INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

The following record has been obtained by careful study of genealogical and historical works found in the Congressional Library at Washington, D. C., and in the Astor Library at New York City. I have had, in addition to this, the advantage of an old record and "family tree" made by my grandfather, Col. Johnson Mason, for my father, who left it to me. It is now in possession of Edward C. Mason, my nephew. Col. Johnson Mason was born in 1767 and lived till 1856. His grandmother, Mary Arnold Mason, was born in 1703 and lived till 1798, at which time Col. Johnson was 31 years old. As they both lived in Medfield, and he was interested in genealogy, he probably had many conversations with her on that subject, and obtained from her much of the information which enabled him to make out the record for my father. Her grandfather, Dr. Return Johnson, was living in Medfield in 1679, only three years after the Indians burned the town. Ebenezer Mason was her husband's father and lived until she was fifty years old. She probably had her information, and the story of the massacre, from Ebenezer himself, who was eight years old at the time of the massacre in 1676. The authorities for the various facts and dates can be found in the following works:

Tilden's History of Medfield.
Temple's History of Northfield.
Hill's Dedham Records.

I have not been able to establish the connection between this Mason family and any of the Masons of England. I insert here, however, all the facts that I have been able to gather concerning the various Masons of England, in order to keep in compact form material that has been collected from many different sources, as an assistance in case of future researches.

The earliest mention I find of the name is of "Robert Le Mason" of Norwich, Norfolk. His son, John, gave the advowson of the church at St. Bartholomew to the church at Windham. This was about the year 1300.

An English squire of Staffordshire had three sons, all of whom emigrated to America about the year 1630.

Rev. John Mason of Water Stratford, Bucks, published, about the year 1650, a collection of hymns and tunes for church service.

William Mason of York, published an "Essay on Church Music" in the year 1795.

A Mason family was originally settled at Egmonton, Nottinghamshire. This family removed to Eaton, same county, in the time of Queen Elizabeth.

A Sir John Mason was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in the time of Henry the Eighth.

Thomas Mason, 19 years old, came to America in the ship Primrose from Gravesend, July 27, 1635.

Among the Landed Gentry that are mentioned by Burke there are several families of Masons, all having "coats of arms."

Berry's County Genealogies lists a Mason family of Monketon, coming originally from the Isle of Thanet, Kent, also having a "coat of arms" differing from those listed in Burke's Dictionary. The description of this latter coat of arms borne by Thos. Mason of Monketon is as follows:

Per Pale ar. and sa. a chevron between three billets, all counterchanged. Motto: "Demeure par la Verite."

Mason families are to be found in Grade, Cornwall, London, Stafford, Warwick, York, Buckinghamshire, Norfolk, Kent, Essex, Northumberland and Nottinghamshire.

Among the earliest settlers in this country are several different branches of the Mason family.

Capt. Hugh Mason of Watertown, Mass., is the ancestor, in this country, of one of these branches. His descendants lived in Boston and New Hampshire, and among them are many distinguished men, notably Jonathan Mason of Boston and New Hampshire, a celebrated lawyer and United States Senator from New Hampshire.

Major John Mason, who settled in Dorchester, Mass., is the head of another branch. He removed to Connecticut, was the commander of the expedition against the Pequot Indians and at one time Deputy Governor of the State. Daniel Mason, one of Maj. John's descendants, married Elizabeth St. John, who was a relative of Queen Elizabeth, a descendant of Charlemagne and of Alfred the Great, and was connected and related to a large number of the most prominent families of the English nobility. Jeremiah Mason, the distinguished lawyer and friend of Daniel Webster, was a member of this branch.

Ralph Mason of Boston is the first of another branch. Some of his descendants are still living in that city.

Col. George Mason of Virginia, the head of the southern family, was an officer in the army of Charles Second of England.

Capt. John Mason of New Hampshire, who, together with Sir Fernando Gorges, obtained from Parliament a grant of all that territory which is now the State of New Hampshire, had no sons.

John Tufton, who married into this family, took the name of Mason and pushed the suit to establish the claim to these lands. Among the descendants of the latter is Prof. Otis Tufton Mason of the National Museum at Washington. The claim to the New Hampshire land was never fully established, and the rights were finally sold to an English syndicate which failed to realize from it.

There was another branch in Vermont, one in Rhode Island and one or two others in Massachusetts. Concerning each of these branches, a good deal of information can be found in Bond's Genealogies and in Savage's Genealogical Dictionary.

The ancestor of the branch of which this book contains a record, is Robert Mason of Roxbury and Dedham, Mass. Many of the settlers of Roxbury were of John Winthrop's company, and came from the town of Nazing, on the river Lee, Essex Co., England. This was in 1630, and Robert Mason may have been of this company. Two facts, taken in conjunction, make this conclusion quite probable. The first, that no mention of this Robert is made in the existing emigration lists which the English law required. The second, that the lists of Winthrop's company have all been lost.

Among Robert's descendants are many who have been well-known and distinguished citizens in their day and generation. They have been town officers, state representatives, ministers, lawyers, and soldiers in the French and Indian wars, the war of the Revolution and the war of 1812. In the year 1834 there were twenty-seven of Robert's descendants who were graduates of New England colleges. Rev. Thomas Mason of Northfield was one of the most prominent divines of his day. Col. Johnson Mason of Medfield was town clerk for nineteen years, treasurer for one year and state representative four or five times. Joseph Mason of Worcester, a well known lawyer and city official and author of a standard work entitled "Massachusetts Practice," was of this branch, also Rev. Edward B. Mason, D. D., pastor of prominent churches in Indianapolis and Detroit, now of Brunswick, Maine, the seat of Bowdoin College.

A great love of music has been one of the characteristics of many of this branch, and several of them have made this art, or the lines of business connected with it, the business or profession of their lives. Barachias Mason of Medfield taught singing as long ago as 1750. The well known Dr. Lowell Mason, and also his brother Timothy B., the head for many years of the principal music store of Cincinnati, were of this branch, as were four presidents of the Mason & Hamlin Organ and Piano Co., and also Dr. William Mason of New York City, the distinguished pianist and composer.

This musical vein might indicate that Robert, who was born in England, was perhaps connected with the family of Rev. John of Water Stratford, heretofore mentioned. Robert of Roxbury, Capt. Hugh of Watertown and Major John of Dorchester all came to this country about the year 1630. They may have been the "three sons of Squire Mason of Staffordshire," all of whom "emigrated to America about the year 1630." Daniel G. Mason, according to a tradition in the family, established a connection of the Medfield Mason family with a Mason family in England having the following coat of arms:

Per Pale. ar. and sa. a chevron between three Mason's squares, all counterchanged. Crest, a stag's head erased, sa. attired or. ducally gorged gold.

I have not been able to ascertain how he succeeded in tracing this connection.

The plan followed in making this record is of the simplest kind, and individual lines can be quickly and easily traced.

The names are entered by generations counting from Robert of Roxbury.

All the children of the oldest son in each generation are entered first in their respective generations. Then the children of the second son, etc., etc., through the generation. To separate the generations a double red line is drawn across the full width of the page. To separate families in the same generation a single red line is drawn part way across the page from the red line on the left.

Each name as it is entered is numbered in regular order, this individual number being placed on the left of and immediately preceding the name. Immediately preceding this individual number stands the individual number of that person's father.

With this numbering system the individual line of any member, starting with the generation of which he is a member, can be readily traced back to the first generation.

The record is acknowledged to be very incomplete. The compiling of a complete record involved an expenditure of time, money and labor which it was not in the power of the writer to give to the work.
