HEATH FAMILY.

An explanation of how the name Heath came to be used as a surname.

In choosing the words to be used as names we can not discover any carefully wrought plan. Chance and human fancy have played their part. The word to be chosen was usually the suggestion of some fact connected with the birth of the person to be named — time, place, circumstance, some physical quality, or some fond hope of strength, bravery, or goodness entertained. In fact there is hardly an event, national, local, or personal; hardly a place or feature of a place; hardly a beast or bird or fish or tree or stream; hardly a point of the compass, occupation, or profession; hardly a physical or mental characteristic; hardly a hobby that man has rode or a blunder that he has made that has not lent itself to the naming of some man. In early times one name was all that was necessary and in general is all that we find — David, Confucius, Plato, Cleopatra. Out of the more complex social and business relations grew the necessity for some system of naming which should be more satisfactory. For a time qualifying the descriptive phrases were used as: John the Baptist, Peter the Hermit, John the Cook, William of Kent, John of the Heath, etc. Out of this practice and out of these phrases, by abbreviation, have grown our surnames.

At first these additional words, like the personal name, passed away with the lives of their owners. But gradually these titles became part of their owner's personal property, and so passed on to their descendants, along with other possessions. Bardsley says: "Nor were those second designations, those which we call surnames as being superadded to Christian names, at first of any lasting character. It was not till the eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, or even the fourteenth century that they became hereditary, that is, in any true sense stationary."

Heath comes under the classification of local surnames. By local surnames we mean surnames which tell us something of places or directions; where a person lives, some feature of the landscape about his home, or the place or direction from whence he came. These names, we are told, were the first to become hereditary.

The following explanation of the origin of the Heath name as a surname is found in the "lives of Isaac Heath and John Bowles," two church deacons of Roxbury, Mass.; Heath, a pure Saxon word, the name of a plant or shrub of the genus, *eric*a, of many species soon came to signify a place overgrown with heath, and finally has a more general signification, meaning a place overgrown with shrubs of any kind. The most venerable record of England, the Domesday book, proves that it was very early used to designate individuals or families who may have lived on a heath, and in time, as surnames came into use to distinguish families, and became hereditary. Heath was attached to some by accident of their locality, and thus by its origin must be classified with local surnames. The same circumstance gave rise to the name in different localities, and thus affords no evidence of any consanguinity at a remote period. Heath is a very common surname in England.

I. WILLIAM HEATH of Nazing, England, came to this country from London, arriving on the ship "Lion" September 16th, 1632, with his wife Mary and five children. He died May 29th, 1652, having had two wives. His wife Mary died December 15th, 1659. His brother, Bartholomew Heath, came over on the same ship and settled at Salisbury, N. H. His brother, Isaac Heath, called Elder Heath, came over on the "Hopewell" in 1634 and settled at Roxbury, Mass. Isaac died January 21st, 1660, aged 75 years. None of his household survived him except his aged widow and his son-in-law, John Bowles. William settled in Roxbury, Mass., and was made a freeman March 4th, 1633. He was a representative in 1634, 1637, 1639, 1640, 1641, and 1642. VI. AARON HEATH was born in Tolland County, Conn., probably at Tolland, in 1753, and died at Sandisfield, Mass., January 29th, 1843, aged 90 years. He married Rhoda Edson at Stafford, Conn., May 13th, 1777. She was born in 1757, and died at Sandisfield, Mass., in November, 1844, aged 87 years. They lived on the last farm in the town of Sandisfield on the road from Sandisfield to Tyringham. Their last days were spent with their son, Alva Heath.

For the following obituary notice, I wish to thank Mrs. Julia A. Blanchard of Ilion, N. Y. She is a daughter of Mary Heath, the daughter of Aaron:

“AARON HEATH'S OBITUARY NOTICE.”

“Died at Sandisfield, Mass., January 29th, 1843.

“Mr. Aaron Heath, aged 90 years, a Revolutionary soldier. Mr. Heath was in that ever memorable battle of Bunker Hill, and one of that devoted band of patriots, who under

Arnold, dauntlessly traversed through the wilderness to attack Quebec, where he was taken prisoner by the British, and after suffering from privation and disease to that extent that now would seem like fiction, he was finally exchanged and reached his friends. Long has he lived to enjoy the rich blessings of liberty and freedom which he fought to obtain.

"It was highly pleasing to converse with him on the subject of the war. Many times have I heard him describe the battle of Bunker Hill, where said he, and his countenance lighted up with the fire of patriotism, 'I fired thirty-two rounds at the red-coats.'

"For many years he has been a member of the baptist church at Sandisfield.

"He has ever been a firm supporter of Democratic principles. He has gone to his reward, peace be to his name.

"Written by a Friend of the Family."

Aaron was taken prisoner three times in the Revolutionary war. The last time while acting the part of a scout, and would then surely have lost his life had he not played the fool and made them believe that he was insane. When told to hitch the oxen to a cart he insisted on hitching them with their heads facing the cart. This, with other such maneuvers on his part made them feel that he was not worth his keeping and so they let him go.

His war record, which follows, was taken from "Massachusetts Sailors and Soldiers of the Revolutionary War," Vol. VII.:

"Heath, Aaron, Alstead, N. H., also given Tyringham: Private; list of men returned as serving on picket guard under Maj. L. Baldwin, dated May, 11-1775; also Capt. Luke Drury's Co., Col. Jonathan Ward's regt. Order for advanced pay, signed by said Heath and others, dated June, 10-1775; also, order on Capt. Drury, dated Cambridge Camp, June, 24-1775; signed by said Heath for £2 to be deducted from his wages in payment for a gun purchased of Ezekiel Brigham; also, Private, Capt. Luke Drur's Co., Col. Jonathan Ward, 32.ond regt.; muster roll dated Aug. 1-1775, enlisted Apr. 26-1775, service, 3-Mos. 13 days; also, same Co. and regt.; receipt for money received on account, dated Dorchester, Sept. 10-1775; also, same Co. and regt.;

One of the accomplishments that he prided himself on was his ability to make wooden sap buckets that would not leak a drop when water was put into them for the first time.

He was a stanch Democrat and used to say that all the Heath's he ever knew were Democrats. He considered it a disgrace to the Heath family when his oldest son, Francis C., broke away from the Democratic party and voted the Republican ticket. FAMILY RECORD OF MERCY CONE'S ANCESTORS IN AMERICA.

I. DANIEL CONE was possibly the first of the name in America. His birthplace has not been found, nor has the exact date of his birth been ascertained. It is an often quoted statement that "he was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, and came to this country in the year 1651, on the ship 'John and Sarah.' " The records are lacking to bear out the statement and his name does not appear in the list of passengers on that ship for that year.
