NOTE

Deacon Edward L. Leete, the compiler of the first Leete Genealogy, when he had brought it near to completion, passed away by death. Dr. Alvan Talcott, the author of several genealogies and a manuscript history of all the early families of Guilford, efficiently supervised the completion and publishing of the volume.

At the request of William Smith Leete, the grandson of Deacon Edward L. Leete, his work has been continued in this second edition. Increased facilities for the procuring of data have made possible many additions to the issue of 1884, the whole has been brought down to date, and arranged as nearly as possible to conform to that of the original volume.

EDITH RAYMOND.

Guilford, Conn., October 29, 1934.

INTRODUCTION

Little was known in this country respecting the antecedents of the Leete family (descendants of William Leete) in America, until the reception here of an interesting volume, entitled "The Family of Leete." This book was printed in London in 1888, "for private circulation," and was generously sent to public libraries in this country by Joseph Leete, Esq., of Eversden, South Norwood Park, S. E. Surrey, England. In 1907 a second edition of this work was published by the same author, and from these volumes we learn that the first of the name was of England, and that there the records of the family reach back to the reign of Edward the Confessor, who lived just before the Norman Conquest.

The earliest documentary evidence is in the Domesday Book of William the Conqueror, which consisted of a report to the King of the status of his subjects throughout the English realm. From this we learn that one Leete had held a certain Manor in Buckinghamshire, called Foxecote. This was subsequently bestowed by the Conqueror upon Dodo, Bishop of Bayeux, his half-brother. This Leete, the Domesday Book relates, had been a Thane of Edward, which high position he must have held, of course, before the death of the Confessor King, January 5, 1066. In the Domesday Book mention is also made of another Manor in Gloucestershire, in Chenemerton, held by another Leete. This manor is described as having three ox-teams, fourteen villeins with six ox-teams, eight serfs, and three mills. In the records of legal proceedings known as the Pedes Finium, the account is found of an action at law during the reign of King John, 1209, in which title to a certain portion of land in Cambridgeshire was confirmed to Gerard Leete and his wife Sema.

Another source of information is the Rotuli Litterarum Clausurum, which contained the enrollment of all mandates, letters and writs of a private nature addressed in the king's name to individuals. From these documents we learn that King John gave at various times commands to his officials respecting the provision in land and in other appurtenances for the benefit of various crusading knights of the Leete family, here called in Norman usage, de Letes, and by the same authority King Henry III. gave various estates into the hands of other members of the family for knightly service as crusaders. There were four members of the family thus favored who were participants in the Third or Fourth Crusade—Peter, Nicholas, Walter and Radmund.

The Charter Rolls of Henry III. contain the record of the title of these same lands, and the Testa de Nevill confirms their possession during the reigns of Henry the Third and Edward the First. In the Rotuli Hundredarum, the report of certain commissioners of Edward the First, is found the following: "And for a certain transgression which Ralph de Mullond committed against our lord King John the same king took from him that manor and gave it to the lord Nicholas de Lettes who lived long and held it for his whole life, and died in the time of Henry the present king."

In the Nonarum Inquisitiones of 1341, by which the ninth lamb, the ninth fleece and the ninth sheaf were to be taken for the two years next to come, Robert, Hugh, Wills and John Lete are mentioned as thus contributing. The Rotulorum Patentium, or public announcements accompanied by the impression of the Great Seal, contain a record of the royal permission granted to Peter, Nicholas and Walter de Lettes by Henry III. to join one of the Crusades to Jerusalem (1217) and safe conduct for various knights, including Nicholas de Lettes, was signed by Henry the Third (1229). In 1303 Richard de Lyte and the Monks of Swaffham held in Toft and Cumberton half a knights fee from the Bishop of Ely. In 1307 Roger de Lyt was ordered to deliver the Castle of Kennefek. The Subsidy Rolls of Cambridgeshire contained a long list of assessments against the Leetes who were land owners in that county; under Henry VIII. John Lette, of Kingston, 6 pounds; Thomas Lete of Hokynton, 3 pounds; John Lete, of Cottenham, 3 pounds; Agnes Lete, 3 pounds; Henry Lete, 2 pounds; Thomas Leete, of Cumberton, 2 pounds; Henry Leete, 4 pounds, ect.; under Elizabeth, Thomas Leete, of Hokynton, 3 pounds.

(1) Thomas Leete, of Hokynton (or Oakington) Cambridgeshire, England, stands at the head of the family as continuously traced to the present time. He was assessed to the subsidy of Cambridgeshire in 1522-3; was buried at Oakington July 9, 1654.

(II) Thomas (2), son of Thomas (1) Leete, was assessed to the subsidy of Cambridgeshire in 1556-7 and 1571-2, and was buried at Oakington February 4, 1582.

(III) Thomas (3), son of Thomas (2) Leete, is named in the Visitation of Huntingtongshire in 1613. He married, June 2, 1574, Maria, dau. of Edward Slade of Rushton, County Northampton. She was buried at Oakington September 25, 1610. He was church warden of Oakington in 1598, and was buried there November 12, 1616. Children: John of Dodington (the elder); John of Islington; Jane, who married Richard Dale and Rebecca who married Thomas Fowler.

(IV) John, eldest child of Thomas (3) and Maria (Slade) Leete, resided at Dodington; married Ann, daughter of Robert Shute, one of the justices of the Kings Bench. Children: William, mentioned below; John of Midlow Grange, Huntingtongshire, baptized May 3, 1575, at Oakington; Ann, who married Robert Ruly and died about December, 1648.

(V) WILLIAM, eldest child of John and Ann (Shute) Leete, was the emigrant to our shores. Nearly a half century later an Isaac Leet came from England and was one of the first settlers of Newark, New Jersey. As the coat-of-arms of both William and Isaac were the same, they were of the same family origin, but Isaac is not mentioned among the descendants of Thomas of Oakington.

William, the emigrant, and later a Colonial Governor of Connecticut, was born in 1612-13 in Dodington. He was bred in the law at Cambridge University, and served for a considerable time as clerk in the Bishop of Ely's Court, at Cambridge. Observing the oppressions and cruelties then practiced on the conscientious and virtuous Puritans, he was led to examine more thoroughly their doctrines and practices, and eventually to become a Puritan himself. He gave up his office and came to America in the company of the Rev. Henry Whitfield, and was one of the signers of the Plantation Covenant on shipboard June 1, 1639. They sailed from England May 20, on the ship "St. John," Captain Russell commanding, and arrived in New Haven between July 10th and 15th. When the Company decided upon Guilford as a place of settlement, he was one of the six selected to purchase the land from the native Indians in trust for the plantation until their organization.

When the lands in the village were surveyed and laid out for individual ownership, he selected for his residence a lot opposite that of William Chittenden, on the corner of what are now Broad and River Streets, a site overlooking the Menunketuck river as it winds its way through meadows reclaimed from the sea, as green then as now, or, when it meets a full tide expanding into a broad lake. His outlying lands (about 250 acres) were located chiefly some three miles away in a southwesterly quarter of the town, and the place was named from him Leete's Island. That which goes by this name is not strictly an Island, but a part of these lands, at first called Horse Island, is surrounded with salt meadows, and of course was once an island. This section of Guilford still retains the name of Leete's Island and the lands have been owned and occupied by Leetes almost exclusively down to the present generation. The following is a fac-simile of Governor Leete's signature:

His seal has been preserved in the family to the present time. It bears a correct representation of the Leete coat-of-arms.

Mr. Leete was called upon to fill many public offices. He was Clerk of the Plantation from 1639 to 1662. He was one of four to whom was entrusted the whole civil power of the plantation, without limitation, until a church was formed, June 19 (June 29 N. S.), 1643. When the church was formed he was selected as one of the seven pillars "for the foundation work." Samuel Desborough and William Leete were chosen to meet the court at New Haven in 1643, when the combination of the jurisdiction of the New Haven Colony was planned and organized, and Guilford, Milford, Stamford and other plantations, hitherto independent colonies, united in one jurisdiction with New Haven, establishing a General Court for the whole jurisdiction, to sit twice a year at New Haven in April and October, and to consist of the Governor, Deputy Governor, and all the magistrates within the jurisdiction, and two deputies for every plantation. Mr. Leete was a deputy from Guilford to this court until 1650, and from 1651 to 1658 was the magistrate of the town. In 1658 he was chosen deputy governor of Connecticut Colony, holding this office until 1676 when he was chosen Governor, which position he retained by continuous re-election until his death in 1683. Upon being elected Governor he removed to Hartford, and being continued in office he remained there until his death.

In Treasurer John Talcott's Account Book, now in the State Library in Hartford, under date of April 18, 1683, is this charge to Connecticut Colony:

"To 11 pound of powder for the Great Guns at Gov'r leet's funerall, 1:07:06."

His tombstone was discovered about 1830 in the ancient burial ground in the rear of the First Church of Hartford where it had long been hidden by an accumulation of earth. Some years later his descendants erected a plain granite monument to his memory.

"During the term of forty years," says Dr. Trumbull, the Historian, "he was Magistrate, Deputy Governor, or Governor of one or other of the Colonies. In both Colonies he presided in times of the greatest difficulty, yet always conducted himself with such integrity and wisdom as to meet the public approbation."

When two of the Judges of King Charles I., Goffe and Whalley, fled to New England for safety, upon the restoration of Charles II. to the throne of his father, Mr. Leete exerted himself for their protection. For several days they were secreted in the cellar of his store and fed from his table. At other times and in other ways he rendered them important aid. The cellar where the judges were concealed is still to be seen in much the same condition as when they occupied it. (See Cogswell's "Regicides.")

And tell of Guilford's William Leete,
Who stretched the State's right arm to hide
In many a wilderness retreat
The vengeance hunted regicide,
And told the bearers of the ban,
Signed and broad sealed "that tender thing
The conscience of an honest man,
Is full as loyal as a King."

The reference is to the answer given by Governor Leete to the royal pursuivants; "We honor His Majesty, but we have tender consciences." Hinman's "Antiquities" contains an address to King Charles II. from William Leete, and other communications from the Governor.

The object of these pages is to give, as far as possible, a record of the descendants of Governor Leete, by families in genealogical order down to the present time, in the case of all that bear the Leete name. In the case of descendants of other names the record will not be continued after the first generation in each case.

Our record for the first hundred years after the settlement of Guilford is nearly complete. No Leete moved out of the town in more than ninety years from its first settlement, and the town records furnish material for the family record. Moreover, a large number of the family has always remained in the town or vicinity. The record of these has been mostly preserved, and through them the record, partial or complete, of many who have moved away has been ascertained. Nevertheless, in the removals and re-removals of the last two hundred years branches of the family have, from time to time, been lost sight of, and consequently many names which properly belong in these pages are not found here. During this time some branches of the family, outside of their native State, have changed the spelling of the name by omitting the final "e," but in this book it has been uniformly retained.

LEETE ARMS

Arms of Leete: Argent, on a fesse gu. between two rolls of fuses fired proper a martlet of the field.

Crest: On a Ducal coronet an antique lamp or, fired proper:—as shown by the Heralds' Visitations of Cambs, Hunts, and Suffolk.

The date or origin of the Leete arms is not known as it is not traceable to Grants as is the case in many ancient families. The earliest document that has been handed down to us is a Roll of Arms made between the years 1240 and 1245.

The fesse is one of the oldest charges of heraldry and ranks as one of the nine honorable ordinaries. Earliest of all the devices of true Heraldry, these have evidently been derived from various means the Crusading knights adopted to structurally strengthen their shields for use in combat. The appearance of the lighted fuses, however, would proclaim the arms to be of a little later date, and cast a doubt upon their use by the four brothers who took part in the Third or Fourth Crusade.

The land upon which he settled was that allotted to his grandfather, Gov. William Leete, in 1660, became the portion of his father, John Leete, from whom it came to him. He was a large landholder and a successful farmer. He kept a hundred head of neat cattle, and considered a hundred bushels of shelled corn to the acre no more than an average crop. He was a deacon in the Fourth Church of Guilford, and though chiefly engaged in private affairs was often elected to represent the town in the General Court of the Colony. He d. Oct. 13, 1768. She d. Mr. Leete was a man of energy and perseverance. In Dec., 1843, he removed from Washtenah Co., Mich., to Clinton Co., Mich., then a wilderness. The winter was very severe, so that thousands of cattle died for want of food. They snow fell to a great depth and became crusted, so that it was impossible for cattle to forage. But Mr. Leete carried all his cattle safely through the winter, and saved himself from pecuniary loss by constantly felling forest trees, upon which his cattle could browse. And by his untiring energy he made his wilderness to blossom like a rose.

March 18, 1873. In his prime he was a man of imposing physical proportions, standing six feet in his stockings.

He was a custom house officer for thirty years, his duty being to board and inspect all incoming vessels. During the War of 1812 he boarded a West India vessel laden with rum, sugar and molasses, claiming to be bound to New Haven, to which place it was his duty to accompany it. When off New Haven, instead of running in, they kept on to Huntington, L. I., and attempted to bind or confine Mr. Leete, but by his commanding presence, physical force and the use of his knife he kept them from their purpose. At Huntington they transferred their cargo to a sloop to go to New York, manned with two men and a boy. Mr. Leete boldly went aboard, and when near New York the crew in alarm escaped in their boat. He took the sloop in, it was condemned with its cargo and sold, and Mr. Leete received $1,000.

In 1860, his two sons, Jonathan and Elijah, were in the coasting trade between Guilford and New York, having for their only assistant on their sloop a Malay named Jack. When in the Sound off Norwalk, March 15, 1860, they were both murdered and thrown into the sea. The bodies were never found, and Jack escaped the gallows because there was no legal proof of the murder.

A civil engineer by profession he was from the first associated with the building of roads, bridges and railroads. When first out of college he was a civil engineer with the first or Erie R. R. in N. Y., later bridging the Mississippi River at Rock Island, when it was unheard of to put in spans (wooden) of more than 150 feet in length. He emigrated to Nevada in 1859, when it was still a part of the State of Utah. He made the original survey for a part of the Central Pacific R. R. In 1869, he located in Lyon County, on land where he constructed and operated the Eagle Salt Works. He was one of the outstanding figures in the development of the Southwest, and for over fifty years was active in politics and the business affairs of his State. He resided at Reno, where few public matters were undertaken in which he was not an active participant. He was a leader by force of character, unquestioned honesty and unqualified candor. He was a real type of the old New England, New York strain that laid the foundation for strong States in the West. He d. in his sleep Jan. 4, 1927, nearly 96 years old. Mrs. Leete d. July 12, 1915.

Mr. Leete is an extensive land-holder, including among his holdings nearly all of the original grant of about 250 acres that was given to William Leete as his outstanding lands when the first lands were granted to the founders of the town in 1639 and 1640, and which gave the name of Leete's Island to this part of the town. His residence stands upon the site of the first house built upon this land by Deacon Pelatiah Leete, the grandson William, and here also stood the house wherein Deacon Edward L. Leete compiled the first Leete Genealogy. It is most appropriate, therefore, that Mr. William S. Leete, his only grandson by the name of Leete, should be the one whose interest and generosity has made this second edition possible.

Mr. Leete is a Trustee of the First Congregational Church, the Guilford Savings Bank, and of the Guilford Institute, and has always shown an active and constructive interest in the welfare of the town.
