INTRODUCTION.

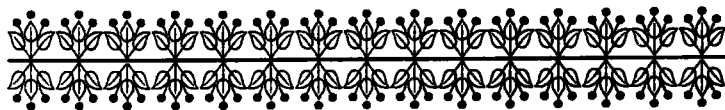

Among those who have rendered special and important assistance in the preparation of this family genealogy, are Mrs. H. Arthur Bartlett, Mr. Sherman H. Hill, and Mr. John B. Hill. To the latter we are much indebted for the use of his family chart, upon which he had bestowed much labor.

To all these cousins it is a pleasure to express special obligations, but more particularly is it a pleasure to have become acquainted with them through such a medium—the making of a book to treasure up the memory of the departed.

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS.

The abbreviations are such, it is thought, as will be readily understood; m. stands for married, b. for born, d. for died, unm. for unmarried, ch. for children, no c. for no children, bapt. for baptized, + preceding number indicates a further record.

Only one set of numbers are used, as being the most convenient and readily understood. The number at the birth of a child is repeated only when the marriage of the same person is given further on.

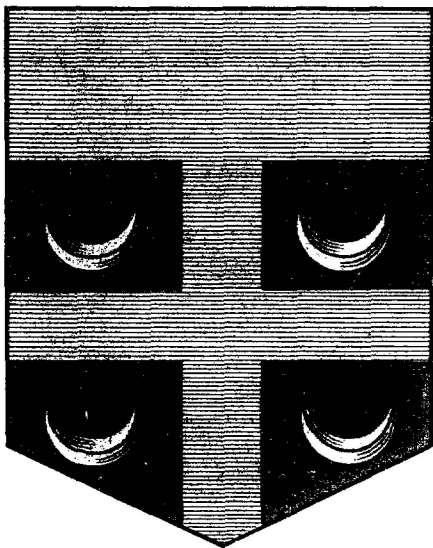

THE HILL FAMILY.

Origin of the Name May be Traced to Hild, Meaning War.

Hill is a name supposed by some authorities to be local, that is, derived from residence on or near a hill. Others give a more interesting origin, namely, that it came from "Hild," meaning battle. Hild was a word commonly used by Anglo-Saxon poets to signify battle or war. We have Hild or Hilda; variations of the name are Hillson, Hilder, Hillmen, Hillmer, Hillgers, Hilyer, Hildrup, Hillier, Hillyer; Hillary may come from the same root word. The family is traced to Hants county, England, where one of the early forms of the name was del Hil. Geoffrey del Hil, or "at Hil," is a name figuring in early records. The name was also spelled Hyll. In early Colonial records we find the name Hill or Hills as often spelled one way as the other. The name Hill is among the most common of English surnames. Relatively the name Hills is so uncommon that those born to it in our own time are perhaps more often spoken of or addressed by others than their relatives and intimate friends as if their name ended with double "l," instead of the distinctive "s" that forms a part of it. The distinction between these names in the olden times, and to a comparatively recent date, was but little observed by the scribes who drew the wills, deeds and other documents destined to go upon public record.

The Lord Mayor of London, 1492, was Sir Rowland Hill, who was the first Protestant to attain that position. He was a man of large property and his benefactions were unbounded. Three hundred years later another Sir Rowland was the inventor or the originator of the penny postal system. He is buried in Westminster Abbey. William, called one of the founders of New England, came over in the William and Frances June 5, 1632, and Joseph, his brother, six years later. He (William) held many offices, was auditor of public accounts, and collector of customs at Fairfield, Conn. Valentine Hill, a mercer from London, had a large grant of land in Boston, 1638, and was representative to the Court. Peter, the founder of the Maine branch of the family, d. in Biddeford, Me., 1667. Adam was progenitor of the New York Hills. Ralph was one of the proprietors of Dover, N. H. Richard Hill of Pennsylvania is recognized as a leader who did much to preserve Quaker ascendancy. He was a friend of William Penn, who named him trustee under his will.

HILL COAT OF ARMS.

But one Hill shield, with crest, is disclosed by the various compilations in relation to heraldry and armorial bearings, which may have been the coat armor of a common progenitor of all of the name. Its blazoning is Hills a Hill: argent a cross between four crescents: azure a chief of the last: Crest, a horse courant, gules. In the mouth a broken spearhead, sable. This crest is given in connection with the name of Hills, without local designation, in Fairbairn's Book of Crests of the Families of Great Britain and Ireland. Changing the language of heraldry for that in ordinary use, the description would be: A blue cross on a silver shield between four blue crescents, the upper third of the escutcheon being of the same color as the cross and crescents. Crest, a red horse, running, with a black broken spearhead in his mouth.

Burke's "Peerage" emblazons near four score arms for Hill, and four for Hills.
