EXPLANATORY.

The superior figures as <sup>(1)</sup> following the names of persons in the Genealogy are intended to so identify the particular person whose name they follow, wherever such person's name appears in the Genealogy, as to prevent any confusion which might arise owing to a similarity of names. By means of the combined use of such superior figures and the index of names, the descent of any member of the family from the common ancestor may readily be traced.

PREFACE.

A family not knowing its ancestry,
Is like a brook without a source,
And a tree without a root.

The author has many times listened to the disconnected tales of his ancestors, and thinks that the record of their lives should be preserved for future generations, as it might contain something of interest, perchance others in the future might be as interested as I have been.

This log of the Hannay Genealogy is somewhat condensed, as the writer is a youth, and the earliest settlers are back in the tenth and twelfth centuries. I commenced this work in the year 1908, at first the work was slow, but information gradually poured in until the present volume was completed. I have searched the records the New York State Capitol in Albany, N. Y., contained, to some extent, till the great fire of March 29, 1911, which totally destroyed the genealogy records and crippled my work for a time. I have visited old cemeteries and searched family bibles wherever I was able to reach them by travel, also, I have corresponded with several relatives and whoever and wherever I could get any information in regard to the genealogy, and wish to say I have been much pleased with the courteous replies received in answer to my numerous questions.

There are two departments of literature in which the writer is nonplussed as he prosecutes his work, as in preparing a history of early times, when he discovers that the matter of correctly spelling names of persons and places confronts him, also the correct dates. The spelling of the early settlers was notorious; this promiscuous spelling of their names could be straightened out by reference to their signatures. It was the way others wrote their names for them that confused; but nearly every inhabitant wrote his or her name in several styles of spelling. The handwritten records in the Albany, N. Y., City Hall tower, centuries old, have been examined closely.

In the perusal of the records I have had a good deal of trouble in securing the correct dates of settlement, also births, deaths, and marriages. The dates and sketches in this book have been examined by the people which they concern, and acknowledged correct.

If this volume creates an interest and arouses any enthusiasm in any of the descendants it shall have fulfilled its mission and served the purpose for which it was written. These pages are intended only for members of the family.

I have given all the information I could secure regarding any person by the name of Hannay irrespective of what branch of the family they may spring from. In other words, this book is intended as a record of the Hannay Family, not any particular branch of it, and I firmly believe that this book contains the name of every person by the name of Hannay in the United States. I have divided this genealogy into twelve parts, as I have been unable to connect the persons mentioned in any one of these parts with those in any other part. I do not believe, however, that there are twelve distinct branches of the Hannay Family in the United States, but with the means at my command I cannot connect them. I trust, however, that this work may fall in the hands of members of the Hannay Family who will be sufficiently interested to pursue the matter further, and that it may be possible at some later date to connect those branches of the Hannay Family which should be connected.

WILLIAM V. HANNAY.

PART SECOND.

* Hannay, of Sorbie in Wigtownshire, a family of great antiquity, traceable from the earliest period. In the public records, among the powerful chiefs of Galloway who swore fealty to Edward I, occur the McCulloch's, the McDowall's, the Hannay's and the Adair's. While Edward I was enjoying a temporary triumph by force and fraud over the Kingdom of Scotland, there came up as Wigtownshire landholders in 1296 and signed the Ragman's Roll, two gentlemen, Gilbert de Hanneth and Gilbert de Anneth, who are recognized by antiquaries (Chalmer's Caledonia, Vol. 3, 389) as the ancestors of this race. That they were not native Galwegians is evident enough, for the only places from which the name could be taken were parishes in England and the prefix of "de," which also assumed of "a," continued in use by the family down to the time of Charles I. But, without going into the question of the first assumption of what was clearly a Teutonic name, — there is no doubt that at this early date, when the Baliol's (and perhaps the Veterpont's), and the Toskirtion's held possessions in Galloway — the DeHanneth's or DeHannaye's were of great consequence. At an early period a whole district of Wigtownshire — The Machers — was called Machers — Hannay from their possessions there. The ruins of their castle and its site still display vestiges of the ancient importance of the house in the parish of Sorbie.

John Ahannay, of Sorbie, a witness to Sheriff Patrick Agnew's marriage contract March 22, 1625, unfortunately renewed an old blood feud with the Murrays of Broughton through which his family had already suffered much, and from excesses committed, he, incurring further fines and escheats, was obliged to part with the remainder of his lands with "The old Place," which was sold to the Lord Galloway, also his lands of Craillock. John Ahannay was killed in a quarrel.

Lord Galloway, like many of the Wigtownshire landowners, became impoverished so much so that he used to rent out his beautiful Scottish home (Sorbie Castle), and seek a cheaper domicile for himself; of late years, however, he has retrieved and is again living in his ancestral home.

* See Appendix A.

We find in the Lochew Charter Chest first contract entered into betwix Sir Patrick Agnew, of Lochew, and John Ahanay, of Sorbie, whereby said John, with consent specified, sold and under reversion by way of Wadsett disposed the lands of Crelock, now Craillock, to the said Sir Patrick the 29th of June, 1625.

Their arms occur in the celebrated MS. volume of emblazonments of Sir David Lindsay of the Mount. Lord Lyon, King at Arms, Sorbie-place, the seat of the family from the reign of King James IV, was anciently a tower of some strength and is now a picturesque ruin surrounded with woods, about a mile east of the village of Sorbie. There are still to be traced the remains of a fosse in the eastern side where the land is rising.

Various people under the name of Hannay appear in the Scottish Society records as: Thomas Hannay, in Monorgand; Katharine Pearson, spouse of Andro Hannay, parish of Forgund, Aug. 27, 1596; Marion McBryde, sometime spouse to Andro Ahannay in Gass, parish of Glenluce, sheriff of Wigtown, July 26, 1603; John Hannay of the Canongate, March 8, 1604; William Hannay, in Banytown of Eglischomie, Jan. 14, 1605; Thomas Hannay in Patnek, parish of Killstew of Kirkoudbright, Feb. 23, 1607; Marion Paterson, spouse to William Hannay in Pinmoir, May 15, 1613; Marion Hannay, spouse to James Cuthbert at Mounkloumilne, parish of Monkton, May 10, 1615; Malie Hannay, in Trabeoche, parish of Ochiltrie, Sept. 19, 1615; John Hannay, in Burne, parish of Riccartoune, Aug. 25, 1618; Jonet Colmonell, spouse to Alexander Hannay, March 30, 1627; Margaret Hannay, spouse to James Anderson, at the Mylne of Monargund, parish of Langforgund, Aug. 24, 1627; John H. William Hannay, of Kingsmuir, parish of Deninow, July 14, 1747; James Hannay, in Hackerstown or Halkerstown, Sept. 6, 1748; Abigail Hannay, lawful daughter to Robert H. Hannay, in Ayr, Jan. 10, 1752; Thomas, son lawful to the deceased Thomas Hannay, in Glasgow, Dec. 27, 1755; Mary Hathaway relict of Capt. William Hannay, of Kingsmuir, parish of Anstruther Easter, May 26, 1777; William Hannay, in craft of Dunnure, parish of Maybole, June 1, 1787; Sir Samuel Hannay, of Mochrum Bart, July 30, 1791; John Hannay, of Rural of the Stew of Kircudbright, Aug. 25, 1797.

Also in the Edinburgh Marriage Register, 1500-1800: John Hannay married Marion Weir, Nov. 21, 1599; Margaret Hannay married John McClellan, Jan. 3, 1611; John Hannay married Catharine Kennedy, May 26, 1614; Barbara Hannay married James Sybbald, Oct. 4, 1614; Hew Hannay married Agnes Drysdail, July 18, 1616; Andrew Hannay married Sibilla Heriot, June 21, 1626; John Ahannay, of Sorbie, married Christian Ball, June 22, 1626; Archibald Hannay married Catharine Weir, Nov. 4, 1628; John Hannay married Agnes Matthisone, July 2, 1630; Patrick Hannay married Margaret Purdie, Jan. 21, 1647; Beatrix Hannay married Alexander Denham, April 28, 1647; William Hannay married Janet Job, April 26, 1649; James Hannay married Isobel Luthrie, Nov. 1, 1649; Marion Hannay married George Smellum, March 10, 1663; Jean Hannay married Bernard Nimmo, May 1, 1666; Bessie Hannay married Andrew Cassie, June 2, 1670; George Hannay married Margaret Murray, Nov. 23, 1670; William Hannay married Alison Gray, Nov. 16, 1677; Samuel Hannay married Elizabeth Dummond, Dec. 21, 1688; Jean Hannay married John Wallace, May 9, 1697.

Various personages of the family of Hannay occur in the public records, as John de Hannay, 1424, procured a free pass to Scotland in the ship he commanded from the King of England (Rotuli Scotie, vol. 11); Robert Hannay, of Sorbie, son of Odo Hannay, 1488, Alexander Hannay, of Sorbie, 1500, etc.; Patrick Hannay sat for Wigtown in the Scottish parliament in 1581, and another Patrick Hannay in 1637. One of them married a daughter of Sir A. Stewart, of Garlies, ancestor of the Earls of Galloway, early in the 16th Century. Another of the race was James Hannay, dean of Edinburgh, in the time of Charles I, the same who, on reading the Liturgy by appointment of the King, on July 23, 1637, in the Cathedral Church of St. Giles, Edinburgh, was assailed by sticks, stones, bludgeons and joint-stools—the day of the “Jenny Geddes” riot. Another Sir Patrick Hannay was director of the Chancery in Ireland in the same age.

In 1630 Sir Robert Hannay, of Mochrum, descended from the Sorbie family, was created a baronet of Nova Scotia. He left a daughter Jane, married to Sir Robert Reading of Dublin, whose blood flows in the noble houses of Hamilton and Abercorn.

In 1612 John Hannay, of Sorbie, was served heir to his father, Alexander Hannay, of Sorbie, and succeeded to a fine estate which had been added to by the church land at the time of the Reformation. Before the close of the century, the estates of Sorbie passed into the Stewart family, and now form a valuable portion of the possessions of the Earl of Galloway.

After the Sorbie estates went to the Earl of Galloway, in the latter part of the 17th. century, there still survived some junior branches holding lands of less value in Wigtownshire; of these were Kirkdale—the pedigree of which is given below—and Grennan. Originally, they also possessed Stancher, Strabreckan, the Gass and other properties stretching toward Ayishire; but Grennan, the land from which they took their designation, was also the latest which they possessed down to our own time.

Hugh Hannay, of Grennan, occurs in 1612; and another Hugh in 1631. The Hannay's were zealous Presbyterians. John Hannay, of Grennan, was fined for nonconformity in 1662.

Andrew Hannay was taken prisoner (as an ensign) at the battle of Dunbar, Grennan, in Wigtownshire (in which country—the original settlement of the family—there are now, we believe, no landholders of the name) remained in the possession of a junior branch of the Hannay's down to our own time.

It was sold by the widow of the late able and amiable Dr. Alexander Hannay, of Glasgow, the seventh in direct descent from Hugh Hannay, of Grennan, who succeeded to it in 1612. Cadets of this branch still exist among the landed gentry; of these are the Hannay's of Rusco, in the Stewarty.

The last direct representative of this branch was Alexander Hannay, of Grennan, who left two daughter coheiressess, the eldest of whom married her cousin and had by him two sons; 1st. the late Dr. Alexander Hannay, of Grennan, Glasgow, who married Marion, daughter of James Hannay, of Blairinnie, and by her had left two sons; 2nd. Robert Hannay, East India merchant.

In the reign of Charles II, Hannay of Grennan married Margaret McCulloch, daughter of Sir Alexander McCulloch, of Myreton, for his second wife, and had by her a son, John Hannay. From this John Hannay (besides others unknown) descended:

I. The late John Hannay, of Malabey and Crochmore in Kirkudbrightshire, who left Alexander Hannay, Esq., banker, in Dumfries, Elliot Hannay, Esq., war office, London, and other sons.

II. The late James Hannay, of Blairinnie, in the same county, son of Robert Hannay, merchant of Glasgow, by John Maxwell, of Newlaw (now represented by Maxwell of Breoch), descended from John Maxwell, and Agnes, his wife, daughter of Lord Herries.

This James Hannay married Maria Show, a descendant maternally of the Broune's of Carsluith, and McDowall's of Glen; and of this marriage the following sons survive:

I. Robert Hannay, Esq., Advocate.

III. James Hannay, late Captain of the 8th regiment of Ballylough Co., Antrion, married and has sons Edmond, James, Robert and Alfred.

IV. John Hannay, Esq., of Lincluden Co., Kricudbrigh, married and has issue, James Lenox Hannay, barrister of the Inner Temple.

V. Walter Hannay.

II. James Hannay, Esq., born at Dumfries, Scotland, Feb. 17, 1827. He was partly educated in England. At the age of 13 years he entered the Royal Navy as midshipman and served the following five years at the Mediterranean station.

In 1845, leaving the Royal Navy, he settled in London, devoting himself to literature. He contributed largely to the "Quarterly Review," "Westminster Review," "The Athenaeum," "Punch," and other periodicals. In 1860-64 he was appointed editor of the "Edinburgh Courant."

At the general election of 1857, he became a candidate for the representation in parliament of the Dumfries burghs, which his father had twice contested in other days, but was defeated.

In 1868 he was appointed British Chancellor at Brest and then transferred to Barcelona, Spain. He died at Barcelona, Spain, on the ninth day of January, 1873.

The following is a list of his works:

"Biscuits and Grog," "The Scarlet Cup," and "Hearts are Trumps," were published in 1848.

"King Dobbs," a satirical romance, published in 1849.

"The Poetical Works of Edger Allen Poe." Edited.

"Black Wood Carlyle" and "Singleton Fontenony," a novel of sea life which gave him a brilliant reputation, published in 1850, 3 vols., 8 vo. in 1855, a cheap edition.

"Sketches in Ultra Marine," a collection of Naval Papers (1848-52), and "Satire and Satirists." Six lectures, delivered in the summer of 1853, and in London, 1853-4.

Notice of the life and genius of Edger Allen Poe, London, 1853.

"Sand and Shells," published in 1854.

"Eustance Conyers," a novel published in 1855, 3 vols., 1857, cheap edition, 12 mo. Translated into the German.

"Characters and Criticisms," a collection of essays first published in periodicals.

"Brief Memoir of the Late Mr. Thackeray," published in 1864.

"A Course of English Literature," published in 1866.

"Three Hundred Years of a Norman House," published in 1867.

"Studies on Thackeray," published in 1869.

"A Critical Essay," published in the latter part of his life.

In 1639-40 Patrick Hannay (probably the Laird of Sorbie) sat in the famous Scotch parliament which signed the Solemn League and Covenant and was appointed a Colonel of Horse when the troubles began. Other members of the family were in positions of importance about that time. Sir Patrick Hannay was Director of the Chancellane in Ireland, and died in 1629. James Hannay was minister of the Abbey Church of Holyrood, and letters exist in MS. from Charles I, thanking this gentleman for his zeal in repairing the Abbey Church at his own expense.

Patrick Hannay, M. A., of the Sorbie family, published in 1622, a book of Curious poems which once had reputation, but are now very rare and almost forgotten. He was the grandson of Donald Hannay of Sorbie, and is supposed to have used his sword under Sir Andrew Gray in the service of the unfortunate but high-spirited Queen of Bohemia, daughter of our James VI and wife of the elector Palatine. He rose to the rank of General. These poems produced him some celebrity, among his eulogists were "Edward Leuenthrope, Robert Hannay, Johannes Dunbar, John Marshall, John Harner, J. M. C., William Lithgow, and Robert Alane." The following is a specimen of the laudatory epistles which were dedicated to him by John Marshall, therein referred to, is the celebrated Galgacus, the leader of the confederate Caledonians against the Romans. From his having been thought to have learned the art of war in South Britain he was called Galdus or Gallus, the British word Gal signifying a stranger. In Scottish history he is known by the name of Cordrebus Galdus, (Mackenzie's "History of Galloway," 1841, vol. 1, p. 66, note) some accounts affirm that he was slain in a battle on the banks of the Cree, and interred at Cairnholy.

The poem is given as originally printed.

"To his much Respected Friend Master Patrick Hannay
 "Hannay, thy worth bewrayes well whence thou'rt sprung,
 And that that honour'd Name thou dost not wrong;
 As if from Sorbies' Stock no branch could sprout,
 But should with rip'ning time bear golden fruit.
 Thy Ancestors were ever worthy found,
 Else Galdus' grave had grac'd no Hannay's ground.
 Thy father's father Donald well was knoune
 To the English by his sword, but thou art shoune
 By pen (times changeing) Hannay's are Active in Acts of worth be't peace or warre,
 Goe on in virtue, Aftertimes will tell,
 None but a Hannay could have done so well."

King Galdus (that worthie) who so bravely fought with the Romans, lies buried in the lands of Patrick Hannay of Kirkdale in Galloway, Jo. Marshall.

The titles of his works are:

"Two Elegies on the Death of Queen Ann" with Epitaphs. London, 1619, 4 to. (See Appendix B.)

"A Happy Husband," or Directions for a Maid to chose her Mate. London, 1619, 8 vo.

"A Wife's Behavior after Marriage," published in 1619, 8 vo.

"Philomel" or The Nightingale; "Sheretine and Mariana;" "A Happy Marriage;" "Elegies on the death of Queene Ann;" "Songs and Sonnets." London, 1622, 8 vo. Of the latter collection Mr. Lounes, in his Bibliographers Manual (Part IV, p. 992) says: "A remarkable volume in five parts, engraved title by Cyprian de Passe, in eleven compartments, the bottom centre occupied with a portrait of the author." The last portion "Songs and Sonnets," was reprinted in 1841 in square 12 mo. 42 pages, by Mr. E. V. Utterson, at his private press at Beldornie, Isle of Wight, 12 copies only. One of them is in the Advocates' Library, in 1858 a copy sold for £1, 19s. An original copy of the "Two Elegies on the Death of Queen Ann," small 4 to. (London, 1619) is also in the Advocates' Library.

A copy of his poems, a rare collection in five parts, published in 1622, with the original frontispiece by C. de Passe and portraits of Anne of Denmark and the author, cleverly executed by H. Rodd, sold at the sale of Archdeacon Wreangham's Library for £40. The same work, with a portrait of Anne of Denmark, by Crispin de Passe inserted, brought at Bindley's sale, £35, 14s. It was resold at Perry's sale for £38, 6s. Again at the sale of the books of Sir M. M. Syks it brought £42. Again at the sale of the Library of Rev. M. Rice, it brought £21. At Heber's sale the same book, wanting title and frontispiece, sold for £3, 9s.

A person of the same surname Robert Hannay, published at London in 1694, "An account of the Quakers at their yearly meeting in London on the 28th of the third month 1694," 4 to.

We find upon looking further a family of Hannay's, five boys, James, John, Andrew, David, and Thomas of Wigtownshire, Scotland, whose father's name we have failed to find.

Of these sons we only have an account of James who became a Presbyterian minister and settled at Richibucto, New Brunswick, Canada. He remained here several years. While in Canada one son named James was born April 22, 1842, and in 1864 he married Margaret Ross.

He (James, Jr.) was called to the bar in 1867, and was appointed official reporter of the Supreme Court of the province 1867-73 and published two volumes of reports. Resigning his post, he became assistant editor of the Saint John Daily Telegraph 1873-83, and of the Montreal Herald 1883-84, and afterward serving on the staff of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle 1885-87, he returned to Saint John to take the editorship of the Gazette in 1888.

In 1893 he became chief editor of the Saint John Telegraph, and in 1901 official reporter of the New Brunswick Provincial Parliament. He wrote many ballads, stories, and sketches.

Among his historical works are:

"Nine Years a Captive," published in 1875.

"History of Arcadia," published in 1879.

"The Story of the Queen's Rangers in the American Revolution," published in 1883.

"The History of the Loyalists," published in 1893.

"The Life and Times of Sir Leonard Tilly," published in 1897.

"The War of 1812," published in 1901.

"History of the War of 1812 between Great Britain and the United States of America," published in 1905.

"How Canada was held for the Empire," published in 1905.

"Wilmot and Tilley," published in 1907.

"History of New Brunswick," published in 1909.

Among his other works are "New Brunswick, its Resources and Advantages," published in 1912, and his letters to Pall Mall Gazette "From an Englishman in Spain" which were highly appreciated. He died Jan. 12, 1910.

Soon after the birth of James, Jr., his father returned to Scotland where another son was born, this son was named John K. Hannay. James, Sr., died in Scotland in 1855; his wife, however, returned to Canada.

John K. Hannay, is at present Cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Edison, State of Washington. He has two sons, one Arthur B. Hannay who is in the Press Gallery of the Parliament Buildings, Canada. The other son N. B. Hannay is Vice President of the First National Bank of Mt. Vernon, State of Washington.

In 1532 Alexander Hannay, a younger son of the Family of Sorbie purchased the lands of Kirkdale, Stewarty of Kirkcudbright and obtained a charter of the same, from his nephew Patrick Hannay, Esq., of Sorbie, paternal ancestor of the Hannay's of Mochrum.

This Alexander Hannay of Kirkdale left a son John Hannay who inherited that estate.

John's son, Patrick Hannay of Kirkdale, married Anne, daughter of Sir Patrick Mackey, Esq., of Larg, and was killed Dec. 16, 1610, in a conflict while assisting the Earl of Galloway against the Kennedy's of Blauquhan, at the Cruives of Cree.

His son Patrick A. Hannay, Esq., of Kirkdale, by his wife Agnes, daughter of Gavin Dunbar, of Baldoon, a family now represented by the Earl of Selkirk, had a son William Hannay of Kirkdale who married Elizabeth, daughter of Alexander Gordon, Esq., of Castremont, cadet of the ancient family of Lochinvar, afterwards viscounts of Kermuir, succeeded Patrick A. Hannay in 1640.

This William Hannay of Kirkdale had three sons, the eldest, Samuel Hannay, Esq., of Kirkdale, who succeeded to the estate, married Jane, daughter and co-heiress of Patrick Mackie of Larg (by his wife Agnes, daughter of Sir Patrick Mackie of Larg), with issue. In 1704 he was commissioner of supply. The eldest son William Hannay of Kirkdale, married Margaret, daughter of Rev. Patrick Johnson of Grithon, represented by Col. Johnston of Carnsallock, with issue, two sons, Colonel Alexander Hannay the younger son deserves a memoir as one of the ablest and most distinguished men that this ancient family ever produced. He entered the King's service about the middle of the last century, and was all through the German Campaigns, (including the battle of Minden) under the Marquis of Granby. When peace came he was a lieutenant, and supported by a splendid testimonial from his commander-in-chief. He offered his services to the East India Company. They gave him a captaincy, and he was wrecked in the Bay of Bengal, with the company under his command, suffering great hardships thus, at the outset of his India career. In a few years however he rose to Adjutant-General of the Army of India, and Warren Hastings' period found him commanding the forces of the Nabob of Oude.

Posterity has not allowed the great and gloomy impeachment which darkened Hastings' name for a time, to hide the glory of his genius or the greatness of the empire he attained for England; and Colonel Hannay will not be judged in our day by the voices of the Whig prophetess of that period. Hastings admired cordially Hannay's talents and character, and there is only one voice among the witnesses on the same subject.

Colonel Hannay displayed heroic courage and great abilities, during a difficult and dangerous career, and under circumstances where you cannot judge of a man's actions by the standard of ordinary life at home, in an old country. He died in India.

His eldest brother, Sir Samuel Hannay of Kirkdale a merchant in London, was, on Sept. 26, 1783, served and retoured male heir of Sir Robert Hannay of Mochurm, Bart., who was created a baronet of Nova Scotia, March 31, 1630, with remainder to his male heirs whatsoever. In 1768 he married Mary, daughter of Dr. Robert Mead, and for a number of years sat in parliament. He had four sons and four daughters. The eldest son Samuel succeeded his father in Dec., 1790. The three other sons all died unmarried. The daughters were: 1st. Margaretta, died unmarried; 2nd. Eliza, wife of George Woodroffe, Esq., without issue; 3rd. Jane, married Thomas Rainsford, Esq., and had a large family; 4th. Mary Hastings.

The eldest son, Sir Samuel Hannay, the next baronet, born Aug. 12, 1772, was in the service of the Emperor of Austria, and held an official post in Vienna, and also was colonel of the guards. He built a large mansion on his property, which forms a fine object from the Wigtownshire side of the bay.

The property is supposed to be the principal scene of Sir Walter Scott's novel "Guy Mannering;" and Dirk Hatterick's Cave, once noted for smugglers, is below the house. Sir Samuel died Dec. 1, 1841, unmarried, when the title became again dormant.

He was succeeded in the estates of Kirkdale by his sister, Mary Hastings Hannay, in virtue of a deed of entail, made by Ramsay Hannay, Esq., brother of the first Sir Samuel Hannay, he having purchased the estate on the death of his brother. Mary Hastings Hannay died unmarried March 20, 1850, and was succeeded in the estates of Kirkdale by her nephew, William Henry Rainsford Hannay, Esq., of Kirkdale, (son of Capt. Thomas Rainsford, of the 2nd. life guards, by his wife Jane a sister of Sir Samuel Hannay, Bart. of Mochrum and Kirkdale) who assumed in consequence the surname of Hannay. He married Maria, widow of Robert Stewart, Esq., M. P. of Alderston Co., Haddington, and daughter of Lt.-Col. Samuel Dalrymple, C. B., descended from the noble family of Stair and dying in 1856 without issue. He was succeeded by his brother, the present Frederick Rainsford Hannay, Esq., born March 3, 1810.

Frederick Rainsford Hannay, Esq., of Kirkdale, county of Kirkcudbright J. P. and D. L. son to the estate 1856 and thereupon added to his patronymic Rainsford the surname of Hannay, born March 3, 1810; late Major H. E. I. C. S., married Nov. 26, 1840, Rhoda, daughter of the late Oliver-Charles Johnston, Esq., and by her, who died Dec. 26, 1868, had issue.

- I Ramsay-William, b. Sept. 9, 1844; Lieut. R. A., J. P. Co. Kirkcudbright.
- II Percival, b. Aug. 1, 1851.
- III Frederick, b. Sept. 7, 1854.
- I Mary-Charlotte.
- II Rhoda-Clara.
- III Constance, d. Aug. 19, 1868.

Kirkdale House is a beautiful and stately building of polished granite, in the parish of Kirkmaheck, lying to the left of the traveller's road westward, before he comes to the town of Gatehouse. The house stands fair and high on an eminence, surrounded by trees, which cover the valley. The site affords beautiful views, particularly by moonlight.

George Hannay farmed it at Drumaston in the town of Withorn, Wigtownshire, Scotland, and died there in 1872.

He many years ago contested his right as heir to the Hannay estates of Kirkdale, in Kirkcudbrightshire, but whether owing to lack of funds, or because his case was not good, he did not succeed.

The Kirkdale estates are still in the hands of the Rainsfords, who adopted the name of Hannay, as has been stated.

George Hannay married and had issue as follows:

John who married Elizabeth Gourlay; Margaret who married a Mr. Miller; Elizabeth not married; Alexander married a Miss White; Robert not married; Mary who married Thomas Hoage; Isabella who married a Mr. Nunioch; Jessie who married James Fisher, and George who married Eliza B. Alston.

John, George, Alexander, and Mr. Thomas Hoage died about four years ago, within three months of each other. Mrs. Fisher died about a year ago. The remainder still survive.

George who married Eliza B. Alston left Scotland when he was a young man and settled in South Shield, New Jersey. He was employed in a bank and became manager and retired in 1906, and died in 1909.

He had issue as follows:

Alston who married Isabella Daglish in Australia; Jean who married George Hall; Frederick and Erskine both married but the names of who they married are not known; Gertrude who married George Scott; Isabella who married Hamilton Campbell; John Alexander died in infancy; Mabel died at the age of sixteen years; George Walton not married, and Gerald Hannay who married Lillian White.

Gerald who married Lillian White came to this country in 1891 and is Treasurer and Manager of the Oscar Barnett Foundry Co. of Newark, New Jersey.

The family of Hannay of Kuigsmuir, Fifeshire, claim to be representatives of the Hannay's of Sorbie, and are so described by Nisbeth. About the beginning of the 18th Century, Kuigsmuir became the property of the ancestor of the present proprietor, George Francis Hannay, Esq., whose ancestor Robert Hannay, advocate of Edinburgh, acquired the Kuigsmuir estate in marriage with a Livingstone, the widow of Colonel Borthwick.

In 1710 when Sibbald published his "History of Fife" the possessor of the estate was named Peter Hannay, Esq., of Kuigsmuir. Ann Hannay, who possessed it shortly afterward, was married to Capt. Erskine of Dun; but dying without issue, left it to her cousin James Hannay, son of Patrick Hannay, Esq. From this gentleman it passed to his brother John Hannay, Esq., of Kuigsmuir, he married a Miss Brown, and had George Hannay, Esq., of Kuigsmuir, who was an officer in the service of the Crown in the U. S. Adhering faithfully to the loyal side when the "Independence" controversy began, he was obliged to fly the country. By his wife (Miss Humbly, of Exeter) he left two sons, Peter Hannay, Esq., R. N., who served as a lieutenant under Nelson in the defiance at Trafalgar, and died without issue; and George Francis Hannay, Esq., the present possessor of the estate. George Francis Hannay married Robina, only child of Robert Cunningham, Esq., of Pittarthie, Captain of the Army (whose grandfather Capt. Cunningham, R. N., was a claimant of the peerage of Glencarish) and had a large family. Heir, his son George, Captain of the Fife Artillery, born 1824.

The estates of Kuigsmuir, which were at one period a common muir on which almost all the neighboring proprietors had a right of pasturage, and many a right of cutting turf, originally belonged to the Scottish Crown, but the present proprietor has devoted his time, and with very great success, to its improvement, and has considerably increased its value, during his tenure of it.

The family of Hannay of Rusco, Kirkcudbrightshire, was formerly from Wigtownshire. Robert Hannay, Esq., of Rusco, born in 1807, married Bridget, daughter of Thomas Smith, Esq., of London, with issue. Heir, his son, Robert, born in 1836.

The Hannay Arms are: Three roebucks' heads coupé, Azure, collared, Or; with a bell pendent thereat, Gules. On the frontispiece of Mr. Patrick Hannay's book of poems are his Arms in Taliduce, with his picture, being Argent, three roebucks' heads, coupé, Azure; with a mollet in the collar point, for his difference, his father Sir Francis Hannay being a younger son of Hannay of Sorbie, with a croslet fitché, issuing out of a crescent, sable; for crest and motto relative thereto, "Per Ardua Ad Alta." The family of Kuigsmuir, Fifeshire, carries the last blazon without the Mollet, and the same crest, with the motto, "Cresco Et Spero." (Nisbet's Heraldry, vol. 1, p. 335.)

Hannay, Argent, a cross crosslet fitché sable issuing from a crescent gules, between three stags' heads cabossed. This is much defaced, and the name originally was Livingston of East Wemyss.

Ahannay of Sorbie, L.; argent three (? goats) heads, erased sable, collared argent, campaned azure. Sir James Balfour has — or a saltire between four martens heads coupé sable; some of the MSS. makes the charges three roebuck's heads. The only registration is in 1784 by Sir Samuel Hannay of Mochrum and Kirkdale, baronet, heir male of the Sorbie family. Argent, three bucks' heads coupé azure, collared or, with bells thereto pendant gules; he was allowed supporters — two roebucks proper.

The funeral entry in Ulster's register for Lady Hannay, who was buried at Christ Church, Dublin, 27th. March, 1662, gives the arms — first and fourth argent, three (? goats) heads erased, azure, horned, or; second and third argent, three cross crosslets fitchée, issuing from as many crescents sable.

A similar crosslet and crescent form the crest of Sir Samuel, with the motto "Per Ardua Ad Alta." He was in 1783, served heir male, and assumed the long dormant title. His son Sir Samuel, d. s. p. 1841, and there are now two claimants to the honor.

Hannay (?) Argent — three stag's heads couped azure. The name is obliterated. (Stodart's "Scottish Arms." Vol. II, pp. 215, 241, 248.)

PART FOURTH.

In various newspapers we find several items relating to one Rev. James Owen Hannay, rector at Westport, County Mayo, and Canon of St. Patrick's (Protestant) Cathedral, Dublin, Ireland. He appears in the literary and dramatic world as George A. Birmingham.

Canon Hannay is in America as this book goes to press. He has prepared four lectures, "The Stage Irishman," "The Irishman in English Fiction," "The Literary Revival in Contemporary Ireland," and "The Economic Revival," which he will deliver in the course of a five weeks tour in many of the universities in the east. It is said of Canon Hannay that he has "rediscovered the Irishman for English Literature."

His latest play, the greatest comedy success of the London season (1912-1913), entitled "General John Regan," which had a long run at the Apollo Theatre, London, with William Hawtrey in the title role, was produced at Atlantic City, Oct. 27, 1913, with Arnold Daly in the title role under the direction of Liebler & Co., and is now being played in New York City at the Hudson Theatre.

Andrew Hannay was born in the town of Galloway, County of Galloway, Scotland, in the year 1733. Concerning his boyhood life scarcely anything is known, but it is presumed, however, to have been quiet and industrious. He at some time learned the cooper's trade, and worked at that business in his native town. His education was limited, but he was possessed of a strong constitution and vigorous mind, plodding at his unremunerative business, but this it seems did not satisfy his ambition. He was resolved upon a change, whether for the better or not, time only would decide. No branch of business being open where he could secure profit and advancement, he at the age of twenty-four, enlisted in the King's service, in Col. T. Brudenell's Company, 51st. Regiment of Infantry, Major Montgomerie's Command. He served in the army six years, and was discharged on account of a stiff finger produced by a felon. The original document was in the hands of his late son David, filled out and signed by Col. T. Brudenell.

At some period of his service in the army he was married, his wife being a German lady. After getting his discharge, he returned with his family to his native town, where he was engaged, in company with another man, in building houses, for some ten or twelve years, gaining but small profit. Indeed it was barely possible in his native country for a poor man to secure a scanty living. The land was all owned by the aristocrats and all business controlled by them, while the poor were at least but servants to them, and were little cared for.

He now formed the resolution of coming to America, and some time in the year 1774 carried it into effect. He landed at New York with but four shillings left.

During the forepart of the first day he secured a place for his family to live, and in the afternoon found work for himself, and earned two shillings tending a mason. Thus situated he continued for some length of time. His great desire was to obtain land on which to raise substantial food for his family, and if possible to leave as an inheritance for his children.

He soon fell in with a Mr. Kortright who owned a large tract of land in Delaware County, and was by him induced to go there and settle. So after making a contract he took the following directions, and proceeded thence to make a home. He was to go from New York to Albany, from there to Schoharie, to Breakabeen, to the township of Kortright, which was thirty miles from Schoharie.

There were four families with him, and leaving their wives and children in Schoharie, they pushed on to Kortright and there immediately commenced and finished in four days, four houses, one for each family. Then they returned to Schoharie for their families. When they returned they found their houses filled with snow, it being the winter time. Now he had a house and land but surrounded by almost unending woods, inhabited more or less by the savage Indians and wild beasts. In a country subject to heavy snows, with very few inhabitants, and with scarcely anything but his strong arms with which to clear off the woods and prepare the crops in the spring.

How well he succeeded is not known, as he did not live here very long. Want of means and the difficulty of procuring provisions compelled him to seek a home somewhere else.

One day after he had been thirty miles to the mill, and returning with the meal upon his back, he told his wife before it was used up she must prepare to move. He sold his possessions for three pounds and returned to Schoharie, where he settled and remained less than a year, after which for some length of time he was not permanently settled. He used to say, "I moved nine times in nine years and was never without bread for my family." At last he settled in the Town of Rensselaerville, Albany County, where he took land to work upon shares. He succeeded pretty well in raising grain, and lived here three or four years, but was finally driven away by the Indians who were very troublesome.

One day when he had gone from home, some Indians came to the house where his wife was alone and demanded pork. Upon being told that she had none, one of the foremost of them drew his scalping knife and struck her a severe blow in the breast, with the intention, no doubt, of killing her, but the blade striking the breast bone, thus prevented the wound from being a fatal one. To be more secure against the troublesome Indians, he moved his family to Bethlehem, in the same county, he and his son returning to take care of the crops.

One time as they were on their way home from labor, they stopped at the house of a Tory to stay over night, and took rest upon the floor near the fire-place. Late in the night they were all awakened by a noise at the door. Upon the door being opened it became known that a band of Indians were outside, whose object seemed to be to make their friend a visit. Two or three of their number entered and after some conversation roughly asked who was lying in the bed on the floor. Being positively assured that only a part of his own family were there, they were induced not to disturb them, but they threatened that if they had any Yankees about the house they would take their hearts' blood in a minute. He and his son had lain almost breathless through the interview, and after the departure of the Indians, they carefully made their way into the adjoining wood to obtain rest for the remainder of the night. At one time the Indians were so troublesome, that some of the inhabitants built a fort in which to place their families in case of attack.

He used to tell an amusing incident in relation to this fort. The people were constantly on the watch lest the Indians should steal upon them. One morning a sharp firing of musketry was heard at no great distance from the settlement. The inhabitants immediately becoming alarmed, ceased their employment and proceeded to the fort for safety. Upon gathering it was ascertained that one man had been left plowing in his field ignorant of danger. A call was made for some one to volunteer to go and notify him and bring him to the fort. Andrew Hannay was the first to offer. The horses were quickly stripped of their harness, and himself taking one and the plowman the other, they hastily returned to the fort. Some time was now spent in preparing for the expected attack. Finally a counsel was held, and it was determined that some scouts should be sent out in the direction of the firing to ascertain if possible its cause and object.

Andrew Hannay again offered his services and with two or three others sallied forth. The locality was reached and his discovery soon made known the fact that the firing proceeded from a few Indian boys shooting squirrels.

His sympathies were entirely against the English in the Revolutionary War, but the need of his presence at home always prevented him from joining the army. In the year 1777 when Burgoyne's campaign was brought to a crisis, he raised a company of volunteers and started with them to join Gen. Gates. Upon reaching Albany, the news came of Burgoyne's surrender and they disbanded and returned to their homes.

Soon after his removal to Bethlehem his wife died, leaving him with four children, three boys and one girl. He continued to live on here a year or two when he became acquainted with and married a widow named Towsick. Her maiden name was Elizabeth Ricord and she lived about twenty miles southwest of Albany, in what was then the Town of Coeymans. Her husband and only son had been carried to Canada by the Indians and died there; leaving her with nine daughters to provide for as best she could. They managed to cultivate the land with their own hands and procure a comfortable living.

They were always more or less harassed by fear of the Indians, who were often lurking about committing horrible crimes in the vicinity. Once they were taken to Albany for safety and remained there for some time until the country became more quiet and less dangerous. Andrew Hannay now obtained possession of a large tract of land principally covered with timber lying on both sides of what was called the Passic Creek (now called Basic Creek) in what is now the Town of Westerlo, Albany County.

The country was becoming more quiet and settled, and markets to some extent were being established, especially at Albany. It seems that the days had really come for realizing the fond hope he had entertained when leaving his native land. Peace and prosperity were not his lot for a long term of years. He remained here successfully engaged in farming and clearing off the land for the remainder of his life.

The offspring of his second marriage was one son, David. In the year 1800 his second wife died and he was some time afterward married again to a widow, Hannah Wendell, who had formerly lived in Dutchess County. He lived with her until his death, which occurred in the year 1808, he being the age of 75 years. At his request his remains were buried near the road in a beautiful field on his own farm. Such in brief is the history of his life. He was one of many who would not submit to live under the form of society, where the most sacred rights of man are held only by a few privileged characters. He chose rather to endure privation and hardships in a distant, wild and unsettled country, but where industry and perseverance were necessary for anyone to secure all the blessings of this life.

The names of his children by his first wife were James, John who married Adrian Whitmarch, Andrew who married Mary Ann Swop, and Elizabeth who married George Swop. The boys settled on lands given them by their father. Elizabeth and her husband moved to Pennsylvania, from thence to Canada, and afterwards back to Genesee County, N. Y., where she died. The names of his step-daughters were: Mary who married Chris John Price, and moved to Canada, and Hannah who married a Fineout, and moved to Schenectady, N. Y., and Catharine who married a Fineout, and moved to Canajoharie, N. Y., Elizabeth who married Peter Grant, and moved to Delaware Co., N. Y., and Eve who married a Ramsey, and lived in Bethlehem, Albany Co., N. Y., and Christine who married a Helegas, and lived in Berne, Albany

Co., N. Y., and Sarah who married a Swop, and moved to Holland Purchase, Genesee Co., N. Y., and Laney who married John Sager, and moved to Canada, and Margaret who married a Helegas, and moved to Berne, Albany Co., N. Y.

APPENDIX II.

David Hannay<sup>6</sup> was born Oct. 5, 1784. He was the only child resulting from the marriage of Andrew Hannay and Mrs. Elizabeth Towsick. The description given of the house in which he was born is, that the floor was made of basswood trees split, and the split surface smoothed with an axe; the roof was composed of basswood bark. Patience and industry, however, had rendered his humble abode pleasant and comfortable. His boyhood days, from the time he was possessed of sufficient strength, were almost entirely spent in hard labor, assisting his father upon the farm. The conveniences for farming used at the present time were then almost unknown. Even the most simple tools were of home manufacture, so that it then required to perform the same amount of work much more hard labor than in later times.

The simple tool the plow, which is now constructed in a thousand varieties, was then hewn out of wood and plated with strips of iron, the wheels of a wagon were frequently sawed from the huge body of a white oak tree. Pitchforks were cut from small crotched saplings, and similiar expedients were resorted to in all instruments of farm labor. These were looked upon as being the best that could be procured and were used with patience and were considered sufficient and effective.

Progress was necessarily slow in clearing the land of heavy timber and fitting it for producing crops. Here in peace and contentment they were satisfied to labor and to live.

Neighbors commenced gathering about them so that a society began to be established, but in many respects a very different society from that of the present day. The difficulty of raising extensive crops and a limited market caused everyone to live with the utmost economy. Neither men, women, or children desired anything better than good stout home-made clothes for wearing apparel and it was not often that children obtained boots and shoes to wear until they became grown up men and women. On all occasions a rude sleigh or wagon drawn by an ox team formed the conveyance, and some farm vegetables with bread made of corn meal or rye flour composed the usual satisfactory repast. Form and fashion and all the frivolities of society were the great lessons of life.

The people lived principally in log houses with huge fire places for cooking purposes and to protect them from the cold, and a feeling of brotherhood pervaded all who lived in the vicinity and each seemed to possess a full share of earthly enjoyment, as much if not more so, than the people of the present time. Trouble from the Indians, especially in the earlier times, was occasionally feared.

A novel custom was ordained by which the whole neighborhood could be quickly aroused in case of danger. Each family possessed a tin horn, and at the approach of danger, the family in trouble would sound the horn a number of times in quick succession, his neighbor would repeat the sound and so on until the remotest family was notified. In case they wished to communicate with each other to understand if all things were well, one long sound was given. The advantage of schools were then almost unknown.

David Hannay had the privilege of attending a common school some two or three months before he became a man. He, however, acquired principally by his own efforts a sufficient knowledge of the common branches to be able to read, and write, and to understand common business transactions. At the age of twenty-one years, Oct. 10, 1805, he was married to Miss Hannah TerBush. Three years later his father died.

He now came into possession of fifty acres of land which included the house where he was born. The old house, however, was in due time replaced by a larger dwelling. He soon after purchased more land, sufficient to make a large farm. This farm, on which he lived until he died, is situated in one of the most pleasant localities of that part of the State. A beautiful stream of water called Passic Creek (now called Basic Creek) runs through nearly the center of it. The eastern half is slightly uneven forming a gradual slope down to the creek, while west of the creek is a broad, beautiful, flat even land which in cases of a severe freshet overflows with water, making permanent and very productive mellow land, while the upland is adapted to grain and pasture. Portions of the uplands are stony and it is interesting to see how by patient hard labor the whole farm except the flat has been divided into fields and each surrounded by a high stone wall. It is difficult to imagine how a man in one life-time could provide for the wants of a large family and change the wild forest into such cultivated fields.

In the course of a few years he began to be surrounded by children among whom were boys who soon became able to assist him. He usually enjoyed excellent health, and so with some exceptions did his children, but his wife for a long term of years was more or less affected with sickness which many times caused him sorrow and which tried his energies and sometimes darkened his prospects.

In the War of 1812, he was harassed by the difficulties and uncertainties incident to the war and by the fear of being compelled to leave his dependant family of little ones and join the army. Twice he had the good luck to escape the draft but the third time he was forced to prepare for duty in the army. On his way to the rendezvous he had the good fortune to secure a substitute who agreed to take his place for the amount of forty dollars and he immediately returned home to the utmost delight of his family. His good judgment and unexceptional habits of life won for him the confidence and esteem of all who knew him.

During his whole life he was never personally engaged in a law suit. He was often honored by town offices but had the self-denial to refuse them when he feared he was not competent.

Much of the land in this part of the country was a portion of the famous rent land and at many times there was much trouble and contention on account of paying the rent to the land holders. One odious feature in the conditions of the rent was the "Sixth Sale" by which the occupants in the case of selling were obliged to pay their land-holders one-sixth part of the money received. Through the efforts of David Hannay and other prominent men a suit to recover the "Sixth Sale" was resisted.

After being ably prosecuted and defended in the various courts of the State, it reached the Court of Appeals, and was finally decided in favor of the occupants of the land, and the unjust condition was forever removed. His whole life was marked by peace and quiet, and in all his transactions of private and public affairs, he was distinguished for good judgment, candor, and honesty.

A trait of his unambitious character is shown in the fact, that he never rode in a public conveyance,—railroad, steamboat, or even a stage coach. Though sometimes required to travel a long distance, he always preferred to provide a good conveyance of his own.

Concerning the public topics of the day, he was always well informed, and able to discuss them with interest and intelligence. In politics, he was an earnest Democrat.

The energies of his life were by no means altogether devoted to worldly affairs. During his entire life he was a member of the Baptist Church, and held various positions of responsibility and trust in the church. Many delicate questions pertaining to church matters were entrusted to his deliberations, judgment, and decision. His leisure hours were usually spent in studying the bible or in perusing religious books or newspapers. His Christian course of life was ever marked by strict devotion to duty, a calm but firm pursuit of right and by always setting an example of Christian conduct. What a pleasure after a life of over four score years, to be able to reflect, that so many of those years have been spent in the true and earnest service of his master.

His wife died, Nov. 2, 1841, age 53 years, by her he had fourteen children; eight sons and six daughters, of whom one is now living (Mrs. Angeline H. Green). Two of the daughters died, one when an infant, the twelfth child, and the other named Elizabeth, the fifth child, after a protracted illness, when nearly approaching to womanhood. One son, the eleventh child, named David, died in infancy.

July 16, 1842, he was again married to Miss Catharine Huyck, who was during his old age and feeble health an agreeable, and pleasant companion.

At the age of eighty-two years when he died, his mental and physical powers were remarkably well preserved. He was buried on a beautiful mound in a field near the brook that was the scene of his boyhood sports.

APPENDIX VII.

The Corning Stock Farm plays an important part in the early history of Albany, N. Y.

In 1540 Fort Castle was built by the French on the Hudson River opposite Albany and was used as a trading post. In 1615 a Dutch trading post was established at Fort Castle and the name changed to Fort Nassau.

In 1618 it was swept away by a spring freshet, and a new fort was built on the mainland near the mouth of the Norman's Kill at Tawassgunshee, the site of the old Corning Stock Farm, part of which is now owned by Edward S. Hannay,<sup>175</sup> and called Pleasant View Stock Farm.

APPENDIX A.

According to the old Statistical Account, a battle was fought between the Scots and English in 1150, on Glenquickenmoor, in which the Scottish General fell, then the Bishop of Whithorn seized his sword, to lead on the Scots to victory,—and was also killed. The patriotic bishop, it is said, was buried by his countrymen under the Holy-Cairn in Mr. Hannay's lands. We know, however, there was no such battle fought in that age. (Mackenzie's History of Galloway, Vol. I.)

APPENDIX B.

An epitaph on Queene Ann (wife of James VI). By Patrick Hannay:

Powers to do ill, and practice only good,
Humblest in heart, highest in place and blood,
Fairest and fre'st from loose desires in thoughts,
Pleasures to tempt, yet not disdained in ought.
With anxious care in courage ne're dejected.
Though course of joy, with no vain joy affected.
Know reader, whensoever these lines you scand,
Such (and none such but she) was our Queene Ann.
