PREFACE

In the compilation of Volume II, the purpose is the same as before in Volume I, — to preserve for History's sake certain Ligon family records of current interest, brought to light through intensive research since the publication of the first edition on December 18, 1947. The hopes and aspirations emphasized in the conception and fulfillment of Volume I appear more real and pressing in these days of World chaos and threats of war: and the true ideals of home, country and peace proclaim with startling and amazing clearness that it is good to love one's native soil, and to cherish the traditions which give character to a family; and that man is master of himself!

Of necessity, this Volume must be limited in space, leaving much to the future historian. It is significant in pointing out that of some early Ligon kinsmen, whose family records are herein included, either no present day descendants appear to exist, or none could be discovered with whom to establish immediate communication.

In the Appendix here-to there have been included Addenda and Corrigenda, comprising new notes and additions to the text of Volume I, The Ligon Family and Connections, thus bringing both new interest and intrinsic value to the first edition.

Some of the family records herein begin with a late or living ancestor, and to economize in the use of space and prevent repetitions, the record from the known ancestor is not carried back to the founder, Col. Thomas¹ Ligon. The condensed tables found on pages xxii, xxiii, xxiv, and xxv of Volume I, may be referred to for completion of a liue of descent, and at the same time for establishment of a degree of relationship with the founder.

We should be lacking in gratitude if we omitted to thank all of those who have assisted so generously in every way, making possible the publication of this book; and cordial indebtedness is acknowledged, especially to The Rt. Hon. 8th Earl Beauchamp, of Madresfield Court, Malvern, England; Dr. Albert E. Gubelmann, of New York, N. Y.; Mrs. Ethel W. Pannill, of Bronxville, N. Y.; Mr. Robert C. Ligget, of Valley Forge, Pa.; my son, Mr. William D. Ligon, III, of Baltimore, Md.; Mr. Robert M. Jeffress, of Richmond, Va.; Mr. Earle Ligon Whittington, of Memphis, Tenn.; and to my brother, Mr. P. Garland Ligon, of Ashton, Maryland, for their untiring cooperation and assistance.

CHAPTER I

MADRESFIELD COURT THROUGH THE AGES

Thanks, in full measure, are due Miss Catherine Olive Moody who has so willingly given permission for the reproduction of this chapter from her charming and valuable book, The Silhouette of Malvern ficm Queen Victoria to Queen Elizabeth II, with thirty-four most excellent illustration drawings by her, and splendidly prefaced by The Rt. Hon. The Earl Beauchamp, of Madresfield Court, and printed in 1953, at The Priory Press, Malvern. A limited number of members of the Ligon family in America have also enjoyed reading, and with peculiar charm, Miss Moody's book, and will again appreciate the opportunity to read, — "Madresfield Through The Ages".

"In addition to the everlasting glory of its Hills, Malvern has had many claims to fame and importance down the ages; the ancient British camps and Shire Ditch; the eleventh century Priory Church with its peerless stained glass; the Water Cure; the Drama Festival; and in more recent times the association with the development of Radar.

"But to the true lover of Malvern, whether resident or transient, the great charm of the town lies in its streets which go up and down, filled with houses, churches, shops and inns, built in a bewildering variety of architectural styles jostling together without the trace of a plan, yet forming a picturesque, happy and homely entity which is never dull but full of endless surprises as unnoticed oddities and unexpectedly beautiful vistas come to light.

"'The Silhouette of Malvern' sets out to explain some of the reasons for this architectural potpourri, and traces the development of the town from the Victorian era to the present day. While avoiding the pedantic precision of a history or a guide book, it presents a good deal of solid information in an interesting and readable manner enlivened with touches of humour.

"The book is based on a series of articles which appear in the "Malvern Gazette" and are reprinted by courtesy of the proprietors, Messrs. Berrows Newspapers Limited. In addition to much revision, a number of new drawings have been included."

MADRESFIELD COURT THROUGH THE AGES

Probably begun by the de Bracys, the ancestors of the Beauchamp family, the building of Madresfield Court has been continued, at intervals, ever since. Right up to the beginning of the present century extensive structural work has gone on. William de Bracy, living at Madresfield in 1260 when it was still part of the Malvern Chase, may have erected the first walls within the circle of the moat. This continuous growth makes Madresfield Court a remarkable illustration of the historic development of the English manor house.

The Court as we see it to-day is still surrounded by a deep moat; it is extensive and rambling in plan, rooms jut out at various angles; it is built in many styles and varies in surface from the lichened stones of the foundation and the warm Tudor brick, to the roof's topography of hills, valleys and peaks that spreads from the parapet to gable and spire.

Stage by stage the Court has been enlarged and from each stage can be seen the progress of domestic life. The days of the medieval community when the Great Hall was the chief and almost only apartment have left their evidence in the central hall and the moat. So have other periods down to the nineteenth century when the complex household required separate rooms to be designed for every activity and was one reason for the extensive building done in the last thirty years of the century.

The history of Madresfield Court from 1260 is given in a series of seven thousand deeds which make it possible to know something of the architectural changes at precise dates, and from the inventories can be discovered much information about interior design and furniture. In a broadcast made in 1950 Earl Beauchamp spoke of an inventory that is preserved in Madresfield Library. This inventory, made for Richard Lygon on October 10th, 1584, is particularly notable because it reveals so much about the life of that time—its austerity and simplicity. The contents of the rooms are listed and one main bedroom contained only a truckle bed, a white rug and a small joynted chair.

At the end of the sixteenth century the bare interior of the medieval house was quickly giving way to the rising fashion for rich hangings, carpets, upholstered seats and deeply carved woodwork. A schedule made in 1619 to the will of Sir William Lygon shows that appreciable changes had taken place, and there was an increase of luxury during the time between the two documents.

The earliest documentary reference to the house occurs in 1451 when Isabel Bracy granted her grandson William Lygon the use thereof reserving for herself "the house called le Yatehouse (Gate House) with the Upper and Lower Chambers and two chimneys attached to the same."

This building would not have been the first house but must have been erected on the site of a former one. Successive additions have covered Isabel Bracy's house which is now, no doubt, incorporated in the footings and cellars

At present the south front of Madresfield Court shows a considerable amount of sixteenth century work which marks the time of a burst of building activity. Further work was carried out in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The restoration and reconstruction of the late nineteenth century has preserved the sixteenth century part and brought it back to its original appearance where alterations made in the intervening period had disguised the style of architecture of the earlier parts.

Thus the Victorian builders differed from their ancestors. For the first time the additions to the existing house were made in a style that was by then, historic. Previous additions had always been carried out in the current fashion of the period, no stylistic concessions being made to that which had gone before. The Victorian era added a great deal to the Court and in every instance a revived style was used. The modification and growth of the plan went on as it had done before but the architecture was adapted to the former building.

Although it would be interesting to discover the earliest foundation of Madresfield Court we are here more concerned with the way in which the present appearance has been arrived at, rather than a search for remaining parts of original footings. To look at Madresfield Court simply as an example of styles of architecture would be to miss half its significance. Just as the inventory quoted earlier sheds light on the life of 1584, so the successive extensions to the building reveal much of the habits and standards of life at different times.

The life of each generation is imprinted on the house and the needs of individuals are reflected in the additions made. Those whose chief interests were sport would build stables; a member of the family interested in books would add a library. The stables show their period by the style of architecture used, the books in the library tell something of the reader's taste and the extent of the knowledge of the time.

Things quite remote from the domestic world can be found to have affected the arrangements at Madresfield. One instance is in the use of gunpowder for mine blasting in the early seventeenth century and the improvement of fire-arms. Armour became obsolete and ceased to be used in battle. In 1584 the contents of the Gallery at Madresfield was nearly all armour—in 1681 the only contents mentioned were thirty-two pictures.

There seems to have been a general increase in the desire for privacy and this is reflected in the plan of the house. Small rooms seemed to have been divided off larger rooms. The Great Chamber had a Little Chamber within it: there was a Great Parlour and a Little Parlour and a Study within the Great Parlour and one finds the words Withdrawing Room used in their original sense. Colonel Lygon in his Will mentions "my upper little wainscoat study and the Chairs in my Withdrawing-room".

Towards the middle of the seventeenth century the art of clock making was quickly advancing to a high standard of excellence. Such men as Joseph Knibb, Robert Hooke, the clockmaker to Charles II, and Thomas Tompion, were typical craftsmen of the age. They attained, with finely made and accurate mechanisms, a degree of precision that in former times had not been thought of. Never before in history had such a degree of punctuality and regularity been possible. The time when men ordered their lives by the sun and the hour glass was past. This minor revolution must have affected everyone's lives and at Madresfield the fact that a room known as the Clock Room was there in 1681 shows the importance attached to the new mechanisms.

The addition to the Court of various places connected with housekeeping and cookery shows how this side of life became more complex and varied. To the Buttery Kitchen, Dey House (Dairy) and Cheese Chamber of the first inventory was added Cider, Perry and Wine Cellars, a mill house and Corn Chamber. In Colonel William Lygon's Inventory the Press Chamber mentioned may signify an increase in the quantity of household linen.

A Banqueting House is mentioned in the same inventory and is likely to have been a detached garden house for it was the fashionable custom then to hold feasts out of doors in elaborate summer houses with much colourful pageantry.

The effect of the interests of one individual can be found in the addition to Madresfield Court in the time of Sir William Lygon. At first there were no pictures, books or maps. In 1681 it appears that a numerous collection of pictures and maps and a library of 530 books had been accumulated.

One homely note appearing in the inventory gives an insight into the household maintenance of former days. In the inventory of 1584 there were two thrum cushions. In 1624 four old thrum cushions are listed.

Typically the eighteenth century brings record of a coach and horses.

Coach building was by then rapidly improving and better roads encouraged travel. There are also records of silver and furniture, as would be expected in the age of Paul Lamerie and Chippendale.

The craftsmanship of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was very skilled. Design was vigorous and robust. Any production, even the least important, or even that part of an article such as the interior of a clock, that is not usually visible, was beautifully made and embellished, and the many things that have survived to this day at Madresfield can be seen to be works of remarkably rich and satisfying qualities.

To-day Madresfield Court can be seen to be essentially a Tudor manor house and the Long Gallery gives the key to its period since it is the room chiefly characteristic of Tudor building. There is a panel over the entrance bearing the date of 1593 and the initials of Sir William Lygon and his wife, and it is thought that this date indicates the completion of the Tudor building. This panel is not in its original position but has been placed in the façade that is mostly Tudor.

The one apartment belonging to the medieval manor house that would have been retained by the Tudor builders is the Great Hall. In 1865 when it was found necessary to restore the Great Hall it still possessed all the usual medieval features. At one end there was the screen and the passage to the Buttery, at the other was the Small Dining-room with the small Withdrawing-room or Solor above, which communicated with the Long Gallery. The hall was constructed of a timber framework with wattle and daub filling which was encased in brickwork or roughcast. This is the authentic construction and plan for the earliest type of manor house. Evidently the core of the medieval Madresfield house—the Great Hall—remained untouched, whilst the Tudor Madresfield Court grew up round it.

It is now an impressive interior imbued with the spirit of medievalism. The tall stone mullioned windows dominate the scene. Above, the open timbering of the roof is dimly visible in the reflected light which glints here and there on carved bosses and mouldings and shows the lacy web of ancient banners thrust out into space high up amongst the beams. In the wide fireplace rises up the smoke from cheerfully glowing logs. All round, the high panelling makes a dark background for fine paintings, and above there is many a candled chandelier. At the end of the Great Hall is the minstrels' gallery where choristers have often stood to sing the Christmas carols.

When in 1863 the fifth Earl Beauchamp engaged Philip Charles Hardwick, the architect, to survey Madresfield Court, it was found necessary, in many parts, to reconstruct rather than to repair.

Between 1863 and 1888 work was almost continuously in progress on the Court. In the first two years the reconstruction of the Great Hall, the large dining room, the Long Gallery and the rooms under the Gallery, was undertaken. After the death of the fifth Earl, his successor began the restoration of the front of the house. During 1866-7 a block consisting of the Music Room, Drawing Room, Book Room and bedrooms was built and the restoration of the old fabric was continued. A Victorian version of Tudor and Medieval styles was used for the additions so that there was harmony between the old and the new.

Whatever the purpose of the building they were designing, Victorian architects had an inescapable desire to use styles of the past. This had the advantage of making the Victorian designer all the more capable of being in sympathy with such a project as the restoration of a house of original Medieval and Tudor structure.

The nineteenth century interest in the past was quite a new outlook. Previous builders had not attempted to preserve the past unless it was useful and they often transformed an old building so that it appeared to be of the newer style. Churches and cathedrals frequently show signs of thirteenth or fourteenth century restyling.

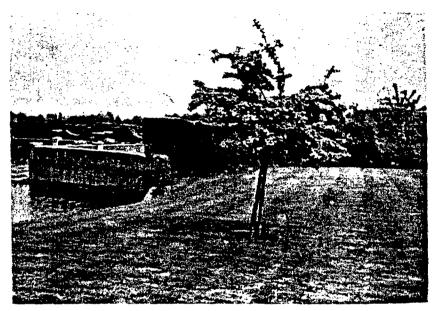

In the eighteenth century, the Elizabethan leaded and mullioned windows were replaced by the then new sash windows, which were different in proportion to the original casements and quite alien in character. However they remained for perhaps a century and, as an early photograph of the Court shows, the effect of sash windows in a Tudor façade with crowstepped gables was confused and nondescript, although the thick ivy on the walls masked the discrepancy and gave a generally pleasant and homely appearance.

In 1875 casement windows of Tudor style were restored and then in 1885 the middle portion of the south-west side was raised and the gables repeated a storey higher, a somewhat drastic alteration it would seem, but now it is almost undetectable, there being only a slight change of colour in the bricks. The increased height of the gables has the advantage of giving point to the bridge approach and entrance to the Court and restoring importance where there had been a loss of emphasis through other parts growing up around it, and on these grounds the change is fully justified.

Other changes have come about and have been swept away again. At one time a covered corridor had been built across the central courtyard. In 1863 this was removed and the whole area roofed over with glass supported by iron columns, making a kind of conservatory and as such would have been the most purely Victorian project carried out, possibly having some of the Crystal Palace character. After some years this was removed and the architect, Frederick Preedy, reconstructed the balconied façade overlooking the courtyard and a mosaic pavement was laid.

A new wing added by Hardwick in 1866-7 includes the big Drawing Room, contains well-planned, well-lighted apartments in which there are no very obvious Revived Gothic or Tudor features.

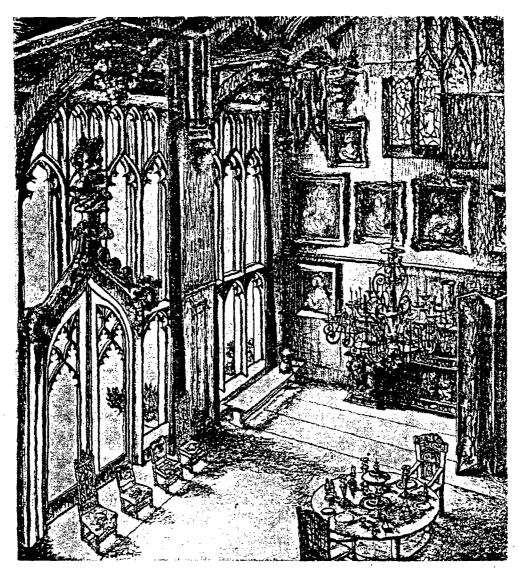

The exterior on the other hand lacks nothing to make it a completely Tudor front. The red brick walls are topped by a fine and elaborately carved parapet, the windows are stone mullioned casements and project in a number of bays. The gables of the roof are varied, some are timbered, another group are finished in the Dutch style, that is with coping carried up in a series of steps and curves to the angle of the roof. The chimity's are decorated with barley sugar twists and diaper patterns in the brickwork all in the Tudor tradition. On most sides the walls of the Court rise sheer from the water of the moat. Except for the angles made by the projecting wing, there is no open ground within the moat. This ground has been made into a pleasant paved garden.

There are only two ways into the Court across the moat. These are the Bridge entrance, and a covered way to the game larder which was built in 1870. Before the game larder was built there was only a small plank bridge and that had not been there for very long. The original purpose of the moat made it prudent to have only one entrance so that the house could be effectively fortified, and so it had remained as it was from earliest times, and now Madresfield Court is still surrounded by water with only these two bridges connecting the "island" with the "mainland".

Another, and this time an abstract bridge, links Madresfield closely with the present day. The relics of the earliest fortifications can be seen on the one hand; on the other hand the origins of modern architectural design can be seen in the work done at Madresfield by the contemporaries and followers of William Morris.

In 1902, Lettice Countess Beauchamp made a wedding gift of the decoration of the Chapel to her husband William, 7th Earl Beauchamp. The room, known as Charles II's room, and an old library were reconstructed for this purpose. The Stuart or Tudor core received a Gothic exterior and the interior is an interesting example of the ideals of William Morris, and for this reason is a significant landmark of modern design.

Morris, as a boy of 17, refused to go round the Great Exhibition of 1851, protesting that it was "worderfully ugly". His work represents a decided break with mid-Victorian design. The Gothic revivalists were interested partly in the romantic attitude towards Gothic as found in the novels of Sir Walter Scott and in the details of its ornament. Morris followed Ruskin and, imbued with respect for the dignity of labour, became a rebel against mechanised production. He, too, looked to the Medieval period for what he sought. This was not because of its romantic appeal but in order to find the source of true craftsmanship. From this he discovered the essentials of pure design and formed the basis for subsequent development. In pictorial art Morris and the pre-Raphaelite painters looked to nature to free their art from artificiality.

Charles March Gere, R.A., worked with William Morris for the Kelmscott Press and his paintings in the panels of the altar triptych in the Chapel of Madresfield Court have the fine colour and handling typical of the best traditions of the late pre-Raphaelite School. The paintings are in tempera and the centre panel shows Our Lord in an upper chamber inviting all people to come to Him to partake of His table. On the wings of the triptych are panels showing the reaper and the vine dresser tending the grapes. Below are two small panels in which the subjects are "The Israelites feeding upon manna" and "The Israelites who carried the grapes of Eshcol", both compositions containing many figures and interesting details.

When the triptych is closed two more panels are seen; the subjects are St. Mary Magdalene and St. Peter, and below are scenes from the lives of the two saints. Mr. Gere also designed the altar frontal which was embroidered by the two eldest of the seven daughters of the Rev. Mr. Munn who was for many years Rector of Madresfield (1856-1906).

The impression received when entering the Chapel is of a profusion of flowers which cover the walls and ceiling and twine round the gallery. This mural painting is the work of Mr. Henry A. Payne and it is full of the daylight brightness and fresh colouring that the pre-Raphaelites brought into art from nature.

All round the Chapel is painted a trellis with roses growing over it. The lush grass in which children are playing is thickly strewn with flowers. At the east end there is the figure of Christ surrounded by adoring angels and below on the left side kneels Lettice, Countess Beauchamp, whose wedding gift to her husband was the decoration of the Chapel. She is wearing her wedding dress. On the right is Earl Beauchamp in his Coronation robes.

The children are their sons and daughters. On the north wall are two little boys and an angel. Both William, now Earl Beauchamp, and his brother, Hugh Patrick, sat as models for Mr. Payne to paint. One is listening to an angel with blue wings playing on an instrument; the other has his hands full of flowers. Their sisters are with angels with wreaths of sweet peas and are gathering blooms. Flowers are everywhere and they are not conventionalised forms. The organ and gallery mouldings are studded with them, even in the smallest part. The brilliant red of carnation, blue of forget-me-not and flax and the pink of roses are set off by the gilt and carving and enhanced by the coloured light from the stained glass windows.

The stained glass is also the work of Mr. Payne and the rich colouring, the vigorous drawing and boldly planned leads, show the return to straightforward craftsmanship that was the ideal of the movement.

In one window, Our Lord works in the carpenter's shop, another shows the Baptism of Christ. There is also the scene of Our Lord rising from the tomb, and in a window near the stairs is the Centurion kneeling before Christ.

Many other episodes are shown in small compositions and every window presents interesting and lively scenes with often a glimpse of distance or an open view.

Other artists have made contributions to the interior. The silver crucifix and candlesticks were made by Mr. and Mrs. Gaskin, the altar book bound by Mrs. Noble. The triptych, which is carved and gilded, was designed by Mr. Bidlake.

The screen behind the seats is glazed with a number of small panes of glass. Each pane is painted with a different motif illustrating a text. The dove returning to the ark, and the Israelites passing through the Red Sea, are but two of the many that deserve study, for they have a strength of drawing quite reminiscent of Holbein's woodcuts. These panes, known as 400 years old tile removed during repairs to roof of Madresfield Court, 1956.

"quarries", were designed by Mr. Lamplough. The chalice and paten and one of the stained glass windows are by Mr. and Mrs. Hilton.

This group of artists, working together towards the same ideals, has achieved in this Chapel a remarkably unified example of late pre-Raphaelite art

An exhibition was recently held at the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, of Victorian and Edwardian Art, which should do much to correct false impressions about art of those periods. The year 1902 is still too near to the present day for the significance of the art of the period to be fully assessed. The crucifix and candlesticks from Madresfield were loaned to this exhibition where the work of many famous designers was shown.

Madresfield Chapel is of particular interest because it is a complete ensemble and here, better than anywhere, the value of the William Morris movement can be seen and its spirit can be appreciated.

There is an unobtrusive building that must be mentioned because the architect has had great influence on the trend of modern architecture. In 1867 the dovecote at Penn Farm, Madresfield, was built by Norman Shaw, who has been described recently by John Betjeman as "the greatest architect since Wren." Norman Shaw followed William Morris as a pupil of George Edmund Street. The time of building makes the dovecote important because, with the Chapel, it connects Madresfield with the earliest origins of present-day taste.

This history of the building of Madresfield Court is an illustration of the whole history of domestic architecture, right from the days of the timbered Great Hall up to the period of the reform of design by the followers of John Ruskin in whose work can be seen the source of modern development in architecture and the design of houses and everyday things.

The building of the Court has gone on through the centuries like a living organism. It does not have the symmetry of the great eighteenth century houses but it has been planned functionally and spreading over the centuries its design belongs to many epochs and is implicated even in the modern age. Madresfield's long history is like the growth of a great tree in its gradual and almost organic tempo of development; from this it derived character and richness and, at the same time, the power of being adapted to contemporary life.

The Vestry Book of Petsworth Parish, 1677-1693 edited by Chamberlayne, p. 3, et seq. Mason-Records of Colonial Gloucester County Vol. II, p. 115, cites a York County deed, dated Sept. 19, 1700, which proves that William<sup>2</sup> Hansford of Petsworth Parish was the form of John's Hansford of York and the fether of the state of the seq. worth Parish, was the son of John' Hansford of York and the father of: i. He was, after cessation of hostilities, made a prisoner by Governor Sir William Berkeley, tried by a so-called "Council of War", condemned to death for his participation as a supporter of Bacon and his cause, and hanged by order of the Governor, in Accomack County, on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. A paper which treats particularly of Major Thomas? Hansford's part in Bacon's Rebellion, by Mrs. Annie Tucker Tyler, and known as "Thomas Hansford, First Native Martyr to American Liberty" was published in the Virginia Historical Magazine, Vol. XI, Neco Series, pp. 193-201.

When he was captured after Bacon's death he supplicated no other favor than that "he might be shot like a soldier and not hanged like a dog." We are also told that during the short respite allowed him after his sentence, "he professed repentance and contrition for all the sins of his life, but refused to acknowledge what was charged against him as rebellion to be one of those sins, desiring the people present to take "notice that he died a loyal subject and lover of his country, and that he had never taken up arms but for the destruction of the Indians who had murdered so many Christians". In his deposition dated Jan. 9, 1671-2, he states his age was then twenty-five years old. He came into possession of his property, both real and personal, Nov. 12, 1667, and the order states that "he was then of age". He was bald at a very early age, and the crier, who seems to have been facetiously inclined, was wont to call the clerk to his duties at the court-house door with "John Camm! John Camm! Little bald-headed man! Little bald-headed man!" He married Elizabeth Powell, the daughter of Thomas Powell, who was known as "gentleman" Tom in contradistinction to "shoemaker" Tom Powell of another family. Her mother was Betsy Thomas, daughter of Cornelius Thomas, of Albemarle County. Bishop Meade mentions the Thomases as a prominent family before the Revolutionary War. The Powells were for over a hundred years prominent in Amherst County affairs. Several members of the family going to Congress, etc. The name is now extinct in Amherst, but there is not an Amherst family of any note that has not Powell blood in their veins. He returned in 1775 and was made minister of Drysdale parish, in Caroline County. its sphere of influence and to take an even higher rank among the institutions of learning in America.

(Record Book 1671-1676, Clerk's Office, Tappahannock, Va.) On November 20, 1668, he bought 800 acres on the south side of Rappahannock River. (Rappahannock Records 1668-1672, p. 90). On April 12, 1673, he bought 500 acres on north side of Rappahannock River. A Royal grant of 2400 acres was made by Sir William Berkeley, Governor of Virginia, to Thomas' Pannill, whose will is dated May 11, 1676, proved August 14, 1677.

Charles Jackson<sup>10</sup> Pannill, married in Christ Church, Norfolk, Va., December 10, 1910, Ethel McMaster Worrell, born Granville County, N. C., September 30th, 1880, the daughter of James Richard Worrell, born January 6th, 1844, in Norfolk, Va., died August 15th 1907, buried in Blanford Cemetery, Petersburg, Va., and his wife Nora Irwin Daniel whom he married Dec. 31st, 1875, in Sherman, Texas. She was born in Louisville, Ky., September 26th, 1856, the daughter of Elisabeth Simmons Irwin and Rice Daniel, died Nov. 23rd, 1937, buried in Worrell lot, Cedar Grove Cemetery, Norfolk, Va.

The Worrell family in America descends from Sir Hubert de Warel, Lord of Arles, in Provence, and several of his sons were with William the Conqueror at the Battle of Hastings, 1066. Three of his sons fell in this battle, and William granted the coat of arms to Sir Hubert for his gallantry, and gave him large possessions in the Counties of Durham and Northumberland, and in the latter, he, by grant, erected a stately palace. His name is also recorded in the Doomesday Book. He was succeeded by his youngest son, Rudolph, who founded the Monastery of Blackburn, the ruins of which are still visible. They are sketched in Youngs History of Northumberland. They are forty two miles from Morpish, and built on solid rock. The Worrells of Pennsylvania, the eastern shore of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, are lineal descendants of Sir Hubert de Warel.

The Daniel ("Daniell" the original spelling) family was one of the first families of the old Dominion and the first person of the name in Virginia was Daniell Daniell, age 18 years, who came to Virginia in the "Bonaventure" Jan'y 2, 1634, with Robert Peyton, John Wise, and others.

The earliest records of the "Northern Neck" show that Hugh Daniell (who married Mary Billington) and his father-in-law Luke Billington were then living in what is now Richmond County, Va., 1652-1674.

Luke Billington took oath of Allegiance March 11, 1651. His will is dated November 13th, 1671, pro. May 23, 1672.

Charles Jackson Pannill, Bronxville, N. Y.

Charles Jackson<sup>10</sup> Pannill, radio executive, and early pioneer in the development of radio communications, received his education at private and public schools. He spent his summer vacations in Norfolk, Va. and it was there that he and several friends organized the West End Telegraph Co., and strung wires into the back windows of their homes, and communicated with each other at night, using the Morse code; however, when a wind storm blew their wires across the electric light wires, and set Admiral Osterhaus' house on fire — his nephew Carl Osterhaus was a member of the club — that ended that adventure in the telegraph field. But young Pannill, at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war in 1898, enlisted in the U.S. Navy, and served as Chief Operator of the U.S. Coast Signal Service at the Norfolk Navy Yard under Admiral Farquahar, the Commandant. On learning of the proposed wireless experiments to be conducted by a Professor Reginald Fessenden at Fort Monroe, Va. he resigned from the Navy and accepted a position with Professor Fessenden in 1902 at Fort Monroe, Va. where Fessenden had put up a station for experimental purposes, later in 1903 he established stations at Washington, Collingswood, N. J. and Jersey City, N. J. This was the first over-land wireless. In 1904, he attended the first installation of wireless equipment aboard a U. S. Naval Battleship, TOPEKA, for tests between the ship and the Navy Station at Navesink, Highlands, N. J. On January 1st, 1906, he sent the first transatlantic wireless message from Brant Rock, Mass. Fessenden station to the Machrihanish, Scotland, asking the temperature of the water, the reply came back by cable as a storm in Scotland had blown down the big tower. The next morning Fessenden came into the station and asked "what is the idea of wasting money to get the temperature of the water in Scotland?" But his wrath cooled at once when Mr. Pannill told him it was in answer to a test message across the Atlantic ocean. This was the first message sent and received across the ocean. He was Vice Pres. & Gen'l Mngr. of the Massie Wireless Telegraph Co. in 1907, one of the first companies to maintain ship-to-shore service on all of the Fall River line boats. From 1909-1912, Supt. of the Southern Division of the United Wireless Telegraph Co. at Baltimore, Md. He served as Superintendent of Installation & Operation of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America from 1912 to 1914. When War I was started, Mr. Pannill resigned from the Marconi Company to aid, by request, in organizing a wireless system for the U. S. Navy. He was appointed Expert Radio Aide to Admiral W. G. Bullard USN, the first Superintendent of the Naval Radio Service at the historic Station "NAA" Arlington, Va. and assisted in the establishment of the Naval Communications System, which was later moved to the Navy Department in Washington; was appointed Assistant to the Director of Naval Communications where he assumed additional assignments, including cable censorship, operation of Naval and merchant fleet traffic, and all transatlantic and transpacific radio stations.

The following is taken from a report made by the Director of Naval

Communications to the Secretary of the Navy, Josephus Daniels, July 17th, 1917:

"The position now held by Mr. Pannill in this office requires a specialized expert of wide experience, possessing highly technical and scientific knowledge of all radio apparatus, operating ability of a higher class, administrative and executive ability in the handling of commercial business, involving intricate knowledge of the commercial practice of all cables, landlines and radio operating companies, as well as the complicated methods of operation."

From about 1909 to 1914, he represented several of the large radio operating companies in Washington, in connection with all matters dealing with the Government, which included technical as well as operating details, the Government placing numerous orders for radio apparatus with one of the companies he represented, namely, the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America.

He was called into consultation with the Navy officials from time to time in connection with legislation by Congress dealing with radio communication, also by Navy officials in connection with communication which involved technical work with the Fleet Radio Officer on board the U. S. S. WYOMING, in Fleet Maneuvers, one hundred miles at sea.

Mr. Pannill's duties in connection with the following, involved: revised "Manual of Radio Telegraphy & Telephony", by Captain S. S. Robinson, U. S. Navy. This book is used extensively by the Navy and patent courts in connection with the art; developing of multiple spark gap. Used in low-power radio transmitting sets; developing of a synchronous rotary spark gap now used extensively by commercial radio companies; numerous tests on the Fessenden high-frequency alternator for wireless telephone work; developing of the compressed air condenser used by the Navy at Arlington Radio Station; developing of interference preventer for permitting several radio stations within range to communicate at the same time at different wave lengths; conducting tests for U. S. Navy between Navesink Highlands & U. S. S. Topeka and between U. S. S. ILLINOIS and U. S. S. BROOKLYN, during Fleet maneuvers in the development of a communication system for Naval fleets; has personally installed some fifteen land stations and numerous ship stations; research work in connection with electrolytic detector for the detection of electronic magnetic waves in radio signaling; was present during most of the tests conducted at the Arlington Radio Station in which communication was established by wireless telephone with Paris, Honolulu and San Francisco, as well as between the USS NEW HAMPSHIRE, 100 miles at sea, and San Francisco; author of "Commercial Traffic Regulations of Naval Communications Service", printed by the Government in 1915.

On August 7th, 1911, he was given No. 1 First Grade Commercial License issued by the Department of Commerce reading: "Expert knowledge of the Fessenden and Telefunken systems; technical expert in special high power stations".

On December 13th 1912, he was given the first radio operators Number 1., issued by the U. S. Government.

He was elected a Fellow in the Institute of Radio Engineers in 1915, and he was Secretary and Treasurer of the Washington section, shortly after the Institute was organized in 1912.

On returning to commercial life, Mr. Pannill became Vice President and General Manager of the Independent Wireless Telegraph Company in 1917 and remained in that post until 1927, and one year as President. He served as a delegate at the World Radio Conference held in 1927, and in 1929 was a delegate to the Radio Conference held in The Hague, Holland. He was instrumental in the establishment of stock quotations being sent from New York by radio to the large passenger ships, also the printing of a newspaper aboard ships, enabling the passengers to keep up with events of the day. On January 1st 1928, he became Vice President, General Manager and Director of the Radiomarine Corporation of America, which was the result of a merger with the Independent Wireless Company. He was made Executive Vice-President of the corporation in 1931, and in 1935 assumed the presidency. All during these years there was a steady advance made in radio communications particularly in ship-board installations where radio direction-finders were becoming standard equipment as were short wave transmitting and receiving apparatus.

He also served as President and Director of the RCA Institute Inc. from 1932 until 1947. He was a member of the Advisory Committee of RCA Laboratories in Princeton, N. J. from 1941 to 1945; Chairman Radiomarine Advisory Committee, RCA Pension Fund 1943-1946. Also a member RCA International Committee 1945-1949, member RCA President's Advisory Committee 1945-1949, member Radio Technical Commission for Marine Services, Washington, 1947, U. S. Delegate World International Conference held in Madrid, 1932, Prague 1937, Cairo 1938, and Atlantic City, N. J. 1947.

During his life many honors were bestowed on him. On January 15th 1919 he received from the Navy Department the following letter of commendation:

From: the Secretary of the Navy:

"The Department desires to express to you its appreciation of the services you have rendered to your country in connection with all matters pertaining to communications during the World War. In taking over all commercial radio stations at the outbreak of the War, under the Executive order, the Department realized that in order to successfully carry out this order, the services of a man well versed in all the complicated methods of such a service would be necessary. I am very glad to say that you handled the work to our entire satisfaction, and I sincerely hope that in your new endeavor you will succeed as well as you have with us. Josephus Daniels"

On April 14th, 1937, he was decorated A Chevalier de'l Ordre de Leopold in recognition of his long continued activities in the efficient radio communication at sea. For several years, he had been an active member of the Comite International Radio-Maritime with its scientific center at Brussels, Belgium. In 1935, he was elected Executive Vice-President of the Comite International Radio-Maritime. In 1943, the Veteran Wireless Operators' Association awarded him the Marconi Gold Medal of Achievement. He was a member of the New York Maritime Exchange; a Governor of the Propeller Club, Port of New York, for eleven years; member of the Board of Managers of the Seamen's House, New York, 1946-48; member of Naval Architects & Marine Engineers; Life Member of the Navy League of United States. His clubs included: India House; Lake Placid Club; Sleepy Hollow Country Club; Whitehall Club; Cosmos Club, Washington, D. C.; Rockefeller Luncheon Club. To friends in the marine industry, the Navy and other circles, his name and radio were synonymous.

5. PARTY IN HONOR OF EARL AND COUNTESS BEAU-CHAMP, MARCH 15, 1957, FROM THE PHILADELPHIA (PA.) EVENING BULLETIN OF TUESDAY, MARCH 12, 1957.

"The Swans Are Still There".

"Small Family Party in honor of noble British cousins will be attended Friday in New York by Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Ligget, of Valley Forge; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sydenham Page, of Wayne, and Mr. and Mrs. William F. Mills, of Paoli. When Lord and Lady Beauchamp were in the U. S. in 1954, they were house guests of the Liggets at Stirling's Quarters, "Echo Valley Farms", Valley Forge.

The Liggets visited their cousins at "Madresfield" several years ago. At that time, the Duke of Windsor phoned from Paris. He asked whether the swans were still in the moat. The answer was yes. And the swans, as picturesque as ever, are there to-day. Also cygnets."

6. DEATH OF REAR ADMIRAL RICHARD E. BYRD, OF THE U. S. NAVY, MARCH 11, 1957, BOSTON, MASS.

33. ii. pp. 69, 70, Vol. II. Richard Evelyn<sup>9</sup> Byrd, the first man to fly over the North and South Poles, died in his sleep at his Brimmer Street home. He was born in Winchester, Va., October 25, 1888. He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1912, and went to sea but retired after five years due to an old injury to his ankle. He was later recalled to active duty in the Navy. His greatest polar expedition was achieved when he was in his late sixties. He was in over-all command of the Naval task force, that between 1955 and 1959, was to prepare, supply and maintain a series of scientific stations in the Antarctic.

Admiral Byrd, at 68, was to have left January 15, 1957, to rejoin his expedition. But he was obliged to cancel his plans by declining health and the need to support legislation on the Antarctic program. In February, 1956, he had reiterated his desire to see the United States establish permanent stations in the remote continent — to him, as he scanned the vast white spaces, "a beautiful place".

Admiral Byrd received many decorations and citations, among them on February 21, 1956, was the Defense Department's Medal of Freedom. The presentation was made quietly by the Chief of Naval Operations, who flew to Boston, made the award, and returned immediately by air to Washington.

At his bedside when he died were his wife, the former Marie D. Ames, whom he married in 1915, and their four children, Lieut. Richard E. Byrd, Jr., of the Navy, Mrs. William A. Clarke, Jr. of Swathmore, Pa., Mrs. Robert G. Breyer, of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Lawrence J. Stabler, Jr., of Milmont Park, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia.

7. DR. J. STOKLEY LIGON, OF CARLSBAD, NEW MEXICO. P. O. BOX 950. SEE p. 459, 5, VOL. I.

Dr. Ligon's lifetime interest in birds will culminate with the publication of a book on birds of New Mexico. The book is truly a labor of love by the veteran naturalist. He will receive no royalties or profits. The book is being subsidized by the State Game and Fish Department, and individuals to keep the price range within reach of the average person.

Dr. James Stokley Ligon was born June 22, 1879, near Buda, Texas, and married April 21, 1921, Miss Rose Kunz of Pittsburgh, Pa., who shares her husband's enthusiasm for birds. In 1929, they pioneered in the establishment of a bird farm, the purpose of which was for propogation of game birds, and Mrs. Ligon capably operated the farm when the Doctor was away. The Bird Farm was later bought by the State Game Department.

In his work, Dr. Ligon has travelled by saddle horse, with two pack burros over the entire state from the hot sagebrush country to the freezing height of the three Truchas Peaks of Sangre de Christos. One winter was spent on the Black Mountain Range, — living in caves where the temperature dipped to 20° below zero.

"If a person is interested in the out-of-doors, he is interested in birds," Dr. Ligon declared, "because the welfare of the land and birds are inseparable."

He was awarded his Doctor's Degree in 1952, by the University of New Mexico.

8. MR. GRANDISON D. ROYSTON, JR., R. #3, BOX #108, HOPE, ARKANSAS.

Mr. Grandison D. Royston, Jr., under date of January 12, 1957, addressed a letter to the author reading in part as follows:

"I read your book, 'The Ligon Family and Connections' some time ago. I would like to learn from you if there is a possibility of joining The Ligon Family and Kinsmen Association? I am enclosing the lineage (of my family) from my name back to Sir Richard' Lygon (1490-1556), (18.) p. 37-38, Vol. I. I will also enclose photostat pages from several genealogical histories relating to my family."

It is regretted that Mr. Royston's family line of descent could not be included in Volume II, inasmuch as the time required for checking and research was considered too short without causing a delay in the publication of this book.

The records referred to above state that General Grandison D. Royston was the great-grandfather of Mr. Royston, Jr., above, and was born in Carter County, Tennessee, December 14, 1809. He came to Arkansas in his youth, settling in Washington in 1830. He was forever after closely identified with Arkansas history. He married Miss Clarissa Bates, of Little Rock, in 1835, and they were the parents of Charles E. Royston, who married Miss Mary Andrews of Washington, Arkansas; William A. Royston, of Little Rock, Arkansas; and Miss Irene Royston, who became the wife of Capt. Ed. Jett, of Washington, Ark.

Joshua Royston appears as the first of the name mentioned in the records, — a former native of Maryland. He married Elizabeth Strother Watson, ca. 1808, and daughter of the eminent divine, Rev. Samuel Watson of Virginia.

9. JAMESTOWN, VA., OPENED ITS COLONIAL FETE ON APRIL 1, 1957.

An eight-month festival celebrating the 350th anniversary of the arrival here of first English settlers opened today with a salute to abiding Anglo-American friendship.

Representatives of both the United States and the United Kingdom traced, at open-air ceremonies, the record of across-the-sea amity and world leadership.

They said the events in the wilderness three and a half centuries ago forged a pattern of individual liberty and progress for generations and centuries to come.

The spokesman for Queen Elizabeth II, even went so far as to suggest that Britain, no less than the United States, benefited from the Declaration of Independence.

Scores of major events are scheduled, and officials are looking forward to visits by the President of the United States, and Queen Elizabeth II, of the United Kingdom, before the $25,000,000 festival closes, November 30, 1957.

Colonel Thomas Ligon, of Madresfield Court, Worcestershire, England, born 1620/25, the founder of the Ligon family in the New World, came to Jamestown, Virginia, in 1641/42, with his near kinsman, Sir William Berkeley, Royal Governor of Virginia. The population of Virginia about this time was less than 362. The sons of Colonel Ligon emigrated to the West, South, and Southwest frontiers of Virginia, or what is romantically called "South Side" Virginia. Here they became the owners of great plantations with their slaves - forming part of a prosperous, happy, and thriving society which loved peace, but in the end chose war. Their history is inseparably bound up with that of the whole country. In every section in which they are found, they are among the leading founders, administrators of government, and promoters of industrial supremacy throughout the nation. Then, too, they are identified with those who obtained charters for the colonization in the New World as members of the London Company, the Virginia Company, and the Plymouth Company, being classed among the fathers of English colonization in America.

The following editorial, "Jamestown Reborn", appeared in The New York Times of April 2, 1957, and by special permission is reproduced here as a tribute to our ancestors who suffered, and died, that our nation might live, and which has now become the greatest nation on earth! May it ever remain a free, peaceful and God-fearing nation among the nations of the World!

JAMESTOWN REBORN

"It has been more than two and a half centuries since Jamestown, Va., was important as a town or site of government. Unlike the hard-bitten settlers who founded Plymouth and Boston, the unfortunate people who came ashore on Jamestown island 350 years ago this spring could not make good a permanent settlement on that spot.

But what traditions, some good and some not so good, they did manage to establish! Almost the whole history of the United States was foreshadowed in Jamestown's ninety-odd years as a going concern. On or near that site began the first commercial cultivation of tobacco. There the first of the Indian wars was fought and the curtain rose on the long tragedy that culminated in the Custer fight. There chattel slavery began when some thrifty Netherlanders brought in twenty Negroes to do work that white men did not like to do in the tobacco fields.

And there, just a hundred years before the Declaration of Independence, Nathaniel Bacon rebelled against the "oppressive navigation acts and high taxes" of the English Government and against the arrogance of Governor Berkeley. The rebels of 1676 failed, but the torch they lighted, which incidentally practically destroyed Jamestown, never quite went out on this continent.

These early settlers represented an English company whose share-holders wanted to get rich. The famous Capt. John Smith was looking for gold. But in spite of the practical aims of the settlers and the even more practical aims of the investors who stayed comfortably at home, the first settlement in Jamestown and those that followed at Williamsburg and elsewhere required as much courage as was shown in any of the northern colonies. We can take off our hats to the men who founded Jamestown, for even though they brought no new religious doctrine or, in the beginning, any new political doctrine, they had a grand heroic quality.

Today, and for some months to come, the celebration of this first English settlement in America will be proceeding at the restored village of Jamestown, now a national park, and in the neighboring areas of what is now the pleasant land of Virginia. By this we may be again reminded that though we are a young country we do have our history and our traditions."

10. DR. ESTES CASKIE KIDD, LOVINGSTON, VA.

(393.) ii. pp. 699, 700, Vol. I. The death of Dr. Kidd on February 18, 1957, marks an irretrievable loss to our family, to Nelson County, and to the State of Virginia, in all of which he has shown an abiding interest and will to serve all who called upon him in times of illness or distress. He was a true and loyal friend, and to know him was to love and admire him in every way!

Cut down in the prime of life, Dr. Kidd was one of the best citizens and most skillful physicians that Nelson County ever had; he will long be missed. He was always ready with his support and time for any good cause, and the establishment of the Nelson County Medical Health Center is a fitting monument to his foresight and will to serve the sick and afflicted citizens of his County. He was a gentleman of the old school and all friends alike mourn his loss. In religious faith he was a Methodist; was a member of State and National Associations for Medical and Scientific advancement; also a member of local organizations interested in the development and well-being of Nelson County and its citizens.

Dr. Kidd was born September 12, 1899, in Nelson County, Va., where most of his life was spent. After the completion of his medical course at the University of Virginia, and internship, he began the practice of medicine and gave his life and talents unstintingly to his profession.

Surviving Dr. Kidd are his widow, Mrs. Frances (Wood) Kidd; two daughters, Mrs. I. Steven Thornhill, of Lynchburg, Va. and Mrs. Richard H. Trice, of Petersburg, Va.; one brother, Harry L. Kidd, of Texas, and one sister, Mrs. Edward Stehl of Chevy Chase, Md., and five grandchildren.

Dr. Kidd was the son of Edward L. and Fannie (Dawson) Kidd, of Nelson County, Va.

Dr. Kidd was a dear friend and physician of the editor of this book, who greatly suffers his loss!

11. OBSERVANCE OF NELSON COUNTY DAY, AND THE COUNTY'S 150TH ANNIVERSARY, MAY 9TH THROUGH MAY 12TH, 1957, AT LOVINGSTON, VIRGINIA.

Since the founding of "Nelson County Day" in April 1934, seventeen years ago by Miss J. Gertrude Ligon, it has remained an annual event of special interest and good-fellowship in bringing together, — both spiritually and socially, — the people of the county, at the same time attracting friendships and the esteem from neighboring counties and in other states as well. People throughout Nelson County meet once a year in Lovingston, the county seat, where they exhibit flowers, items from the home, and produce from the farms. Business is also fully represented. They choose a queen to reign over the festivities. They meet each other in friendship and understanding. And invariably there is a big parade of real splendor and display. Nothing has happened to change that program this year. The 17th annual "Nelson County Day" in lending itself to something bigger, the 150th Anniversary Celebration, thus joining together two celebrations into one event for 1957.

The people of Nelson County began planning this year's big celebration in September, and the first organizational meeting was held in the courthouse, in Lovingston, attended by members of the Chamber of Commerce, and all other organizations of the county combined in their efforts to make the celebration the splendid success it proved to be!

Truly, "Nelson County Day" has maintained its high level and a future of "onward and upward" progress in the service of the county and the spiritual, social and economic development of its people can be assured for generations to come. As one of its citizens has said, "It's unique among county celebrations, and I know of no other county that has an affair quite like ours. The people of Nelson County appreciate its value."

As the County of your editor's birth and childhood, a word may be added about its mountains, hills, streams and fields, which forever present living pictures of rugged beauty and charm! A trip on one of the shortest railroads in the United States, The Virginia Blue Ridge Railway, which extends from Tye River to Piney River to Massie's Mill, a distance of about sixteen miles, may be seen winding its way in the shadow of Blue Ridge Mountains or over the everlasting hills!

Afton, a small town in the mountains, on the northern border of the county, may have found its name from the refrain of the old Scottish song,: "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton", and caused early settlers to feel homesick for their native Scotland!

Nelson County, formed in 1807, from Amherst, is one of the 100 Counties of Virginia, and is situated in the heart of the State in the Blue Ridge Mountains, and watered by the James, Tye, Rockfish and Piney rivers. Crabtree Falls, the highest falls this side of the Mississippi is in this County. There are numerous churches, and good schools, and tho a fruit and agricultural section, it is rich in minerals, of which Soapstone and Cyanide products are shipped to all parts of the world.

Miss J. Gertrude Ligon (389. vi. p. 697, Vol. I.), prominent in Civic and Cultural life of Nelson County; founder of Nelson County Day; Nelson County Woman's Club; Nelson County Band; and active in Health Center project development; and one of the outstanding citizens of the county, resides at Shipman, Va. and for reasons of ill health has now relinquished many of her activities, serving, only when called upon, as a consultant in the affairs of the county.

13. MR. GROVER CARLTON LIGON, SR., OF "SECLUSIVAL," SHIPMAN, NELSON COUNTY, VIRGINIA

Mr. Grover Carlton Ligon, of "Seclusival," Shipman, Nelson County, Virginia. (389.) v. p. 697, Vol. I.

(389.) v. p. 697, Vol. I. Mr. Ligon, now retired, was formerly a member of the firm of Ligon and Ligon, Inc., of Baltimore, a prominent contracting organization. Upon retiring to the "old home" he has engaged in many renovations that have brought happiness and fond memories to many, including both brothers and sisters and their descendants, as well as building a monument to the memory of his Father and Mother.

Mr. Ligon's interest in farming and the breeding of fine stock has held an important part in his life on the farm, and the beautiful fields of grain and grass for hay are in themselves a source of contentment and inspiration to all. Then too there is the relaxation to be found in the sport of fox hunting and listening to the music produced by the baying of the hounds; "possum" and 'coon hunting, and other game.

His interest in the affairs of the County places him as one of its beloved and leading citizens. His continued gifts in the building and equipping of Nelson County Medical Health Center are a lasting and notable instance of his kindness of heart and generosity.

Mr. Ligon was born at "Seclusival," October 8, 1884; attended Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va. He is the father of two children, viz: (1.) Grover C. Ligon, Jr., who has a son, Grover C. Ligon, III, and two daughters, Linda and Elizabeth; and (2.) a daughter, Carol Sue Ligon, who is a student at Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia.

DESCENDANTS OF POCAHONTAS

I. Powhatan<sup>1</sup>, born ca. 1542, died April, 1618, Mighty Prince, Emperor and absolute Potentate, was the father of,

II. Pocahontas<sup>2</sup>, Indian Princess, born ca. 1597; married at Jamestown, April 5, 1614, aged 18, to John Rolfe, aged 39, born 1585; died 1622; she died in England, March 21, 1616-17, and is said to have had twenty brothers, eleven sisters, and eleven step-mothers. One of the most beloved figures in American history, her kind and invaluable services to the colonists place her name in the front rank of the world's great women.

III. Lieut. Thomas<sup>3</sup> Rolfe, born in 1615, at "Varina," on the James River, 16 miles below Richmond and not far from the "City of Henrico." ## CHAPTER XIII

THE LIGON FAMILY PEDIGREE, 3V. AS RECORDED IN THE NAME OF WILLIAM D. LIGON, JR. SHOWING DESCENT FROM KING EDWARD, III, KNIGHTS OF THE GARTER AND FROM FIFTEEN BARONS AGAINST THE KING ON THE FIELD OF RUNNEMEDE, JUNE 15, 1215.

The Ligon Pedigree, 3V. was compiled by John S. Wurts, Esq., author of Magna Charta books, and appears on pages 2218-2223 inclusive in Part VII, of the Magna Charta series, now comprising Parts: I, II, III, IV, V, VI, and VII, published by the Brookfield Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, Pa., who has willingly given permission to reproduce Pedigree 3V. on these pages. In Pedigree 3V, the page number references are those in the Magna Charta series referred to above.

The Arms of the Fifteen Renowned Sureties, ancestors of the Ligons, were copied from the Magna Charta books, and assembled to form the

To anyone, who is interested in tracing his lineage, prior to the founding of our country, these Magna Charta series books are of much value. When a person in the series is identified as an ancestor in any given family, then every other ancestor of that person at once becomes an ancestor of that family, thus proving the story of Magna Charta, that it is indeed a Romance in its blending of the heroic, the marvelous, and the mysterious, the full significance of which only the imagination can grasp! The Ligon Family and Connections (Volume 1) by William D. Ligon, Jr., "Seclusival", Shipman, Virginia, published December 18, 1947, is a monumental history of the Ligon family, and many connecting lines, that gives not only the story of the fortunes and vicissitudes of members of a great family, but it shows in outline the greatest era in the history of the human race. It is doubted if ever before has a family history of such magnitude as The Ligon Family and Connections been published. Over 5000 families are included. It is the first single-volume work bringing together vast records to create a continuous narrative of a family and connections through many centuries. Madresfield Court which has been in the Ligon family for over nine centuries is a fact so rare that it seems almost a miracle and is a striking example of the lasting power and well-nigh indestructible quality of a family tradition and a family name. Likewise Berkeley Castle and Warwick Castle, owned by Ligon kinsmen, present a similar picture.

The book contains 975 pages, made up of 872 pages of text, 32 pages of illustrations, and 71 pages of index.

The Book Reviews which follow are by some of the well known Historical and Genealogical societies, at home and abroad, and should prove of inherent interest to all those who are interested in family history and genealogical research work.

In the "Preface" Mr. Ligon tells us this book was a childhood dream inspired by his father's stories of family prowess and pride and produced after eight years of intensive research, with excellent cooperation from descendants both here and abroad. Well may those who possess or read the dream-come-true rise up and call the author "blessed," for here he has given, in difficult times of printing and publishing, a handsome book with many lovely pictures, clear and most accurate type, containing a resumé of much of England's outstanding history and Virginia's and the United States', as well as the genealogy of many prominent families.

The destruction of many County Records limits the work, but it is proved, says Mr. Ligon, that all of the names of Ligon before the year 1800 are descendents of Col. Thomas Ligon.

The book is separated into Part I—In England, Part II—In America, subdivided with additions of the Berkeley Family, General George Washington, the Corbin Family, the Harris Family, and useful Charts and a clarifying list of English Rulers.

The author has the good fortune of knowing his English kinsman, the 7th Lord Beauchamp, intimately and visiting in Madresfield Court, which, therefore, he describes vividly. It is wonderful; we would like to visit it were we in England. It is a real home with modern conveniences; there is massiveness and grandeur, all in proportion. Portraits line the walls and "even usher one up and down the stairs." From the illustrations it is hard to say which is lovelier and has more perfect features and refinement of expression, the mother, Lady Mary (Stanhope) Lygon, or the wife, Lady Lettice (Grosvenor) Lygon, of Sir William Lygon, 7th Earl Beauchamp. There are magnificent views from the upstairs windows, with Malvern Hill in sight. This earl visits Mr. Ligon in New York and attends the Family Association meetings in Richmond and Washington. He dies suddenly in New York in 1938, and Mr. Ligon has a sadder second visit to Madresfield Court. Malvern Priory Church is described fully. It is striking for its effect of light—the builder's aim of the 15th century was to fashion buildings "like lanterns of glass"—and the glassmakers of that period "reached their highest pitch of artistry and skill in England."

Extracts from Nash's Worcestershire were given to Mr. Ligon by Sir William before his death, and these are frequently used in the narrative. Joan Bracy married Thomas Lygon before 1423 and Madresfield Court then became the seat of the Lygons. "Richard Lygon, eldest son of Thomas Lygon, must have married Anne Beauchamp not later than 1496. She was 2nd daughter and heir of Richard Beauchamp, 2nd Lord Beauchamp of Powych, and which title is now held by Richard Lygon's descendant, the present Sir William Lygon, 8th Earl Beauchamp of Powych."

Occasional letters are included and we see that women of these lines could write and had minds and wills of their own down the generations. Of Anne Lygon, Lady Pye wrote after she had married (1710-11) her 3rd husband, Sir John Guise, "Her two former spouses gave her the power, the third 'tis thought she must vail to." But Sir John didn't find it so easy, for his wife was "unready to give up all her affairs to his guidance," and this, said he, "'made her a very uneasy wife and myself unhappy with her.'"

they fought for and with kings and belonged to the nobility, being of and associating with many outstanding figures in English history, at Court, in Parliament and on the decisive battlefields. One was a Baron of Runnymede, who helped wrest the Magna Carta from "bad" King John; Corbyns, Jennings, the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, Kings and Queens, the Plantagenets, Sir Andrew Dudley involved in the conspiracy to elevate Lady Jane Grey to the throne was beheaded; another Dudley, Sir Robert, became the Earl of Leicester, the favorite of Queen Elizabeth, his first wife was Amy Robsort; another Dudley was the mother of Sir Philip Sidney, described as "the great glory of his family, the great hope of mankind, the most lively pattern of virtue, and the glory of the world," Henry Algernon Percy, 6th Earl of Northumberland, was a lover of Anne Boleyne; William Carey married Mary Boleyne, sister of Anne; Henry Carey was made Baron of Hunsdon; the Earl of Warwick, the "King Maker," married a Beauchamp; Sir Ferdinando Gorges was descended from Cicely Lygon; all samples of the inter-relationships and associates.

William Lygon, 1st Earl Beauchamp, a member of Parliament, supported William Pitt. A Lygon married a descendant of Lady Hester Pitt eldest daughter of Sir William Pitt. In this connection, Mr. Ligon tells of honoring the great Prime Minister by the names, Chatham and Pittsylvania, for counties in North Carolina and for a town and county in Virginia. He makes a slip by giving Chatham as the name of a county instead of a town and not naming Pittsylvania as a county in Virginia.

The first Lygon, Earl Beauchamp, saved an old woman from being drowned as a witch. Three of his sons fought at Waterloo.

Mr. Ligon is quite bold and fearless with his history, and is generally sound. In America, however, he gives too much praise to Captain John Smith, who until not so long ago, was accorded that place chiefly because his account was the one most published and, therefore, accepted. Others in the Colony did much more, more wisely and less cruelly and deceitfully to the Indians, to preserve and forward the settlement. He was present only a short time. Mr. Ligon picked this up most probably from Stith's History, included in his Bibliography, which follows Smith's story, often contradictory in itself. But he also includes Alexander Brown's Works, where a different view obtains. Typographical errors are so rare that Muzzly was noticeable. It was David S. Muzzey's United States of America that also is listed. From whom, we wonder, does Mr. Ligon get the idea of George Washington, "Federalists-to which he naturally belonged both by principle and policy"? True, he was anxious that the Colonies remain united and toward this end he did favor Hamilton too far too long, but he did not stand for all that the Federalists maintained.

Col. Thomas¹ Ligon, of Madresfield, Worcestershire, England, born 1586, came to Jamestown, 1641, with his near kinsman, Sir William Berkeley. He patented land in Henrico. He surveyed Mawburne Hills (Malvern Hills), situated nearby, to which he gave the name of the hill in England upon which he had so often gazed. Cockes were neighbors there and now he is associated with Richard Cocke. Richard Ligon, son of Thomas, had the surveyship passed on to him. He surveyed Manikintown among other places.

On April 18, 1644, Lt.-Col. Thomas Ligon happened to be passing Sara Woodson's home and he helped her defend her home against the Indians. They had only one gun in the house. Col. Ligon fired; "his first shot killed three Indians, his second two, and his third two more Indians." The gun with "Ligon" cut on it is now at the Virginia Historical Society's Lee House.

An interesting account is given of Sir Thomas Dale's town, Henrico, with the Guest House for Sick people, Mount Malady.

Ninepins in the 17th century, we are told, was a great game with betting. The men bet on almost any question besides. Richard Ligon lost in one of these questions. Horse-racing was participated in and there were fine race tracks at Bermuda Hundred, where Richard Ligon had an entry; at Varina, where Hugh Ligon had an entry; at Ware, where Thomas Jefferson, Jr.'s, horse, "Bony," ran against "Watt," property of Thomas Hardiman, and at Malvern Hills. The May 16, 1692, Court presents 29 men (Richard Ligon among them for swearing twice) and 3 women for swearing.

As in England, the Ligons forge to the front in public matters and are connected with many leading families. They go up the James and into the Southside and fan out South and West and by now into nearly every State in the Union. So many persons migrate from one section of Amelia County it is called "Texas Community." William W. Ligon and all his family, servants and dogs go down in wagons to settle at La Grange, Texas. They left Sept. 4, 1851, and arrived Dec. 26, 1851.

The American Ligons show the same propensity as their English fore-bears for marrying two and three and more times. Here it is noticeable that the second wife is often the sister of the first. And the women show themselves worthy. The will—1827—of Susanna Woodson Ligon in Laurens County, S. C., is interesting and seems to be much expressed in her own words and feelings. A lovely Ligon musician from South Carolina finished her musical education in Boston, New York, and Paris.

A Ligon descendant married Gen. Joseph Wheeler, of varied fame; another of earlier time, losing three sons in the Revolution, named a son born during that war for the three, John, Thomas and Wyatt, John Thomas Wyatt; Cornelia Bethune, whose father owned the negro musician, "Blind Tom," married a Ligon descendant, Mary Ann Robertson; another died from a heart attack at the burning of Columbia, S. C., by Sherman's Army. William<sup>6</sup> Ligon wrote an "Arithmetic, Improved," in 1808. He was known as William Ligon, Sen., of Prince Edward County. The book was published and approved in 1810. Gen. William Ligon was a member of the first Board of Visitors of V. M. I. and made the speech when the Flag with the motto, "Virginiae fidem praesto," was presented in 1842. The Rev. Robert Gray, who married a Ligon, "was educated at the well-known school taught by William H. Harrison in Amelia County, and at the University of Virginia." Thomas Watkins' Ligon, of Prince Edward County, became a forthright and forceful governor of Maryland in the 1850s. Robert Ligon Johnson, a lawyer, was Assistant to the Attorney-General of the United States, 1906-1914. "Since 1928 he has been copyright and consulting counsel for practically all motion picture producers. In this connection he has probably the most complete and unique library of its kind in the world."

Julia Ann (Conner) Ligon, the mother of our author, is lovely in her picture and lovely in her character as the tributes given prove. Their home was "Seclusival" in Nelson County.

2. Maryland Historical Society Magazine, Vol. XLVIII, No. 1, March 1953, page 81, published by the Maryland Historical Society, 201 West Monument Street, Baltimore, Maryland.

This is a large handsome volume containing the genealogy of the Ligon family in England and in America. The English origins of the family do not lack in interest, but many readers may find the story of the family in Henrico Co., Virginia (beginning on page 306) of more direct concern and value. Later generations, of course, have scattered throughout the country.

It is apparent that the compiler put much time and effort into the preparation of this genealogy. Conscientious effort has been made, it is obvious, to document carefully each fact and statement. Finally the volume is to be praised for a copious index covering more than seventy pages.

3. The Virginia Magazine of History and Biography, October 1948, Vol. 56, No. 4, pages 488-492 inc. published by the Virginia Historical Society, Lee House, Richmond, Virginia.

A reviewer stands appalled, both by the size of this volume and by the range of subjects treated. It would require encyclopedic knowledge, as well as a great deal of study, to appraise it properly. The following observations, therefore, are offered hesitantly and with deference to Mr. Ligon's achievements and ability.

The first paragraph of the Preface gives the author's aim: "The purpose of this volume is to reveal in an impressive way, through many successive generations, the history of the Ligon family of England and America, in the hope that such a permanent record will supply material for a wider study as well as foster historical interest in the past and stimulate fruitful zeal for the future of a distinguished family."

The emphasis in the above sentence is on the word "impressive," for in few genealogies is a family with numerous connections discussed so extensively and, at the same time, so intensively. A third of the book treats of the Ligons and their connections in England, with full royal and baronial charts; the remainder of the book is devoted to the Ligons in America.

The British section is no mere cursory notation from Burke's Peerage and a few Visitations. The Beauchamp family, with whom the Lygons (the spelling usual in England) inter-married, are discussed in a chapter of 35 pages; Pyndars (Pindars), another connection, in 3 pages; the Gorges family in 9 pages, and the Berkeleys in 52 pages, a total of 104 pages as against 88 pages devoted to the Lygon family of Madresfield Court. Among the names of persons once resident in Virginia, whose genealogy is traced, are: Anthony Savage (p. 40), living in Virginia in 1660, said to be the son of Anthony Savage "of Broadway" in the County of Worcestershire; Edward Foliott (p. 102), rector of York-Hampton Parish, who died in York County, Virginia, 1690; Henry Norwood (p. 103), author of "A Voyage to Virginia," 1649; Henry Corbin (p. 162), of England and Middlesex County, Virginia; Sir William Berkeley (p. 229); Governor Nor-borne Berkeley (p. 217), and many others. In fact, all the English portion of the book is like walking down a winding corridor meeting old acquaintances at every turn.

The chapter on the Gorges family, included because of a Gorges-Lygon marriage, is of interest because of its account of Sir Ferdinando Gorges. Sir Ferdinando (1565-1647) was first a member of the Virginia Company of London, but more closely connected with the fisheries around Cape Cod, and the affairs of the Northern Company, being a member in 1620 "of His Majesty's first Council for New England." He is honored by having a fort in Portland Harbor, Maine, named for him (p. 175) as being "the original proprietor of the Province of Maine and the father of English Colonization in America."

"The Memorials," the chapter describing the historic monuments in cathedrals, castles, and churches, erected to the memory of the Lygons and their kinsmen, fills 22 pages. It includes Malvern Priory Church, Salisbury Cathedral, Tewkesbury Abbey and other well-known places. These descriptions are well worth reading for their general and historical appeal, aside from their genealogical significance. In speaking of Salisbury Cathedral, the writer notes that Richard Beauchamp, Bishop of Salisbury in 1471, was appointed Chancellor of the Order of the Garter, an office held by succeeding Bishops until 1834. In that year, the bounds of the Diocese having been altered, Berkshire, in which Windsor is situated, was transferred to the diocese of Oxford, and the Chancellorship was also transferred. Accustomed to thinking of Windsor Castle as much later in date, this reviewer was surprised to learn that it was built by William the Conqueror in 1070 and that St. George's Chapel, famous as the scene of investitures into the Order of the Garter, was begun in 1477 and completed in 1528 by Henry VIII.

After this elaborate treatment of families and places connected with the Lygons, we come now to the crux of the whole matter — the marvelous collection of papers, or muniments, to use their correct name, that have been so carefully preserved through all the years at Madresfield. Madresfield Court, lying in Worcestershire, is "one of the few manors in England now in possession of their Domesday owners." It is these documents that confirm the lines of descent traced through the centuries and bring the past to life. There are six classes of the muniments: first, the ancient deeds which date from about the middle of the thirteenth century; secondly, the modern deeds, some 4,000 in number, the great majority being in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries; thirdly, the miscellaneous rolls, among which are eight farming accounts of the fifteenth century; fourthly, books, one of them a book of rentals of the Corbin estate 1509-1572; fifthly, court rolls and manorial papers relating to twenty different manors; sixthly, correspondence, embracing letters dating from 1610 and shedding light on family, friends and relationships and general living conditions.

The author had the inestimable good fortune in 1938 of visiting the late Sir William Lygon, Seventh Earl Beauchamp, at Madresfield and of being privileged to study the muniments, and visit the various cathedrals and other buildings in which were Lygon memorials. The author had the further good fortune of finding Sir William Lygon much interested in the history of the family and willing to take an active part in the Ligon Family Association organized in 1937 by the author. Sir William came to the United States in 1938, was elected President of the Association on October 14th, but unfortunately, died in New York on November 14th, while preparing to return to England.

The reviewer knows of no other American family endeavoring to establish its English origin on whom fortune has smiled so broadly and showered such treasures.

We leave the charm of Madresfield and come to Virginia, where, in 1657, we find Captain Ligon (to use the Virginia spelling) a justice of Charles City County (p. 310). The author states that he came in 1641 with his kinsman, Governor Berkeley, but no proof is given. Captain Thomas is placed as one of the eight children of Thomas and Frances (Dennis) Lygon, since he's the only one not accounted for, not only the only one of their children but the only Thomas Ligon of the right generation who is utterly untraced in English Diocesan court records and Parish Registers. The well-known historian, John Smith of Nibley, in his monumental Lives of the Berkeleys, vol. II, p. 184, states that, in 1630, Thomas Ligon was a farmer residing at Calloudon and was a receiver for the property of Henry, Lord Berkeley. The fact that there is no further mention of him seems confirmatory of the author's placement.

After a full account of Captain, later Colonel, Thomas Ligon's activities in Henrico County, we have long chapters on his children, grand-children, great-grandchildren, great-great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren, extending from page 319 to page 763. It would be impossible for any reviewer to appraise every item in this mass of material, the result of many years' work on the part of many people. Numerous wills, deeds and other court records are cited in whole or in adequate abstracts, and undoubtedly every effort was made to ensure authenticity.

There are, however, errors, some of which we note. The Harris family, into which Col. Thomas Ligon married, is treated separately in Chapter XXIII. On page 314, the flat statement is made that Col. Ligon married Mary Harris, born between 1648 and 1650, "daughter of Captain Thomas Harris, who came from Essex, England, to Virginia in 1611." In the Harris chapter, Capt. Thomas's ancestry is traced for five generations in England and he is identified with Thomas Harris, third son of Sir William Harris of Crixeth, Essex (p. 839). It seems a nice descent to have but the reviewer is unable to discover any proof for it. On page 843, the author states that the second wife of Capt. Thomas was Joan Osborne. While this statement is often made, the reviewer knows of no documentary proof for it, nor does she know of any proof that "Major Robert Harris, born 1615, came to Virginia in 1650" was among the "known issue of Captain Thomas" (p. 844). In fact, she had thought Major Robert's paternity unknown. The statement that Major Robert married Mrs. Mary (Claiborne) Rice is an example of the immortality of genealogical misstatements. Judith Harris (p. 849) is said to have "married Major John Crittenden, son of John and Margaret (Butler) Crittenden and grandson of Joseph and Mary Crittenden. John Crittenden was born in 1750, Burwash, Sussex, England, and came to Virginia about 1770." Margaret, daughter of John Butler, married Henry Crittenden of Essex County, Virginia, as is proved by a deed in Essex County records (D.B. 23, p. 53.). In 1751 and 1752, they sold out in Essex and removed to Northampton County, North Carolina, where Henry's will, dated November 2, 1782, probated March, 1783, is on record. From long study of this family, the reviewer believes Henry was born either in Essex or Gloucester County, Virginia. While Henry's will does not name a son John, the will of Henry's son Henry, recorded in 1803 in Northampton County, North Carolina, mentions his brother John and John's son, Henry.

In the chapter on the Corbin Family (Chapter XXII), in which, by the way, we are delighted to see the will of the immigrant, Henry Corbin, copied in full from the wonderful Madresfield Muniments, the statement is made that Col. Thomas Lee, the builder of Stratford, married first, Lady Berkeley, second, Hannah Ludwell (p. 833). This entire paragraph is almost verbatim from The Seldens of Virginia. vol. I, p. 321, but still lacks proof. The reviewer knows nothing of Lady Berkeley and the statement that Stratford was built of "bricks brought from England" is surely wrong. As easy as brickmaking was for the Virginia colonists, why should precious cargo space in small trading vessels be wasted on brick?

Chapter XX gives first a detailed account of Sir William Berkeley and proceeds from that to the Berkeley family in Virginia. The reviewer found the account of Sir William rather superficial, and the reiterated use of the word "Cavalier" irritating. The word Cavalier is musical, which is the only good thing that can be said of it. The author, on page 774, defines his use of it as "taking that word to signify an adherent of monarchy and of the Established Church," which is a truer description of Sir William than the word Cavalier. In fact, one wonders why so many writers on Virginia use "Cavalier" so often and so meaninglessly. Virginia was settled some thirty years before the term came into use; the colonists were as earnest in their desire for greater freedom and better living conditions and as devout in their worship as any colonists coming to America. They did not subscribe to the excesses either of Cromwell's or of the King's adher-Representative government was first in Virginia and always their ideal. Sir William's faults in his old age were enlargements of lesser faults of his youth, he is an individual, not a type. It was one of Charles II's innumerable blunders to reappoint him on his ascension to the throne.

On page 775, his wife is called "a lady of Warwick County whom he had married soon after his arrival." In a sense this is true, for she was living in that county when they were married, but she was Frances Culpepper of England, probably related to the Filmers (Virginia Magazine, vol. 35, p. 230), and widow of Samuel Stephens, Governor of North Carolina (Id., vol. 7, pp. 345-346); and did not marry Sir William "soon after his arrival." It was between June 19 and June 21, 1670, that the marriage took place (Id., p. 345). After Sir William's death, she married Philip Ludwell and they lived at "Greenspring," the home which had been Sir William's and which he had bequeathed her. She was buried at "Greenspring," presumably, and a portion of her tombstone, which was long used as a doorstep, is now in the old churchyard at Jamestown.

In discussing the Berkeley family in Virginia, the author makes John Berkeley, who came over with his son, Maurice, to manage the Iron Works at Falling Creek under contract with the Virginia Company of London (Records of the Virginia Company, vol. I, pp. 476-478), founder of the Virginia Berkeleys. He states that, though the father lost his life in the Massacre of 1622/3, the son had, before then, returned to England, and married in 1638, Barbara Longe, from which union was born Edmund

Berkeley, later of Middlesex County, Virginia (p. 784). So far as the reviewer knows, the parentage of this Edmund has not heretofore been known (Virginia Magazine, vol. 35, pp. 34-41), nor does she see that the author has proven his descent.

On page 352, the author makes a statement that is absurd, when, in speaking of Henrico County records, he adds: "We note also that during Bacon's Rebellion, Lord Dunmore had the records moved, and thus some were lost and scattered in the confusion." The doughty Scotsman must have been more ingenious than has been supposed to be active in both 1676 and 1776.

Closely akin to Lord Dunmore in this respect was Gawen Corbin (p. 163), said to have been born 1633 and a member of the first Ohio Company, organized in 1748.

In a work of this magnitude, typographical errors seem unavoidable, and this book has a good many, but most of them not so serious as to destroy the meaning. There are, however, in the bibliography some that do affect the meaning. Would every reader know, for example, that "Complete Peerage, Two Volumes, 1912, Copayne" was Cokayne's great work, or that "Debritts-Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage and Companionage—1936" was Debrett's book, or that "Muzzly" is meant for Muzzey, and "Pleasants (Edward) Valentine Papers" are our indispensable Edward Pleasants Valentine Papers?

On Page VIII of the Preface, the author states: "Research in the County Court houses of Virginia has often been halted by the fact that practically all the ancient court records, except those of Isle of Wight County, were destroyed by fire or through carelessness, or carried away during one or the other of the great wars which devastated the state." On page 868, among the books listed in the bibliography is Virginia Wills and Administrations 1632-1800. It would seem even a brief glance at this book would have shown the serious blunder in the former statement.

One could enumerate further errors but this review must not degenerate into carping criticism. Print, paper and general format of this large volume are excellent, the illustrations well selected and clear, the seventeenth century signet ring of Sir William Lygon (p. 67) being a particularly good example of fine detail. The English section of the book is fascinating, but the reviewer must say that the American genealogies are not wholly trustworthy and should be checked before acceptance. That is not to advise against purchasing the book, merely to advise that the reader should take it piece by piece rather than gulp it whole.

4. The Journal of the Barbados Museum and Historical Society, Vol. XVI. No. 3, May 1949, page 150, Published by the Society at St. Ann's Garrison, Barbados, B. W. I.

The present volume marks an epoch in genealogical history. Never before have the records of a historic family and all its associated branches been given to the world with such munificence of detail, such sumptuousness of presentation and such magnificence of type, plate and format. It would be a delight at any time merely to handle a work so breath-taking—but to eyes long jaded by sight of books produced under the dire necessity of conforming with the standards of the age of austerity it appears with all the added excitement of a return to days of spaciousness and luxury.

Madresfield Court was and is the ancestral home of the Ligons or Liggons—the spelling is variable—and is not the least famous of those historic country houses which are the peculiar glory of England. Such a baronial seat with its spacious design, its harmonious treasurers and its extension of landscape is among the most gracious attributes of the English countryside. For over 900 years it has been in the possession of the great family which this volume so worthily commemorates and is one of the most significant reminders to generations of Englishmen of the tumults of the past and of the unbroken continuity of their history.

Even richer in historic associations is Berkeley Castle, the famous seat of kinsmen of the Ligons, and for ever memorable as the scene of the dreadful murder of the unhappy Edward II, whose dying shrieks are im-mortalised by the poet Gray.

Mark the year and mark the night When Severn shall re-echo affright The shrieks of death through Berkeley's roof that ring Shrieks of an agonizing King!

The Ligon family is equally famous in England and America and it is the American branch of the family which has carried through this tremendous feat of genealogical research and vivid historical portraiture. No work of this kind that I know of comes so recommended by all the traditional virtures of gravitas, pictas, dignitas and reverentia.

For us in Barbados, of course, the great Ligon is Richard whose History of Barbados was first published in 1657 and the second edition in 1673, while the Paris edition came out in 1684.

But to leave Richard and to return to the work now under review I can only say that in this monumental production of well over nine hundred pages the only mistake I have been able to discover is the ascription to Laurence Housman at page 241 of the beautiful poem "Bredon Hill"—which, of course, is the work of his immortal brother A. E. Housman.

5. The New York Genealogical and Biographical Record, 124 East 58th Street, New York 22, N. Y., Vol. LXXX, Number 3, July, 1949, pages 180-181 inc. Review by Dr. Arthur Adams, now of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, 9 Ashburton Place, Boston 8, Mass.

THE LIGON FAMILY AND CONNECTIONS by William D. Ligon, Jr. 1947. 6 x 9, cloth frontispiece, plates, portraits, charts, bibliography, index, pp. 943. Address: the compiler, 17 East 70th Street, New York 21, N. Y.

This work is one of the most remarkable genealogical publications to appear in many years; in mere bulk it is well-nigh appalling. Then the careful study of records both in England and in America seems almost more than could be accomplished by any one person in a single lifetime.

The compiler wins our confidence in his competence and his honesty when he states in the Preface: "The greatest care has been exercised to include only established facts as evidenced by authentic records, nothing has been included that does not appear well authenticated and whenever any statement or record seems in the least doubtful, it has been so mentioned in each particular case in the text." Brave words and well-lived up to!

Almost a third of the book—305 pages—are devoted to the history of the Ligons in England, including extended accounts of such great families, related by marriage, as the Beauchamps, the Pyndars, the Corbyns, the Gorges, and the Berkeleys.

The genealogy of the English Lygons is, perhaps, the most altogether satisfactory portion of the book. The compiler was so fortunate as to interest, in his undertaking, the late Sir William Lygon, 7th Earl Beauchamp, of Madresfield Court, and the latter placed at his disposal the wonderful muniments of the Lygon family preserved there, an estate belonging to the family from the Conqueror's day to the present. Chapters of the book are devoted to the family memorials, the Madresfield muniments, the history of the family lands, to deeds, and to seals. Through these sources, a well "documented" history of the family in England from medieval times to the present is presented.

The account of the family in Virginia is only a shade less satisfactory. Indeed it is wonderfully complete considering the appalling loss and destruction of public records in Virginia. Too often one finds it impossible to prove by existing public records pedigrees as to which there can be little if any reasonable doubt.

In studying the English origin of an American family, the first step, of course, is to determine the origin and the place of the immigrant in the English family.

Mr. Ligon has found no record in England or in America that states the parentage or the relationship of Colonel Thomas Ligon to the English family. Nevertheless, all evidence shows that all Ligons belong to the same stock; furthermore, the name is rare. So when we find that the compiler has made a careful study of all known Ligons of Col. Thomas Ligon's generation in England and can find only one place where he could belong, we are impelled to accept his conclusion. The evidence is circumstantial, but it is so abundant and so cumulative that one is satisfied. So we accept Col. Thomas as one of the eight children of Thomas and Frances (Dennis) Lygon of Madresfield, Worcestershire.

We wish that Mr. Ligon had given us the evidence on which he based the statement that Col. Thomas came over in 1641 with his kinsman, Sir William Berkeley, Governor of Virginia. We should like, too, to have the reference for the account of the Indian attack of April 18, 1644, or rather for Thomas Ligon's part in this Indian War—his defense of Sarah Woodson. Indeed it is not till 1657 that Thomas Ligon appears of record in Henrico County, at which time he was appointed Surveyor of the county by Governor Berkeley.

Mr. Ligon says, pp. 314 & 837, that Colonel Thomas Ligon married Mary Harris, 1648-1650?, but does not give the proof. No doubt Mr. Ligon believes all this but the evidence for so important a matter should be clearly and full stated, especially as he devoted a chapter to the Harris

Family in England and Virginia. Interesting chapters on the Berkeley and the Corbin families are also included.

There are statements in the account of the family in America as to where this or that Ligon belongs in the pedigree, for which no evidence is given. In most cases, the statements are doubtless correct, but destruction of records prevents absolute documentary proof. When this is so, the considered judgment of a man who has studied all existing records and who knows the entire family in all its ramifications, is of great weight. The whole picture hangs together.

The few cases spoken of in which statements are made without adequate evidence, are as spots on the sun, taken into comparison with the vast accumulation of facts, fully authenticated, and the tremendous achievement of the author in presenting them in so well ordered and cogent a sequence

All persons of the Ligon blood, indeed all persons interested in the history of Virginia, are under great obligation to the compiler of this book. It is gratifying to know that another great family of England is proved to have had its no small part in the development of our country.

ARTHUR ADAMS.

THE LIGON FAMILY AND KINSMEN ASSOCIATIONº.

The idea of a reunion of the descendants of Colonel Thomas Ligon originated during the years in which The Ligon Family and Connections, was being compiled, published December 18, 1947, now known as Volume I. In April, 1937 the announcement of such an event, international in extent, was sent to all known Ligon addresses in the United States and foreign countries. The results and accomplishments of the reunion which followed is now recorded in history as an event of unusual historic importance.

The FIRST reunion was held at the Jefferson Hotel in Richmond, Virginia, on July 7, 8, and 9, 1937.

The SECOND reunion was held at the Washington Hotel in Washington, D. C., on October 13, 14, and 15, 1938.

The THIRD reunion, scheduled to be held in Richmond, Virginia, in June, 1942, was postponed for the duration of World War II. Plans are now under way to hold the THIRD reunion in Richmond during the year 1958.

GENEALOGICAL ARITHMETIC

By George W. Hodgkins, September 27, 1914

In some cases completeness would prove an embarrassment of riches. That the delver into ancestral lore finds line after line stopping short without a trace of the next preceding generation, may be unfortunate in individual cases; but in the aggregate it is a blessing in disguise. If one's search goes no further than the earliest American settlers, a complete genealogy could not involve more than a couple of thousand ancestors at best; but, a few centuries back on the other side, it would take the better part of a lifetime merely to write the ancestors' names.

Few of our authentic genealogies go very far back of modern times, and probably none at all have pierced the dark age that followed the fall of Rome. The days of Charlemagne, who brought order out of this chaos, will nevertheless prove far enough for the purposes of our computation. Charlemagne flourished as King of the Franks and Emperor of the West about the year 800 A.D., eleven centuries ago. The average period from the birth of one generation to the birth of the next is between twenty-five and thirty years, so that the number of generations from our times back to Charlemagne's is roughly forty.

In each generation, of course, the number of ancestors is just double the number in the generation succeeding it. In the fortieth generation the number of ancestors is consequently the fortieth power of two, or, in other words, two multiplied by itself thirty-nine times. And a few minutes' figuring with pencil and pad will show that the total number of any person's ancestors in the fortieth generation is a mere matter of 1,099,511,-627,776, or somewhat more than a million of millions.

But a little difficulty arises. According to the best estimates the population of the whole world at the time of Charlemagne did not exceed two hundred millions. Of any single generation there could hardly have been over one hundred millions. And of the white race, or any other single race, there was only part of that number. Something, thefore, must have happened to the vast majority of our million million ancestors.

The obvious explanation lies in the intermarriage of cousins,—first cousins, tenth cousins, thirty-ninth cousins, as the case may be. Probably a fair proportion of a person's ancestors appear in the pedigree only once; but others must be duplicated, not merely scores or hundreds, but thousands, of times. If every inhabitant of the world forty generations ago could appear in that family record, the average name would be duplicated more than ten thousand times, and, taking into consideration the barriers of race and distance, it is not unlikely that some prolific ancestor would have his name in that list not merely thousands, but actually millions, of times.

And then, of course, the rule of genealogical arithmetic works both ways. It is not so simple in the descending direction; but we can nevertheless get a very fair approximation without having to leave our arithmetic behind and trespass upon the higher branches of mathematics. Let us try, for example, to determine roughly the number of descendants Charlemagne himself should have today. In line of descent the ratio of one generation to another depends upon the size of the family. A line may even become extinct; but if it survives a few generations it will probably conform to the average in the end.

If the descendants of one typical ancestor were to increase from generation to generation merely in the ratio of two, producing 1,099,511,627,776 descendants in the fortieth generation, it is easy to see that the population of the earth as a whole would remain stationary. As a matter of fact the population of the globe today is estimated to be one and two-thirds thousand millions, which is eight or perhaps ten times the probable population of the earth in Charlemagne's time. A typical fortieth generation of descendants today must therefore be some eight or ten times what a stationary population would have produced.

Assuming Charlemagne's family tree to be an average one,—the chances are that it has been rather more prolific than the average, though with a more than average proportion of intermarriages,—we can reasonably estimate his fortieth generation of descendants as aggregating in theory some ten millions of millions; but we have seen that the total population of the world today is only about one six-thousandth of such a figure. When we consider that that there is white blood in only about half of the world's inhabitants, and that there are members of more than one generation alive at one time, our computed total is at least twenty-four thousand times the available population at the present time. In other words, our figures show that the average member of the white race today is descended from Charlemagne himself in a couple of dozen thousand different ways. Of course this is just a very rough approximation; but it offers food for thought.

Probably there are some who are descended from Charlemagne a good many more than two dozen thousand different times, and no doubt many others, in various branches of even the white race, not descended from him at all. But there have been quite a few other Kings and Emperors besides Charlemagne in all times and in all races, and there certainly ought to be enough royal blood to go round, with plenty and a good quantity to spare.

From which we infer that the aristocracy of royal descent consists not so much in actually having royal blood in your veins as in having the lineages and records to prove it.
