ONWARD

The never ending desire, born in most of us to know who we are, from whence and from whom we came, even to the n'th degree drives us, searching into the highways and byways of the past. There is a strange fascination of names repeated here, changed a little there and the continual introduction of the use of surnames for Christian names that thickens the plot, heightens the exigency to forge ahead: until the interwoven mesh of names and families heddles itself into a complete fabric, an ancestral line.

Through the vale of mists we peer back into the past that we may have a brighter future. To come from those who have done well their work, to whom duty was a pleasure not an obligation, who have left themselves in the hearts of their posterity, may not place us above others but should urge us to greater efforts.

He rises to only that height to which he puts himself.

Knowledge of the accomplishments of our ancestors, traced step by step can give light as well as inspiration; even in the enumeration of names, one finds interest.

These pages are dedicated to Mary Katherine Lockett Carter, whose lofty ideals, strong determination for right, unstinted services for others, have built a memorial to her in the hearts of all who knew her.

INTRODUCTION

The object of this memoir is to complete the work begun by my mother Mary Katherine Lockett Carter. With the records she had gathered together; at her death I took over the task of completing this work. It was in 1924 when on a trip to the East I began the research.

Through many letters, to many parts of the United States and from numerous trips I have made to the Southern states from 1926 to 1939 doing research work in Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Louisiana, Kentucky, Missouri and Texas I have been able to compile this genealogy and have been most fortunate in contacting many direct descendants. It is not entirely complete, it being difficult to get the lines of the daughters of the families, but this much I now offer to the Lockett heirs.

It has been a very interesting work, although at times classifying some of the records seemed impossible. I am most grateful to all who have helped me. I am indebted to Mrs. Myrta Lockett Avary, author and poetess of Atlanta, Georgia, for her help in compiling the Abner and David Lockett lines. David's line was most difficult because he moved about the Revolutionary time from Virginia to Georgia. I received many David Lockett records supposed to belong to this Thomas Lockett line; I trust those used are correctly placed.

As some of the gentle souls who labored to recall and to write out these connecting links had long passed four score years, I am most appreciative of their efforts.

I also wish to thank Mrs. Laura Davis Scarborough of Texas; Mrs. Locke Walton Marshall of Virginia; Miss Emma J. Lockett of Missouri; Rev. Stephen Southall of Virginia; and the many others who spared no efforts to help with this work. Now I pass this epitome on to you, Thomas Lockett's descendants.

The Thomas Locketts

This memoir relates to Thomas Lockett of Henrico County, Virginia. Thomas Lockett, the first, was born in 1645 and died in 1686. His wife was Margaret, some say Margaret Osborne, but we have no proof of this; neither the will of Thomas, first, March 1, 1686, nor of his wife, Margaret, May 22, 1708, indicates this is the name.

The first Thomas Lockett lived in Henrico County, Virginia, his will was probated there March 27, 1686; from his will and deeds recorded in Henrico county we find that he lived on the Appomattox River, adjoining the land of John Baugh and Pierce.

The second Thomas Lockett lived in Goochland County and his will was recorded there March 18, 1745.

The third Thomas Lockett lived in Cumberland County and his will was recorded there January 23, 1773.

We find the first Thomas lived in Henrico County, the second Thomas in Goochland County, the third Thomas in Cumberland County, but from all records that all three lived and died in the same house. To see how this could be, it is necessary to know about the division of counties. What is now Powhattan county was included in Cumberland County before 1777, and was with Cumberland County included in Goochland County before 1748, and with Cumberland and Goochland Counties included in Henrico County before 1727. Thus the first Thomas Lockett who died in Henrico County, 1686, and the second Thomas Lockett who died in Goochland County, 1745, and the third Thomas Lockett, who died in Cumberland County in 1773, all could have lived and died in what is now Powhattan County. In fact this did happen and from the data we have, we find that the three Thomas Locketts lived on Butterwood Creek and Appomattox River in Powhattan County. The place is about one mile up the river from the point where the Southern Railroad crosses the river.

It is interesting to note that these early Locketts were planters—that each increased his inheritance by the purchase of more lands. We have no knowledge how much the first Thomas inherited; we assume he inherited the home place “Manor Plantation.” From the records we find that only three years before his death he bought from William Farrar and wife Priscilla, a large tract of land on the Appomattox River. We learn from the will of Thomas, first, that he gives to his eldest son Benjamin a place he calls “Scotland Hills”; and to his second son Thomas, the second, his home place “Manor Plantation” and to his third son other lands. This son James must have died without family as we find no other records concerning him.

Thomas, second, increased his holdings; 200 acres he had purchased in Amelia County he wills to Thomas the third, called Thomas, Jr., mentioning this land joins land that Thomas, Jr., had already purchased.

Thomas the third went in for land in a big way. He purchased August 20, 1747, from King George II, 1531 acres in Amelia County and from Powhattan County records he purchased a tract of land with Francis Marshall, 1747. At his death he owned land in Amelia County, Cumberland County, Chesterfield County, and Prince Edward County. These he divided among three of his sons and two of his daughters. To two of his sons, James and David, he leaves no land but mentions all of his children, five sons and four daughters, in the sale of the final residue of his estate.

Stephen Lockett, second son of Thomas Lockett, third, lived on Sailors Creek and the Appomattox River, seven miles or more below old James Town in Prince Edward County. Perkinson and Henry Madison lived lately upon the place.

Stephen also added acres to his inheritance. On April 6, 1769 he purchased from King George III, 1600 acres in Halifax County.

Up to the time of Thomas Lockett the third, the sons and daughters of the Thomas Locketts lived in Virginia, but in Thomas the third's family we find several of his sons moving to other states.

David the third son of Thomas, third, who lived in Buckingham County, Virginia, moved to Warren County, Georgia, about the time of the American Revolution. Dates from the Warren County records show this. Undoubtedly most of his children were born in Virginia but from marriage records his children were married and continued to live in Georgia and adjoining States.

Little is recorded of James, the eldest son of Thomas, third, or of his family. In Louisiana I saw part of an early Thomas Lockett family tree. It must have been made by some of the earlier Locketts, drawn in the form of a tree. The records on it of the first and second Thomas Locketts were quite complete and it contained part of the third Thomas's records. It gave the name of James's wife and their four children. Finding no further records of his family in Virginia he may have been the first to move South. The name James is often used in David's line and I believe some of the records sent to me from descendants thinking they belonged to the David line, belonged to James's line. We hope in another edition this may be cleared up. Why James the eldest son did not inherit the home place is not known, but we do know that it was left to Stephen, the second son.

We find descendants of Abner, the fifth son of Thomas, third, settled both in Kentucky and Georgia, but it is not until the second and third generations that we find any court records for them in these states.

Jacob, youngest son of Thomas, third, must have moved early to Georgia. We find his oldest daughter's marriage recorded in Sumpter County, Georgia, and others of his children's marriages recorded in Stewart and Baldwin County, Georgia. Jacob's family must have been in contact with his older brother David's, for we find their grandchildren marrying: Lucy Sarah Bridges, daughter of Sallie Lockett and granddaughter of Jacob marrying her cousin Ben Lockett, son of James Lockett and grandson of David Lockett.

Osborne Lockett, the second son of Stephen Lockett, inherited the home place and all his children were born there; he and his wife Agnes died there. Osborne and Agnes Lockett were large, fine looking people, they lived well and both died suddenly. Osborne studied law under Chief Justice Marshall but never practiced it. His great interest was in farming.

Osborne Lockett raised cattle, wheat, corn, and cotton. He owned boats which plied on the Appomattox River from old James Town (which was a town then north of Farmville) to Petersburg. These he used for his own use as well as hauling for other people.

Osborne owned vast acres, many different farms on which he had mills to grind the wheat and corn; he also had a large cotton gin and owned many slaves. Part of this old Lockett place is now a mecca for tourists; a monument is there to mark the place of the battle of Sailor Creek.

The descendants of Thomas Lockett are scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Massachusetts to Texas. Thus the builders push on. Many of these have done well for the name and their records stand to honor it.

Many of the Thomas Locketts' descendants continue to live in Virginia. The first five generations of the Locketts were land owners and planters. From the beginning they acquired more and more land. The will of Osborne Lockett of Prince Edward County, Virginia, reads like dividing large counties into sections. Some of the descendants continue to till the soil but many have become lawyers, doctors, engineers, professors, ministers and teachers. Osborne Lockett was the last large land owner in Virginia.

George Washington Lockett, the oldest son of Osborne and Agnes Branch Lockett, was one of the two sons who continued throughout their lives as planters. George inherited from his father vast acres of land situated on the west side of Sailors Creek and on the south side of Appomattox; this was part of the old home place. He carried on successfully this large plantation, until the call of the wild, "go west," filled him with a desire for newer fields.

Thus he sold his plantation and moved in 1840 to Missouri. This was a very exciting trip; there were few roads and fewer bridges. The wagon beds were so attached to the running gear of the wagons that in fording the streams the wagon beds would float thus greatly aiding the crossing of streams. A young hound dog, a family favorite, was taken along on the trip and his mother was left behind. After several weeks sojourn the dog disappeared. Months later in Missouri they learned the dog had arrived safely back on the Virginia plantation.

George settled in Missouri on the Osage River. Here he purchased a large farm, cultivated over one thousand acres. He had brought from Virginia a large family of Negro slaves (his property by inheritance). These slaves were made useful to the family by kind treatment—they learned to know they had always a good home, plenty to eat, good clothes and a happy life. When the slaves were set free it was a great loss to George and family; in money value a loss of twenty thousand dollars. This loss was heavily felt. It became a difficult task, with the lack of labor, to keep in active cultivation his vast acres; and a constant worry to keep sufficient hands at work on his farm to save the crops and to make enough to pay the heavy taxes on his large estate. All of this bore heavily upon him and hastened his death.

He was a great advocate of education, giving his children the best the time afforded. He was a staunch Baptist and had an important part in building up the West, as Missouri was then considered. He has left behind him sons and grandsons carrying on the high principles of the early Virginia Locketts.

James Stephen Lockett was the other son of Osborne who continued in Virginia throughout his life a planter. He inherited from his father a large plantation with mill for grinding wheat and corn, also a cotton gin and sawmill. He had many tobacco-drying houses. His chief crops were tobacco, wheat and corn; besides these he raised fine horses and cows. For over fifty years he continued successfully on his plantation and today this beautiful old place is being farmed by his grandson.

James was a Baptist, a deacon and superintendent of Sunday school most of his life, giving it up only after he became too feeble to ride his horse to church. Now in his front yard a large granite marker stands, placed there by the Daughters of the Confederacy of Nottoway Chapter, marking the last stand of General Robert E. Lee and honoring the man who carried on the ideals of his forebears.

Some writer has said, "show me a successful man and back of him you will discover a mother or wife who has had an important part in his making." The daughters of the Locketts have lived up to their fathers and brothers' ideals. Recollections of a few of these follow:

Mrs. John M. Graham was Lucy Augusta Strong, the daughter of Lucy Harwood Lockett and Judge C. H. Strong, and the great, great granddaughter of Abner Lockett of Mecklenburg County, Virginia. She grew up in Georgia, her later home being "The Oaks" at Marietta. She was very active in many clubs of the State.

A member of the D. A. R. almost from its beginning, she was parliamentarian and Honorary State Regent. Her advice was sought by men as well as women. She believed in America, believed in women and women's creative energy. She held many important positions on committees in the National Society of D. A. R. and was a charter member of the National Officers Club. Her remarkable ability, coupled with her loyalty, her strict integrity, her absolute honor and courage placed her in many high positions. Her death in 1924 closed a chapter of another noteworthy Lockett descendant.

Mrs. Napoleon Lockett was Mary Lockett, daughter of Samuel L. Lockett of Mecklenburg County, Virginia. At the thirty-fifth convention of Daughters of the Confederacy meeting at Montgomery, Alabama, the portrait of this beautiful southern woman, Mrs. Napoleon Lockett, was presented to the White House of the Confederacy. This was a special tribute to her memory, as it was she with some others who suggested to Mr. Nicola Marschall that the Confederate White House did not have a flag. Through her efforts the Confederate flag, the Stars and Bars, was made. On March 4, 1861, Mrs. Lockett journeyed by carriage with Mr. Marschall from Marion to Montgomery, where they presented to President Jefferson Davis the Confederate flag which was raised for the first time on the Capitol grounds. Mrs. Lockett was the mother of Samuel Henry Lockett, a noted engineer of the Confederacy.

Lelia Ann Lockett Monnot, daughter of James Stephen Lockett of Prince Edward County, Virginia, was 17 years old

the last year of the War between the States. The last battle of this war was fought on her father's plantation at Sailors Creek. Their home was turned into a hospital during these last days where the beautiful young Lelia with her father took care of the wounded and dying soldiers.

A small company of Confederate soldiers was guarding High Bridge, a strategic point near the Lockett plantation, and one of these young soldiers, a Frenchman from Louisiana, came every day to the plantation to get buttermilk. Here he met the lovely Lelia and two years after the close of the war, this young soldier, Ernest L. Monnot came back to Virginia to claim Miss Lelia as his bride. He took her home to his plantation, Elmfield, near Napoleonville, where this grand woman through her services for seventy-two years to family, friends and community carried on the old traditions of the early Virginia Locketts.

In California lived Mary Katherine Lockett Carter, daughter of Thomas Francis Lockett of Prince Edward County, Virginia, later of Cole County, Missouri, known as Miss Mollie. As a very small girl, Miss Mollie during the first years of the war of 1861-65, lived on her grandfather's (Col. Levi Dixon) plantation. The wives, with their children, of the many sons and sons-in-law of Col. Dixon, made his plantation their home while their husbands served in the Confederate Army. One of the duties of the little "Misses" was to knit socks for the soldiers; every day so many yards of yarn were measured off for each; when this amount was knitted the children could play; to keep up their interest at special places goodies were tied into the yarn.

The plantation was eighteen miles out in the country. Many companies of Union soldiers passed by it. Knowing the wealth of Col. Dixon and that his sons were in the Confederate Army, the plantation was continually being searched, often at night. It was not unusual for the Union soldiers to make the darky mammies take the children out of bed so they could search the bed for valuables. All they ever found were partly knitted socks. The family silver and jewelry was safely buried. These experiences were not very pleasant for little children. In 1864 Miss Mollie experienced going through the Union lines from Missouri to Texas. It was always difficult to get through the lines and often the soldiers were very disagreeable. She told years after of how they pinched her face.

Miss Mollie grew up in Texas, attended Baylor University, and in 1874 as the "Belle of Bosque," married Francis Watkins Carter, of Tennessee, a drummer lad of the Twentieth Tennessee C. S. A. In 1887 she moved with her husband to California. Here she helped to organize the Stonewall Jackson Chapter at San Diego, and while president of the Chapter, through her untiring efforts the beautiful burial plot at Mt. Hope Cemetery was purchased for burial grounds of the Confederate soldiers and their wives. The Mary K. Lockett Carter Chapter, Children of the Confederacy, bears her name, honoring her for the years of service given to the educational, historical and benevolent work of the organization. True to Lockett traditions this daughter of the West has carried on, Non Nobis Solum.

FRANCES LOCKETT SOUTHALL
Osborne and Agnes Lockett.

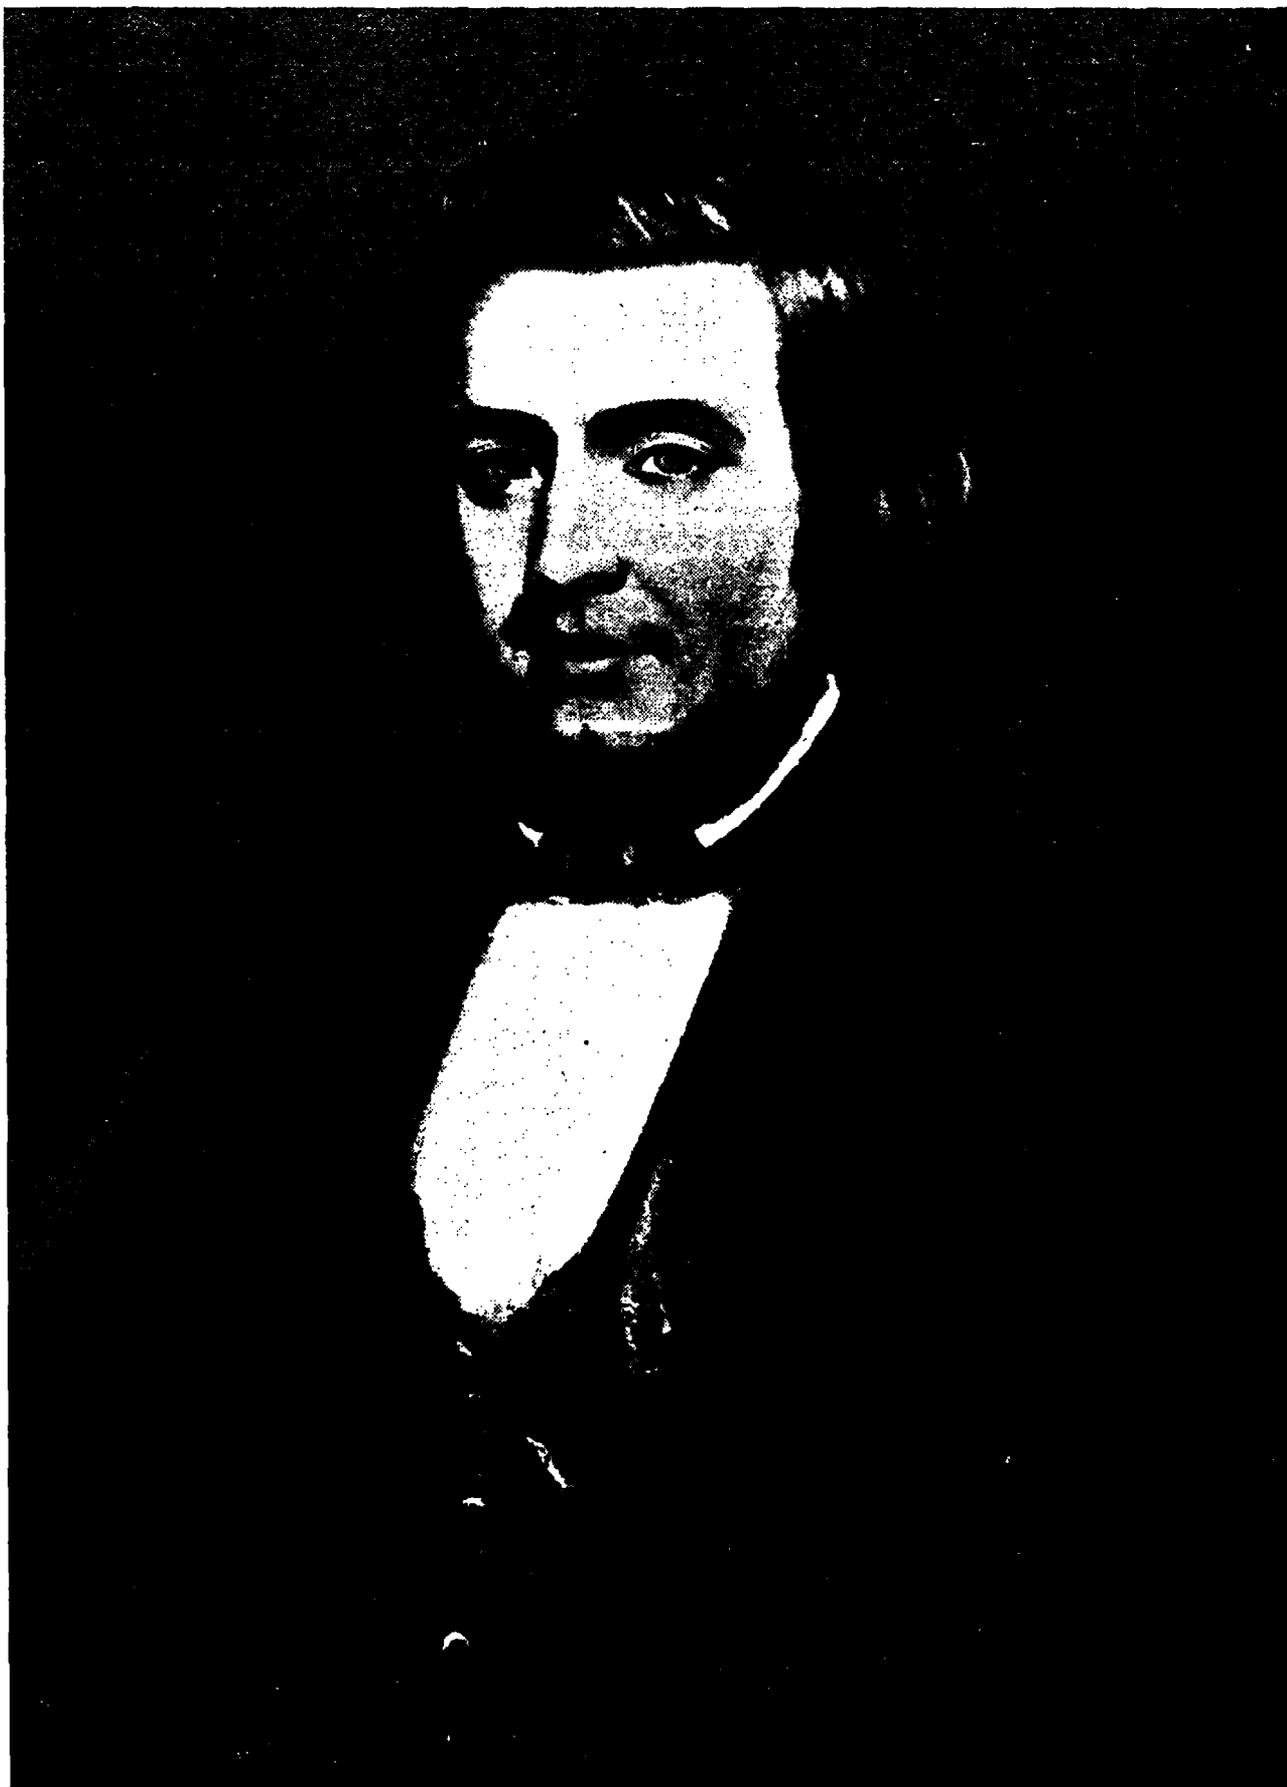

From Osborne and Agnes Scott Lockett's first born, Frances Wilson Lockett, Virginia has been blessed with several generations of noteworthy citizens.

Frances Wilson Lockett was born November 11, 1801 and married November 10, 1815, at the very early age of fourteen years Doctor Phillip Turner Southall. Fair Frances was not to enjoy many years of married life. She died July 25, 1822, at the age of twenty years, leaving behind two fine sons, Stephen Osborne Southall and Phillip Francis Southall.

Stephen Osborne Southall was born at Jamestown, Prince Edward County, Virginia, December 16, 1816. He graduated from Hampden-Sydney College with honor and distinction in 1835. Later he graduated in law from the University of Virginia and was admitted to practice law in Prince Edward County. He was elected from that County in 1852 to the House of Delegates in Virginia and attorney for the Commonwealth, July 1, 1864. In 1866 he was elected professor of law at the University of Virginia, which position he held until his death, November 28, 1884. He never married.

The Richmond Times Dispatch, November 30, 1884, pays this tribute to him:

"The State has lost one of its most accomplished and brilliant men by the death of Stephen Osborne Southall. He was a man of the very first order of intellect, with a wit as rare as that of Charles Lamb and with a familiarity with the English literature hardly equalled by any one whom we have met. He frequently contributed in his early life (for his own amusement) to the columns of the newspapers, articles which for eloquence, logic, and sparkling brilliancy have never been surpassed in Virginia. He was widely known throughout the State and had many friends."

PHILIP TURNER SOUTHALL

Son of

Frances Lockett and Philip Turner Southall

No less in renown do we find the other son of Frances Lockett. Her second son Phillip Francis Southall was born at Jamestown, Prince Edward County, Virginia, April 16, 1822. Later he moved with his father to Amelia, Virginia. Graduating in medicine from Richmond College, he built his home "Woodstock" from which he had an extensive and successful practice in both Amelia and Chesterfield Counties. January 16, 1845, he married Eliza J. Goode, daughter of Col. Robert Goode of Bonnerville, South Carolina. Besides his ardent activities in the field of medicine, he was a zealous student of English literature, a vestryman for fifty years of Trinity Church, Dale Parish, a magistrate and political leader in the Conservative party.

The Richmond Times Dispatch, October 9, 1898, said of him:

"In personal appearance he was a man whom once to see was scarcely to forget. The features in early life which made him the comeliest of a comely family, gave him in age a dignity of presence which was felt by all who knew him. His manners were those of an old Virginia gentleman and as a companion, a guest, a host, and a conversationalist, he was one of the most accomplished men in Southside Virginia."

Dr. Phillip Southall left three sons who have followed in his footsteps in honor and credit to Virginia, the most widely known being Robert Goode Southall.

Robert Southall received his degree of B. L. in 1876 from the University of Virginia. He first practiced law in Amelia; later he was elected Attorney for the Commonwealth; next he was elected to Congress from the Fourth District, serving from 1903 to 1907. He was in 1912 elected judge of the Fourth Judicial Circuit and continued to serve there until his death in 1924. He was a vestryman of Christ Church, Raleigh Parish, Amelia, Virginia. From the Times Dispatch of Richmond, we quote:

“To hundreds of older Virginians, Robert G. Southall was known simply as ‘Bob.’ The shortened name fitted the simplicity of the man. In him affectation never found a lodging place. Although he had been far more than ordinarily successful, the pompous pride of the lesser man was utterly foreign to his nature. He was cast in a larger mold. He could not help being big of body, mind and heart and being just that he went on through life as he was made, despising the airs which others affected. To thousands of a younger generation he was known as Judge Southall, to whom respect was due and to whom it was accorded in generous measure with delight. To them he was a big, kindly man with a quaint sense of humor; with a cigar that would never stay lighted; a lawyer who knew the statutes by heart and carried them there; a judge whose passion was Justice and whose decisions for years have been taken in Virginia as the last word in judicial opinion; a counselor wise in the ways of the world and a past master in the art of interpreting human nature. A gentleman always, as was his right and nature; that was Judge R. G. Southall in life, that is the memory of him in death.”

THOMAS FRANCIS LOCKETT

Osborne and Agnes Scott Lockett

Thomas Francis, youngest son of Osborne Lockett, was born July 30, 1826. He was the sixth generation born in Virginia. Thomas was named for his oldest brother named Thomas who died in 1803 and his oldest sister Frances, who died in 1826. His early childhood was spent on the family plantation, "Elmwood," Prince Edward County, Virginia, attending the neighborhood schools and in the old fashioned way was taught the primary studies, spelling and defining, reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, and grammar. At the age of fifteen he attended an academy in Clarkville, Mecklenburg County, for three years, and at eighteen entered Richmond College, Richmond, Virginia. Here his studies were mathematics, science, history and literature. He graduated in 1847.

Thomas had no special religious training in his early youth, but by nature was serious and earnest and about the age of fifteen began to make a study of religion. He was then a member of the Baptist Church. On November 14, 1847, he was ordained to preach by the Sandy River Baptist Church; later that year he moved to Missouri and settled in Cole County and here he was elected principal of Osage Institute, where he taught for two years and at the same time preached throughout Cole County.

On May 15, 1848 Thomas F. Lockett married Miss Sallie Waller Dixon, daughter of Col. Levi Dixon of Cole County, a gentleman of high social standing.

William Jewel College at Liberty, Missouri, was chartered February 27, 1849. At its first board meeting November 12, 1849, they elected Rev. Thomas Francis Lockett professor of mathematics. Then Professor Lockett moved from his farm in Cole County to live in Liberty.

THOMAS FRANCIS LOCKETT

Prince Edward County, Virginia

Persons acquainted with the history of the early days of Missouri know that the year 1849 marks a period of great development. The incidents and traditions of the settlement and primitive years of the State—the odors of the forest remained fresh and invigorating among the people. The sense of manhood and personal valor energized all. The Mexican War had closed and in it the soldiers of Missouri had won for her unfading laurels. Her citizens felt the swell of emotions at the thought of it and there was peace everywhere.

As yet, however, a man could stand at the southwest border of Clay County and fire a rifle ball across the Missouri river into the Indian country and the adventurous traveler could journey from Missouri towards the setting sun among tribes of Indians as savage as they were a thousand years before, until his steps be arrested by the roar of waves beating on the western shore of America. Into the consciousness of all this, Prof. Lockett, on his arrival in Missouri, entered and like the true man that he was at once became a Missourian in every possible sense.

Prof. Lockett taught besides mathematics, classical geography and history. He was also ingenious in mechanics and had a decided taste for architecture. With his work in the college, he continued his pastoral work. Under this strain his health broke and a few years later he was compelled to resign and return to his farm in Cole County.

Thomas Lockett was in principle and feeling thoroughly a Southern man, so when the War between the States began in 1861, without a moment's delay or hesitation he joined the Southern Army under General Sterling Price and served in the armies of the Confederacy until the close of the war, first as chaplain, then as major. His gift in organization and construction was recognized, and in 1864 General Price detailed him to go to Texas and there construct and operate a factory for making clothes for the use of the Confederate soldiers. He was engaged in this work in Robinson County, Texas, when the war closed.

He continued to live in Texas. He served on the Board of Baylor University and preached in many parts of the State.

Dr. D. C. Allen, a student under Prof. Lockett at William Jewell, and later president of William Jewell College, said of him: "Prof. Lockett was tall, six feet two inches in height. His features were fairly regular, with forehead high and moderately narrow. His dress was more comfortable than stylish. His pronunciation of English was fine, distinct, and clear. He used the word 'sir' in addressing persons, in a tone and way precisely like the old class Virginians—a way and tone indeed, which excelled in courtesy, kindness, ease and dignity anything that I have ever heard in the English speaking world."

To his children and grandchildren Thomas Lockett left a vast store of some of the most interesting and thrilling incidents of the War between the States. As Missouri was a divided State, it was held mostly by the Union Army. Major Lockett slipped through the Union lines many times, having narrow escapes. Because he carried back to his regiment things that were contraband, there was a stake on his life, but his dauntless courage and quick ingenuity saved him many times.

On one occasion when returning to his regiment from his home, with two huge sacks of home-knit socks swung across the back of his saddle he saw a detachment of Union soldiers coming towards him. He could not turn back. In a few minutes they would be close enough to see him. Quickly he dismounted, grabbed the bags of socks and threw them into some thick shrubs; his saddle and blanket he threw into other shrubs; then he led his horse to a ravine, which was too open for him to hide in. Not far from the thick shrubs was an oak tree. To reach it now he must crawl. This he did and climbed up on the back side to the largest limb. It was not over 12 inches wide but the Major was a long thin man, with his hands stretched over his head he snuggled to the limb. The searching squad came to the tree, stood under it and discussed where he could have gone. They rested about an hour, then rode away out of sight. Major Lockett climbed down, whistled for his horse, pulled out of the brambles his saddle and bags of socks and rode away to his regiment.

Thomas Francis Lockett as professor and minister for over fifty years left behind him footprints on the early history of Missouri and Texas.

SAMUEL HENRY LOCKETT

son of

Napoleon and Mary Lockett

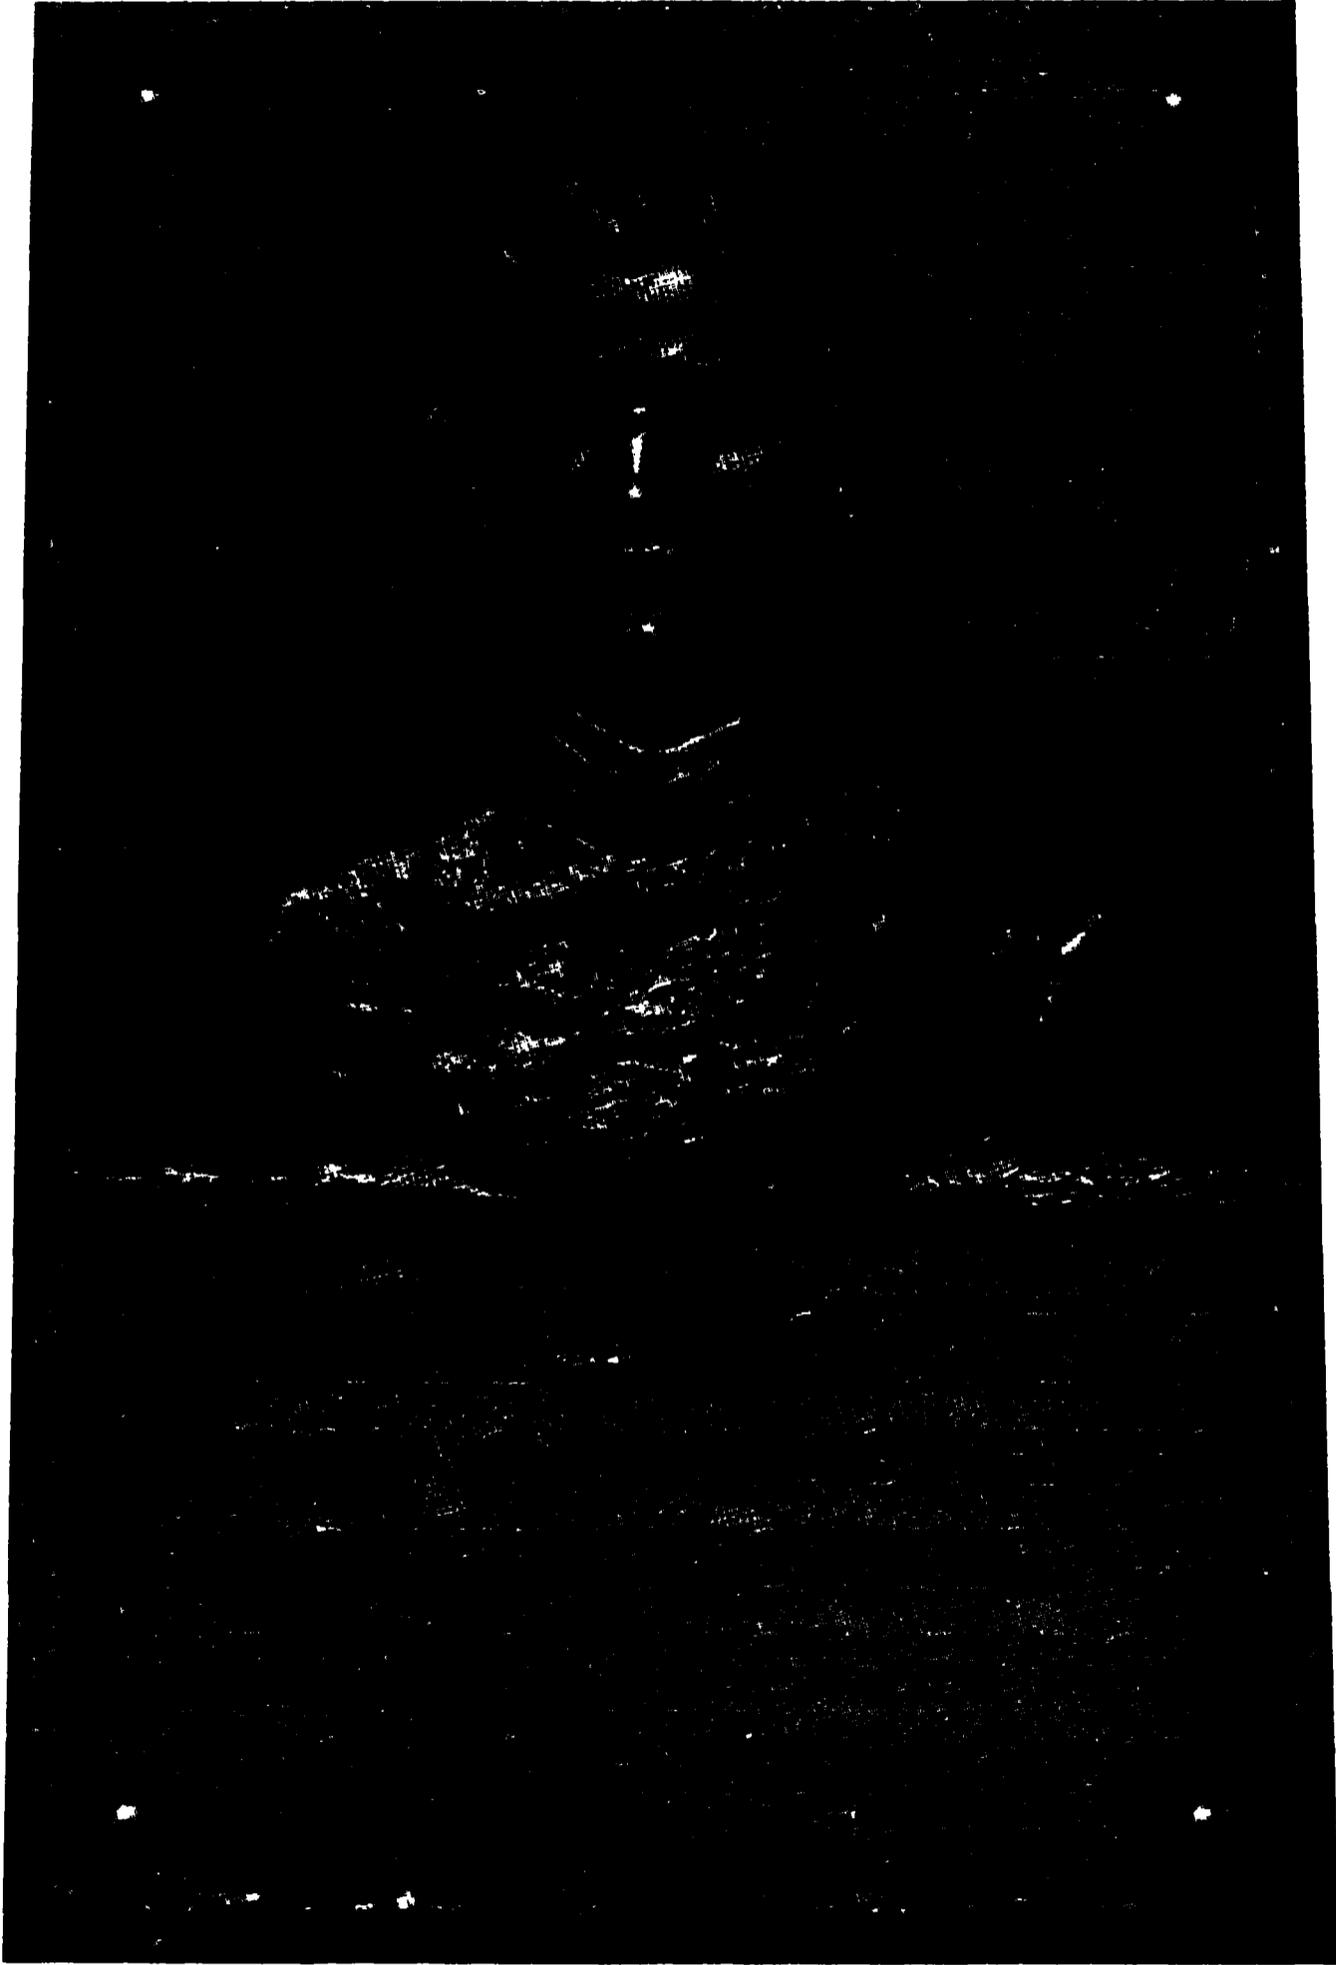

Samuel Henry Lockett was born July 6, 1837, in Mecklenburg County, Virginia. His father and mother, Napoleon and Mary Clay Lockett, were double first cousins and moved to Marion, Perry County, Alabama, when he was an infant.

At the age of sixteen, Samuel Lockett graduated from Howard College. Later he entered West Point and after winning great scholarly distinction was graduated second in the class of 1859 and was promoted in the U. S. Army as second lieutenant in the corps of Engineers.

December of that year he married Miss Cornelia Clark of West Point. He was next honored by being selected as an assistant Professor at the Military Academy. He served under General Whiting as his assistant in engineering work in the Eight Light House District, which extended from Charleston, South Carolina to Fernandina, Florida.

Upon the withdrawal of Alabama from the Union, Lieutenant Lockett promptly resigned his commission and accepted an appointment as Major of Engineers, tendered him by the Governor of Alabama, and was placed in charge of important defenses of Mobile Bay and Pensacola Harbor. March 7, 1861, he was commissioned Captain of Engineers in the Confederate States Army. Later General Bragg took Captain Lockett with him to North Mississippi where in March, 1862, he laid out and constructed the defenses of Corinth, Mississippi. He served in the Shiloh campaign as Chief Engineer of the Bragg Corps. The Chief Engineer of the Army, Major General J. F. Gilmer, was wounded early in action and Captain Lockett became the Chief Engineer of the Army upon the staff of General Albert Sidney Johnston, until that distinguished commander fell mortally wounded. He next served under General Beauregard, giving valiant service. For this he was promoted to the rank of Major of Engineers.

Major Lockett designed and constructed the defenses of Vicksburg and the adjacent strategic points of Chickasaw Bluff, Haines' Bluff and Yazoo City on the north and Warrenton on the south of Vicksburg.

In November 1862, under General J. C. Pemberton, Major Lockett became Chief Engineer of the Department of Mississippi, Alabama and East Louisiana. He planned and constructed the defenses of Port Hudson, Louisiana; of Jackson, Mississippi; of Fort Pemberton, Mississippi, and many other points of minor interest; for his services during this campaign he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel of Engineers. One month after being captured at Vicksburg he was exchanged and reported to General Joseph E. Johnson, again resuming his duties as Chief Engineer of the Department of Alabama, Mississippi and East Louisiana.

During the campaign when General Sherman, United States Army, and General Joseph E. Johnson, Confederate States Army, contended for the possession of Mississippi and Louisiana, Col. Lockett bore a most prominent part and for these distinguished services he was promoted to the rank of Colonel of Engineers and placed in command of the third Regiment of Confederate Engineer Corps. He conducted the defense of Mobile, Alabama, 1864 to 1865 and earned a lasting and enviable reputation as a military engineer of the highest order. With these operations came the termination of four years of bloody and eventful war. Though less than twenty-eight years of age Colonel Lockett had achieved a great reputation as a brave soldier and skillful engineer. With such a record behind him, he could with pride lay down a sword which he had upheld for four years with honor. May, 1865, Colonel Lockett surrendered and returned to Marion, Alabama, where he occupied the chair of Mathematics and Natural Sciences at Judson Institute.

From January, 1867 to 1873, Colonel Lockett was Professor of Mechanics and Engineering in the State University of Louisiana. From 1874 to 1875 he was president of a college in Alabama.

DATA OF SCOTT FAMILY

From the different records received from descendants of James Scott taken from Scott, Leigh and other old Bibles and court records, we find from one of the earliest Bible records the birth of Thomas Scott, 1718, father of James Scott. The James Scott whose family record is given above may not be the son of this Thomas Scott, but could be either the son or grandson. Pages were often missing in these old Bibles and one has to piece the data together.

In another part of this old Bible in a totally different handwriting are the records of the birth of some slaves. These must have been recorded by the first James Scott for Thomas was born in 1718 and was only four years old when the record began. The dates are on different pages and are a curiosity in these days. The handwriting changes at the eighteenth line (1745), someone else takes up the pen and the old fashioned "ye" for "the" is given up. It is the same writing as that of the will, I dare say the son took up where the father left off. The writing is older and more defaced than that of the will, which was not written until 1773. The Bible was printed at Oxford, England in 1718. It is very large and contains besides the Old and New Testaments, the Prayer book. One back of the Bible is gone. The Scotts were Episcopalians.

From the Leigh Bible we find that Mrs. Agnes Branch Scott Lockett departed this life December 27, 1839, suddenly. She went to bed well and was found dead the next morning in her bed. She was the twin sister to Elizabeth A. Scott Leigh.
