KNIGHT ASSOCIATION

At the regular meeting of the Knight Association, held May 30, 1893, at Elliott Moore's, Worcester, it was voted that this association appoint a Historian to hold the office for five years, said Historian to gather what can be found of the previous history of the family and a book of records be furnished to insert the same.

John Flavel Knight was chosen Historian.

In accordance with the above vote the following history was presented at the following meeting held at the Moore Homestead, with Frank Moore, May 30, 1894, in Holden.

HISTORY FROM 1773—1893.

"Inheritance and environment are not only realities, but are the most important elements of every life. The thought of yesterday fixes the tendency of today; the conditions of today are all the background against which every life is projected," says Tourgee, and as I was thinking over the family history of our branch of the Knights it seemed to me he had expressed in words the shadow which had followed me all the way.

Is it not a thought of gratitude that rises from every Christian heart in this association that we have so good an "Inheritance"? For, so far as I am able to learn, we have no occasion to blush over the names of our ancestors.

True, little is known of Edward Knight, son of Daniel and Jerusia Knight, except that he was married to Elizabeth Flagg, daughter of Josiah and Elizabeth Flagg, of Worcester, November 3rd, 1773. We may let our imagination take us to Burncoat Street, Worcester, on one of those November days, when summer retires as a nun and envelopes herself in a hazy veil to enhance her loveliness. Possibly we shall find the bride in the house now occupied by the late Ashley White. Her face is in sunshine and now in tears, for who could think of a bride leaving her girlhood home without tears. We wonder whether she wore the elegant brocade silk, of that day, or the simple white that is always beautiful for the bride. Possibly we see Edward starting from his father's in the "One horse shay," for, if the distance is short, the bride must not soil those dainty, immensely high heeled shoes, by walking.

We can hear the sly hits from the boys, and warm welcome from the older friends as he reaches neighbor Flagg's, to take his daughter. Possibly she is the first born, for she bears the name of her mother. The ripple caused by his arrival subsides and listening guests catch a glimpse of the beautiful bride and the stately bridegroom. He then enters into the presence of the minister, perhaps of their childhood, with almost the reverence of the High Priest of old when he entered into the "Holy of Holies." The clergyman of the day was held in reverence by all, and almost in fear by the young.

Then we hear the solemn marriage service. Oh, so solemn and so momentous, when we consider that it cannot be broken, "Till death do us part." The hearty congratulations and still more hearty kiss on the cheek of the bride soon dispels all serious thought.

Soon follows the ample wedding feast of the last century. Soon they are ready to leave the old home. Can you see the old shoes and other symbols of "Good luck" that follow them as they start for the new home? The new home was the farm now owned by Charles Whitcomb, and formerly known as the John F. Clark farm, on Burncoat Street, Worcester. The old house is still standing and in good condition.

On April 6, 1775, the glad song could be sung, "Unto us a child is born." They named him Josiah. February 1, 1777, another son came and his name was Abel. But to us assembled here, the eventful birth in that family was on June 12, 1780, when a son was born whose name was Elijah; meaning "Jehovah is my God." Do you suppose they had a thought of the significance of that name? I wonder if the name has proved an "important element" to this family? Of all the descendants of Elijah Knight a majority, and I think I am safe in saying a large majority, will with reverence, but in a strong, true voice say, "Jehovah is my God."

But April 7, 1782, Edward and Elizabeth clasped their first born daughter in their arms and called her Polly. We find she was their only daughter, for the records tell us that Jan. 22, 1786, Jonathan was born, and on Dec. 20, 1790, came John Heath Knight. Thus giving them in seventeen years, five boys and one girl.

Thus far our record is of a happy and prosperous family. But the little John was only lent them for a short time, as we find it recorded that John Heath Knight died Dec. 5, 1791. In a little more than two years, the mother followed her baby boy, in the winter month of February 3rd, 1794. Our bride after twenty-one years has passed on to a brighter and happier home, leaving a sorrowing husband and five little children.

In two years, February 18, 1796, the lonely husband finds Mrs. Sarah Jenkins, one whom he thinks suited to help him on the road of life and supply a mother's place to his children. To them was born a son Aug. 8th, 1797, and they called him John Heath Knight.

For twenty-two years from this last date we have no record. So we picture a typical New England farmer with his farm of many acres making abundant living with the help of his five boys, in the little town of Worcester. At the end of that period we must say, as did the historian of old, "And Edward Knight begat six sons and one daughter and he died." The date of his death was September 15, 1817.

We may take a little interest in knowing some of Edward Knight's neighbors. We find one, on the northeast was Phineus Heywood. His estate has remained in the Heywood family until a few years since, and still is known as the "Heywood Farm."

Another was Timothy Knight, who owned land west of Edward, in 1757. So we fancy that Daniel Knight had a brother settle near him. Possibly it may be the farm now owned by Mr. Henry Pratt, for where his mansion now stands there used to be a house owned and occupied by family relatives, by the name of Knight, till within thirty years. Then we find two by the name of Howe, Ezekial and James. One of these farms commands the special interest of this association, namely.—that of James Howe.

With your permission I will turn back to 1649, when about thirty of the inhabitants of the town of Dedham signed an agreement to go to what is now the town of Medfield and form a settlement. Among the thirty was Alexander Lovell. On the 30th of October, 1658, Alexander Lovell was married, by Major Atherton, to Lydia Albee, daughter of Benjamin Albee. He died Dec. 20th, 1709. His children were:—

Alexander Lovell, born Feb. 12, 1660, died aged 13 months.

Lydia, born Apr. 27, 1662, died young.

Sarah, born June 3, 1667, aged one week.

Nathaniel, born Feb. 18, 1669, died young.

Alexander Lovell, born Mar. 2, 1671,

Nathaniel, born Oct. 16, 1672.

Deborah, born Dec. 20, 1675.

Alexander Lovell, who was born March 2nd, 1671, married Elizabeth, I do not know her last name, neither do I know the date of his death. Elizabeth, his wife, died Oct. 11, 1747. Their children were:—

Mary Lovell, born Jan. 26, 1704.

Mahitable, born Mar. 23, 1706.

Joseph, born July 26, 1708.

Rachel, born July 17, 1710.

David, born July 14, 1712.

Jonathan, born Sept. 16, 1714.

John, born April 27, 1720, died aged 17 days.

Jonathan Lovell, who was born Sept. 16, 1714, was married by Rev. Joseph Baxter, to Mary Cheney, of Medfield, Nov. 24, 1738. About 1739 he came and settled on Malden Hill, then in Worcester, afterwards in Holden; but now in West Boylston. His wife, Mary, died July 12, 1755, 43 years old. On the 18th of May, 1756, he married Mrs. Rachel Howe, widow of James

Howe, of Worcester. At the first town meeting held in Holden, on the 4th of May, 1741, Jonathan Lovell was chosen constable. He was selectman of the town, in 1747, '52, '59 and '60. Assessor in 1747 and 1752. Town treasurer in 1759. He died Dec. 22nd, 1792, in the 79th year of his age. He is buried in the burial grounds of Holden, his tombstone bearing the following epitaph:—

“Our age to seventy years is set
How short the time, how frail the state,
Yet if a little longer time we live
In pain and trouble we servive”.

On the 17th of May, 1757, Jonathan Lovell, of Holden, in the county of Worcester, Yeoman, and Rachel Lovell, wife of said Jonathan, formerly Rachel Howe, of Worcester, in the county of Worcester, widow and relict of James Howe, late of Worcester, Gentleman, deceased, as administratrix of his estate, this Rachel being empowered by the Great and Central Court of the Provinces, made sale of the real estate of the deceased at public sale for the most the same would bring. His estate was bounded as follows:—A certain tract of land situated in Worcester, containing about one hundred and twenty acres, bounded southerly and easterly on land of Phineus Heywood; westerly on land of Edward Knight, and partly on land of Timothy Knight; northerly on land of Ezekial Howe, and partly on land of Capt. Thomas Stearns and Duncan Campbell, called Malden Farm, and partly easterly on said Malden Farm. The Rutland road running through the same is excepted. This land with the buildings thereon was struck off to Isaac Miller, of Shrewsbury, for 277 pounds English money. On the same day a deed conveying the above named property was given by said Isaac Miller to said Jonathan Lovell, of Holden, for 277 pounds. On the 20th of May, 1772, Jonathan Lovell, of Holden, conveyed to his son Jonathan Lovell, of Worcester, the above named property for and in consideration of 346 pounds English money. This was however a deed of gift excepting 106 pounds and 63 shillings.

His wife Rachel died, November 8, 1781, in the 61st year of her age. The epitaph on her tomb is as follows:—

My days have swiftly passed away
 And now I'm with my native clay
 Thus my forefathers left the stage.
 And so must you of every age.

The children of Jonathan Lovell by his first wife were:—

Jonathan Lovell, born Aug. 24, 1739, died young.
 Mary, born Aug. 6, 1740.
 Kesia, born Jan. 13, 1742.
 Jonathan, born Dec. 15, 1745.
 Eunice, born Aug. 2, 1747.
 Olive, born Dec. 10, 1749.
 Asa, born Sept. 10, 1751.
 Amos, born July 13, 1753.

The children of Jonathan Lovell by his second wife were:—

Lydia Lovell, born March 30, 1757.
 Nathan, born April 22, 1761.
 Samuel, born Oct. 1, 1762.

Jonathan Lovell who was born Dec. 15, 1745, married Mercy Raymond. He died in 1819. Their children were:—

Jonathan Lovell, born Oct. 1, 1769.
 Betty, born Sept. 26, 1772.
 Mary, born March 13, 1774.
Eunice, born Aug. 11, 1780.
 Olive, born July 6, 1782.
 Joseph, born July 29, 1784.
 David, born Nov. 20, 1786.
 Cyrus, born Nov. 2, 1790.

This farm bought for 277 pounds by Jonathan Lovell and conveyed to his son, Jonathan Lovell, on May 20, 1772, is the Cyrus Lovell farm situated on Mountain Street, Worcester.
 Here it was that Eunice Lovell was born, Aug. 11, 1780, and spent her girlhood.

Would that I could lay aside my pen and we could listen to Grandmother Eunice as she would tell us of the long walks, she with her brothers and sisters used to take to the schoolhouse on Burncoat Street or as it used to be called, "The Pints Schoolhouse."

How busy Mother Mary must have been those long summer mornings getting the children ready for school. In the early morning she used to help about the milking, set the milk for cheese, skim the milk for butter, and get the breakfast. Then the girls' work must be ready for the bags, as every little girl either did patchwork or made a sampler, and the dinner of brown bread and butter with doughnuts was put up for them all. The girls' dresses, aprons, and in fact all their garments as well as those of the boys, were woven on the loom in one of the front rooms. Not only woven, but most likely cut and made by the busy mother. She must sometimes have breathed a sigh of relief when she saw them all start up the hill. But she could not stop long for the lunch must be ready for the men and the dinner ready at 12 o'clock, or rather when the noon line came. After dinner the flax must be spun, or a piece put into the loom, or one finished. We can see the father in the winter carrying his children on the ox sled, through the drifts up the hill to the schoolhouse. The girls with home made flannel blankets pinned over their heads, and their long linsey woolsy dresses and cloaks made from the wool grown on the sheep grown on the farm. How we should like a photograph of that schoolroom in our album. Its large fireplace in one corner. The teacher's high desk in another and the long wooden benches for the scholars ranged around the sides and in the center of the room. What fun they used to have sliding and snowballing at recess and noons. In schooltime I fear they would steal a little fun, as the children of the present day are sometimes guilty of doing. Edward Knight's children went to the same school. After a while the scholars began to notice that Elijah, the tall, fair-skinned, blue-eyed, quiet boy, began to watch black-eyed Eunice Lovell. As time passes on his mother notices that he often goes to Jonathan Lovell's for an evening, and finally she decides that it is Eunice that calls him, rather than the Lovell boys. I know another mother who has watched her son as he went down the hills to gain the affections of a neighbor's daughter, following him with prayers for a happy future. There will be other mothers, who will do the same. The same old, old story, that is ever new, is repeated every day, year after year to the end of time.

Again we hear the wedding bells. This time we will find a few friends and relatives assembled at Jonathan Lovell's, in the east front room, ready for the bride. All sweet and clean was the room, but guiltless of paint or plaster. Little Cyrus was glad, for in his shyness he would not go into the room, but peeked through the laths to see his sister married.

How forgetful Elijah and Eunice were of the "May meeting of ministers, in Boston," when they fixed upon May 31st for their wedding day. It caused them some anxiety, for if Dr. Austin has gone to Boston what will they do? Much to Dr. Austin's disappointment circumstances prevented his going. Our young people were greatly relieved when they found he was in town, and at the appointed hour the ceremony was performed, the minister standing in Worcester, while the bride and groom stood in Boylston. The house was built on the line dividing Worcester and Boylston, now West Boylston. Today it is the same, and Mr. Cyrus Lovell, Jr., pays Worcester taxes for his house, and his barn, cattle, and etc. are taxed in West Boylston. The rooms are situated so you wash your hands in one town and dry them in another. Sleep with your head in one town and your feet in the adjoining town.

November 3, 1773, Edward Knight carries his bride, Elizabeth Flagg, to his father's house. May 31, 1804, Edward's son Elijah brings to the same home Eunice Lovell as his bride. To Elijah and Eunice came a son, March 2, 1805. From 1805 to 1811 we have no reliable record of this family's home. We know that during that time they moved to Adams Square and that in company with his brother Jonathan, grandfather had a store. Where they lived when Olive was born, February 17th, 1807, and Cyrus Lovell, January 24, 1809, we cannot learn. This we know, Amos Flagg was born at the old home on Burncoat Street, Worcester, on July 8, 1811. After his birth they again left the homestead and lived in several different places. Eliza was born December 21, 1813, in West Boylston, we think in the neighborhood of the present Knight homestead.

In the possession of your scribe is a deed of Hollis Pierce to Elijah Knight, recorded March 27, 1816, conveying to him twenty-one acres of land, with buildings thereon, and some outstanding lots. This twenty-one acres, with the buildings was the first real home of our branch of the Knights. With what feeling of content and happiness did grandfather move into his very own home with his wife and five children. Two rooms only were finished, the ones now used as the sitting room and the dining room, then the kitchen, which includes the south entry. The barn was a small one standing on the opposite side of the road from what it now does.

On October 29, 1816, was born, the first child in the new home. Emily she was named. January 1, 1820, Jonathan Lovell. April 12, 1822, another daughter came—we call her “Aunt Hattie.” Eunice Knight was born August 8, 1824, and last but not least was Mary Lovell born on November 1, 1826.

How little we realize the joys of a family as above recorded. Our grandparents had their trials and sorrows as well as we. I well remember grandmother once telling me of her Cyrus. “As bright and smart a little boy as yours, Lydia, and learned to talk younger than the other children.” This dear child, when about two years old had a severe sickness, which left him so that he never heard his mother’s voice again. The power of speech remained for a time, but it was of little use. All was done for him that could be. He was sent to the Hartford school for Mutes, and took the four years’ course, learning what was then called the “cabinet maker’s” trade and excelled in that work.

Little Lovell was a bright, merry child, but was spared them a little more than three years. His sickness was short and severe. In my possession is a box, made from a cow’s horn, containing a few coins that were his treasures and were kept by his mother as long as she lived. Jonathan Lovell Knight died February 16, 1823. This was the only child that our grandparents were called to part with.

The next marked event was the marriage of their oldest daughter, Olive, to Silas Whitney, of Ashburnham. Within a year a daughter came and she was the first to say "grandpa" and "grandma." March 14, 1828, a son was born. Hannah Cuishon Jones and Jonathan Lovell were all the children born to Olive and Silas Whitney. Aunt Olive is still with us in her 88th year. Labor and trials have fallen to her lot as to none of the others, and we sometimes wonder how she has lived through it all. But we trust that heaven seems all the brighter to her in contrast with her shadowed life.

In 1833, Oct. 3rd, another girl left this home. This was Eliza, who married Newell Moore, of Holden. To them were born sons and daughters until they numbered ten. The youngest was spared to them only two months. Their great sorrow came to them in the sudden death of their fourth child, Harlan Page. Many fond hopes were clustered around him, for in his youth he had given himself to God. He was fitting himself for the ministry at Amherst College when the call came for men to save their country, and he responded by enlisting in the 36th Massachusetts Volunteers. Because of ill-health he was taken from the ranks and sent to Camp Nelson, in Kentucky, where he died February 29, 1864.

Franklin and Edward had left their childhood home and established homes of their own before their father, Newell Moore, died August 22, 1866. His widow, Eliza Knight Moore, lived to see four of her children married. The last of her life was spent in Holden centre, where she built a house and made a home for herself, Jonathan and Lilly. On April 29, 1878, she so quietly passed away that we felt that God truly took her. No one knew when she passed the bounds of earth and entered heaven.

Amos Knight took to himself a wife on March 12, 1833. Wisely he chose, for she was a faithful wife and helpmate to him for more than fifty years. He brought his wife, Persis Fay, to the homestead, he going in company with his father on the farm. To them was born John Flavel, December 17, 1835, and Emerson Paine, August 22, 1837. At the homestead Amos Knight has always lived, with the exception of a few years when he lived in West Boylston centre.

August 1, 1843, after a short sickness, Elijah Knight, the father of his family, died, leaving a wife and nine children to mourn his loss. He had lived to see six of his children established in homes of their own, and had fifteen grandchildren. He was a quiet man, one of few words; but of a good mind. Fond of his children, he was ever at their service, and his grandchildren were a pride and joy to him. A goodly heritage he has left to us, his descendants, an honest man, a faithful husband, and a kind and indulgent father. Eunice, his wife, lived at the old farm for a few years. In the year 1837, the spirit of marriage seemed to enter this family.

We find that on February 27, 1837, Elijah, the eldest child, married Thankful Prouty, of West Boylston. To them were born seven children, three of whom are living. Elijah Knight died July 31, 1868, and his wife Thankful March 18, 1889.

Emily Knight was the next to marry, on March 9, 1837, to Emory Howard, of Holden. To them were born four children, two girls and two boys. They are living, except George, the oldest. Uncle Emory was spared to his family till March 17, 1893. For eighty-three years he had met the storms and enjoyed the sunshine of life. His last days were clouded by severe suffering. For 56 years he and Emily walked hand in hand, always noted for their warm welcome and hospitality to their friends.

Cyrus Knight was married November 2, 1837, to Lydia Ann Holt, of West Boylston. They had but two children, a daughter and a son. The daughter, Nancy Caroline, died in July of 1863. Uncle Cyrus brought his wife to the Homestead, but remained there but a short time. In the same neighborhood he bought a little farm, where he lived in sight of his boyhood home till January 11, 1891, when he died at the age of 82.

Three new homes were established, Elijah and Cyrus, in West Boylston, and Emily, in Holden. After a time, I do not know just what year, grandmother moved to a cottage back of the brick church, in West Boylston centre. But a tenement being vacant in Aunt Olive's house opposite the church, she moved there, and remained, making a home for her three youngest daughters till after the marriage of Mary Lovell

Knight to Alvin Putnam, June 22, 1848, and the establishment of Harriet Knight as assistant matron at the Orphan's Home, in Worcester. Then it seemed best that she should give up the care and labor of housekeeping. The home of 52 years was broken up about 1856. After that for nine years she made her home with her children. Many of us can remember with what joy we learned that grandma was coming to our homes. She was endowed with wonderful mental and physical powers, which she retained in a great measure to the end of her long life, making herself useful to the last. She died with her daughter Eliza in Holden, December 1, 1869, at the good old age of 85 years, 3 months and 19 days. She lies beside her husband and little Lovell in the cemetery on the old common, in West Boylston. There are small but nice tablets that mark their resting place.

When Mary Knight married Alvin Putnam she went to Holden. They remained there but a short time, moving to the Putnam Homestead in Sutton. This farm was taken up by a Putnam at the settlement of Sutton, and has remained in the family ever since, and with one exception the owner of the farm has borne the name of Putnam. To them, Mary and Alvin Putnam, were born ten children. Three died in infancy. After forty-three years of happy life together death separated this husband and wife. After a long time of feebleness Alvin Woodbury Putnam died April 15, 1891.

December 21, 1891, we were all shocked when we heard that Edgar Putnam was dead. He had ever been an active member of this association, and his pleasant smile and cordial welcome as we gathered from year to year, had endeared him to us all. We mourned him, but to his stricken wife and daughter and his widowed mother, we felt that only the Almighty arm could sustain them. Death separated father and son only eight months.

There remains one more of this family of nine, and that is Eunice. She had made her home with Mary after the breaking up of the old home. But there was one Sullivan Fuller, of Sutton, who saw in her one to help him in his declining years. They were married December 3, 1874. For 14 years they lived in their little quiet home in Sutton. On February 23, 1888, Mr. Fuller died at the age of 81. Aunt Eunice was an invalid at the time of his death, and survived him only a little over a year. She died December 6, 1889, aged 65.

We have seen eight of Elijah and Eunice Knight's children married, but where is the ninth, Harriet? Not married? You are mistaken. She wedded herself to the Orphan's Home, and its matron, in Worcester. For thirty years she soothed the sorrows, enjoyed the pleasures, and was anxious over the mistakes of the hundreds of children committed to that institution. One, William Dresser Clegg, she adopted and did all for him that a mother's heart could prompt. Her home now is at her birthplace, where she is a companion and comfort to her only living brother, and a mother to his children.

We have heard nothing from the homestead since grandmother left it. Amos remained on the farm, and with his wife and two sons walked quietly along with no great event occurring till in the summer of 1853, when he moved the old barn across the road to its present location. Before grandfather's death the present ell had been added to the house. From time to time, as needed, a covered shed has been added and the barn lengthened, till it is now one hundred feet long.

The next important event occurred May 3, 1859, when John brought Lydia Hastings, of Worcester, as his bride to the old home, she making the third bride brought to the homestead. To John and Lydia came a son, Alfred Hastings, May 22, 1860. In 1863, they moved to Northboro, where they remained till the fall of 1866, when they returned to the old home and are still there. July 18, 1871, a daughter, Dora Fay, was born to them. This making five children, three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren born at the homestead.

Emerson was married January 3, 1860, to Mary Caroline Brooks, of Worcester. To them were born Harry Brooks, who died when about three years old, and Frank Emerson and Mary Winslow. Emerson was in government service for a time in Kentucky in the Civil War, and was with Harlan Moore when he died. On August 22, 1867, Mary, his wife, died. Emerson afterward married Augusta Emerson, of Parsonfield, Maine, and had two children. Harry Joseph and Josephine Augusta. About ten years ago he moved to Lafayette, Indiana, where he still lives.

On March 3, 1887, the Portland express ran into the wagon of Amos Knight. For days we felt as if we should lose him, but with the constant care of his wife, children and friends he was able to leave his bed after lying there one hundred days. Today he is comfortable in the home of his childhood, patiently waiting for the call to that brighter home. Allow me to record here that when the Worcester and Nashua road was first opened Elijah Knight, brother of Amos, was hurt at this same place and lost an arm. These are the only accidents that have occurred at the Summit Station.

August 18, 1888, the first great sorrow came to this family. After months of weariness and suffering, the wife of Amos lay down her load of cares and rested. For 53 years she had lived as helpmate, and she well deserved that name. We missed her so much, and you that visit the homestead still miss her cordial greeting. She lies in the same cemetery with Elijah Knight, Sr., wife and little Lovell, and Elijah Knight, Jr.'s, wife and several children.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE MEETINGS OF THIS FAMILY

The first Old Election reunion was on the fiftieth anniversary of grandfather and grandmother's wedding. Grandmother then lived in West Boylston centre, and it occurred May 31, 1854.

The next was a surprise to Amos Knight and wife at the homestead, on May 27, 1868. A larger number of the family were present at that reunion than at any other. The sisters presented a beautiful Bible to their brother and his wife, with the request that so long as one of the Knight family remained on the place, the Bible should remain. Since then we have met seven times in Sutton, six in Holden, five in Worcester, and five in West Boylston.

Elliott Moore, in July of 1868, went to De Kalb County, Missouri, and took up land for himself and brother Edward, where, in October of the same year, Edward with his wife, Olive Newell, and two children moved. Others settled in this vicinity till there were people enough to form a township called Amity. In 1881 Martha Moore went to another part of the west to teach. After a few terms she went to Amity, and there seeing a good Field, she married. Martha Moore and James P. Field were married October 29, 1882. Mr. Field has been pastor of the Congregational church at Amity since its formation. A few years later Eliza Moore, with her husband, Thomas Holmes, and two children, also settled in Amity.

In 1879 a branch called the "Western Old Election Association" was formed. Since then they have regularly held meetings and exchanged annual reports with our secretaries.

May 31, 1884, we record on the eightieth wedding anniversary of Elijah and Eunice Lovell, as their descendants, ten children, five living; thirty-seven grandchildren, twenty-three living; eighty-six great-grandchildren, sixty-eight living; twenty-six great-great-grandchildren, twenty-two living. Making in all 159 descendants, with 118 living. A large majority have followed the example of Edward Knight, who hired a pew in the "Old South Church". We find this record: "In ye second section in ye long gallery rented sittings in the Old South Meeting House to Edward Knight in 1773."

In politics the family as a whole have been Whigs or Republicans, until of late a few have joined the Prohibitionists.

The Massachusetts Spy has been taken by father and son from the first number to the present day.

Some of our young people ask, "What is Old Election?" The election of state officers used to be held on the last Wednesday in May. It proved to be very inconvenient for the Great and Central Court to convene at that time, and the time was changed to Autumn. Our forefathers established it as a holiday, coming as it does just between planting and haying. In my own family I well remember the anxiety with which we children watched the weather, for we wanted a pleasant "Lection Day," for there were more of us at grandsire's than at Thanksgiving. The principle feature of grandma's dinner was a roast pig and 'lection cake. Our only uncle finally married and lived at grandpa's, and his wife used to roast the pig whole, and on the table, in some way, braced him up in a standing position with a lemon in his mouth. I wish you could see it with the same eyes of wonder and admiration that I did more than 40 years ago.

Thus we have given you a passing history of our branch of the Knight Family, as descended from Daniel Knight and Alexander Lovell.

Many little incidents of interest have been omitted, and much is left unwritten because time had hidden it. The record is lengthy, but we felt that a certain detail was necessary in order that the future generations should keep an interest in our family. Let us strive to maintain the honor and good name that has been handed down to us from our ancestors, till time shall cease and we enter the rest prepared for "Thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments."

I cannot remember the time when the lilacs were not in bloom on "Election Day," the last Wednesday in May. A bunch of "lalocks" and a "lection" bun used to make us happy in old times. But "lection" days are over, and we have no "festival of the lilacs," which used to come on the same day as our anniversary without our knowing it. Artillery election, with its languid pageantry and its sermon "obligato," is not to be counted.

Had Oliver Wendell Holmes been with us at the Moore homestead, in Holden, on May 30, 1894, he would hardly have said, "We have no festival of the lilacs." Seventy of the Knight family were there, and three guests, making seventy-three present. The secretary's report was read and accepted, followed by a report of the "Branch Association" in Missouri.

Sickness has prevented a further research of family records, and your historian asks to make any changes in the history as reported May 30, 1894, that would add to its interest or authenticity. During the last year Elwin Putnam and wife have celebrated their fifteenth wedding anniversary. Aunt Mary Putnam, with her daughter Emma and Annie Putnam, are at present visiting in Minnesota. There have been six additions to the family during the past year, three by birth and three by marriage.

Death has made sad inroads in our families, taking one in the prime of life, another just entering manhood, one the only child of a widowed mother, and a little babe. The number of direct descendants at this date is 162, living 117.

When the historian records the death of such a man as Edward Moore, he feels that he is making a record that not only a family may be proud to read in future years, but a record that others may see, and strive to faithfully do whatever comes to hand for the good of others, as did this man whom we all honor.

Settling, as a young man, in a new country, having strong moral principle as well as religious, he improved each opportunity for good to others as well as to himself. Endowed with a good, strong mind, as new people came to this settlement it is no wonder they sought his advice, until nearly all the community felt he was their personal friend. We once heard him say, "I could have made more money, only it seemed to me that schools and churches and doing what I could to lay a good foundation for the town would do me and my family more good than all the money that I could put at interest." So he spent, and was spent, for his family, for the community, and for his church, wearing himself out in the prime of life, leaving a noble record as an inheritance to his children.

This year we record the death of another strong character. Very different was Olive Knight Whitney from Edward Moore. God created them unlike, while surroundings and circumstances conspired to increase the difference. Married young, with unusually bright prospects for the future, she became the envy of the young people of the town, and left her father's home with a light, glad heart. In a few years, I might almost say months, she found she had placed her affections upon one who was unworthy of them. Proud and selfreliant, she began to fight the battle of life for herself and two children. She succeeded in not only supplying her family needs, but saved enough to buy them a little home. This home was burned. Nothing daunted her. At once she built a new house on the same spot. After the marriage of her daughter, Hannah, she disposed of her house and went to live with the daughter, in Worcester. In the prime of life, and after a long illness, the daughter passed away. In a few years after her only son was taken from her and his family in an instant, thus leaving her childless. Little by little her property wasted away, until at last friends furnished her a home in the "Home for Aged Women."

"Why do we mourn departing friends,
Or shake at death's alarms;
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends,
To call them to his arms."

were her last words. So at last free from all care and worry, we think of her today as at rest. When we remember all her disappointments, with her disposition, do we wonder she was sometimes unhappy and complaining. Who of us would do better, and were we as patient as we should have been with her?

This is the only death to record during the past year. The last reunion of this association was with Lovell Putnam, at Sterling, on May 30, 1895. Fifty-three present.

At the "Old Knight Homestead," the wedding bells rang out a merry peel which called together a few family friends on June 29, 1895. It had been 58 years since they last rang, but their music was just as joyous as when Emily Knight was the bride. Under the maples in front of the house the last child of the old home plighted herself away and left us, with good wishes, to make a home of her own.

Your secretary tells me that the apple blossoms declare that "Old Election" day is almost here, and that a bright little oriole stopped at her window long enough to tell her that she must get out the records of the Knight Association for the year ending May 26, 1897.

If so, your historian must record that the last meeting was at Sutton with Elwin Putnam. Forty-three present. During the last year there has been one event that should find a place in our history. On July 8, 1896, Amos Flagg, only living son of Elijah and Eunice Lovell Knight, celebrated his 85th birthday at the homestead, where he has lived since five years of age. The morning opened bright and pleasant, and before noon his sister, Emily Howard, from Millbury, and Mary Putnam, from Sutton, came to join Harriet, whose home is at the homestead, in hearty congratulations that his birthday should find him so comfortable and happy. A birthday cake made by the oldest sister, and an abundance of flowers from them both gave the home and table a festive appearance. His oldest grandson, Alfred Knight and wife, and his oldest granddaughter, Mary Knight, came to dine with him. In all there were assembled around the dinner table in grandmother's old kitchen seven of her descendants. The united ages of the brother and three sisters was 309 years. Severe sickness has since visited the homestead, so that again we mourn that you do not receive a welcome at the old homestead, the Mecca of the Knight Association.

On May 26, 1897, the annual meeting of the Knight Association was for the first time with Lily Moore Perry and husband, at Shrewsbury. Seventy-five present. Voted to accept the gift of deeds from J. F. Knight, (1) that of Hollis Pierce to Elijah Knight, of the farm now known as the Knight Homestead; (2) deed of First Congregational Church and Parish, in West Boylston, to Elijah Knight, of a pew in said church. Voted to procure photographs of the Old Brick Church.

This year of 1897-98 has brought its joys and sorrows as usual, and perhaps more sickness and change than usual. You will find in the book of records for the last year three marriages and three births. We are thankful to say there is no record of death.

The changes have been largely at the Knight Homestead, Aunt Harriet Knight was the first to start the wheel, by accepting a better home than any of us could give her, in Worcester Home for Aged Women.

The next change was when the Homestead was sold in February. That was followed by the removal of the family to Shrewsbury Center. Sentiment cried over this change. This had been the birthplace and home of many of the family, till they left it to make other homes. The place where brides had been brought in the bloom of womanhood, and where dear ones had been carried out and laid in "God's Acre." Still sometimes we have to put sentiment aside and let somber fact take the front. That is what they did, and all are happy in their new home. There is more to interest Father Amos, and he is often heard telling friends that he is happy in his new home.

Again Dame Nature's festive garb of merry May marks the flight of one, and opening of another year to the Knight Association. A warbling songbird calls us out into the glorious sunshine: we wander 'neath the trees shrouded in their bright foliage and bursting into bloom. We press the soft carpet of earth with gentle tread, while the murmuring breezes recall to our minds thoughts of past years and of that which has just joined itself to those of long ago. As we pass through the garden, we stop to gather a few blossoms of the lily of the valley. What is it their sweetness calls to our minds? Ah! listen. Can we not hear their tiny bells ringing sweetly the wedding chime? 'Twas at our last gathering at the Putnam Homestead in Sutton, that Mabel Putnam held a bunch of these pure blossoms as she was united in marriage to Harvey Davidson. Could we but catch that shining sunbeam as it sheds its cheering ray from God's golden arch into this shady nook, how beautiful it would be! But see, here is a beam of sunshine which God has sent us, little Evelyn Mabel, who has come to brighten the home of her parents, Fred and Minnie Walker.

Yes, and there is another Evelyn among the little ones who have joined our ranks during the past year. Grace Evelyn, the joint property of Fred and Bertha Moore. Just see what a shower of tiny white petals there is under this bush: Does it remind you of the night Harris Moore and Flora Bennett were married? They chose the wintry month of December, probably that the rice might be hidden in the snow, but the scheme didn't work. Even if there was a little snow, concretes were well cleared and received what rice the happy pair did not. And yet another wedding. In April, Emma Putnam was married to Dr. Harry C. Martin, thus leaving Aunt Mary with all her sons and her only daughter married. Yet, but have you heard that she is now great-grandmother? Mabel and Harvey Davidson have a son.

And yet another boy has recently made his appearance.

His name is Howard Earl and he belongs to Addie and Ensign Weatherwax.

Here we find the earth shrouded in the pure white mantle of the apple petals. Pure and white they lie upon the velvety couch of living green. Thus upon our hearts we retain the memory of the two who have passed away in the past year. Uncle Amos and Aunt Hattie Knight. Their noble lives, like those pure petals, have fallen from the tree. Their work is over; their memory alone remains, and memory as sweet as the fragrant apple blossoms. Sweet apple blossoms shake down your tinted petals until your snowy whiteness shall cover the mounds and rest like a benediction o'er those we loved.

Again the festal day of the Knight family has come. Again we flock together in merry groups, talking and laughing as is our wont. Again we have had our jolly meal together. Now let us quiet ourselves and together turn over the leaves of the year book.

Ah, see the frontispiece. How many pleasant happenings it portrays. There is the veiled bride, the smiling babe, and here, just across the tiny stream stands one who beckons us onward to the homeland shore. The next page bears the symbolic shepherd's crook. It was on the 14th of June that George Andrews was ordained as pastor of West Parish, Andover. Next comes a wedding, that of Annie Putnam (widow of Edgar Putnam) to Arthur Hall of Sutton.

This is the page of Thanksgiving Day. On that day Elliott Moore gathered all of his available brothers and sisters to celebrate with him the completion of his new house on Amherst Street, Worcester. Next we find recorded the birth of our only new baby, a son, Allen Hastings, to George and Dora Andrews.

In March, Reuben Moore bade farewell to home friends and with a brave heart and heavy trunk started for the land of "Misery" to visit his western cousins.

We turn another leaf and our touch is soft, for it bears the stamp of death. On the morning of March 27th, after a short illness, Della, wife of Elliott Moore, left her earthly home. We miss her quiet smile of welcome and mourn with the sorrowing ones she left.

Coming among us as a stranger, she won our affection and esteem by her lovely character and her strong personality. Ever ready by word or deed to help all who called on her for aid. Sympathetic and affectionate she commanded the love of every one and was in the fullest sense of the word a true Christian woman. A beautiful character, and a loving wife and mother, who sacrificed herself for others. She lived a beautiful, lovely life, and leaves a sweet memory.

But one more leaf remains unturned, and it records another wedding, in Amherst, where H. Ward Moore is married to Abbie D. Holley.

Were we to choose a flower which should be the emblem of the honored Knight Association, what better could we select than the lilac, whose fragrance greets us on our every reunion? Our annual gathering is indeed the "festival of the lilacs," whose nodding plumes usher in the day with quiet sweetness, and as silently and sweetly nod lower as the happy day draws to its close. Today as Father Time unrolls his scroll we eagerly crowd around to see what it records. As he slowly unrolls the page we see, not a row of dates and items, but a beautiful painting of lilacs, purple and white. As we look and wonder what it means, Father Time carefully explains. This tiny branch of white records a birth, when Lowell Knight, a tiny lad, came into the home of Fred and Minnie Walker. This pure white plume records the death of little Raymond, son of Waldo and Reppa Moore, of Amity, Mo. As Autumn days drew to an end a loving wife and mother, Frances Beck Knight, was called to leave her three dear children in God's keeping, to whose home she went.

On New Year's day the Master took to himself, Lydia Knight, one who has long been honored and beloved by all members of our circle. She died at Hahnemann Hospital, in Worcester, where she had undergone a severe operation. To know Lydia Knight was to love her. The cultured mind, the ready sympathy, her sunshiny disposition and playfulness of speech and manner, her charming hospitality, her loving care and devotion to her home and her husband's father and mother in their declining years, and the sweetness and patience with which she bore her own suffering, are some of the rare qualities which endeared her to all.

Beautiful lives are those that bless,
Silent rivers of happiness,
Whose hidden fountains but few can guess.

This bright blossom records the only marriage of the year, that of Elliott Moore, of Amity, Mo., to May Millward. Beside the bridal blossom is another, which speaks of the birth of a western babe, Gladys Amy, who was welcomed in the home of Waldo and Reppa Moore. And yet another tiny, nodding flower, which tells of another babe who has come into the heart and home of Ward and Abbie Moore, whom they call Ethelwyn Holley. But two blossoms remain, and both bear the message of death. In April Harvey Davidson was taken from his little family. In three short years, Mabel, his wife, has been made wife, mother and widow.

A few weeks ago, after weeks of great suffering, Olive Moore, of Amity, Mo., was taken away. The message of the lilacs is told, but as we turn aside we are reminded of other items of interest. We have no old Knight Homestead now at which to gather. The home that took its place is now broken up by the death of her who was its life and light, and the husband has found a home with his daughter, Dora Andrews. George Perry, we are told, sold Spring Brook Farm, in Shrewsbury, in April, and already a new house nearer town is in process of construction, and there we hope Father Time may meet us yet again at a future festival of the lilacs.

In the midst of the tinted petals of the snowy apple blossoms, the Knight family meets once more. Two rolls are placed before us bearing the geneological items of the year. One roll has torn edges and is tightly sealed. It records a long life of joy and sorrow, filled with care and heartaches. On June 12th, after a short illness, Emily Knight Howard went to her heavenly home, and the roll was sealed.

Another roll of purest white is opened before us. It bears the inscription, Dorris Maria Moore, daughter of Wallace P. and Lizzie B. Moore, born in Princeton, November 9, 1901. The page bears no other mark. May it be written over with records of kindly deeds and love for her God and fellowmen.

Each year as our family gathers from town to town, some particular flower is sure to greet us from the road side, the garden, or perchance from a vase where a few flowers lend a charm to the day's festivities. Today forget-me-nots of heaven's own blue bloom for us, not so much to call to our remembrance those who are not here today, for we do not forget them, as to say to us, "Forget not thy mercies, thy blessings; forget not that God is love." Last year the Western Branch met on our anniversary day to lay away the body of Agnes, wife of Theodore Moore, and to thank God beside her grave for her strong, happy life. Later, February 3, 1903, the sudden death of Thomas Holmes bound that small band closer together and us closed to them.

Within three short months two of our members have been taken from us, one just entering into womanhood, the other a bright, happy little girl.

Never in our history has a tragedy come home to us, and so stirred our hearts, as when on the night of January 21st Jennie Putnam, only daughter of Elwin and Lillian Putnam, fought alone the fire which later cost her life. She was alone in the house and had lighted a lamp, placing it on the table. Some movement of hers caused the table to tip, and the lamp exploded, covering her with the burning oil and setting fire to the room. Bravely she fought the flames with her hands, but finding she was unable to put them out, she rushed from the house for Mr. Bodo's, the nearest neighbor, nearly a quarter of a mile away, a perfect ball of fire, striping off her burning clothing as she ran. Hearing her screams, Mr. Bodo came to her assistance. She said, "I am burning to death, but never mind me, save the house."

Leaving her in the care of his wife, Mr. Bodo rushed to the house, where he found a lively blaze started, which he extinguished with rugs and snow, and then went to the Center for help. All was done for her that medical science could suggest, without avail, and two weeks later the brave young life went out. She died February 8, aged 22 years.

On May 5th, after a few days' suffering from scarlet fever, Olive Putnam was called home to the children's God. Today our blinded eyes can scarcely see the flowers of remembrance we scatter over the graves of our dead, but we would have them teach us to say,

So long thy power has blest me sure it still Will lead me on
O'er moor, and fen, o'er crag, and torrent till
The night is gone
And with the morn those Angel faces smile
Which I have loved long since and lost awhile.

We will imagine ourselves in the home of Jonathan Lovell, on Mountain Street, Worcester, where the ceremony which made Elijah Knight and Eunice Lovell one was performed May 31, 1804, one hundred years ago. Though the minister stood in Worcester, and the bride and groom in Boylston, the knot which united them for life was strongly tied. That the union was a happy one we feel confident. For the benefit of our younger members we will say that the house of Jonathan Lovell (which has been in the possession of three generations of Lovells) and is now owned by Cyrus Lovell, was built on the line dividing Worcester and Boylston (now West Boylston) and we are told that the house is taxed in Worcester, and the barn, stock, etc., in West Boylston. That for years, Cyrus, the present owner, has slept with his head in one town and his feet in another. Poor Cyrus, no wonder he is afflicted with rheumatism. The records also tell us that November 3, 1773, Edward Knight (Elijah's father) takes to his father's house on Burncoat Street his bride, Elizabeth Flagg, and to this same house Elijah Knight brings his wife, Eunice Lovell, May 31, 1804.

This house is still standing, but its age we do not know. Neither do we know how long it had been in the possession of Daniel Knight, Elijah's grandfather), but it is now 131 years since Edward Knight took his bride to this house. Ten children were born to Elijah and Eunice Knight, only one now living, Mary, the youngest, who now lives with her daughter, Emma Martin, in Springfield. After various wanderings, in 1816, Elijah bought the farm in West Boylston, around which cluster so many fond memories, and here he brought his wife and five children. The first child born in this new home was Emily. There Elijah Knight lived a quiet, peaceful life till his death, August 1, 1843, leaving grandmother with nine children. Thirty-nine years they had walked together. For a few years the wife lived at the old home, and then moved to West Boylston Center, where she remained till her youngest daughter. Mary, was married to Alvin Putnam, and Harriet was established as assistant matron in the Orphans' Home in Worcester. Then the home of fifty-two years was broken up, she spending the remaining nine years of her life with her children. She died at the home of her daughter, Eliza Moore, in Holden, December 1, 1865, at the age of eighty-five.

How well we remember her in her declining years. Small of stature, with quick, elastic step, bright black eyes full of fun. And with what wonder we viewed the gaily-colored rugs she braided, and how we admired their centerpieces of black broadcloth embroidered with bright worsteds, which to our childish eyes seemed the height of art. The wonderful mental and physical powers with which she was endowed by nature were retained in a large degree to the end of her long, useful, happy life.

If Grandmother Eunice could come to earth today she would see representatives of five generations, a company of which she need not be ashamed. None of them distinguished or famous as the world counts fame, though many of them are filling positions of trust and honor, but men and women of solid worth and clean lives, who have made the world better by having lived. And to the credit of the male portion be it said, that few families of this size can boast of so many members who are free from the bad habits and vices to which the majority of mankind are addicted. The living descendants now number one hundred and thirty-nine, namely, one child, twenty-one grandchildren, sixty-five great grandchildren, fifty-one great-great grandchildren, one great-great-great grandchild.

The first Old Election gathering was held on May 31st, 1854, it being the fiftieth anniversary of grandfather's and grandmother's wedding, so making today the fiftieth anniversary of the Knight Association. Grandmother then lived in West Boylston Center. The next meeting was a surprise to Amos Knight and wife at the Knight homestead in 1868. Since that time the meetings have been held yearly for 36 years. We would like to linger longer in the memories of the past, but we must hasten, for we have quite a list of events in the past year.

May 15, a son was born to Ernest and Alice Harrison. Next we hear of the arrival of a little maiden at the home of Harris and Flora Moore, June 20, and a royal welcome she received.

History repeats itself, and again the destiny of the Moores and Putnams is united in the marriage of Theodore Moore, of Amity, Mo., to Mabel Putnam Davidson. Now it happened in this wise: In July Elliott Moore sailed for Europe, leaving Theodore to run the farm and Mabel to run the house, and very soon Cupid was running them. They were married at the home of the bride's father, Lovell Putnam, October 9, it being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of Lovell and Libbie, so the two events were celebrated together in a pleasant, informal way. Later Theodore took his wife and her little son, Harry, to his western home. After traveling awhile in Europe with his son, Roy, who had just completed a two years' course at the University at Bonn, Germany, Elliott returned to view the mischief wrought, and find himself bereft of man and maid.

On June 23, Arthur Whitney was married to Edna Perk, of Worcester. December 1 a daughter, Beatrice Edith, was born to Frederick and Bertha Moore. Two days later a little boy came to Waldo and Reppie Moore. Reppie thought she would call him Plenty, but on second thought the combination of Plenty Moore filled her with dismay, so she named him Gayland. On January 4, another son was added to the family of Wallace and Lizzie Moore, only to remain with them four short months.

January 12, one whom we loved laid down the burden of suffering he had borne so long and patiently and went to his coronation. With the nobility and sweetness of his character and the marvelous patience and submission with which he bore his sufferings, and the giving up of all that makes life dear, you are all familiar, but some of the earlier events of his life may be of interest. As a boy he was fond of study, and after leaving the common schools he entered Worcester Academy, afterward Worcester Polytechnic Institute, from which he graduated in 1872. Nine years later he entered the employ of the Locks and Canals Co., Lowell, Mass. In May, 1883, he married Fannie C. Stone, of Holden, and Lowell was their home till he was forced to give up his position on account of a severe attack of his lifelong enemy, rheumatism, from which he never recovered. Soon it became apparent that his work was done, and they returned to Holden.

For eleven years he suffered as few can suffer, and a life like that of Jonathan Moore can truly be called great, and its memory falls on us like a benediction.

During the fall months we received a visit of a few weeks from Mrs. Martha Field, of Springfield, Mo. One more event and my story is told. After resigning his pastorate in Andover, Rev. Arthur Andrews was installed over the Congregational Church, in Holliston, Mass., a few days previous to this writing. This closes our record for 1903-04.

1904—1905

Another chapter of the Knight history is finished, and for the most part it is a happy one, woven together with pleasant events. No great calamity has befallen us, and only once has death entered our ranks, and then as a welcome release. The early part of the year was uneventful save for the interchange of visits by several of our number, East and West. In May Gilbert Moore made a visit to Amity, taking with him Alice Putnam. About three weeks later your historian followed. After a stay of two months we all returned together, accompanied by Elliott Moore and wife, they stopping two or three days at the World's Fair in St. Louis. When they returned they took with them Nellie Moore, who is still in Amity. In August, Faith Field came to make the acquaintance of her Eastern relatives. Soon after her arrival all of her Eastern cousins gathered to meet her at the home of their aunt, Mrs. George Perry, in Shrewsbury, and a merry day they had together. She remained East till April of this year. In March of the present year Mrs. Lovell Putnam visited her daughter Mabel in Cabool, Mo. More and more the two branches of our Association are being drawn together, and I am sure you will be interested to know more of your Western kin. Living within a radius of two miles we found the families of Eliza Holmes, Della Moore Harwood, Theodore Moore, Waldo Moore and Walter and John Holmes running a farm together and keeping bachelors' hall. We next visited Martha Moore Field, in Springfield, Mo., in the southern part of the state, some two hundred miles from Amity. We found her pleasantly situated on a little farm of one and a half acres, yet I venture to say it produced more than three acres in the East. The house was surrounded on three sides by about forty cherry trees laden with fruit, the limbs nearly touching the ground, making the trees as round and symmetrical as a ball. Then comes an enclosure containing strawberries, gooseberries and raspberries, two pigs, some hens, and the barn, which sheltered the horse and cow. Still further back was an orchard, which was a tangle of peach, pear, plum and apple trees, blackberries, etc., every inch of space being covered with something. Then comes a fine garden, while the very "backest" part furnished pasture for Nellie, the horse, the cow being pastured out. Yet this acre and a half keeps them hustling from early Spring till late Fall, and nearly supports the family of three. The next stop in the circuit was at Cabool, seventy-five miles from Springfield, where Liston Moore was located with his little flock. A wonderful country is the great Southwest, rich in undeveloped resources. Fruit and berries grow in almost tropical luxuriance. There is a charm about Cabool that must be seen to be appreciated. Both Springfield and Cabool are situated on a plateau of the Ozark mountains and the climate is delightful. In Cabool one may ride miles in any direction through beautiful oak woods without being confined to a traveled road, with no underbrush to obstruct the trail. The trees are not as close together as with us, and grass grows under them furnishing grazing for cattle and hogs. Beautiful flowers grow everywhere in lavish profusion.

Cupid and the stork have been busy in our midst as usual. June 30, a daughter, Lora Standish, was born to Arthur and Edna Whitney. October 2, a little boy was left at the home of Fred and Minnie Walker, and as he brought no name with him they called him Franklin Perry. So far he has been a credit to his name.

October 16, a son was born to Theodore and Mabel Moore. Loyal to their ancestry, they gave him the name of Herbert Knight. Only a short time previous to this event Theodore sold his farm in Amity and bought one in Cabool, taking with him Elmer, his youngest brother. With genuine pioneer spirit, Mabel followed when her baby was only three weeks old, making the journey alone with her three children.

October 29, there was a pretty wedding at 18 Caro street, Worcester, when Dr. Roy Moore and Jennie Sheffield were made one. They went at once to Boston, where Roy had accepted a position as teacher of chemistry in the Boston School of Technology. There was another home wedding in Sutton, November 23, when Arthur Putnam was married to Ethel Fletcher. He brought his bride to the Putnam homestead in Sutton.

Our record closes with the death of Lydia Ann, wife of Cyrus Knight, who died November 29, at the age of 93. Two years she had been confined to her room and bed more from the weakness of old age than actual sickness.

BORN

In Worcester, June 30, a daughter, Lora Standish, to Arthur and Edna Whitney.

1905—1906

For the thirty-eighth time we gather to listen to the events of the year. June 28, we were reminded that it was time to set the record pen "a wagging" when a little home wedding was announced at Lovell Putnam's, and Lovell and Libbie gave their daughter Bertha to John W. Allen of Sterling. The next event of importance was the breaking out of an epidemic at the home of Wallace and Lizzie Moore, July 5. It was a little girl, and she bears the name of Mary Eliza.

It next appeared in Schenectady, N. Y., December 20, and unto Roy and Jennie Moore a son was born, and they called his name Elliott Sheffield. Taking a southwesterly course the next appearance of the epidemic was in Amity, Mo., where Elliott and May Moore welcomed their first born, Edith Lucille, January 5. Were it not for the blessed release from pain and weariness for months, we should record with sadness the death of Aunt Mary Putnam, October 10, at the home of her daughter, Emma Martin, in Springfield, where her last years were peacefully and happily spent, tenderly cared for by her daughter and husband. We fancy that again Elijah and Eunice Knight gather about them as of old their ten children in the home where separation comes not.

We were glad to hear that, November 5, Frank Knight was married to Miss Jeannette Day, of Worcester. Not often is Day turned to Knight so suddenly, with such happy results. March 3, Jane Knight Long was suddenly stricken down with paralysis. To Herbert, her only son, who has no family ties, her loss is especially keen, and he has our sympathy. To Emory Stockwell, who was forced to give up his two little motherless girls that they might find homes and care which he was unable to give, our sympathies also go out.

During the autumn months we were gladdened by a visit from Eliza Holmes of Amity, Mo. Several changes have taken place in the Amity Branch. Early in the spring Harold Holmes purchased land in Cabool, Mo., intending to make a home for himself near Liston and Theodore Moore, who had previously located there. In April, John Holmes brought his bride, Irene Snelling, to his mother's home, Eliza going to live with her son Walter.

A word of some of our young people, of whom we are justly proud. In September Dr. Roy Moore entered the employ of the General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y., and his name is already winning recognition along the line of research.

In June Chester Moore graduated from Dartmouth College with highest honors, and in September entered the Boston school of Technology, but was forced to give up study on account of failing health, and later found employment in the same company with his brother Roy. Reuben Moore is taking a course of study in the nurses' training school at Bellevue Hospital, New York. Harlan Moore has just completed a course at Rees School of Engraving, at Elmira, N. Y.

April 10 the epidemic again broke out in Amity, when a daughter, Violet, was added to the little flock of Waldo and Reppa Moore, and a few days later a son, Byron Francis, to Frank and Della Moore Harwood. A singular feature of this epidemic is that it was entirely confined to the Moore family. The grandchildren of Newell and Eliza Moore now number 28, and 31 great grandchildren, the largest record of any branch. And so our record opens and closes, not in gloom and sadness, but with new life and joy.

With pleasure we welcome you today to Brightside, mid the beauty of the apple blossoms and the song of the bobolink, and

“If you will listen you shall hear
Of all the events of the passing year
Some are merry, some are sad
Some are good and some are bad.”

The epidemic which broke out in the Moore family still rages with unabated fury. We left it last year doing its work in Amity, Mo. After spending its force there it next struck Cabool, Mo. August 7th Theodore and Mabel Moore were its victims. When its work was done a little daughter was in evidence, whom they named Beulah Elizabeth. December 22 a son found welcome in the home of Fred and Bertha Moore, and he bears the name of one we “loved and lost awhile.”
Jonathan Moore.

October 9th Gilbert Moore was married to Florence Potter, of Holden, and contentedly settled down in the “Old Bay State.”

Only once does the shadow of death fall across our page, but the shadow in the hearts and homes where it fell is a dark one. January 7th, after an illness of three weeks, Bertha Putnam Allen, a bride of less than two years, passed on to the larger life in the homeland.

In February two little strangers came to bide in the Whitney family. February 8th a son was born to Arthur and Edna Whitney, and ten days later a daughter to Ralph and Margaret Whitney. Both bear names familiar to us all, Lovell and Olive.

In March, Elmer Moore of Cabool, Mo., being 19 years of age, thinking he had trod life's pathway alone long enough, took unto himself a wife. He married Mary Van Kirk, of Cabool. She is 18. The children have our sympathy and good wishes.

We follow with loving interest our young people who are preparing for, or entering into lives of usefulness. Josephine

Knight is singing in different parts of the country, already winning fame with her magnificent voice; Harriet Moore is principal of a school in Hinsdale, N. H. In August Chester Moore bade farewell to his native land, and sailed for Germany, where he is taking a course of study in the University in Leipzig.

Cora Moore entered Wellesley College about the same time. In April, Rev. Arthur Andrews severed his connection with the church in Holliston, and accepted the pastorate of the Congregational Church, in Monson, Mass.

Accidents more or less serious have befallen some of our number. Walter Holmes, of Amity, parted with two of his digits, mangling a third so it is of little use, while cutting corn for his silo. In December Wallace Moore had the misfortune to break his leg while drawing logs in the woods. In passing over a stump the sled slued and threw him down, pinning both legs so he was unable to move, breaking one leg. Sending his little boy Percy for help, he lay there for more than half an hour before he was rescued from his perilous position, for had the oxen moved, further injury must have resulted, but by speaking to them occasionally when they became restless, the faithful creatures stood still till help arrived. This is not the first time Wallace has displayed nerve and courage under trying circumstances. We recall with pride his encounter with a burglar several years ago, when Millege, his firstborn, was a baby. He had been up till nearly midnight caring for his sick child, and had been in bed but a short time when he was awakened by a light in the room, and saw a man standing by his bed, going through his pockets. "What do you want?" he demanded. "Your money," replied the man. "Well," said Mr. Wallace, "you won't have it," and springing up, grappled with the burglar, who fired a revolver, the ball barely missing Lizzie, his wife, as it whizzed over the bed, passing so near the baby's head as he lay in his crib that its hair was blackened, and was found later lodged in the head of the crib. Breaking away, the man ran out of doors, with Wallace in hot pursuit. Again they embraced, and another shot was fired which also missed its mark. Wrenching the revolver from the man, Wallace threw him to the ground, pounded him into submission, and sat on him while Lizzie went to the neighbors for help. With ropes he was bound hand and foot, bundled into a wagon, and taken to the lockup to cool off. At his trial he was sentenced for fifteen years in jail. Wallace still keeps the revolver as a souvenir.

A new record book has been purchased with ample room for a spread. Long enough has the Moore family held the monopoly, and we hope the Knights and Putnams will avail themselves of their right and privilege. With regret we note that the Knight name is dying out. Already we have seen the passing of one generation. There are but four representatives in the second generation who bear the name, three in the third, and but one in the fourth, Emerson, son of Frank Knight. May he live and be the medium by which the name we honor shall be perpetuated.

BORN

In Cabool, Mo., August 7, 1906, a daughter, Beulah Elizabeth, to Theodore and Mabel Moore.

In Worcester, December 22, a son, Jonathan Frederick, to Frederick and Bertha Moore.

In Worcester, February 8, a son, Lovell Peck, to Arthur and Edna Whitney.

In Worcester, February 18, a daughter, Olive Margaret, to Ralph and Margaret Whitney.

MARRIED

In Worcester, October 9, 1906. Gilbert E. Moore to Florence E. Potter.

1907—1908

Gladly we accept the invitation to meet with our friends, Theodore Moore and wife, from the Ozarks, in Sterling, on this festal day. There was weeping when Theodore carried Mabel, his bride, away to her western home, but they come again rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them. Nellie Moore also returns to us after a sojourn of three years in the land of promise, but alas! no sheaves! Our record for the year opens as usual with a birth, but not in the usual order. This year the Moores take a back seat and the birth list is headed with a Putnam. June 29, a son, Clyde Havens, was born to Arthur and Ethel Putnam. Not long, however, did the Moores remain in the background, for July 8 a lusty little fellow made his appearance in the home of Ward and Abbie Moore. The next event is the death of Lawyer Blackmer, of Worcester, November 26. Mr. Blackmer, you remember, married Madge Whitney. Though few of us knew him personally, we know his death is a sad blow to his family and his profession. December 6, after a long, painful illness, Mrs. Nellie Moore Weeks laid down the life which had been so full of trouble and sorrow, leaving Clifton, her only child, fatherless and motherless. Our hearts go out in peculiar tenderness to this boy, so early orphaned.

March 3, a daughter, as yet nameless, was born to Elliott and May Moore, of Amity, Mo., March 13 the stork left a little boy in the home of Arthur and Dora Andrews. We are sorry it isn't a girl, but what could they expect on Friday the 13th. They may congratulate themselves that it was not two boys. He bears the name of George Arthur, Jr.

We mourn today for Elmer Putnam, whom we all loved and sorely miss. In the summer his health began to fail, but not till the last week in January did his physician pronounce his trouble brights' disease, and that he could live but a short time. March 9, he, with his wife, went to Atlantic City, N. J., hoping the change might be beneficial. He died ten days later. It is a singular coincidence that the three deaths of the year were from the same cause, brights' disease. And so closes the year's record of mingled joy and sorrow.

BORN

June 29, a son, Clyde Havens, to Arthur B. and Ethel M. Putnam.

July 8, a son, Burton Ellis, to Ward and Abbie Moore.

In Amity, Mo., March 3, a daughter, Mildred Frances, to Elliott and May Moore.

March 13, a son, George Arthur, Jr., to George A. and Dora Knight Andrews.

DIED

November 26, Fred W. Blackmar.

December 6, Nellie Moore Weeks.

March 19, Elmer J. Putnam.

1908—1909

We were glad when the summons came to meet at Frank Moore's today, for we are sure of a cordial welcome and a good time. There is no place where we are wont to meet that holds so many happy memories as the Moore homestead, both in the old house and the more modern one that replaced it. I recall how glad we were when the cousins came to visit us and stay over night in the old red house, and the merry frolics in the long kitchen. The dining room in the new house was also dedicated to similar powwows. Fifty-seven years has the farm been in the Moore name, and the relatives of both generations gather today as gladly as of old. Like other years our record is one of mingled sunshine and shadow. In spite of business depression at large in the year 1908, home industry in the Moore family was never more flourishing. Their yearly offerings are as follows:

BORN

In Cabool, Mo., June 24, a son, Edward Wilber, to Elmer and Mary Moore.

In Watertown, Mass., July 19, a daughter, Marion Frances, to Harris and Flora Moore.

In Holland, Mass., September 4, a son, Herbert Mansfield, to Wallace and Lizzie Moore.

In Schenectady, N. Y., September 11, a daughter, Margaret Whitney, to Roy and Jennie Moore.

In Holden, September 26, a son, Kenneth Potter, to Gilbert and Florence Moore.

In Amity, Mo., November 1, a daughter, Marion Louise, to Waldo and Reppa Moore.

May they not grow weary in well doing.

March 24, Irving and Rena Putnam observed their silver wedding at their home in Sutton. They received their friends informally, both afternoon and evening, and all had a happy time.

The Western branch of our Association sorrow today for Irene, wife of John Holmes, who died September 7.

January 24 Ward and Abbie Moore gave up their baby boy who had gladdened their home but eighteen months. Today we welcome two brides to our circle. October 14, Harlan Moore and Miss Glenn Greenbank were married at the bride's home in Guilford, Me. Herman Moore and Mrs. Anna Bashaw were married in Holden May 16, and he brings his wife to the Moore homestead.

MARRIED

In Guilford, Me., October 14, Harlan E. Moore to Glenn W. Greenbank.

In Holden, Mass., May 16, Herman E. Moore to Anna M. Bashaw.

DIED

In Worcester, January 24, Burton Ellis Moore.

1909—1910

It seems but a few weeks since we gathered at the Moore homestead, yet another year is numbered with the past. Compared with other years, less eventful, yet not without its measure of joy and sorrow.

First in the order of events comes the marriage of Harold Holmes, of Amity, Mo., to Irene Van Kirk, of Cabool, July 28. He takes his wife to his mother's farm in Amity, which his brother John vacated soon after the death of his wife the September previous.

This event was soon followed by the marriage of Chester Moore to Alice Green, of Westboro, September 1. They have made a home in the same house with his brother Roy, in Schenectady, N. Y. We were sorry when in August, Theodore Moore with his little flock turned their faces westward after a sojourn of about two years in the Old Bay State. We were pained to hear of the death of Libbie Putnam, January 23. For more than a year she had been in failing health. For a time last Fall she seemed so much improved that we hoped to keep her with us for a long time, but the little, frail body seemed unable to longer respond to medical aid and loving care, and in the last weeks of her life she failed rapidly. She sleeps beside the loved daughter they lost three years ago.

Other families have been visited with serious illness. For several months last spring and summer Eliza Holmes lay helpless and suffering with rheumatism. For weeks during the past winter the life of Sadie Knight hung in the balance. Both of these precious lives were spared, and are today enjoying a fair degree of health.

April 5, 1910, marked the golden wedding of Marcus and Ellen Moore. The day was royally observed at their home in Holden, where a large number of friends gathered to wish them joy.

The stork has left its yearly donations in the Moore family, but not so generously as usual. August 25, a little boy, George Everett, came to the home of Harlan and Glenn Moore, only to stay with them a few days. April 4, a little girl to Elmer and Mary Moore of Cabool. Cupid and the stork have also raised the dickens with the Whitneys. A daughter, Beatrice, was born to Arthur and Edna Whitney, December 3. May 11 occurred the marriage of Vera Whitney to George E. Bartlett. They make their home in Wellesley, Mass.

Harry Knight, with his wife, have removed to Tennessee, where he is engaged in a mining interest.

May 22, a daughter, Gertrude Ada, was born to Chester and Alice Moore. With this report I complete the history of six years. The late Mark Twain once remarked that "history was made up of a mess of things that never happened," but I assure you that every word of the history of the Knight Association is true.

BORN

In Holden, August 25, a son, George Everett, to Harlan E. and Glenn Moore.

In Worcester, December 3, a daughter, Beatrice, to Arthur and Edna Whitney.

In Cabool, Mo., April 4, a daughter, Frances Olive, to Elmer and Mary Moore.

In Schenectady, N. Y., May 22, a daughter, Gertrude Ada, to Chester and Alice Moore.

MARRIED

In Cabool, Mo., July 28, Harold Holmes to Irene Van Kirk.

In Westboro, Mass., September 1, Chester Moore to Alice Green.

In Worcester, May 11, Vera Whitney to George E. Bartlett.

DIED

In Holden, August 31, George E. Moore.

In Worcester, January 23, Mary Elizabeth Putnam.

1910—1911

Is it possible a year has passed since we met in Sutton with Elwin Putnam and wife? Such is the case, and as we gather today we instinctively look backward and wonder what has happened in the year. The first thing to claim our attention is the birth of a baby boy to Harold and Irene Holmes, in Amity, Mo., June 13th. The little youngster bears the names of his two grandfathers, Thomas and Milton.

We next hear that on June 18th, Liston and Mabel Moore gave their eldest daughter, Viola, to the tender mercy of Glen W. Mackey of Hutchinson, Kansas. About this time Cora Moore took her diploma from Wellesley College and launched forth to battle with the world. And from Holden comes the message that Gilbert and Florence Moore have another son, bearing the name of Earl Knight. And from Amity, Mo., that a little girl, Margaret Lucile, made her appearance on October 13th, in the home of Waldo and Reppa Moore. In this same month Lovell Putnam sold his home on Hudson Street, Worcester, and moved to Sutton Center, where he remained till the following spring, then bought a farm near his boyhood home.

On February 10th death took from us one of our oldest beloved members. Sitting at his desk in the Chamber of Commerce, in Boston, Emerson Knight quietly fell asleep. To his wife we are indebted for the following sketch of his life and work:

Emerson Paine Knight, second son of Amos E. and Persis E. Knight, was born August 22d, 1837, in West Boylston, Mass. There he attended the district school, spending the winter of 1855-6 at the Shelburne Falls Academy, later taking a brief course at a business college in Worcester.

In 1859 he started in business for himself with a general store, in West Needham, Mass., and was commissioned as postmaster by Abraham Lincoln, during the latter's first administration.

On January 3d, 1860, he married Mary Caroline, daughter of John Hapgood and Olive Morse Brooks, of Worcester. Of this union there were born three children, Harry Brooks, November 8, 1860; Frank Emerson, May 16, 1862, and Mary Winslow, March 29, 1867. The latter two are living, while Harry Brooks passed on, February 15, 1865.

When the call for volunteers came in 1861, he was among the first to respond, but was rejected twice, on account of defective teeth. In 1863, however, an opportunity came for service in the Quartermaster's Department of the Army, which he promptly embraced, and was stationed at Camp Nelson, Kentucky, under Capt. Theron E. Hall, of Holden. Here his duties consisted of contracting supplies of grain and of lumber for fortifications, and later of directing the labor of some 2000 negro refugees, which gave free scope to the exercise of his natural business and executive ability.

On returning to Worcester at the close of the war, he was engaged by W. H. Maynard as traveling salesman in the flour and grain business.

His wife, Mary, passed away August 20, 1867.

On May 27, 1869, he married Augusta Chapman Emerson, daughter of Joseph P. and Sarah D. Emerson, of Parsonsfield, Maine. To them were born Harry Joseph, April 22, 1871, and Josephine Augusta, November 16, 1878.

In 1874 he signed a contract with S. C. Bartlett & Co., of Peoria, Ill., grain shippers, to represent them in New England and New York state. A few years later he formed a partnership with W. H. and A. S. Maynard, of Worcester, under the firm name of Maynard, Knight & Co., which relation continued until the fall of 1882. He then located in Lafayette, Indiana, forming the firm of Bartlett, Knight & Co., which became one of the large grain shipping firms of the middle west.

In 1897 he returned to Boston, becoming a member of the Chamber of Commerce, representing the Cleveland Grain Co., as New England manager, up to the time of his death.

Endowed with a beautiful tenor voice, and a great love of music, he sang for years in Worcester church choirs, directing the music for several years at Central and Piedmont churches. He also sang as first tenor in the Masonic Male Quartet, one of the first quartets of this kind, and organized by him. During his fourteen years' residence in Lafayette, he was called upon for much service of a similar nature, and after his return to Boston was actively connected with the Handel and Hayden Society, and one of its directors.

He also kept up his Masonic affiliations to the last; was at one time Master of Athelstan Lodge, of Worcester, was a Knight Templar, and had received his thirty-second degree.

In politics he was an ardent Republican, although never seeking political preferment.

In religion he was reared in the Orthodox faith, and was a constant attendant at church. In 1884, however, after a remarkable healing in Christian Science, of incipient brights' disease, he embraced that religion, and it was a constant support and never-failing comfort to him.

Sincerity and loyalty in every relation of life were his in a marked degree. A loving and devoted husband, a kind and indulgent father, a warm and true-hearted friend to all who claimed his friendship, his life was a blessing and inspiration to all who knew him.

Thrice more we hear the wedding bells peal forth their merry chime, although many miles apart. First in Brimfield, when on March 26th Gladys Moore becomes Mrs. Eugene Whitton; and in far-off Missouri, George Moore, son of Liston Moore, was united to Miss Dorothy L. Niewoehner, of Cabool, on May 2d, and have chosen Lebanon for their home. On the fifteenth of the same month Fannie Whitney becomes the bride of Rolla F. McComb, and they make their home in Worcester.

Also in May Dr. Roy Moore bade farewell to his family and sailed for Germany, where he will spend a couple of months on business, and so ends the record of joys and sorrows for 1910-11.

BORN

In Amity, Mo., June 13th, a son, Thomas Milton, to Harold and Irene Holmes.

In Holden, Mass., August 24th, a son, Earl Knight, to Gilbert and Florence Moore.

In Amity, Mo., October 13th, a daughter, Margaret Lucile, to Waldo and Reppa Moore.

MARRIED

In Mountain Grove, Mo., June 18th, Viola Mabel Moore to Glen W. Mackey.

In Cabool, Mo., May 2d, George E. Moore to Dorothy L. Niewoehner.

In Worcester, Mass., May 15th. Fannie K. Whitney to Rolla F. McComb.

DIED

In Boston, Mass., February 10, 1911, Emerson P. Knight.

1911—1912

“Little by little the time goes by,
Short if you sing, tho long if you sigh
Little by little, an hour, a day,
Gone with the years that have vanished away;
Little by little the race is won
Trouble and waiting and toil are done.”

June 1st. after a distressing illness of nearly three months, George Perry closed his eyes to the joys and sorrows of life, and the trouble and waiting and toil was done. He was a man respected by all. Generous and honorable in all his dealings with his fellowmen. A man of sound judgment, and a tremendous amount of energy and push. Although of a retiring, home-loving disposition, he was always ready to serve the town and community, holding many offices of trust, giving of his best, till forced to give up all public duties on account of increasing deafness. When a young man he bought his father's farm in Shrewsbury, which he brought to a high state of cultivation, and it was considered one of the best farms in Shrewsbury. This farm he sold in 1911. In September following his death “Brightside,” which had been their new home for ten years, was sold, and the wife removed to Holden Center, where she remained through the winter, then moved into another house nearby. Before she was fairly settled she was awakened one night to find the house in flames. This time she moved in a hurry. Worn and disheartened she stored her goods and is boarding for awhile.

The stork, as usual, has been busy. It first visited Cabool, Mo., September 6, and left a daughter in the home of Harold and Irene Holmes, and they call her Juanita Eliza. October 28th another baby girl took up her abode in the home of Roy and Jennie Moore, in Schenectady, N. Y., and they named her Eleanor Mary. About the same time a little boy, Eugene Albert, came to Albert and Gladys Whitton, in Brimfield. Harlan Page: How familiar the name to some of the older ones of our circle. Again we hear it, when on February 8 a tiny youngster bearing that name came to Harlan and Glen Moore, of Holden. May 1st another boy was born in the home of Fred and Minnie Walker, whom they christened Everett Moore. Although the stork missed the Putnam branch of this Association, Cupid did not. We know not when he threw his dart, but as a result Roger Putnam presents to us today his bride, Flora Wakefield. they were married in Waltham, April 10th, and he brings her to his father's home in Sutton.

Fifty years ago, May 11th, Franklin Moore and Mary Newell were united in marriage, in Holden, Mass. On the anniversary of this event a hundred friends and relatives gathered to celebrate their golden wedding. How seldom do we see a father and mother reach this milestone with their ranks unbroken. Eight children came to bless this union, and today not one is missing. So ends our history for 1911-1912.

BORN

In Cabool, Mo., September 6, a daughter, Juanita Eliza, to Harold and Irene Holmes.

In Schenectady, N. Y., October 28, a daughter, Elinor Mary, to Roy and Jennie Moore.

In Brimfield, Mass., October 23, a son, Eugene Albert, to Eugene and Gladys Whitton.

In Holden, Mass., February 8, a son, Harlan Page, to Harlan and Glenn Moore.

1912—1913

As the time of strawberries and roses is at hand, here in the Ozarks, I am reminded that it is time my history was on its way to the Old Bay State. Little did your historian think when she left Massachusetts last November that she would spend her next "Lection" with her friends in South Missouri. Such is the case, however, and she will meet with them at Elmer Moore's. Here I find settled the families of Harold and John Holmes, Theodore and Elmer Moore, and Liston Moore living at Mountain Grove, some twelve miles away, these constituting the larger part of the Western Branch of our Association.

The first item of interest to report this year is the marriage of Cora Moore to Mr. Rollin Smith, of Schenectady, N. Y., July 19th, where they will reside, Mr. Smith being employed by the General Electric Co. of that city. We next record the birth of a daughter, Louise Evelyn, to George and Dora Moore, of Lebanon, Mo., August 11th. On September 9th, in Portland, Me., occurred the wedding of Albert Blackmar, of Worcester, and Miss Helen Dana, of Portland. They now reside in Worcester. Another wedding of interest to the Knight Association is that for the third time in its history a Moore and Putnam have joined hands for better or worse, is that of Lovell Putnam and Mabel Moore. They were married in Holden, October 23d. They have the blessing and hearty good will of us all. May they spend many happy years together. On December 6th, another daughter, Christine Helen, came to the home of Waldo and Reppa Moore, in Amity, Mo., making their number eight. At the beginning of the new year Gilbert Moore, who had been employed by the Boston & Maine Railroad for several years, decided to change his occupation. He chose the manufacture of handcuffs. He, with Mr. J. E. Cumming, formed a company known as the Cumming Handcuff Co. We hope it will be the coming handcuff, if there must be such things, but if all the families of the earth had such a record as ours, he would soon be beggared. About the middle of January, Eliza Moore

Holmes, for the third, and she says for the last time, left her home that a son might bring his bride there. This time she left Amity, where she had spent the greater part of her married life, to go to Cabool, where her son John had a home prepared for her. The first baby of the new year made its appearance in Hutchinson, Kansas, January 16th, in the home of Glen and Viola Moore Mackey. He bears the name of Herbert Glen. Another wedding took place in Holden, February 1st, when Milledge Moore and Astrid Nystrom became one. A month and a day later, March 2d, Frank Holmes and Amy Stebbins were married in Amity, Mo. Another youngster, Harlan Glen, appeared in Cabool, April 4th, and found lodgings at the home of Harold and Irene Holmes. Notwithstanding the fact that there were two other small boarders, he was given ample room to grow, and he seems so far to be living up to his opportunities. May 1st a son, Rollin Powers, Jr., entered the home of Rollin and Cora Smith. And the record of 1912-13 closes with a list of five marriages, five births and no deaths.

In December Elliott Moore left for a trip to Panama, where he remained five days, leaving Panama January 8th, for Los Angeles, California. Here he visited four weeks, then journeyed east via Texas, Missouri and New York, spending a short time with relatives in Missouri, and arrived home March 6th, having had a delightful trip.

BORN

In Lebanon, Mo., August 11, a daughter, Louise Evelyn, to George and Dora Moore.

In Amity, Mo., December 6, a daughter, Christine Helen, to Waldo and Reppa Moore.

In Cabool, Mo., April 4, a son, Harlan Glen, to Harold and Irene Holmes.

In Schenectady, N. Y., May 1, a son, Rollin P., Jr., to Rollin and Cora Smith.

MARRIED

In Schenectady, N. Y., July 19, 1912, Cora D. Moore to Rollin P. Smith.

In Portland, Me., September 9, Albert W. Blackmar to Helen T. Dana.

In Holden, Mass., October 23, Lovell M. Putnam to Mabel G. Moore.

In Holden, February 1, Milledge Moore to Astrid C. Nystrom.

In Amity, Mo., March 2, Frank M. Holmes to Amy I. Stebbins.

1913—1914

We are glad to meet today with Franklin Moore and wife at the Moore Homestead, and let us listen to the history for the year, which opens with the record of two deaths. On June 7th, Annie Putnam Hall, former wife of Edgar Putnam, was taken from us. Though not one of us by the ties of kinship, we loved this noble woman as our own, and shall always hold her in loving memory. June 15th, Harriet Howard Stockwell, after a life of suffering, passed away at Worcester City Hospital. Our ranks are reinforced this year by five births. First came, September 22d, Esther May, to Elmer and Mary Moore, of Cabool, Mo. Closely following came Irene Elizabeth, to Eugene and Gladys Whitton, October 5. January 2d, a son, George Emerson, Jr., was born to George and Dora Moore, Lebanon, Mo. January 29th, at Jefferson, Mass., a daughter, Dorothy Grace, to Milledge and Astrid Moore. In Hutchinson, Kan., a daughter, Marion Jane, to Glen and Viola Mackey.

We welcome three brides to our family this year, two to the Eastern, and one to the South Missouri Branch. The first to present his bride to the Knight Association was John Holmes, of Cabool, Mo. He was married September 14th, to Gertie Butts, also of Cabool. October 1st, Milton Putnam and Mary Davidson joined hearts and hands for better or worse. Not to be outdone by his younger brother, Clarence Putnam took unto himself Frances Underwood, of East Brookfield, November 19th. No startling events have occurred this past year, unless the return of your historian from a ten months' sojourn in the West would be counted as such. She returned early in September, accompanied by her sister Ruth, who had been visiting in the West since her graduation from the Sutton High School, in June, and her nephew, Harry Davidson. The first of September Kenneth Putnam entered Cushing Academy. In October Ruth Putnam entered on a three years' course at the Worcester Art School. In the late winter Chester Moore and family spent a very enjoyable six weeks in California.

BORN

In Cabool, Mo., September 22, 1913. Esther Mae, to Elmer and Mary Moore.

In Orange, Mass, October 5, Irene Elizabeth, to Eugene and Gladys Whitton.

In Lebanon, Mo., January 2, 1914, George Emerson, Jr., to George E. and Dora Moore.

In Jefferson, Mass., January 29, Dorothy Grace, to Milledge and Astrid Moore.

In Hutchinson, Kansas, April 2, Marion Jane, to Glen W. and Viola Mackey.

MARRIED

In Cabool, Mo., September 14, 1913, John R. Holmes to Gertie F. Butts.

In Leicester, Mass., October 1, Milton A. Putnam to Mary E. Davidson.

In East Brookfield, November 19, Clarence S. Putnam to Ella F. Underwood.

DIED

In Worcester, June 7, 1913, Annie Putnam Hall.

In Worcester, July 15, Harriet Howard Stockwell.

1914—1915

At our last gathering it was voted to have the history and genealogy of the Knight Association printed in book form, that each member desiring one might have a copy. Consequently the history of 1914-15 only covers events up to the time the manuscript went to press. This history covers a period of one hundred and thirty-two years, dating back to the marriage of Edward Knight and Elizabeth Flagg. It is one hundred and eleven years since the marriage of Elijah Knight and Eunice Lovell. Of this union there are 245 descendants, of which 110 belong to the Moore family.

We have four births to record. First, a son, Charles Edmond, to Harlan and Glen Moore, August 8th. November 11th, a son, Lester James, to John and Gertie Holmes, of Cabool, Mo. February 22d, a son, Earl Underwood, to Clarence and Frances Putnam, of Sturbridge.

October 14th the angel of death entered the home of Marcus Moore and released the beloved wife and mother from the intense suffering she had borne for many months. Cancer, the foe of the Newell family, was the cause of death. All who knew Ellen Newell Moore will ever remember the unflinching faith and courage with which she bore her suffering. At her bedside, caring for her day and night with untiring devotion, was her husband, who had been a faithful companion for fifty-four years.

October 21st, Asa Knight, in a moment of despondency, took his own life with a gun, at his home in West Boylston. He had been a great sufferer from rheumatism and heart trouble for several years. With all his loved ones on the other side, it is perhaps no wonder that at the age of 70 he thought life so little worth living.

Sorrowfully we record the death of Franklin Moore, who in Christmas week entered into rest. For more than two years he was forced to give up the activities of life on account of a heart trouble. Early in the Fall a disease we all dread developed, causing greater suffering. Franklin Moore was beloved by all who knew him. A man of refined, scholarly tastes. True to his convictions of right and duty, serving as best he could his home, the community and the church he loved so much. In the early sixties he enlisted in the army, and later was drafted, but was both times rejected on account of physical disability. After his marriage to Mary Newell he lived for awhile in Holden, Rutland and Worcester, and nine years in West Boylston, finally settling on the Moore Homestead, in Holden, in 1877. Here they have lived thirty-eight years. For fifty-two years he and his wife had walked together. Theirs was a home noted for its delightful hospitality, from which an influence that cannot be measured has gone forth to bless the world. Here many a homeless child found shelter and love and care. who, with their own children and grandchildren, will rise up and call them blessed. Though he had not accumulated wealth, he leaves to his family and the world the richer legacy of a spotless life, rich in kindly deeds.

BORN

In Amity, Mo., July 1st, a daughter, Jessie Marie, to Frank and Amy, Holmes.

In Holden, August 8th, a son, Charles Edmond, to Harlan and Glen Moore.

In Cabool, Mo., November 25th, a son, Lester James, to John and Gertie Holmes.

In Sturbridge, February 22, 1915, a son, Earl Underwood, to Clarence and Frances Putnam.

DIED

In Holden, October 14, Ellen Newell Moore.

In West Boylston, October 21, Asa E. Knight.

In Holden, December 19, Franklin Moore.
