APPENDIX.

MAXWELL FAMILY.

THE Maxwell family is an ancient and honorable one, being descended from MACCUS, son of Aulaf, King of Northumbria, A. D. 949. The family, with fourteen others mentioned by Lord Hales, accompanied Edward Atheling into Scotland when England submitted to William of Normandy. Whether the family was of Saxon or Schleswig-Holstein origin is still a debated question among Scottish antiquarians.

The name has passed through the various forms of MACCUSVILLE, MACCUSWELL, and MAXWELL, which last has been retained since about A. D. 1150.

There are several branches of the family and many offshoots from each. During the religious persecutions of the XVIth and XVIIth centuries they were divided and suffered much in the many contests, being conspicuously connected with Scottish history.

The New Jersey branch, treated of in this work, descended from Thomas Maxwell, particularly mentioned by Lord Macauley in his history of England concerning the war of 1689 as being in King James' army during the Irish Revolt and who commanded the rear guard of St. Ruth's army at the battle of Athlone (June 22, 1691) and "held the bridge" on that eventful day. He was of the "Kirkconnel Line," which had its home in the valley of the Nith, Scotland. Another branch of the family had its headquarters at Caerlaverock Castle, in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, on the shore of the Solway.

Thomas Maxwell at the capitulation of Limerick in 1691 chose to remain in Ireland and settled in County Tyrone. His father was John Maxwell, of Kirkconnel.

Legend assigns to this branch of the Maxwell family the motto "JE SUIS PRET," which was obtained as follows: When Wallace was in greatest straits, hiding in the caves and glens near Lanark, the leader of the Maxwell clan hunted him up and tendered to him himself and followers. To this offer Wallace is said to have replied: "Ready, aye ready, Noble Scott!" from which remark the motto was taken.

John Maxwell, the progenitor in America of this branch of the Maxwell family, emigrated from County Tyrone, Ireland, and settled in what is now Greenwich Township, Warren County, New Jersey, about 1747. Owing to the destruction by fire of the church records in Ireland it has been for many years impossible to establish with certainty who were the parents of John Maxwell, emigrant.

He brought with him to America his wife, Ann, and four children, viz.: 1. William (afterwards Brigadier General of the Continental Line); 2. John (afterwards Captain in the Revolutionary war); 3. Jane (married James Kennedy, of Bucks County, Pa.), and 4. Robert (afterwards Lieutenant in the Revolutionary War).

All of the above, except Jane, are buried in the graveyard adjoining the Old Stone Church in Greenwich Township, Warren County, N. J.

BRIGADIER GENERAL WILLIAM MAXWELL.*

WILLIAM MAXWELL, of Revolutionary War fame, was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, 1733, and came to this country with his parents, John and Ann Maxwell, who settled about 1747 on a farm in Greenwich Township, in Morris (now Warren) County, New Jersey.

William Maxwell was the eldest son and had two brothers, John, who afterwards became a Captain in the Revolutionary service, and Robert, who was a Lieutenant in the same, and a sister, Jane, who married James Kennedy, of Bucks County, Pa.

William Maxwell enlisted in the military service at an early age and took part in the French and Indian War. He was with General Braddock at the battle of Fort Duquesne, July 9, 1755, and with General Abercrombie on his expedition of July, 1759, against Ticonderoga, and is reported to have been with General Wolfe at the fall of Quebec, 1759. He was subsequently attached to the Commissary Department of the British army at Mackinaw, Michigan, with the rank of Colonel.

It is not known when he left the British service, but it must have been prior to 1774, for in that year (July 16, 1774) he was appointed at a meeting of the freeholders and inhabitants of Sussex County at Newton one of the ten deputies to meet with other deputies and appoint representatives to the General Congress. He was himself appointed a representative to the 1st Provincial Congress of New Jersey at Trenton, which met May 23, 1775, and was present at the session, lasting until June 3, and reconvened August 5, when he was again present.

He was also a member of the Sussex County Committee of Safety, which met at Newton, August 10 and 11, 1773, and was made chairman of the committee meeting.

On September 21, 1775, he was again elected a deputy to the 11d Provincial Congress and was present at the October Session. At this session it was resolved to raise two battalions for Continental service, and on October 28, 1775, William Maxwell was recommended to the General Congress for appointment as Colonel of one of the battalions. A commission was duly issued to him as Colonel by the General Congress, November 8, 1775, and dated as of October 25, 1775.

He shortly afterwards raised a battalion, but there was great delay in obtaining arms, clothing and equipments, so that though ordered to march to Quebec to the relief of the army there in the latter part of 1775 it was not until the end of February that he was able to start on his journey with four companies, the remainder of the battalion being ordered to follow under command of Lieutenant Colonel Shreve.

They marched by way of Lakes George and Champlain and crossed them on the ice, reaching the St. Lawrence early in March.

Colonel Maxwell's troops were at the battle of Three Rivers, June 8, 1776, and he conducted the retreat on that occasion with great merit. On July 8, 1776, he with twenty other field officers joined in a remonstrance address to General Philip Schuyler against the abandonment of Crown Point.

On October 23, 1776, he received his commission as Brigadier General from Congress and was sent by General Washington on December 20, 1776, to take command of the militia at Morristown and to harass and annoy the enemy in their quarters. He was thus engaged when the battles of Trenton and Princeton were fought, so that he did not take an active part in those battles, as is commonly stated. After these battles he continued to chase and worry the British at Newark, Elizabethtown and Spanktown (Rahway) with great success. His command was known as "Maxwell's Brigade" and was in May, 1777, a part of the division encamped at Elizabethtown, Bound Brook and Spanktown, under the command of Major General Stephen. This division during the Summer marched through Pennsylvania, and on December 11, 1777, a portion of the "Jersey Line" opened the battle of Brandywine and continued all day. This brigade had a skirmish after the battle of Brandywine at White Horse Tavern, on the Lancaster road, passed near Yellow Springs Furnace, Worcester, and then finally encamped at Germantown. Maxwell's Brigade, with some North Carolina troops, formed the reserve corps and left wing of the army at the battle of Germantown under the command of Major General Lord Stirling, and distinguished itself in this fight, especially the first battalion.

Maxwell's Brigade spent most of the Winter with the army at Valley Forge, and on June 18, 1778, was detached from the main army, and with some militia was ordered to harass General Clinton and impede his force.

On June 28, 1778, the "Jersey Line" joined the left wing of the army and took part in the battle of Monmouth.

On May 11, 1779, Maxwell's Brigade was ordered to join Major General Sullivan on his expedition against the Indians in consequence of the "Wyoming Massacre," and at once started, leaving Easton, Pa., June 18, 1779, where the three regiments composing the force had rendezvoused. They returned in October, passing through Easton October 15, and marched to Scotch Plains, N. J., where they went into Winter quarters, November 5, 1779.

On June 23, 1780, the troops under command of General Maxwell took a prominent part in the battle of Springfield. Shortly after this battle General Maxwell resigned (July 20, 1780).

There has been much speculation as to the cause of his resignation and several reasons given, the generally accepted one being that he was dissatisfied because of the promotion of a subordinate, but more aristocratic, officer over him. This is not in accordance with his good record as a soldier, who had the welfare of his adopted country so much at heart, nor do the records bear out this assertion, there having been no promotions of that grade of officer for a long time prior to his resignation.

The cause was probably well known to General Washington, who was with the army, as appears by his prompt action in forwarding the resignation to Congress. The letter of resignation stated "I have not found my command in the Jersey Brigade for some time past as agreeable as I could wish," without stating the reasons, and Gen. Washington in his letter accompanying the resignation said to Congress: "The merits of this General are well known . . . I believe him to be an honest man, a warm friend to his country and firmly attached to its interests. . . ." This letter would scarcely have been written concerning an insubordinate officer, who was disaffected. There must have been some other reason and it is perhaps found in a letter written by Lt. Col. Barber to Col. Elias Dayton, July, 21, 1780, which is in part as follows: "The matter between G. M.—I and his officers has at length after much Treaty and Conference come to this conclusion. The Genl. has sent in his Resignation officially and the officers have agreed not only to be tender of his character but to endeavor to check any disadvantageous reports that may circulate re"specting him. I think upon the whole the affair well settled. The G—l "yesterday morning delivered his Excellency his request in writing to "resign, which is now on its way to Congress. Last evening he made "a formal surrender of his Command in the Brigade to Col. Shrieve in "presence of all the field officers. . . ."

This letter shows that there was dissatisfaction in the Brigade which evidently much impaired the service. The reason for it is not stated, but whatever it was he deemed it for the best interests of the cause to resign his command, saying in his letter of resignation "Thus circumstanced
 "and to be uniform in my good wishes to a country I love, I would "much rather choose to withdraw from a service I am fond of, than to "remain where my services could not be made agreeable to my wishes."

All the accounts agree that he was a brave, gallant and vigilant officer and rendered most important service to the American cause. It is also stated that "His personal frankness and the absence of all haughtiness in "his manner made him a great favorite with the soldiers."

After his retirement from the army he lived at his home in Greenwich Township, Sussex Co., and was elected to the New Jersey Assembly in 1783. He again retired to his home after this and lived quietly, making occasional visits to his friends. He spent much time with his old army friend, Col. Charles Stewart, at Lansdown, Hunterdon Co., where he died, November 4, 1796, while on a visit. He never married.

He was buried at the old Stone Church in Greenwich Township, and on his tomb is the following inscription written by ex-Gov. Richard Howell:

He later raised a company of one hundred volunteers from Sussex and Hunterdon Counties and tendered their services to Gen. Washington, when he was much reduced in force. The company was known as "Maxwell's Company," and their addition to the ranks was very acceptable. He participated in the battles of Trenton, Assunpink, Princeton, Brandywine, Germantown, Monmouth and Springfield.

After the close of the war he returned to his farm and was appointed one of the Judges of Hunterdon County, February 23, 1795, and again, November 30, 1800. He removed to Flemington about this time and lived there until his death, February 15, 1828. His wife died, June 4, 1804, and he afterwards married Mrs. Elizabeth Kirkpatrick Sloan.
