PUBLISHER'S PREFACE.

THOSE who may possess this book, can hardly conceive of the vast amount of correspondence, research and patient study required in its preparation. April 3, 1816, Thomas Kidder, of London, Eng., wrote to Samuel Kidder, apothecary, of Charlestown, Mass., asking information concerning an elder brother, who was supposed to be in America. In a subsequent letter he wrote a brief history of the family in England, which is contained in pages 1 to 5 of this book. This was doubtless the first definite knowledge that those of the family in America had of their English origin. About the year 1850, Mr. Frederic Kidder (No. 59) undertook to prepare a history of his native town, including a history of the principal families. He solicited the aid of the Rev. Edward Turner, rector of Maresfield, Eng., in completing the history of the family in England, and in tracing out our emigrant ancestor; through him he also came into communication with James Crosby, Esq., of London, nephew of the Thomas Kidder mentioned above. Through the joint researches of these three men, he was enabled to prepare the history given in pages 1 to 10.

Some years after the appearance of Frederic Kidder's book, the Rev. Corbin Kidder becoming strongly interested in the work, prepared a genealogy of a portion of his own branch of the family, which was published in 1876, by his son, Rev. Samuel T. Kidder, now of Fond Du Lac, Wis. This pamphlet contained most of the matter included in the first twenty pages of this book, and the genealogy of his own immediate branch of the family, making in all 32 pages.

In 1877, Miss S. B. Kidder, of Boston, commenced copying all the original papers in the possession of Mr. Frederic Kidder, and in 1879 had blank letters of inquiry printed, which she commenced sending to every person of the name of Kidder whose address she could obtain, with a view to obtaining sufficient information to warrant the publication of a complete history of the Kidder family. This work she is still carrying on, devoting to it all the time she can spare from her business, and when fuller information of many of the lines is collected, she hopes in the not distant future to publish a complete history of the family.

In preparing this volume, the larger portion of the genealogy was taken from her records and completed by the writer, aided by many of the family, who have manifested a strong interest in the work. The proofs have been read by Miss Kidder, and the index prepared by her.

The writer's interest in the subject was first awakened in the summer of 1879, when he received a letter of inquiry from Henry S. Kidder, of North Berwick, Me., who had become interested by receiving the circulars sent out by Miss Kidder. Being very busy with other literary work, the writer did not do much towards tracing out his ancestry beyond his immediate family until the winter of 1884 and 5, when he actively engaged in the work, and now concludes his labors in this volume, which financially bids fair to prove a failure; but if it shall awaken an interest in our family history and a family pride which shall be a motive to nobler aims, the writer will feel repaid for his trouble.

It is desired that any errors in this book, and all future births, marriages and deaths, also all changes of residence, may be communicated either to Miss S. B. Kidder, No. 39 Court St., Boston, or to the undersigned.

After supplying the present subscribers there will be about 125 copies of the book containing the heliotype portraits, and 100 copies not containing them, but in all other respects the same. The former may be had at $1.50, and the latter at $1.00 a copy.

THE FAMILY IN ENGLAND.

(From History of New Ipswich, published 1852, and private papers of Miss S. B. Kidder.)

“FROM researches that have been made, it has been ascertained that this may be called one of the ancient families of England. It is certain that for several centuries a respectable family of the name is found to have resided in the old quiet agricultural village of Maresfield, or as it was more anciently written, ‘Marsfielde,’ which is situated in the county of Sussex, about seventy miles from London. Some account relating to a transfer of land there, dated as early as 1370, in which the name of Kydder is a party, is said to be still extant. But if tradition is to be relied on, they are of the stock of ancient Britons, and existed as a family previous to the incursions of the Romans, Danes or Saxons, and were not disturbed in the possession of their lands at the conquest. In some of the early documents the name is stated to be written ‘Kyddwr’; this would indicate a Welch, or more properly, ancient British lineage.

“The late investigations of English and French historians seem to warrant the belief that but a small part of the latter race either fled or were driven into Wales; and a strong probability exists that the more quiet and peaceful were allowed to remain and cultivate their lands in quietness. Of the derivation of the name much uncertainty exists. ‘Kyd’ in Welch means a town on a hill,—and ‘dwr’ a small river or brook; while in Saxon, Kidder means a dealer in grain. Some changes seem to have been made in writing the name at different periods; as early as about 1500, it was written 'Kydder';—this spelling was retained for over a century; in the Cambridge Church Records, as early as 1656, it was written 'Kiddar.'

"Although the name has been found in different parts of England, and at one time in Ireland, it is now well ascertained that previous to 1500, all of the name who were then on the earth were residing at Maresfield. But soon after that time, a considerable emigration of them took place to some parts of the adjacent county of Kent, and of one family to London.

"A family of the name seem to have taken up their abode in the city of Canterbury, where there is a will on record, dated 1543, made by one of them, in which he distributes his property to his children, who were tradesmen of that city. The post-office was held by this family for over a century. Some of the descendants were living in that vicinity within a few years (of 1850), but they are now extinct.

"There were, a few years since, two or three families living in London; they were the descendants of Gilbert Kidder, who was born at Maresfield about 1670, and came to London before 1700. A wealthy branch flourished for near two hundred years at Lewes in Sussex, and one family were long seated at East Grinstead, in that vicinity, and here was the birth place of the patriarch of the American family.

"There has been a family residing in Kent for several generations, of which some respectable gentlemen are now living (1850), and are supposed to be the only males bearing the name in England.

"Vincent Kidder was son of George Kidder, and emigrated to London about 1630; he was a silver smith. He joined the Parliament forces under Cromwell, and went to the reduction of Ireland,—was a successful and brave officer,—attained the rank of major,—had a grant of near one thousand acres of land on the 10th of July, 1668, situate in the county of Kilkenny,—married Ellen, daughter of Adam Loftus and granddaughter of Sir Adam Loftus. She was descended from Edward III., King of England 1327-1377.* His second son, Vincent, was a lieutenant in Capt. Cottingham's company at the battle of the Boyne, 1690, afterwards a colonel, and was appointed assay-master for proving the standard of the gold and silver articles made in Dublin. A picture of him is still to be seen in the Goldsmith's Hall. A curious engraving of the Major is now in the possession of the writer (Frederic Kidder), representing him in the military costume of that period, and the face bears a strong resemblance to some of the name now living in (New Ipswich, N. H.) this vicinity."

[The engraving opposite is a reproduction, by the photo-engraving process, of the engraving mentioned by Frederic Kidder; the cut is about two thirds the size of the original. Mr. Jas. Crosby, of London, a descendant of Vincent Kidder, writing to Frederic Kidder in 1852, speaks of this cut as follows: "The plate is engraved on both sides, the full length figure is intended for a portrait of the first Vincent Kidder The whole thing is very curious; the plate is evidently intended for Prince Henry, the eldest son of James I.,—you will find it in an illustration to the early edition of Drayton's Poly-Olbion; it probably was a spoiled plate which V. Kidder had got possession of, he then rubbed out the Prince's face and substituted his own, rubbing out also the engraver's name. The face bears a most surprising resemblance to his two descendants, my late uncles Thomas and Edward."]

"His great-grandson, Thomas, resided in London, where he was a member of the common council, and in the employ of the East India Company. He was an antiquary, and wrote several letters to a namesake in this country, giving an account of the family, from which much of the above has been derived. He died in 1824, and was buried in the old churchyard at Maresfield at his request, although none of his direct relatives for three generations had been interred there."

The following is a copy of Grant of Arms to the Descendants of Vincent Kidder, Esq.:

"To all and singular to whom these presents shall come William Betham Esq. Deputy Ulster King of Arms and principal Herald of all Ireland Sendeth Greeting. Whereas Vincent Kidder Esquire a Major in the Army sent into Ireland on the Great Rebellion of 1641 where he for his eminent services had considerable grants of land and married Ellen Daughter of Adam Loftus 2nd son of Sir Thomas Loftus of Killian in the County of Meath Knight by whom he had several children. Vincent Kidder Esquire his second son was Lieutenant in Captain Collinghams Company at the Battle of the Boyne, and afterwards became a member of the Corporation of Goldsmiths in Dublin to whom he rendered eminent services by introducing and bringing to perfection a method of assay for which in testimony of their gratitude the company had his Portrait painted in full length and put up in their Hall. And whereas application has been made to me on behalf of the descendants of the said Vincent Kidder Junior to grant, ratify, and confirm unto them certain armorial bearings expressive of the above circumstances, Know ye therefore that I the said Deputy Ulster by virtue of the power and authority to "The most distinguished of the family was Richard Kidder, Bishop of Bath and Wells (see Frontispiece). He was born in 1633, at East Grinstead, the birth place of the American immigrant, of whom he was a kinsman. His father was a reputable land-holder in that parish. He was educated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, where he was admitted a sizer in 1649; was Rector of St. Martin's, London, Prebend of Norwich 1681, Dean of Peterborough 1689, and in 1691 was made Bishop of Bath and Wells. He perished in the great gale Nov. 27, 1703; being with his wife at prayers in their chamber in the Bishop's palace at Wells, one of the chimneys, driven by the fury of the tempest, fell through the roof and buried them in the ruins.*

"He was a talented, warm-hearted Christian; his writings have been for more than a century and a half a text-book to the theologian, and a solace to the enquiring Christian; they will ever remain an evidence of a mind that was far in advance of its day in true practical Christianity. He left two daughters, Ann, who died unmarried, and was buried by his side ; Susannah, who married Sir Richard Everard, Bart., and was one of the early Governors of North Carolina. They both resided and died in Virginia. They had one daughter, Susannah, who married David Meade of the county of Nansemond, Va. They had two daughters and five sons, of whom were:

* BISHOP KIDDER'S MONUMENT.—"Between the easternmost columns on the north side of the choir, is the lofty monument of Bishop Kidder and his lady, who were killed in the great storm of Nov. 26, 1703. This was erected by their surviving Daughter, who is represented by an elaborate figure reclining on a slab and looking at two urns, supposed to contain the ashes of her ill-fated parents; at the sides are two Corinthian columns, supporting an entablature and open pediment crowned with flaming lamps, and a bronze shield of the family arms (sable a cross eagerly argent). Beneath the entablature is expanded drapery with cherubim in basso-relievo."—Britton's History of Wells Cathedral, p. 113.

- i. DAVID MEADE, at whose house on James River the patriots of the revolution often assembled. After the war he moved to Kentucky, where he died, leaving a numerous offspring.
- ii. RICHARD KIDDER MEADE, the second son, was a colonel in the Revolutionary war, and one of General Washington's aids. He witnessed the execution of Major André, of which he had official charge. He died in the county of Frederic, where his descendants now live. His son, William, was a Bishop of the Episcopal Church in that State from 1829 to 1862, and during the war Presiding Bishop of the South.
- iii. EVERARD MEADE, the third son, was an officer of the Revolution. Many of his descendants now live in Virginia.
- v. ANDREW MEADE, the youngest son, lived and died in the county of Brunswick. His descendants, numbering over a hundred, now live in adjacent counties.

Another of the name, who made himself of some reputation in England, was Edward Kidder, born at Canterbury, who kept a pastry cook shop next Furnival's Inn, London, and wrote a treatise on the art of cooking and making of Pies and Pastry. The custom was fashionable for the notable young ladies of the day to learn of Kidder ; and his price for teaching was two guineas, a considerable sum in those days. He died in 1738, and left two daughters, who both died unmarried.

The following is an extract from the Lady's Newspaper (of London), of Jan. 25, 1851 :

“ The art of making Pastry was formerly of so much importance as to be taught in schools. Thus from an old Record we find that in Queen St., Cheapside, lived Mr. Edward Kydder, a famous Pastry Cook. He died in 1739, aged 73 years. He is said to have taught nearly 6000 Ladies the art of making Pastry, for which purpose he had two schools, one in Queen Street and the other in Holborn."

The following letter, written in 1850 by the Rev. Edward Turner, Rector of Maresfield, a distinguished antiquary, gives many particulars of the family history. It may be considered as perfectly reliable.

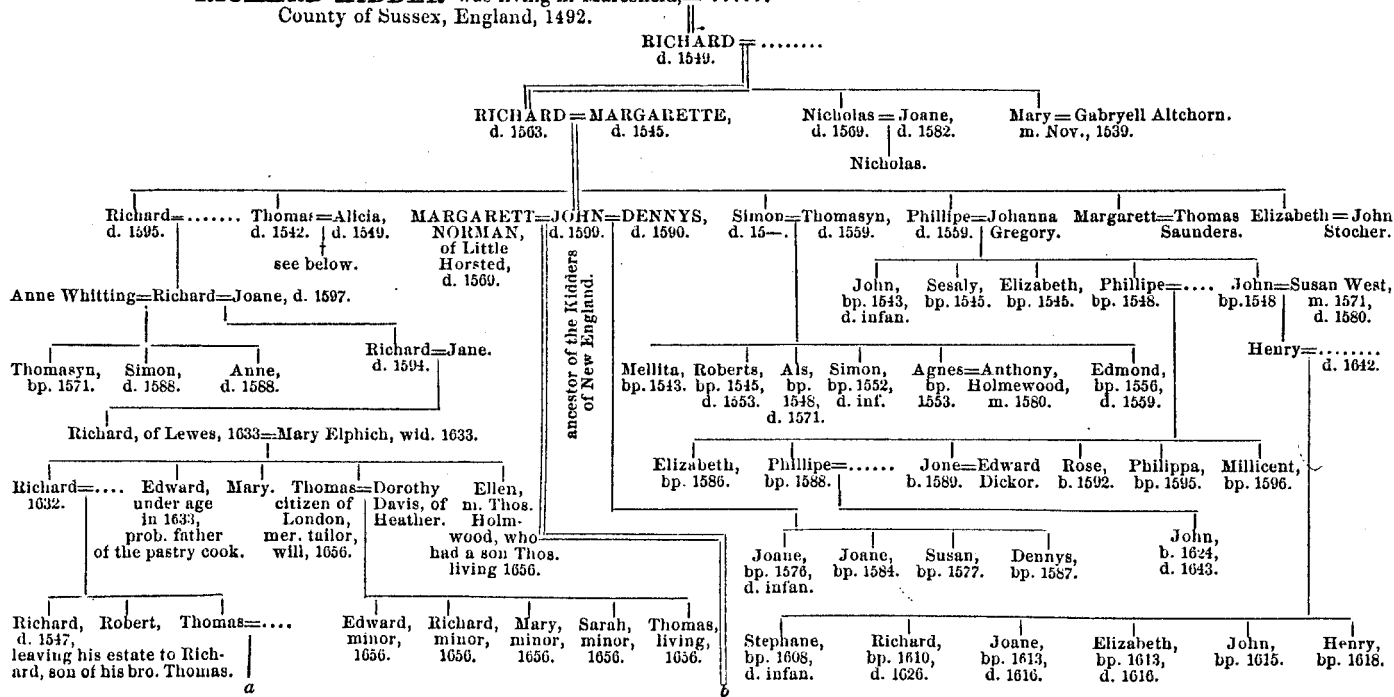

"The antiquity of the Kidder family in Maresfield is undoubted. The earliest notice of it that I have met with is connected with a deed of Edward II., assigning certain rights and privileges within the Forest of Ashdown to the Rector of Maresfield. This will carry them back to about the year 1320. At that period, and till about the time of Charles II. (say 1660), this forest was a royal park, called Lancaster Great Park, and the Kidders are described as 'the Bayliffs.' Their place of residence was within the precincts of this park, and bore the appropriate, though not very elegant name of 'The Hole,' clearly from the circumstance of its being situated at the bottom of a deep forest dell. There is still a house there bearing the same name. Might not the name of Kidder then be derived from the nature of the duties attached to the office of bailiff of this park, which was abundantly stocked with deer—'le Kidder'? Kidbrook is still the name of a district of Ashdown Forest. The deer on the coat of arms which you mention as in your possession, is evidently what is called in Heraldry, punning, that is, a play on the name—Kid Deer. But might it not also be taken as bearing on my hypothesis of the origin of the name?

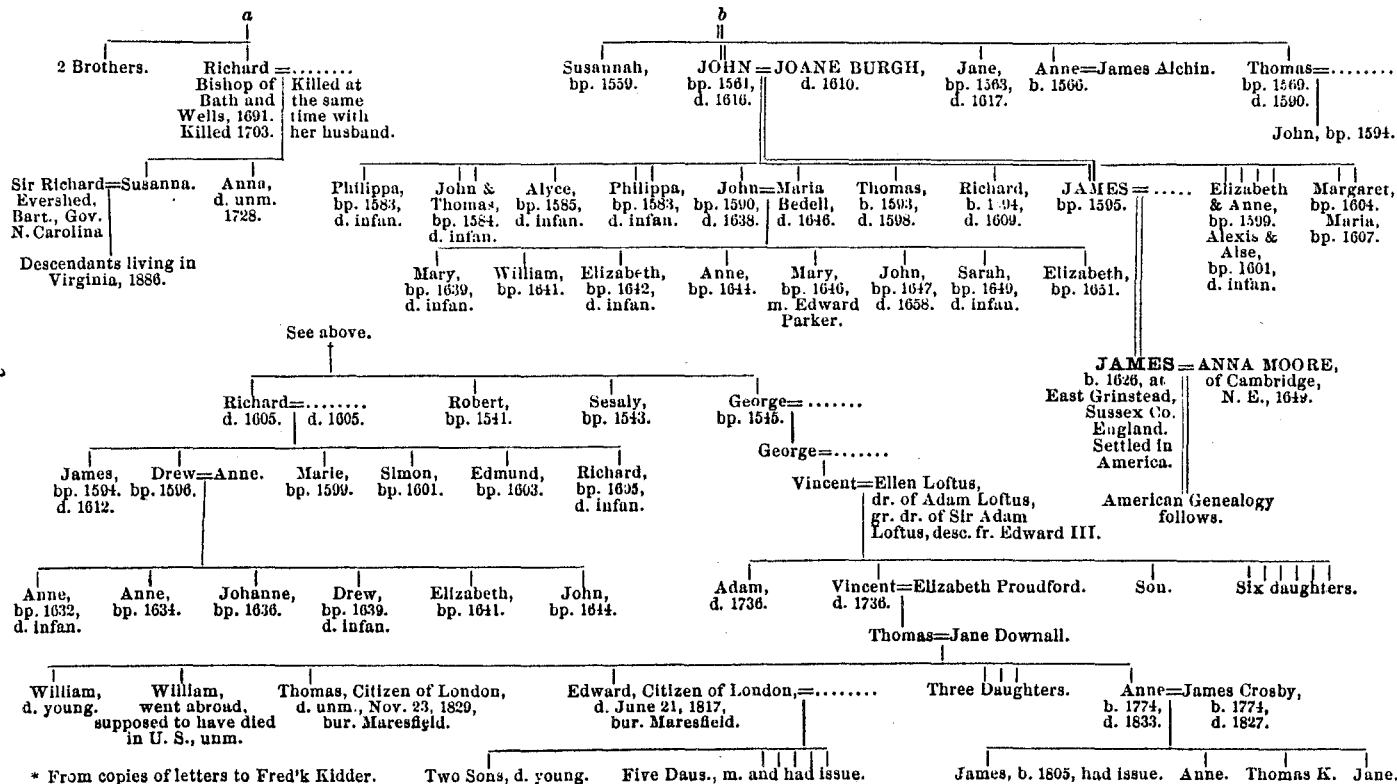

"It is, however, to the Registers of the parish that we must look for the best proof of the early connection of the Kidder family with Maresfield; and from this source most extensive and satisfactory information is to be obtained. The parish Records commence with the year 1538 (30th of Henry VIII.), and among the earliest names that occur in them there is that of Kydder. It records a marriage that took place in 1539, of which the following is a copy: 'In y^e monyt of November and y^e ix day I wedded one Gabryell Altchorn and Mary Kydder.' And the next in point of time is a Baptism, in 1541: 'Item primus, Robertus Kyddr (sic) filius Thomi Kydder Baptizatus erat 30^a die Novembris.' I annex the descent of the Family, as shown by the Maresfield Registry. I have also carefully examined the Records of Lewes and some other parish registers, and thereby extended and enlarged the list. The dates and names have again been revised, and may now be depended on."

NOTE.—In the tabular pedigree on the next two pages, the double lines denote the descent of the New England family of Kidder.

PEDIGREE OF THE KIDDER FAMILY OF ENGLAND.*

RICHARD KIDDER was living in Maresfield, =
County of Sussex, England, 1492.

In regard to James Kidder, the patriarch of the family in America, he being the James Kidder who was born in East Grinstead in 1626, the Rev. Edward Turner, of Maresfield, in a letter to Frederic Kidder, written June 27, 1851, wrote as follows :

“With regard to James Kydder, the first settler in the U. S., I have found him in East Grinstead, at all events I have discovered there an individual answering to that name, and of the age you describe your ancestor to have been when he left this country ; and as he is described as the son of James Kydder, I have not scrupled in adopting him as the son of the Maresfield James, and as the person for whom you are enquiring. There cannot, I think, be a doubt of the identity. I can find no other James.”

The following extracts may prove of interest to those interested in the antiquity of the family.

“Maresfield is a large parish joining Uckfield on the north and northwest, the area being 7,750 acres. The parish is 7 miles in length and between 3 and 4 in breadth. The village and church are 2 miles from Uckfield Railway Station.

“The Kidders of Maresfield are said in an old manorial book to have preceded the Heaths, in the possession of the Lampool estate, the latter being the proprietors in 1557, and probably before that. The name Kidder appears frequently in the Register Books. They appear to have been respectable yeomen taking principal parochial offices, and standing as sponsors at baptisms in families of good position. One of them was the ‘bayliffe’ or principal superintendent of the forest and its subordinate officers under the verderer. They were landowners in the parish in the time of Edward II., 1307.”—Extract from the Uckfield Visitors’ Guide, presented to Geo. W. Kidder, March 15, 1878, by Rev. J. B. N. Butler, Rector of St. Bartholomew Church, Maresfield.

“Here lieth the body of Mr. John Kidder descended from a family of very great antiquity in this parish. He died the 26th September, 1684, aged 73 years.”—Copied by George W. Kidder from a tombstone in the churchyard at Maresfield.

Extract from an old book in possession of the Lord of the Manor of Maresfield :

“The Hole House, freehold consisting of a House and 2 Barns ; and certain lands—called Athers or Arthurs, consisting of about 35 ^a, lying between Horney Common and Lampool Green ; and described as late Newnham’s before Heath’s and formerly Kidders.”

COAT OF ARMS OF COL. REUBEN KIDDER.

The wood cut, of which this is a reproduction, was made from a sketch of the Coat of Arms cut on Col. Reuben Kidder's grave stone in the cemetery at New Ipswich. The original of this was a painting on canvas, supposed to have been made in England for Col. Kidder. The only right to use these Arms, that can be claimed, is that they have already been in the family some one hundred and thirty years.

THE FAMILY IN AMERICA.

(From History of New Ipswich.)

“THE first person of the name of Kidder, who came to the New World, was Steven Kidder, who was here as early as 1633. He is mentioned in a letter of that date as having been sent out by Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Capt. John Mason, to commence a plantation at Newichewanock, now South Berwick, Me. As Gorges died shortly after, and his establishment was broken up, no doubt Steven Kidder returned to England, as after a thorough search no further trace of him could be found. He was born at Maresfield in 1609, and was, therefore, about twenty-five years of age when he came here. One Thaddeus Kidder came to this country about 1670; was at Lynn in 1672 and also in 1676. It cannot be ascertained that he left any descendants, at least in the male line.

“JAMES KIDDER, who was born at East Grinstead in Sussex, England, in 1626, may be considered as the patriarch of the family, and the ancestor of all who bear the name in this country. In what year or by what ship he made his advent to New England, cannot now be ascertained. It is certain that he was at Cambridge as early as 1650, and perhaps it is fair to infer that he was here sometime previous. As the persecution for opinion's sake in England had ceased some years previous, we cannot claim that as a cause for his leaving his fatherland, but must presume that, on coming of age, he found his country involved in a civil war of uncertain length, and to avoid those troublous times, he concluded to seek a more peaceful residence with better prospects than a young farmer could then find in his native country. We first find him located at Cambridge, Mass., where he married, probably in 1649, Anna Moore,* daughter of Elder Francis Moore. As the family of Elder Moore was then one of the most wealthy and respectable in that place, we infer that the appearance and reputation of our ancestor must have been of equal character to have entitled him to such an alliance.

"In 1653 he was occupying a farm of two hundred and eighty-nine acres, lying on the north side of Fresh Pond and Menotomy River, which he had leased of Deacon Sparrowhawk three years previous. (This location is now in West Cambridge.) In the treasurer's records of the colony for that year, now deposited in the rooms of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, his name appears, as having received ten shillings as the bounty for killing a wolf.

"In 1653 the General Court granted Shawshine, now Billerica, to Cambridge, and for several years it continued to form a part of that town; many of its older residents receiving grants of lands, soon removed there.†

"It is most likely that James Kidder was among the first to take up his abode in that wilderness, and it is quite probable he may have gone there as early as 1653 or 4, and to have made, as soon as possible, the preparations for removing his family. It is certain he was residing there with his family as early as 1656, and this place may be considered as the home of the family for over one hundred years. Both he and his wife were members of the church in Cambridge in full communion, and six of their children were baptized there. When a church was organized at Billerica, they were among the first to become members of it. In 1662, he was a juror of the Court holden in Cambridge, and in the Court records of that year we find the following entry:—'James Kidder is allowed to be sergant of the Military Company at Billerica.' This may be thought a small affair for the courts to take cognizance of, but the organization of the military of that day was a matter of the first importance, and none but men of the most reliable character were entrusted with any office in it. It will be seen that he afterwards rose to the rank of ensign; his name is often mentioned in the town records of Billerica, where he was appointed on various committees. He was also selectman for six years.

* As the record of most of the early marriages in Cambridge is lost, the precise time cannot be ascertained.

† Elder Moore had one hundred acres allotted him. Probably James Kidder had this for a farm.—F. E. K.

"In 1675, when King Philip's war took place, he was in the public service, and kept guard over the small tribe of Indians at Wameset, now forming part of Lowell, and soon after was appointed to the command of a garrison-house, which contained seven families, including his own and that of his son James. He died, April 16th, 1676,* in the midst of the war, aged about 50, it has been suggested from disease caused by his exposure in this war, which was the most trying time ever seen in New England.

"Thus passed away the patriarch of the family in this country; and though no stone marks the spot or perpetuates his memory, the name seems destined to live through all coming time, as his descendants, now numbering some thousands, are spread over this broad land, from the Penobscot to the shores of the Pacific, and from Canada to Louisiana," representing nearly every occupation and profession, in many of which the name has gained considerable prominence. His descendants have fought in all the wars of the Union, in all grades from the private to the colonel, and in the last war the name was largely and honorably represented both on land and sea.

The majority of those bearing the name are farmers, but many have shone as lawyers, bankers, philanthropists, poets, surgeons, ministers, merchants, etc.; and very seldom has the name been disgraced by any unlawful acts.

* There was an Indian foray April 16, 1676, on a hill near Kidder's garrison-house. James was either killed or mortally wounded, and died a few days afterwards.—(Old MS. Document in the State House.) His name is not given, but four or five were killed or wounded, and James disappeared,—was probably one of the killed.—F. E. K.

"Some of his hand-writing is still extant ; it is in the sharp, angular style of the times, and shows that his education was superior to many of the early emigrants." His autograph is annexed.

His widow, Anna, married William Underwood of Chelmsford, March 17, 1684-5.

The following is a copy of the inventory of the estate of James Kidder, from the Probate Records, Vol. V. p. 35.

9. Richard, b. May 10, 1705; removed to Dudley; d. 1773. His descendants are very numerous, and were in part published in a pamphlet in 1876, by Samuel T. Kidder, whose address is Fond du Lac, Wis.

viii. Stephen. b. Nov. 26, 1662; m. Mary Johnson; she d. of small pox, Sept. 17, 1722. They lived in Charlestown. He was a blacksmith, a man of energy, and accumulated quite an estate. His will, dated March 19, 1748, and proved July 18, 1748, is on file in the Middlesex Probate Records. He leaves his property to be equally divided between his children, Stephen, Isaac, John, Mary and Anna. Probably the others, as well as his wife, were then dead. He d. July 5, 1748. Some of his posterity were living in Charlestown till about 1840.

His children were:

1. Samuel, m. Elizabeth Davis; d. prior to 1718.
Had a dau., d. in infancy.
2. Mary, b. Oct. 16, 1694.

 4. William, b. Dec. 5, 1700; d. Oct. 10, 1702.
 5. Francis, b. Oct. 1, 1703; m. Elizabeth Hill, 1731; d. at Oxford. Had 10 children.
 6. Mary, b. March 26, 1707.
 7. William, b. March 13, 1710; m. Sarah Ballard, Dec. 16, 1736. Had 8 children.
- x. Samuel, b. Jan. 7, 1666; seems to have resided while young, with his uncle, Francis Moore, who gave him the family residence and farm in Cambridge. The old Kidder mansion, in Cambridge, stood near the cor. of Main St. and Kidder's Lane (now Spruce St.); tradition says it was built in 1660, probably by James Moore, Jr. He was a deacon of the church, selectman four years—1716-1721, and a man of some importance in the town. He had a mill for manufacturing malt. He d. July 4, 1724, æt. 59. His wife d. Nov. 15, 1738, æt. 72. The inventory of his estate amounted to £1,356.6, which was a large amount at that day. He m. Sarah Griggs, at Cambridge, Oct. 23, 1689; she was b. in 1666. Their children were:
1. Sarah, b. Aug. 17, 1690; m. Samuel Cooper, March 29, 1720.
 2. Francis, b. 1692; m. Mary Prentice, Feb. 13, 1718; d. Jan. 21, 1724. Had 4 children. (Ancestor of Miss S. B. Kidder.)

3. Samuel, b. 1694; d. Aug. 14, 1718.
4. James, bapt. 1696; d. Oct. 31, 1714.
5. Thomas, b. Dec. 18, 1698; m. widow Lydia (Prentice) Cooper, April 8, 1725. Had eleven children. (Ancestor of Henry P. Kidder, banker.)
6. John, b. Nov. 25, 1700; d. March 6, 1735; was a cordwainer; unmarried.
7. Nathaniel, b. Nov. 20, 1702; m. Deborah Bowman, Sept. 17, 1741; d. March 28, 1789; had 3 children.
8. Joseph, b. March 23, 1704-5; d. Aug. 23, 1725.
9. Mary, b. June 5, 1707; m. Benjamin Goddard, of Grafton, Dec. 9, 1731.
10. Hannah, b. March 5, 1708-9.
- xi. SARAH, b. June 1, 1667; m. George Brown, Chelmsford, 1689-90.
- xii. JOSEPH, b. Nov. 20, 1670; lived at Charlestown; d. in 1683.

It should be noticed that there were six sons who had male issue, and each of those six sons have descendants living at the present time; and it is probable that all bearing the name of Kidder in this country are descended from one of these sons. The following pages are devoted to the genealogy of the descendants of John Kidder, the second son, and may be considered, I think, to include about one sixth of all the Kidders in this country up to the present time.

3. JOHN KIDDER, son of James and Anna (p. 17), was b. in Cambridge, Mass., about 1656; d. in Chelmsford, Mass. He moved to Chelmsford when a young man, and in 1681 bought of Jonathan Tyng, 500 acres of land, lying on the west side of Concord River, in Chelmsford, where he afterwards resided.

March 13, 1746-7, he and his two brothers, James and David, petitioned the Judge of the Probate Court of the county of Middlesex for an administrator upon the estate of "Our Brother Benjamin Kidder deceased for all the service that he did in the expedition at Cape Britton, who enlisted and went under the command of Cap't Joseph Richardson"; and a fac simile of their signatures is annexed.

Benjamin Kidder

- vii. RACHEL, b. 1759 ; never married.
- viii. EUNICE, b. 1761 ; never married.

11. REUBEN KIDDER, son of Thomas and Joanna (p. 22), was b. in that part of the ancient town of Chelmsford, now Westford, in 1723 ; d. in New Ipswich, N. H., Sept. 20, 1793, æt. 70 yrs. 8 mos. 19 days.

"Of his youth but little can now be ascertained. He had the misfortune to lose his father when only six years of age, and he and his brothers had to struggle with all the difficulties incident to a state of orphanage. Notwithstanding this, he obtained the rudiments of an education superior to most of the young men of that day, and it did much to give him that station in life which he subsequently reached.

"His first step in the world beyond his native town was as a surveyor, and owing to the number of new townships then being laid out, and the constant sale of lands, the office was an important one to the community, and generally lucrative to the possessor. Among the benefits it conferred, not the least was in making him acquainted with the locations, value and claimants of the various tracts of land which had been so freely granted by the General Court about this period. It is supposed that in this way he first became acquainted with the situation of New Ipswich, which, by the running of the State line, had been taken from its original grantees, while the French and Indian wars of 1748 had caused almost an abandonment of its territory by the few settlers who had commenced preparing a home in that wilderness. With a spirit of enterprise so characteristic of him in after life, we find him, as soon as this war had closed, making purchases of some of the Ipswich grantees of their dormant rights, at merely nominal prices, and in the spring of 1749 had obtained a title to about four shares.

“He was the most prominent person in making arrangements for a new title, with Col. Blanchard as agent for the Masonian proprietors, and this was soon effected, and a proprietary organization established in April, 1750. In this instrument he, as well as his brother Joseph, are named among the grantees, and called residents of the town; but it is not supposed he was permanently here, until two or three years after. It was by his influence and exertions that a large number of young men, natives of old Chelmsford, including Westford, were induced to buy lands and become settlers here, and it is a well known fact that we are indebted to that town for a larger emigration than any other. Many of them purchased farms of Col. Kidder, who was a large land seller, both of his own and of the Masonian proprietors, who soon constituted him their agent. A venerable man, who well remembers him, and whose opinion gives it weight, says that Col. Kidder may be said to have been, for the first twenty years of his residence here, the father of the town. In 1754 the first military company of the town was organized, with Reuben Kidder as Lieutenant, and in 1759 he was captain.

“In 1754 he was married to Susannah Burge, a native of the same town as himself, and in the spring of that year she accompanied him to the new township, making the twenty-fifth married woman here. Mr. Kidder had probably almost a free choice in the location of his farm, and whether he was most influenced by its suitableness as a farm, or the beauty of its scenery, is not known. It is to be supposed that the first was the strongest incentive, but from his known good taste we presume he did not overlook the latter; certain it is, that nowhere in the town could a more attractive spot have been selected. For his house he chose a location gently sloping to the south, while in front and on the left extended noble meadows for half a mile in extent, which those industrious animals, the beavers, as advanced pioneers, had already cleared of the forests and constructed dams, the remains of which a century have not obliterated, and so extensive, that this was then the broadest surface which was opened to the rays of the sun in the township. On the north was a conical hill, then covered with a thick grove of beech, which gave it the name retained to the present time (1850); while to the west, at the distance of only half a mile, was a range of mountains, the most prominent of which, for a century, has borne the name of the 'Kidder Mountain,' and will serve to perpetuate his name to generations yet to come. On this farm, then said to be a mile in length, he commenced in the summer of 1750 the process of cultivation, and having several men in his employ, he was enabled to pursue it with energy, and the virgin soil yielded abundant crops of grain, while the beaver meadows brought, with little labor, large crops of hay—an article which is not soon obtained in a new settlement. He soon turned his attention to the culture of fruit, on a very extensive scale, and previous to the Revolution had one of the largest and most valuable orchards in New England, containing the rarest varieties of apples and pears; of the former it is very doubtful if any one orchard can, at the present day (1850), with all the boasted improvements in Pomology, be found containing a greater variety of valuable kinds; and while it has been suffered to go to decay, and many kinds to become extinct, its scions are still flourishing from the Penobscot to the Ohio.

“He erected the first mill in this region, and made annually three to four hundred barrels of cider, a beverage then universal and indispensable in every family. All his enterprises seem to have been successful, and he soon attained an influence and respect much more extensive than any other man within a dozen miles. A large part of the province was then owned by residents of Portsmouth, where his business often called him. He was on intimate terms with Gov. Wentworth, for whom he had a great respect, and from him he received a commission appointing him his 'Majesty's Justice of the Peace,' which contained much larger powers than in more recent times. Under this, he exercised almost supreme sway, and his decisions were potential through this and the adjacent towns. After the county was organized, he, with some others, held a Quarterly Court at Amherst, with probably more form and as much dignity as the Superior Court now shows. In 1762 the Proprietors wishing an incorporation as a town, he was delegated 'to go down to court and obtain the charter,' which he did, and was appointed to call the first meeting. After this charter expired, he went again the second time, and afterwards presided at the reorganization of the town.

"About 1770, Gov. Wentworth conferred on him the title of Colonel of a regiment of militia, which was then a responsible office, and this appointment was probably the principal reason for the course he subsequently took in the Revolution. From the Masonian proprietors he received the grant, under certain restrictions, of a township of land, afterwards called Camden, but subsequently named Washington. This grant was upon condition of his settling a certain number of families, building roads, etc., and in this enterprise Col. Kidder expended much time and money; but the Revolution and the subsequent pecuniary difficulties which afflicted the country, prevented him from realizing his expectations of profit. After his death, through the exertions of his son Isaiah, the family realized what he had earlier anticipated.

"The mansion shown opposite was mainly built by him about 1754, and the front added a dozen years later. In the parlor was a chimney-piece of slate, highly ornamented and wrought under his direction, the centre-piece representing the family 'coat of arms'; and in this room paper hangings were first introduced, which antedated every other house in town at least a dozen years. He also owned and used the first carriage within twenty miles. A gentleman, now living (1852), says he well remembers when the Colonel used to come out of church, hand his wife into the curricie, and, when seated, his colored man Cæsar would rein up his span of black horses and drive to his residence, much to the admiration of a large portion of the congregation, all of whom either came on horseback or on foot.

“Col. Kidder assisted in the organization of the church, and was at first a member ; but subsequently adopted more liberal views in religion, and both he and his wife would, at this day, be claimed as Unitarians ; but he always paid cheerfully the largest sum of any person to the support of Mr. Farrar.

“At the commencement of the Revolution he held two offices under the King, and many of his friends were among the royal party. Having so high an opinion of the power of England, and amid strong conservative influences, it is not strange that he should have viewed the measures of the patriots as injudicious, and calculated to prove disastrous to all engaged in them. Declining to act under the authority of a ‘Committee of Safety’ or the ‘Provincial Congress,’ he was superseded in his military command by an act passed in 1775, and from that time seems to have devoted himself to his private affairs alone. Although he always expressed his opinions freely as averse to the war, and therefore must have been extremely unpopular, still the respectability of his character seems to have preserved him from any of the annoyances which many of the loyalists of that day had to encounter. He paid his full proportion, which was the greatest of any person in town, towards carrying on the war, to which, from principle, he was opposed, and which proved so disastrous to his pecuniary interests.

“In person he was tall, of a dignified appearance, courteous and affable to his friends and respectful to all, and in his numerous business relations was honorable and just. He d. Sept. 20, 1793, æt. 70. His widow survived him thirty-two years, and d. in 1824, æt. 88.” Reuben Kidder
His autograph is here given.

The following is a copy of the inscription on his gravestone :

The family coat of arms being at the top of the slab.

"Erected to the memory of Col. Reuben Kidder who died Sept. 20, A.D. 1793—Aged 70 years and 3 months.

"As thou looks on this monument others shortly will look on thine, for know O reader tho' thy cheek now reddens with the glow of health,

"Thy sparkling eye shall soon languish in death and thy body now active shall ere long like the deceased be consigned to the narrow confines of a grave, where a few feet of kindred earth shall forever hide thee from the busy world."

* The following is from The History of Methodism in Great Britain and America, published by the Methodist Book Concern:—"Osman C. Baker, D.D., one of the four Bishops elected at the General Conference of 1852, and the first of their number to go up higher, was born in the town of Marlow, N. H., July 30, 1812. At the age of fifteen he entered the Wesleyan Academy of Wilbraham, Mass., where he was converted; and received into the church. In 1830 he entered the Wesleyan University at Middletown, from which he removed, after three years, by reason of ill health. In 1839 he was admitted on trial into the New Hampshire Conference, and thereafter served the church as a teacher and author until his election to the Episcopate, along with Bishops Scott, Simpson and Ames, in 1852. For fourteen years he rendered good service in this highest office in the church, after which he became an invalid, and lingered until his death, which occurred on the 20th of December, 1871, at Concord, N. H., in the 59th year of his age. Bishop Baker is remembered as a calm, polished, Christian scholar. His administration as Bishop was distinguished by a clear comprehension of the duties of his office. His 'Guide-book in the Administration of the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church' remains as a monument to his name and work."

25. REUBEN KIDDER, son of Reuben and Susannah (p. 31), was b. in New Ipswich, April 3, 1768; d. in New Harmony, Ind., in 1817.

"After taking his degree of A.B., Class of 1791, Dartmouth College, he qualified himself for the profession of the law, was admitted to practice in usual course, and established himself at Waterville, Me., in the spring of 1795 ; the first lawyer who adventured so far north, into what was then almost a wilderness. The town of Winslow, of which Waterville was then a part, contained in 1790 but 779 inhabitants, and in 1800 but 2,250 Mr. Kidder sought the consolation of a companion in his solitude, and soon married Miss Lois Crosby, who became the mother of four children Mrs. Kidder died in 1809. In 1816 Mr. Kidder was touched with the 'Western fever,' which at that time prevailed in Maine, and thought to better his fortune by transferring himself to the prairies of the west. He moved to New Harmony, in Indiana But his hopes were not realized ; he was doomed to sadness and disappointment. He died in 1817, the year after his removal.

"Mr. Kidder was a man of good personal appearance, much general information, and fine colloquial powers.

"His wit and humor were conspicuous ; they pervaded him, appearing in his countenance and gestures, as well as in his utterances. The most stern visage would relax the moment Mr. Kidder imagined a joke ; you saw it dawning in his look, and when it rose full upon you, you felt a glow of real pleasure. Mr Kidder was a man of abilities, and had considerable business at the bar, and was much respected for his gentlemanly qualities and his integrity of character ; but he did not attain eminence as an advocate.

"He was a sound and good lawyer ; and in person of more than medium size, a little stooping. He was honorable in his profession, and was a man of fine tastes. He set out a grove of oaks half a mile from the village of Waterville, to which he often repaired in summer from the heat, and called it his Athenæum. He used to wear a bouquet in summer at his button hole."*

He m. Lois Crosby ; she d. 1809.

26. ISAAH KIDDER, son of Reuben and Susannah (p. 31), was b. in New Ipswich, Feb. 3, 1770; d. April 28, 1811, æt. 41, of a putrid nervous fever.

"Isaiah Kidder was born at the mansion house of the family in 1770. In his boyhood he made considerable progress in the common schools, and afterwards finished his education at the Academy, under the tuition of Mr. Hubbard. In early manhood, for some two or three years, he kept one of the district schools, and there are yet living (1852) some among his pupils who well remember his encouraging voice and pleasant smile. At the death of his father, in 1793, he took charge of his extensive affairs, and, in a few years, settled the estate, and made valuable the land titles that had been in confusion. In February, 1799, he commenced trade at Mason Village, then called Mason Harbor. By his enterprise and fair dealing, he soon won the confidence of the community, and, as his was the only store in Mason, Temple or Wilton, his trade was extensive and lucrative. He continued this business successfully, for about six years, and when it was closed he said that thirty dollars would cover all his losses by bad debts.

"He was one of the originators of the turnpike, in which he made a large investment, and of which he was long time a director. He erected the large building, and occupied it as a store until his death, which was for many years used as the only public house in the village.

"In 1804 he purchased the farm where he was born, and to which he was much attached; and, although no practical farmer, still he continued to pursue it as a matter of taste. It was his pleasure to plan and put in operation various improvements in agriculture. In this connection, he was the first to introduce merino sheep into this part of the country, which has resulted in a great benefit to the community at large.

"In 1806 he purchased of the Hon. Charles Barrett his interest in the first cotton factory. Up to that time, its operation had been limited to merely the process of spinning yarns; but Mr. K. had closely examined the subject, and foretold that the manufacture of cotton into various fabrics was to be a great interest in New England, and, if pursued with energy, would be of much importance to the town. He commenced in the establishment as principal manager, and it was known under the firm of Isaiah Kidder & Co. With a sanguine spirit, he soon began the manufacture of various kinds of goods, such as stripes, checks, gingham and velvets, and for this purpose procured various fixtures till then unknown in the country; and as no persons proper to carry on these projects were to be found, they were procured from England and Scotland. A long series of experiments had to be gone through with, and a long time elapsed before the goods were produced. Much difficulty occurred in making sales. They were sent to the South and sometimes to Canada; but prejudice was very strong against home manufactures, and their introduction was consequently exceedingly slow. It was left to later times and other persons to mature and carry out such enterprises successfully, and to reap the fruits of which he had first planted the seed.*

"In 1810 he was chosen to represent the town in the Legislature, and again in 1811. No man was ever more popular in the town, or more interested for its prosperity. He was one of the trustees of the Academy, and its warm friend. In the spring of 1811, he was attacked by a fever, to which, after a few weeks illness, he fell a victim. He died on the 28th of April, aged 41, in the midst of his active business, with many plans for future usefulness and the prosperity of his native town unfulfilled. One of his associates said after his death, 'his mind in regard to many of the great enterprises of the day was at least twenty years in advance of his time, and, had he lived, he would have been one of the first to have taken a leading part in some of the great projects of manufactures and intercommunication which have so benefitted New England.'

* His death was noticed in the Day Book kept at the Factory, by a black line drawn across the page. This still remains. It was significant of a mournful change in that establishment; as, deprived of its head, it lingered for a few years, an unprofitable concern, and finally became almost a total loss.

"In all his various transactions he was high-minded and honorable, and he always commanded the respect of a numerous acquaintance, and left not an enemy in the world. His funeral was very numerously attended. A sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Hill, of Mason, from which the following extract is made :

"To the mournful catalogue of such names of departed worth as a Bartlett, a Farrar, a Barrett and a Champney, you have now to add the name of Kidder. The general grief is his best eulogy. It shows you are not insensible to the worth of the man, and of the loss society sustains in his death. Possessed of a strong mind, cultivated by a good education, and enriched by reading and observation, his judgment was sound, active and enterprising. He was capable of much business and very extensive usefulness. Warmly interested in the prosperity of his country, and vigilant to promote the common welfare, he justly merited the confidence of his fellow-citizens. Just rising into public life, ah! how are all our fond expectations cut off!'"

David Kidder moved from Lyndeboro' to West Fairlee, probably in the year 1794, and took a farm, probably of about one hundred acres, adjoining that of his brother Aaron, built him a log house, and there reared his family. He was naturally a smart business man, and at one time owned nearly half of the town. The neighborhood where he lived was known for about a century as the Kidder neighborhood. He had the reputation of being a very good man, and his word of promise was considered as good as his note. He died and was buried in West Fairlee, and left a name widely known and respected. The place where he lived is situated about three miles from Bradford, on the road to West Fairlee.

He m. Betsey Fuller, a dau. of Andrew Fuller, of Lynde-

38. WILLIAM KIDDER, son of Jonas and Alice (p. 35), was b. in Lyndeboro', N. H., May 7, 1784; d. in Irasburgh, Vt., Jan. 2, 1863.

William Kidder was married, and lived in Lyndeboro' until the year 1820, when he moved his family to Irasburgh, probably through the influence of his brother Joseph. He bought a farm of one hundred and fifty acres, on which he resided the remainder of his life. He lived and died a Christian, greatly loved and respected by a large circle of friends. He possessed a great memory, and was a great reader. He left a family record, which has been of great assistance in tracing out his father's family. If more had followed his example our history might have been more complete, and easily prepared.

57. CAMILLUS KIDDER, son of Reuben and Lois (p. 42), was b. at Waterville, Me., June 27, 1805; d. in Boston, Jan. 16, 1883, æt. 77 yrs. 6 mos. 19 days; buried from King's Chapel, January 18, at 12 m.

He went to Bangor, Me., when a young man, and engaged in business there. After the birth of his first child he moved to Cambridge, Md., and from thence to Baltimore in 1842, where he did a commission business at 16 Bewley's Wharf, for many years, dealing mostly in rosin and naval stores. His business was injured by the war, and as he was a staunch Unionist, his personal safety was threatened in March and April of 1861. He never held public office, other than that of militia captain in his early days. He was an "old time whig" in politics, and an intimate friend of Thomas Holliday Hicks, the Maryland war Governor, whom he aided in divers campaigns. At the outbreak of the war, he had a lot of ship timber in the Rappahannock River, part of which was to be furnished the navy, and to be delivered at the Portsmouth Yard, N. H. He had an outfit of camp equipage, blankets, oxen, etc., which the Rebels confiscated, and his timber was partly burned and partly left to decay.

In 1864 the Union lines were beyond the district in question, and Mr. Kidder went to Washington to get permission to get out his timber under convoy of a gunboat. Mr. Stanton, Secretary of War, refused him. He then obtained a letter of introduction to President Lincoln, from his friend Thomas Holliday Hicks, then United States Senator for Maryland, and called on the President, who listened to him, and wrote the endorsement, of which a facsimile is given on page 71, on the back of the letter. Returning to Secretary Stanton, that officer rather gruffly wrote his endorsement, and referred the matter to Mr. Seward, Secretary of State, who finally refused the application, upon the ground that it would be a breach of the blockade, and would open a door for British ships to go up the James River.

A facsimile of the letter of introduction, and of the three endorsements, is given on pages 70 and 71. Mr. Camillus G. Kidder was with his father on this journey, and saw the several endorsements written.

He m. Oct. 16, 1834, Sarah Thompson Herrick, dau. of Gen. Jedediah and Mehitabel (Thompson) Herrick, of Hampden, Me. She was b. July 10, 1814, and d. in Boston, Mass., Nov. 26, 1881; was buried from King's Chapel, Nov. 29, at 1 P.M. During the war she was treasurer of the Ladies' Union Relief Association of Baltimore, Md.

58. JEROME G. KIDDER, son of Reuben and Lois (p. 42), was b. in Waterville, Me., in 1808; d. in Boston, Mass., Nov. 4, 1882, æt. 74 yrs.; buried from King's Chapel, Nov. 6, at 12 M.

"He received his education at Gardiner, Me., and at 16 years of age came to Boston. He was at first engaged in the grocery business; but shortly after attaining his majority, went into partnership with Mr. George A. Simmons, and embarked in the oil business. The partnership did not long continue, and Mr. Kidder carried on the business henceforth alone, accumulating a fortune. He retired from business about the year 1864. For a number of years he had been ailing, and finally died from general debility."

His estate was appraised at $135,795.60 real, $684,932.26 personal; the bulk of which he left to his brother Camillus.

There is a story in the family that he was in love with a Miss Hathaway, of Augusta, Me., to whom he offered himself repeatedly, and by whom he was steadily refused, as she did not return his love. As she was poor he wished to assist her in his lifetime, but she would accept nothing. By his will he left her $10,000, which he would have made more had he thought she would accept it.

59. FREDERIC KIDDER, son of Isaiah and Hepsey (p. 45), was b. in New Ipswich, N. H., April 16, 1804; d. Dec. 19, 1885, in Melrose, Mass., leaving no children.

The main events of his life will be found in the autobiography following, written nine years before his death. He had quite an extended reputation as a historian, and it is to his efforts that the subscribers of this book are principally indebted for the information which it contains of their ancestors.

In 1849 he became a member of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, of which he was for many years one of the most valued and active members, contributing largely of his means and time to its welfare. He was the second treasurer of the Society, serving from 1850 to 1855. He also served on various committees, at different times.

The following are his principal historical works :

History of New Ipswich from its first grant in 1736 to the year 1852, with genealogical notices of the principal families, etc. Boston, 1852. 8vo. pp. 488. (In this work he was assisted by Mr. Augustus A. Gould, of Boston.) "This was in the early days of town histories, and Mr. Kidder's history marked a new era in this department of literature. In size, beauty of typography, excellence of engravings and thoroughness of treatment it surpassed anything of the kind that had appeared. It is still held in high esteem, and commands a good price whenever a copy is offered for sale. An incident connected with this history is worthy of record. Daniel Webster, whose early career in the law in New Hampshire made him acquainted with many of the persons mentioned in Mr. Kidder's work, expressed a desire to see it. Mr. Kidder forwarded a copy to him at Marshfield, where he was then lying in his last illness. Mr. Webster was much interested in it, and, after his death, it was found lying on a light-stand near his bed, and was said by Mrs. Webster to have been the last book he ever read. At the sale of the Webster library, in 1875, this book was sold with the rest, and in it was found Mr. Kidder's note of presentation, which the great statesman had used as a book-mark."—T. B. The Discovery of North America by John Cabot. Pamphlet. 1878.

He also contributed articles to the Historical and Genealogical Register and the Continental Monthly.

The death of his wife, which took place Dec. 22, 1875, was a blow from which he never fully recovered. By a singular coincidence his own death occurred almost exactly on the anniversary of hers, and just ten years after her death his remains were laid by her side in Mt. Auburn.

"Mr. Kidder was a strong man, both in body and mind. He possessed a retentive memory and a remarkable fund of information, which made his conversation of great interest when in congenial company. He held decided views, and expressed them with a plainness that, joined with some eccentricity and abruptness of manner, sometimes gave offence to those who were not acquainted with his peculiarities. He thought for himself, and had the courage of his convictions, not hesitating to act on the decisions of his own judgment. He had great sagacity and good sense, which, with his long experience, made his advice in practical affairs valuable. He has left behind him the memory of a useful and well-spent life, and by his historical writings gained for himself an honorable place among those authors by whose accuracy and industry so much valuable historical information is gathered and preserved in permanent form."—T. AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF FREDERIC KIDDER.

"In writing the genealogy of a family, with the memoirs of many of the members, most of whom have long preceded us to the silent land, it cannot be considered intrusive for the writer, now long past three score and ten, after telling the story of our ancestors, to conclude by a brief record of his own life, and the experiences of a long and somewhat eventful career. It is with these thoughts that he ventures to pen the following :

"I was born in New Ipswich, in 1804, and my earliest remembrances are of playing with my brother Edward under the shade of the great elms which grew so luxuriantly in front of the old mansion house, which was the birth place of my father some thirty-five years previous; of going at the age of about five years to the town school in the village, and of the sickness, death and funeral of my father when I was but seven years old. Soon after this I attended the academy in my native town.

"When I was fifteen years old I was sent to Hanover, to a friend of my father's, who wished to do something for his oldest son, to repay favors received from him many years before. I attended the preparatory department of Dartmouth College, with the prospect of finishing my education there, but, in about two years, being the oldest son my services were required at home to assist my mother in taking care of a large family, and in managing the property.

"My desire being to get forward in life and take care of myself and help others as soon as I could, I came to Boston in March, 1822, and entered as a clerk in the large wholesale grocery firm of Macomber, Howard & Sawin, No. 13 Broad St. Boston was then a town of about forty thousand people, and in business as well as population was but the nucleus of what it has since become. Everything was much as it had been many years before, and one can hardly now conceive with what economy and long continued industry the merchants and their clerks performed their daily and yearly tasks. Goods were seldom sold beyond the limits of New England, and such things as vacations and visits to the springs and mountains, or to the seashore further than Nahant, were hardly ever heard of.

"As the effect of severe toils in the east winds and a small salary, my health, never robust, gave way, and I felt during that autumn that a more congenial climate might soon be a necessity. With a desire to try some better opportunity for advancing my own prospects, I decided to try the South, and in November, 1826, more than fifty years ago, I purchased some goods, loaded a small schooner, and sailed for Wilmington, N. C. In this voyage I was accompanied by my brother Edward, then about 20 years old. After a very stormy and unpleasant passage of more than twenty days we reached our destination, and renting a store commenced business, without knowing a person in the place. As the town was then very sickly in the summer, we could only do business for about six months in the year. Every May we closed up our affairs and visited the North. This plan we followed for about eight years, but my health seemed gradually to decline, and as my brother had an opportunity to become a partner in a large establishment there, I closed up our concern and returned to Cambridge, Mass., where my mother then resided.

"After about two years my health gradually improved, and I commenced business on India St., where, with some intervals, I continued till 1868, a period of nearly forty years, being engaged mostly in the southern trade. In 1845, with my partners B. F. and Charles Copeland, we purchased of the Barings, of London, a very large tract of land on the Schoodic Lakes in eastern Maine. It contained over a hundred thousand acres, and was more than thirty miles in extent. It was a dense forest, and proved a very profitable investment. Had we held it, it would have given us a large fortune.

"Ever since 1834 I had made my home on Columbia St., Cambridge, with my mother, and here I was in January, 1841, married to Miss Harriet M. Hagar, a union that happily continued for thirty years.

"After continuing in business, under the firm name of Copeland & Kidder, several years with success, I found my health was much impaired, and having always had a strong love for history, I concluded to leave business for awhile and gratify this taste, which I could well afford to do, by leisurely traveling over the country, finding rest, and so improving my health. I had conceived the idea of collecting the materials and publishing a history of my native town, as I had many facts, and as my family had from its first settlement been prominent in its history. I took hold of it earnestly, and after two years labor published it in the fall of 1852. This introduced me to many persons interested in historical pursuits, and was the beginning of my literary career, which has brought my name before the public as a historian. In 1854 I was induced to remove to New York, and enter into business there with Mr. James R. Gilmore, well known as an author under the pseudonym of 'Edmund Kirke,' where I remained two and one half years. My health was quite poor most of the time, the business proved arduous beyond my strength, and I was glad to leave it with a loss and return again to Boston, where I rejoined my old partner Copeland in the same business, mainly with the South.

"Restoration in business is hardly ever successful, and we were both too old to compete with younger men. The crisis of 1857 was very hard on us, and we had hardly recovered from this when the troubles of the war came on in the spring of 1861. As our property was much in the South, we found ourselves much involved. We soon dissolved our firm, and I settled up this concern. The four years of war were very severe upon me; my business being broken up, and my brother, with whom I had always been so connected, was gone, being almost ostracised as a Union man at the South. I was thus left to get along as I could, and felt a loneliness I never experienced before. Just before the war, we had taken up our abode for the summer only (as we expected), at the Sturtevant House, East Boston; but as we found it a very comfortable place, well suited to my income, we continued there six years. Here we enjoyed the society much of the time of old friends, while living very quietly among all the continued excitement of the war. Here I was chosen on the school board, where I served for three years.

"As my business was broken up by the war, I spent much of my time in the study of history, and prepared two books, entitled 'The Adventures of Capt. Lovewell,' and 'Eastern Maine and Nova Scotia in the Revolution'; both of which were published, and gave me a reputation as a historian. At last the war ended, and I met my brother whom I had not seen for more than four years. I soon resumed my business in cotton and naval stores, and through my brother and some old friends had a very successful trade for about two years, when fearing the revulsion which soon after came, I closed up my affairs, and feeling the need of a home in the country, both for the health of my wife and myself, we purchased a French roofed cottage in Melrose, and in April, 1869, removed there. Here we hoped to spend our remaining days in quiet and in comfort. But our hopes were soon disappointed, for soon after this I was suddenly taken insensible in the street in Boston, and fell face downward on the pavement. This shock was so severe that I never overcame it till the following winter, and until my dear wife was taken ill with a disease that ended her life six years afterwards.

“Although I came to Melrose with a desire to be silent as to public affairs, I was in 1870 made chairman of a committee to erect a Unitarian church, and as it involved to some extent the raising of funds from outside, it involved considerable labor ; but it was a success.

“Another enterprise which has become of great value to the town, was taking the initiative in forming a public library and acting as chairman of the board of trustees for more than six years, being annually reëlected. I have for more than twenty-five years been a member, and almost all that time an officer of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and in this connection it may be proper to speak of my literary labors, which I have penned from an inherent love of history. I have written and edited six volumes which, with the communications made to magazines and newspapers, makes a large amount, all of which has been with an earnest desire to give to the world the benefit of my laborious researches in the truths and value of our country’s history, and do something by which I could be of use and so build a lasting monument to my memory, when I have passed to ‘that bourne from whence no traveller returns.’”

[After writing about the long sickness of his wife, who died on the morning of Dec. 22, 1875, and was buried at Mount Auburn, he concludes as follows :]

“After her death, I found refuge and quiet in the kind home of my brother at the South, from where, when the genial season came, I returned to my lonely home, where in restored health I still continue (1876). . . . I could add much more of my varied life of trials by sickness and vicissitudes, begun in orphanage and carried on amid many scenes of hopes, escapes and failures; but through all I can say, I have never to my knowledge done a wrong or neglected a duty, and if at the great day of trial it shall be found that my good shall overbalance the evil, I shall not have lived in vain."

60. EDWARD KIDDER, son of Isaiah and Hepsey (p. 45), was b. in New Ipswich, N. H., Oct. 19, 1805; d. at Wilmington, N. C., Feb. 25, 1885.

"He went to Wilmington, N. C., when quite a young man. Soon after he went into the lumbering business with Capt. Potter, a native of New London, Conn., and for many years they did a large business under the firm name of Potter & Kidder. He was afterwards associated in business with Silas N. Martin, formerly of Castine, Me., as the firm of Kidder & Martin; on the dissolution of that firm he continued the same business with his sons, under the firm name of Edward Kidder & Sons, and was the senior member of the firm at the time of his death. He had probably been one of the largest manufacturers and dealers in yellow pine lumber in the South. He was one of the most honorable, high minded and popular men in his business, and was well known and highly esteemed throughout the country.

"Mr. Kidder will long be remembered by his many friends, North and South, for his many manly virtues and high-toned integrity."—Published in a newspaper at the time of his death.

He was much interested in historical works, and was twice honorary vice president for North Carolina of the New England Historic Genealogical Society. He m. Aug. 11, 1836, Ann Potter, dau. of Capt. Potter, who was for a time his partner in business. She d. at Wilmington, Feb. 24, 1872.

He lived all his life on his father's farm, which he and his brother Benjamin inherited from their father. He was an ordinary Vermont farmer, brought up in the manner of that time and place, and with such education as was afforded by the district school. He was tall and slim, and had quite a habit of shrugging his shoulders. In 1843 he became insane, probably over the "advent doctrine," which awakened a great deal of interest at that time, and was put in an asylum for five years. He afterwards recovered sufficiently to leave the asylum, but not so as to transact business. He died at his home, September, 1862, of a fever, and was buried in the graveyard at West Fairlee. After the death of his wife his body was reinterred at West Topsham, Vt., beside her remains. 165. BRADLEY PAGE KIDDER, son of Andrew and Hannah (p. 92), was b. in West Fairlee, Vt., May 10, 1836. He was named after Emma Page, an adopted daughter of his mother. He lived at home with his parents until he was 16 years old, attending the district school in the winter, and working on the farm in the summer. At sixteen he went to Bradford, Vt., and entered the employ of Mr. Pritchard, merchant and farmer. Here he worked eighteen months. He then went to White River Junction. In 1855, he went to work for his brother-in-law, Edmund Smith, at West Topsham, working at the carpenters' trade. From West Topsham he went to Manchester, N. H., where he worked a while at the carpenters' and painters' trades, and then went into the ice business. In this business he was unfortunate at first, but finally made up his losses, and did fairly well. While living in Manchester he boarded with Mrs. Nancy Additon, a widow. Here he became acquainted with her daughter, Victoria Isabel, whom he married July 4, 1858. The following fall he sold out his interest in the ice business, and removed to Bangor, Me., where he obtained work as a carpenter on a tannery then in process of erection, and, when the building was completed, went to work in the tannery at one dollar per day. It was at this time that his first child was born. He worked in the tannery for about four years, when he went to work for one James Smith, butcher, at a salary of $50 a month. Although receiving but a small salary, yet, with the help of his wife, he managed to save sufficient money to enable him to go into the market business, and Jan. 1st, 1866, he opened a meat and provision market under Morombega Hall, in partnership with Mr. M. G. Rice, who had previously been one of his fellow-workmen. The new firm prospered, and from time to time invested their spare capital in farming land, in the suburbs of the city, owning at the time they dissolved over one hundred acres of some of the best farming land within the limits of the city. This land was managed by Mr. Kidder.

August 11, 1881, after having been associated in business for nearly sixteen years, the firm dissolved partnership, Mr. Kidder retiring from business, and Mr. Rice, in company with a Mr. Russell, continuing the business. Being of a very active temperament, Mr. Kidder soon became impatient of so quiet a life, and the following October purchased the Carr. Market on Exchange St., and opened a meat and fish market in his own name. He soon afterwards found it necessary to take a partner, and the business is now carried on under the name of B. P. Kidder & Co. They do, probably, the largest provision business in Bangor, besides doing a large fish business. During the last illness of President Grant the firm sent him a fine specimen of the Penobscot River salmon, the receipt of which was acknowledged by Col. Fred Grant, for his father. Mr. Kidder has always been a staunch republican, and a firm believer in the principles of that party. He and his wife united with the Methodist Church in Bangor, in 1870, and he has since been one of its most prominent members, holding offices in the Church and Sunday School. He and his wife are also members of the Queen City Lodge of United Fellowship, of which he was at one time director. Although he has never held any public office, he is widely known in Bangor and the vicinity, and is respected by all.

His wife, Victoria Isabel Kidder, dau. of Eleazer Keene and Nancy (Bracket) Additon, was b. May 7, 1841, in Hermon, Me. She is a woman of much force of character, and possessed of a good education. She is one of the prominent ladies in the church to which she and her husband belong, and is loved and respected by all, having held various offices in the Ladies' Societies connected with the church. Her children revere her as a loving and wise mother.

[Eleazer Keene Additon and Nancy Bracket were m. in Hermon, Me., Sept. 2, 1838. She was b. in Wolfboro', N. H., May 17, 1817, d. in Bangor, May 1, 1879. He was b. in Dexter, Me., Nov. 9, 1815. He acquired the carpenters' trade, and became a master builder and skilled mechanic. He was a fine penman, and quite skilful in draughting plans of houses, etc. He and his wife lived in a small house on the top of "Hermon Hill," about four and one half miles from Bangor Post Office, and here their children were born. He had the plans drawn and arrangements made for building a larger and much better house, but while at work on a building in Brookline, Mass., he was taken sick with typhoid fever, and died at Andover, Mass., Sept. 12, 1850. He was a graduate of Foxcroft Academy, and one of the best educated men in the town of Hermon; was school supervisor for many years, and held several other town offices. His autograph is given.

His father, Eleazer Otis Additon, was b. in Medway, Mass., April 14, 1790. He went to Dexter, Me., with his parents, when 9 years of age, where he married Nancy Keene, of Dexter. He had three sons and three daughters. Of the sons, Thomas and Philip reside in Dexter, the latter still owning part of the old homestead. Eleazer Otis Additon was a farmer. He was well educated, for his time, and was a local preacher of the Methodist church. He died of typhoid fever, æt. 35 yrs. 10 mos.]

184. ANDREW JACKSON KIDDER, son of Thomas and Ruth (p. 125), was b. in Sunapee, N. H., Jan. 13, 1829. Resides in New London, N. H. He lived with his father on the home farm until he was 20 years of age, excepting while attending the Newport High School, and teaching several district schools. When 20 years old he started out to make his fortune, and worked three years for Pickering & Holden, of Salem, Mass., in the milk business. At the end of that time he returned to Sunapee, and with money that he had obtained from the increase of a sheep given him by his father when 13 years old, and what he had been able to save by great industry and economy, he purchased some mills and engaged in lumbering. At the close of the rebellion he sold out and went to Norfolk, Va., where he ran two steam saw-mills, and built many houses. Here he remained four years, when he closed up his business and returned to New Hampshire, near his old home. About the year 1875, he purchased mills and timber land, amounting to one thousand acres, all in one body, in Springfield, N. H., and at this place he still continues his business, although residing in New London, five miles distant. When about 20 years old he joined the New London Baptist Church, of which he is now a prominent and active member, and since 1875 superintendent of the Sabbath School. His wife and six of his children are also members of the Church, his son, Willie, being received into the Church at the age of 7 years. He has been Justice of the Peace, and on the School Committee, in both Springfield and New London. He m. 189. FRANK EUGENE KIDDER, son of Bradley and Victoria (p. 141), publisher of this book, was b. in Bangor, Me., Nov. 3, 1859, and is therefore at the time of the publication of this volume in his twenty-seventh year. He attended the public schools of Bangor until he was fifteen, completing his first year in the high school. He then entered the Maine State College, at Orono, where he graduated June, 1879, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Civil Engineering, and three years later the full degree of Civil Engineer. In a class of twenty-one he ranked sixth in scholarship for the course. He was chosen by the class to deliver the class history on Class Day, and since graduation has been corresponding secretary of his class. During vacation, in the winter of 1876, he taught the winter term of school in one of the suburban districts of Bangor, and the next winter he taught at Riverside, Me., six miles from Augusta.

The fall and winter of 1878 he attended the Cornell University, taking the studies of the Junior year in the course in Architecture. After graduating from Orono, he remained one term as instructor in drawing and field engineering, and the next winter entered the office of Ware & Van Brunt, architects, Boston.

In the fall of 1880 he entered the Institute of Technology, taking a special course in architecture, for one year. Since then he has devoted himself to architecture and building. April 1, 1886, he associated himself in business with Mr. Edgar C. Curtis, architect, of Boston, under the firm name of Curtis & Kidder, architects, 54 Devonshire St. The two years following his attendance at the Institute of Technology, Mr. Kidder was employed to deliver a course of two lectures a week to the students of architecture.

At the age of seventeen, he commenced writing for the press, and wrote articles on the following subjects, published in different weekly papers in Maine: "The importance of Agricultural Colleges," "Education demanded at the Present Day," "Benefits of Inventions to our Farmers," "Relics of Pre-Historic men in America," "Book-keeping for Farmers,"

"Rural Architecture," "A Visit to Pompeii on the Day of its Destruction," and "The Six Servants," translated from the German, besides several other short pieces. The last two pieces were published in the Portland Transcript.

During his Junior year at college, he was chief editor of the college paper. Since graduating from college, Mr. Kidder has made a special study of building construction, heating and ventilation, etc., and has written articles bearing on these subjects which have appeared in different technical journals of this country. Among the most important of these articles, are: Strength of Columns, American Architect, Dec. 13, 1879.* Experiments on the Transverse Strength of Southern and White Pine, Van Nostrand's Engineering Magazine, February, 1880. The Mechanics of Architecture, eleven papers, Builder and Wood-Worker, July, 1880, to June, 1881. Strength of Floors, two papers, American Architect, Jan. 1, and April 2, 1881. Strength of Beams, American Architect, April 24, 1881. Continuous Girders, Van Nostrand's Eng. Magazine, June, 1881. Experiments on the Strength and Stiffness of Small Spruce Beams, Proceedings American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Vol. XVI. p. 285-291; Journal Franklin Institute, Vol. LXXXI. p. 262-270; American Architect, June 4, 1881; Scientific American, July 2, 1881; Beiblätter, Wied. Ann. (Germany), No. 9, 1881. Tests of Fire Proof Materials, American Architect, Dec. 3, 1881. Stability of Structures, nine papers, Builder and Wood-Worker, 1881-1882. Continuous Girders, American Architect, Dec. 10, 1881. Roof Trusses, six papers, Builder and Wood-Worker, 1883. Notes on Radiators, etc., for steam heating, two papers, American Architect, June 5, 1886. Notes on School House Design, Heating and Ventilation, five papers, Builder and Wood-Worker, 1886. Notes on Fire Proof Construction, three papers, Building, 1886.

His greatest literary work was the preparation of the Architect's and Builder's Pocket Book, containing Rules, Tables and Formulas relating to the Strength and Stability of Building Construction, and a great amount of technical information useful to architects and builders. Morocco flaps, 630 pages, 423 engravings. Price, $3.50. John Wiley & Sons, publishers, 15 Astor Place, New York. The first edition appeared Jan. 1, 1885, and in April, 1886, the third edition was placed on the market. The comments of the press and of individual architects on the book have been most flattering. His autograph is here reproduced.

A HAPPY OCCASION.

At an early hour last evening, Miss Kate E. Newhall and Mr. Frank E. Kidder were united in the joyous bonds of wedlock, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Sarah R. Newhall, on Davis St., in this city. The ceremony was felicitously performed by Rev. E. R. Thorndike, of Lynn, Mass., an uncle of the bride, assisted by Rev. G. N. Eldridge, of this city. At 8 o'clock a highly enjoyable reception was held at the residence of the groom's father, B. P. Kidder, Esq., at 6 Hayward St. There was a very large attendance of friends, the couple received cordial congratulations, and the occasion was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The array of presents was very elaborate and valuable, and show the esteem in which they are held. Among the gifts received were checks from Mr. B. P. Kidder, amounting to $1,000. The bride is a young lady of most excellent qualities, and whose voice has frequently been heard in the choir of the Union St. Methodist Church. The groom is a young man universally esteemed by his wide circle of acquaintances, and is already attaining prominence in his chosen profession of architecture. He is now connected with Norcross Bros., the well known Boston builders, and also delivers lectures regularly at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Mr. and Mrs. Kidder leave to-day on the steamer Cambridge, and will take up their residence at a pleasant home in the vicinity of Boston. The best wishes of their many friends accompany them.

trade, and built several houses in Rockland and Thomaston, Me.. He m. in South Thomaston, Feb. 18, 1858, Sarah Roberts Thorndike, dau. of Ebenezer Thorndike, of Dixmont, Me., a descendant of John Thorndike, who came to New England in 1633, where he married and lived until 1668, when he returned to London, where he soon afterwards died, and was buried in Westminster Abbey Cloister. Sarah R. Thorndike was born in Dixmont, and now resides in Bangor, Me. After his marriage he bought out a store and its stock of general merchandise at "Stickney's Corner," afterwards called "Newhall's Corner," two miles from Washington Village. His business prospered, and he built a fine residence on the opposite corner. He was a fine tenor singer, leading the church choir for many years. He also participated in the World's Peace Jubilee, held in Boston. He held several town offices, being for many years school supervisor and town agent, and clerk; he also held the position of county commissioner for many years. He died in the prime of life, and in the midst of prosperity. His death occurred Sept. 28, 1875, caused by a malignant disease of the stomach. The following was published in a Rockland, Me., paper at the time: "Mr. Newhall was a man of energy and good business capacity, and possessed of the confidence and respect of all his fellow citizens. His own townsmen loved to honor him, and his counsel in town affairs will be very much missed. All feel that a good man has fallen, and greatly regret his death. But how much greater is the loss to his bereaved wife and children than to the public. May the Saviour sustain and comfort them." His autograph is here reproduced.]
