PIERCE GAGE

HIS DESCENDANTS.

WITH A BRIEF ACCOUNT OF HIS ANCESTRY.

PREFACE.

THIS little volume of records contains a few of the leading facts in the lives of most of the descendants of Pierce Gage. The greatest lack of completeness will be found in the record of the Ewing family, of which but little could be learned. No attempt has been made to write a complete record of any person's life, but only to record the leading events in his or her life.

As eulogy is not the object of this record, very much of praise has been omitted which truthfully might have been written.

Doubtless errors of statement will be noticed, but these are not intentional. Any one who has had experience in work of this kind, knows the extreme difficulty of always securing reliable data. Frequently conflicting statements are made by apparently reliable parties, which render it embarrassing, and difficult to arrive at correct conclusions.

The history of the family in England is given as it is generally understood by the family in this country. Most, if not all of the records relating to the family in England, were collected by Mr. Somerby, private secretary to the late George Peabody, the eminent London banker, and were forwarded to a brother in this country. Mr. Peabody's position was such as to enable his secretary to have access to records of great importance to his investigations.

It has been thought by some, that all the Gages of America sprang from a common ancestor, John Gage of Ipswich, Mass., who landed at Salem, Mass., June 12, 1630. This idea has been found to be erroneous.

About a hundred years after the arrival of "John of Ipswich," another family of Gages seems to have come from England to Massachusetts. The family is said to have remained in Weston, Mass. for a while, and then separated. Philip Gage was one of this family.

In 1783, three brothers, James, John, and Matthew Gage, emigrated from the town of Coleraine, Ireland, and settled in South Carolina. James Gage removed to Ohio in 1829. Many of the descendants of these three brothers reside in South Carolina, Georgia, and the Gulf States.

In 1853, John Gage came from the vicinity of Bristol, England, and settled in Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, and afterwards in Tremont in the same state. He died in 1878.

Possibly other Gages, from across the water, may have settled in this country at dates unknown to us.

For the compilation of this volume, very valuable records relating particularly to the early history of the family in this country and England, were furnished by Mr. Isaac K. Gage of Penacook, N. H.

Valuable contributions were also furnished by Mr. Otis A. Gage of Pelham, N. H.; Mr. Daniel Gage of Hudson, N. H.; Miss Caroline E. Gage of Swampscott, Mass.; Mrs. Mary S. David of Lincoln, Ill.; Mr. Daniel Gage, and Mrs. Alice M. Gage of Lowell, Mass.; the late Miss Doreas Lovejoy of Weston, Vt.; Mr. John Hall of North Springfield, Vt.; Mr. Norman Hall of Afton, N. Y.; Mr. William R. Spaulding of Weston, Vt.; Mrs. Georgianna (Gage) Curtis of North Paris, Me.; Rev. George W. Ruland, of Westmoreland, N. H.; Frank E. Sheed, Esq., of Boston, and many others.

Town histories have been consulted, particularly those of Rowley, Mass., Wilton, Hancock, and Washington, N. H., also "Gage Genealogy," by Mr. Norris Lancaster Gage, of Topeka, Kansas.

It is proper to say in this place that the first thoughts of a record of this kind were the result of a correspondence with Mr. Joseph Barker Gage, then of St. Louis. The correspondence was begun by him in 1877, and related to the genealogy of the family, in which he was deeply interested. An interest was awakened which resulted in the collection of the materials for this volume.

Joseph Barker Gage was a son of Judge James L. and Frances D. Gage, and was born at Mc Connellsville, Ohio, July 14, 1842. He died in Washington, D. C., June 9, 1893. He held a clerkship in the War Department, and, with about twenty others, was killed by the falling of the building in which he was employed.

CHAPTER I.

EARLY RECORDS.

THE Gage family are descendants of the Normans. In 1066 de Gaga, de Glauga, or de Gage, accompanied William the Conqueror from Normandy into England, and, after aiding in the Conquest, was rewarded by large grants of land in the forest of Dean, in the county of Gloucester. He resided near the forest of Dean, and built a mansion in Cirencester,* where he died. He was buried in the abbey at Cirencester, and his descendants lived in that vicinity many generations. The family included persons of wealth and influence, some of whom held seats in parliament. The first systematic record of the family begins in 1408, with John Gage. He was the father of John Gage,² who married Joan Sudgrove. Their son, John Gage,³ married Eleanor St. Clere. He was knighted in 1454, and died Sept. 30, 1486. The heir of John Gage⁴ was William Esq.,⁴ who was born in 1456, and whose wife was Agnes Bolney. Sir John Gage,⁵ their son, was born in 1480. He married Philippa Guilde-ford, and was knighted May 22, 1541. He died April 28, 1557. His eldest son, Sir Edward Gage,⁶ was knighted by Queen Mary. He was the father of fifteen children, and is said to have been a man of great wealth. His eldest son, John Gage,⁷ is said to have inherited fifteen manors, besides other real estate. He had no children, and, at his decease, the property fell to John Gage,⁸ a son of his brother, Thomas,⁷ who was the second son of Sir Edward Gage,⁶ before mentioned. John Gage⁸ was made baronet March 26, 1622. He married Penelope,* widow of Sir George Trenchard, and died Oct. 3, 1633. He was the father of nine children.

John Gage,⁹ his second son, emigrated to America, landing at Salem, Mass., June 12, 1630. It is generally believed that he emigrated from Stoneham, Suffolk Co., although one authority says that he was from Groton, in the same county. He came in company with one of the Win-throps, and others of character and influence. They were members of the Massachusetts Bay Company, which founded Boston, Salem, and other cities in that vicinity. They were not driven from home by poverty nor persecution, but came in search of better opportunities than their native country afforded. He went at once to Boston, where, we have reason to suppose, he remained for a time. Boston was founded that year, (1630) and his name appears on the records of the First-Church, as one of the members.

In company with John Winthrop jr. and eleven others, he settled Ipswich, Mass. in 1633. It was then known as Agawam. He lived in Ipswich until 1664, when he removed to Rowley, near by, where he died In 1673. He was an influential citizen, and it is recorded that he held office in both Ipswich and Rowley. Some expressions in his will lead us to believe that he was a man of strong religious convictions. He had two wives, and, according to some authorities, three. By his first wife, Anna, (who died in Ipswich in June 1658) he had five sons. In November following the death of his wife, he married Sarah, widow of Robert Keyes. One account says that she survived him, while another states that he married, for his third wife, Mary Keyes, in Feb. 1663, who died Dec. 20,

1668. The "History of Newbury, Mass." states that "Sara Gage, widow, died July 7, 1680." This may have led some to suppose that Sarah, 2nd wife of John Gage, survived him; but this is not a necessary conclusion. Three of John Gage's sons married wives bearing the name of Sarah. Two of these wives undoubtedly lived until a later date than 1680, the date of the death of the widow Sara Gage of Newbury, but Sarah Stickney, who married Samuel Gage in 1674, is not accounted for by any of our records. She may have been the widow Sara Gage who died in Newbury in 1680. The fact that the date of his third marriage is given, and also the precise date of his third wife's death, lead us to believe that the report of a third marriage was a reality.✕

The children of John Gage, our first American ancestor, were :—

*Benjamin, married Prudence Levar Oct. 11 1671.

*BENJAMIN, according to Savage, appears to have lived in Haverhill, Mass. at one time, and to have died soon after his marriage.

According to the history of Rowley, Mass., prior to his marriage, or in 1668 or 1669, he lived in Rowley, where he was one of the overseers. It states that he appears to have lived in that part of Rowley called the "Merrimack Lands," now included in Bradford.

There is reason to suspect that James Gage,[†] born in Amherst, N. H. in 1767, the father of Judge James L. Gage, was a descendant of Benjamin Gage.

Daniel,¹⁰ married Sarah Kimball, May 3, 1675.
Jonathan, " Hester Chandler, Nov. 12, 1667.
Samuel, " Sarah Stickney, June 16, 1674.
*Thomas, born 1656. married 1st, Sarah ——— 2d, Elizabeth Mighill, June 11, 1695.
Josiah, married Lydia Ladd, May 15, 1669.
†Prudence, " Samuel Stickney, April 6, 1674.
Nathaniel.

Daniel Gage,¹⁰ second child of John of Ipswich, appears to have lived in that part of Rowley which is now Bradford. His wife was Sarah Kimball, and they were the parents of eight children. He died Nov. 8, 1705. Their children were :—

Daniel,¹¹ born March 12, 1676.
John, " Jan. 1, 1677.
Sarah, " April 29, 1679.
Samuel, " May 9, 1680.
Mary, " Feb. 1, 1681 or 1682.

*According to Gage's History of Rowley, Mass., Thomas Gage was a blacksmith, and lived for a time in Beverly, Mass., and afterwards in Rowley, on a place which was kept in the family until 1822.

According to the same authority Thomas Gage senior was appointed lieutenant in an expedition against Port Royal, Nova Scotia, in 1707, and was killed there by a cannon ball. Caleb S. Gage, recently a resident of Essex, Mass., was a descendant.

†Savage states that Prudence was the widow of Benjamin Gage, and therefore only daughter-in-law of John Gage.

Mehitabel, born Sept. 16, 1683.

Lydia, " Jan. 30, 1685.

Hannah, " Feb. 17, 1690 or 1691.

Daniel Gage,¹¹ son of Daniel¹⁰ and Sarah Gage, married Martha Burbank, March 9, 1698. They lived in the north-west part of what is now Bradford, Mass., on the banks of the Merrimack, on what was then the main road to Methuen. He owned a ferry, which was known as "Gage's," or the "Upper Ferry." On the place where they lived there was recently (1879) standing the oldest house in the town, known as the "Gage House." His wife died Sept. 8, 1741. His death occurred March 14, 1747.

The children of Daniel¹¹ and Martha Gage were :—

Mehitabel, born Dec. 29, 1698.

*Josiah, " 1701.

Martha, " April 7, 1703.

Lydia, " May 24, 1705.

†Moses, " May 1, 1706.

Daniel,¹² " April 22, 1708.

*Josiah Gage settled in Pelham, N. H.

†Moses Gage remained on the homestead in Bradford. He was the father of ten children, seven of whom were sons. His tenth child, Thaddeus Gage, settled in Sanbornton, N. H., (now Franklin). Some of his descendants now (1894) reside in Penacook, N. H., Mr. Isaac K. Gage of that place being a grandson.

Sarah, born Feb. 19, 1709.
 Jemima, " Dec. 2, 1711.
 Naomi, " Feb. 25, 1714.
 Esther, " May 15, 1716.
 *Amos, " July 28, 1718.
 Abigail, " Dec. 22, 1720, d. young.
 Mary, " Aug. 31, 1722.
 Abigail, " March 13, 1724 or 1725.

Daniel Gage,¹² son of Daniel and Martha (Burbank) Gage, married Ruth — and settled in Pelham, N. H., where the remainder of his life was spent, and where he died Sept. 24, 1775.

Their children† were :—

Rebecca, b., Pelham, N. H., June 12, 1737.
 †Joseph, b., " " Feb. 4, 1739.
 Pierce, b., " " Mar. 29, 1741.
 Ruth, b., " " June 20, 1743.

*Amos Gage, with his brothers, Josiah and Daniel, settled in Pelham, N. H., a town which, according to its population, has probably been the home of more Gages than any other in this country.

Of the daughters of Daniel and Martha Gage, Jemima married Richard Kimball Nov. 8, 1733; Naomi married David Hall, Sept. 22, 1737; Esther married Jonathan Carrier of Methuen, Mass., Aug. 1, 1739; Mary married Gideon Hardy, May 24, 1744.

†The record of the death of Daniel Gage and of the births of his children is from "Gage Genealogy," by Norris Lancaster Gage.

1 But little is known of Joseph Gage. It has been thought that he died young.

²Daniel, b., Pelham, N. H., Sept. 8, 1745.

Abigail, b., " " June 29, 1748.

³David, b., " " Aug. 9, 1750.

² Daniel Gage, fifth child of Daniel and Ruth Gage, married Elizabeth Greenough, May 27, 1779, and resided in Pelham, N. H. During the Revolution he was in the army and was engaged in the battle of Bunker Hill. He is said to have died from the effects of exposure during the war. If so his death must have been after the war closed, as his youngest child was born in 1785. He had three children, the youngest of whom bore his name and resided in Pelham and Hudson, N. H., dying in Hudson, Dec. 18, 1852. He left a son, Daniel T. Gage, who died in Hudson, N. H. in 1890. Daniel Gage, a son of Daniel T. Gage, now (1894) resides in Hudson and bears the name which has come down through seven generations.

³ David Gage, seventh child of Daniel and Ruth Gage, married Elizabeth Atwood, and always resided in Pelham, N. H., where he was engaged in farming. According to the authority of his daughter, the late Mrs. Alice (Gage) Stickney of Lowell, Mass., he was a soldier in the Revolution. He died in Pelham, April 26, 1827. He was the father of twelve children, seven of whom were sons. His descendants are widely scattered. His son David died in Pelham in 1827; Jonathan lived in Pelham, Cornish, and New London, N. H., dying in Pelham in 1866; David died in Pelham in 1827; Abigail, the sixth child, married Asa Gage of Pelham; resided for a time in New London, N. H. and died in Somerville, Mass. in 1840.

The late Addison Gage of Arlington, Mass., Geo. W., late of Boston and Chicago, Alva of Charleston, S. C., and David A. of Chicago, were her sons. Miss Caroline E. Gage of Swampscott, Mass., a lady much engaged in genealogical studies, is a granddaughter.

John died in Andover, Mass. in 1865; Alice married Asa Stickney, and died in Lowell, Mass., Jan. 13, 1887, aged ninety-eight years; Nathan lived and died in Pelham; was in the war of 1812, d. in 1860. His son, Daniel Gage, is an extensive dealer in ice, in Lowell, Mass. (1894); Joseph died in Pelham in 1874; Alvah died in Pelham in 1850.

Abner, b. Pelham, N. H., June 22, 1753.
Mary, b. " " Dec. 27, 1756.
Martha, b. " " July 11, 1758.
†Lida, b. " " Dec. 5, 1760.

4 Abner Gage, eighth child of Daniel and Ruth Gage, married, first, Susan Ober, and secondly, Nancy Rogers. He, like three of his brothers, was a soldier in the Revolution. While marching across Charlestown Neck to engage in the battle of Bunker Hill, one of his feet was struck by a red-hot shot from a British cannon. He recovered, but was always afterward a cripple. He settled in Acworth, N. H., and afterward in Langdon, a neighboring town. His first wife died while he resided in Acworth. He removed to Ashtabula, Ohio in 1810 and died in 1814. His wife died in 1819. He had ten children, nearly all of whom settled in Ohio. Joseph, the fifth child, settled in Claremont, N. H., in the county where he was born, and died there in 1861. His granddaughter, Mrs. Mary A. (Stoddard) David, now (1894) of Lincoln, Ill., has spent much time and expense in investigating the genealogy of the Gage family. Joshua L. Gage, the eighth child, settled in Sheffield, Ohio in 1822, and resided there as late as 1876. He died in 1881. His son, Norris Lancaster Gage of Topeka, Kansas, is the compiler of a valuable pamphlet of "Gage Genealogy," from which many of the facts in these notes were gleaned.

†May not the name have been Lydia misspelled?

CHAPTER II.

PIERCE GAGE AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

PIERCE GAGE, third child of Daniel and Ruth Gage, was born in Pelham, N. H., March 29, 1741, and was a resident of that town until 1789. In common with his brothers, Abner, Daniel, and David, he endured the hardships of a soldier's life during the Revolution. According to the "History of Wilton," he was enrolled Sept. 26, 1776, and was a member of a company commanded by Capt. David Runnels, in Col. Tash's regiment, which was raised to serve in New York. He brought home from the war a very long musket, which, tradition says, he picked up beside the dead body of a British soldier. The gun was preserved many years, and possibly is still in the possession of the family at Wilton. He was three times married, and all his children were born in Pelham. His first wife was Mary Bodwell, of Methuen, Mass., whom he married in 1764; the exact date is not at hand, but they were "published" Nov. 13, 1764, and their marriage must have taken place very soon afterward. She was the mother of seven children, and died Sept. 23, 1781, in her forty-second year. His second wife was Eunice Eaton, of Haverhill, Mass. They were "published" Sept. 2, 1782. She was a daughter of Jonathan and Jane (Page) Eaton, and was born in Haverhill Jan. 5, 1743. She was the mother of two children, and died in her 44th year, April 13, 1786, six days after the birth of her second child, who took her name.

His third wife was Susannah Noyes of Andover, Mass. They were "published" Jan. 8, 1787. She was his companion the remainder of his life, and, though she never bore him children, she must have been a very loving and affectionate step-mother, judging from the description given of her by some of the grandchildren. In 1789, the year which was made memorable by the first inauguration of Washington, and by the outbreak of the French Revolution, Pierce Gage removed from Pelham to Wilton, N. H., where he established a home. He bought a farm of Moses Noyes, in that part of Wilton known as Abbott Hill. The farm had previously been owned by a man by the name of Ballard, who is supposed to have been the original settler on the place. The farm had probably been cleared but a few years, and presented a rather rough and back-woods appearance. There was a house standing, which, though greatly altered and improved, remains a neat and comfortable dwelling to this day. The remainder of his life was spent on this place, where he died July 14, 1821. His wife survived him ten years, dying May 3, 1831, at the age of ninety years.

Pierce Gage was one of the eleven original members of the Baptist Church in Wilton, which was organized April 7, 1817. He was a man of great conscientiousness, and tried to exemplify in his daily life the doctrines of Christianity. He was a man of genuine neighborly qualities, and as such was long remembered.

An anecdote serves to give us a better idea of his character. He was a man of impulsive nature, and, like such, liable sometimes to act hastily. While engaged in repairing the highways, in company with others, the conversation turned to the subject of politics. He became excited, and even angry, and used harsh language to a neighbor who held different views; he went home at night, but the thought of his conduct troubled him; he retired at night, but could not rest; he rose from his bed and, in the darkness of night, went to his neighbor, acknowledged his mistake, and sought reconciliation.

The home which he founded on Abbott Hill, in Wilton, has had a record worthy of notice. Founded in 1789, it still remains in the possession of the family, and has ever since been the home of the Gage family. The period is a long one, equalling in point of time the whole constitutional history of our country.

The children of Pierce Gage were :—

They raised a family of nine children, all of whom lived to adult life, married, and had children. About the year 1815, they took into their family Lucy Sawtelle, a child who had just been deprived of a mother's care, and treated her with parental affection until her marriage, about thirteen years afterward, in 1828. She married Abner Mansur and resided in Groton, Mass., the most of her married life. She died at Ayer, Mass., May 25, 1890.
