PREFACE

François Lemaistre-Lamorille and Judith Rigaud, colonists from France, founded the Lemaistre family in Canada almost three hundred years ago. Their descendants, now well into the eleventh generation, have established several branches whose names vary somewhat from that of the founder. Besides the name Lemaistre-Lamorille, these main branches are known under the names Lemaistre de Longée, Lemaistre-Auger and Lemaistre de Lottinville. As the family grew in numbers, these names underwent further changes, often from the compound to a single form of the surname.

The present work is an account of the Lottinviles, who are the descendants of Pierre, eldest son of François and Judith. It is limited to the direct line from generations one to five. In generation six, Anthony Lottinville and Aurelia Picotte emigrated to the United States and thus founded the family in this country some ninety years ago. His descendants, Canadians and Americans, comprise generations seven to eleven and all of these have been included. The amount of descriptive details devoted to each generation is of necessity uneven. For generations three to five practically no information is available, and for obvious reasons it would be unwise to attempt a narrative of persons who are living or who have but recently passed away.

My deepest gratitude is due to Mrs. Anna Reno Ponton, through whom the genealogy was in part made possible; to Mademoiselle Marie-Louise Lupien, who generously offered to collect the data for the Canadians of the last five generations; to Mr. Philip S. Lottinville, who kindly loaned the use of the only existing portrait of Anthony Lottinville; to Miss Rosalind Hughes, through whom this copy of the coat of arms was obtained; to Dr. Francis A. Mullin, director of the Catholic University of America Library, who carefully read the manuscript and made valuable suggestions; and to Mr. William C. Smith, manager of the Catholic University of America Press, who is mainly responsible for the design and typography of the book.

GENERATION ONE

I. Lemaistre-Lamorille, François. Born 1631 in Picardie, France; married May 6, 1654, at Trois-Rivières, P. Q.; died January 14, 1666 (?).¹

Rigaud, Judith. Born 1633(?) in Saint-Jean-d'Angély, Saintonge, France, daughter of Élie and Marie —

Children:

1. Pierre, baptized February 2, 1655; married January 8, 1682, at Trois-Rivières, P. Q., Marie-Anne Chesnaye de la Garenne, daughter of Bertrand Chesnaye de la Garenne, sieur de Lothainville and Marie-Madeleine Bélanger; died August 13, 1711.
2. François, baptized February 9, 1656; married January 7, 1683, at Trois-Rivières, P. Q., Marguerite Poulin, daughter of Maurice Poulin, sieur de la Fontaine and Jeanne Jalleant; died May 14, 1703.
3. Marie-Louise, baptized July 29, 1657; married January 22, 1676, at Rivière-du-Loup, P. Q., Jacques Passard, sieur de la Bretonnière.
4. Noël, baptized December 24, 1658; died 1666(?).
5. Marguerite, baptized February 16, 1660; married May 22, 1676, at Sorel, P. Q., Christophe Gerbault, sieur de Bellegarde, son of Élie Gerbault and Pirrine Philippe.
6. Jean, baptized October 24, 1661; married November 22, 1696, at Montréal, P. Q., Catherine Godefroy, daughter of Joseph Godefroy, écuyer, sieur de Vieuxpont and Catherine Poulin; died April 14, 1710.
7. Marguerite(?), baptized January 16, 1664; married 1694, at Trois-Rivières, P. Q.(?), Robert Laisné de la Croix.

8. Charles, born 1665(?); married October 11, 1689, at Montréal, P. Q., Madeleine Crévier, daughter of Nicolas Crévier, sieur de Bellerive and Louise Leloutre; died 1738(?).

II. Terrien-Duhemme, Jean. Born 1644(?) in Dieppe, Normandie, France, son of Jean and Marie Hélié; married January 26, 1667, at Trois-Rivières, P. Q.; died before 1675.

Children:

9. Dominique, baptized November 6, 1667; died December 6, 1667.
10. Jean, baptized March 17, 1669; married November 9, 1700, at Trois-Rivières, P. Q., Marguerite Laspron de la Charité, daughter of Jean and Anne Renault; died May 24, 1759.
11. Louis-Michel, baptized April 5, 1671; married ———.

III. La Planche, Jean de. Born in La Flèche, Anjou, France, son of Urban and Perinne Gilberte; married October 6, 1675, at Trois-Rivières, P. Q.; died in France.

The Lottinville family was founded in Canada when François Lemaistre-Lamorille and Judith Rigaud were married at Trois-Rivières on May 6, 1654.² Although it may not have been the first marriage performed at Trois-Rivières, it was the first one officially recorded in that town.³ Established as a permanent settlement in 1634, Trois-Rivières by 1654 was the principal trading post in New France and had a population of thirty-eight households numbering about one hundred and fifty people. In 1653 the total white population in the French colony was little more than 2,000, the majority of the inhabitants living in the towns of Quebec, Montreal and Trois-Rivières. The members of the Lottinville family, consequently, can take justifiable pride in the fact that they descend from one of the early families which willingly endured the severe hardships of pioneer life, and which contributed in no small way to the development of the Dominion of Canada.

Little is known of François and Judith previous to their marriage.⁴ According to Sulte, François and his younger brother Antoine arrived at Trois-Rivières in 1653. The names of their father and mother and the city or town from which they emigrated is nowhere mentioned. It is certain, however, that they originated from Picardy, a province in northern France. François, born in 1631, was a master tailor and a soldier at the fort. Since Antoine's age is given as thirty-five years in the census of 1666, he must have been born in 1635 or 1636. He seems to have been a farmer.

Judith was the daughter of Élie Rigaud who lived at Saint-Jean-d'Angély, in the province of Saintonge. In the census of 1667, she gave her age as thirty-four years which would place the date of her birth about 1633. Berneval is of the opinion, judging from her father's forename and her own, that she was of Huguenot origin.⁵ If this be true, either her father returned to the faith, or she herself became converted because she married as a Catholic. The same author fixes the probable year of her arrival at Trois-Rivières in 1652, but Désilets, who offers more details concerning Judith before her marriage, states that she came in 1649.⁶ For five years preceding her marriage, she was a maid to Marguerite Legardeur, dame de la Potherie, whose husband was the governor of Trois-Rivières. During this time she spent nineteen months in Montreal recuperating from an illness at the home of Nicolas d'Ailleboust, sieur de Coulonges-la-Madelaine. Désilets then adds the interesting comment: "Elle a tout sacrifié pour ses toilettes, dès 1653-1654, date où des créanciers ont commencé à la poursuivre."⁷

From 1654 to 1664, the names of François Lemaistre and Judith Rigaud do not appear frequently in the records of Trois-Rivières. On October 23, 1655, they purchased a house and lot from Jean Pacaut and Jacques Brisset for 300 livres, nine pieces of pine, an oven and a kneading-trough.⁸ The lot consisted of twenty toises square and was bounded on the southeast by St.-Pierre Street, on the southwest by the home of Élie Grimard, on the northwest by the lands of Monsieur Godefroy, and on the north by the home of the deceased Sieur de Normanville. The land had been originally ceded by Governor d'Ailleboust to Mathurin Baillargeon and Claude Houssart in 1650. Two years later, they sold it, together with the house they had erected, to Dame Duplessis-Kerbodot, wife of the deceased governor of Trois-Rivières, who in turn sold it to Pacaut and Brisset.

In listing the witnesses present at the drawing up of the marriage contract on December 2, 1654, between Maurice Poulin, sieur de la Fontaine, public prosecutor, and Jeanne Jallut, Sulte remarks that there were at least twenty-five prominent signatures. Among the few he mentions are François Lemaistre, dit le Picard and Judith Rigaud. Her handwriting is superb and seems to have fascinated this historian.⁹ On January 22, 1664, François was a witness at the marriage of

Judith Rigaud

Adrien Jolliet, sieur de la Chausenaye, and Jeanne Dodier de la Fleuvière.¹⁰ Adrien was the brother of Louis Jolliet who discovered the Mississippi nine years later.

In 1661, Governor d'Argenson appointed Jacques Le Neuf, sieur de la Potherie, Michel Le Neuf, sieur du Hérisson, Pierre Lefebvre and François Lemaistre as trustees of the proposed village church.¹¹ They were given the sum of 1,473 livres, at 18 per cent annual interest, with which to maintain a liquor store. As part of the convention also, they were to have a complete monopoly of the liquor business in Trois-Rivières, and were to return the money and interest whenever required to do so. In 1664, shortly before the death of François, the governor-general and the bishop asked for the return of the money and ordered the church to be constructed. This was the first parish church of Trois-Rivières.

The time and manner of the death of François is not quite clear. His act of burial reads as follows: "Anno Domino 1664, 14 januarii sepultus est in coemeterio hujus Ecclesiae, Franciscus Lemaître in communione matris ecclesiae, annos natus circiter 35. Miserabiliter trucidatus est sine ulla voce interiit."¹² Most probably the year 1665 or 1666 would be more correct since he was a witness at the marriage of Adrien Jolliet on January 22, 1664 and since he was mentioned as a trustee of the village church on April 25th of the same year. Not to be overlooked also is the fact that a daughter, Marguerite, was baptized January 16, 1664, and that the last child, Charles, was born about 1665. Judging from the words "miserabiliter trucidatus est," it would seem that he was killed in line of duty by the Iroquois Indians who were a constant menace to the early colonists.

On January 26, 1667, Judith married Jean Terrien-Duhemme at Trois-Rivières.¹³ He was a colonist who had lately arrived from Dieppe, in Normandy. The census of 1667 gives the following facts concerning the newly established household: "Jean Terrien, 23; Judicq Rigault (veuve de François Lemaistre), 34; Pierre Lemaistre, 12; François, 10; Marie, 9; Jean, 6; Marguerite, 3; Charles, 2; domestiques: Pierre Bourgeois, 20; Louis, 24; 5 bestiaux, 30 arpents en valeur."¹⁴

The year following her second marriage, Judith appeared as plaintiff before the Sovereign Council to request that she be given six years more to pay two of her particularly insistent creditors.¹⁵ Shortly before the death of François, she had travelled to France and had made numerous purchases amounting to 1,000 livres from a merchant of La Rochelle by the name of Arnault Perré. When she returned home, her husband had died and left so many of his own debts that she was now barely able to keep her children in the necessities of life. The other creditor was Jean Maheust whose wife had sold her a mourning dress for 55 livres and 5 sols, of which 37 livres and 5 sols remained to be paid.

The solicitors for the defendants maintained before the Council that Judith's plea of poverty was not justified by the facts. She had in her possession a sumptuous wardrobe and a bed valued at 500 livres. She had, moreover, traded various articles of merchandise with the Indians for peltries which she was carefully concealing from her creditors. In a compromise decision, the Council granted Judith a delay of three years, during which she was forbidden to sell either lands and houses, or the two oxen used in the cultivation of those lands, without the knowledge and consent of the creditors. They could, however, for a period of three months, attempt the seizure of furs, furniture and merchandise, with the exception of those articles reserved by ordinance of the king.

Judith had eight children by François Lemaistre and three children by Jean Terrien. The Lottinviles descend from Pierre, the eldest son. François and his descendents continued to use the name Lemaistre-Lamorille, or simply Lemaistre. Jean and his descendents were known either as Lemaistre de Longée or Lemaistre-Lalongée. Charles, a famous canoe builder, and his descendents changed the name to Lemaistre-Auger, Lemaistre-Bellenoix, and Lemaistre-Beaunoyers.¹⁶ Marie-Louise married Jacques Passard, sieur de la Bretonnière, who came to Canada as a soldier in Carignan's regiment.¹⁷ They lived at Rivière-du-Loup where he was commandant of the militia. Marguerite married Christophe Gerbault, sieur de Bellegarde, who also resided at Rivière-du-Loup. Louis-Michel,¹⁸ the last child born of Judith, is mentioned in the *Jesuit Relations*¹⁹ as having been miraculously cured of a fever by a relic of Father François Régis, now a canonized saint.

Left a widow for the second time, Judith married Jean de la Planche October 6, 1675, at Trois-Rivières.²⁰ He was born at La Flèche, province of Anjou, France, the son of Urban de la Planche and Perinne Gilberte. Like his father, Jean was a surgeon, the first one to practice in the vicinity of Rivière-du-Loup. Just when he came to Canada is not known, but he is mentioned at Trois-Rivières as early as 1670. Both Jean and Judith had been living at Rivière-du-Loup for some time before their marriage.

The marriage contract between Jean and Judith was drawn up and signed January 21, 1676.²¹ Its provisions were somewhat unusual. Neither was to be held responsible for debts incurred by the other before marriage, and, contrary to custom, there was to be no common ownership of property. Both parties agreed to provide for the proper upbringing of Judith's children until they married or reached the age of twenty-five years. As long as the children were not married, they were expected to work for the parents without remuneration and were forbidden to make any purchase or loan without the consent of either parent. Any inheritance which Jean might receive from France would be possessed jointly by him and Judith, and upon the death of one, the entire estate would devolve upon the other. Finally, Judith's children were to inherit the property of the parents, provided there were no children born of the present marriage, in which case the latter would not only receive the father's patrimony, but also share in the remainder of the estate with Judith's children.

On the same day, in order to avoid court expenses and promote "peace and amity" in the family, Judith and Jacques Passard, her son-in-law, came to a voluntary agreement concerning two habitations which she had bought from him for 255 livres four years previously.²² These were located in Rivière-du-Loup, each consisting of three acres of frontage along the river, with Didier Villefroy and Louis Majault as neighbors on either side. Unable to pay principal or interest, Judith renounced all claims to the land, buildings and improvements made thereon. The property thus reverted to Jacques Passard.

In the year 1678, Judith, Jacques Passard, Pierre Cavelier, and the bailiff Gosset were involved in a lengthy lawsuit with Father Jean Cavelier, brother of the explorer, Robert Cavelier, sieur de la Salle.²³ Pierre Cavelier was a settler from Lachine, near Montreal, and although he bore the same family name, he was not related to Jean or Robert Cavelier. The litigation is of especial interest because it provides the first intimation that by June of 1678, Judith and Jean de la Planche had apparently separated. He had returned to France and she was now living with Pierre Cavelier.

Father Cavelier had secured from the lower court of Montreal an order to seize twelve bushels and a half of corn, valued at 100 sols each, from Jacques Passard, and the house and property of Pierre Cavelier. An appeal was made to the Sovereign Council in Quebec. Here the case became more complicated as Gosset, solicitor for Pierre Cavelier, was accused of maliciously circulating slanderous remarks about Father Cavelier. In the final outcome, Jacques Passard was required to deliver the corn to Father Cavelier, and Judith, who had represented her son-in-law, was condemned by the Council to pay the expenses of the trial and 100 sols in reparation. Pierre Cavelier was likewise compelled to pay Father Cavelier the sum of 1,100 livres, and in addition was fined 10 livres as the loser in the appeal. Having been convicted of calumny, Gosset was called upon to apologize to Father Cavelier before the Council and was fined 30 livres, payable half to the king and half to the Hôtel-Dieu. It is impossible to say at this time and distance whether the decision of the Council was just, but it should be noted that whatever virtues Father Cavelier might have possessed, honesty was definitely not one of them.²⁴

After her husband's departure for France, it seems that Judith deviated from the social and religious pattern of Montreal. On April 8, 1679, she was formally charged with leading a scandalous life, particularly with Pierre Cavelier.²⁵ Ten letters and notes "of disgraceful content" which they had written to each other were produced in support of the accusation. She was found guilty by the court which pronounced sentence upon her six days later.²⁶

Effective April 14, 1679, Judith was banished from the district of Montreal for ten consecutive years, and if she returned before the expiration of this term she would be whipped, branded with the fleur-de-lis, and fined 300 livres. Pierre was forbidden either to write or visit Judith under penalty of jail, a fine of 1,000 livres, and possibly of corporal punishment. Furthermore, any inhabitant of whatever quality or condition who had dealings of any kind with Judith was liable to a fine of 100 livres for the first offense, and a still greater amount for subsequent offenses. The sentence was ordered to be posted in large characters on the main door of the parish churches of Montreal, Lachine and Pointe-aux-Trembles.

Nothing is known of Judith after her banishment. She had the choice of moving either to Quebec or to Trois-Rivières, and most probably she spent the rest of her life at Trois-Rivières, her original home. She died after 1684, as Sulte mentions that on June 9th of that year Jean Le Chasseur deeded some lands to her, her sons Pierre and François, and to Joseph Petit de Bruno, brother-in-law of Pierre.²⁷ Judith was indeed a victim of human frailty, but judging from the activities of her life as a whole, she was undoubtedly a woman of outstanding personality, and in the words of Désilets, "à tout prendre cette personne a su élever une belle famille."²⁸

¹⁷ Carignan's regiment, consisting of some 1,000 officers and men, was the first group of trained soldiers to arrive in Canada.

¹⁸ The following is the baptismal record of Louis-Michel, obtained from the Institut généalogique Drouin, Montréal: "L'an de grace mil six cent septante et un, le cinquième d'avril, moy Frère Hilarion Guérin, prestre Recollet, faisant les fonctions de curé aux Trois-Rivières, ay supplée les cérémonies du baptême a un enfant illégitime qui avait esté baptisé par moy le dix neufviesme de mars au logis a raison qu'il ne put estre transporté à l'église pour estre malade. Le pere s'appelle Jean Duhème et la mère Judith Rigaud. Le parrain a esté Mr. Louis Michel Godefroy dit de Normanville la marraine Perine Piquoté, et l'enfant a esté nommé Louis Michel." Louis-

Michel was not an illegitimate child if Jean Terrien and Jean Duhemme were two names by which Judith's second husband was known. In volume one of the Dictionnaire, Tanguay apparently lists them as two persons, but in volume three he mentions Louis-Michel along with Jean and Dominique as the three sons of Jean Terrien-Duhemme and Judith.

 11. Marie-Anne, baptized April 17, 1708.

The name Lothainville, which made its appearance in the second generation of the family, was originally the name of a fief in Canada, situated in the parish of Ange-Gardien, seigniory of Beaupré.⁴ This fief consisted of a piece of land three and three-fourth miles in length and twenty-eight acres in width, bounded on the east by the Petit-Pré River. Half of it had first been granted to the Ursulines and Hospitallers in 1650 by Olivier Le Tardif, agent for a group of nobles who had obtained the vast domain of Beaupré from the Company of New France. About two years later, the Sisters renounced all claims to the property, and Governor François de Lauzon, who, as the new agent for the Company, had perhaps suggested the retrocession, promptly ceded to his son Jean, the high seneschal of New France, the fourteen acres of frontage formerly held by the Sisters and an additional fourteen acres of frontage not previously granted. It was probably at this time, in 1652, that the concession became known as the arrière-fief de Lothainville, so named in honor of the governor's wife, Isabelle Lottin, who was the daughter of the Lord de Charny and who in Paris enjoyed a reputation for charitable works.⁵

After the death of Jean de Lauzon, his wife, Anne Desprès, requested that the fief be sold so that she might obtain the money guaranteed by her marriage contract. The Sovereign Council granted her petition and ordered the fief to be sold at auction August 23, 1664. The highest bid, 2,850 livres, was offered by Bertrand Chesnaye de la Garenne, who after giving the customary foi et hommages, became the sieur de Lothainville. He remained the proprietor of the fief until his death in 1683, and seven years later, April 5, 1690, it was ceded by his heirs to Charles Aubert de la Chesnaye who then sold it to Bishop Laval for 3,000 livres.

Bertrand Chesnaye de la Garenne was a merchant residing in the lower section of the city of Quebec. Although he was a sieur, he was not a nobleman, but was usually referred to as honorable homme, a title which denoted gentility or respectability. The fact that he received rents and dues from eight tenants on his fief in addition to profits from his business, and that at one time he kept as many as nine domestics, does not indicate he was a man of means, as he seems from numerous court records to have been insolvent the greater part of his life. On August 7, 1656, he married Marie-Madeleine Bélanger, by whom he had seven children. A year after her death, in 1671, he married the daughter of the royal notary, Élisabeth Aubert, who also bore him seven children.

Just three weeks after the death of her husband, January 14, 1683, the widow Chesnaye married Jean-

Baptiste-Louis Franquelin, cartographer and first royal hydrographer in Canada. It was in this same year that the young map maker attained prominence with his Plan géométrique de la basse ville de Québec and accompanying explanatory Memoire. In a letter to Seignelay, secretary of state, Governor de la Barre said this of Franquelin: "Le garçon qui fait ces cartes est un nommé Franquelin aussi habile de la main qu'il en ait en France, mais il est extrêmement pauvre et qui aurait besoin d'un peu de secours de la part de Sa Majesté comme un ingénieur. Il travaille à une carte très juste du pays que je vous enverrai l'année prochaine en son nom, pendant que je le ferai subsister par quelques petits secours."⁶ The Marquis de Denonville, successor to Monsieur de la Barre, likewise suggested Franquelin be employed in His Majesty's service in these words: "Je croirais encore, Monseigneur, qu'il serait d'une utilité fort grande au service du Roi d'avoir ici un maître pour montrer les premiers principes de la navigation. Je crois que l'on trouverait ici de bons sujets. Il y a ici un homme très capable d'enseigner nommé Franquelin, qui fait des cartes ici. Il sait bien de bonnes choses. Il serait très utile que vous eussiez la bonté de lui faire donner quelque subsistance. Il enseignerait à écrire, à dessiner, la navigation et l'arithmétique. Nos Canadiens ont assez de dispositions à être bons pilotes, en leur donnant le moyen d'apprendre."⁷ Seignelay acted upon the advice of the governors and in 1687 appointed Franquelin royal hydrographer with a salary of 400 livres a year. In 1688, and again in 1692, Franquelin went to France on official business at the request of Frontenac.

Always in straitened circumstances, his plight gradually became worse. Left with eight children and numerous debts by her first husband, Élisabeth Aubert added considerably to his financial difficulties. Franquelin himself had five children by her. Presumably to escape from his creditors, he returned to France in 1695 where he seems to have found employment as a draftsman under the Marquis de Vauban, famous military engineer. Several months later, Madame Franquelin and part of her family set out for France to join her husband on the Carosse! which perished at sea. Twenty of Franquelin's maps have been preserved.

Marie-Anne, daughter of Bertrand Chesnaye de la Garenne and Marie-Madeleine Bélanger, married Pierre Lemaistre of whom not much is known.⁸ He was a merchant residing at Trois-Rivières. On May 28, 1688, the Superior Council granted him a piece of land adjoining property previously purchased from Madame Seigneuret, the homes of Severin Ameau, the notary, of Joseph Petit de Bruno, brother-in-law of Marie-Anne Chesnaye, and the garden of the Jesuits.⁹ It was stipulated that he erect a house and other buildings within a year and that he pay His Majesty 2 sols and 6 deniers de cens according to the Custom of Paris. A year later Louis XIV confirmed the grant.¹⁰

A document of unusual interest consists of testimony as to the miraculous intercession of Frère Didace given by Pierre Lemaistre on September 17, 1704 before Frère Joseph Denis, provincial of the Récollets, Father Luc Filiastre, president of the Seminary of Quebec, and Fathers Dominique de la Marche, Daniel Dumoulin, and Ambroise Pélerin.¹¹ Frère Didace, known in the world as Charles Pelletier, was a Récollet who had achieved a reputation for sanctity and a remarkable power of intercession. After his death, depositions were taken by direction of Bishop St. Vallier with a view to his possible canonization.

It seems that one day, after Pierre and four domestics had cut hay on a farm about eight or ten miles from Trois-Rivières, there suddenly arose a terrific storm which apparently was about to destroy his crop. Promising a mass, he asked the intercession of Frère Didace. As the storm approached the vicinity of the newly mown hay, it divided and passed over without wetting a single blade. He thanked the servant of God, loaded the boats and proceeded to return home. A strong wind from the northwest forced the boat to head across the river and once more he was on the verge of losing his hay. He invoked Frère Didace a second time and immediately the wind changed in its direction and brought his boats safely to Trois-Rivières. On July 13, 1717, at the request of Bishop St. Vallier, Marie-Anne Chesnaye testified as to the veracity of the facts related by her husband.¹²

It is difficult to ascertain just when Lothainville appeared as a family name. After Bertrand became the sieur de Lothainville, he continued apparently to use Chesnaye de la Garenne, or simply Chesnaye, in legal matters. In his discussion of the Lemaistre family, François Desaulniers asserts that Pierre Lemaistre substituted the name Lothainville for that of Lamorille.¹³ Although an examination of contemporary documents does not reveal such a signature as Lemaistre de Lothainville, it is possible that after the death of his father-in-law, Pierre came gradually to be known by this form of the name. At any rate, according to Benjamin Sulte, the widow Lemaistre sometimes signed her name as Lothainville, as did also some of her children.¹⁴ The name was variously spelled Lothinville, Lottainville, Lotinville, Notinville and finally Lottinville.

On November 17, 1720, the contract of marriage between Louis Godefroy, écuyer, sieur de Normanville and eldest son of Joseph Godefroy, écuyer, sieur de Vieuxpont and Marguerite, eldest daughter of the widow Lemaistre, was drawn up at the latter's home. The contract provided for community of property, each, however, paying his or her debts previously incurred. He settled 1,000 francs on his future wife, and she brought as her dowry a house and lot situated in Trois-Rivières. The following relatives and friends were invited to act as witnesses: "de la part de Normanville, Joseph Godefroy, écuyer, sieur de Vieuxpont, officier des troupes et dame Françoise Véron, son épouse; le sieur Jean-Baptiste Godefroy, écuyer, et dame Jeanne Véron, son épouse; demoiselle Charlotte Godefroy, épouse du sieur Longval; demoiselle Josephite Charlotte Godefroy, frères et soeurs du marié; le sieur Jean-Amador Godefroy, écuyer, sieur de Saint-Paul, oncle du marié; demoiselle Renée Godefroy, veuve de Pierre Le Boulanger, sieur de Saint-Pierre, tante du marié; le sieur Jean-Baptiste Poulin, sieur de Courval, conseiller du roi et son procureur en la juridiction des Trois-Rivières, avec dame Madeleine Forestier, son épouse, étant oncle du marié au côté maternal; messire Jacques L'Hermite, écuyer, chevalier de l'ordre militaire de Saint-Louis, lieutenant du roi en *cette ville et gouverneur, avec dame Marie Chevalier, son épouse; le sieur Jacques Hertel, écuyer, sieur de Cournoyer, lieutenant dans les troupes; avec dame Marguerite Godefroy, son épouse; demoiselle Geneviève Godefroy, veuve d'Augustin Galimard, écuyer, sieur de Champlain; le père Hyacinthe Pellefresne, supérieur des Récollets de cette ville, y faisant fonctions curiales; le sieur Jean-Baptiste Jutras; dame Marie Jutras, veuve du sieur Michel Poulin, oncle du marié; demoiselle Charlotte et demoiselle Marguerite Le Boulanger, cousines germaines du marié. De la part de la mariée: le sieur Louis Lemaître avec Claire Duguay, son épouse; les demoiselles Madeleine, Louise, et Charlotte Lemaître, frère et soeurs de la marié."*¹⁵ The Godefroy and Hertel families, of Canadian nobility, and the L'Hermitte and Galimard families, of French nobility, had royal permission to use the title, écuyer, at that time reserved to governors and nobles.

Four members of the family became sisters of the Congregation de Notre Dame between the years 1687 and 1734.¹⁶ Nothing is known of Marie-Exupère Lemaître, in religion, Soeur Saint-Félix, beyond the fact that she died in 1731, at Montreal, in her twenty-ninth year. Madeleine Chesnaye de la Garenne, aunt of Soeur Saint-Félix, entered the novitiate in 1687, when the statutes of the community were still unapproved, and made profession in the lifetime of the Venerable Foundress, Marguerite Bourgeois. She was the first to bear the name Soeur Saint-Anne in compliance with the request of Monsieur Le Ber, a benefactor of the congregation. From 1717 to 1723 she was superior at Boucherville. She died August 20, 1760, at the age of eighty-five years, of which sixty-three had been spent as a religious.

Françoise and Marie-Anne-Charlotte were the daughters of François Berey des Essarts and Marie-Anne Lemaistre.¹⁷ Françoise entered the novitiate in 1728 and made profession two years later, taking the name of Soeur Saint-François-de-Sales. The last twenty-five years of her life were spent at the mother house in Montreal where she served as infirmarian, director of the school, and finally as mistress of novices. She died May 5, 1802, after having devoted almost seventy-five years to the religious life. Her sister, in religion, Soeur Sainte-Radegonde, entered the novitiate in 1734. She was superior at Pointe-aux-Trembles from 1779 to 1788, and at the mother house from 1789 to 1800. She died September 30, 1801, at the age of eighty-five years.

Claude-Charles, the only son of François Berey des Essarts and Marie-Anne Lemaistre, was born June 10, 1720. He entered the Récollet order and was ordained about 1743, taking the name Félix, the religious name of his deceased cousin, Marie-Exupère Lemaistre. Père Berey, as he was generally called, did parish work at Beauport, Saint-François-du-Lac, Chambly, and at Saint-Eustache. He was an army chaplain for a time and was wounded while administering to the dying during the American Revolutionary War. In 1796, he became provincial commissaire and last superior of the Récollets in Canada. He died in Quebec May 18, 1800, at the age of eighty, and was buried at the cathedral in the chapel of Notre-Dame-de-Pitié.¹⁸ learning, a fine conversationalist who excelled in witticisms and clever repartee. Referring to his influence as superior of the Récollets, De Bellefeuille wrote: "En cette qualité, et aussi par ses talents, sa naissance et son mérite personnel, il a joui auprès des autorités du temps, d'une considération qu'augmentaient encore son esprit vif et pétillant, sa conversation enjouée, et ses bons mots dont quelques uns sont venus jusqu'à nous."¹⁹ His relations with high English officials were most friendly, in fact, too friendly according to some critics of his time. Aside from receiving 500 livres annually from the government, he kept a separate suite of rooms in the monastery where he entertained army officers, governors, and upon occasion even the Duke of Kent. He in turn was very often seen at the Castle of St. Lewis, "not only at the governor's public levees, but in his private parties, the said commissary being one of his Excellency's creatures and favorites."²⁰ By maintaining cordial relations with the English government, Père Berey, in the opinion of De Bellefeuille, was most probably seeking to better the position of the Canadian church and to preserve his own community from impending dissolution.

Père Berey was a man of unusual talent and wide

dispense des deux autres bans; donné aux Trois-Rivières, en date du vingt et un du présent mois, et ne s'étant découvert aucun empêchement ni opposition quelconques à ce dit mariage. Nous prêtre soussigné avons reçu des parties leur mutuel consentement et leur avons donné la bénédiction nuptiale selon le rite accoutumé de Notre Mère la Sainte Eglise Catholique et Romaine et ce du consentement des parens respectifs et en présence de Maxime Picotte soussigné témoin du côté de l'époux: de Joseph Coulombe témoin du côté de l'épouse et de plusieurs parens et amis, dont les uns ainsi que l'époux, ont signé avec nous et les autres ainsi que l'épouse ont déclaré ne savoir signer de ce enquis etc., (signé) Joseph Lemaitre Lottinville, A. Picotte, Maxime Picotte, Antoine Lemaître Lottinville, Marguerite Lottinville, Delaunay, ptre."

Anthony Lottinville immigrated from Louiseville, P. Q., to Illinois in August, 1852. Besides his wife, he was accompanied by seven children, all boys, Joseph, Charles, Thomas, August, Samuel, Anthony and Henry. Marie-Euphémie was left in the care of Marie-Adéline who had married two years before. Anthony obtained passage for his family on the steamer Atlantic which collided with the propeller Ogdensburg on Lake Erie during the night of August 20, 1852, near Long Point. Some three hundred persons were lost, the majority of them being French and Norwegian immigrants. Anthony, however, succeeded in saving all members of his family. The sinking of the Atlantic was considered a major disaster of the time and many newspapers in editorials indignantly demanded that Congress enact more stringent laws regulating passenger vessels. Arriving in Illinois, Anthony came first to Bourbonnais, a French-Canadian town founded by Noel Levasseur, who gave him financial assistance. About a year later, in 1853, he purchased from Rev. Charles Chiniquy half a section of land, three miles south of St. Anne, and one mile north of the present town of Papineau. Half of the land is still held by the family, Edward Lottinville being its present owner.

A letter written over eighty years ago by Anthony Lottinville to his daughter, Madame Marie-Adéline Bellemare, is here reproduced. It is now in the possession of Mrs. Anna Reno Ponton of Papineau, Ill. Those acquainted with the activities of the Rev. Charles Chiniquy will find it of particular interest, because it contains a sermon by the former priest in which he urges his congregation to join the Presbyterian Church.

Très Chère Fille

J'ai reçu ta lettre datee du 11 Janvier avec une grande joie, J'ai prevenu a ta demande en t'accordant ma paternelle bénédiction au temps consacré par l'usage avec tous les souhaits qu'un tendre père peut faire a une fille chérie vivant éloigne de lui; Oh oui; s'il m'était donné de te voir je m'estimerais le plus favorisé des pères. j'aime a croire que mon espérance ne seras pas vaine, et qu'au plutot qu'il me seras possible je pourrai revoir ma chère fille mes amis ma patrie, Je suis heureux d'apprendre que tu est en bonne santé, tes chers petits enfants et ton époux a qui je souhaite bonheur et prosperite, J'ai été malade depuis la mie Decembre, c'est ce qui m'a empeché de te repondre plutot, j'attendais toujours d'être mieux pour te donner de mes nouvelles, je suis a present passablement bien ainsi que ta mère et le reste de la famille, . . . et Honoré vont a l'école Anglaise depuis le jour de l'an et apprennent bien Thomas demeure encore a l'Erable chez le docteur Gauthier il va revenir bientôt il est avec de bonnes gens et sait se faire aimer il a gagne beaucoup d'argent Erable est une paroisse situe a environ dix milles de Sainte Anne et qui commença a s'établir aussi en même temps, Nous n'avons pas vu le nommé Auger que tu mentionne sur ta lettre Madame Marcotte n'est pas venue par ici depuis qu'elle a été en Canada et je ne l'ai pas rencontré mais nous avons eues toutes les nouvelles Tante Lisette est la ménagère du grand Vicaire Mailloux aujourd'hui curé de Bourbonnais, elle est maigre comme une prune sèche, Nous n'avons pas vu l'oncle Honoré Picotte depuis le mois de mai dernier mais il nous a fait dire qu'il viendrait dans le mois de mars

Chiniquy cherche toujours par tous les moyens possibles a se faire des adhérents, pour te faire rire et te faire voir comment Chiniquy joue avec ces pauvres ignorants de Sainte Anne je traduis un de ses discours que je trouve sur la gazette de Kankakee City, journal americain, Voici—Mes chers frères, j'ai une grande nouvelle à vous annoncer aujourd'hui, je me suis joins a l'Eglise Presbitérienne et je veux que vous la joignez tous aussi, c'est l'Eglise la plus riche de l'union

Americaine elle a un capitale audessus de $500,000 dans les trèsons l'intérêt duquel est pour supporter des nouvelles congrégations, il y en a parmi vous qui demanderont une semaine pour réflexion, mais c'est inutile vous ne pouvez pas toute apprendre dans une semaine, et alors vous ne connaîtrez pas plus la religion que vous la connaissez a present, ne remettez pas l'adoption de cette dénomination C'est la meilleure religion qui existe, Prenez ma parole et joignez la immédiatement, Pourquoi ne prendriez-vous pas ma parole, Pierre ne prit-il pas la parole de Jésus-Christ, lorsqu'il lui ordonna de laisser sa femme ses enfans et sa barque, etc., etc. Ne me refusez pas cette faveur, car toutes les Eglises que j'ai visités ne m'ont pas données plus de quatre piastres chacunes L'Eglise Presbitérienne nous a donné quatre vingt dix piastres Un gentilhomme Presbitérien seul m'a promis 15,000 piastres exprès pour bâtir un beau college de pierre dans notre village Vous avez très besoin de vous joindre a une Eglise Riche pour avoir de l'assistance a defendre le terrible procès qui va être commencè contre vous pour vous chasser de votre Eglise. Outre ceci J'ai la promesse de plusieurs Milles piastres pour racheter vos terres des mains de vos pressants créditeurs. Ne me laissez pas dans la confusion vous savez que je ne vous ai jamais trompè et par dessus tout ne laissez pas échapper cet argent, Essayez la religion Presbitérienne pour un an et si vous en êtes pas satisfait alors nous nous joindrons a une autre. A present que tous ceux qui veulent se joindre a l'Eglise Presbiterienne se levent. Environ deux tiers de la congregation de chiniqui se leverent et le reste je suis informé veulent joindre les Evangelistes ou les Baptistes, ceci donne la valeur de Chiniqui et de ceux qui veulent le suivre Any-how.

Quand tu ecriras dis moi comment a été la temperature en Canada cet hiver quant a la notre elle a été des plus charmantes quelques semaines de neige et de froid pour le sled-ride, et ensuite un soleil d'été pour nous faire souvenir que nous touchons presque au printemps Je termine en vous saluant tous vieux et jeunes bien cordialement.

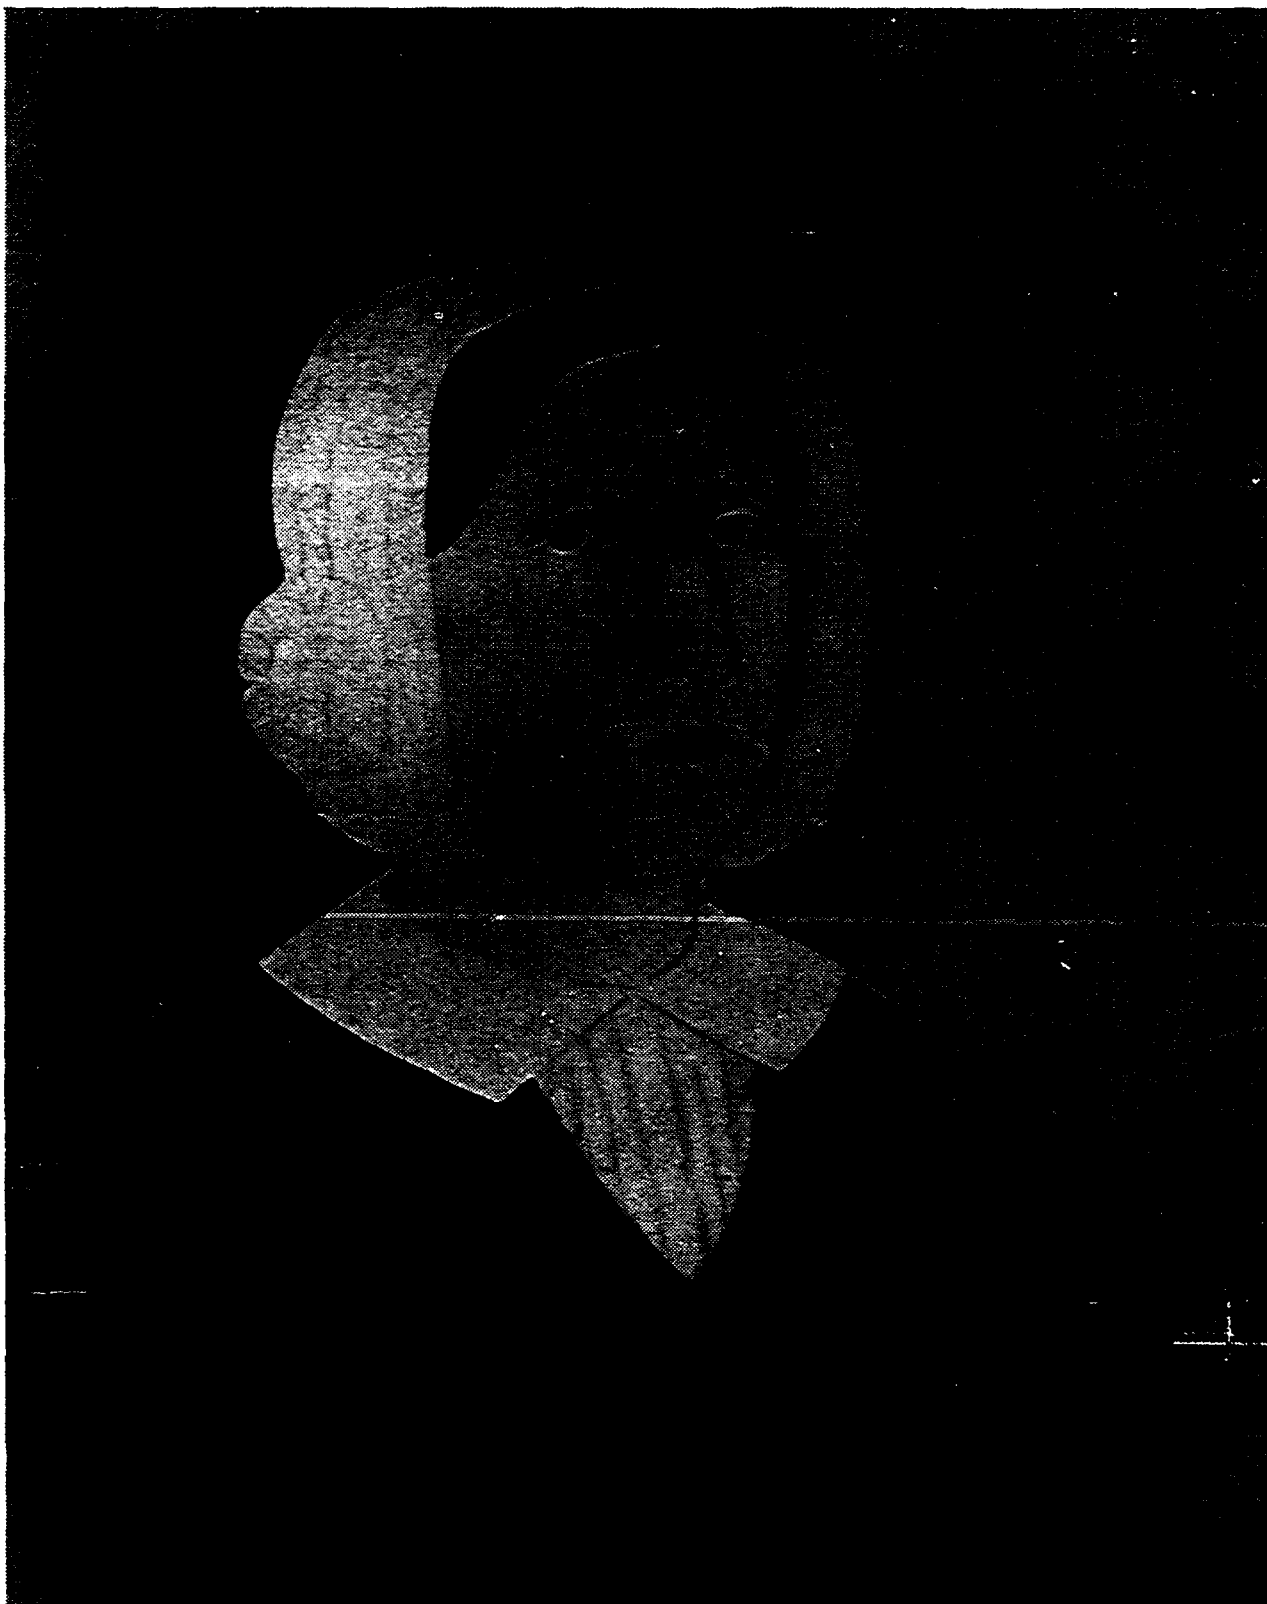

Ton tendre père

ANTOINE L. LOTTINVILLE.

A local county history is the source of the following biographical sketch: "One of the first, as well as one of the most influential, of these Canadian immigrants was Anthony Lottinville. With his family, consisting of wife and seven small children, he took passage on the ill-fated steamer Atlantic, for Detroit, in the summer of 1851. He had sold his farm there, and had with him his all, except some that was coming from deferred payments on his land, which fortunately he was not able to realize on. The steamer had some 600 passengers on board, and in the night, while all were in bed and nearly all asleep, a terrible collision occurred, and in twenty minutes the steamer went down, carrying all but 120 of her passengers. The scene during that twenty minutes of agony can never be described. The shrieks, the prayers, the moanings, and the hurrying to and fro of those hoping to escape impending death, can be faintly imagined. Women and children were partially saved by the ropes in the hands of strong men who stood upon the propeller which at once came to the rescue, only to drop into the water before they could reach the deck. In the panic and fright, unaccountably to himself, Mr. Lottinville succeeded in rescuing all his family, and in the thankfulness of his heart hardly mourned the loss of all his earthly possessions. He came forward to Bourbonnais, where the open aid of Noel Lavasseur, and his ever-ready purse, aided the rescued family in a strange land to get a comfortable start. It is said to have been only characteristic of the old pioneer, whose recent death has called forth many expressions of remembrance of kindly acts on the part of the old man toward those in need. Mr. Lottinville came soon after to section 22, range 12, on the creek, where he took up half a section of land and built a frame house, the lumber for which he hauled from Chicago, fording streams swollen by the continual rains of that season. He hired forty acres broken, then with all his family 'took the ague'—a regular standby with new settlers in those days—which shook them for a year. This was one of the rainy seasons, which pioneers recollect as occurring regularly each seventh year. For several years after Mr. Lottinville came here wheat was a good crop, and the demand for it was good from those then coming into the country. The acorns in the woods served the hogs well, and hogs always brought cash once a year, so that farming prospects were good, but there was no school for ten years. His children had had but slight opportunities, the older

ones in schools in Canada, and that only in French-speaking ones. Here they never got a day's schooling except in the rough school of pioneer drudgery. That the five sons, who are known throughout the county as the Lottinville boys, are everywhere recognized as among the best educated and most correct business men in this portion of the country is due alone to their native strength of character and versatile tact. They have for years been entrusted with the official business of the township, and, as will be seen by the record, of the village, and have been continually the business men of the place; and in conversation show a breadth of acquaintance with general history and affairs of the country which marks them as educated men. The aged parents died about 1866. They had been the parents of sixteen children, several of whom, however, died during their childhood. Three of the brothers married sisters, two of whom have already presented twins to doting fathers. The value to a new country of such a family, as settlers, is difficult to estimate with the data at hand." Beckwith, H. W. History of Iroquois County. Chicago, H. H. ² "Thomas Lottinville, merchant, Papineau, son of Antoine Lottinville, was born at Rivière-du-Loup, Canada, March 20, 1840. He lived there until 1851, when with his parents he removed to Papineau, Iroquois County, Illinois. His first year in Illinois was spent clerking in Bourbonnais and St. Anne. After that he engaged in farming with his father, and so continued till 1862. He then married Miss Delima Savoie, who was born July 31, 1842, and was a native of Canada. February 10, 1865, he volunteered his services to his country, and became a member of Co. K, 147th Ill. Inf. He served one year, returning home February 10, 1866, and again engaged in farming till 1868, when he sold out and moved to Kankakee City, and returned again in 1869 to Papineau. The village at that time was located (!) and he engaged in the grain business, putting up the first scales and buying the first load of corn bought in the town. In 1873 he engaged in the mercantile business, in which he still remains. He has filled the office of assessor six years, constable seven years, and president of the village four years. On his way from Canada he was shipwrecked on Lake Erie while on board the steamer Atlantic, August 19, 1851, and was rescued from the sinking vessel the last minute before she went down, losing all he had but his night-clothes. He has four children; Flora, Adeline, Mary, Nellie." Beckwith, H. W., History of Iroquois County. Chicago, H. H. Hill and company, 1880. p. 538.

³ "August Lottinville, farmer and stock-raiser, Papineau, was born at Rivière-du-Loup, Canada, where he lived till about the age of ten years. His parents at that time came to Illinois. An incident occurred on their way from Canada which must here be mentioned. August 19, 1851, the steamer Atlantic collided with a schooner on Lake Erie, and the former sank soon after. The family, however, were all rescued the last minute before she went down, losing all they had but their night-clothes. Coming to a new country in his youth, he was deprived of the advantages of education, but a determined will overcomes obstacles of every kind, and he acquired a fair education. September 21, 1861, he volunteered his services to his country, and became a member of Co. K, 4th Ill. Cav. He was engaged in the battles of Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth and many others. August 1, 1862, he was appointed fifth sergeant, and honorably discharged November 3, 1864. April 22, 1866, he married Miss Josephine Paradis, a native of Canada, born March 1, 1847. In 1865 he bought the farm on which he now lives, and engaged in farming and stock-raising, which business he now follows, about half a mile north of the village of Papineau. The farm comprises 160 acres of land, all earned by his own industry and hard labor. He has five children, as follows: Ida, Anna, Cora, Georgiana and Adeline." Ibid., p. 544.

went down. His parents and family were all saved, but lost everything they had except their night clothing. He lived with his parents, engaged in farming, till the time of his father's death in October, 1865. He was then by the county court appointed administrator of his father's estate. He continued in the business of farming and stock raising till 1874, when he removed to Martinton station and engaged in the mercantile business, in which business he is still employed. March 3, 1867, he married Miss Lucy Savoie. She is a native of Canada, and was born September 11, 1843. They have four children living as follows: Frederick E. A., George H. L. C., Nelda Celina and Joseph Ezra. In September, 1862, he enlisted in Company K, 4th Ill. Cav. At the battle of Coffeeville, Tennessee, he was wounded, but remained with his regiment in all its active movements. He has filled the position of township clerk four years, and clerk of Martinton village board three years." Ibid., p. 501.

⁵ "Henry Lottinville, dealer in general merchandise, Papineau, came to Illinois in 1851, being then about two years old. With his parents and their family he was almost lost by shipwreck on Lake Erie, August 19, 1851, while on board the steamer Atlantic, which sunk on that date. He was rescued the last minute before she went down. His early youth was spent in Iroquois County, Illinois, with his parents. He was deprived of the advantages of education, as the country was new when he came to this county; but a determined will secured him a fair education. February 6, 1865, he enlisted in Co. K, 147th Ill. Inf. and served one year. He then engaged in farming for others, but in 1868 bought a farm, and in 1870 engaged in farming and stock-raising, and followed that business about six years. He then sold his farm and engaged in the mercantile business in the village of Papineau, as one of the firm of Lottinville Brothers, in which business he is now engaged. January 6, 1872, he married Miss Georgiana Boule, who is a native of Canada. He has two children: Eugene and Josephine." Ibid., p. 537.
