GENEALOGICAL RECORD

OF THE DESCENDANTS OF

CALEB LOUD, 1st.,

13th child of Francis Loud, Jr., and Onner Prince Loud.

FRANCIS LOUD 1st and his brother came from Scotland. The brother settled in St. Johns, N. B., Francis settled in Sagadahoc on the Kennebec River, Me. In 1676, during the war, he was driven from his home by the Indians. He, with several of his neighbors, petitioned Sir Edmund Andros, for the right to settle on Arrowsic Island, where we find him in 1679. He subsequently settled in Ipswich, Mass., with his family. He afterwards returned to Maine, where in 1726 we find him posted at Fort Marys, Biddeford, where he probably died.

FRANCIS LOUD, JR., son of the above, was born in Ipswich, Mass., July 26, 1700. Onner Prince, daughter of Isaac Prince, who married Mary Turner, a descendant of the fourth generation from Elder William Brewster of the Mayflower, born in Hull, Mass., October 26, 1701. They were published as residents of Weymouth, Mass., October 22, 1722. No record of their marriage. Francis died in Weymouth January 22, 1774; Onner P. Loud, January, 18, 1777.

Children of FRANCIS, Jr., and ONNER PRINCE LOUD.

Caleb and Susanna, his wife, were both born in Weymouth, where they were married. Although a seafaring man, and a noted swimmer, yet he was drowned while bathing near his own house, at the age of 35 years.

After his death, the widow and daughter, moved first to Cum-mington, thence to Hunter, Greene county, N. Y., and died there or in Catskill. I have a copy of a letter written by her, dated Hunter, Greene county, N. Y., February 20, 1819.

Caleb Loud, Jr., was born in Weymouth. He was but ten years old when his father was drowned, and was taken by his Uncle Lebbeus Bates, (who had been appointed guardian of all the children), to Cummington. He lived with Ebenezer Snell, working on the farm and attending school, until he went to learn the trade of carpenter and joiner with Ezekiel Baldwin in Easthampton. After serving his time here he returned to Boston and Weymouth, for some little time, working at his trade. Going back to Easthampton he was married in 1796 to Jerusha Clark, a daughter of Lieut. Asahel Clark, an officer in the Revolution. He was a very skillful mechanic, and the first to introduce the system, called the square rule, in framing buildings; in place of the old scribe rule, or cut and try. He was engaged for a number of years in building churches, court houses and other large buildings, in different parts of the State.
He was an honest and reliable man in all his dealings, a kind neighbor and worthy citizen in every respect. Of a jovial disposition and fond of a joke, he was company everywhere. Having a fondness for music, during his stay in Boston he bought him a Bass Viol, and being a member of the choir in Easthampton, he introduced the "fiddle, as they called it," into the church choir, amid so great opposition of a few, that it came near swamping the concern. In fact one Oliver Clark, a Baptist Elder and others, did leave the church. The above Ezekiel Baldwin, an eccentric genius, had a habit, about his work, of using very often, the word "Fiddle Faddle," which so annoyed the said Oliver that he asked him one day what Fiddle Faddle meant. Ezekiel's reply was: "Fiddle is the instrument they use in church, and Faddle is a hard shell Baptist," which satisfied the Elder.

The old Bass Viol built in 1793 is still a member of the family, and highly respected.

Austin Loud was born in Westhampton, Mass., was a builder and millright, ever busy and very ingenious, readily turning his hand to any mechanical work from a fiddle to a meeting house. In 1832 with his family he moved to Kirtland, O., where he built a grist and saw mill in which the lumber for the Mormon Temple was sawed.

After remaining there three years, and becoming disgusted with Mormon society, in the winter of 1836 he moved to Huntsburg. The following season he built a church at Montville. During the summer of 1837 he erected a church at Ravenna, O., after which he returned to Huntsburg, built a saw mill, in which he occupied his spare hours in such work as came to hand. In 1839 he built a dwelling for himself where he spent the remainder of his life, like Paul, laboring with his hands for his necessities and with his heart faithfully doing his Master's work to the end. He was an earnest, every day Christian, strictly temperate in all his habits, anti-slavery of the Garrison stripe of the strictest sort.

Mehetable, his wife, was born in Westhampton; was the daughter of Cornelius Bartlett, a soldier for seven years in the Revolution. She was a milliner and dressmaker and worked at her trade until she was married. She is still living, 1889, in Windsor, Ohio.

Henry M. Loud was born in Westhampton, Mass., and moved with his father to Ohio in 1832, first settling in Kirtland, Lake county, Ohio. In 1836 he removed to Huntsburg, Geauga county, where he was married to Vilitta Jane Kile. His early life was spent upon a farm, with a small water saw mill, where his school advantages were very limited, usually about three months of indifferent school attendance yearly, walking one and-a-half miles. By the improvement of what leisure hours he could command, and considerable night work, with books and study, he partly redeemed this want of educational advantages. At the age of 18 he was licensed to exhort, and soon after as a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he became a member at the age of 12. For some years he preached irregularly on a large circuit without compensation. When 26 years of age he joined the Erie Annual Conference and preached two years on the Hartford, Trumbull county, Circuit, and one year at Braceville, O., then asked a location and moved to Concord, N. H., where he spent three years at a Methodist Theological school. Here he studied during the week and preached regularly on Sundays. During this time he spent a vacation of six months preaching in St. Paul's M. E. church at Fall River, Mass. After graduation he joined the New England Conference and was stationed at Watertown, near Boston, St. Paul's at Lowell, Fitchburg, Leominster and Medford. For some years during this period, he was one of the directors of the N. E. Education Society of Boston, a society organized to aid young men preparing for the ministry in which he took a lively interest, preaching the first annual sermon, before the N. E. Conference, on its behalf. In 1865, owing in part to impaired health, he took a supernumerary relation, and engaged in the lumber business; first in Boston, and then in Oscoda, Mich., where he still resides; being the president of the H. M. Loud & Sons Lumber Co.; doing a large lumber, mercantile and shipping business with his four sons associated with him. In 1884 he was one of the two lay delegates from the Detroit Conference to the General Conference of the M. E. church convened at Philadelphia. The same year he was appointed one of the Centennial committee for the endowment of Albion College, of which he has since become and now in 1889 is a trustee. In the fall of 1886 he was the unanimous nominee of the Republican party for Congress, from the Tenth Congressional District of Michigan, but was defeated by Hon. S. O. Fisher, the Democratic nominee. He being a staunch temperance man, gave his opponent the full benefit of the saloon and whiskey vote; declaring that he would not cater to a saloon or furnish a glass of whiskey for a seat in Congress.

In February, 1880, his wife, whom he had taken to Florida for her health, died at Jacksonville and was buried in Elmwood cemetery, Detroit. November 29, 1883, he was married to Mrs. Nancy P. Miller of Brooklyn, N. Y., Rev. Henry Ward Beecher officiating.

Sophia was born in Westhampton, Mass. Her husband, Orin Clark was born in Huntsburg, O., and they were married in Chardon. He was a farmer. First settled in the southeastern part of the town, where they remained a number of years, but becoming affected with the Western fever they emigrated to Iowa. The climate disagreeing with them, they returned to their former home, where, for several years, they have rented large dairy farms for making butter and cheese. September 5, 1864, Orin enlisted in the 177th Regiment Ohio Volunteers. First went to Nashville, from there to Murfreesboro, Fort Fisher, Andersonville and Wilmington, N. C. He was at Raleigh, N. C., at the surrender of Gen. Lee and his army. Their present residence is at Windsor Mills, Ashtabula county, Ohio.

Alanson was born in Westhampton, Mass., and Eleanor in Springfield, Pa., and they were married in Braceville, O. Their home was in Huntsburg, O., until 1865, when they removed to Au Sable, Mich., built a sawmill and laid the foundation, not only of a town containing 5000 inhabitants, but of the large salt and lumber interest now carried on there. They afterwards removed to Detroit, where they remained three years. In 1875 they went to Metropolis, Ill., where, in company with his brother Charles A. and Charles Edson, he occupied the mill, known as the Yankee Saw, Planing and Veneer Mills, manufacturing very largely ash and black walnut lumber, which they shipped via New Orleans to Boston. In the midst of their prosperity, being visited by a cyclone and twice by floods, destroying their building and machinery and sweeping away their lumber, they were compelled to relinquish their enterprise and left the place. Although unfortunate in his financial schemes he was ever active in every good work in church, educational or public interest. His present residence is in Pomona, Cal.

Elvira R. was born in Kirtland, O., and was married in Metropolis, Ill. From her childhood was a bright and intelligent scholar, and in her maturer age cultivated her literary taste and became a teacher, in which profession she spent nearly 20 years in the states of Ohio, Massachusetts, Mississippi and Michigan. Of a mild and amiable disposition she never failed to win the love of her pupils. Ruel Beeson was born in New Petersburg, Ohio, 1811; after his academic studies closed he commenced the study of medicine. In 1833 located in Leesburgh, Ohio, but soon left his profession and studied law, which he practiced but a short time. In 1848 was elected to the state senate; being disgusted with politics declined a renomination. He was an active and aggressive temperance advocate, for which he suffered loss by the burning of his building, in which he had furnished a hall for the sons of temperance. His religious connection was with the Quakers.

Charles A. was born in Kirtland, Ohio, and his wife in Prattsburgh, N. Y., and they were married in Romeo, Mich. Living in Huntsburg until the following June, 1863, when they moved to Medford, Mass. Under the direction of his brother, H. M., they carried on a large and profitable traffic in lumber. After two years, he with his brother, William H. and W. A. Kruger, continued the business in Boston until 1872, when the firm became involved in building a large mill in Metropolis, Ill., which caused their failure and necessitated their removal. In the winter of 1872 they removed to Metropolis, and in the fall of the same year (the old firm having dissolved) the firm of Edson & Loud, consisting of Charles Edson, Alanson R. and Charles A. Loud, was formed, which continued until 1877. During this period they were largely engaged in shipping lumber, principally black walnut, to Boston via New Orleans. Their business proved profitable and their prospects highly encouraging until misfortunes overtook them, by two floods and one cyclone, carrying away their lumber and nearly destroying their mill. Their present residence is at Pomona, Cal.

Harriet V. was born in Huntsburg, Ohio, 1839. James W. Bridwell in Greenfield, Ohio, 1832. Were married in Cincinnati December 23, 1858. They removed at once to Leesburgh, Ohio, his home, where he was employed as agent and telegraph operator, by the Marietta & Cincinnati Railroad Co. Here they remained several years. In 1878 they removed to Hillsboro, a smart railroad town in Highland county, Ohio, where Mr. Bridwell was employed as editor of the Gazette. In 1880 Mr. B. and his oldest son Frank J., established the Herald Co., and began the publication of the Saturday Herald, a very bright and spicy country paper, which rapidly grew in public favor, and succeeded so well that two years after it began, (in a timid uncertain way), it rivaled the two papers already established there, and added a power press with steam fixtures, and is now, 1887, the leading paper of the county.

They went at once to Aldborough, Canada West, where he was engaged in the lumber trade. In 1866 they removed to Seaforth, Ont. Disposing of his interest here, he entered into partnership with his brother Charles A. and W. A. Kruger, under the firm name of Loud Brothers and Kruger, Boston, dealers in lumber. In 1868 he returned to Aldborough and formed a new partnership in the saw mill business, known as R. Mowbrey & Co. In 1874 he sold his interest in the mill to his partner and removed to Detroit. Remaining in Detroit two years he went to Oscoda, Mich., where he was employed in various capacities about the saw mill of his brother H. M. In 1880 he removed to Metropolis, Ill., on the Ohio river, and engaged with his brothers Charles A. and Alanson R. in their lumber mill. He was always unfortunate, some years ago he lost the sight of one eye by a splinter. In 1882 he had his face terribly mangled by a piece of board. His nose was broken and torn open and his upper jaw in several places, and in the flood he lost all. In March 16, 1887, when at work at Paducah, Ky., he fell from a scaffold, dislocating his neck. Francis, like all the rest of the family, was a natural mechanic, learned the trade of a carpenter in his father's shop; was born in Westhampton, and for some years after his marriage lived at the old homestead; was a turner, and manufactured bobbins for the factories in the vicinity, and dentifrice boxes for New York. He was for some years employed in church building, having erected one each in Norwich, Chesterfield, Cummington, Shelburne, and with his brothers one in Westhampton. He was a hard worker, temperate in the extreme, strongly anti-slavery and anti-masonic. In politics originally a Democrat, but the rebellion made him a Republican. He was earnest and diligent in all church and social enterprises, and a worthy scion of the good old Puritan stock. In 1873 he was thrown from his carriage and sustained injuries which resulted in the loss of an eye, and ultimately in his death. He died at the house of his son-in-law, Rev. A. P. Stockwell, Gravesend, L. I., August 25, 1873, where his wife, who was a native of Westhampton; died December 17, 1880.

Watson was born in Westhampton in 1806; Mary Ann, his wife, was born in Easthampton, 1808. Early in life, with her parents, she removed to Northampton, where she was married in 1835, and after a long and severe illness, died in Romeo, Mich., February 8, 1876. Watson, in early life had only the advantage of a common school education. From the age of 12 to 18, he worked out by the month on the farm, or in his father's shop; having the privilege of school during the winter. During the years from 1826 to 1828, he fitted for college in the academies at Hadley and Westfield, Mass. In January, 1829, he entered the office of Drs. Hunt & Barrett, as a medical student. The winter of '30-31, he attended a course of lectures in the medical department of Harvard University, Boston. In 1833 was graduated from the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia. In the winter of 1834-5 he located himself in Hadley, Mass., where he remained in the practice of his profession until the summer of 1840, when he removed to Lapeer, Mich., where he remained until 1846. Owing to his large and widely scattered field, without roads, the unhealthiness of the climate, and continued sickness in his family, he was compelled to seek a more healthy location, and removed to Romeo, and continued in practice until 1852, when he entered into partnership, in the mercantile business, with Mr. C. B. Newbury, under the firm name of C. B. Newbury & Co., which was continued until the death of the senior partner, in 1865. Then a new company was formed with the oldest son of Mr. Newbury, under the name of Loud & Newbury, which was dissolved by limitation in August, 1870; since then, till the present, 1889, he has been an insurance agent. He is a man of very genial disposition, prominent and active in all the benevolent operations of the day, and leader in all the reforms of church and State, and greatly beloved. He was superintendent of the Sabbath school eight years, deacon of the church nineteen years, secretary and treasurer thirty-six years, was elected by the Eastern Conference, Michigan delegate to the National Council at New Haven, Conn., in 1874.

Y., and they were married in Rochester, N. Y. His general standing in the community may be learned from the following, taken from the obituary notices of the village press. They say:

“The announcement of the death of George B. Loud produced a deep and genuine feeling of regret in the minds of our citizens. It is doubtful if Romeo possesses, to-day, a citizen who is held in higher esteem by all classes than the deceased. He was one of those kind-hearted, generous men, who endear themselves to all with whom they come in contact, whether in business or socially. He was a true type of manhood, and left behind him a record which has not even the faintest semblance of a blot to mar its whiteness, and one which will make for the rising generation a fitting model to pattern after. He was of a genial, happy nature, and his death leaves an aching void in the heart of every person with whom he came in contact. His natural temperament was deeply sympathetic, and he would go as far out of his way to confer a favor or lighten the load of a brother in affliction as any man in the community. The death of such a man is a public calamity, and to his aged father and his devoted wife the blow comes with a force and weight that words cannot express.”

For many years the deceased was a consistent member of the Romeo Congregational Church.

His father's ancestors were from Holland, and the mother's from England, of the Duzenberry stock. His grandfather and father were both ministers in the M. E. Church, the former a pioneer and said to have been a powerful preacher. Owing to the professional calling of his father, he had no permanent abiding place, so that his early educational advantages were only such as the district school afforded till he came to Lapeer, in 1854, where, under the teaching of Prof. L. McLouth, now President of Dakota Agricultural College, he finished it. In the fall of 1860, he entered as clerk the mercantile firm of H. Griswold & Co. In September, 1864, he formed a co-partnership with Mr. E. J. White, which continued until his death. In connection with the widow, Mrs. E. J. White, the business is continued to the present date, 1889. He is a man of business, correct in all his habits, a leading man in the community, honored and respected by all.

Caleb Loud 3rd, was born in Westhampton, Mass., in 1809. His wife also was born in Westhampton, 1811, on the farm on which they now live, and where she has always lived, except a short time spent in Florence, a village in Northampton, where they were married in 1833. In 1883, January 29, they celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. Loud was a carpenter and millwright by trade, was always an active and enterprising man. Between 1830 and 1846 he, with his brother, erected several churches, dwellings and mills. He built the first mill in the village, now bearing his name (Loudville) in 1833, for the purpose of making buttons and button-moulds. This he sold in 1836, and built a saw mill on the opposite side of the river, which was swept away by the flood in 1872. In 1846 he started a paper mill, manufacturing printing and wrapping paper, which business he continues, making mostly hatter's and colored tissue papers. This mill was burned in 1878. Besides he has owned several saw mills in different parts of the town. He owned and built the silk mill at Glendale, and had an interest in the first cotton mill in Loudville, burned years ago. Since 1846 he has built forty overshot and breast wheels, and as agent for the Leffel Company, has sold and set forty turbine iron wheels. He has held many offices of trust, and given a fair share of his time to public service. Helped lay the corner stone of Bunker Hill monument, 1825. Has held the office of Justice of the Peace twenty-one years, under Govs. Andrews, Rice and Claflin, besides a trustee of the Easthampton Savings Bank from its organization until last year. They have always been leading members in all church and social enterprises. Altogether they can review their lives as busy and useful ones, and are highly esteemed by all who know them.

Charles C. was born in Hadley, Mass. His wife, Helen, was born in Stoughton, Mass.; they were married in Hingham, Mass., and they both died in Loudville. At the breaking out of the war, Charles C. was at the Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass., fitting for college. In consulting his parents (being under age), he was asked his choice between college and war, he chose the latter (as he says little realizing what it meant). September 20, 1861, he enlisted for three years as a drummer in Company —, Twenty-second Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers. He was at the battle of Roanoke Island and Newberne, N. C. In the latter battle he was hit by a spent bullet in one side of his cheek, passing under his tongue and lodging in the opposite side, which bullet he dropped into his hand, loosing seven teeth in the operation. He had just returned from the rear, after carrying off a wounded soldier, and came in for another. For this he enjoyed a sixty-days' furlough at home. In returning to the front, was run over by an omnibus in New York and detained some days. He then started for Newberne by boat, and when about twelve hours out, as he was seasick, and his berth being uncomfortable, he changed to the cabin floor, and had hardly lain down when they were run into by another vessel, the bowsprit of which passed directly through the berth he had just left. In 1863, after his three years' enlistment had expired, he re-enlisted in the veteran corps for the war. In the spring of 1865, he (with 1,900 others), was captured at a place called South West, near Kingston, N. C., and were compelled to walk all the way to Richmond 'mid great suffering. When they reached Libby prison they were stripped and robbed of all valuables. They were at Libby and Castle Thunder a little over a month. During this time the rebels had laid a mine of powder under the prison to blow it up; but, happily they had to leave sooner than they expected and were frustrated in their plans. They were soon sent down the James River, and when received by the soldiers, they turned around and gave the old flag three times three cheers; that they were once more in what the boys called it, "God's country." He died in 1885.

Jerusha was born and married in Westhampton, and died at North Bennington, Vt., at the early age of 35. She was never strong and robust as many, yet her ambition made up in activity what she lacked in strength. Previous to her marriage she worked at her trade, as a milliner. She was a natural musician, with a fine voice and an exquisite taste, she became more than an ordinary one; always a leader in the choir. By her amiable disposition and social qualities she drew around her a circle of loving friends of the true and good wherever she was known. She early united with the church, ever living a consistent Christian life; and as she lived, so she died.

Eli B. Henry was born in North Bennington, in the house where he now lives, and on the last Sabbath, October 23, 1887, celebrated his 83rd birthday. Occupation a farmer.

Mary Howe Henry, unmarried daughter of the above, was born in North Bennington, Vt. Most of the three years, previous to entering the Mt. Holyoke Seminary, were spent at the Mt. Anthony Seminary, in Bennington Centre, Vt. In the fall of 1858, she entered the Mt.

Holyoke Seminary for the three-years' course; was graduated in 1862; united with the Congregational Church while there. In 1866, she was engaged for four years as teacher in the High School, at Lapeer, Mich. In 1871, was engaged as teacher in the Wisconsin Female College, Fox Lake, and from 1873 to 1875, was principal of the same institution. For this work she was admirably adapted. Always beloved by her pupils because she loved them, and loved her work. Since 1875, her home has been at her father's, where she has spent her time mostly in literary work. Under the signature of Howe Benning, she has written for the Sunday School library twelve volumes, besides quite a number of articles for the religious press. For the promotion of this work she has spent some time in visiting among the homes of the poor in New York City. She was never idle, but so wedded to her work of teaching and writing, that she has made herself an invalid, yet still at work.

there about the 15th of May. This place was then the location of the Mormons, under the leadership of Joseph Smith, Jr. May 15, 1837, they removed to Huntsburgh, to the farm he had previously purchased, where they now reside. Mr. Parsons and his wife were industrious, hard working farmers, ever ready for any public or benevolent enterprise, leading members of the Congregational Church for many years, and now he is Deacon. Both being of happy dispositions, the current of their lives has ever flown on without a ripple. Edward N., their third child, enlisted, September 12, 1861, in Company G, Forty-first Regular Ohio Volunteers. While he was at camp, Wickliff, Ky., he had the measles, followed by malignant typhoid fever, he died January 30, 1862.

Nelson Loud was born in Westhampton, Mass., and Martha, his wife, in Huntsburgh, Ohio, where they were married in 1846. At 15 years of age, he was put into the shop of his father to learn the trade of a carpenter. In 1838, went to Huntsburgh, Ohio, helped build the Congregational Church. In 1839, started with a two-horse team for Milwaukee, Wis., where he assisted in building 100 fanning mills; afterward worked ten months in Waukesha. In 1848, removed to Independence, Ohio, where, in company with a Mr. Clark, built a saw mill, remaining here four years. In 1852, returned to Huntsburgh and built the Disciples' Church and the Town Hall. In 1854, bought a farm and saw mill, which he occupied for seven years. The winter of '61-'62 he spent in Ft. Wayne, Ind. In 1862, he returned to Northampton, Mass., where he worked at his trade till disabled by a fall from a scaffold in 1882. For some years previous he had turned his attention to stair-building, at which trade he was an adept. Like all the family, he was noted for his industry and enterprise, and as a citizen he sustained a character for moral integrity and uprightness worthy of imitation. His present residence is in Northampton.

Caleb was born in Huntsburgh, Ohio, and when 15 years of age, went with his parents to Massachusetts, where he spent four years at school and various occupations, then for three months he was at the Commercial School, at Poughkeepsie, where he graduated. For the last fifteen years he has worked for the American Organ Company, Boston, where he has the credit of accomplishing more work than two ordinary men. An ingenious and natural mechanic; never idle, correct in his habits, and for truth and veracity in all his intercourse with men, a model.

Lucie J., third child of Nelson and Martha C., was born in Huntsburgh, Ohio, September 30, 1855. She is at present, 1889, unmarried. At the age of 7 years, removed with her parents to Northampton, Mass. At the age of 4 years she began her school days, and with the advantages of the schools in Northampton, she made rapid progress until she reached the High School. Here, by too close application, her health began to fail, and the principal advised her to suspend her studies for a season. Not willing to be idle, she learned the trade of mantua-maker, and for some years continued her work in the same shop. Not satisfied with the way in which the work was done, she resolved to open a shop on her own account; with this as her motto: "Whatever work I do shall be well done." Commencing on a small scale with two or three hands, she finally, in 1882, with strong competition, was obliged to employ eighteen helpers to do her work. Bringing into her enterprise a native skill and taste, energy and indomitable perseverance, with only her scissors, needle and skillful fingers (her only capital), she built up a business with these which few have been able to attain to, not only in her own vicinity, but in adjoining States. By her hard work she is now laid aside—an invalid.

Dr. John Loud was born in Weymouth, Mass., and was but 3 years old when his father was drowned. Susannah Shaw, his wife, was born in Cummington, Mass., where they were married. With the other children, he was taken very early by his guardian, Lebbeus Bates, to Cummington, where he remained until his marriage. During this time, having fitted himself for the practice of medicine, located himself in Copenhagen, Lewis county, N.Y., which was then but a wild hemlock swamp. In 1812, he purchased seventy acres of land, where the flourishing village of Copenhagen now stands. In 1818, by his efforts, with a few others, a Congregational Church was built. In 1822, mainly by his influence, and against strong opposition, the first temperance society was organized. As a Christian, was ever a consistent one, and as a citizen, was foremost in promoting every system of reform. In politics, was a strong and uncompromising Anti-Slavery Whig, and as a man and a physician was greatly beloved. He and his wife both died in Copenhagen, N.Y.

They lived at the homestead of his father, Keen, until his death, in 1837. The widow still remaining on the farm until 1843, when she married John Barker. In 1852, having sold the Keen farm, they removed to near Gouverneur, St. Lawrence county, purchasing a farm, on which they lived until the death of Mr. Barker, in 1854. She then sold her farm and purchased a lot and built a house in the village of Gouverneur, into which she moved in 1860. Occupying the same until 1881, when she removed to West Carthage, Jefferson county, where she now (1889) resides.

John Darwin Loud was born in Copenhagen, Lewis county, N. Y. He had only the ordinary advantages of a common school education, but being a great reader and thinker, by these means, became a man of more than ordinary intelligence and good common sense. By occupation he was a cabinet-maker, and for more than thirty years was undertaker and furniture dealer. Was an industrious and hard laboring man; strictly conscientious in all his dealings; was a consistent member of the Congregational Church and a constant attendant to all its duties. With a loving and affectionate disposition, his heart was ever open to the wants and woes of the needy, which endeared him to the whole community in which he lived, and as he lived, so he died, respected and beloved by all.

Oliver Loud was born in Weymouth, Mass., and was but 2 years old when his father was drowned. At an early age he was taken by his guardian, Lebbeus Bates, and brought to Cummington, Mass., where he lived until he was 21 years old with Dea Whitmarsh, who for his services, gave him a suit of clothes and $100 in money. In 1803, he came to Palmyra, Monroe county, N.Y. He was one of the early settlers of the town of Perrinton, and came to Egypt in 1806. Kept a tavern in his log house for some years, and afterward opened a small store. In 1825, built a saw-mill with a twenty-foot overshot wheel, bringing the water from three small streams over one mile. During the years from 1820 to 1830, he published an almanac, and furnished weather tables for other publishers. Was well versed in astronomical science, which he obtained by using his evenings in study by fire light (candles being too expensive). His days at the same time, were occupied clearing up his new farm. In the time of the Morgan excitement he was a thorough anti-Mason. His wife was born in Palmyra where they were married in 1805.

He was a mechanical genius, turning his hand to every kind of wood-work he undertook, but became a farmer, which was his principal business for many years. Was a self-educated man; a great reader with a retentive memory, which enabled him to store up the results of his reading for after use. In 1864, he was appointed post-master, which office he held for over twenty years; was clerk of the church forty years, and Coroner many years. The last twenty years he has been, in a small way, a country merchant. In politics is a Republican, and in the time of the Buck-tails, was a Clintonian dyed in the wool. Of a quiet, peaceable disposition; to know him was to love him. As a citizen he is highly esteemed for his upright and honorable course in all his acts and dealings.

Oliver M. Loud and Jane E. Austin were both born and married in Egypt, Monroe county, N.Y., where the first twenty-five years of their lives were spent. In 1858, he was engaged in the nursery business, with J. G. Ramsdell. In 1861, they removed to Adrian, Mich., continuing in the same business for five years, when he sold out his interest, except the ornamental department, in which he continued for three years, then engaged in importing nursery stock. In 1880, he returned to Egypt, where he is employed, in the season, in evaporating small fruits and apples.

Nellie A. Loud was born in Adrian, Mich., and William W. Crocker in Fairport, Monroe county, N.Y. They were married in Egypt; Nellie graduated from the Rochester Female Seminary in 1883. After their marriage they went directly to Selma, Ala., where Mr. Crocker was employed as traveling agent for the De Land Soda Manufacturing Company. He is now engaged in the dairy business, with very good prospects, in Selma, Alabama.

D	JOHN P. CURRAN LOUD, CLARISSA CLARK,	Jan. 7, 1814. Dec. 25, 1821.	May 29, 1842.

John P. C. Loud was born in Egypt, and Clarissa in Kingsboro, N.Y. They were married in Victor, N.Y. In 1858, they settled on a farm in Egypt, remaining there five years, then removed to Brighton, near Rochester, for two years. In 1867, returned to Egypt, where for sixteen years he was working a farm and nursery. In 1883, he settled in Kansas, six miles from Emporia, where he is largely interested in raising forest and nursery stock with a fair prospect of success. A man industrious, of good sterling character, temperate in his habits, kind to the poor and needy, and a friend to every one.

Children—none.

Both born, married and have always lived in Egypt or vicinity. In relating his history we prefer to use his own words: "Born early in the nineteenth century, when educational advantages were quite limited, especially to those in indigent circumstances, which, unfortunately, was the case of my parents. Consequently, up to the time I was 13 years old, I received but a very limited education, at which time I went to live with Artemus Ward and his widowed mother, at Macedon Centre, Wayne county, N. Y. Remaining with them on a farm until I was 17 years old, receiving a good common school advantages, during the winter seasons while there, and working on the farm in summers. After this I worked as a farm hand in the summer and taught school winters for about eight years. I then turned my attention to building up a home for myself. Being endowed with moderate mechanical ability, I built me a house, including carpenter, joiner and mason work with my own hands. At the age of 28 I married my wife, who bore me one son, whose name, had he lived, had been called Stewart Loud. Thus to date, February, 1889, we have lived and labored together for more than forty years of happy life, adopting the old adage, "that what we spend we have," thus enjoying the sweets of life, day by day as we go along. My occupation has been principally in cultivating small fruits, but especially of choice grapes. Politically I was first a Henry Clay Whig, and cast my first vote in 1840 for W. H. Harrison for President. At the organization of the Republican party I was one of the first to adopt its creed and join its ranks, helped to carry the same to its majority, from which I have received many honors. I am neither given to profanity, to the use of spirituous liquors or tobacco in any form. Fond of all innocent amusements.

"I believe that all men are naturally religious, when we contemplate nature in all her beauty; when we consider the harmony existing between the mineral, the vegetable and the animal kingdoms; when we contemplate the solar system and a long way beyond, we behold law, law in all things, it is altogether beyond my conception. I cannot conceive of an individual being, a governor without location. I cannot locate, without destroying omnipresence. Not being able to believe without evidence, and not having the evidence, I cannot arrive at definite ideas of our future state of existence. I believe in good works, and expect to abide the consequences of whatever judgments may come against me."

1.	GERTRUDE MARIA S.,	Dec. 17, 1863.	Middleport, N. Y.	Unmarried.

Charlotte Maria was born in Egypt, N.Y. She was first married to Benjamin Stewart of Middleport, N.Y., with whom she lived one year. She afterward married Zadoc B. Stewart, her first husband's brother, who was a farmer, and they lived in Middleport till their death. Their only child, Gertrude Maria, was born in Middleport. Her early education was only what the common school afforded. In 1882, she entered the normal school at Brockport, N.Y., from which she graduated in June, 1885. At the beginning of the school year of 1886, she was engaged as teacher in the High School at Lockport, where she is still at work, being well adapted, both by her natural and acquired qualifications to succeed in her chosen profession.
