PREFACE BY RUFUS HODGES.

(Copied from his Pamphlet, published in 1837.)

I HAVE attempted, in the following pages, to throw together some few memorials of the families in New England, who bear the name of HODGES. It is but a meagre outline; and the greater part of the information I have been able to collect, in regard to their early history, is now preserved only in the recollection of a few aged persons. Without some effort for its more permanent preservation, it will soon be lost forever. This is the leading motive for the publication of this little book. It is a mere record, that will be of interest to none but to those who bear the name, or are connected with it. It is supposed that, with those who in after times may bear our name, this memorial may possess a value almost inestimable. An effort should be made to hand it down to them. No apology is deemed necessary for the minute and somewhat homely details which will be occasionally found in these pages. With many, this will constitute their chief value. I have followed the narrative form rather than that of the common genealogical tables, believing this to be better suited to the habits of many who will be interested in these details. The desire of knowing something of those from whom we have descended, is universal. It is commendable. It is a feeling which can in most cases be indulged with profit. I will presume to add that, in our own case, it may be indulged with no ordinary degree of satisfaction.

It is supposed there were three brothers of the name of Hodges who came to Massachusetts about twelve or fifteen years after the first landing at Plymouth. Their descendants are now very numerous. They are spread over New England and New York, and are found in most of the Southern and Western States. They are found in every walk and condition of life; and, so far as my information extends, they are as respectable as they are numerous. I have yet to learn that the name has been sullied by a crime.

There are families of the name in Maryland, in Virginia, and in some of the other Southern States, which I have not been able to connect with those of New England. My information in regard to them, however, is quite limited. But whoever of the name trace their descent from the families in New England, may consider themselves as brethren—the scions of a common stock.

I am far removed from almost every source of information in regard to the early and indeed the present history of these families; and such items of information as I have been able to collect are, in many respects, very imperfect. I should indeed hesitate in committing this little book to the press in its present imperfect state, but that I cherish the hope that by this means it may fall into the hands of some one more competent and more favorably situated than myself, who will pursue the undertaking, until it is rendered in some degree complete. It is perhaps impossible at this time to trace the genealogy of these families beyond the three brothers who emigrated to America. The name, however, has been one of respectability in England for the last three centuries.

INTRODUCTION.

RUFUS HODGES of Cincinnati, Ohio, published, in 1837, a record of "The Families in New England, of the name of HODGES," with a hope expressed in the preface that "some one, more favorably situated than himself, would at some future period pursue the undertaking until it should be rendered in some degree complete." I have attempted to bring down the record to the present time, 1853, but fear that it will be as incomplete as when he left it, for there appears to be no signs of a diminution of the name, or number bearing the name. In my researches I have found a number of families of the name descended from the first William, who are not mentioned, and of whose existence he probably had no knowledge. Among the number will be found the name and descendants of George Hodges,³ born in 1708, who moved from Taunton or Norton to Woodstock, Conn., some time about the year 1756. For an account of his family and descendants, I am indebted to Mrs. Holmes Ammidown of Boston, who is the grand-daughter of the abovenamed George, and daughter of the late Daniel; and I am also indebted to her son, E. H. Ammidown of Harvard University, and to E. F. Hodges of Boston, for information respecting this family, all of whom are descendants of George Hodges of Woodstock.

I am also indebted to many friends for information contained in these pages, particularly to Edgar H. Reed of Taunton, who, I believe, searched all the graveyards in his vicinity, and a portion of the town records, for information. I am also indebted to Charles Hodges and William W. Comstock of Providence, R. I.; Earl Hodges of Norton, Elijah Hodges of Mansfield, J. Vincent Browne of Salem, Marcus Morton, Jr. of Andover, H. B. Wheelwright of Taunton, Mrs. Deborah Cobb of Mansfield, Lewis L. Hodges of Buffalo, and to many other friends, for a variety of information, and to the Rev. Joseph Hodges, of North Oxford, for old and interesting documents.

The information contained in these pages has been obtained by the writer and others by diligent research, and as I have advanced in the record the information obtained has become more and more interesting. Rufus Hodges, in his preface, says very truly, "that it will probably interest none but those who bear the name." If the reader receives as much pleasure as the writer has done in collecting the information, he will be well paid for his time. I am aware that there may be some of the name who will be omitted in these pages. I have certainly endeavored to omit no one. If this should prove to be the case, my apology will be that I was not aware of the labor of the undertaking when I begun it, or of the necessary time and labor which a work like this requires. There were a few errors in the original work of Mr. Hodges of Cincinnati, which I have endeavored to correct; my only surprise is that there were so few errors. He says in his preface, which will be found herewith, "They (the Hodges family) are found in every walk and condition in life, and, as far as my information extends, they are as respectable as they are numerous. I have as yet to learn that the name has been sullied by a crime." This was written before the days of poor Jack. He was of the wrong complexion, and lived on the wrong side of Mason & Dixon's line, and probably assumed the name of some family with whom he resided. He was accused of crime. This was sufficient. He suffered a few years after Rufus Hodges wrote the above.

We may perhaps, with some propriety, congratulate ourselves that the Hodges family have been a very respectable kind of people generally. It has been whispered, however, that a long time ago, a long time previous to the temperance excitement and the "Maine liquor law" reform, that a descendant of the first William (1633) was accused of going home to his family, from an old-fashioned militia training, with a big stone in his hat. This little piece of scandal was undoubtedly put into circulation by some envious and mischief-making neighbor not of the name.

I have generally followed the form of my predecessor, whose work, particularly the early history of the family, I have copied very freely. Whenever I have been able to obtain all the particulars of families here recorded, I have adopted a very convenient and I hope it will be considered an approved form of genealogical tables. This information I have obtained from town records or from friends. There may be a few timid persons who may feel reluctant to have the year of their birth published. It may be remarked as a general rule, that whenever the age of a lady or gentleman of a certain age is brought into question, their friends generally give them a credit of about ten years more than really belongs to the owners. Therefore the writer claims the credit of reducing to a right standard the age of some of his friends.

I will also indulge the hope that some one of the name will, at some future time, continue this work, correcting the errors of the present writer, and adding a long list of honest and Honorable names.

It will be found that, in the early history of New England, it was considered quite honorable to aspire to commissions in the militia of this Commonwealth. The Hodges family have aspired to the commission of Captain very generally; and whether qualified or not, they have been very successful in their aspirations. It has been remarked that, in the towns of Taunton, Norton, and Mansfield, you may call every man you meet of the name, Captain Hodges, and you will be right about three fourths of the time. A small number of the name have had the boldness to endeavor to reach the office of "Colonel." Allow a suggestion to be made in this place to every man bearing the name; don't ever try to go higher—for should any individual of the name ever reach the next grade in rank above Colonel, he may have the misfortune (according to precedents recently established in political affairs) to be nominated President of the United States!

It will be observed that Major Joseph Hodges served in the British army in the "Old French War." He was undoubtedly a bold, energetic, and a military man. There were a number of the name who served in the war of the American Revolution, viz.: the first Isaac held the commission of Captain. Among others of the name who served in this war, we find that of Captain Rufus, (the son of Andrew,) the second Isaac, and the second Jonathan, and Benjamin. Coming down to later years, there were two of the name who probably were desirous of keeping up the reputation of the family for patriotism and deeds of arms, who did service in the "Dorr-ic War," on the part of the Government, in Rhode Island, in 1842. They both held the commission of Colonel. Col. Bradford Hodges commanded the Artillery stationed at Pawtucket, and the other Colonel was a Lieut. Colonel of the "Providence City Regiment," and subsequently commanded the "Providence Horse Guards," during and after the Rebellion referred to above. Neither of them were killed or wounded!

For the purpose of showing the regular descent of families, I have frequently placed numbers over the names, or with the names, showing the generations from the first William, viz.:

THE HODGES FAMILY.

A SETTLEMENT at Taunton, in the county of Bristol, Massachusetts, was first attempted by Europeans in the year 1637. The place at that time, it would seem, was known indiscriminately by the two Indian names of Ticticut and Cohannet. The settlement was commenced by Miss Elizabeth Pool and her associates, and they established themselves at or near the place which has since been known as "Taunton Green." This Miss Pool was a lady of fortune and of a respectable family in Old England, but she had suffered persecution during the troubles under King Charles the First, and she left her native land and settled in the wilds of America in order to enjoy in peace the religion of her conscience. The country was then an unbroken wilderness, and in possession of the native Indians, and she is reported to have endured much hardship, and to have suffered greatly in the loss of property in this perilous enterprise. She is supposed to have been encouraged in the undertaking by the Rev. William Hook, who was, for a while, the spiritual guide of the settlement. It is found in the records of Taunton proprietors that, in setting out Miss Pool's lot, reference is made to the lot of Rev. Mr. Hook. She was never married. "In this most ancient town of Bristol County the curious traveller may see a fair slab, formerly laid over the grave of this virgin mother of Taunton, now removed to the common burial ground." The inscription on this slab represents that "She was a native of Old England, of good family, friends and prospects, all of which she left in the prime of life, to enjoy the religion of her conscience in this distant wilderness; a great proprietor of the township of Taunton, and chief promoter of its settlement and its corporation, in 1639-40, about which time she settled near that spot; and having employed the opportunity of her virgin state in piety, liberality, and sanctity of manners, died May 21st, in 1654, aged 65." It is perhaps impossible, at this time, to ascertain the names of all the associates of Miss Pool, who accompanied her to Taunton; but they were all, or principally, from Taunton in Old England; and the place was incorporated in the year 1639-40 by that name, the people declaring that "in honor and love of their dear and native country they called this place Taunton."

On the 7th of March, in the year 1643, the colonies of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Haven, and Plymouth, entered into a perpetual league of friendship and amity, for offence and defence, by the name of "The United Colonies of New England." In that year, an enrolment was made of the male inhabitants of the several colonies, between the ages of sixteen and sixty, subject to military duty. In the enrolment of the inhabitants of Taunton, of that year, appears the name of WILLIAM HODGES. From him have descended all the families of that name in the southern part of Massachusetts.

It is supposed there were three brothers of the name of Hodges who came to Massachusetts in those early times, their names being William, John and Richard. Tradition favors this opinion. Two of them, John and Richard, settled in Salem, Essex County, Mass., and William in Taunton, Bristol County, Mass.

At a court held at Salem, January 27, 1638, William Hodges served upon a jury; and in the proceedings of the court held at the same place, Oct. 29, 1642, John and Richard are both mentioned. They all probably came to America as early as 1633.

There was a Captain Hodges at Boston as early as 1633, whose excursions by sea to Virginia, and to the coast of the present State of Maine, and to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, are mentioned in Winthrop's Journal. He seems also to have commanded a ship in several voyages from Boston to England and back, and is mentioned by Gov. Winthrop several times in connection with John Gallop, another sea captain; but as there is no reference to the voyages of either of them after the settlement was commenced at Taunton, and as John Gallop appears to have been a proprietor of land at Taunton, whose daughter a son of William afterwards married, it is probable that Captain Hodges of Boston, and William Hodges of Taunton, were the same individual, and that he and John Gallop abandoned the sea, to share with Miss Pool the perils of the wilderness at Ticticut. William must have been also at Salem temporarily in 1638, from his having served on a jury at that time. [See Note 1, at the end.] Beyond this, nothing very satisfactory appears in reference to William Hodges. He died April 2d, 1654, leaving two sons, John and Henry, and perhaps daughters.

In the year 1675, there was taken a list of the proprietors of land in the settlement of Taunton, and among them appears the name of John Hodges, (probably the eldest son,) who was proprietor, "in right that was of his father," and Henry Hodges, who was proprietor "in the right that was of John Gallop, his father-in-law." In the confirmatory grant of William Bradford, in the year 1689, John and Henry Hodges are also mentioned as proprietors of land at Taunton. From these two individuals, John and Henry Hodges, have descended the two great branches of the Hodges family, well known in the southern part of Massachusetts.

Elder Henry Hodges was born in 1652; died Sept. 30, 1717, aged 65, as per sketch, copied from his grave stone, in this book. The following is copied from the "Proprietors' Records," Taunton; it is not a record of all of his children. See abstract of his will.

"Henry Hodges married to Ester Gallup, 17 Dec. 1674.

Mary, daughter of Henry Hodges, b. 3 Feb. 1675.

William, son " " " b. 18 March, 1680.

Charity, dau. " " " b. 5 April, 1682.

Ester Gallup, daughter of John Gallup, born 21 July, 1653."

Tradition has preserved some information in regard to these men, but beyond this, little satisfactory is known, as written memorials of those early times are scarce. It appears that in later years, births and deaths in families were more generally recorded in town records than they are now.

John Hodges lived a little west of Taunton Green, on the Providence road, at the place where William Hodges, his descendant, now lives, (1853.) He appears to have been a man of enterprise, and he was successful in the accumulation of property, as there is reference made to different tracts of land held by him in the settlement. He must have been born about the year 1650, and he probably died about 1745, leaving seven sons, according to the following, copied from the proprietors' records, Taunton:—

"John Hodges married Elizabeth Macy, 15 May, 1672.

Nathan, " " " " 23 Oct., 1690."

The abovenamed George died in Norton, Aug. 10, 1713, aged 27.—Norton records.

Of Henry Hodges, the other son of William, a little more is known. He seems to have been a man of much respectability and worth of character. He was a leading man in both the civil and military affairs of the settlement. He was known as "Captain Hodges," and was a Deacon (the rank of captain being probably considered about equal to that of deacon in those days) and presiding Elder in the church, and, as is said, occupied a seat in the pulpit with the Rev. Samuel Danforth, who succeeded the Rev. Wm. Hook in the pastoral care of the church at Taunton. As the clergyman was undoubtedly the most considerable personage in the settlement, it is fair to presume that a captain commanding their military forces, and the presiding elder in their church, especially if both offices were united in the same individual, would rank next to the minister. But however this may have been, he was a highly esteemed and valuable member of the settlement in those primitive days. He lived a little west of Taunton Green, about half way between Crossman's Mills and the place where his brother John lived, and within a few yards of the place where a red schoolhouse stood in 1820. At that time there were some indications on the surface of the earth of the spot where the cellar had been. The wife of Henry Hodges was Ester Gallop, daughter of John Gallop, who is supposed to be the sea captain of the name before alluded to.

In the will of Henry Hodges of Taunton the following are the names of his children mentioned, viz.: sons, William, John, Joseph, Henry, Benjamin, Ephraim; daughters, Mary Keith, Ester Southworth, Charity Leonard, Elizabeth Hodges, Abigail Hodges; wife, Ester. Date of will, Sept. 17, 1717. Witness, Samuel Danforth, Jonathan Harvey, Samuel Danforth, Jr. Will proved, Nov. 4, 1717. It would appear by this will, that he left, at his death, eleven children, viz., six sons and five daughters.

Descendants of Henry Hodges.

Henry Hodges, son of the first Henry, probably known as Lieut. Henry Hodges, lived about two miles west of Taunton Green, on the Providence road. He married Sarah Leonard; he died (according to the record on his grave stone) Sept. 18, 1735, in the 70th year of his age, leaving two sons, Henry and James.

Henry Hodges, grandson of the first Henry, was well known in his day as "Captain Henry Hodges." He lived on the south side of the road leading from Taunton to Norton, and about a quarter of a mile east of the "Three-Mile River Bridge." He married Mary Eddy, daughter of Joseph Eddy, and died in the year 1779, aged 55, leaving six sons, viz.: Zephaniah, Spencer, Henry, Elkanah, James, and Abiathar.

Zephaniah Hodges, son of the third Henry, married Hannah Shaw, and lived at the place where his father had lived, and died in the year 1793, aged 49 years. He had one son, Zephaniah Leonard, and three daughters, Jemima, Mary, and Nancy. Zephaniah Leonard Hodges entered Brown University, but never graduated. He has since lived in Taunton. Jemima intermarried with Capt. Asa Arnold, of Norton.

Spencer, son of the third Henry, married Mercy Dean, a daughter of Nathan Dean; and Abiathar, Tabitha Burt, daughter of Jacob Burt.

Henry Hodges, son of the third Henry, lived in the house next east of his father's, on the opposite side of the road. He married Anna Hodges, (out published Feb. 5, 1778—records of George Godfrey,) daughter of William Hodges of Taunton, and died in the year —, aged 79. He had four daughters, viz., Sarah, Fanny, Lydia, and Betsey.

Benjamin Hodges, son of the first Henry, settled in Norton, not far from what in those days was called "Crooked Meadow," and at the place where Ephraim Allen lived in 1835. He left one son, Ephraim, and several daughters—the names of none but Rachel known. Ephraim Hodges died at sea, about the year 1768, being about 38 years of age, leaving five sons, viz., Benjamin, Ephraim, Nathaniel, Ezra, and Daniel, and two daughters, viz., Rachel and Polly.

Ephraim Hodges, son of Benjamin and grandson of the first Henry, referred to above, was on a whaling voyage at the time of his death, his son Benjamin being with him and both in the same boat; when attacking a large whale, the harpoon was thrown, the whale turned upon the boat, or in his flurry struck the boat, knocking overboard some of the men, and among the number Ephraim Hodges, who was drowned in sight of his then young son Benjamin. This event was related to the writer by Benjamin, when he was over ninety years of age. Benjamin Hodges was a merchant in Providence, in the olden time. After the whaling voyage referred to, he fitted out a vessel from Providence, on a trading voyage to the West Indies, sold his cargo there, at a good round price, received the proceeds in specie; was homeward bound, when one or two days out and becalmed, they were boarded by a large boat-load of armed pirates, who took possession of the vessel, had the specie brought out of the cabin, the kegs and boxes were opened, and the money divided among the pirates, in the presence of the owner. After taking from the vessel everything of value, they told the captain and owner that they must consider themselves very fortunate not to be required to walk the plank. The pirates then left them.

Benjamin Hodges died in December, 1842, aged about 92 years, at Sanford Freeman's, in Norton. His death took place shortly after his removal from Providence. He had outlived all his family, his wife, (they had no children,) brothers, sisters, all of his acquaintances in early life, (except the late Judge Laban Wheaton of Norton, who was about his own age,) "all, all dead and gone," as he was wont to express himself, and he left alone, "a monument of God's sparing mercy." He always appeared very cheerful and happy, notwithstanding he had past through such a checkered life. The writer was in the habit of visiting him frequently during the last fifteen years of his life, when he was at the Dexter Asylum, and also at his boarding-place in Providence, and none made him more heartily welcome or appeared more happy to see him than "Uncle Ben."

He served a short time in the army of the Revolution, and received a pension a few years before his death. He was at one time connected in business with the late Ozias Danforth of Providence. He married, in early life, Abigail Hodges, daughter of the first Jonathan; she died in Providence, May 5th, 1807, aged fifty years.

Joseph Hodges, son of the first Henry, settled in Norton, at the "Crooked Meadow," and at the place where Capt. Seth Hodges lived in 1844. He was a man of a brave and chivalrous spirit, and bore the commission of major in the British army, in the "Old French War." He died at the age of fifty-five, and in the early part of that war, when stationed on the lines between the present State of Maine and Canada. He was engaged in several severe actions with the French; and in one of them he took from a French officer a splendid sword, which is preserved as an heir-loom in the family. He married Bethiah Williams, March 11th, 1712. She was the daughter of Thomas Williams, (son of the first Richard.) They had eight children, viz.:—

Joseph Hodges, born in 1714, eldest son of Major Joseph Hodges, lived about a half a mile west of his father, on the same road, at the place where William Hodges lived in the year 1850. He held a captain's commission in the British army in the "Old French War." He was a man of desperate bravery. In the latter part of the war he was stationed near Fort Schuyler, in the State of New York, and on taking command of a detachment of colonial troops, he went out on what was termed an Indian scout, a kind of service the most daring and desperate. He and his whole party fell into the hands of the Indians, and were all killed, except one man by the name of William Merry. Merry was taken prisoner; he, however, was released, and returned home to relate the melancholy fate of his brave, but unfortunate captain and associates. He married Marian Hodges, daughter of ——— Hodges, and died at about the age of 35, leaving one son, Joseph, and two daughters, viz., Naomi and Nancy.

The following letter from the Rev. Joseph Hodges, of North Oxford, Mass., will undoubtedly be read with interest:—

NORTH OXFORD, October 4, 1853.

A. D. HODGES, Esq.,

Washington Bank, Boston.

Dear Sir,—Yours of the 1st inst. came to hand to-day. As I was looking over some old documents, preparatory to my fulfilling the promise made to you when last in Boston, I have deferred writing, partly on account of pressing engagements and partly because I hoped to see or hear from my father. Had I heard from him, I could have been more explicit in my statements, perhaps have added more. I take the liberty to make a statement relative to Major Joseph Hodges, son of Capt. or rather Elder Henry Hodges, he having borne probably both titles, as stated by Rufus Hodges in his record.

It has always been related of Major Joseph Hodges, that in the Old French War he went on an expedition against Cape Breton; that on his returning voyage in a French vessel, he died suddenly, and there was suspicion that he was poisoned. I have in my possession a copy of his will, dated "the twenty-fifth day of February, in ye eighteenth year of his Majesty's reign, George the Second, King, &c., Anno Domini 1744-5." In this will is named his silver-hilted sword. Rufus Hodges' record, page 9, states, "He (Major H.) was engaged in several severe actions with the French, and in one of them he took from a French officer a splendid sword, which is preserved as an heirloom in the family." It is true that this sword may have been taken from a French officer, but if so, it must have occurred before the date of his will and before he went out against Cape Breton, for he expressly says in this will, "Being now designed to go on an expedition against Cape Breton." Of a previous service I know not that we have any information.

The will of Capt. Joseph Hodges, son of Major Joseph Hodges, I have in my possession; it is dated "this first day of May, in the twenty-ninth year of his Majesty's reign, Anno Domini 1756." An inventory of "sundries," belonging to the late Capt. Joseph Hodges, is in my possession, dated "Camp at Lake George, Oct. 7th, 1756." I have also quite a number of enlistments of private soldiers "to serve his Majesty King George the Second, in a company of foot, under the command of Joseph Hodges as Captain, to be raised for the expedition for the Reduction of Crown Point."

Capt. Hodges, with his company, left home probably about the first of May, 1756, and died about the first of October of the same year.

The circumstances of the death of Capt. Joseph Hodges were given to his family by William Merry, who was a soldier under his command at the time of the desperate conflict in which he was killed. It had fallen to the lot of another officer to go out on this service termed a "scout," for the purpose of making discoveries of the enemy, and especially that part of the enemy composed of Indians, which it was most hazardous to meet in a service of this kind. In consequence of illness, this officer was excused. Capt. Hodges volunteered his services on this occasion, and those who accompanied him were volunteers. His command numbered 60 men. The company had marched nearly to the point designated in the order given to Capt. Hodges, when he made a halt, for the purpose of refreshment. A party was despatched to the lake, with canteens, for water; they returned immediately, with the alarming information that they saw on the shore of the lake hundreds of fresh tracks of Indians in the sand by the lake. The order was immediately given to resume the march. The company had proceeded but a short distance, when the firing from every quarter convinced them that they were surrounded by Indians. Capt. Hodges charged his men "to fight for their lives;" he set his men the example by the energetic use of his own gun, which he carried on this occasion, instead of his sword. He and his men fought bravely, but were overpowered by numbers. Merry's testimony was, that he fought by the side of his commander, who was first wounded in the ankle by a musket ball, when he dropped on his knees, and continued to fire and encourage his men. Another ball struck him in the breast. Placing one hand on the wound, to check the flowing blood, with his musket in the other, he still kept the Indians at bay; one of whom reached forward to sever his scalp; foiled thus, the Indian levelled his gun and shot him through the head, when the brave captain fell. It was Merry's custom to relate with pride, that he killed the Indian who aimed the last fatal shot at his commander, of whose bravery and character he spoke in the highest terms. Merry was taken prisoner; nearly if not all the rest of the company were slaughtered. After being a prisoner with the Indians five years, Merry made his escape and returned to Norton, where he passed the remainder of his days in a quiet and humble life. He had the reputation of being an honest, simple-hearted man, and his statement may be relied on as faithful.

At the time of the death of Capt. Joseph Hodges, the English encampment, to which he was attached, was most probably near Lake George. Rufus Hodges speaks of this engagement as occurring near Fort Schuyler, and makes no mention of Lake George. It is possible that Sabbath-day-Point, referred to under the name of Lake George, is the spot near which Capt. Hodges and his party met their fate. I hope to be in Boston the last of this month. I shall be happy to receive or impart any information, useful or interesting, respecting our ancestry. In respect to my father, it may be proper to say that he held the commission of Captain, from the year 1807 to the year 1812, under Gov. Strong, and of course he used the "silver-hilted sword." I may further state that he received the commission of Justice of the Peace, about the year 1825.

Believe me yours, very truly,

JOSEPH HODGES, Jr.

P. S.—I shall forward to you some papers, which, as a matter of curiosity, you may be interested to peruse. I value them, though crude and torn, as they have come down from generation to generation.

The following is a copy of a paper sent me by Rev. Joseph Hodges, referred to by him in his letter. The orthography is adhered to. The writing cannot be represented:—

The abovenamed Jonathan Hodges was a farmer and clothier. He lived in Norton, at the place which he left to his son Jonathan. (See account which follows.) He died July 18th, 1795, aged 74 years. Abigail his wife, died Sept. 29, 1795, aged 75 years. They were both members of the Church in Norton. Jonathan Hodges was a good citizen and a pious man; he joined the Church in early life, during the latter part of the pastorship of the Rev. Joseph Avery, or more probably during the early charge of the Church of the Rev. Joseph Palmer, who was ordained Jan. 3, 1753. His wife Abigail was admitted to the Church, or "received into communion," June 28, 1761, and their child, Jonathan Hodges, was baptized May 29, 1763. He was probably admitted to the Church sometime between 1753 and 1761. The following is a copy of his confession of faith. A copy of his last will and testament will also be found herewith; also a schedule of the property left to his eldest daughter, Bethiah Freeman, who died in 1829, at the age of 85 years:—

I desire to bless God for that he hath cast my lot in a Gospel Land, where I have the Glad tidings of a Saviour proclaimed in mine ears, and for that I have the holy Scriptures to Read & to direct me in the ways of God's commands; and I also desire to bless God for his Goodness to me, that I descended of such parents, who taught and instructed me and gave me up to God in mine infancy in baptism, which is an ordinance appointed by Christ, to believers & there infant seed; & not with standing God's goodness to me, I have sinned against him, I therefore acknowledge I deserves nothing from the hand of God, but his wrath and indignation to be poured out upon me; but I would bless his most holy name that he hath put it into my heart to be making my peace with him. I have had a desire for some time to come to the Lord's table, but being in some measure sensible of my own unworthiness, I daunt not, least by coming unworthily, I eat and drink judgment to my self. But I have taken encouragement from the word of God, to come up to this holy ordinance, as in Matthew: 11: 28: come unto me, all ye that Labour and are heavy Laden, & I will give you rest: John: 6: 37, and he that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out. I desire to come hungering and thirsting after Christ, & to be putting my trust in him. I also desire to forsake all sin, as it is a breaking of God's holy & just law. I also desire the prayers of this Church to God for me, that so I may become a worthy communicant at the Lord's table.

Jonathan Hodges

A copy of the Will of Jonathan Hodges, son of Major Joseph Hodges.*

In the name of God amen. I, Jonathan Hodges of Norton, in the County of Bristol and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Gentleman, being now in a Comfortable State of Health and of a Sound and disposing mind and memory, think it my duty to make this my last Will and Testament.

First of all, I Commend my Soul to God who gave it, and my body to the Earth, to be decently buried, at the discretion of my Executor hereafter named; and the Worldly Estate which God has blessed me with, I dispose of as follows, to Wit:—

Imprimis: I Give and bequeath to my wife Abigail Hodges, one half of all my indoor moveables, to be at her own disposal; and as I have taken an Obligation of my Son Jonathan, for the maintenance of my said Wife, the above gift to my said Wife, is in lieu of her right of dower or thirds in my Estate.

Item: I Give to my son George Hodges, his heirs and assigns, five Shillings for his full share of my Estate, together with what I have already given him.

Item: I Give to my Son Jonathan Hodges, his heirs and assigns forever, all my homestead farm and buildings thereon, and the fulling-mill and previledges thereto belonging. I also give him my said Son Jonathan, all my Ceder Swamp. I also give my said Son Jonathan, all my stock of Cattle and all my personal estate whatever; and also give him my said Son Jonathan, one half of my indoor movables and all my wearing apparel to him, his heirs and assigns forever. Item: I Give to my five daughters, to wit: Bethiah, Wealtha, Mehitabel, Abigail, and Selah, five shillings to each of them; the reason I Give them no more in this will, is because I have Given them already their full portion out of my estate. All the rest and residue of my estate, both real and Personal, I Give to my Son Jonathan, whom I hereby appoint my Sole Executor of this my last will and testament, he paying all my just debts, legacies, funeral charges, and charges of administration; ratifying and confirming this and no other to be my last Will and testament.

In Testimony whereof, I have this Sixth day of January, in the Year of our Lord 1795, Set my hand and Seal.

Signed, Sealed, Published, Pronounced, and delivered by the said Jonathan Hodges, to be his last Will and Testament, in Presence of us,

Margaret Danforth, and

After the peace of 1783, he followed the occupation of his father, that of farmer and clothier, and resided on the same place of his father, about a half a mile south of what was known as the "Raymond Factory," in Norton, on the Taunton road. James Hodges was the fourth descendant from the first William, as per the above; was born in 1737, and died in 1818, at the age of 81 years. He lived in the south part of Norton, near what was known as the Raymond Factory. He married Mary Briggs, the daughter of Nehemiah Briggs. He was a man of some peculiar traits of character, strictly honest, and well meaning. His dress was that of a gentleman of the old school, and made after a fashion strictly original. It may not be well to relate anecdotes of him, but it will perhaps do to relate one of a neighbor of his, an old gentleman, who did not reside a great way from him, who was a cotemporary, and in some things resembled him. The old gentleman referred to, was quite eccentric, and wore a dress of form antique. In the leg of his pantaloons he had a pocket, where he always carried one pipe, and in his mouth as constantly another,—being very fond of the weed, and producing upon his farm a sufficient quantity for his own consumption. He having gone one day into the woods to procure a load of wood, when returning, his load was upset, and in the overturn it fell upon the old gentleman's pipe leg, which accident prostrated him to the ground so fixedly, that it took him some time to extricate himself. He finally cleared himself from the load which had been upon him—he sprang up, seizing his leg with both hands, and being in a state of agony both in body and mind, exclaimed, I—have—either—broke—my—leg—or—my—poipe—and—I hope—it—aint—my—poipe!

Was successful in business, and retired from active life in 1846. His wife died in New York, in 1845. He now (1853) resides in New York. They have had five children, viz., Lewis L., Mary Ann, Eliza, Preston H., and William.

William Hodges, of the 5th generation from the first William, the only representative living, as far as my knowledge extends,* is now (1853) eighty years of age; he lives in Taunton, about a half mile west of the Green, on the Norton road. This place has probably been in the family ever since the settlement of Taunton. It is known that the estate has been owned by the family over 150 years. The first John lived on this estate. The "old house" has been removed, and the present one was built by the second William, and thought to be 120 years old, probably more.

The abovenamed William Hodges was born in 1772; married Mary Chandler, daughter of Joseph Chandler of Pomfret, Conn., Feb. 22, 1803. The day this is written is the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day; they are both living.

George Hodges³ and his descendants.

He was son of the second William, by his first wife. (Their children were George and Abigail. Abigail married Mr. — King.) The maiden name of William's second wife was Clapp; their children were Job, Elijah, Abijah, and Mary.

The abovenamed George was born in Taunton, (upon the place where William Hodges⁵ now lives,) in 1708; died in 1786, aged 78 years. He was undoubtedly a man of superior mind, and exercised a great influence in his day. He must have lived some time after his marriage in Norton; for, on examining the records of this town, we find the births of the children of "George Hodges and Susannah his wife," recorded, viz., George, b. Jan. 26, 1739; Silas, b. Feb. 11, 1741. Some time after this period, probably about 1754, he removed to Woodstock, Conn. Perhaps he lived in Norton a short time, and removed again to Taunton, previous to his removal to Woodstock. A member of the family of William,⁵ remarked that he removed from their house to Woodstock. His children, whose names we do not find in the Norton or Taunton records, were Elkanah, Daniel, (born April 17, 1754—see record which follows,) Leonard, and Susannah. He was in the habit of visiting Taunton frequently, after his removal to Woodstock.

We learn from very good authority, that he brought a friend, Mr. Chandler of Woodstock, upon the occasion of one of his visits, whom he introduced to his sister Mary, and to whom she was married, previous to his return to Woodstock.

This marriage, which probably caused quite a sensation at the time, took place some time previous to 1766.

* Since writing the above, I find there are three or four others living, of the 5th generation. See table of James Hodges.

Tradition says, Mary was a young lady of great personal beauty; and a friend gives me information that he visited a certain portion of the State of Vermont, during the last summer, and that her descendants there have inherited, to a considerable extent, the beauty so characteristic in some branches of the family. Some allowance should be made for the poetic vision of this gentleman, who was recently married to a young lady of the name.

Mary Hodges referred to, was twice married; her second husband was Peter Chandler, (her first husband bore the name of Chandler,) of Pomfret, Conn. She left a numerous family of children, one of whom by the second marriage, Susan, married Judge Chandler, a man of great worth and respectability, now living at an advanced age, in Peacham, Vt. Another daughter married Mr. ——— Edwards, of Keene, N. H. H. B. Wheelwright, Esq., Principal of the Bristol Academy in Taunton, who married Abbie Hodges, daughter of William,³ and to whom I am indebted for information, writes me as follows:—"I have found to-day, Capt. William Hodges' will, (son of the first John,) dated 1766, in which he mentions his six children, and his grand-daughter Sarah, daughter of Mary."

Extract from the will. "I have heretofore given my Son George, a considerable sum of money to further his well settlement, and have further made provision for a further sum; therefore I shall give him no more, save what I shall hereafter mention in this will." The further mentioned bequests were, "One quarter part of two cows and his white riding gelding," and one quarter of the residue of any property, the whole of which was divided among the four boys,—but Abijah was to forfeit his fourth, unless "he maintained the abovenamed Sarah suitably, until she was 18 years of age."

The present worthy and skillful Superintendent of the Insane Asylum at Worcester, Doct. George Chandler, is a grandson of the abovenamed Mary Hodges.

The children of George Hodges,⁴ were—

George, born in Norton, Mass., Jan. 26, 1739.

Silas—see table which follows.

Elkanah settled in Connecticut, and became an eminent physician.

Daniel—see table which follows.

Leonard removed to Vermont. Descendants in vicinity of Williston.

The abovenamed Daniel Hodges descended from the first William of the fifth generation, (as above.) He was a public spirited man, and held an important station in the community in which he moved. Besides holding various county offices he represented the town of Warren, Mass., in the State legislature, a number of years. He was also a Justice of the Peace. He was the fourth son of George Hodges and Susannah Cobb—was born April 17, 1754, was married to Rachael Rich on the 23d of June, 1781, and died in Warren, December 11, 1829, aged 75 years. He has occupied a very prominent position in Massachusetts; was born in Freetown, Mass., in 1784, graduated at Brown University in 1804, commenced the practice of law in Taunton in 1807, was elected a member of Congress when a young man in or about the year 1817, was in Congress four years, occupied a seat on the Bench of the Supreme Court of the State fifteen years, has been thrice Governor of the Commonwealth—once in consequence of the death of Gov. Eustis, in 1825, the duties of the Chief Magistrate devolving upon him as Lieutenant Governor; again in 1840, and for the third time in 1843—he was appointed Collector of the Port of Boston in 1844, which post he held four years, and this year, 1853, he has been elected a delegate from Taunton to the Convention to revise the Constitution of Massachusetts; his son Marcus, Jr., being also elected a delegate to the same Convention, from the town of Andover. Gov. Morton has had three sons, Marcus, Jr., Nathaniel and James, and one son-in-law, Mr. Hawes, who have graduated at Brown University; two of them certainly receiving the highest honors of the class. William Hodges was a descendant from the first William, being of the fifth generation as above. He was born in Mansfield, Mass., in 1757, and removed to Walpole, where he died in 1810, aged 83 years. His widow, Sally Hodges, died in Walpole, Sept. 13, 1811, aged 76 years. They have had twelve children, the largest number of any one family recorded in this book.

Willard Hodges,⁶ son of William, removed from Walpole to Franklin, state of New York. It will be observed that he had ten children.

The account of the family of William Hodges and Sally Willard was obtained from the relatives of the family, and, therefore, should be correct. Still I find, on reference to my notes, copied from the Norton Records, that the births of the children of William Hodges, and wife Sarah Willard, bear a close similitude to the names of the first three children of William Hodges and Sally Willard here recorded.

Extract of a letter from Rev. Richard Manning Hodges, of Cambridge, Mass., to Rufus Hodges, of Cincinnati.

CAMBRIDGE, FEB. 18, 1836.

The branches of your family are much more extended than mine. In a short journey that I took last summer, I found descendants from the ancestor who settled in Bristol County, in Maine, in New Hampshire, and in Vermont. They were numerous, of various standings in life, but all respectable, and, in one instance, professional, that of a clergyman. I was not till then aware that the name was so numerous.

My own connections bearing the name are quite limited in number. They were all born in Salem, Mass., and all live there, with the exception of one family in Philadelphia, one family in Andover, and my own family in Cambridge, Mass. Tradition, as I have heard it, reports that there were three brothers of our name, who came from England and settled in Massachusetts, two of them in Salem, Essex County, and one in Norton or Taunton, Bristol County. The earliest record that I have, is from Cooke's Report, vol. 3, part 5, Report 15, where we learn that one William Hodges was a patron of the vestry in Weston, in the county of Gloucester, in the ninth year of Elizabeth. "At a Court holden in Salem, 27 1 mo., 1638, William Hodges served upon a jury." "At a Court holden in Salem, 29th 10 mo., 1643," John Hodges and Mr. Richard Hodges are mentioned in the proceedings. These are my most ancient records. Then comes George Hodges, my ancestor in a direct line, of whose parentage I have not been able to learn anything; but of his marriage and children, and their children, and so on, from generation to generation, down to the present time, I have authentic testimony in regard to facts and dates, and copious historical notices. I have appended a genealogical table, embracing such general information as may be interesting to you.

Gamaliel Hodges, the tenth child of John and Mary Hodges, is my father, and, as you will see, is the only one of that family now living.* I have two brothers and one sister living in Salem, all married and having children. There are children of George Hodges, Benjamin Hodges and Mary Boardman living in Salem and its vicinity. Jonathan Hodges, the son of Gamaliel Hodges, and cousin of my father, is living in Salem, and has children and grandchildren. Only two of the name of Hodges have been graduated at Harvard College, viz., Benjamin, son of Benjamin, and my cousin, in 1803, and myself, in 1815. Benjamin died in the year after he received his degree. Of myself, it may not be uninteresting to you to know that from 1821 to 1833 I was a Congregational minister in Bridgewater, Mass., and, for two years past, I have resided in Cambridge, Mass. I have a wife and two children.

RICHARD MANNING HODGES.

* Gamaliel Hodges died in Salem, Dec. 25, 1850.

Extract of a letter from the Rev. Richard Manning Hodges, to A. D. Hodges, dated Cambridge, Dec. 10, 1852.

I have received no very particular information to communicate in regard to the family name since I communicated with Mr. Hodges, of Cincinnati, some years since. During my recent visit to Great Britain, I found the name very common on signs, in cities and places through which I passed. My mother, Sarah Williams, died the 10th Oct., 1850. She was born in Salem, March 3, 1767. My father, Gamaliel Hodges, died in Salem, Dec. 1850. He was born in Salem, Aug. 15, 1766. Since I wrote to Mr. Rufus Hodges, Jonathan Hodges, son of Gamaliel Hodges, cousin of my father, has deceased. I regret that I have no record of his death. There are four of the name of Hodges borne on the last catalogue of Harvard College, descendants from the Salem branch. There are also four of the name of Choate, viz., George C. S., Charles Francis, William G., and Joseph Hodges, descendants of my father, borne on the same catalogue. My son, Richard M. Hodges, has just returned from a professional tour in Europe, and will commence business as a physician in Boston. My uncle, Benjamin Hodges, was a man of large consideration. He possessed, in full measure, the confidence and respect of his fellow-citizens, and when he died the town felt that it had lost one of its best inhabitants. His son is the earliest name of Hodges borne on Harvard College catalogue. He has descendants by the name of Silsbee occupying places on the same catalogue. My father's sister, Mary Hodges, married Francis Boardman, of Salem. She has a son still living in Salem. My oldest brother Joseph married Elizabeth Ward Chipman, of Salem. My sister Margaret Manning married Dr. George Choate. My brother John married Miss Mary Osgood Deland, daughter of Thorndike Deland, Esq., of Salem.

Respectfully and truly your friend,

R. M. HODGES.

Descendants of John and Richard Hodges, of Salem, Mass.

As furnished by the Rev. RICHARD M. HODGES to the late RUFUS HODGES, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The abovenamed George Hodges was born in Salem, in 1792, and married Elizabeth Welcome; he was a descendant of the first John, of Salem. Not much has been said of the living in this volume, but it will be safe to say that he is one of the "solid men of Massachusetts." He removed to Andover, Mass., in 1828; was elected to the State Legislature, a Representative from the town of Andover, in 1833, 1835, 1836, 1837; and was a member of the Senate from Essex County in 1846 and 1847. Mr. Hodges, and his son George, of Oxford, are largely engaged in the manufacture of woollens.

Children and Descendants of George Hodges and Hannah Phippen, (2d wife.) Died June 15, 1837.

Lydia, born Sept. 9, 1800. Married Samuel Holman, of Salem. Mr. Holman frequently represented the city of Salem in the General Court of Massachusetts. Their child, Eliza Hodges, born May 25, 1831.

Mary Phippen, daughter of George Hodges and Hannah Phippen, born Nov. 22, 1805. Married J. Vincent Browne, of Boston. Mr. Browne was a member of the General Court of Massachusetts from Boston in the years 1836 and 1837; was Navy Agent at Boston from 1841 to 1845; and on the extension of the revenue laws over the new State of California, in 1851, was appointed principal appraiser to organize that branch of the Customs there.

Benjamin Manning died 1830.

The abovenamed George Hodges was appointed Surveyor of the Customs, for the district of Salem and Beverly, by Mr. Jefferson, which office he resigned in 1820.

Children and Descendants of George Hodges and Lydia Gale.

George Hodges, vide preceding table.

Hannah married Hon. Joseph Kittridge, M. D., of Andover. He died Sept. 6, 1847. Dr. Kittridge often represented the town of Andover, Essex County, in the General Court of Massachusetts, and he was frequently a member of the Council board. The children of Joseph and Hannah Kittridge were:—George, b. Nov. 20, 1820; Joseph, b. May 25, 1822, (married Henrietta Watson; their children, Anna, b. Dec. 23, 1848; Thomas, b. April 4, 1852,)—Mary Hodges, b. April 11, 1824; John Hodges, b. Sept. 12, 1826; Susan Osgood Hodges, b. Aug. 6, 1830; (married George C. Shattuck Choate, M. D., Physician of the State Lunatic Hospital at Taunton;—their child, Joseph Kittridge, born Aug, 1853;)—Sarah, born Sept. 8, 1832; Hannah Armstrong, born July 17, 1834.

In November, 1852, I wrote to a friend in Liverpool, Eng.,—S. M. Raymond, Esq.,—enclosing a letter addressed to —Hodges, with a request that he, Mr. R., would present the same to some one of the name who had lived or was acquainted with some one of the family name in Taunton, England, present the letter to him or them with a request that they would send me some account of the family now residing in the town of Taunton. I have not been so fortunate as to receive the information desired. The following letter from Mr. Raymond will explain the course taken, also the interest which Mr. R. took in the matter:—

LIVERPOOL, FEB. 8, 1853.

Almon D. Hodges, Esq., Boston.

Dear Sir;—Being in London on the 5th instant, I consulted the Directory and selected such parties of the name of Hodges as seemed to me most likely to fulfil the object of your letter to me, with the appended letter to some gentleman of your family name. I called upon a merchant in Lombard Street, St.

George's Square ; a broker in the Royal Exchange,—(not seen) ; a surgeon near Russell Square ; a surgeon in Brompton Row ; a short-hand writer in Chancery Lane,—(not seen) ; a barrister in Essex Court, Temple. All were from the west and south of England ; some from Somersetshire and Devonshire, others from Kent. William Hodges, No. 1 Essex Court, in the Temple, barrister, author of a valuable and standard compilation of railway law, and much employed in railway litigation, comes from a small village, twenty miles from Taunton, or rather his family had existed in that village, he thinks, since the first settlement of New England, though he was born in Weymouth, a channelport in Dorsetshire. He says the family have a coat of arms, in which three crescents are conspicuous, indicating that they had made pilgrimages to the Holy Land. I delivered your letter into his hands, and said what I could to interest him in the matter. He will give it attention. He does not think he can write to you himself, but he will send your letter to his friends in the West of England, and you may expect to hear something definite in reply to your letter, from the barrister himself or from some of his kinsmen. I hope that I have effectually promoted your plan of inquiry, and that you will obtain some interesting details.

I am, very respectfully, yours,
S. M. RAYMOND.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Noah Woodward, of Sidney, Maine, to Mr. Hodges Reed, of Taunton, Mass.

SIDNEY, JUNE 25, 1833.

Dear Sir ;—Yours of the 7th inst. was this day received, and I feel happy to give any information in my power. The first knowledge I have is of two men by the name of Hodges, one John, the other Henry, that lived in Taunton. I cannot tell the year, but think it was A. D. 1744, as I was a small boy at the time. Major Joseph Hodges I knew two or three years. He was a man unusually respected. He was about six feet one inch in height. The name of the father of Major Hodges I think was Henry. Captain Joseph Hodges, son of Major Hodges, was a good citizen. I am now within a few months of ninety-six years of age, and my memory fails me very much.

Respectfully yours,

NOAH WOODWARD.

Mr. Woodward probably remembered some other Henry Hodges, and not the first Henry.
