME

DIFFICULTIES which confront one in attempting to trace the correct primitive form of a word in an old language, long disused, are great. But when those who used this language were semi-barbarian, or, at least, uneducated, and their language, therefore, lacking in that definiteness and permanency of form which is established by literary habit and training, the task is, in most instances, impossible. Such are the conditions under which we find the language used by the Anglo-Saxon before his migration into England at the middle of the fifth century. These people were not an educated, homogeneous race. They were divided into at least four distinct tribes, each with its own dialect. To a degree they intermingled and, in many respects, their speech was similar, probably having many words and phrases identical, or nearly so. But, in the main, their tribal tongues were sufficiently unlike to produce confusion, or to show apparent dissimilarity, when attempt was made to use names in common.

Their dialects underwent modification by being engrafted upon the earlier Celtic language found throughout the British Isles at the time of the migration in 449 A. D.; this language itself having already been, to considerable extent, Romanized, during the five centuries of Latin occupation. Also there were linguistic changes produced by the Northmen or Danes who occupied Britain for several centuries at different periods. Then came the Norman whose French was the court language, and probably somewhat that of the provinces, as well, for two centuries. These various changes have greatly increased the difficulty of tracing original name-forms used in primitive Anglo-Saxon.

But the language which we now speak has been modified by another influence, quite as potent as all those combined, in separating present linguistic forms from the primitive usage. From being an inflected language in the original, ours has become, in as great a degree, analytic. That is, instead of prefixes and suffixes, as in the older tongue, to convey shades of meaning, various significations are now indicated by prepositions, or perhaps, in many instances, by quite another word.

We have gone somewhat into detail upon these points in order to show how difficult it is even for the best student of old Anglo-Saxon to point out, with any considerable certainty, what may have been the original signification of a present name, especially as to the original meaning of our own name, Goodridge. Claims have been put forward, but none of them upon very substantial foundation. The ancient Saxon form was unquestionably Godric. It may be of interest to look into its signification, notwithstanding that is a matter of considerable doubt.

The name is very old, and it consisted of two parts while the language was still inflected. These two parts have been retained through the centuries, notwithstanding all the changes that have overtaken the language, and especially its complete transformation from an inflected to an analytic form. The first part has always been the root, and that is fixed. It was very likely employed in the beginning to express some praiseworthy quality. The meaning of divinity has been claimed for it, but with no substantial ground. The word to express "good" was the same in all the Teutonic dialects. In Gothic and Danish, it was guth; in Saxon and Frisian, god; in the Angle dialect probably goot. These words; while somewhat different in form, were always pronounced alike, the u and o like double o, and the t, th and d like t. The root word would sound then like goot or, according to our intonation, good.

The word was also used to express divinity, and we can find no material change in it, from the earliest times to now, in any of the Teutonic dialects. These people then employed the word in kindred significations. It was used as the root in the name Godric. What sense was it intended to convey? Manifestly that for which the Anglo-Saxon used it in his language. It must be remembered that the Anglo-

Saxon was pagan and had a multitude of gods, as Thor and Woden, but had no conception of the sense in which we use divinity. The word was used by the Teuton, as the root is used in our name, to express his sense of good, or worthy, or exalted; that is his sense of nobility.

Now turn to the suffix. All these early dialects were inflected, and, therefore, the termination was modified to meet the various needs of gender and case, perhaps, also of place, or occupation, or possession, such as builder, governor, general, landowner or wealth. It is quite probable that the termination was modified to meet all these varying conditions, and possibly many others. Observe a few out of many, like Godwin, Goodale, Goodspeed, Goodford, Goodhart, Godfrey, Godney, Goodman, Godric, Guttrig, Goodrich, Gooridge, in all which a varying termination is added to an unvarying root; and these terminations satisfy all the varying significations referred to and many more.

It will be seen that each of these terminations gives some special direction to the root signification of "good." This is the case with our own name. Added to the root, the following terminations, all bearing a striking resemblance, are found in the name, rig, ric, aric, ryge, rydg, erick, ricke, ridg, rydge, ryke, ridge, rich and some others. A fair inference is that these terminations were often added to fulfill the requirements, but in a definite direction, of gender and case. If this be so, and we could discover the application which was made of the root name by its termination, the riddle would be solved.

What then was the original application of this termination, or had it more than one? Some have thought it was applied to indicate wealth or riches only and that, in old Saxon, Godric meant "great riches." We have here the basis of the argument put forth by some Goodriches that the original form was used to imply riches, or by other Goodridges that it meant territorial possession. Whoever has been an attentive student of early Saxon, must be convinced that such interpretation is narrow and constrained, indeed invalid. To show how unjustifiable these claims are it is only needful to state that the termination ric can be found added to no less than eighteen entirely dissimilar roots in primitive or ante-Conquest Saxon. It is unbelievable that in all these instances it had but one meaning. Rather was it employed to indicate many diverse things in which the Saxon desired to express his sense of nobility. It was a reward of merit in any direction where there had been great achievement and was used to mark exalted position in civil, religious or military life.

But, whatever may have been the original signification of the name, we have now scattered along, through nine centuries, as many as seventeen or more different modes of spelling it. Undoubtedly some of these represent an attempt at Latinization. It is curious, however, that there should still be preserved in the language so many names nearly alike, all from the same root and apparently with modifications of the same termination. What is the explanation? We have seen that, before the Conquest, Teutonic dialects were inflected. Of course Anglo-Saxon was marked by this condition. But at this period the language in England underwent transformation and the old varying forms, to meet the ends of case, gender, occupation, or position, were rapidly becoming fixed, stereotyped as it were, and carried forward into the analytic language, each to stand for some branch of the greater primitive family.

It will be observed that, down to the end of the eleventh century, or the time of the Norman Conquest, the name was only Godric, with its terminal modifications. No attempt will be made here to trace it through its many phases of terminology or inflection. But we must particularly note this period; not alone because it is the time during which the language began its transformation, but also because then two other influences became almost as potent in stereotyping the variations in the name which before had only a single form.

Before the Conquest probably not more than one per cent of the inhabitants of the British Isles could read and write. When letters were more generally cultivated, after the Norman occupancy, there were few written standards and spelling was almost wholly by sound. This gave origin to many forms, as inclination or fancy suggested, which gradually became fixed as standards in the written language.

This practice continued to influence name variations to a comparatively recent period. Loose orthography in the common words of the language, and even in established names, was almost universal at the time of the colonization of America and even later. In our name there were, at least, three different modes of spelling in some families where the relationship was close.

Still another influence, causing change in orthography, and having its origin at this time, must not be overlooked. William the Conqueror, in order to establish his conquest more securely, gave orders throughout all England that Saxon lands should be confiscated and bestowed upon his Norman followers, and that names of the nobility and great landholders should be changed to other forms in which there should remain no suggestion of the old Saxon. To set forth the names that should be changed and those lands that should be confiscated was one of the reasons for issuing the Domesday Book in 1086.

At this time Godric was a common name and many possessing it were noteworthy. So common was it, indeed, that there was difficulty in tracing the holdings of the great sheriff of Berkshire, of this name, who was second in command at Senlac, and whose lands were in twenty-six counties, among them Herefordshire. The lands of Godric, in this last county, were given to Henry of Ferrers, a Norman knight. As many as twenty-three of this name, all landholders, and some of them very large landholders, are mentioned in Domesday Book as among those whose names must be changed in accordance with Norman requirement. There is little doubt that there were many more who may not have been in such high position as to bring them under William's edict. The Saxon name was uniformly Godric, but many of the evolved modes of orthography in the name found their origin in this policy of the Conqueror.

Thus we have, at least, three potent influences contributory to the present orthographic confusion. Which of the seventeen modes of spelling is the correct one? Manifestly none of them. They are all the product of forces exerted, almost continuously, for five hundred years following the Norman occupancy, tending strongly to variation. Indeed, when we consider the compelling force of these agencies, our surprise is not that there should have been variation, but that these variations should not have been more numerous and more strongly marked. Of the seventeen only five are numerically important, viz.: Goderick, Goodricke, Goodrich, Guthridge and Goodridge. All these had parentage in Godric of ante-Norman date, but no one is the exclusive heir, although in some quarters there is an assumption of such inheritance.

Noticeable, indeed, in modern times have been the efforts to transmute all variations of the name into the one form of Goodrich in order to establish that as the only correct way of spelling it. No heed how distinguished or sacred the name may have been, under different forms, in the centuries past, many who have chosen to accept the name Goodrich have now claimed that in all history it should invariably thus stand.

Readers are told that "more than sixty of the name of Goodrich are found in the rolls of Doomesday Book, most of them small landholders under Norman lords." The fact is that the landholders of the family were numerous then if their names were Godric, but not if they were Goodrich. In Domesday Goodrich cannot be found. The name is uniformly Godric or some slight modification of Godric in half a dozen instances. Again we are told that "Goodrich or Goodrick are appellations that belonged to an early Saxon abbot," when really the name Goodrich was not known to the Saxon period, and the Saxon abbot was Godric, who died in 940, centuries before the form Goodrich had been heard of. Goodrich castle, in Hereford, is spoken of as existing before the Conquest. The castle was not so called until long after the Conquest. It is altogether probable that it antedated the Conquest, but if owned by one of the family, he must have spelled his name Godric and not Goodrich. History is entirely silent as to its early ownership. Indeed, there exists no record to show that any Goodrich ever lived in it. During the Civil War, it was held by the army of Charles I. under Sir Henry Lingen, and in the negotiations for surrender was called Guthridge Castle.

In fact, while the name Goodrich was early, it was never heard before the Conquest and, for many years after, it was slowly evolved from such early forms as Guthrick, Godricke, Goderick or Goodrick, just as Goodridge has been evolved from Godridg, Godrig, Goodryke or Guthridg. When Goodrich was first employed in this definite form, it is difficult now to say. Referring to the inclination to claim Goodrich and Goodrick as one and the same, Charles Alfred Goodricke, the English genealogist who compiled the History of the Goodricke Family, said in the preface to his book:

“The mistake so often repeated of confusing the families of Goodrick and Goodrich has given me occasion for some fruitless inquiry, but I may state that I have never found any incorrectness in this respect in authentic documents, and I know of no connection between the two families subsequent to the year 1500.”

As has been said, the Goodridge name was evolved from forms immediately post-Norman. King John bestowed a baronetcy upon one Gutridg in 1191 for bravery in the Crusades. The name is common in this country, and doubtless most frequent of any in the old. When it was first used there is now no way of knowing. We find it scattered along on the pages of English history, side by side with the others for, at least, four centuries. How much longer no one can tell. The Goodridge family has always been most numerous in London, in the South of England, and especially in Devon. Nicholas Goodridge, who was raised to a baronetcy by James I. in 1610, was a resident both of Devon and York. The family has held high place in the civil and religious life of England for a long time.

But the reader is saying that this does not tell which of the names is most correct. There is good reason. We do not know. Of the three families, the Goodrickes trace their lineage definitely back to the beginning of the thirteenth century. They were in Somerset for at least five generations before they were established in Lincoln in 1333. They were numerous in York, Lincoln, Cambridge and Suffolk long before either of the others in those counties. They were also old in Bury St. Edmunds before we hear of the others. It would not be improbable that Goodrich is evolved from Goodricke. The change would be slight. Goodricke, in early times at Bury St. Edmunds, was spelled without the final e. But what does it matter? The names are consecrated by many warm associations and sacred memories. To change our patronymics, we should sacrifice our identity. They are all honorable. Each is proud of his own. Our ambition should be truth—not ascendancy.

E. A. G.

In America the families bearing these two names, Goodridge and Goodrich, were distinctly differentiated in their earlier generations. Almost without exception the descendants of William of Watertown were Goodridge, while those of John and William of Wethersfield were Goodrich. Minor variants in the records were few and mostly misspellings of the two fixed surnames. James Savage, in Volume II. of his Genealogical Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England, under the heading Goodridge, says:

“This name is in the rec. frequent. spelt Gutteridge, sometimes without d, sometimes Guttrige, sometimes with single t, and sometimes without final e, often, too, Goodrich, once Guddridge.” Again, under the heading Goodrick, he says: “It is sometimes spelt, in conform. with sound, Goodridge and Guttridge on careless rec.”

In Volume VI. of the Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors in the War of the Revolution, the Goodriches and the Goodridges are entered by the names under which they enlisted, with this introductory paragraph:

“GOODRICH, ———. [This name also appears under the form of Godrich, Gooderick, Goodih, Goodrage, Goodredge, Goodrick, Goodridg, Goodridge, Goodrige, Goodwich, Goorich, Gudrage, Gudrich, Guthridge, Gutrage, Gutridge, Gutrige, Gutritch, Gutterage, Gut-terig.]”

An interesting deduction may be drawn from the lists in that volume. For a century and a half the descendants of William Goodridge of Watertown remained almost entirely in the northeastern part of Massachusetts and in the adjacent provinces of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. In Massachusetts none of them migrated even to the central or western part of the state. In the Revolution eighty-five bearing the name of Goodridge or Guttridge were patriot soldiers of Massachusetts, including Maine, and all but four of the number were from towns in the eastern part of the state. On the other hand, only the Goodriches of Connecticut had gone over into western Massachusetts, and out of eighty bearing that name who served in the Revolution only eleven were from the eastern part of the state. That is, at this period, the Goodridges predominated in the original home of the family in eastern Massachusetts, and retained that form of name while only in the western part of the state where the Goodriches from the Connecticut stock had settled were soldiers of that name enlisted. So far as this record may be considered to give evidence, the Goodrich and the Goodridge name still persisted unchanged in their original habitats.

About this time and soon after some of the Goodridges chose to become Goodriches. Once adopted, the new name continued into subsequent generations in a manner that is confusing to the genealogist and disconcerting to the historian. The usage is past recall, and we shall always have Goodriches who historically are of the Goodridge strain.

A striking illustration of this off-hand changing the spelling of the surname and its results are seen in the History of Lyndeborough, N. H., by Rev. D. Donovan and Jacob A. Woodward, published by the town in 1906. In this town the Reverend Sewall Goodridge, 1747-1809, was a citizen of prominence, pastor of the Congregational church for forty-one years, 1768-1809. The history naturally reviews his activities in town and church, and throughout the first volume his name is given Goodridge, as it certainly was and as it appeared always in the town, church and family records. But in the second volume, among the genealogies of the old families of the town, he and his descendants are arbitrarily placed under the heading Goodrich, even the Reverend Sewall himself being thus robbed of his rightful name and forced to masquerade under another. A foot note appended to this genealogy says:

"In the old records of Lyndeborough, both town and church, this name is spelled Goodridge. In the preceding chapters of this history the old-fashioned way of spelling the name was retained so far as it related to the Rev. Sewall Goodridge. It was probably about the time of Dea. Benjamin [son of the Rev. Sewall] that the spelling was changed to Goodrich. For convenience the modern spelling of the name is used in this genealogy."

Extended comment seems to be unnecessary. But it may not be entirely out of place to suggest that while the changing of an individual's name by himself may be permissible even if regrettable, it is quite another thing for a historian merely "for convenience" thus to pervert the truth and make a Goodrich of a man who never was a Goodrich but always, himself and his ancestors, a Goodridge.

THE FAMILY IN ENGLAND

BURY ST. EDMUNDS

GODRIC CASTLE

THE FAMILY IN ENGLAND

EMOTE ancestors of the Goodricke, Goodridge, Goodrich and other families of like name were early located in many parts of Great Britain. Taking the university town of Cambridge as a centre, Bury St. Edmunds is twenty-five miles to the east; Ely, a cathedral town, fifteen miles northeast; Peterborough, another cathedral town, thirty-five miles northwest; and Croyland, or Crowland, as the name is now spelled, forty-five miles northwest. The country in which these towns are situated, for a distance, north and south, of two hundred miles, and east and west, fifty to a hundred, is among the most beautiful in England. Here the Angles established their kingdom and were among the first to listen to St. Augustine's appeal and embrace Christianity. Here, also, among the Angles, the venerable Bede, one of the great educational lights of his time, fixed the attention of the world, and still holds that of scholars.

The Angles, at the beginning of the eighth century, led all England in zeal for Christianity and education, and at Croyland they built a large abbey church that was destroyed by the Danes under Harold and Sidroc in 870. It was not until 878 that, led on by the great Alfred, they again possessed the country. And then the abbey was rebuilt. In Ingulph's History of the Abbey of Croyland it is said that:

"By common consent of all, the venerable Father Godric, though very reluctant and making great opposition thereto, was elected abbot. The abbot, for the next four years, was harassed by fines and confiscations by the King of Mercia till that kingdom ended and Alfred reigned over both that and Wessex. In the reign of Edmund, A. D. 940, weighed down with extreme old age, Godric, abbot of Croyland, died."

Again, we find a Godric—or Godrick, according to the Scotch spelling—performing a distinguished office at Scone.

near Perth, thirty-five miles north of Edinburgh, Scotland. There, after the death of King Malcolm III, at Alnwick, in 1093, Edgar, his son by Queen Margaret, was crowned king of Scotland in 904, Bishop Godrick of St. Andrews being the celebrant. Stewart's metrical translation of Hector Boece's account of the event, says:

“Edgair the prince to Scone, than haif tha boocht,
In rob royall that worthelie wes wrocht,
And croun of gold, with sword, sceptour and ring,
Into Scotland wes first anoyntit king
Be ane Godrik, as that my author sais,
Of Sanct Androis wes bischop in tha dais.”

In the century and a half that followed before the Normans came to conquer England, Godrics won historic eminence in Anglo-Saxon annals and were numerous among the great landholders; indeed, so frequently mentioned as to make confusion in the story of the Godric who was slain at Senlac. This Godric, second in command to Harold, was a landholder, sheriff of two counties, and otherwise a man of importance. At the Conquest, Godric was a frequent name among landholders, and the men bearing it being Saxons, against whom the Domesday Book was inimical, were said to have been driven into the priesthood for protection from the order requiring the name to be changed. But even this was without effect.

About this time, too, another Godric achieved distinction, and upon his death, in 1170, was canonized at Finchale, County Durham, where he had built an abbey. The date of his birth is not surely known, but he reached a great age, having lived sixty years at his church in Finchale. His father's name was Ailward Godric.

Goodridge was an old family in County Devon in the fifteenth century. Both Goodridge and Goodrich in this country are derivatives from Goodricke, and Goodricke can be traced from the Conquest down through the counties of Devon, Somerset, Lincoln, York, Cambridge, Norfolk, Suffolk and Middlesex to the town of Bury St. Edmunds, and thence to the Massachusetts Bay and Connecticut colonies in America.

Several families of the name from Counties Cambridge, Lincoln and York settled in Suffolkshire early in the sixteenth century, founding colonies at Bury St. Edmunds, at Rushbrooke, three miles away; at Bradfield St. Clare, five miles away, and at Hegessette (now called Hessett), four and a half miles away. One of these families spelled the name Goodricke, another Goodryke and still another, the one at Hessel, Goodericke. The families at the manor houses in Counties Lincoln and York had no settled form of spelling the name. For instance, those of Great Ribston, in Lincolnshire, spelled it in four ways, and different members of the same family spelled it variously.

The family flourished at Nortingley, or Nortonlee, Somersetshire, and perhaps at other places in the same county. Henry Goodryke, third son of Robert of Nortingley, married an heiress, daughter of Thomas Stickford, of Lincolnshire, and settled there. John Goodryke, fifth in descent from Henry Goodrick, son of Robert of Nortingley, lived in the time of Henry VI, 1422-1461. He died in Bolingbroke, County Lincoln, in 1493, and his will was among the first to be preserved at Somerset house, London. It is dated October 8, 1491. The established history of the family, according to its historian Charles Alfred Goodricke, starts with this John Goodryke of Bolingbroke, who was the first from whom an unbroken descent can be traced, as recorded in authentic documents. This John Goodryke, by his wife Agnes, had three sons and four daughters, William, Richard, Johanna, Margaret, Elizabeth, Alice and Edward, all born in Bolingbroke. However, a Goodrick had been settled in Lincolnshire at a much earlier period than this, for Goodrick of Cunningsby, who had been grave or judge of Wildmore for forty years, acted as arbitrator for the soke or court of Horncastle and Scrivelsby in a dispute among the barons of Bolingbroke, Scrivelsby and Bornecastle soon after the Conquest.

In the next generation William Goodryke of Bolingbroke married twice and settled in East Kirkby, having no children by his first wife. His second wife was Jane Williamson, daughter of William Williamson, of Boston, County Lincoln, and by her he had three sons and four daughters. The sons were John, Henry and Thomas. The father was a merchant of the staple and justice of peace for the county. Jane Williamson was a woman of wealth and left a fortune to each of her children.

Frequent are references to men of the family in the public records of England under a variety of spellings of the name. John Goderiche was of Newenham, Cambridgeshire, in 1276-7. Thomas Tukeby, alias Goderich, of Coventry, was in the retinue of the Earl of Montaigne in 1435-6. Thomas Goderyche of London was in the retinue of Ralph, Lord de Sudeley in 1450-1. John Goodricke, son of Leon or Lionel Goodricke, was of the manor of Stickney, Lincolnshire, in 1634. John Goodryche or Gudryde, Henry Gudryke, William Goodrych and John Goodriche were of Cambridge University, 1509, 1512, 1513 and 1570. Henry Goodricke, brother of the bishop and chancellor, Thomas Goodryke, was the ancestor of the Yorkshire branch of the family which he established at Ribston, and among his descendants were Sir Henry Goodricke, 1580-1641; Sir John Gooderick, 1641-1670, who was a conspicuous royalist in the Civil War; and Major William Goodricke, a parliamentary officer in the Civil War.

In Henry Chauncey's Historical Antiquities of Hertfordshire are these entries: John Goodridge, mayor of St. Albans, 1580; Thomas Goodridge, mayor of St. Albans, 1613; Thomas Goodridge, assistant of the borough of St. Albans, 1606. Others of early date were Thomas Goodricke, rector of Hogely, Lincolnshire; Sir John Goodryke, knight, Huntingdon; Thomas Goodryke, parish of Bowden, Maj.; Annie Goodryke, prioress of Greenfield, Lincolnshire; Henry Goodrich, rector of Northfield, Kent; John Goodereych, prebendary of Hudson, Staffordshire; John Goodridge, vicar of Clewdon, Somersetshire; William Goodrich, rector of St. Martin, Outerfield, London; Richard Goodrich, commissioner of the poor, parish of St. Nicholas, Gloucestershire;

In the middle centuries of English history that branch of the family existing under the name of Goodridge became specially interesting to its descendants when one Goodridge was knighted, probably by Richard Coeur-de-Lion, 1190-91, for service in the crusades. The grant to Goodridge (Charlew, Gloucestershire) was:

argent, on a fesse gules, between three lions passantguardant, sable, a fleur-de-lis between two crescents of the field.

Another coat of arms—granted to Nicholas Goodridge of Totness, Devonshire and Doncaster, Yorkshire, by King James I. in 1610—was:

argent, a fesse sable; in chief, three crosses-crosslet fitchee of the second. Crest, a song thrush proper.

In this connection it is interesting to note as something very significant that several of the old Goodricke families had arms almost identical with those granted to the Goodridges of Gloucestershire. Goodrick of Isle of Ely and Stanmore, County Middlesex, had: argent, on a fesse gules, between two lions passant guardant, sable, a fleur-de-lis between two crescents or. Goodrick of East Kirkby, County Lincoln, had: argent, on a fesse between two lions, passant guardant, sable, a fleur-de-lis between as many crescents or. Goodricke of Ribston Hall, County York (extinct in 1833), had: argent, on a fesse gules, between two lions passant guardant, sable, a fleur-de-lis between as many crescents or. Richard Goodricke of Stanware, who died in 1562, nephew to the celebrated bishop and chancellor, Thomas Goodricke had identically the same arms as Goodricke of Ribston Hall. Only one conclusion can be drawn from the similarity of these arms and that is that the Goodrickes were of one family and that the Goodridge of County Middlesex was directly and closely of the same family.

Nicholas Goodridge of Totnes left no direct male heirs. He died October 1, 1615, having married Janette Dowse. His only two sons died without issue: Nicholas in 1603, aet twenty years, and Walter, August 13, 1627, aet thirty years. His only daughter, Mary, married Thomas Prestwood, and in 1627 was forty-nine years of age. This is the record given in Vivian's Visitation of the County Devon.

E. A. G.

From William Goodryke of East Kirkby and his wife Jane Williamson were descended numerous eminent Englishmen. His youngest son, Thomas Goodryke, born in East Kirkby, was a canon of Westminster in 1529 and became chaplain to King Henry VIII, bishop of Ely, and lord chancellor, 1552-53. In the fourth generation after John of Bolingbroke was Sir Richard Goodrike, who, born about 1560, was high sheriff of Yorkshire in 1591. He married, in 1579, Muriel, daughter of William, the second Lord Eure or Evers, not Evans, as the name has been often erroneously printed. It is from this Sir Richard Goodricke that, according to some speculation, the pioneers to America were derived. One statement, made in 1889, on the strength of a genealogical tree said to have been "in possession of James Pitt Goodrich of Egarth House, Egarth [?], Denbigshire, England," and quoted in The Goodrich Family in America by Lafayette W. Case, is that "John Goodrich, second son of Richard and Muriel (Evans) Goodrich, married and emigrated to Virginia in 1635, and with him came Henry, Richard, John and William." There has been no proof adduced in support of this bare statement. In the History of the Goodricke Family, the genealogical tree shows that Sir Richard Goodricke had sons Richard and John, of whom no record is given. They might or they might not have come to this country. He had a son Henry—Sir Henry Goodricke, born in 1580 and died in 1641—and a son William, who was born in 1581 and married Sarah Bellingham and died in England in 1662-63; Sarah Bellingham was a daughter of William Bellingham of Bromby, Lincolnshire, and sister of Sir Richard Bellingham, the celebrated colonial governor of New England. No other Henry, Richard, John or William appears in this genealogical table of this family in this period.

Another apocryphal account of the origin of the Connecticut Goodrich pioneers is based upon a document ascribed to Dr. Charles S. J. Goodrich of New York City, which it is claimed came to him from Judge Charles Goodrich of Pittsfield, a grandson of William Goodrich of Wethersfield. According to this paper:

"A man by the name of Goodrich married the Duke of Marlboro's sister. By her he had two sons: John, who was named for the duke, and William. The father died, and his brother brought John and William to New England. Not long after the duke became childless [sic], and sent over for John to return and become heir of his estates. John embarked for England but died on the passage. The uncle [the duke] purchased a farm for William in Wethersfield. This was in 1640."

This is quoted in all seriousness by the editor in the Goodrich Family in America. It is incomprehensible that any intelligent person, with even a smattering knowledge of English history, or at least an encyclopædia at hand for ready reference, should not know that John Churchill, the first duke of Marlborough, was born in 1650—son of Sir Winston Churchill, born in 1620—and had only one sister, Arabella Churchill, who could not have been the husband of a Goodrich and mother of the John and William Goodrich of Connecticut for two very substantial reasons. Born, at least not before 1640, and probably much later, she could scarcely, in the nature of things, have been the mother of the two Goodriches who were in America, mature men, one in 1643, married in 1645, and the other before 1648 when he was married. Besides, Arabella Churchill's children were three illegitimates—two sons and one daughter by King James II—and two legitimate daughters by her legal husband, Colonel Charles Godfrey. Furthermore it appears that the duke purchased a farm in Wethersfield for his putative nephew William in 1640, that is ten years before he was born, an accomplishment that would have overtaxed even the redoubtable prowess of the hero of Blenheim. Of such absurdities is the attempt sometimes made to manufacture history.

GODRIC CASTLE

IN volume six of Beauties of England and Wales, published in London over a century ago, we find the following: "Whoever was the original founder of this Castle, whether Godricus Dux, who witnessed King Canute's charters, or any chieftain prior to him, it is certain that the earliest authenticated record concerning it at present known, is of the date of 1204, when it was given by King John to William Strigul, Earl Marshall, to hold by the service of two knights' fees." In Castles and Abbeys of England by William Beattie is almost an exact copy of the above, except that Beattie says, "probably founded by Godricus Dux," thus putting a former conjecture now in terms of probable fact, giving mere affinity of name as a reason.

After consulting all original documents attainable, we have no hesitancy in stating our belief that the designation "Godricus Dux" is erroneous. Godricus is the Latin nominative for Godric, and Dux for leader or general. The name, with its title, then becomes, in our parlance, General Godric, which Latinized is Godricus Dux. Now, there were a score or more of Godrics who had attained the station of leader or general before the conquest. Godric was in command at Maldon in 991; Godric was in Canute's train; greatest of all, Godric fought and died for Harold at Senlac or Hastings. These were all generals and therefore no one of them was entitled to the sole designation of "Godricus Dux." To so employ the name is misleading and confusing. "Godricus Dux" did not sign Canute's charter. He signed it with his Saxon name Godric. Only the title was in Latin, viz.:—Dux. The original charter, as printed in Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, has these signatories:

“Ego Kunth rex, hanc donationem Christo contuli pro consequendo proemio coelestis haereditatis. Ego Elgifu regina, hanc regiam donationem augendo confirmavi. Ego Walstanus archiepiscopus corroboravi. Ego Ætheluthus archiepiscopus confirmavi. Ego Godwinus episcopus corroboravi. Ego Ælwinus episcopus assensum dedi. Ego Alfsinus episcopus consignavi. Ego Ethericus episcopus conclusi. Ego Ælfwius episcopus corroboravi. Ego Huc dux. Ego Godwine dux. Ego Ulf dux. Ego Eglaf dux. Ego Hacun dux. Ego Leofwyne dux. Ego Godric dux. Ego Brihtwaldus episcopus consensi. Ego Brihtwiz abbas. Ego Leofric. Ego Ælfward. Ego Æthelstan.”

Nowhere in Dugdale's reproduction of original documents and indeed in no other first papers do we find "Godricus Dux" as the stereotyped exclusive name for a particular person. Note that the signature is not in Latin. "Godricus Dux" did not witness Canute's charter to the Abbey of Benedict at Hulme. So far we have been dealing in fact. Now we must rely upon probabilities, but they are strongly against the conjecture that Canute's Godric, or Beaties "Godricus Dux" was the founder of the castle on the river Wye. Indeed, no one knows who was its founder. The probability is that it was quite another Godric, and the castle was not constructed before the Norman period.

Hulme, the beneficiary of Canute, is located about fourteen miles from Norwich, in Norfolk County. "This solitary place among the marshes," says Bishop Tanner, "then known as Cowholm or Calvescroft, was given by a little prince called Horn to a society of religious heremites under the government of one Suneman," probably before 800 A. D., who, with the chapel of St. Benedict built by them, were all destroyed by the Danes in 870. Later, Wolfric, a holy man, rebuilt the chapel and houses. In the next century Canute refounded and endowed this place in honor of St. Benedict, 1017-1020, exact date not known.

While Hulme is in the extreme east of England, County Hereford is in the extreme west, and we have failed to find evidence that Godric, of Canute's train, was ever there. Indeed, we have failed to find that Canute himself was personally ever engaged in war with the Welsh. When he ascended the throne of Denmark, in succession to his father Sweyn, he waged desperate warfare with Edmund Ironside, the Saxon king, was completely victorious, and shortly became king of all England, in 1016-1017. From this time on, to the death of Canute in 1036, England was singularly free from wars.

But there is unmistakable evidence that several other Godrics were in Welsh wars both before and after the Danish ascendancy. It is much more likely then that one of the Godrics believed to have been engaged in the numerous wars between the Saxons and Welsh was the founder of the fortress than this Godric under Danish rule. There were Godrics in Berks, Gloucester and Cambridge, and, indeed, in other parts of England. Many of them were leaders and landholders whose possessions were confiscated to the Normans. When Harold, the last of the Saxon kings, was fighting the Welsh king, Griffeth, at Llewelyn, in 1063, it is extremely probable that Godric, who was second in command at Senlac, was one of his generals. We are told in Domesday Book that Godric had landed possessions in Hereford, which, after the Conquest, were given to the Norman knight, Henry of Ferrers.

All castles in England were Norman; indeed, they were unknown to the Saxons. W. H. St. John Hope published, in The Archaeological Journal, a paper read at the Southampton meeting of the British Institute in which he says: "It is quite clear that castles were something new to the Saxon." John Horace Round, in a learned treatise, declares that castles were first built in England by Norman knights, whom Edward the Confessor, 1041-1066, had called to assist him in his wars against the Welsh. After the Conquest, William began building castles, both as defence in war and especially against the resentful people whose lands he had confiscated. This practice was continued during the reign of Stephen, until as many as 1,115, says one writer, had been built within fifty years after the Norman occupancy.

But there was a construction on the site of Godric castle long before the Norman, which the Saxon called a keep. It was really a fortress but not a castle. Probably this keep was in existence and united to Orchenfield,—spelled also Irchenfeld and Urchenfield,—at an early date. “This Urchenfield was the very place where St. Dubricius founded his college (512) that the religious might live like eastern recluses by the work of their hands.” All available evidence points to a Godric as the founder and at a time long antedating the coming of the Normans.

The keep was located at the extreme southern part of Herefordshire, about five miles from the border of the County Monmouth and about fifteen, a little east of south, from the city of Hereford. It was undoubtedly Saxon in construction. It faced northeast and southwest and was twenty-nine feet square outside. The walls are somewhat over seven feet in thickness and of solid masonry. The rooms, of which there are three, one above another, are fourteen and one-half feet square.

The lower room, entered only from the outside, was the dungeon divided into two parts, the outer being wholly without window or any means of securing light. The inner compartment was smaller, entered by a narrow passage from the outer and provided with a small hole or window for light and air. It was strongly secured under the platform of the entrance to the second story. The middle room was entered by stone stairs from without. It contained a fireplace and narrow windows, probably being the residence room. The third story room was reached by a stone stairway in a corner of the wall from the middle room. The arches for the windows and doors were truly Saxon in original construction, but had undergone modification when the castle was built or after, during its different occupancies.

The castle was distinctively Norman and was built either immediately before or at successive periods after the Conquest. It was in the form of a parallelogram, 176 feet long and 152 feet wide, its longer alinements being northwest and southeast. It embraced considerably more than three-fifths of an acre. At each corner was a round tower of massive construction; connecting these towers were the walls, high and thick, superimposed upon which were the battlements for better defence. Around all was a wide moat. It was admirably situated on a high promontory overlooking the river Wye, which partly surrounded it and favored its defence.

Against any offensive warfare it was practically impregnable, and starvation of its defenders was the only means of access by besiegers.

When the walls of the castle were built, that at the northwest was closely alined to the outer wall of the keep in which there was no window, in this feature resembling the keeps of Porchester, Pevensy, and Castleton. As a place of residence it was most attractive with its lofty location and wide outlook over an expanse of beautiful country. No expense seems to have been spared by its successive occupants to dignify its architecture and adorn its stately apartments, especially that of assembly and banquet. The State Room was twenty feet wide and fifty-five in length, while the main apartment for assembly and banquet was twenty-eight feet by sixty-five; extending its whole length was a single beam of oak nearly two feet square. On the northwest side of this room was the great fireplace before which, many a time, king and lords had assembled in merry wassail and renewal of fealty.

The manor had a noble history. The first authenticated record of it was A. D. 1204, when "King John gave it to William Strigul, Earl of Marshal," a French nobleman, "to hold by the service of two knights' fees." His son Walter, Earl of Pembroke, died there in December, 1245. It was subsequently conveyed, by marriage, to William de Valentia, who became Earl of Pembroke, and whose third son succeeded to its ownership. From him it passed to the Talbots, by the marriage of Elizabeth Comyn, daughter of Joan, his second sister, to Sir Richard, afterward Lord Talbot, and through various successions to his descendant, the great Earl of Shrewsbury, who was killed at the battle of Castillon in 1453. The manor was still in possession of the Earls of Shrewsbury in 1617,—14th of James I,—when Elizabeth, daughter of the seventh earl (Gilbert Talbot) conveyed it by marriage to Henry de Grey, Earl of Kent, in whose family it continued until 1740, when, on the death of Henry, then Duke of Kent, it was sold to Admiral Griffin. Subsequently, by purchase, it came into possession of Sir Samuel Rush Meyrick, L.L.D., the noted collector of arms and armour, much of which was of the Saxon period. Near the castle Sir Samuel built a splendid manor house (1828-1831), in which he imitated many of the features of the older structure and in which he gathered his collection, the finest in all England under private ownership. This assemblage of priceless mementoes of historic England was eventually transferred to the Kensington Museum, still to commemorate, however, its collector now many years dead.

In The Goodrich Family and in some other publications of recent years the castle on the Wye is denominated Goodrich Castle. In search of truth, publications become valuable or not according to their reliability. They are reliable or not according as they state facts as found in primary papers. We have already dwelt upon the proneness of many writers to repeat errors found in the writings of those who have preceded them, with little effort to verify statements or orthographies by searching in primary papers. In one laboriously edited publication a name is spelled in a score or more of instances in accordance with the preference of the editor, quite without reference to, indeed in contravention of, the name orthography employed by the person referred to.

What then was this name, in primary papers, of the castle on the Wye? The foundation upon which the superstructure was builded was concededly laid by one of the Godrics. In early original papers we have failed to find a single instance in which its name was spelled Goodrich. When the great Earl of Shrewsbury was killed at Castillon, upon his monument was written "Lord of Goderich and Orchenfield." In 1646 the castle was seized by the Parliamentary forces, recaptured by the Royalists and besieged by Cromwell's army, under Colonel Birch. According to Whitlocke, Colonel Birch entered some of the works of Gotherich Castle by stratagem. In later negotiations for its surrender, Sir Henry Lingen, its gallant defender, denominated it Guthridge Castle. Herefordshire Biographies states that Sir Henry kept a great stable "erected within the outward wall of Guthridge Castle." Colonel Birch starved the garrison into submission in six weeks, and it capitulated August 4, 1646. In 1647, parliament ordered that the castle should be "disgarrisoned and slighted," that is, dismantled and razed. Since this time it has never been rebuilt and is now in ruins.

Like many another old castle this is haunted by a ghost. The story runs that once upon a time there lived here an ill-formed, ill-tempered scion of the race who had a beautiful daughter. The daughter had a lover who did not find favor in the eyes of the father, and he forbade the bans. But, in spite of the paternal edict, the daughter and her lover resolved upon an elopement, which was effected upon a moonlight night, both riding together on a white horse. The father, discovering the plot, pursued, threatening dire punishment. The unhappy couple, striving to escape, rode down the steep bank in front of the castle and perished in the Wye. Now on moonlight nights, it is said, a white figure on a white horse rides slowly into the court-yard, circles three times around and disappears through the entrance. She always comes alone, unattended by the young man, since it is the woman who is always more constant and faithful in affairs of the heart than the man.

Such is the present-day meagre knowledge of the castle on the Wye. That it was founded by an early Godric is conceded. All references to it show that down through the centuries for a thousand years it has ever been known by some one of the modifications, which Domesday wrought in this name. While it has been in the custody of private owners from the earliest authenticated record, this fact has still remained unchanged. We cannot more worthily dignify its noble memories and harmonize the warm associations of a widely-distributed family, than by preserving for it the name of a Godric, its Saxon founder.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS

T MAY be of interest to spend a moment in consideration of the historic old town of Bury St. Edmunds, located in one of the midland counties of England, where the Godrics dwelt for many centuries and where they made for themselves a large place in English history. It has been surmised that Bury St. Edmunds is built upon the ruins of the Villa Faustina of the Romans. Be that as it may, the town, about eighty-seven miles from London, is delightfully located on a gentle eminence, on the right bank of the river Lark, in the midst of a country second to none in all England for productiveness and beauty. Dugdale tells us its first known name was Bedricosworth and that in the year 633, Sigebert, king of the East Angles, "quitted his crown," and took upon himself a religious life in a monastery which he had founded there. According to Bishop Tanner, after the death of this prince, we have no certain knowledge about the place until the martyred king Edmund was brought there for burial in 903.

Edmund was born in Nuremberg in 840, and while of royal blood, he was not in direct line to the throne. But King Offa, of the East Angles, wishing to put aside his kingly burdens and end his days in "peace and penance," abdicated in favor of Edmund, who was crowned by Humber, bishop of Hulm, on Christmas day, 856. Though young, he proved to be a wise, justice-loving king, and was greatly beloved by all his people. In the fifteenth year of his reign and the twenty-ninth of his age, the Danes descended upon his realm and, after a desperate struggle at Hoxne, Edmund was defeated. Hinguar, Danish king, made proposals of peace, upon terms which Edmund regarded as insulting to his religion and rejected. Fighting was renewed and Edmund was captured. Thereupon Hinguar renewed his proposals, offering to spare Edmund's life, but he was again refused. The king of the Danes, now greatly angered, submitted his captive to the most cruel tortures, accompanying them with a renewal of his terms. Again refused, Hinguar ordered Edmund's head cut off and he was buried in a little wooden church at Hoxne. After a short time, the Saxons again possessing the kingdom and the fame of Edmund being greatly extended, his remains were removed from Hoxne and deposited in another wooden church at Beodricsworth. This old wooden church was torn down and a great abbey, one of the most beautiful in all England, was built, 1021-32, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St. Edmund.

The fame of the royal martyr had wonderfully increased throughout England and a rich and beautiful shrine was erected in the abbey and consecrated to his memory. The name of the town was changed to St. Edmunds Bury and many miracles were wrought at the shrine of the dead king. Canute especially honored the martyr by offering up his crown to the revered shrine. Edward the Confessor made pilgrimages thither and on one occasion dismounted when a mile away and, removing his shoes, proceeded barefooted to the tomb. The name was again changed a little later to Bury St. Edmunds, Bury being used in its Saxon sense of place or borough.

The town has been the residence of kings and the meeting place of parliaments, the capital of East Anglia and indeed, of England. The beautiful abbey has been destroyed. Only the tower, or church gate, one of the finest examples of early Norman architecture in England, and the western gate, a beautiful specimen of rich decorated work remain, except some tumbledown walls. Under Sweyn, Canute, Edward the Confessor and their successors, Bury St. Edmunds rose in dignity and importance. It still holds its place as one of the most beautiful towns in England. Among its churches are St. James, a fine example of the perpendicular, St. Mary's, with its beautiful carved roof and St. Edmund's, Roman Catholic. These, together with Moyses' Hall, are all in succession along the main street, behind which is a beautifully kept garden, the site of the grand old abbey.

THE FAMILY IN AMERICA

WHILE it has been difficult to trace the Goodrickes, Goodridges and Goodriches in the annals of English history back to the time of the Conquest, it has been harder to explore the records of the first immigrants bearing the name who came to New England, and well-nigh impossible to follow them back to their English origin and establish even tentatively their lines of descent. Records in this country are meagre; much that is quoted as history is found, upon investigation, to be mere tradition and untrustworthy. As was the case with most of these pioneers to the new world, a great deal of the old family connection was forgotten, ignored or deliberately thrown aside in the long voyage across the Atlantic. Considerable, therefore, must be left to speculation and deduction.

It is not easy to draw an adequate and accurate pen portrait of any particular individual whose life was merged in a great popular movement centuries ago, however useful and influential that life may have been. The salient facts which led up to, or culminated in, the Puritan in England have been much discussed and are well understood. Leading characters in that body have a conspicuous place in history. But there were many men of scarcely less importance and influence in this Puritan hegira, of whom we know but little. What we need now is not more of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay; not more of John Endicott, John Winthrop and Richard Saltonstall; but somewhat more of others who were active in all the labors incident to the nation in its nascent period.

It is important to remember that the repression of Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth, King James and King Charles was directed, not against the common and ignorant people, but against their leaders, and that those who, under proscriptive measures, fled to the continent and to America represented the education and culture of England's best. Many, the majority indeed, were communicants in the Established Church, called Puritans in derision, because they eschewed many of the forms and practices of their Church, believing that it followed too slavishly the Church of Rome. It was maintained that until their form of worship was simplified they could have no place in the great body of the Reformation. It was declared that there was little difference, except in name, in the two churches, one the Roman Catholic and the other the Episcopal Catholic. In this impulse for religious freedom even Cromwell, Hampden, Pym and others of like standing were listed for America but were enjoined by royal edict. Later that prohibition was removed and the exodus began. For the most part the flower of England in character and education was drawn to the colonies in the new world.

Coming to special consideration of the ancestors of the Goodridges and Goodriches in America, we find these departures and arrivals from England and settlers in the colonies in the seventeenth century:

Jno. Goodridge certified to embark from Gravesend for Virginia on the George, J. O. Severne, master, in August, 1635.

Ann Goodridge embarked for Virginia on the City of London, Edward Walker, master, in July, 1635.

William Goodridge of Watertown, Mass., 1636.

Richard Goodrich of Guilford, Conn., 1639.

John Goodrich of Wethersfield, Conn.

William Goodrich of Wethersfield, Conn.

Robert Goodridge, or Gutteridge, keeper of a coffee house in Boston before 1677; died in 1717, aged seventy-two years.

John Goodridge of Watertown had a grant of land in 1636.

John Goodridge, or Guttering, tailor, was of Boston in 1640, possibly the John of Watertown; was admitted to be a freeman in 1642; married Prudence ——— and had a son, Joseph, baptised October 2, 1642, eight days old.

Regarding our own family questions obtrude. Who were John and William Goodridge and who were of their families? When did they arrive in Massachusetts? What is the relationship between the branches in Massachusetts and Connecticut? What was their relationship to others of the same name who came to America before 1640?

Sir Richard Saltonstall did not tarry long in Massachusetts after his arrival in 1630. He returned to England the following year and there continued the work of finding settlers for the infant colony, never coming again to America. Under his supervision the emigration movement remained on a high level as regarded the character of its constituent members. Each candidate was obliged to pass a rigid examination by the agent of the Ministry at Gravesend, and if found eligible, he received a written certificate of approval. Among the accepted emigrants were the Goodridge pioneers. Who composed their small party? It is of record that John and William—their names variously spelled Gutterig, Gutteridge, Goodrich, Goodridge and Gooderidge—were in Watertown in 1636. The name of the ship on which they sailed from England and the date of their embarking has not been ascertained. It is not doubted that they came from Bury St. Edmunds, but when? Several authorities say that they arrived in 1634, and others fix the year as 1636.

Exhaustive research has utterly failed to produce any reliable evidence that 1634 was the date, but much indication that it was 1636. The first record concerning them in America was on July 25, 1636, when both participated in a division of land in Watertown. Acceptance of the earlier date for their arrival compels admission that these active, energetic men braved the ocean for two months, only to drift about for two years in indecision after their arrival before they made any move to settle down. Such delay would be unthinkable, for it would be more characteristic of these men to get to work at once. Probabilities are all in favor of the late date as the year of their arrival.

There has been much speculation as to the relationship of John and William Goodridge, but positive conclusions have not been reached. Henry Bond in his *Genealogies * * * * of the Early Settlers of Watertown, Mass.*, advanced the conjecture "to be confirmed or confuted by

"future researches," as he says, that they were brothers, and Nathaniel Goodwin in his Genealogical Notes holds to the same opinion. It has never been possible to prove this conjecture, but other later historians have assumed that these opinions must have been right, and have gradually given them the currency and the weight of correct history; thus Francis S. Drake in his history of Watertown, published as a chapter in Samuel Adams Drake's History of Middlesex County, Massachusetts, and Henry R. Stiles in his History of Ancient Wethersfield, Connecticut. Bond's statement in full is:

"that John and William Goodrich (?) brothers, came to this country together from Bury St. Edmunds, or that vicinity, Co. Suffolk, England; that William, the younger, settled in Watertown, where he died; that John, the eldest of the two, was the John Guttering who was adm [itted] freeman of Mass., May, 1642; that soon after this he went to Wethersfield, where his name appears in the Conn. Coll. Records the next year, taking with him his two sons, John and William (having left another son, William, in England, to be educated, afterwards minister of Hegassitt, d. about 1677, s. p., bequeathing his estate to his nephews in Conn.); that he died on his return voyage to England, in 1644, leaving in Wethersfield, those two sons John and William, from whom the Goodrich families in Connecticut are descended."

Later discoveries, however, have determined that William of Watertown and John of Wethersfield were not brothers, but that the real brothers were John and William of Wethersfield, of whom William of Watertown may possibly have been an uncle. The English origin of the Wethersfield brothers, who became progenitors of large and distinguished American families, has been established. They came from the Gooderickes of County Suffolk, but how, when, where and for what reason they changed the spelling of their name to Goodrich has not been determined, although it was manifestly an easy transition from Goodericke or Goodrick to Goodrich. As Goodrich they were known in Connecticut, and as Goodrich their descendants have always been, without question or variation.

The first Goodericke of record in Hessett, Suffolkshire, was William, whose will was made April 4, 1631, and proved in the archdeaconry court, Sudbury, February 2, 1632. Four children were mentioned in the will. The eldest son, John, died in Bury St. Edmunds April 14, 1632. He was to have had all the land, tenements and houses in Hessett and be the executor of his father's will. William, the second son, had a bequest of £16. Henry, the third son, probably died before his father, as he was not mentioned in the will. The eldest daughter, Elizabeth, married Philip Clarke; she inherited from her father £8. The other daughter, Susan, married, first, John Lark and, second, John Beam; she had a bequest of £8.

John Goodericke, who died in Bury St. Edmunds, April 14, 1632, eldest son of William Goodericke, left a will which was proved in the archdeaconry court, Sudbury, May 16, 1632. In that document bequests were made to "Margerie my wife" "to my four sons, William Goodericke the elder, William Goodericke the younger, John Gooderick and Jeremy Gooderick," to Margaret and William, children of his brother Henry, deceased before 1632, and "to the two younger children of my sister Susan, by her first husband, John Lark."

The Reverend William Goodrich or Goodricke of Hegessette died in 1676 or 1677. His will, dated May 12, 1677, was proved in the archdeaconry court, Sudbury, July 1, 1678. He studied for the ministry under Mr. Dickinson in Bury St. Edmunds and, dying without children, left his property to his "loving wife Rebecca," to "Joseph, the eldest sons now living of my brother John Goodrich," "to my brother's next son Jonathan," "to my brother John's eldest daughter" and "to John Goodrich, the eldest son of my brother William Goodrick." Also he mentions "John Goodrich, eldest son now living of my cousin Robert Goodrich, Hawleigh, chirurgeon."

From these wills and from other documents, including a certificate of Governor John Winthrop of Connecticut, May 20, 1703, showing the relationship of John and Joseph and Jonathan Goodrich, father and sons, of Wethersfield, and their claim to the Hegessette estate, and a record of the general court baron for the manor of Dagworth, England, October 17, 1699, wherein John Goodrich of Wethersfield appears by attorney as tenant of part of the estate of William Goodricke, several things that have bearing upon the identity of the American pioneers are disclosed. Of the children of William Goodericke of Hegesette, the elder son John died within a year after the death of his father. In the Hessesette church it is recorded that the daughter Susan was born about the first of January, 1602, thus placing the date of the birth of her elder brother John about 1593 and that of her other brother William about 1595, these dates being admittedly only approximate.

It has been suggested with some apparent plausibility that William Goodericke, the second son of the William Goodericke of Hegesette, just mentioned, may have been the William Goodridge of Watertown. This is not inherently impossible, though in the absence of documentary proof the supposition must remain no more than supposition. But certain it is that if William Goodridge and William Goodericke should be thus identified, the John Guttridge who was in Watertown in 1636 could not have been his brother, since John Goodericke of Hegesette was never in this country.

Much painstaking effort has been exerted and all available sources of information have been exhausted in the endeavor to ascertain conclusively the parentage and the place and date of the birth of William Goodridge the pioneer, but without satisfactory result. It is reasonably certain that he was a native of Bury St. Edmunds. But while the records of Watertown are blank as to those points, those of Bury St. Edmunds are no better. Neither in Bury St. Edmunds nor in the vicinity thereof has it been possible to discover any record of the exact date of birth.

WATERTOWN, THE NEW ENGLAND HOME OF WILLIAM GOODRIDGE

WATERTOWN, first called Dorchester Fields, interesting to descendants of the colonial pioneers and especially to descendants of William Godridge, was one of the first settlements of New England. Plymouth was first, then Salem in 1628, Charlestown in 1629, Dorchester late in May, 1630, and Watertown early in July, 1630. Sir Richard Saltonstall, Rev. George Phillips and others, with Governor Winthrop, sailed from the Isle of Wight in the ship Arbella on April 8, 1630, arriving at Salem in June. Not liking Salem and wishing a distinct settlement of their own, Saltonstall and Phillips began prospecting. Charlestown and Dorchester both seemed undesirable. Ten men, led by these two stalwarts, took a boat and ascended the Charles River. It is difficult to fix the exact point at which they landed, but probably it was three or four miles above Charlestown and near the present United States Arsenal. Finding the country diversified and well watered and having excellent natural drainage and, at the same time, well suited for agricultural purposes, they decided upon it as the place for the infant settlement. Why it was called Watertown is not clear. Some think that it was so named after a town in England. Others, probably more correctly, conjecture that the name was chosen because the country was well watered. Besides the Charles River on the south, and on the north, Fresh Pond, a beautiful sheet of crystal water, there were numerous smaller ponds and springs of pure limped water scattered about the larger old town admirably adapted to domestic purposes.

Watertown had been the site of an old Indian village, Pequusset, not in use at the time of settlement. The court of assistants in Boston passed an ordinance, September 7, 1630, changing the name of Trimountaine to Boston, Matapan to Dorchester and Dorchester Fields to Watertown.

The boundaries of the old town, at this early date, are not very clearly defined. Charlestown or Boston, of course, borders it on the east, Charles River on the south, while to the west and north it was practically without limitations. This large area has, in the course of time, been successively curtailed by encroachments of Cambridge, Charlestown, and Mount Auburn on the east, and the formation of many new towns on the north and west, until now the whole township is only about three miles long east and west and in average width, north and south, about one mile.

Immediately on the northeast boundary is beautiful Mount Auburn cemetery. A little to the southeast of where the cemetery now is were the homestalls of Sir Richard Saltonstall and Reverend George Phillips, about a mile west of Harvard University. The homestall of William Goodridge was a five-acre lot not far from the northwest boundary of the cemetery. The homestall of Mr. Phillips was on the Cambridge road, which later was incorporated into the town. William Goodridge was a participant in many divisions of land. At one time he received seven lots and at another time ninety-one acres. He was a participant in the fourth of the Great Dividends in July, 1636. In all he must have had several hundred acres.

The first religious service in the town was early in July, date not recorded, under the trees and probably near the site of the first meeting-house, about one mile from the Saltonstall homestall. No mention is made of this first meeting-house in the record, but the church organization was undoubtedly Congregational in policy. Bond, in his History of Watertown, states his belief that it has a fair claim to being the second church organization in the colony. It should be borne in mind that the churches in Plymouth and Dorchester were organized in England and that the latter was transferred bodily in its membership at the time of the exodus into Connecticut in 1636. Sir Richard Saltonstall and Governor Winthrop, at a conference upon the hardships and sufferings of the early colonists, appointed July 30, 1630, as a day of fasting and prayer, and on this date the Watertown church was formally organized, forty members signing the covenant. A meeting-house was probably erected before 1634 and a new one was built in 1636, when a rate of £80 was ordered for its construction. The old house was not mentioned in the records, but the sites of both were probably the same, a little southwest from Mount Auburn cemetery and somewhat less than a mile, as before stated, to the west of the Saltonstall and Phillips homestalls.

This was the only church in Watertown for sixty-six years. Reverend George Phillips was the first minister. On December 9, 1640, Reverend John Knowles was ordained to be assistant. Mr. Phillips died in July, 1644, and for three and one-half years Mr. Knowles was in sole charge of the church. In 1648 Reverend John Sherman was chosen assistant. Shortly after Mr. Knowles removed to another settlement, when Mr. Sherman became minister in full charge, so continuing until his death, in 1685. These three were the only ministers for fifty-five years. Mr. Phillips received a salary, in 1642, of £67 13s 4d, and Mr. Knowles £40. These amounts were increased until Sherman had a salary of £140 at the time of his death.

The first grave-yard was mentioned July 5, 1642, though there must have been a place of interment (undoubtedly the same as here referred to) from the first. It was probably immediately adjoining the meeting-house at the southeast corner of what are now Mount Auburn and Grove streets and about half a mile west of Mount Auburn cemetery. This must be one of the very oldest in New England, and, during seventy years, was the only place of burial for the large community about Watertown. Here William Goodridge was buried, but the marking of his grave has long since disappeared.

The first record of a school-house was September 17, 1649. The building was twenty-two feet long, fourteen feet wide and nine feet between joists. This could scarcely have been the first, for the New England colonists were equally solicitous both for churches and schools. Probably the first meeting-house was also used for a school. David Mitchel was the first school-teacher of whom the record speaks, and his school-house, the one above mentioned, was probably on Strawberry Hill, afterward called School-House Hill, three-quarters of a mile west of the meeting-house. If its walls could speak, what thrilling deeds of discipline would it relate, of which the rod and the ferule were the cogent, maybe the only means. The pay of Richard Norcross, voted January 6, 1650, was £30 (or $150) per annum. He was probably the second school-master.

Thrilling is the story of colonial life in the Massachusetts Bay settlements during the first decade and especially from 1630 to 1636. Starvation, Indian massacre, or attack by wild animals always confronted them. Were it not that they assiduously cultivated friendliness with the Indian, thus securing protection against massacre and winning his co-operation for food supply, it may well be doubted if those adventurous spirits could have survived the almost unspeakable hardship and suffering with which they daily battled. As it was, mortality was large. For two years, almost their only food was shell-fish, acorns and groundnuts. The groundnut is a bulbous formation at the root of a flowering plant, usually maturing rather late in the season. This bulb is not unpleasant to the taste and when cooked may be a useful means of sustenance. Fortunately the ponds and the Charles River abounded in edible fish, shad, bass, alewives, frost-fish and smelts. The situation was greatly relieved by the construction, in 1632, of a weir, just below the lower falls of the river, by means of which many fish were caught. The comfort of the colonists was also greatly promoted by the construction of a mill at the lower falls in 1634, the first use of water-power for the needs of civilized life in New England.

Thus we see that, little by little, the Watertown colony was attaching itself to the soil of the wilderness. For twenty years or more the town was the most populous in the colony, attracting the best in quality and the largest number of settlers. Provisions for comfort and moral advantage were sedulously provided, and on account of these many superior attractions the settlement soon became overpopulated. Hence measures had to be instituted to encourage the establishing of new towns in the outlying country. Newton, Waltham, Sudbury, Arlington, Lexington, Concord and many others are the children of this prolific and intellectual mother.

DESCENDANTS OF WILLIAM GOODRIDGE

NINE GENERATIONS

FIRST GENERATION

1. WILLIAM<sup>1</sup> GOODRIDGE, whose English origin has been reviewed on preceding pages, came from Bury St. Edmunds, County Suffolk, England, where he was probably born May 18, 1605. He was settled in Watertown, Mass., with his wife Margaret and their infant daughter Mary in 1636. In Bury St. Edmunds, as well as can now be ascertained, he was known under the name of Guttridge. In Watertown his name was generally spelled Gutteridge, and in the generations of his descendants immediately following, in Newbury, it became Goodridge, a form that, with few exceptions, has since been followed.

At once, upon his arrival in this country, he became a leading man in the infant community and a considerable owner of property. At the time of his death he owned forty-three acres of land with buildings and personal property. He was admitted to be a freeman May 18, 1642. This right of freeman embraced the obligation of church membership, the privilege of franchise and a share in divisions of unoccupied land and other property thus far held in common.

He was a man of much dignity, winning presence and gentlemanly bearing, and distinguished by kindness in private life; a real leader, whose strong character and optimistic outlook were an uplift in those days of struggle, sacrifice and depression. This leadership was always in sympathy and support among those whose travail had been most severe. Gathering up and interpreting what has been said, it seems reasonably certain that his attitude toward life was a strong sense of leadership, dominated by a desire of helpfulness, neighborly sympathy and feeling of brotherhood. In short, he had all the attributes of a cultivated gentleman with noteworthy lineage and a look outward and upward rather than inward.

In an historical address by the Reverend Frank G. Clark, on the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of the town of Lyndeborough, N. H., there is reference to the Reverend Sewall Goodridge and the statement is made that his ancestor, William Goodridge of Watertown, was admitted to the bar in that place in 1642. As a matter of fact there was no bar in Watertown thus early and the first lawyer was authorized to practice his profession there in 1717, or seventy-five years later. The statement was probably an inference from the known fact that William Goodridge had been a student of English law and had made considerable progress in preparation for a professional career before leaving Bury St. Edmunds. This training gave him an unusual opportunity of usefulness in the colony and doubtless much of the conformity to legal procedure with which Watertown is credited was due to him. Certain it is, that he was often appealed to in the transference of property and the untangling of complicated questions, which only a legal training could accomplish.

He died, in Watertown, March 21, 1647, and was buried in the cemetery near the homestall where he had spent the whole of his colonial life; but the exact location of his grave was long ago hopelessly forgotten. On April 3, 1647, Margaret Goodridge, widow, returned an inventory of the estate of her deceased husband, to the court in Boston, and it was attested by Governor John Winthrop, in the presence of Samuel Thatcher and Thomas Hastings, witnesses. A transcript of this inventory is in the Probate Records of Suffolk County (Mass.), vol. II, folio 32.

"Margaret the wife of the faid William Goodrich did affirme vpon Oath that this is a true Inventory of her faid late hufbands eftate according to her beft knowledge, referving liberty to adde if more come to her knowledge. taken, 15 (2) 1647, Before

"JOHN WINTHROP Governor"

He married, in England, about 1632, MARGARET ———, whose maiden name is not known, and she, with four children, survived him.

In 1650 the widow Margaret Goodridge married John Hull, of Newbury, Mass., and thereafter resided in that town, where she concentrated her interests, selling her holdings in Watertown. The records of Watertown and Newbury, now in custody of the state in Boston, show these transactions as well as the later ones incident to the death of John Hull and his wife.

Considerable effort has been made to ascertain facts upon which to base a clear idea of the personality of Margaret Goodridge, but with indifferent success. If the colonial records were faulty as to the men, they were much more so as to the women. Nevertheless much is beyond doubt. She is conceded to have been quite equal to her husband in family and in ability. She was also a deeply religious woman and it is believed that much of her husband's interest in church life was due to her untiring activity and devotion to the cause for which that stood. She possessed more than usual business capacity, having the faculty of turning every venture into a financial success. William Goodridge left a considerable property at the time of his death, and this, Margaret, by good management, afterwards more than doubled.

John Hull died in Newbury, Mass., February 1, 1670, and Margaret survived him until February 3, 1862. She divided her property equally among her four children, Mary, Jeremiah, Joseph and Benjamin. She had no children by her second husband.

Children of William and Margaret Goodridge:

2. i. MARY, b., in Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolkshire, England, Jan. 8, 1633.
3. ii. JEREMIAH, b., in Watertown, Mass., Mch. 6, 1638.
4. iii. JOSEPH, b., in Watertown, Sept. 29, 1639.
5. iv. BENJAMIN, b., in Watertown, Apr. 11, 1642.

The will of Margaret Hull, widow of William Goodridge and of John Hull was proved in the court of Essex County, Mass. Following is a transcript of the document:—

4. JOSEPH<sup>2</sup> GOODRIDGE (William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Watertown, Mass., September 29, 1639. On May 8, 1645, he was bound an apprentice to William Thaxter, a tradesman in Watertown, and a warm friend of the family, by whom he was trained in accounts and business habits. When he became of age, in 1661, he settled in Newbury, Mass. In 1688, his name was on the tax list for "1 head, 1 house, 8 acres ploughed land, 15 meadow, 10 pasture, 2 horses, 1 yearling, 4 oxen, 4 cows, 3 three-year-olds, 2 two-year-olds and 16 sheep." He died, in Newbury, May 29, 1716. His will, dated April 16, 1716, and proved June 4, 1716, provided that his wife should be cared for by their son Joseph and also that she should be executrix of the estate.

He married, in Newbury, August 28, 1664, MARTHA MOORES, born in Newbury, December 12, 1643, daughter of Edward and Ann Moores. The date of her death is not of record.

5. BENJAMIN<sup>2</sup> GOODRIDGE (William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Watertown, Mass., April 11, 1642. He was the object of unusual care and attachment on the part of his mother, not only because he was the youngest child, but also because, early in life, he manifested those qualities which made his manhood so engaging and noteworthy. He went to Newbury with his mother in 1650. From Newbury he removed to Rowley, Mass., settling on land bought of Jonathan Wheeler in 1685. His house stood about ten rods from the present residence of Gorham D. Tenney. This portion of Rowley was incorporated as Georgetown in 1838. The house which Mr. Goodridge built stood until 1875 when it was removed by Mr. Tenney. Its construction was very substantial, some of its timbers having been of hewn oak, one foot square and forty-five feet long. Its situation on an eminence, surrounded by trees, was admirably adapted to a gentleman's residence in the colonies at this period.

When the writer visited this spot, in the summer of 1909, only the cellar remained, but interest was largely centered in the tragic extermination of the little family, October 23, 1692. "It was Sunday evening on a balmy day in October. The windows were raised for the day was warm, and the family were at evening prayer." A band of Indians, always hostile to the English, was prowling in the neighborhood. Observing the open windows and the exposed condition of the family, their spirit of revenge was at once aflame. "The sun had gone down and the good man was kneeling in petition and thanksgiving to the throne of grace unconscious of danger" when the savages in fiendish abandon killed him by a shot through the window. The mother and two of the children were also killed and scalped. Other members of the family either were not at home or made their escape, except Samuel and Deborah.

There are some erroneous statements as to what happened to the various members of this stricken family and the time seems now to be opportune to give all available facts as to their fate. Benjamin, the first-born, was impressed into the service "to the Eastward" and died in the army unmarried; Joseph, aet. 25, Daniel, aet. 22 and Josiah, aet. nearly 17, either were not at home at the time of the massacre or were fortunate enough to make their escape; the record is silent as to their whereabouts but they were not captured and were not killed; John aet. 10 and Deborah aet. 7 were carried captive to Canada, but were redeemed by the colony the following year. The children massacred were a daughter, name not known, aet. probably 8 years and Ebenezer aet. 4 years.

Benjamin was a devout Christian, intelligent and justice-loving, had a strong character and was greatly esteemed among his neighbors. The bodies of the victims were buried within a few rods of the scene of their fate.

There is no memorial to mark the resting place of these Christian martyrs. Francis Wainwright was appointed administrator of the estate, the papers relating to which may be found in the archives of Essex County, Mass. These include inventory taken June 1, 1693, bonds, affidavits, conveyances and distributions of property among the surviving children.

He married, first, in Ipswich, Mass., September 8, 1663, MARY JORDAN, born in Ipswich, May 16, 1641, daughter of Francis and Jane (Wilson) Jordan. There is uncertainty about the date of Mary's death but it was probably at, or soon after, the death of her youngest son John, in January, 1673-4.

He married, second, June 12, 1675, DEBORAH JORDAN, born in Ipswich, December 4, 1646, sister of his first wife. She died in Newbury, November 28, 1676.

He married, third, in Newbury, November 16, 1678, SARAH CROAD, born in Boston, Mass., May 11, 1652, it is believed, and baptized February 18, 1656, daughter of Richard and Frances (Hersey) Croad. Richard Croad was a merchant in Boston. Sarah was massacred by the Indians October 23, 1692. Jane, widow of Francis Jordan, in her will bearing date December 10, 1689, bequeathed "one sixth part to ye children of deborah late wife of Benjamin Goodridge: namely Benjamin Joseph Daniel & Josiah [of] all ye sd Estate real & psonal not disposed of wch my sayd Husband left & yt I leave & my household stuff & cloathes."

Children, all, except the two youngest, born in Newbury, four by the first wife, ~~one by the second wife~~ and four by the third wife: second wife.

8. PHILIP<sup>3</sup> GOODRIDGE (Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., November 13, 1669, and died in Lunenburg, now Fitchburg, Mass., January 16, 1728. After marriage he settled in Newbury, where his twelve children were born. He moved to Lunenburg in 1724 and was the original proprietor of lot 705, building the third house in the town; was one of the founders of the Congregational Church, and one of its deacons until his death. He was also the first person to be buried in the South Cemetery. He was a man of great administrative ability and in many ways a leader in the troublesome times that beset the early settlers of the town. He was a captain in the colonial service for defense against the Indians and in this service bore a conspicuous part, always in the place of greatest need and greatest danger. He and his wife hold a commanding place as the progenitors of one of the best strains to be found in the family. In all the records their descendants are everywhere found actuated by lofty ideals, representing attainment, character and a high sense of moral and civic responsibility.

He married, in Newbury, April 16, 1700, MEHITABLE WOODMAN, born in Newbury September 20, 1677, daughter of Joshua and Elizabeth (Stevens) Woodman. She died in Lunenburg, February 24, 1755.

Children, all born in Newbury:

9. EDMUND<sup>8</sup> GOODRIDGE (Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., June 24, 1672, and died intestate in Newbury, June 15, 1719. He resided in Newbury, where he and John Noyes, Jr., had permission, in 1708, to construct and operate a saw mill on Cart Creek for twenty-one years. ~~When he died, in 1737,~~ his widow was appointed administratrix. The personal estate was inventoried at £100 and real estate at £543.

He married, in Newbury, November 16, 1701, HANNAH DOLE, born in Newbury, December 5, 1662, daughter of Richard and Sarah (Greenleaf) Dole. She died in Newbury, November 13, 1723. Some authorities have said that this Hannah Dole was the daughter of Dr. John and Mary (Gerrish) Dole, and that she was born in Newbury, August 16, 1677.

Children, all born in Newbury:

- i. EDMUND, b. Sept. 2, 1703; d. in Byfield parish, Newbury, Aug. 11, 1775; m. LYDIA ———.

10. JOSEPH<sup>3</sup> GOODRIDGE (Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., October 21, 1688.

He married, first, MARY ——. He married, second, in Newbury, October 11, 1722, BETHIAH THURLOW, born in Newbury, March 3, 1697-98, daughter of John and Sarah (Howe) Thurlow. Joseph died March 9, 1756. Bethiah married, second, William Fisk, of Rowley, Mass., December 19, 1758.

Children, all born in Newbury, one by the first wife and others by the second wife:

- i. JOANNA.
- ii. ABIGAIL, b. July 15, bapt. July 28, 1723; m., in Newbury, Dec. 22, 1740, BENJAMIN WOODMAN, JR., b. in Newbury, Dec. 19, 1718; int. Oct. 16, 1740.

152 11. JOSEPH<sup>3</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., July 1, 1667, and resided in Byfield parish. He died December 10, 1747, and his wife was appointed administratrix. His estate was inventoried at £343. He married MARY ——.

Children, born in Newbury:

- i. JOSEPH, b. May 10, 1708. He was living in Newbury in 1746. A Joseph Goodridge was one of the grantees of the town of Walpole, N. H., Feb. 13, 1752. As to the history of Joseph, 4, the record is defective, but it seems probable that the Joseph of Walpole in 1752 was this Joseph. Going into the wilderness while a young man would account for defectiveness of record.
- ii. JOANNA, b. June 16, 1710; m. WILLIAM TURNER, b. in Newbury, Dec. 14, 1708. They resided in Byfield parish and had five children. He d. in Byfield, Oct. 9, 1755, and she survived him, it is believed.

153 12. DANIEL<sup>3</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., March 3, 1670, and died there in 1747.

He married, in Newbury, in 1698, intentions, November, 16, MARY ORDWAY, born in Newbury, April 5, 1670, daughter of James and Ann (Emery) Ordway. She died suddenly, February 14, 1754.

Children, all except the second, third and fourth, born in Newbury:

- i. MARY, b. Sept. 19, 1699; d. in infancy.
- ii. DANIEL, twin, b. in Gloucester, Mass., Dec. 9, 1704; taken to Newbury when a lad of six; m. Sarah———. A Daniel Goodridge was b. in Newbury, Nov. 17, 1754, supposed to be a son of this Daniel.
- iii. MARY, b. in Gloucester, Jan. 5, 1707; m. in Newbury, Oct. 12, 1742, JOSEPH CARLTON, a resident of Bradford, Mass.
- iv. HANNAH, b. in Gloucester, July 7, 1708.

13. JOSIAH<sup>3</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass. The record does not state the date of his birth, but, after careful study of all the facts, we are able to fix upon April 10, 1676, as probably correct. His early manhood was spent in Newbury, but at the end of the seventeenth century he moved to Kittery, Mass. Maine was not admitted to the Union as a state until 1820, and the towns now in Maine were then in Massachusetts. Kittery therefore was not out of the state and was distant from Newbury less than twenty-five miles. Some time after his marriage he and his wife confessed the covenant and joined the church. He died in Upper Kittery December 7, 1721.

He married, probably in 1703, MARY ABBOT, born in Upper Kittery, now Berwick, Me., May 5, 1684, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Green) Abbot. After his death his widow married, second, in Upper Kittery, September 23, 1734, Jeremiah Sabins. Thomas Abbot was wealthy when he died and gave all his children liberal allowances. His will was probated in Kittery April 13, 1713, though he died in Boston. He made forty bequests, among them $200 in money to Josiah and Mary, besides other valuable property. Elizabeth, the wife of Thomas Abbot, survived her husband some years, and when she died she appointed Mary (Abbot) Goodridge executrix and her two sons, John and Walter Abbot, executors. She bequeathed to her daughter Mary "1 ox, 1 iron pot, half the swine, except one sow" and other chattels.

Children, all born in Upper Kittery:

23. i. JOHN, b. Jan. 25, 1705.
24. ii. BENJAMIN, b. Jan. 13, 1706.
- iii. MARY, b. Apr. 17, 1708.
- iv. SARAH, b. Dec. 28, 1709.
- v. SUSANNAH, b. June 24, 1712.
- vi. ABIGAIL, b. Sept. 6, 1715.
- vii. ANNA, b. June 20, 1718; m. JOSEPH JOHNSON, in Upper Kittery, Nov. 19, 1741.
- viii. MARGARET, b. Oct. 8, 1720.

156.

14. SAMUEL<sup>3</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., August 15, 1681, or 1682. After his marriage he settled in Newbury, but removed to Boxford, Mass., in 1723. In 1721 he and his wife conveyed to her brothers, Gresham and Nathan Frazer, for £180, all their "right, title and interest" to their father's estate in Newbury. Before their removal to Boxford they purchased in that town for £36, six and one-half acres of salt marsh from John Boynton and from Nathan Peabody for £18, nine and one-half acres of land. They also purchased, April 10, 1723, the farm of Ebenezer Kimball in Boxford, and other minor purchases were made in Boxford. In June, 1742, he sold to his son Benjamin all his estate. While residing in Boxford, Samuel held many responsible positions in church and civil life. There is no record of the settlement of his large estate and it is presumed that he survived his wife and divided his property among his children during his life time. There is no record of the death of either Samuel or his wife Hannah, but by comparison of family incidents it seems probable that he died in Boxford October 20, 1752, and that Hannah died the following year.

Samuel Goodridge has had a numerous progeny. Among them have been Reverend Charles Goodridge Porter, Bangor, Me.; Ambrose Hale Goodridge, publisher of the old Boston Atlas; Honorable Allen Goodridge, Washington, D. C.; Reverend Edward Goodridge, rector of the Episcopal chapel in Geneva, Switzerland, and of the Episcopal Church in Concord, N. H., and many others in nearly every walk of civic and professional life.

He married, in Newbury, June 30, 1710, HANNAH FRAZER, born, in Newbury, August 31, 1692, daughter of Collin and Ann (Stuart) Frazer, of Newbury or Byfield.

Children, the first five born in Newbury and the others in Boxford:

25. i. SARAH, b. Mch. 3, and bapt. Mch. 4, ~~1710~~-11.
26. ii. HANNAH, b. Feb. 1, ~~1712~~-13.

FOURTH GENERATION

He married ABIGAIL LOWELL, born, in Newbury, January 2, 1715, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Hardy) Lowell; intention November 3, 1738, and married January 18, 1739. Benjamin Lowell, a brother of Abigail, possessed a considerable fortune and died unmarried and intestate. His property was divided equally among six heirs, of whom Abigail was one. one was

Children, all born in Newbury:

31. i. JOSEPH, b. Dec. 7, 1739.

16. EZEKIEL<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Jeremiah<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., June 3, 1713, and died in Fitchburg, Mass., August 30, 1777.

He married, in Lunenburg, Mass., December 18, 1744, his ~~first~~ cousin, REBECCA GOODRIDGE, born, in Newbury, April 17, 1723, daughter of Philip and Mehitable (Woodman) Goodridge. She died March 4, 1809. In Early Records of the Town of Lunenburg we find Rebecca written Rebekah Snow. This is doubtless one of the numerous errors found in old records; possibly her middle name may have been Snow, but we have grave doubts.

Children, the two eldest born in Newbury, the other in Lunenburg:

- i. MARY, b. Sept. 23, 1747.
- ii. ELIZABETH, b. Oct. 20, 1751.
- iii. EZEKIEL, b. May 5, 1755. He was in Capt. Manassah Sawyer's co., Col. Nicholas Dike's regt., at Dorchester Heights in 1776. He was a resident of Fitchburg in 1790, but we find no record of his marriage or his death.

17. BENJAMIN<sup>4</sup>. GOODRIDGE (Philip<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>), was born in Newbury, Mass., February 3, 1701, and removed to Lunenburg in 1724. He died, in Lunenburg, April 19, 1775. He held many positions of trust and responsibility in county and state. At different times he was constable, town clerk, justice of the peace and selectman and also performed many other public duties. He was one of the leaders in the formation of Worcester County, incorporated December 16, 1734, and represented his county several times in the legislature. He also commanded a company in the French and Indian war. The historian of Fitchburg says that Captain Philip, Captain Benjamin and Simon Goodridge were among the most prominent men in the state for a century.

He married, in Lunenburg, April 8, 1730, the Reverend John Prentice of Lunenburg officiating, SARAH PHELPS, born in Lancaster, Mass., December 18, 1705, daughter of Edward and Ruth (Andrews) Phelps. She died June 19, 1776.

Children, all born in Lunenburg:

- i. SARAH, b. Jan. 7, 1732; m. ELISHA BIGELOW, b. in Westminster, Mass., Jan. 11, 1728, son of Eleazer and Mary (Fiske) Bigelow; m. by Rev. David Stearns, Dec. 1, 1756; settled in Westminster; eight children.
34. ii. ELIPHALET, b. Mch. 27, 1733.
- iii. OLIVE, b. July 3, 1736; m., in Lunenburg, Dec. 15, 1774, EPHRIAM PIERCE, b. in Lunenburg Mch. 13, 1727, son of Stephen and Esther (Shedd) Pierce; d. in Lunenburg Sept. 7, 1812.
35. iv. DANIEL, b. Aug. 11, 1738.

143-12

- 36. v. BENJAMIN, b. July 1, 1740.
- 37. vi. SEWALL, b. July 7, 1743.
- vii. LOIS, b. Mch. 21, 1745; m. ——— HALE.
- viii. LUCY, b. June 25, 1746; m. MOSES BLACK of Plattsburg.
- 38. ix. OLIVER, b. Oct. 27, 1749.

18. JOHN<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Philip<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., August 6, 1702, and died in Lancaster, Mass., June 1, 1774.

He married, in Newbury, June 21, 1733, EUNICE SCRIPTURE, born in Newbury, June 10, 1707, daughter of Samuel and Mary Scripture. They settled in Rhode Island, where Eunice died. According to Rhode Island records, John married, second, Sarah Brown of Newport November 28, 1755. Much of the Rhode Island portion of the history of this family is erroneous. That John did reside in Rhode Island a short time is possible, but we find no record of a Goodridge in that state, either at the time of the United States census in 1790 or before. There was a John Goodridge in Lancaster in this period. Eunice was born to John and Eunice in Lancaster and baptized June 1, 1747. Mary was another daughter; there was also a son and probably other children. It is probable that Eunice died about 1750, and that John married, not Sarah, but Mary Brown of Lancaster November 28, 1755, by whom was born Thurza, baptized May 13, 1770. At the time of Thurza's birth Mary seems to have been seriously ill and probably died. She confessed the covenant on the day of Thurza's birth. There is evidence to warrant the conclusion that John was married, the third time, to Thankful ———, who died, a widow, in Lancaster, September 20, 1778. There are no certainties about the second and third wives attributed to John, only probabilities.

Children, all born in Lancaster:

- i. EUNICE, bapt. June 1, 1747; by Rev. Mr. Mellen; int. to EDWARD POOR of Worcester, Mass., Oct. 28 and m. Nov. 11, 1769; resided in Lancaster, a widow, with one dau. under sixteen and one dau. over sixteen at the time of the United States census in 1790.
- ii. MARY, m. ELISHA BENNETT of Lancaster, int. Feb. 18, 1775.

- iii. THURZA, probably dau. of Mary, the second wife, bapt., in Lancaster, May 13, 1770.

143-5

19. JOSHUA<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Philip<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born, in Newbury, Mass., February 7, 1707. He resided in Lunenburg, Mass., and performed many public duties most acceptably to the town. He died, in Lunenburg, October 29, 1782.

He married, June 25, 1739, in Lunenburg, Reverend David Stearns officiating, LYDIA STEARNS, born, in Newbury, October 7, 1719, daughter of John and Abigail Stearns. She died March 6, 1805.

Children, all born in Lunenburg:

- i. LYDIA, b. Aug. 1, 1740; m. L. JOSHUA PIERCE Nov. 27, 1766.
- ii. MEHITABLE, b. May 9, 1742.
- iii. RELIEF, b. Mch. 25, 1744; d. Oct. 8, 1746.
39. iv. JOSHUA, b. Aug. 10, 1746.
- v. CATHERINE, b. Aug. 28, 1749; m. THADDEUS CUMMINGS in Fitchburg, July 8, 1773.
- vi. RUTH, b. Sept. 13, 1751; m. SAMUEL WHITING in Fitchburg, Dec. 1, 1772.
40. vii. ABIJAH, b. Feb. 21, 1754.
- viii. ABIGAIL, b. Nov. 24, 1756; m. JOSEPH SMITH in Fitchburg, Nov. 11, 1783.
41. ix. PHINEAS, b. Oct. 17, 1759.

20. PHILIP<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Philip<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born, in Newbury, Mass., July 6 and baptized July 11, 1714. He died in Fitchburg December 18, 1797. He settled on Groton road in the eastern part of the town of Lunenburg. It was given to this family to be large factors in the varied interests of town and church and Philip was no exception. He was in nearly every position of trust, at one time or another, in the gift of the people.

He married, November 3, 1743, JANE BOYNTON of Newbury.

Children, all born in Lunenburg:

- i. ABIGAIL, b. July 31, 1745; m., in Lunenburg, Mar. 12, 1767, ABNER HALE of Winchendon, Mass.

- ii. JANE, b. July 7, 1747; m., in Fitchburg, Sept. 9, 1769,

- ix. JEWITT, b. Sept. 19, 1759; moved to Maine.
- x. ABEL, b. Sept. 19, 1761; lived in Merrimac.
- 43. xi. SIMON, b. Aug. 9, 1763.
- xii. SARAH, b. Feb. 3, 1766; bapt. Feb. 12, 1766; m. ——— FULLER.
- xiii. ELIZABETH, b. July 14, 1768; m., in Fitchburg, Jan. 7, 1794, LEVI STEARNS, b., in Littleton, Mass., Jan. 12, 1765, son of Thomas and Mary (Heald) Stearns. He was a husbandman residing in Lunenburg. They had ten children, one of whom was Thomas, b., in Lunenburg, Apr. 1, 1794. Thomas, Sr., d. in Lunenburg
Dec. 25, 1811; Elizabeth d. Oct. 11, 1810.

21. DAVID<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Philip<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., November 24, and baptized November 25, 1716, and died in Fitchburg, Mass., January 19, 1786. He went to Lunenburg when his father moved to that town and resided in that section which eventually became part of the town of Fitchburg. Throughout his mature life he was one of the leading men of the community. He was chairman of the first board of selectmen of Fitchburg and held the office consecutively until obliged to relinquish it in the discharge of other duties ten years later. He was chosen to "Joyn the first Provincial Congress at Concord 26 Sept. 1774, and again at Cambridge 10 Jan. 1775. John Hancock, President." He was conspicuous in nearly every civic and church matter in the town during his long life.

In the summer of 1748 he had an exciting experience with Indians. While riding on a lonely road in search of a stray cow, he was attacked by a party of hostile Indians, and being unarmed, was obliged to put spurs to his horse. Many shots were fired, but finally he reached a stockade in safety. He lost his hat and, some Indians being captured ten years later, the identical hat reappeared, little the worse. He was captain of a company in the French and Indian War, 1757, and again at Lexington and Bunker Hill in the Revolution.

On January 21, 1768, he was dismissed from the church of Lunenburg, later known as South Fitchburg, to found the church in Fitchburg. There he was made deacon and there he spent the remainder of his life. He lived on the Bemis road in the house now owned by William Baldwin. A portion of the old house is still standing, and the very elms now two hundred years old that shaded him and his family.

Alonzo Pierce Goodridge, Edwin Alonzo Goodridge, Henry Augustus Goodridge and George Edgar Goodrich are all descended from David Goodridge, and the historian of Fitchburg adds: "while they do not all spell their names correctly, they are all willing to trace their lineage to a distinguished ancestor."

He married, first, in Ipswich, Mass., October 8, 1741, ELIZABETH MARTIN, born in Ipswich, September 17, 1717, daughter of John and Jane (Durgin) Martin. Her dismissal from the Chebacco church of Ipswich was in that year. She died, in Fitchburg, in March, 1764. All references show her to have been a superior and lovable woman.

He married, second, May 21, 1765, LYDIA (DAVIS) WOOD, born, in Harvard, Mass., September 7, 1724, daughter of Ebenezer and Sarah Davis and widow of John Wood. Her first husband died in 1758. Her gravestone in Littleton bears this inscription: "In memory of Mrs. Lydia Wood, wife of John Wood and late wife to Dea. David Goodridge of Fitchburg, who died Jan'y 13, 1792, aged 67 years, 4 months and six days."

27. SAMUEL<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., April 19, and baptized April 26, 1719. He settled in Wenham, Mass., but after 1760 lived in Beverly, Mass. He was an engineer and land surveyor, a man of affairs, and accumulated a large fortune for that period, his estate being inventoried at £8,813 5s. He held in Wenham the offices of town clerk and selectman. He was buried in Beverly, February 24, 1776.

He married, first, in Wenham, May 6, 1742, the Reverend John Warren officiating, LYDIA CUE, born in Wenham March 21, 1723, daughter of Robert and Mary (Porter) Cue. She is believed to have died in Beverly in 1764.

He married, second, in Danvers, the widow, SARAH (PERLEY) PUTNAM, born May 12, 1716, daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Goodhue) Perley of Boxford, and widow of Jonathan Putnam, who died in December, 1762. The intentions of Samuel Goodridge and Sarah Putnam were February 12, 1768, in the Danvers records and February 14, 1768, in the Beverly records.

Children, all by first wife, and all born in Wenham:

- i. ABIGAIL, b. July 20, 1744.

28. BENJAMIN<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Boxford, Mass., March 15, and was baptized March 19, 1720-21. He received his father's farm by deed June 15, 1742, and resided on it until May 3, 1784, when he sold the homestead to Daniel Gould and removed to Bald Hill, in the southern part of the town. After a few months he moved to Middleton and finally to Westminster, Vt., in 1789, where his son Benjamin was already established. He inherited a gift for leadership and fortune building, held many public offices and was on nearly all the commissions from the various towns appointed to procure improvements, in government and administrative measures, among which was the commission for Essex County to provide measures for the detection and punishment of thieves and robbers. He was one of a committee of five to erect the third meeting-house in Beverly in 1770. It was placed on the site of the second meeting-house, taken down to make room for the new one. Meantime services were held under a large tree in front of the house of the Reverend Joseph Champney, the minister. The tower at the west end was fifteen feet square and the porch at the east end was fourteen feet square. There were sixty pews in the body and twenty-seven in the gallery. The cost was £1,300. The new meeting-house was so planned as to provide storage for gunpowder, the safest place, since there were no fires in the building. With his three eldest sons he fought in the battle of Bunker Hill.

He built a house for himself in Boxford, about 1742.

It was located some distance from the main thoroughfare of the town, and tradition has it that the reason given by him for establishing his home so far removed from the road was "to escape the numerous demands for cider by cider-drinkers who frequented that way." In May, 1784, Daniel Gould bought the house, restoring and enlarging it, and it is now, at the opening of the twentieth century, occupied by Dr. Francis Stevens.

He married, June 24, 1746, MARY REDINGTON, born in Boxford, August 16, 1724, daughter of Thomas and Hephzibah (Perley) Redington. She died in Boxford, in 1783. He died in Westminster, Vt., April 29, 1805.

Children, all born in Boxford:

56.
  - i. BENJAMIN, b. July 9, 1746.
  - ii. ALLEN, b. Jan. 13, 1749. He was in the battle of Bunker Hill, after which the statement is made "no further record." This is an error, for he undoubtedly migrated to Amherst, N. H., with his brother Thomas shortly after Bunker Hill. For a time both brothers seem to have fallen out of sight until we find Allen a volunteer in Capt. Nathan Ballard's co., Abial Abbot in command of two companies from Amherst, N. H., in the expedition against Burgoyne. He was at Ticonderoga and Bennington in 1777, and also in the expedition under Gen. William Whipple sent to attack the British in Rhode Island in the summer of 1778. In this expedition he was a sergeant in Capt. Josiah Grosby's co., Col. Moses Nichol's regt. He lived in that part of Amherst which was finally set off as Mt. Vernon, having signed the several petitions to this end, 1780-84. In the census of 1790 he is down as having three boys and five girls. Apparently the mother was dead.
57.
  - iii. LEVI, b. Feb. 15, 1750-51.
  - iv. ASAHIEL, b. June 19, 1753. Nothing is known of his history except that he sold land in Boxford in 1784, was in the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill, and was a Revolutionary pensioner.
  - v. HEPHZIBAH, b. July 4, 1755; m. TIMOTHY PERKINS, JR., of Middleton, Mass., Oct. 21, 1779; settled in Hardwick, Vt.
58.
  - vi. THOMAS, b. May 29, 1758.
  - vii. OLIVE, b. June 15, 1761; lived with her cousin Benjamin in Westminster; d. unm. Oct. 8, 1830.

- viii. HANNAH, b. Mch. 14, bapt. Mch. 31, 1765; lived with her brother Thomas until his death, and then with her nephew Draco; d. unm. June 4, 1800.

156-7

29. MEHITABLE<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Boxford, Mass., March 12, 1724, and baptized March 31, 1725.

She married, in Boxford, June 1, 1747, JOHN BARKER, born in Andover, Mass., August 15, 1721. They settled in North parish, Andover. Lieut. John Barker died in Andover July 19, 1792, and Mehitable was living, his widow, in 1797.

Children (Barker), all born in Bradford:

- i. JOANNA, b. Mch. 23, 1748; m. EPHRAIM CHANDLER of Bradford, Mass., Aug. 25, 1772; d. before 1797.
- ii. EUNICE, b. Mch. 9, 1749; m. PELATIAH LAKEMAN of Boxford; pub. in Boxford May 7, 1769; resided in Boxford and Essex, N. H.; d. before 1797.
- iii. MEHITABLE, twin, b. Sept. 27, 1752; m. DUDLEY CARLTON of Bradford, in Boxford, Feb. 10, 1776.
- iv. JOHN, b. Sept. 27, 1752; d., in Andover, Aug. 26, 1756.
- v. DEBORAH, b. Aug. 25, 1754; d., after 1832, in Andover, unm.
- vi. ISAAC, b. July 17, 1756; living in 1799.
- vii. SUSANNAH, b. Aug. 16, 1758; m. MOSES FESSENDEN of Newbury, Nov. 30, 1777; living in Boston in 1797.
- viii. JOHN, b. Oct. 22, 1760; d. Feb. 16, 1763.
- ix. SARAH, b. Jan. 9, 1763; residing in Andover, unm., in 1832.
- x. JOHN, b. in Andover and bapt. in West Boxford Feb. 24, 1765; resided in Andover and d., unm., Nov. 25, 1799.
- xi. BETSEY, b. May 7, 1771; resided in Andover and d., unm., in Dec., 1832.

30. JOHN<sup>4</sup> GOODRIDGE (Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Boxford August 24 and baptized August 31, 1729. He died in Grafton, Vt., March 6, 1815. After marriage he and his wife resided in Boxford, but attended church in Rowley, now Georgetown. In 1757 they removed to Marblehead, Mass., and in 1773 to Keene, N. H. Almost upon his arrival in New Hampshire he was one of the signers of a petition for better protection of fishing in the province, May, 1773. In 1783, he bought land in Grafton, Vt., and the following year settled upon it. This tract is still known as

"The Old Goodridge Place." John and Abigail were among the original settlers when the town was called Tomlinson. It was incorporated as Grafton soon after. The land comprising "The Old Goodridge Place" was originally taken up by Simon Tuttle of Littleton, Mass., and by him sold to Abner Sawyer of Keene, who sold it to John Goodridge.

"KNOW ALL MEN by these presents that I Abner Sawyer of Keene in the State of New Hampshire and County of Cheshire yeoman for and in consideration of the sum of sixty five pounds nineteen shillings and eleven pence lawful silver money of said State to me in hand before the delivery hereof well and truly paid by John Goodridge of Keene aforesaid yeoman the receipt whereof I do hereby acknowledge have given granted bargained and sold and by these presents do give grant bargain sell alien convey and confirm unto the said John Goodridge his heirs and assigns forever Two certain lots of land in the township of Tomlinson in the County of Windham and the State called by the name of Vermont viz. "THOS BAKER, Just Peace"

He married, November 28, 1751, ABIGAIL HALE, Reverend John Seccombe officiating, born in Boxford, April 8, 1730, daughter of Ambrose and Joanna (Dodge) Hale of Harvard, Mass. She died in Grafton, Vt., March 3, 1821.

The Hale family is interesting on account of its many noteworthy members. Among them have been: the Honorable Eugene Hale, United States senator from Maine for many years; the Honorable Artemus Hale, member of congress for several terms, and the Honorable Robert G. Hale, judge regent of New York University and special counsel of the United States before the claims court resulting from the civil war. The Hale family is also remarkable for its longevity, perhaps in this respect exceeding that of most other families distinguished in our history.

Children, the first three born in Boxford and the other six in Marblehead:

- i. JOANNA, b. Dec. 8, 1752; name changed by her father to Hannah; m. (1), in Marblehead, Mass., Mch. 15, 1781, NEHEMIAH S. ## FIFTH GENERATION

31. JOSEPH<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Jeremiah<sup>4</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., December 7, 1739. He was a draper and resided in Newbury, where he was a deacon in the church, removing late in life to West Newbury. He served in the Revolution: in Captain Thomas Noyes' company, which marched to Cambridge April 20, 1775; in Captain Stephen Jenkins' company, Colonel Jacob Gerrish's regiment; marched to Claverack on the Hudson in a regiment detached from Suffolk and Essex Counties to reinforce the army under Washington; in Captain Francis Meghill's company, Colonel Nathaniel Wade's Essex County regiment, July 8, 1780, to October, 1780. This Essex regiment was from Newbury, Rowley and Ipswich and enlisted to reinforce the Continental army for three months. Other patriotic services are to his credit. He was a United States pensioner until his death, in West Newbury.

He married, first, in Newbury, March 17, 1763, MARY BAYLEY, born in Newbury, June 9, 1741, daughter of Moses and Mary (Ordway) Bayley. He married, second, August 28, 1796, SARAH LYDIA BROWN, of Hamilton, Mass.

Children, all by first wife, the three eldest born in Newbury and the others in West Newbury:

- i. JOSEPH, b. Apr. 23, 1763; m., in Newbury, Mch. 17, 1791, SUSANNAH PLUMMER, b., in Newbury, Dec. 25, 1770. Children, all born in Newbury:

133-33

32. EZEKIEL<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Jeremiah<sup>4</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., September 13, 1744. He was a soldier in the Revolution and died in the service. His record, as given in the Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors in the War of the Revolution, was:

Goodridge Ezekiel, Amesbury (also given New Boston). Lieutenant, Captain Eliphalet Bodwell's company, Colonel Edward Wigglesworth's regiment; pay abstract for mileage from Albany home in December, 1776; warrant allowed in Council March 12, 1777; also, Lieutenant, Colonel Michael Jackson's regiment; Continental Army pay accounts for service from January, 1777, to October 7, 1777; reported killed October 7, 1777; also, account of the seven years' half pay allowed agreeable to resolve of August 24, 1780, to widows and orphans of officers who were killed or died in service; half pay allowed to October 7, 1784.

On November 6, the town of Amesbury voted "to give Mrs. Goodridge, widow of Captain Ezekiel Goodridge, who was killed at the taking of Burgoyne, twelve pounds as a bounty for last year's service." Captain Goodridge was originally from Haverhill, but moved to Amesbury, and his stone in the East Parish burying ground gives dates and other details. The inscription on this stone is:

"In memory of Lieut. Ezekiel Goodridge, who was killed at the capture of Burgoyne Oct. 7, 1777, Æt. 37. and of Molly his wife who died March 29, 1814, Æt. 65, and of 6 of their children. Elizabeth died Mar. 1, 1778; Ezekiel died Sept. 13, 1777, Æt. 11. In memory of Molly, died March 9, 1777, Æt. 3. Nancy died Aug. 16, 1778, Æt. ~~16~~<sup>10</sup>. Abigail died Nov., 1786, Æt. 14."

He married, in Newbury, December 23, 1765, MOLLY MORSS, born in Newbury, February 6, 1748. She died March 29, 1814.

Children, all born in Amesbury:

- i. ELIZABETH, d. Mch. 1, 1778.
- ii. NANCY, b. 1768; d. Aug. 16, 1778.
- iii. EZEKIEL, b. 1776; d. Sept. 13, 1777.

33. ABIEL<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Jeremiah<sup>4</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury, Mass., May 23, 1750. He served in the Revolution with credit.

He married, in Haverhill, Mass., October 25, 1775, RACHEL FOLLANSBEE, born in Haverhill October 10, 1756; daughter of Moses and Priscilla (Heath) Follansbee. The Follansbees had long been distinguished in English history. Rachel was in the fifth generation in this country, her line being Thomas<sup>1</sup>, who came from England about 1650, Thomas<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>3</sup>, Moses<sup>4</sup>.

After marriage, in 1775, he settled in Haverhill, soon removing to Newbury, where he resided until ~~1788~~, when he removed again to Enfield, Grafton County, N. H. Through this county and across the Connecticut River into Orange County, Vt., Abiel and his wife had a numerous progeny. Lebanon, Enfield, Canaan, Grafton and Ware in New Hampshire; Williamstown, Brookfield, Chelsea, Bradford and Orange in Vermont, each became the abiding place of one or more of the families descended from this notable couple. In giving the birthplace and residence of the different individuals in this history often only the county is stated because the particular town is not known, but it was always either Grafton County, N. H., or Orange County, Vt.

Children, the eldest born in Haverhill, Mass., the next ~~five~~ in Newbury, Mass., and the ~~five~~ youngest in Enfield, N. H.:

- 66. i. WILLIAM, b. Oct. 25, 1776.
- 67. ii. EZEKIEL, b. Mch. 4, 1778.
- iii. FOLLANSBEE, b. Dec. 18, 1779.
- iv. NATHANIEL, b. Aug. 4, 1781.
- 68. v. ELIPHALET, b. Mch. 5, 1783.
- vi. ABIEL, b. Aug. 15, 1786.
- vii. JEREMIAH, b. Feb. 19, 1789.
- 69. viii. JOSEPH, b. Sept. 7, 1792.
- ix. JOSHUA, b. 1794; living in 1865, æt. 71.
- x. SALLY, living in 1865; m. WILLIAM WELSH.
- xi. BETSEY, unm.

34. ELIPHALET<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremia<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lunenburg, Mass., March 27, 1733, and died March 27, 1806. With his wife he settled in Winchendon, Mass., about 1774, having previously lived in Lunenburg or Fitchburg. The United States census of 1790 gives his family.

He married, in Lunenburg, December 29, 1763, REBECCA STEARNS, born in Winchendon, Mass., May 24, 1737, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Stevens) Stearns. In The Early Records of the Town of Lunenburg her name is given Rebecca Snow, but this is not in agreement with the family records. His father, Benjamin Goodridge, performed the ceremony.

Children, the six eldest born in Fitchburg and the others in Winchendon:

- i. SARAH, b. Oct. 15, 1764; d. Mch. 6, 1768.
- ii. REBEKAH, b. Mch. 17, 1766; d. Mch. 4, 1768.
- 70. iii. SAMUEL PAYSON, b. Jan. 23, 1768.

- viii. SEWALL, b. July 7, 1779.
- ix. TWINS, b. Dec. 13, 1777; d. the same day.

143-14

35. DANIEL<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lunenburg, Mass., August 11, 1738. The date of his death is not of record. He was one of the original members of the church formed in Lunenburg. He and his brother Oliver were members of Captain Jacob Gerrish's company, Colonel Moses Little's regiment, of the Revolutionary Army, and were at Lexington and Bunker Hill. This regiment crossed Charlestown Neck under a murderous fire from the British ships and batteries, but finally reached the scene of battle before the British charge; some were at the redoubt, some at the breastworks and still others at the rail fence. The regiment was in the entire engagement. Forty were killed and many more wounded.

He married, in Winchendon, Mass., October 30, 1766, HANNAH LORD, born in Winchendon, July 1, 1744, daughter of Jonathan and Sarah Lord. She died, in Fitchburg, Mass., February 7, 1820.

Children, all born in Winchendon:

- i. DANIEL, b. Aug. 23, 1769; m. NANCY (last name not in record), b. in Moravia, Cayuga County, N. Y., Aug. 2, 1769. Daniel migrated to Moravia shortly after 1800. Tradition tells us that he purchased a considerable tract of land, upon which he settled and raised a family. He was followed in a few years, probably in the summer of 1808, by two brothers, Jonathan and Lowell. To the former he sold a tract of 103 acres of land in the township of Sempronius, adjoining that of Moravia. The deed is recorded in Auburn, the county seat, and dated Nov. 21, 1808. In the Old Friends Burying Ground in Moravia, called the Quaker Church Burying Ground, are two inscriptions, stating that Nancy Goodridge d. Feb. 19, 1844, æt. 74 y., 6 m., 17 d. and Daniel Goodridge, June 14, 1843, æt. 73 y., 9 m., 21 d. It has not been possible to find a record of his children.
- ii. ELIJAH, b. Nov. 16, 1771; d. unm. July 5, 1793.
- iii. SARAH, b. Mch. 13, 1774; m. ISAAC WILLARD, of Winchendon, Mch. 15, 1798; d., in Winchendon, Aug. 19, 1845.

37 SEWALL<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lunenburg, Mass., July 7, 1743. He was a minister of the Congregational church and was graduated from Harvard College in the class of 1764. He was the second minister to be called by the church in Lyndeborough, N. H., December 24, 1767, at an annual salary of £33 6s 8d., for a period of five years and a gift of land, as was the custom of churches in New England at that time. After some negotiation, the amount of land was fixed at two hundred acres. He was then in his twenty-fifth year and immediately took his young bride to their new home, being ordained September 7, 1768.

An interesting incident is given by Mrs. Samuel William Pond of Minneapolis, Minn. (Frances Irene Goodridge), daughter of Benjamin, 7, and a great-granddaughter of the Reverend Sewall Goodridge. The new minister was the owner of a one-horse chaise, and in it he drove with his bride across country from Danvers to his new charge, a distance of seventy-five miles. Just outside of Lyndeborough they were met by a party from the church, who unhitched the horse and drew the couple to their new home. Mrs. Pond says, "The chaise was kept at our old home until sometime after my father died, when an uncle, who I am afraid had little regard for its antiquity, or sacred early associations, wishing to sell a horse, used it (the chaise) as a means of conveyance to some far distant place and left it among strangers. Of course it was never returned. I had always thought of the old chaise as among my earliest and dearest memories." The old house of Benjamin Goodridge, yet in the family, built in 1777 by John Clark, the father of Mrs. Benjamin<sup>6</sup> Goodridge, and also,—though not now in the family,—that of Reverend Sewall Goodridge, are still standing, fitting and venerated memorials of old Lyndeborough and its beloved minister.

It has been said that Reverend Sewall Goodridge received a doctor's degree towards the end of his life, but it has not been possible to verify this statement. Be that as it may, history awards to him an unique personality, with the rare combination of strong, decisive character, tempered by sane judgment and unflinching gentleness and assiduity in the discharge of his manifold duties. He was a man of rare gifts both intellectually and morally, and with these he had also an almost untiring capacity for work, of which there was need enough during his arduous life. He was greatly beloved, as is shown by letters from the army, in those troublous times. While he did not relinquish his ministerial office during the War of the Revolution, he was an ardent patriot and was frequently called in behalf of those going to the war as well as of those returning, and not infrequently to perform the last rites for some unfortunate patriot brought home for burial. He never had but the one pastorate, forty and a half years in duration, and he died "in the harness" March 14, 1809.

He married, in Danvers, Mass., February 7, 1769, PHEBE PUTNAM, born in Salem Village, afterward Danvers, November 27, 1751, daughter of Archelaus and Mehitable (Putnam) Putnam, her parents being cousins. Phebe Putnam was also a cousin of General Israel Putnam of Revolution fame. She survived her husband, dying June 23, 1832.

39. JOSHUA<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Joshua<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lunenburg, Mass., August 10, 1746. He lived in Lunenburg, in Fitchburg, Mass., and in Skowhegan, Me. About 1785 the family moved to Bingham, Me., one of the first in that town. When Bingham was to be incorporated, he was first to sign the petition to the legislature, three of his sons, Levi, John and Abijah also signing. The first town meeting was held in his house, he was the first town treasurer and a Revolutionary soldier. He died December 20, 1815, his death caused by sorrow from a fatal accident to his grandson Joshua, a lad of fourteen. In the Bingham records the name appears as Goodridge and Goodrich, all the grandchildren spelling the name in the latter form.

He married, in Lunenburg, December 28, 1769, intentions September 30 of the same year, ELIZABETH PHELPS, born in Lancaster, Mass., December 6, 1744, daughter of Asahel and Elizabeth Phelps. She died March 18, 1840.

45. EBENEZER<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (David<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lunenburg May 1, 1749. He married BEULAH CHILDS, daughter of Elisha Childs, ~~in Fitchburg, in 1774~~, and settled in Templeton, Mass. The house which he built is still standing. He died, in Templeton, September 24, 1824, and his widow died in Lancaster, Mass., December 4, 1835.

Children, all born in Templeton:

- i. ELIZABETH, b. Apr. 4, 1775; d. Sept. 8, 1776.
- ii. WILLIAM, b. July 21, 1777; m. HANNAH HEALD Feb. 25, 1822. They settled in Milton, Mass. While some attempts at organ building were made in New England as early as 1745, William Goodridge is now regarded as the pioneer in successful construction of that instrument. His first effort was for the Catholic church in Federal Street, Boston. Later he became associated with his brother-in-law, Thomas Appleton, and at one time was with his brother Ebenezer. He was a man of mechanical genius and great constructive ability. Such was his success that for many years he built nearly every organ in Massachusetts. In New England alone over one hundred and fifty organs are credited to these three men. He died in East Cambridge Sept. 15, 1833. There were no children.
- iii. LUCY, b. Oct. 8, 1779; d. unm. June 11, 1831.
77. iv. EBENEZER, b. Nov. 7, 1782.
- v. DAVID, b. Apr. 19, 1785; m. SUSAN WEST Nov. 18, 1813; d. Nov. 22, 1850. He settled in Templeton to practice medicine. He was a hard-working student, taking advanced standing in school and in other ways showed abilities of a high order. At one time he taught school in Shippensburg, Pa., also studying medicine. In connection with his practice he operated a farm in Lancaster, but in 1835 removed to Rockford, Ill., where he continued his profession until his death.
- vi. SARAH, b. Feb. 5, 1788; d. in Boston Dec. 28, 1833. She early manifested those mental qualities and that individuality which rendered her talented brothers so conspicuous. With aptitude as an artist, she specialized and became famous as a miniature painter, her reputation being widely extended, not only in this country but also in Europe.
- vii. BEULAH, b. Dec. 20, 1790; d. May 21, 1880; m. THOMAS APPLETON July 5, 1812. Thomas Appleton became famous as an organ builder and was widely known throughout New England.

He married, May 26, 1774, intentions May 7, PHEBE WALKER of Fitchburg.

Children, all born in Fitchburg:

78. i. ASAPH, b. Dec. 8, 1774.
- ii. MEHITABLE, b. July 8, 1777; d. in infancy.
- iii. HANNAH, b. Dec. 26, 1779.
- iv. SEWALL, b. Sept. 28, 1781.
- v. LUTHER, b. Apr. 23, 1785.
- vi. PETER, b. Sept. 9, 1788.
- vii. PHEBE, b. May 5, 1790; d. in infancy.
- viii. HARRIET, b. Mch. 14, 1792; m. LUTHER PARKER, b. in Fitchburg. Here is a discrepancy in date and name. The family says Harriet m. Luther Parker, while the town record says Luther Gould.

47. JOHN<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (David<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lunenburg, Mass., June 17, 1755. He died in Leominster, Mass., April 26, 1834, and was buried in the South Cemetery in Fitchburg.

He was in Captain Ebenezer Bridges' company at the siege of Boston and in Captain John Joslin's company at Bennington and Saratoga in 1777. His grandson, Alonzo Pierce Goodridge, used to tell with great zest of the shooting away of his powder horn at the battle of Bunker Hill. This has been questioned, but after an examination of all attainable evidence we cannot avoid the conclusion of its correctness. He was at the siege of Boston, but Bunker Hill must be regarded as a preliminary incident of the siege. The battle was on June 17, and Washington assembled his army about the city early in July. He was made a captain in the Massachusetts militia April 24, 1794, and promoted to be major on the thirtieth of the same month.

He married, first, in Lunenburg, October 14, 1778, DESIRE NICHOLS, born in Leominster, Mass., February 14, 1755, daughter of Israel and Lucy Nichols. She died in Leominster February 6, 1788.

He married, second, PRUDENCE BUTLER, born in Leominster July 9, 1789; she died in Leominster, without issue, November 13, 1836.

Children, all born in Fitchburg:

79. i. JOHN, b. June 17, 1780.
 ii. MEHITABLE, b. Aug. 29, 1782; m. (1), in Groton, Mass., Nov. 8, 1803, EBENEZER CHAMPNEY, b. in New Ipswich, N. H., July 19, 1780, son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Parker) Champney. He d., in New Ipswich, May 18, 1820. She m. (2), ISAAC BIGELOW of Leominster, July 25, 1824. She d. June 24, 1840, and was buried in New Ipswich by the side of her first husband and the three Champney children, who d. young.

48. OLIVER<sup>3</sup> GOODRIDGE (Enoch<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Newbury June 24, and baptized July 2, 1758. He died, in Newbury, a Revolutionary pensioner, September 26, 1833. He responded to the Lexington Alarm, in Captain Gerrish's company, when only seventeen years old, and also served in Captain Paul Moody's company December 21, 1776.

He married ELIZABETH WOODMAN probably about 1793. The record gives two Olivers, born respectively in Newbury July 29, 1732, and June 24, 1758, who married Ruth Woodman. The record is probably in error, and the second Ruth was really Elizabeth.

Children, all born in Newbury:

- i. ADAM, b. July 8, 1795; d. the same day.
 ii. WILLIAM, b. Nov. 11, 1797.
 iii. RUTH, b. Jan. 25, 1799.

52. JOHN<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Josiah<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Upper Kittery, Me., June 1, 1731. With his younger brother Joshua he was mentioned as in Berwick, in 1770. In the same year they removed to Alfred, and in 1775 to the Cove. They were the first blacksmiths in this part of the state and were widely known for their skill in making and tempering edged tools so much in demand in this early time. There is a tradition that John required each of his sons to learn a trade.

He married in Upper Kittery, May 30, 1758, MARTHA HOLMES, the Reverend Jacob Foster officiating.

Children, all born in Alfred, Me.:

82. i. JONATHAN, b. Sept. 17, 1771.
- ii. JOHN, b. Mch. 17, 1773. He settled in Alfred, York Co., Me., but in 1805 removed to Industry with his brother Jonathan, settling on a farm near Goodridge Corner and near his brother. The History of Alfred says he removed from Industry in a few years, and his new residence is not known. It is probable that he was living in New Portland, Somerset Co., Me., in 1822. This town was incorporated in 1808, and on the old map surveys is No. 2 of the second range, twelve miles west of the Kennebec River, sixteen miles north of Farmington, and eight miles northwest from West Mills. He married, published Oct. 5, 1799, HANNAH GOODWIN, b. in Shapleigh, York Co., Me., May 4, 1778, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Shockley) Goodwin. Children, the three eldest b. in Alfred and the two youngest in Industry: 1. Henry, b. Mch. 30, 1800; 2. Mary, b. 53. JOSHUA<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Josiah<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Upper Kittery April 7, 1749. When he went to Alfred, in 1770, he was not married, but it is believed that he returned to Upper Kittery, where he married, had a family and remained until his death. The name of his wife is not known.

Child:

- 83. i. JOSHUA, b. in Upper Kittery, Jan. 5, 1781.

54. ROBERT<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Samuel<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Wenham, Mass., June 18, 1746, and died in Beverly, Mass., October 13, 1838.

He married, in Beverly, April 2, 1767, HANNAH GROVES.

55. SAMUEL<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Samuel<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Wenham, Mass., May 27, 1748. He was a lieutenant in Captain Rogers' company, Massachusetts line, promoted to be captain and commanded a company in General Henry Dearborn's brigade of Arnold's expedition to Quebec in 1775. Captain Goodridge was also in the campaign of 1779. He subscribed one share toward building the Essex bridge in Beverly and died there, March 27, 1820, of asthma. He was a member of the committee of correspondence and public safety for Essex County, and otherwise prominent.

He married, first, in Danvers, Mass., October 15, 1772, ELIZABETH PAGE, daughter of Jeremiah and Sarah Page. She died, in Beverly, December 28, and was buried December 30, 1805. The United States census of 1790 gives the family of Samuel as consisting of two males over 16, two males under 16, and six females, while the record gives 1-2-6. The time between his marriage and the birth of his daughter Elizabeth was three and one-half years. It seems probable that a son was born in this interval, but there is no record.

He married, second, May 11, 1806, ANNA KETTLE; no children by second wife.

Children, all born in Beverly:

- i. ELIZABETH, b. Oct. 17, 1773; d. June 25, 1774.

56. BENJAMIN<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Boxford, Mass., July 9, 1746. He settled in Coxhall, Mass., now Lyman, Me., moved to Keene, N. H., in 1776, and finally to Westminster, Vt., in 1781, settling upon a tract of land about six miles from the Connecticut River. With his father and four brothers he was at the battle of Bunker Hill. In Westminster, in 1909, some trace of the homestead of this family still remained. The cellar where the house had stood was marked by a depression, a heap of stone and a tumble-down chimney. About the place were ancient apple trees and old lilac and rose bushes. A little further on was the somewhat better marked situation of the house of Benjamin's eldest son, Alpheus. Benjamin was a stalwart in Christian devotion and high ideals of life. He was a United States pensioner until his death, September 8, 1805.

He married, first, in Methuen, Mass., January 8, 1771, HANNAH PINGREY, born in Methuen December 28, 1749, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Carlton) Pingrey. She died, in Westminster, February 12, 1790, and was buried February 14.

He married, second, in Westminster, September 20, 1790, POLLY COOPER, who died in Putney, Vt., October 26, 1847.

Children, seven by the first wife and three by the second wife, the first and second born in Coxhall, the third and fourth in Keene, and the others in Westminster:

1.5.6:6.3.

57. LEVI<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Boxford, Mass., February 15, 1751. He resided in Boxford until 1777. Then, with his family, he moved to Andover, Mass., thence, in 1778, to Westminster, Vt., where they remained till 1798, when they removed to Hardwick, Vt., where descendants of the family still reside. He lived but a short time in Hardwick, moving back to Westminster and leaving his place in the care of his sons. He died in Westminster, it is thought, May 16, 1827, and after his death his widow returned to her children in Hardwick. He was a farmer and was active in church and civil life, being one of the founders of the first Congregational church of Hardwick and holding many positions of public trust. He was at Lexington and Bunker Hill and was a United States Revolutionary pensioner.

He married, in Boxford, November 23, 1773, MARY HALE, born in Boxford May 27, 1754, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Jackson) Hale.

Children:

90. i. LEVI, b. in Boxford Dec. 17, 1774.
91. ii. ASAHIEL, b. in Boxford in 1776.

58. THOMAS<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Boxford, Mass., May 29, 1758. He was not quite seventeen years of age when he was in the battles of Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill. After that he dropped out of sight in Massachusetts, not reappearing until the time of his marriage, in 1788. Probably those thirteen years were spent with his brother Allen in Amherst, N. H., where he enlisted in Captain William Barron's company July 16, 1776, to join the expedition to Canada. Colonel Isaac Wyman was in command of the regiment. He also was active in other services in Amherst. He was a Revolutionary pensioner. After his marriage he was settled on a farm at Middleton, Mass., where he lived till 1800, when he moved to Walpole, N. H., and a year or two later to the adjoining town of Westmoreland. He died in Westmoreland June 8, 1815, after which his widow continued to live on the place with her son Draco.

He married, in Danvers, Mass., November 3, 1788, BETSEY SWINNINGTON, born in Danvers September 8, 1762.

60. MOSES<sup>5</sup> GOODRIDGE (John<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Marblehead, Mass., October 9, 1764. He settled in Grafton, Vt., on his father's farm, which he purchased in 1786, and thereafter kept his parents living with him. The lives of Moses and his brother ~~Abiah~~ in Grafton were noteworthy for activity and helpfulness in all the social and religious affairs of the town, and are still a tradition among the older inhabitants. But the activity of Moses was equaled by his modesty, not a usual combination. For many years he was clerk of the Baptist church, and the records during his incumbency are a model of neatness and exactness. In 1823, being elected a deacon, in the language of the record he "Flatly refused to serve." Both he and his wife were members of this church until their death. After the death of his wife he gave the care of the place to his son-in-law Captain James Cutter, but soon it was rented to Sylvanus Burgess, and eventually, in 1836, was bought for him by his father, Captain Barzella Burgess.

The deed by which John Goodridge conveyed "The Old Goodridge Farm" to his son Moses is on record in the register's office of Grafton County:

Note of Correction.

In the foregoing generation, the line of descent of Nos. 34 to 47, both inclusive, is William<sup>1</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, not William<sup>1</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>. There has been conflict of opinion regarding the parentage of Philip. Some family tradition has held that he was the son of Jeremiah, and that conclusion Dr. Goodridge was inclined to accept. But the burden of evidence—that is the inscription on his gravestone and the vital records of Newbury kept by Henry Snow, the town clerk—is that he was the son of Joseph. The Vital Records of Newbury, published by the Essex Institute, Salem, Mass., so gives it. In the succeeding generations that line of descent of Philip should be observed.

SIXTH GENERATION

71. JONATHAN<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Daniel<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Winchendon, Mass., March 2, 1785. With his brother Lowell he followed their elder brother Daniel into New York state, probably in the summer of 1808. The brothers made the journey on horseback from Winchendon to Moravia, N. Y., a distance of about 300 miles. As they had but one horse, they took turns in riding, which was slow business. This must have been before November 21, 1808, for on that date Daniel deeded to his brother Jonathan 103 acres of land in the town of Sempronius, in Cayuga County. This deed is recorded in Auburn, the county seat. The brothers well maintained the honesty, high character and ideals which distinguished their great-grandfather Philip of Fitchburg, Mass. Deeply religious, enterprising and thrifty, they accumulated property and made a lasting impression in central New York.

He married, BETSEY (ELIZABETH) FULLER, born in Lansing, Tompkins County, N. Y., in 1794.

Children, all born in Moravia, N. Y.:

105. i. MARY, b. Apr. 19, 1822.

- viii. DANIEL WEBSTER, b. May 4, 1838; m. HELEN GREENFIELD, b. in Moravia Mch. 23, 1839; d. in Auburn in 1908. Children: Violet and Fannie.

He married, first, March 5, 1817, RACHEL KNIGHT of Winchendon, who died January 30, 1824. He married, second, in Winchendon, May 13, 1826, LYDIA WHITE.

Children, all born in Winchendon, two by the first wife and three by the second wife:

73. BENJAMIN<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Sewall<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lyndeborough, N. H., July 9, 1773. He was very active in church and civil life, a member of the school board and selectman for many years and a deacon in his father's church for thirty years. Nothing of importance transpired in the town about which he was not consulted. He died in Lyndeborough, April 10, 1842.

He married, in Lyndeborough, November 4, 1802, SARAH CLARK, born in Lyndeborough November 19, 1779, daughter of John and Margery (Hayward) Clark. She died in Fitchburg, Mass., February 16, 1873.

Children, all, except the fourth, born in Lyndeborough:

108. i. JOHN CLARK, b. Aug. 15, 1803.
- ii. SARAH CLARK, b. Nov. 24, 1805; d. Jan. 9, 1869; m., in Lyndeborough, Apr. 10, 1828, SAMUEL JONES, b. in Lyndeborough July 21, 1802, son of Benjamin and Chloe (Farrington) Jones. He was a man of influence and honored at one time or another with nearly every office the town could give. "Uncle Sam," as he was called, was the friend of every boy and girl in the place; always genial, always sympathetic. He d. in Lyndeborough July 23, 1868. No children.
- iii. LUCY, b. Jan. 13, 1808; d. July 6, 1878; m. (2nd wife), in Lyndeborough, Feb. 19, 1840, PETER CLARK, son of William and Sarah (Barron) Clark. Capt. 74. ISRAEL HUTCHINSON<sup>o</sup> GOODRIDGE (Sewall<sup>o</sup>, Benjamin<sup>t</sup>, Philip<sup>s</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup> William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lyndeborough January 20, 1783, and died there May 13, 1853. He is reputed to have been a man of much local renown, interested in all the affairs of Lyndeborough and filling many honorable stations. Of his family only one son, James, married and had children, something rather unusual in those days.

He married, first, in Lyndeborough, April 6, 1809, ABIGAIL LEWIS, born in Lyndeborough January 24, 1787, daughter of Aaron and Sarah (White) Lewis. She died in Lyndeborough June 30, 1821. He married, second, HANNAH FRENCH, who was born in Lyndeborough February 28, 1786, and died in Lyndeborough February 9, 1859. Aaron Lewis living in Francestown, N. H., at the time of his death, gave, by will, to his grandchildren Sewall, Abigail and Sarah Goodridge, fifty dollars each.

Children, all born in Lyndeborough, six by the first wife and three by the second wife:

- i. SON, b. Aug. 14, 1810; d. Aug. 22, 1810.
- ii. DAUGHTER, b. Sept. 10, 1811; d. Sept. 10, 1811.
- iii. SEWALL, b. Oct. 20, 1813. He studied law and was an inmate of the household of his uncle Elijah Putnam Goodridge in Norfolk, Va., where he practiced for several years. Going West, first to Dubuque, and thence to Ion, Iowa, he achieved brilliant success, being elected judge of the superior court and amassing a fortune. His cousin, Mrs. Catherine Goodridge Shepherd, of Baltimore, sends the following interesting bit of history:

"I remember cousin Sewall well. He came from Ion to be a guest at the house of my brother George (my guardian) on the occasion of my marriage. I saw him but a few hours, but he treated me with such renewal of old acquaintance, I was most agreeably impressed with his culture and breeding, young as I was. He must have been a man of force and character. The champagne flowed freely, but it only made him more charming and witty. His appearance was roughened somewhat by exposure to a hard climate and western life, but his manners were not affected. He was probably a Republican, or he could not have succeeded as he did in Iowa, and he must have been tolerant or he would not have been so warmly welcomed (he remained several days) by that band of red-hot rebels in Norfolk, who had suffered so much in the war. He had never married though he had made repeated proposals to his cousin, my sister Phebe, which she had always declined."

He died in Ion, Iowa, Jan. 18, 1869.
- iv. ABIGAIL, b. Apr. 10, 1816; d. unm., in Lyndeborough, May 4, 1840.
- v. NATHANIEL, b. July 30, 1818; d. in Lyndeborough, Aug. 28, 1820.
- vi. SARAH, b. June 24, 1821; d. July 5, 1844; m., in Lyndeborough, June 14, 1842, JACOB HILDRETH, b. in Lyndeborough December 31, 1809; d. May 17, 1847, son of Jotham and Abigail (Sargent) Hildreth. No children.
- vii. ANSON, b. Mch. 18, 1824; d. Apr. 12, 1824.
- viii. ISRAEL HUTCHINSON, b. Dec. 28, 1829; d. in Lyndeborough, Oct. 6, 1846.
- ix. JAMES, b. Aug. 3, 1830; m. (1), in Lyndeborough, Apr. 5, 1853, ———, b. in Lyndeborough Dec. 29, 1829, and d. in Lyndeborough June 2, 1866; m. (2), in Lyndeborough, Apr. 28, 1868, MARY ANN ROSS.

75. ELIJAH PUTNAM<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Sewall<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lyndeborough, N. H., February 8, 1787, and died in Norfolk, Va., October 21, 1851. He inherited many of the qualities which distinguished his gifted father, among them a taste for literature. A student all his life, he collected a large and well-selected library, which, unfortunately, was burned, with all the family records, in the Civil War. Enlisted from Massachusetts in the War of 1812, he was soon promoted to the rank of major. In a conflict at Portland, Me., then in possession of Massachusetts, he was wounded and taken prisoner with one hundred and sixty of his command. The party was paroled not to serve again during the war. After the war he settled in Bangor, Me., and was made secretary of the Masonic lodge, an office he held until his removal to Norfolk, Va., in 1817, where he resided the rest of his life. A man of marked administrative ability and with capacity for leadership of a high order, he took a foremost place in the civil and religious life of Norfolk. He amassed a considerable fortune in business, but this was wholly dissipated during the Civil War. For many years he was an elder in the Presbyterian church and was placed in many positions of trust by his townsmen.

He married, in Norfolk, Va., October 14, 1823, LYDIA MACGREGOR, born in Philadelphia, Pa., December 9, 1805, daughter of John and Sarah (Pinkerton) MacGregor. John MacGregor traced his lineage in direct descent from Kenneth MacAlpin, king of the Scots and Picts in 850, down to the present time. He graduated from the University of Edinburgh in 1801, and, coming to this country, married Sarah Pinkerton in Philadelphia August 13, 1803. Lydia MacGregor was an interesting woman, and her illustrious Scotch ancestry, her charm of manner and considerable wealth won for her family an enviable place in exclusive Norfolk society. She died, in Jackson, Miss., in June, 1863, and in 1871, her remains were moved to Norfolk and buried beside her husband and several of her children in the Cedar Grove Cemetery in that city.

Children, all born in Norfolk:

- i. PHEBE ANDERSON, b. Jan. 22, 1826; d., unm., in Baltimore, Md., Feb. 26, 1905. A woman of many accomplishments, she held a notable social position.
- ii. SARAH FRANCES, b. Aug. 27, 1829; d., unm., in the home of her sister, Mrs. Henry Elliot Shepherd, Baltimore, Md., June 29, 1913. She possessed, in more than ordinary degree, admirable qualities of character. Lovable and unselfish, she employed her mental training and social gifts in the service of those less fortunate. Her funeral service was conducted by Rev. Thomas Atkinson, D.D., rector of the Pro-Cathedral in Baltimore, June 30, 1913.

110. iii. ALEXANDER, b. Apr. 15, 1831.
- iv. ELIJAH PUTNAM, b. in 1834. He was an ensign in the United States navy until the Civil War broke out, when he resigned his commission and joined the army of Gen. Lee in Virginia. Exposure and fatigue of constant conflict shattered his health; d., unm., in Demopolis, Ala., in May, 1866.
- v. ROBERT MACGREGOR MITCHESON, b. in 1836. It was the intention of his family that he should consecrate his life to the Presbyterian ministry, but their hopes were disappointed by his early death, at nineteen years.
- vi. GEORGE KOLLOCK, b. Apr. 4, 1838; d. in Norfolk, May 31, 1877; m., in Baltimore, in Oct. 1867, ELLA MURPHY, b. in Baltimore in Oct., 1844, dau. of Dr. Ennis and Margaret (Herie) Murphy and a niece of Attorney-General Sylvester of Maryland. His education and natural ability fitted him for the leading place he took in Norfolk. The municipal water system was planned and carried to completion by him at a cost of $1,236,000, and he was the first water commissioner. As captain of ordnance in Gen. Mahone's division of Lee's army he served with distinction.
- vii. MARY ELIZA, b. in 1840; d. in infancy.
- viii. JOHN MACGREGOR, b. Mch. 4, 1842; d. in Baltimore, Apr. 10, 1889; m., in Baltimore, FANNIE BROWN, dau. of Dr. Richard and Mary (Duvall) Brown. Serving in the Confederate army at New Orleans, he was wounded at Baton Rouge, taken prisoner and confined in forts at New Orleans, escaped and joined the blockade runners, appeared again in the army at Richmond, where his mechanical skill and inventive genius were of value to the beleaguered forces. Children, b. between 1884 and 1888: 1. John MacGregor; 2. Richard Brown.
- ix. FERGUSON EMERSON, b. Mch. 5, 1844; d. in Norfolk in 1873; m., in Norfolk, in 1869, ANNIE BELL BERNARD, b. in Petersburg, Va., dau. of Dr. William and ——— (Broughton) Bernard. Engaged in business in Norfolk as a commission merchant, he amassed a considerable fortune. Serving in Mahone's division of Lee's army as a lieutenant of ordnance, exposure and hardship caused disease, of which he ultimately died. Child: William B., b. in 1870, residing in West Virginia in 1918.

- x. WILLIAM WALLACE, b. in 1846; d. in infancy.
 111. xi. CATHARINE MACGREGOR PINKERTON, b. Jan. 1, 1849.

75A. SAMUEL<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Abijah<sup>5</sup>, Joseph<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Fitchburg, Mass., September 6, 1788. While still a young man, in 1813, he settled upon a farm in Chesterfield, Cheshire County, N. H., and continued to reside there throughout his long life. He was a man of industry and successful in his agricultural pursuits. In 1837, 1839 and 1842 he was a selectman of the town. He died in Chesterfield, January 1, 1877.

He married, March 31, 1811, HANNAH CAIN, of Weymouth, Mass., born November 5, 1791. She died in Chesterfield April 5, 1876.

Children, all born in Chesterfield:

He married, October 3, 1823, LYDIA ANN BAILEY.

Children:

- i. HENRY, b. probably in Boston, Nov. 17, 1825; m. (1) ELIZABETH NEWHALL; m. (2) CAROLINE CLASSEN, Dec. 18, 1869.
- ii. ELLEN BAILEY, b. in Boston Feb. 26, 1835; m. EDWARD LOCKE of Waterbury, Conn.

78. ASAPH<sup>8</sup> GOODRIDGE (Asaph<sup>5</sup>, David<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Fitchburg, Mass., December 8, 1774. After marrying, he settled in Cato, Cayuga County, N. Y.; moved thence to Canisteo, Steuben County, and finally to Whitesville, Allegany County, N. Y. He had three brothers, Sewall, Luther and Peter, all whom are supposed to have reached manhood and may have had families, but almost nothing can be found about them. Asaph was the eldest, and may be accepted as a type of his family. In large degree his character would reflect that of his brothers, minimizing a sense of loss in not knowing them better and increasing satisfaction in the opportunity to know him so well. A man of deep religious conviction, scrupulously honest, with a keen sense of duty, as well as of his just obligations to his neighbor, he was an ardent Presbyterian with Puritanical notions of creed interpretation. Every Sunday, "rain or shine," his numerous family (he had eleven children, eight of whom lived to go to church) was assembled in the big wagon and "volens volens" to meeting they went. Sunday was a sacred day with him, and during its consecrated hours there could be no laughing, no whistling, no merriment.

He married, in Livingston Manor, N. Y., January 10, 1806, MARGARET TEETER, born in Livingston Manor August 6, 1788. She died in Whitesville, N. Y., November 20, 1850, and he died in the same place September 12, 1854. All accounts unite in praising Margaret Teeter as a woman of exceptional character. Of sunny disposition and stable temperament, she had superior moral and intellectual gifts and was a devoted mother.

Children, the eldest born in Cato, the next six in Canisteo, and the four youngest in Whitesville:

- i. HANNAH, b. Aug. 6, 1807; d. Sept. 3, 1808.
- ii. JOHN, b. Mch. 14, 1809; d. in Whitesville July 2, 1823.
112. iii. SEWALL, b. Apr. 19, 1811.
- iv. SAMUEL WOODFORD, b. July 26, 1813; d. in Whitesville Jan. 27, 1822.
- v. LEVI, b. Jan. 20, 1816; d. in Whitesville Feb. 27, 1831.
113. vi. JAMES BURRIL, b. Jan. 15, 1818.
- vii. LUTHER, b. Sept. 16, 1820; d. unm., in Whitesville, Aug. 30, 1912. When he was about a year old his father, in the autumn of 1821, took his small family to Whitesville. After this his residence at the "Old Homestead" in Whitesville was unbroken during his long life except for about a year before his death, when he was cared for by two nieces, Mrs. Perry and Mrs. Whipple, alternately, residing in Shongo, Allegany Co., N. Y., three or four miles from Whitesville. His family declare him to have been an amiable and interesting man, and he seems to have been one of the great attractions of the "Old Homestead," where children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren loved to gather to share in its hospitalities and "Uncle Luther's" benedictions upon them. The old house, the scene of so many pleasant memories, was burned in 1912, when all its pictures, books and precious mementos were destroyed.

114. viii. SAMUEL WHITE, b. May 27, 1823.
 ix. PETER TEETER, b. July 27, 1824; d. May 11, 1826.
115. x. HARRIET ROSINA, b. July 4, 1827.
 xi. NANCY MATILDA, b. Dec. 1, 1830; m., late in life, in Whitesville, AMOS SPICER, b. in Whitesville July 26, 1817, son of Seth and Polly (Worden) Spicer, being his second wife. They resided at the "Old Homestead" in Whitesville with "Uncle Luther" until the death of Mr. Spicer, Apr. 21, 1885. She d. in Whitesville Oct. 14, 1891. It is stated by Mrs. Markland, a niece who has contributed much information relating to this family, that Mr. Spicer was a lovable man and greatly admired by the community where he lived so long. Always and actively a peace maker, all differences in the neighborhood were submitted to him as to a court of appeals and his judgments were uniformly respected.

79. JOHN<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (John<sup>5</sup>, David<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Fitchburg, Mass., June 17, 1780.

He married, December 22, 1806, published November 15, 1805, LUCY PIERCE, born in Billerica, Mass., October 14, 1785, daughter of Joshua and Mary (Foss) Pierce. Her father Joshua Pierce was one of the leaders in Shay's rebellion, a man brave and resolute to a fault. This rebellion was confined, as is known, to Massachusetts, and was a protest against the excessive costs of all departments of administration in the state, following the Revolutionary War, and was fostered by some of the best people in the state. The affair throws a side light upon the character of Joshua Pierce. He was ready to assail, with invective and sword, the unhappy conditions then prevailing. When under arrest and liable to be put to death as a traitor, he showed the quality of his manhood. To the last he was vehement in denunciation of the wrongs from which the people suffered, utterly unmindful of personal consequences. Finally he was pardoned, but his bravery and outspokenness to a considerable extent, influenced a better order in the state.

John Goodridge died in Fitchburg December 10, 1845.
His widow survived him, dying March 11, 1869.

Children, all born in Fitchburg:

it is said that Jonathan was attracted to the place on account of its name and the probable character of its people. He was the town's first postmaster and was accounted one of the substantial citizens in that part of the state. As an agriculturist and as a blacksmith, his reputation was widely extended throughout the country. His shop is still standing on the old farm and the book in which he kept his accounts for years is in the possession of his great-grandson, Elmer Orlando Goodridge. He died in Industry, February 12, 1854.

He married, in Alfred, October 24, 1796, SARAH MOODY, born in Alfred August 14, 1777, daughter of Samuel and Hannah Moody.

87. IRA<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Keene, N. H., July 3, 1780, and spent his boyhood in Westminster, Vt. In 1810 he settled in Sutton, Vt. He was a lieutenant in the Vermont contingent in the War of 1812, and represented his town in the Vermont legislature, 1820-1821. In 1825, with his family and furniture, he drove across country to Massena Centre, N. Y., where he purchased a tract of land and was chiefly engaged in agriculture till his death, May 21, 1871. Before the organization of the Republican party, in 1856, he was an ardent Democrat and wielded considerable political influence in St. Lawrence County. Senators Silas Wright and Preston King, both of St. Lawrence County, were frequent visitors to his home. But he will be chiefly remembered for his zealous promotion of education.

He married, in Hinsdale, N. H., November 10, 1809, CHLOE NICHOLS, born in Leinster, N. H., July 6, 1786, daughter of Samuel and Sally (Soulé) Nichols, and a lineal descendant of George Soulé, one of the Mayflower passengers. She died, in Massena Centre, May 12, 1872.

Children, the six eldest born in Sutton and the other three in Massena Centre:

131. i. HORACE, b. Apr. 30, 1811.
132. ii. MARY MINERVA, b. Jan. 8, 1813.
133. iii. BETSEY RAMSEY, b. Sept. 7, 1816.
- iv. CHLOE ADELINE, b. July 7, 1818; d. in Massena Centre Apr. 27, 1835.
- v. HANNAH SYLVANIA, b. Feb. 12, 1822; d. in Massena Centre, Nov. 11, 1828, being burned by her clothing catching fire from an open fireplace.
- vi. IRA ALLEN, b. Nov. 28, 1823; d. in Massena Centre May 10, 1895. After the family's removal to Massena, he became a student and developed capacity as a teacher; especially in his home school he had marked success. In 1852 he went to California, drawn by the gold fever, and there made and lost a fortune. After partial recovery, he returned home and operated the old farm for raising blooded horses.
- vii. GEORGE HENRY, b. May 16, 1826. Entering mercantile life in Ogdensburg while still a boy, he went to New York City in 1856, later was a resident of Madison, Wis., as private secretary to the governor of the state. Afterward, with his brother John, he conducted a mercantile business in Potsdam, N. Y. In 1890, being broken in health, he went to live with his sister Hannah Sophia Bailey in Platteville, Wis., where he died unm. July 5, 1897. He was a man of attractive personality and successful in the many enterprises which he undertook.

- viii. JOHN RICHARDSON, b. July 9, 1828; d. unm., in Massena Centre, Oct. 6, 1871. As a boy he was a clerk in a store in Louisville, N. Y. Later, when eighteen years of age, he was in the employ of E. B. Allen & Co. in Ogdensburg, N. Y., and finally in 1852 in New York City, at the same time being associated with his brother George Henry in Potsdam. He was greatly beloved and of engaging manner.
- ix. HANNAH SOPHIA, b. Jan. 23, 1832; d. in Platteville, Wis., Mch. 10, 1898. Educated in academies in Canton and Ogdensburg, N. Y., and later in New York City, while still a young woman, she returned to Massena Centre and devoted herself to the care of her aged parents. She married ELIJAH BAILEY of Platteville, Wis., Mch. 25, 1873, and settled in that town. A woman of varied accomplishments and charming manner, her studious habits won for her the sobriquet of "the scholar." No children.

88. HEMAN<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup> William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Westminster, Vt., "Sat. ye 7 May, 1785, at 1 o'clock in the morning." Some old letters written by the Westminster family to Ira Goodridge in Massena Centre throw light upon conditions there a hundred years ago. The following excerpt from one of Heman's letters show that change has not been wholly in our own day. "Times are greatly altered. All things seem to be in commotion. Dress and property are thought to be the only things needful. This destroys good will and all true friendship." Heman lived and owned property for a short time in Sutton, Vt., but soon returned to Westminster. In personal appearance he was a typical Goodridge, somewhat above the medium height, with erect figure, clear-cut features and black, piercing eyes. He died, in Westminster, May 9, 1856.

He married, first, September 22, 1816, DELIA SLACK of Westminster, the Reverend Sylvester Saye performing the ceremony. She died December 19, 1819. He married, second, December 4, 1820, ESTHER DICKINSON of Westminster, and she died August 16, 1853.

89. RILEY<sup>8</sup> GOODRIDGE (Benjamin<sup>5</sup> Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>8</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Westminster, Vt., Tuesday, June 18, 1795, "one-half hour before sunset." He settled in Peterborough, N. H., and became influential in the material and educational development of the town. To him belongs the credit of being librarian of the first free library maintained by public taxation in the United States and probably in the world. To this position he was appointed in 1833, and shortly after to that of postmaster. An expert machinist and builder, he was also superintendent of large cotton mills and constructed the Mormon Temple in Nauvoo, Ill. While in the West he became ill, and died in Council Bluffs, Ia., September 8, 1857.

He married, in Peterborough, November 8, 1830, POLLY DOLIVER POWERS, born in Jaffrey, N. H., June 29, 1793, daughter of Whitcomb and Miriam (Bond) Powers. She died, in Peterborough, June 12, 1870.

96. ISAAH<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Moses<sup>5</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Grafton, Vt., December 21, 1791, and died in Kalamazoo, Mich., February 13, 1867. After marriage, he and his wife lived on "The Old Goodridge Place" in Grafton, and there their children were born. In 1835 they removed to Townshend, Vt., where he conducted a mercantile business for two years, going thence to Michigan, living first in Constantine and finally in Kalamazoo, where they spent the rest of their lives.

He married, in Grafton, November 8, 1815, SUSAN WILLINGTON HILL, born in Cambridge, Mass., March 10, 1792, daughter of Abraham and Ruth (Blodgett) Hill. She died in Kalamazoo, January 20, 1864.

97. SAMUEL WADSWORTH<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Moses<sup>5</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Grafton, Vt., January 24, 1793, and died in New York City April 10, 1868. Beginning business life early as a clerk for a William Hall, who had stores in Ludlow and Saxton's River, in Vermont, he succeeded to a partnership while still a young man, conducting the Ludlow store. In 1819 he removed to Saxton's River, where the partners built a store of which Mr. Goodridge had control. In 1827 they built another and larger store in Bellow's Falls, closing the other two. This structure is still known as the "Mammoth Block." The business was eminently prosperous, expanding until the whole of New England was brought into the scope of their profitable ventures. Mr. Hall died in 1832, after which Mr. Goodridge had sole direction of affairs. Before this time, however, the initiative and enterprise of the junior partner had been strikingly illustrated. "The Old Goodridge Place" in Grafton was known to have a deposit of steatite, or soapstone. A quarry was opened, the deposit proving to be of excellent quality and practically inexhaustable, developing a remunerative adjunct to the already lucrative business of the firm. In 1834 Mr. Goodridge sold all his interests in Bellow's Falls except that of soapstone, which is still operated by the family, and removed to Hartford, Conn., where dealing in wool absorbed most of his attention. The year following his removal he supplied to the mills wool of a value exceeding $100,000, then the largest turn-over in this commodity of any house in the country.

About this time, in association with several Boston merchants, he embarked in the China and East India trade. Silk manufacture was hardly known in the United States and only in a few isolated places, Turkey being the chief source of supply and at almost prohibitive prices. Mr. Goodridge became deeply interested, especially in the effort to supply the infant trade in this country with raw material, in skeins wound on spools ready for the weaver. But there was a dilemma at the outset. The Chinese reel was nine feet in diameter and the waste occasioned in unwinding was serious. These disadvantages stimulated the inventive genius of Mr. Goodridge, not only to promote silk production in this country, but also to facilitate its importation from China. Experiments were made with a variety of the mulberry tree, which led to the planting of this tree in Connecticut and to the increase of the silk worm throughout the country. Improvements in machinery followed, and more production of silk.

A new reel, with a transverse bar, to prevent the silk from tangling, was invented, which was only twenty-seven inches in diameter instead of nine feet. It was evident that if the China silk venture was to be a success, a change in the reel used in that country must be effected, and Mr. Goodridge went about securing the adoption of this improved reel in the Celestial empire. Joseph H. Weed, formerly employed in the China trade, was commissioned to undertake this work. But Chinese conservatism was excited. This was something new, and violated every conception of the fathers. The Chinaman would have none of it. Almost in despair Mr. Weed finally induced a silk producer to reel a small quantity. The result was shown to his neighbors. They perceived that this new reel not only benefited the buyer, and therefore improved their trade, but also enabled them to double their output in a given time. Small invoices were sent to the United States for trial. These proving eminently satisfactory, Mr. Goodridge was sent out. He sailed on October 31, 1843, and commissioned a native mechanic to make the improved reel in large numbers. The China silk trade was revolutionized and Mr. Goodridge became a personality to conjure with both in this country and in China. Such was the inception of Canton reeled silk.

In 1846 Mr. Goodridge sold out in Hartford and removed to New York, doing business there. Wool was still a large interest with him, but silk was his chief concern, in the importation of which he long held a monopoly. Many other materials of Chinese manufacture were introduced here by his house, such as floor matting, but silk always remained the leading feature of its trade.

He married, in Ludlow, Vt., February 10, 1819, LYDIA READ, born in Ludlow August 15, 1797, daughter of the Reverend Peter and Elizabeth (Baldwin) Read. The Reverend Mr. Read was the pastor of the First Congregational Church in Ludlow and also the first representative of the town in the Vermont legislature in 1795. Mrs. Goodridge died in Hartford, Conn., June 10, 1843.

Children, born successively, five in Saxton's River, four in Bellows Falls, and two in Hartford:

98. HARRIET<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Moses<sup>5</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Grafton, Vt., February 26, 1795, and died there March 17, 1871.

She married, in Grafton, April 17, 1832, JAMES CUTTER, son of Nathaniel and Sarah (~~Wynnan~~) Cutter. They resided for a short time at the "Old Goodridge Place." But in 1833, Captain Cutter, having bought a farm of Samuel Thompson, a half mile east of the village, they moved and continued to make that their home until their deaths, he January 19, 1852, and she March 17, 1871. These two people have left in Grafton an agreeable memory. They were foremost in every good work and the life and sunshine of every worthy gathering. Genial and warm-hearted, their influence in the town was always wholesome.

Children (Cutter), all born in Grafton:

- i. CYNTHIA ANNIE, b. Nov. 11, 1832; m. JONADAB BAKER WHITCOMB, b. Oct. 2, 1823; settled in San Francisco, Cal., where he was a real estate broker. - v. ELLEN GOODRIDGE, b. Oct. 12, 1841.

99. ALLEN<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Moses<sup>5</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Grafton, Vt., April 20, 1806. Reared on a farm, by dint of studious habits and hard work, he was prepared for Amherst College while still in his teens. But his powers were overtaxed, and he was obliged to give up study for a year, and being advised by his physician that it would be unwise ever to attempt it again. Nevertheless he continued teaching in winters, by means of which he had accomplished his preparation for college, and in that vocation he achieved success. Finally, compelled to relinquish his ambition for a college education, he accepted a position in Albany, N. Y., where his brother was developing business in the soapstone derived from the quarry in Grafton; also he was connected with the mercantile house of his brother in Townshend, Vt. These situations neither suited his inclination nor his health. Accordingly, in 1835 he disposed of his holdings in Vermont and, moved by the "western fever," with his wife and little child, Jennie Lucinda, and accompanied by his wife's parents, he set out overland for Michigan. At this period there were no public conveyances, except by boat through the lakes. Travel overland was insecure and Michigan was almost an untrodden wilderness.

The party reached Detroit, then a mere hamlet, after much hardship, but the journey of one hundred and twenty miles to Kalamazoo was fateful. They started with a single horse and a conveyance none too good. Fourteen miles out, the horse took fright and ran away, breaking Mr. Goodridge's leg. This was unskillfully set by a local physician, and he became rapidly worse. By chance a surgeon who was traveling through the country happened to be at a log-house near by and was asked to look at the sufferer. What was the surprise of the whole party to find this surgeon none other than Dr. Fletcher F. Ransom, of Glenn's Falls, N. Y., brother of Mr. Goodridge's wife. None knew that Dr. Ransom was in that part of the country, and the meeting was as unexpected as it was providential. In six weeks the invalid and his party were able to reach Kalamazoo.

In the following spring the family removed to Constantine, where Mr. Goodridge engaged in trade, obtaining his goods from New York. The panic of 1837 was disastrous and the business was carried down in the wreck, but ultimately he paid his creditors in full, though not legally bound. In 1838, so well had the new settler won the confidence of his neighbors that he was elected to the office of registrar of deeds for the county of St. Joseph, holding this office for ten years, re-elected for four successive terms. He also held the office of justice of the peace for eight years, and was now a resident of Centreville, where his duties as registrar required him to live.

Early in 1848 his brother-in-law, Hon. Epaphroditus Ransom, then governor of the State, appointed him to a clerkship in the Michigan land office, and on May 16th of that year he was appointed deputy commissioner, which place he held for eight years. His duties now required him to reside in Marshall, and thither he removed in July, 1848. Lansing was made the capital of the state in 1847, but the land office was not moved there until 1849. Lansing was then in an almost trackless wilderness, forty miles away. Over roads nearly impassable, the caravan of a dozen heavily laden wagons conveyed the land office to the new capital. The work of clearing the land fell upon Mr. Goodrich as head of the land office, and this involved supervision, contracts, new streets, clearing for buildings, etc. In 1857, at the suggestion of General Lewis Cass, then United States senator from Michigan, Mr. Goodridge took his family to Washington, D. C., where he was appointed to a clerkship in the post office department. There he remained until 1863, when he was promoted to a responsible position in the war department. In 1867 he was still further advanced by Secretary Browning to a position in the land office, and there he remained until his death.

Mr. Goodridge was a religious man, being a member of the Baptist church for many years. He was a man of unsullied honor and of unflinching attention to the complex duties that crowded his life, exhibiting constancy in friendship, devotion to family and intellectual gifts far beyond the average. The Goodridge Memorial, under the editorship of Sidney Perley of Salem, Mass., was published at his expense in Washington, D. C., in 1884. He died in Washington, April 21, 1891, and was buried in Chicago.

He married, in Townshend, Vt., November 9, 1833, LAURETTE LUCINDA RANSOM, born in Townshend, December 7, 1812, daughter of Major Ezekiel and Lucinda (Fletcher) Ransom. She died December 23, 1899, and was buried beside her husband in the Rose Hill Cemetery, Chicago.

He obtained an appointment in the United States Patent Office in Washington and becoming conspicuous for his aptitude and capability, was successively promoted, finally to the position of confidential clerk between the Patent Office and the Interior Department. He was a member of the New Jerusalem Church in Washington. A change in the national administration resulted in his losing his place in Washington, and he became a journalist in Decatur. No record of children.

100. FREDERICK<sup>6</sup> GOODRIDGE (Moses<sup>5</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Grafton, Vt., November 8, 1808. At the age of eighteen he went to Bellows Falls to be clerk for Hall & Goodridge. Successively he was with William and David Buffum in Westmoreland, in partnership with William Stickney in a wholesale grocery in Boston, and in New York in brokerage business with his brother Samuel W. Goodridge. Being in poor health, he went to China in 1837, and when he returned formed a copartnership with his nephew, Solon Foster Goodridge, under the firm name of F. & S. F. Goodridge, as commission merchants in New York City. Health again failing, he gave up all business and lived quietly at his home in Brooklyn, where he died December 19, 1849.

He married, in Bath, Me., October 10, 1842, MARY NANCY MOODY, born in Bath, September 5, 1809, daughter of John Minot and Mary Boynton (Dunn) Moody. After the death of her husband, the widow moved to Cambridgeport, Mass., where she died September 7, 1883.

She married EPHRAIM WOOD, December 19, 1799. He was a school teacher and came to Norridgewock with his father's family in 1773. He was accustomed to take hunting trips up the Kennebec River into what was then a wilderness, and in this way picked out a farm, which he cleared on the fertile land south of Bingham village. It was through his influence that Joshua Goodridge, Jr., settled on the adjoining farm. He was the first town clerk and chairman of the first board of selectmen of Bingham and held those offices thirteen years. He died August 13, 1841, aged eighty-two years.

103. JANE<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Moses<sup>6</sup>, Joseph<sup>5</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>4</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lynn, Mass., December 3, 1801, and died in Lynn, June 15, 1906, having attained the remarkable age of 104 years, 6 months, 12 days.

She married, in Lynn, November 12, 1823, MATTHEW MANSFIELD, who was born in Lynn, May 17, 1793, son of Robert and Elizabeth (Nourse) Mansfield. Robert Mansfield, who was a soldier in the Revolution, died August 29, 1825, and his wife, who was born in 1751, died January 18, 1821.

Mr. Mansfield was descended from Robert Mansfield, who came to Lynn in 1640, the line being Matthew<sup>7</sup>, Robert<sup>6</sup>, Robert<sup>5</sup>, Jonathan<sup>4</sup>, Joseph<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Robert<sup>1</sup>. He was a shoe manufacturer, was one of the founders of the Lynn Unitarian Church in 1822, was a member of Lynn's first common council in 1850, and served in other public positions. He died, in Lynn, February 6, 1860.

Jane Goodridge was born in that part of Lynn called Glenmere, formerly known as Graves End. Of her nine brothers and sisters seven lived to marry, and descendants of four daughters and one son were living in 1918. The house where she was born is still standing at the corner of Cross and Maple streets, owned and occupied by John T. Morgan. She first attended a private school conducted by Patience and Deliverance Hawkes, where she studied spelling, "cyphering," manners, courtesy and art. She became skilled in needlework and her "Family Register," embroidered when she was but eleven years old, is a work of art. It is about seventeen inches square and contains the record of her parent's marriage and the names and dates of birth of their children, with blank spaces opposite each name for death record. Below, in the centre, surrounded by a graceful vine, is the rhyme:

"This needle work of mine can tell
Where I a child was learned to spell.
And by my parents I was taught
Not to spend my time for naught."

The whole is surrounded by an elaborate border of flowers and leaves three inches wide with a wreath at the bottom containing her name and age. It is worked on homespun linen with colored silks. Jane next attended the school conducted by Mr. Tuttle at Woodend and wound up at Miss Gay's finishing school.

At the time of her marriage Mrs. Mansfield was described as a brunette, of medium height, very erect, with large black eyes, beautiful clear skin and wavy black hair crowning a well-placed head, indicating breeding and refinement. The wedding gown was of white silk crepe corded with white taffeta, narrow skirt and low-necked Empire waist eight inches deep; over all was a pelisse of blue silk. Her feet were clad in low-cut blue slippers and white silk stockings. The bonnet was a flaring white leghorn lined and trimmed with white.

Mrs. Mansfield vividly recalled many interesting incidents in the early history of Lynn. In the war of 1812 recruits from the north-shore towns on their way to Boston frequently halted at her father's house for food for both horse and rider. She often spoke of the fear of impressments, during this war, caused by the appearance of sail off shore. The people flocked in crowds to the top of High Rock and to the roofs of their houses to watch them, and in 1813 they were distant witnesses of the naval battle between the Chesapeake and the Shannon. Again, a rumor having spread that British vessels were about to make a landing at Beverly in 1814, a number of old men exempt from military duty, headed by her father, Captain Moses Goodridge, then forty-five years old, marched over the turnpike to resist the threatened invasion, and were on this duty several weeks.

She always took great pleasure in telling of Lafayette's second visit to Lynn in the fall of 1824 and of the warm welcome which the city gave to him, the music, crowds of citizens, soldiers, flags and arches trimmed with flowers. A young girl, in whose company she was, had the great pleasure of giving Lafayette a glass of water. Many times has she expressed the wish that it had been her luck to give a drink to the thirsty general.

The following is from the records of the Lynn Historical Society for 1905: "At the December meeting of the Council, Mrs. Jane Mansfield, one hundred and four years old, was made an honorary member of the Society, and a vote was passed that she should be asked to allow her photograph to be taken, in order that the Society might have for preservation a correct likeness of Lynn's oldest resident." She was the oldest resident that Lynn ever had.

Of pleasing disposition and motherly sympathies, she was a fast friend of all acquaintances and neighbors as well as to her immediate family. She had for all none but words of love and praise. During her long life bodily ills troubled her little. Until her eighty-seventh year she retained active oversight and charge of her household affairs. For fifteen years previous to her death it was the custom of her relatives and friends to assemble at the old homestead on the anniversary of her birth; and how pleased was the dear madam to greet them and receive the flowers and gifts they brought!

Late in life, when failing eyesight debarred her habit of constant reading, it was a comfort to her to recite poems, many of them long, with which her memory was stored. Among them was one relating to the Revolution which she had learned when a child. One stanza jotted down as she spoke it is as follows:

"Fight on, fight on, brave American boys,
 Fear not all Europe's thundering noise;
 Maintain your rights from year to year,
 God's on your side, you need not fear."

This she always recited, even to the month before her death, with great spirit and vigor, her eyes flashing and her hands making expressive gestures. Her later serenity came with the flowering of a temperate, happy life. By birth she was proud, high spirited and high strung, with lofty ideals which, to a considerable extent, she was fortunate enough to realize.

After her husband's death, in 1860, she resided at the Graves homestead on Western Avenue, where her mother, Hannah (Graves) Goodridge was born. This is believed to be the oldest house standing in Lynn, having been built, it is claimed, in the first half of the eighteenth century, by Samuel Graves. It has always remained in possession of his descendants. In her early days Mrs. Mansfield was a regular attendant at the First Methodist Church in South Common street, of which her father and mother were devout members. Following her marriage she became connected with the Unitarian Church, of which her husband was a member. After his death she returned to Methodism, and for many years attended the Maple Street Methodist Episcopal Church.

ALEXANDER<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Elijah Putnam<sup>6</sup>, Sewall<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Norfolk, Va., April 15, 1831. In 1850 he went to the Indian Territory, where he met Eugenia Elizabeth Coffee, a niece of Jefferson Davis, President of the Southern Confederacy, who was there at Fort Washington, visiting her uncle General Coffee, a son of General Coffee, of the Revolution. They were married and went to New Orleans in 1855, where he entered the cotton brokerage business, in which he continued until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he became one of the first volunteers in the Virginia army. Prospering in business after the war, he purchased a large plantation near Tickfaw, in Tangipahoa parish, La., where his family spent their summers. This beautiful place was named "Sunnyridge" most appropriately by the young bride, and here several of their children were born. Much of the interesting record of this family was destroyed in two large fires and by the Civil War. He died at Sunnyridge, October 20, 1877.

He married, in Jackson, Miss., December 15, 1854, EUGENIA ELIZABETH COFFEE, born in Jackson, Miss., April 24, 1835, daughter of George Washington and Mary Catharine (Isler) Coffee.

Children, the three eldest born in New Orleans and the three youngest in Tickfaw:

Eugene and Thomas Norfleet McLemore are brothers and grandsons of the famous Col. Robert Weakley McLemore of Springhill, Tenn. Child (McLemore): Ernestine Eugenia, b. Dec. 10, 1905.
- vi. ALEXANDER RANDOLPH, b. Apr. 17, 1873; d. at Sunnyridge Sept. 8, 1901; the only son and an interesting and exemplary young man. Holding a business position in Chicago which foreshadowed rapid advancement and large results, his promising career was cut short by untimely death.

111. CATHARINE MACGREGOR PINKERTON<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Elijah Putnam<sup>8</sup>, Sewall<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born, in Norfolk, Virginia, January 1, 1849. She was a student in New Orleans until that city was captured by the Union army in the Civil War, when she, with her mother and sisters, became refugees to North Carolina. There they endured the hardships incident to the time from which she emerged with a freedom from bitterness and a serenity of judgment that indicate high character and lineage. Her education was in the best schools of Norfolk, New Orleans and North Carolina. As a mature woman she became a worthy grandchild of the Reverend Sewall Goodridge, who was one of the most noteworthy descendants of William of Watertown,—a woman of rare gifts, refined and cultured, and a social power in Baltimore.

She married, in Norfolk, June 25, 1867, HENRY ELLIOT SHEPHERD, born in Fayetteville, N. C., January 17, 1844, son of Jesse George and Catherine Isabella (Dobbin) Shepherd. The father of Dr. Shepherd was a judge of Fayetteville, and his mother a sister of James C. Dobbin, secretary of the navy in the administration of President Franklin Pierce. Graduated from the University of Virginia, Dr. Shepherd entered the Confederate service at the age of seventeen, was promoted to be captain, was seriously wounded at Gettysburg, and continued in the service to the end. After the war he settled in Baltimore as superintendent of public instruction, later being called to be president of Charleston College, South Carolina, which position he held for fifteen years. Resigning, he returned to Baltimore, where he engaged as lecturer and author. Among the most noteworthy of his many books are a Life of General Robert E. Lee, Criticism of the Poems of Tennyson, Representative Authors of Maryland and History of the English Language. He was a life-long friend and a frequent correspondent of Tennyson. In his Criticism there is shown a sanity and breadth of view as well as a sympathy of touch that will give it a permanent place in literature, especially among lovers of the great poet. In Representative Authors a palpable need was filled. Dr. Shepherd has been honored with the degree of M. A. by Lafayette College, L. L. D. by the University of North Carolina and Davidson College, North Carolina. For many years he has had close relations with Ambassador James Bryce; and other men of that stamp have been among his intimate friends. The Baltimore Sun says of him: "Doctor Henry Elliot Shepherd is the most accomplished and famous scholar yet produced by North Carolina.

Children (Shepherd), all born in Baltimore:

- i. GEORGE GOODRIDGE, b. June 23, 1874; d. in Baltimore Aug. 13, 1912. This brilliant young man received his academic training under the tutelage of Prof. Maupin, of Ellicott City, Md., and in law at the University of Virginia. After graduation he practiced a few years in Staunton, Va., but soon removed to Baltimore, where he at once secured a commanding place at the Maryland bar. But it was not only at the bar that he showed capacity of a high order. The Baltimore Sun says of him: "He was considered one of the best Shakespearean scholars in Baltimore. His ability to quote accurately and copiously from the poet was often commented upon by those who came in contact with him." His untimely death was greatly lamented not only by the bar, but by a large and cultivated circle in which he was a brilliant member and recognized leader.
- ii. HENRY ANDERSON, b. Aug. 12, 1878. He is the only surviving son and unmarried, residing with his parents in Baltimore. Among his distinguishing characteristics is a remarkable capacity for business. It has been well said of him that "in his special field he has attained unusual success and has a rare scientific acquaintance with his complex subject, electricity," and that, "while still young in years, he has achieved marked and honorable success in his profession." When the potential force which has been transmitted to him and the intellectual atmosphere in which he has been reared are both considered, it is not surprising that, notwithstanding the engrossing cares of business, he should develop a taste for and find recreation in intellectual culture. Possessing as he does more than ordinary ability and purity of judgment in literature, the literary achievements of the father may well be followed by those of the son, should business success bring him leisure for such pursuits.

- iii. LYDIA MACGREGOR, b. Dec. 13, 1884. She has spent her life partly in Baltimore and partly in Charleston, S. C., where her father was president of the college. With such a heritage as fell to her something more could be looked for than from him "who the stubborn glebe has broke," and that expectation has been abundantly fulfilled. Worthy of special commemoration is the fact that to her energy and devotion the world is indebted for the collection and publication of the poems of James Ryder Randall, which until she undertook the work existed only in fragmentary form in mouldering journals and illegible albums. To her is owed the preservation of "Maryland My Maryland," next to "Dixie," the most popular of Confederate war songs, and by many considered the best American lyric, either north or south; and also "Stonewall Jackson," "There's Life in the Old Land Yet," and many another product "of the rare genius and creative power of Randall." By her determination and zeal these poems were collected from every source and prepared for the press, and, more than all, she secured by her own efforts the money requisite to guarantee their publication. She is endowed with unusual vigor of intellect and keen discriminative perception. Despite a delicate physical organization, she has been an assiduous student of literature and medicine, and is especially interested in all that relates to the promotion of human welfare. By nature a philanthropist, she has accomplished excellent results in the relief of suffering and disease.
- iv. ARTHUR, d. in infancy.

113. JAMES BURRIL<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Asaph<sup>6</sup>, Asaph<sup>5</sup>, David<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Canisteo, Steuben County, N. Y., January 15, 1818. For nearly forty years he lived in New York State. In 1857 he migrated to Canton, Fulton County, Ill., which was then looked upon as as the Far West. There he remained until 1861, when he removed to Abingdon, Knox County, Ill. In the spring of 1866, he, with a colony of Illinoisans, made another removal across the Mississippi river into Iowa. They halted on the western border of the state in Fremont County, in the beautiful valley of the Nishnabotona river. This was indeed the Far West, north, south, east and west as far as the eye could reach being an unbroken stretch of prairie. Not a human habitation was in sight and the nearest point at which lumber could be obtained for building was at Nebraska City, thirty miles away. The father and son could each take up 160 acres of land, and this proved to be a profitable venture. In 1881 he sold this place and followed his children to Syracuse, Neb., where his wife shortly died. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. McClanahan, in Syracuse, Neb., after an accident while driving a horse, October 6, 1892.

He married, in Elmira, N. Y., December 21, 1840, AMANDA MALVINA THORP, born in Elmira, September 19, 1820, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Danforth) Thorp.

Children:

- i. JAMES MELVILLE, b. in Elmira June 19, 1842; d., unm., in Elmira, Nov. 30, 1864. In 1862 he enlisted and became an orderly to Gen. W. T. Sherman, being constantly with him until 1864, when he was wounded while bearing dispatches. His horse was shot and he was borne from the field, with wounds so serious that it became necessary to send him home on furlough. He died of his wounds and was buried among the soldiers in the beautiful cemetery in Abingdon, Ill.
- ii. FRANK GRENVILLE, b. in Elmira May 19, 1849; m. twice; two children by the first wife and five by the second; seven grandchildren.
- iii. EMMA FLORENCE, b. in Canton, Fulton Co., Ill., July 1, 1860; m., in Shenandoah, Page Co., Iowa, Nov. 13, 1879, JAMES ALEXANDER McCLANAHAN, son of Robert and Mary Ann (Carr) McClanahan.

3. Birdie Florence, b. in Syracuse, Apr. 21, 1889; m., in Lincoln, Nov. 27, 1912, Herman Frederick Koenig, son of Herman and Clara (Schramm) Koenig.

114. SAMUEL WHITE<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Asaph<sup>6</sup>, Asaph<sup>5</sup>, David<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Whitesville, N. Y., May 27, 1823, and died in Whitesville April 13, 1904. Although a man of few words, he had an attractive personality, was slow to anger, but of strong conviction and sound judgment. A benevolent attitude toward life generally rendered him open and active in the promotion of every cause which appealed to his sense of right. He was named after his uncle, Samuel White, as was also the town of Whitesville.

He married, in Whitesville, August 4, 1859, MARTHA GERALDINE SEELEY, born in Deerfield, Pa., February 4, 1831, daughter of Eleazer and Mary Seeley. She died in Corning, N. Y., October 13, 1907.

Children, all born in Whitesville:

116. ALONZO PIERCE<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (John<sup>6</sup>, John<sup>5</sup>, David<sup>4</sup>, Philip<sup>3</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Fitchburg, Mass., August 17, 1807. His birth was in what was known as the Palmer House, one of the oldest in the city, and destroyed by fire a few years ago. The grounds about the house were of considerable acreage, extending from the trotting park to Beacon street, including Boutelle street, now wholly embraced within the expanding limits of the city. The estate was a bequest to Alonzo by his grandfather John Goodridge, and there he spent his entire life. The old place had many attractions, among them the beautiful elms, which were much admired and have been commemorated in a poem by a member of the family.

THE GOODRIDGE ELMS

They stand along the roadway, these patriarchal elms,
They stand around the homestead, lords of this happy realm.

They stand in lofty grandeur, each in its separate place,
A joy to the beholder in all their rhythmic grace.

They stand in stately beauty, in verdure richly clad,
Their sturdy branches brimming, in music sweet and glad.

Here comes the robin redbreast, the golden oreole,
While song melodious overflows from his enraptured soul.

Oh, high in the blue they nest, amid these verdant boughs,
A gleeful little tenantry our dear old elm trees house.

Cycles of years have come and gone into the storied past,
These trees in majesty serene their fleeting life outlast.

Growing aloft yet reaching down in pliant branch and bough,
As if the heavens to intercede, the earth with grace endow.

Divine and human seem these trees, shrines fit for praise and prayer,
No grander temples ever reared their beauteous forms in air.

Long may they live, these noble elms, reminders of the day
When the primeval forest trod nature's unhindered way.

For other land the pine shall stand, the palm for other realm,
But for New England homes shall spread the grandeur of the elm.

In many ways Alonzo Pierce Goodridge was a man typical of New England life at its best. He was a successful agriculturist, making his place productive and profitable beyond most New England farms by individual effort and intelligent oversight. Even at the age of ninety-three he superintended the cultivation of a large garden, performing much of the labor himself and with gratifying results. And he had many outside affairs and activities. There was scarcely a public matter in the city or country which did not engage his interest and in which he did not often take a leading part, the schools, the Historical Society, in which he held a position of influence, and the church where he was always manifest.

From almost every viewpoint the man was interesting; his fine character, exemplary living, initiative, resolute courage and remarkable longevity. His life was simplicity itself. The most punctilious moralist must have commended its propriety and conformity; the most exacting prohibitionist could find few lapses of habit. He was upright to the last farthing, straightforward in all his intercourse. His word had the weight of his bond, and reason rather than emotion swayed his action. Doubtless much of the force and quality which distinguished him had been derived through his mother from his grandfather, Joshua Pierce, who, it will be remembered, was one of the foremost actors in denunciation of the excesses of administration which provoked Shay's Rebellion.

The longevity of Mr. Goodridge was remarkable. Had he lived nineteen days longer he would have been ninety-six. In a family noteworthy for many aged members only one is known to have attained a greater age. This was Jane (Goodridge) Mansfield, whose age at death was 104 years, 6 months, 12 days. In searching for reason for such prolonged life we of course concede somewhat to heredity, but there are other and powerful influences. Here was a life apparently free from all excesses, mental, moral or physical, and it lasted nearly a century. Mr. Goodridge died in Fitchburg, July 28, 1903.

He married, in Townsend, Mass., February 12, 1834, published, January 24, EVELINE GILSON, born in Pepperell, Mass.

- ix. JULIETTE, twin, b. Oct. 25, 1847. She lived always in Fitchburg, a lady of culture and literary taste, to whom much is due for the interest which she has taken in compiling the record of her family. To her responsiveness and painstaking attention to details must be credited, mainly, the completeness and accuracy of this account of her family. She died July 11, 1916.

BENJAMIN<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Joshua<sup>6</sup>, Joshua<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Josiah<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Naples, Me., September 9, 1800. Naples, in Cumberland County, was on the route of lumbermen and hunters at the foot of Long Pond, a tributary of Lake Sebago. The first building erected there, on account of its central location and accessibility by water, was a schoolhouse in 1822. The next year a store was opened by Benjamin Goodridge in a clearing made by Thomas Stevens. This prospered, and its proprietor was soon a man of property and a leader, selectman in 1834, again, 1840-41, and in 1851; and in 1847 collector of taxes. Naples was incorporated in 1834 and, soon after, the first church, Congregational, was organized; Charles and George Goodridge, sons of Benjamin, being among the incorporators. For the church building Benjamin gave $1,000, and in 1849 donated land for a cemetery, where he was afterwards buried. He died April 18, 1858.

131. HORACE<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Ira<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Sutton, Caledonia County, Vt., April 30, 1811. In 1825 he was taken by his parents to Massena Centre, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., where he studied in the local schools and in Fort Covington Academy. At the age of nineteen he began teaching in Massena, and continued this occupation until 1832, at the same time operating a farm on what is known as "The Hill," overlooking Massena Centre, where his little family resided. After relinquishing teaching, he was engaged as contractor, magistrate and accountant until his death. He was highly esteemed for his intelligent helpfulness in the affairs of the town, which he served in many capacities, especially on its school board, for the duties of which he was well fitted. The excellence of the schools of the neighborhood was largely due to his keen appreciation of their needs and his devotion to their welfare.

He died in Massena Centre, February 17, 1878.

He married, in Lebanon, Grafton County, N. H., February 25, 1838, LAVONIA COLBY, born in Lebanon, July 29, 1811, daughter of Nehemiah and Sally (Page-Hastings) Colby. Sally (Page) Hastings was the widow of Jedediah Hastings. Lavonia (Colby) Goodridge was a woman of strong character, warm sympathies and deep affections. For whatever of success he may have attained in life the writer cannot too warmly express his obligation to her influence and unflinching solicitude. She died in Massena Centre, October 5, 1876.

Children, born in Massena Centre:

- i. SARAH MATILDA, b. June 19, 1839. When she was twelve years of age the family moved into the village of Massena Centre. The town was then noteworthy for being populated almost wholly by New England people, and public interest centered largely in the schools, which had come to be regarded by neighboring towns as unique in their excellence. Their curriculum had a wide range, and teachers were employed for their high moral standing as well as for their intellectual gifts. In this environment and with these opportunities, the studies of this child took, for the most part, a literary direction, though science and mathematics were not neglected. After careful preparation, she began teaching, first in New England and later in her own town and in Norwood, near by. Her early death, Feb. 8, 1862, cut short her ambitions for wider study and usefulness.
183. ii. EDWIN ALONZO, b. Dec. 26, 1840.
184. iii. LAURA MINERVA, b. Oct. 21, 1842.

185. v. IRA COLBY, b. Sept. 3, 1845.
- vi. OLIVE ELIZABETH, b. Sept. 25, 1847. After some years of careful preparation, Miss Goodridge was appointed to the chair of literature in Talladega College, Ala., where she died of measles May 25, 1885. Of the nine

- children of Horace Goodridge five became successful teachers, of whom this daughter was one of the best.
- vii. HORACE PAGE, b. Nov. 30, 1849. He prepared for college in Little Falls Academy, N. Y., but before entering upon his college course was attacked with tuberculosis, of which he died, in Massena Centre, July 28, 1872. He also had been a teacher.
  - viii. LYDIA LAVONIA, b. May 30, 1853; d. Sept. 13, 1863.
  - ix. KATE COLBY, b. Apr. 3, 1855; d. Oct. 31, 1873, at her home in Massena Centre.

132. MARY MINERVA<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Ira<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Sutton, Vt., January 8, 1813, and went with the family to Massena Centre, N. Y., in 1825. There she died, January 3, 1901.

She married, in Massena Centre, February 22, 1837, NELSON ROBINSON, born in Massena Centre, April 7, 1806, son of Daniel and Esther (Kilburn) Robinson. Her husband succeeded to the ownership of the land and the business in which he had been associated with his father of supplying spars and masts for a fleet of vessels on the lower St. Lawrence and down the river to Montreal. He died in Massena Centre August 23, 1895.

Child (Robinson), born in Massena Centre:

- i. JOSEPH CLARK, b. Apr. 4, 1839, d. in New York City Dec. 5, 1906, and was buried in Massena Centre. Preparing for college in Little Falls and Ft. Edward, N. Y., the breaking out of the Civil War changed all his life plans. Enlisting in Company K of the New York Volunteer Infantry, 106th Regt., he went to the front, where he was in many battles, being promoted to be brevet major and discharged at the disbandment of the union army in Washington in 1865. He m., in Lyons, N. Y., June 16, 1870, FANNIE CRAMER, b. in Lyons, Jan. 26, 1844, dau. of George Washington and Mary Jane (Halliday) Cramer. Professor Robinson, who has attained distinction in the musical world, was prepared for college in the Trinity Preparatory School in New York City and matriculated at the College of the City of New York. He spent eight years, 1900-08, in voice culture under Frederick W. Root of Chicago and in concert work; was director of voice culture in the University of Oklahoma, in Norman, 1908-10; was engaged in concert work, 1910-12, and was elected director of music of the Pennsylvania State College in 1912. His work as instructor and concert leader has been highly approved by critics and other familiar with it. He has composed and had published some sixty songs and part songs. In his work he has had the co-operation of a wife of musical ability and accomplishments. Mrs. Robinson was educated in the Liberty Ladies' College, Liberty, Mo., taught piano-forte in the Southwestern Normal School, Weatherford, Okla., 1908-10, and became the head of the piano department of the Pennsylvania State College in 1912. At one time she was a student under Emil Liebling and Xaver-Scharwenka of Chicago and E. R. Kroeger of St. Louis, Mo.

133. BETSEY RAMSEY<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Ira<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Sutton, Vt., September 2, 1816. She was in the family party which migrated to Massena Centre, N. Y., in 1835.

She married, in Massena Centre, January 1, 1849, FRANKLIN DAVID ATWOOD, born in Sutton, Vt., May 23, 1818, son of David and Dolly (Barnard) Atwood. Her husband owned a large farm near Massena Centre, and there they settled and resided during most of their lives. In their later years they returned to the old homestead in Massena Centre, which was then owned by their daughter Chloe Delia Allison. There he died May 28, 1900, and she died June 14, 1902.

134. LORENZO<sup>7</sup> GOODRIDGE (Heman<sup>8</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Westminster, Vt., June 22, 1817. In 1840 he migrated to Lovilla, on Big Creek, Hamilton County, Ill., then a wilderness. There he taught school a couple of years, but finally entered upon business, constructing the first steam grist mill in Illinois, to which the settlers came from forty miles around with their "grists." This mill was burned three times before he finally gave it up, in 1848, at the age of thirty-one. Then he began the study of law in McLeansboro, Ill., being admitted to the bar at Springfield, Ill., in 1850. During the Civil War he was a sympathizer with the South, but, nevertheless, was appointed agent by the government for purchase of supplies and especially horses for the army. After the war he was twice elected judge of Hamilton County, and then returned to practice. He died while attending a session of the court at Carmi, White County, Ill.

He married, first, in Springfield, Vt., September 19, 1840, DESlAH DAMON, born in Springfield, May 25, 1819, daughter of Simon and Jerusha Damon. She died in McLeansboro, Ill., November 20, 1860. He married, second, in McLeansboro, March 16, 1862, EMMA THOMAS.

172. HENRY AUGUSTUS<sup>s</sup> GOODRIDGE (John<sup>r</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>, David<sup>t</sup>, Philip<sup>s</sup>, Jeremiah<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Fitchburg, Mass., November 22, 1830. His whole life has been spent in Fitchburg, and during his nearly four score years and ten he has seen the steady growth of the city from a mere hamlet to a commanding place in population, as well as in material and intellectual development. In this advancement he has always stood in the foremost ranks. Three of his brothers were in the Civil War, all winning enviable places for patriotism and bravery. He did not go to the war, but he achieved in civil life high position in the history of his native city. Hardly an honorable function has marked its growth to which a sense of compelling duty has not called him. Mercantile life, banking, literature and benevolences have all felt his influence. He was zealous as an abolitionist early in life, standing with the leaders in that stirring struggle. In public print some of his addresses have shown the best in manner and ideal that New England could offer, and his poetic efforts have been of high quality. An ode written for the Emerson centennial is worthy of a permanent place in the language.

“O radiant life, whose rounded years
 Encompassed boundless realms of thought,
 Whose heart embraced the good he found
 In all that sages lived and taught.

Brother of mountains and of seas,
 This creed the higher life to-day;
 The truth he nurtured grew unmarred
 With imperfection trained away.

How grandly hath mankind received
 His legacy of priceless mould,
 A patriot in the broadest sense,
 His service was to all the world.

From 'the rude bridge that arched the flood'
 The distant nations learned his fame;
 No lofty marble hides his dust,
 But countless tongues repeat his name."

An address given at a meeting of the Fitchburg Historical Society, May 19, 1902, shows that he was equally at home in different setting, revealing much that was new in the history of organ building in New England. But there was scarcely a subject of moment upon which he was not called to speak and which he did not make luminous by his dignified and interesting treatment. Not only has he had a long and absorbing business career, but he has been on the directorate, often as president, of nearly every worthy organization in the city of his residence. The Fitchburg Historical Society, with its beautiful and dignified buildings, owes much to his zealous and helpful co-operation. In 1918 he was still well and active, rounding out his twentieth consecutive year of service on the school committee and finding time to continue writing upon the varied historical subjects with which his long life had made him familiar.

He married, in Vernon, Vt., December 17, 1856, HARRIET STEBBINS, born in Vernon, August 5, 1830, daughter of John and Harriet (Houghton) Stebbins. She died in Fitchburg, January 7, 1907.

In the year of his birth his parents removed to Fitchburg, where he continued to live for more than sixty years, filling a large place in the civic and private life of the city. Educated in its schools and at the Fitchburg Academy, he became early identified with the anti-slavery movement. Also interested in military affairs, in 1855, when but seventeen years of age he became a member of the Washington Guards of Fitchburg at the time of its organization. He went as private with his company, as Company D of the Twenty-first Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry to the Civil War in 1861. His regiment was in the Newburn expedition in North Carolina under General Burnside, where he distinguished himself and was promoted to be second lieutenant in Company A of the Thirty-fourth Massachusetts. He was in nearly every important engagement under General McClellan, over a score in all, and became captain of Company C in the Thirty-fourth Regiment. Newmarket, Piedmont, Lynchburg, Martinsburg, Berryville and many others were the engagements in which he fought. After the Gettysburg campaign he was with the army until the surrender of Lee at Appomattox. Finally he was made colonel of a Massachusetts regiment, receiving frequent commendation for daring and bravery. He was discharged at the disbandment of the army in Washington July 12, 1865. After the war he was twelve years postmaster in Fitchburg. He was killed in an automobile accident in Boston, Mass., November 11, 1912.

Y., December 26, 1840. His early boyhood days were spent on the farm "On the Hill," but after the family moved to the village of Massena Centre, in 1851, he entered upon his preparatory education and at the same time engaged in such remunerative occupations as offered. At the age of sixteen he began teaching school, and continued at this occupation during winters until prepared for college. The Civil War broke out and he enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Sixth Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry, at Canton, N. Y., August 27, 1862. He was in the West Virginia campaign at Harper's Ferry, at Gettysburg, in the pursuit of Lee, and at Mine Run, Va., where he was wounded November 27, 1863. During the winter of 1863-64, he was in the Wolfe Street Hospital, Alexandria, Va., and was discharged for disability April 25, 1864.

Returning home, he resumed his studies for a year, taught in a private school in Massena Centre, in 1865, also for two years in the Edge Hill College Preparatory in Princeton, N. J., and was called to teach in the Collegiate School, New York City, in 1867. Before leaving Princeton, the honorary degree of A. M. was given to him by the University, Doctor James McCosh being then president. Among other pleasant experiences at Princeton was his choice by professors in the Theological Seminary and the University to prepare six of their sons for advanced standing in college and also the request of Dr. Guyot, professor of physics in the University, that he should introduce his new physical geography, devoted largely to meteorology and seismic law.

While teaching in New York City in 1867, he began his medical studies in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the medical department of Columbia University. When he was graduated, in 1871, he was the valedictorian of his class. At once he entered upon the practice of medicine, locating in Flushing, N. Y., where he remained until failing health compelled him to retire from active work in May, 1905. He was for ten years a member of the board of education in Flushing, five years its president; ten years visiting physician to the New York Infant Asylum, five years one of its consulting physicians and a member of its board of trustees; visiting surgeon for many years to the Flushing Hospital and some time president of its medical board; member of the Queens County Medical Society, the Associated Physicians of Long Island, the Medical Society of the Greater City of New York, the New York Academy of Medicine, the New York State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the New York State Historical Society, the Niantic, Fireside and Princeton clubs, the Sons of the Revolution and the George Washington Post, G. A. R., of New York City.

He died, May 31, 1916.

He married, July 26, 1866, ANNA MARGARET FIELD, born in London, England, November 30, 1848, daughter of James and Elizabeth-Mayo (Clark) Field. Her father died in London and she was brought to this country, by her mother, while yet a child. Her education was acquired in the Fort Edward Collegiate Institute, Fort Edward, N. Y., and she was graduated therefrom in the class of 1865. With inclination for social activities and leadership, she was one of the chief supports of her husband in his busy and exacting life. For many years she was a prominent member of The Good Citizenship League and for several years its president. She survived her husband, living in New York City in 1917.

Children:

- 195. i. LEONORA FIELD, b. in New York City April 5, 1868.
- 196. ii. MALCOLM, b. in Flushing, N. Y., Feb. 28, 1873.

184. LAURA MINERVA<sup>8</sup> GOODRIDGE (Horace<sup>7</sup>, Ira<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Massena Centre, N. Y., October 21, 1842. She was educated in the public schools and began her work of teaching at the age of eighteen, continuing in the profession until her marriage.

She married, in Massena Centre, January 21, 1867, SIDNEY ALONZO RICKARD, born in Massena Centre, March 20, 1843, son of Weston and Betsey (Keyser) Rickard.

Mr. and Mrs. Rickard settled in Rochester, N. Y., but in January, 1868, removed to Saratoga Springs, N. Y., where Mr. Rickard became engaged in designing and interior decoration. In 1890 he organized and incorporated the G. F. Harvey Chemical Company, which soon made connections in every state in the Union and in England. He died in Saratoga Springs, August 26, 1902.

Mrs. Rickard continues to occupy the beautiful residence in North Broadway, where she dispenses numerous benefactions that gladden many hearts. She is an unostentatious giver, and it will never be known how many have been comforted by her bounty. She devotes much time to church work, and many organizations owe no small part of their success to her helpfulness.

Children (Rickard):

- i. HARRY SIDNEY, b. in Massena Centre, N. Y., Feb. 18, 1869; d. in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Apr. 3, 1873.
- ii. HALLY SIDNEY, b. in Saratoga Springs, Sept. 3, 1874; m. JANE RANDOLPH SPENCER in Whitehall, N. Y., Apr. 22, 1896, b. in Whitehall, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1877, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Johnson) Spencer. "Hal," as he was called in the family, prepared for college at the Peekskill Military Academy and matriculated at Cornell University in 1895. Failing health compelled him to leave collége. Shortly after, he married and went to California, but even the change to the Pacific Coast failed to restore him, and he died Apr. 30, 1899. He was a young man of great promise and the heir to a rich patrimony. His temperment was winning and unailing in its sunny and benevolent attitude to all his associates.

185. IRA COLBY<sup>8</sup> GOODRIDGE (Horace<sup>7</sup>, Ira<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Massena Centre, N. Y., September 3, 1845. He was educated in the schools of his native town, and in the Civil War he enlisted, at the age of eighteen, in Company K, One Hundred and Sixth Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry. He served in the Peninsular campaign under Grant, saw much hard fighting, and was discharged at the disbandment of the army in Washington in 1865. Returning home, he married and settled in Rochester, N. Y., where he conducted a successful business until 1899. Failing health compelled him to relinquish his business cares, and, after spending a year in the Adirondacks, he removed to Pasadena, Cal., where he purchased the Spaulding Hotel, which proved in his hands very successful. He sold this and retired to his country place in Altadena, but after a few years he became the owner of the Hotel Upham, in Santa Barbara.

He married, first, in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., December 30, 1873, FRANCIS WALWORTH DAVISON, born in Albany, N. Y., June 14, 1845, daughter of John Mason and Sarah Simonds (Walworth) Davison. Sarah Simonds Walworth was a daughter of Chancellor Reuben H. Walworth. Mrs. Goodridge died July 30, 1898. It would be difficult to give in a few words a fair review of her worth and character. She embodied in a marked degree those qualities, which dominated the lives and gave fame to her distinguished family. She was a model wife and mother, ruling by her simplicity of life and fidelity to uplifting ideals.

He married, second, October 27, 1904, the widow FRANCES ANNABEL GUTHRIE, born in Cambria, Wis., November 22, 1860, daughter of Alfred App and Winnifred (Hughes) Edwards. For many years she had a leading place in the literary and social life of California, and will long be remembered for the commanding position which she held in the benevolent and ethical organizations of the state.

Children, three by the first wife and one by the second wife:

- i. JENNIE DAVISON, b. in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Dec. 20, 1875; d. in Saratoga Springs, Aug. 18, 1876.
- ii. SARAH WALWORTH, b. in Saratoga Springs, Oct. 24, 1877; d. in Saratoga Springs, Aug. 13, 1882.
- 1967 iii. ELIZABETH MINERVA, b. in Saratoga Springs, Nov. 9, 1880.
- iv. HARRIET, b. in Pasadena, Cal., June 24, 1907.

186. CHARLES FREDERICK CLASSE<sup>8</sup> GOODRIDGE (Lorenzo<sup>7</sup>, Heman<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Lovilla, Ill., December 11, 1856. Residing in Illinois, during the early years of his life, he removed to Tyler, Texas, in November, 1885. Later he became a resident of Fort Worth, Texas, as editor and proprietor of the Texas Railway Journal, published in the interest of organized labor generally and especially concerned with the social, fraternal and legislative affairs of the large organizations of trainmen, firemen, conductors and engineers of the Texas railways. The journal, of course, seeks to promote the welfare of the large body of railway men throughout the state, but it appeals to sober view rather than narrow prejudice. Its tone is judicial without being weak, its literary quality is of a high order, and its influence salutary and helpful. Mr. Goodridge is preëminently qualified for the conduct of such a journal by long railway service through various stages of promotion.

He married, in Mt. Vernon, Ill., March 9, 1882, ANNA ESTELLE GOWER, born in Nashville, Tenn., July 4, 1860, daughter of Arnold and Nannie (Martin) Gower. She died August 1, 1911, leaving the memory of an ideal wife and a devoted mother. He married, second, in Austin, Texas, April 8, 1916, MRS. MARGARET R. LOOKE.

Children, all except the youngest born in Mt. Vernon.

- i. HEMAN ELMER, b. June 14, 1883; d. in Tyler, Tex., Sept. 6, 1886.

- ii. NANNIE GENEVA, b. Sept. 18, 1885; m., in Palestine, Tex., July 28, 1904, FRANK ERNEST MEYNERs, b. in Palestine, Jan. 7, 1884, son of Herman Henry and Mollie (Rutledge) Meyners. Children (Meyners): 1. Herman Frederick, b. in Austin, Tex., Apr. 25, 1907; 2. Vivian Estelle, b. in Fort Worth, Nov. 26, 1909; 3. Geneva Ruth, b. Nov. 4, 1917.
- iii. CHARLES BENJAMIN, b. Feb. 16, 1888; m., in Fort Worth, Sept. 4, 1909, LENA (ROSENBERG) VON CARLOWITZ, b. in Austin, Tex. Child: Juanita, b. in 1911.
- iv. LEO ALLEN, b. in Dallas, Tex., Dec. 14, 1890; m., Feb. 5, 1912, RUBY LONG. Child: Estelle, b. Feb. 15, 1912.

187. ESTHER<sup>8</sup> GOODRIDGE (Austin<sup>7</sup>, Heman<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Woonsocket, R. I., February 11, 1858. Her early years were spent in Westminster, Vt., but after her marriage she lived in Eastern Massachusetts and in California, engaged actively with her husband in religious and social work. She survived her husband and continued to reside in their latest home in Corona, Cal.

She married, in Westminster, July 2, 1879, CHARLES ALBERT DICKINSON, born in Westminster July 4, 1849, son of Alvin and Elizabeth (Titcomb) Dickinson. Her husband acquired his academic preparation in Philips Academy, Andover, Mass., was graduated from Harvard University in 1876, receiving the degree of A. B. in course; and from Andover Theological Seminary in 1879. Almost immediately he was called to the Payson Memorial Church of Portland, Me. After a successful pastorate of three years, he was called to the Kirk Street Church in Lowell, Mass. In 1888 he went to the Berkeley Street Church in Boston, Mass., the name of which was soon changed to Berkeley Temple, and then he received the degree of D. D. from Dartmouth. There he remained for thirteen years. In 1901, failing health compelled him to resign, and he was made pastor emeritus of the Boston church. With the termination of his pastorate in that city his active ministerial life was ended, though while in quest of health in California, he preached occasionally in Sacramento and Oakland. He was a gifted preacher, and was intimately associated with Dr. Francis E. Clarke in the Christian Endeavor movement. In addition to his pulpit success, one of his notable achievements was the establishing and perfecting of the then new and untried experiment of institutional work as a means of church preservation. This plan was instituted by him when Berkeley Church was in a declining condition, and was pre-eminently successful in saving the church under its new name, Berkeley Temple. This institutional work for churches has spread like the Christian Endeavor movement over the whole country and world. Also at this time Dr. Dickinson established the Kurn Hatten Home for friendless boys, named in honor of his wife's sister, Mrs. Harriet Goodridge Hall, then deceased. This with a similar institution planned to care for young girls was located in Westminster, Vt. Added to his multiform duties as pastor of Berkeley Temple, Dr. Dickinson found time for much outside work. There was scarcely any concern of the national church in which he did not take a leading part. Aside from the demands of the Christian Endeavor movement, he was an active member of the prudential committee of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and also found time to send to the press The Indwelling God, Easter Immortelles and Blessed Are They That Mourn, besides numerous Temple Sermons.

He died in Corona, January 9, 1907. A service in his memory was held on May 12, 1907, in Berkeley Temple. The entire program was arranged by Mrs. Dickinson and was carried out synchronously in Boston and by the family in Corona:

Child (Dickinson), born in Owaso, Mich.:

- i. ARTHUR, b. Oct. 16, 1881; m., in Ceres, Cal., June 3, 1903, SARAH ANNIE FALL, b. in Boston, Mass., Apr. 24, 1884, dau. of Alvah and Nellie (Perkins) Fall. Residence, Corona, Cal. 195. LEONORA FIELD<sup>9</sup> GOODRIDGE (Edwin Alonzo<sup>8</sup>, Horace<sup>7</sup>, Ira<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in New York City April 5, 1868. She was christened Leonora, but was always called Lena. Much care was taken in her training, and her native talent was evinced by decorative drawing and painting at an early age. Subsequently she devoted some years to serious study, first at the Cooper Union and after at the Art Students' League in New York, where her academic work was continued. Under such masters in painting as Mowbray, Cox, Beckwith, Chase and Brush, she early achieved and maintained a high standing among her fellow students. She was gifted in other ways and had a strong mentality, copiously stored with useful knowledge gleaned from many sources. It was often a source of wonderment even to those who knew her most intimately where she could have acquired familiarity with unusual, often abstruse subjects, upon which she discoursed with definiteness and lucidity. She died in Boston, very suddenly, after an operation, June 16, 1908.

She married, in Flushing, N. Y., September 6, 1892, ALLEN WARDNER HARRINGTON, born in Westchester, N. Y., June 26, 1859, son of Thomas Ballard and Ann Elizabeth (Wardner) Harrington. Her husband was a nephew of the Honorable William M. Evarts, United States Senator from New York State and Secretary of State under President Hayes; and a grandson of ex-Senator Allen Wardner of Vermont. Mr. Harrington was an accomplished artist and did noteworthy illustrative work for the Youth's Companion,

St. Nicholas, Life, Punch and other periodicals. He has retired from active professional work and has his home in Stockbridge, Mass.

Child:

- i. ALLEN WARDNER HARRINGTON, JR., b. in Westchester, in the city of New York, June 10, 1894. He passed his early childhood in Flushing, L. I., the home of his grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Goodridge. In 1907 he entered the Hoosick School, in Hoosick, N. Y., where he remained a student until 1913. His home for some years was in Stockbridge, Mass., from whence, in February, 1916, he entered the Army and Navy Academy in Washington, D. C. He successfully passed the examinations for the United States Marine Corps in the fall of that year, the senate confirming his commission on March 8, 1917. His promotion to the rank of first lieutenant followed, the senate confirming his commission on August 11, 1917. In October, 1917, he received promotion to the rank of captain. On February 17, 1917, he married Esther Rodier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. LaCôte Rodier, of Washington, D. C.

196. MALCOLM<sup>9</sup> GOODRIDGE (Edwin Alonzo<sup>8</sup>, Horace<sup>7</sup>, Ira<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Flushing, N. Y., February 28, 1873, and was prepared for college in schools in Flushing. Entering Princeton University in 1890, he was graduated therefrom in 1894. He matriculated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, in October, 1894, and was graduated in 1898. In 1900 he began his professional career in New York City, engaging early in hospital work, which he has continued without interruption. For eight years he was an assistant attending physician to the out-patient department of Roosevelt Hospital in internal medicine and for four years was physician to the dispensary of St. Mary's Hospital. In 1905 he became interested in pediatric problems, being attached to the pediatric service of Bellevue Hospital for four years, and for three years was with the pediatric department of the College of Physicians and Surgeons under Dr. L. Emmet Holt. In 1908 he became adjunct attending physician to Bellevue Hospital on the Second Medical Division. In 1909 he was appointed an instructor in the Department of Therapeutics in the Cornell University Medical School, and in 1916 was promoted to the position of assistant professor in this department. In 1917 he was appointed visiting physician to the Second Medical Division of Bellevue Hospital. He is a member of the Princeton and the University clubs and of numerous medical societies.

He married, in Baltimore, Md., June 30, 1898, HENRIETTA TYSON PERRY, born in Baltimore, July 9, 1872, daughter of George Leonard and Mary (Norris) Perry, of Baltimore, and granddaughter of Leonard and Almira (Allen) Perry. On several lines Mrs. Goodridge is descended from distinguished Maryland ancestors of the colonial period. Her mother, Mary Norris, married in Baltimore November 26, 1868, was a daughter of John Saurin Norris, who was born in Baltimore March 25, 1813, and died there December 22, 1882. He was president of the First National Bank and otherwise prominent. His parents were John and Mary (Rooker) Norris of Harford County, Maryland; his father being in the fourth generation from John and Elizabeth (Capell) Norris, the pioneers in Arundel County before 1700. Henrietta (Tyson) Norris, who was born in Baltimore November 12, 1809, and died there February 27, 1871, was married to John Saurin Norris June 7, 1838. She was a daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth (Thomas) Tyson. Her father was in the fifth generation of the family established in America in 1683 by Renier Tyson, who was associated with William Penn in Pennsylvania. Her mother was in the fifth generation of the family founded in America by Philip Thomas, a gentleman of noble Welsh ancestry, who came from Bristol, England, in 1651, with his wife Sarah (Harrison) Thomas, and settled in Arundel County. An uncle of Henrietta (Tyson) Norris was Philip Evan Thomas, 1776-1861, a leading business man and banker in Baltimore and the active promoter and first president of the first steam railroad constructed in the United States, in 1830-33, from Baltimore to Ellicott's Mills and later to Harper's Ferry.

Children:

- i. MALCOLM NORRIS, b. in New York City, Apr. 14, 1906.
- ii. EDWIN SAURIN, b. in New York City, Jan. 30, 1909.

197. ELIZABETH MINERVA<sup>9</sup> GOODRIDGE (Ira Colby<sup>8</sup>, Horace<sup>7</sup>, Ira<sup>6</sup>, Benjamin<sup>5</sup>, Benjamin<sup>4</sup>, Samuel<sup>3</sup>, Benjamin<sup>2</sup>, William<sup>1</sup>) was born in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., November 9, 1880. She was educated in private schools in Rochester, N. Y., and in Boston, Mass.

She married, in Saratoga, October 12, 1904, CLARENCE BRYANT HALL, born in Ottawa, Ill., March 18, 1868, son of Joseph and Sarah (Gurley) Hall. Brought up on a farm in central Illinois, he prepared for college in the high school of Ottawa, taking an elective course in Beloit College, Wisconsin. Beginning his career in Chicago, he early engaged in electrical business, for which he was well fitted by his college training. Partly on account of health and partly due to the business needs of the corporation with which he was connected, the Illinois Electric Company, he moved to the Pacific Coast, where he is secretary and treasurer of the company, with residence in Pasadena, Cal.

Children (Hall), all born in Pasadena:

- i. DOROTHY, b. Nov. 11, 1906.
- ii. BRYANT GOODRIDGE, b. Nov. 27, 1907.
- iii. ELIZABETH, b. Dec. 26, 1911.
- iv. JOHN MASON, b. Dec. 20, 1912.
- v. CHARLOTTE, b. July 13, 1916.

AUTHORITIES CONSULTED

AUTHORITIES CONSULTED

OLLOWING is a list of the principal authorities consulted in the preparation of this work. In addition many minor sources of information have been used, particularly those relating to New England local history and genealogy.

Several books treating of this family have been published in England and in the United States, and to all of them the present-day compiler must be much indebted. The Goodrich Family Memorial, prepared under the direction of Edwin Hubbard of Chicago, in 1861 and after, consisted of two pamphlets, one containing "disconnected and fragmentary memoranda of the English history of the family" and the other a history of part of the first five generations of the descendants of William Goodrich of Wethersfield.

In 1889 The Goodrich Family in America was published in Chicago. This followed the earlier investigation which had been utilized in the Hubbard pamphlets, with special and elaborated research added. The genealogy was edited by Lafayette Wallace Case for the Goodrich Family Memorial Association under whose auspices the volume was brought out. It was a complete history of the descendants of John Goodrich and William Goodrich of Wethersfield, with a consideration of the family in England and the origin of the name, and very short accounts of some of the descendants of Richard Goodrich of Guilford, Conn., and William Goodridge of Watertown, Mass.

The English book is the History of the Goodricke Family, edited by Charles Alfred Goodricke and published in London, in 1885. It presents the annals of the family in the counties Lincoln, Suffolk, Cambridge, Norfolk and York, with elaborate detail and much documentary material from the herald's visitations of counties Lincoln, Cambridge and York, parish registers, wills, family Bibles, close rolls, fine rolls, signet rolls, chancery proceedings, manuscripts of the British Museum, royalists' composition papers, reports of royal commissions on Historical Mss, Bodleian Mss, Harleian Mss, state papers, home office papers and private correspondence of past generations.
