

RICHARDSON-DE PRIEST

FAMILY

BY THE REV. ROBT. DOUGLAS ROLLER, D. D.

THE TRIBUNE PRINTING CO.

CHARLESTON W. VA.

INTRODUCTION.

As a preface to this geneological chart of the Richardson-De Priest family, I have compiled the following information from letters in my possession written by Mrs. Mary E. Duke, who was born in 1812, and lived twelve years with her grandmother, Martha (De Priest) Richardson.

Mrs. Duke's impression is, that John Richardson's father was Joseph; that he came from England in 1730, and married Sarah Morris, of Hanover, Va., in 1736. John was born in 1737. There were at least three other children. The name of one was Robert, a Colonel in the Revolution. She thinks there was some connection between this family and the Richardsons of Phila., one of whom married Col. Clement Biddle.

From another source I have the statement that John Richardson had a number of brothers who went to southern Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and perhaps further, but I have not yet been able to trace them.

Robin De Priest came to Virginia from France in 1732; married a Miss Snead of Hanover, 1740, and settled at Westonville, Hanover. Issue:

- i. Bettie De Priest—b., 1741; m. — John-son in 1759, whose daughter married John Rutherford, of Goochland.
- ii. Martha De Priest—b., 1743; married John Richardson, 1760.
- iii. Mary De Priest—b., 1745; married — Hudson, of Louisa. Discouraged by the loss of twenty-two negroes, at one time, from fever, they moved to the then far West.

Joseph (?) Richardson and Robin De Priest were inspectors of tobacco, positions of some importance in those days. Both families had wealth, were refined and highly educated. Mrs. Duke says: "I lived with my grandmother, Martha Richardson, for twelve years, and can now recall her elegant wedding dress, real lace veil and pointed lace and high heel boots. I would ask her about them and she would say that they were imported from France. She was the most devout Christian I ever have known in my long life; so was my dear mother. I would walk with grand-mother to church a mile from her door, while her daughter would drive in a carriage that cost 2000. It had rumbles and made an awful sound as it would roll up to the door. The church was Allans Creek (Episcopal) in Hanover. Grand-mother never believed in slavery, although grand-pa had them direct from Africa. One of the old natives taught me to knit on straws, and I could not understand one word she said."

In reply to some questions, in regard to the friendship of Dolly Madison and Judith (Aunt Judy) Richardson, the tradition as to John Richardson having been Private Secretary to Gov. Nelson, the duel between Samuel Richardson and Mr. Pope, and other matters of family interest, I received the following from Mrs. Duke:

"I heard grand-ma De Priest (R) say that Dolly Madison's mother was an old friend and school-mate, and when Dolly was an infant her mother was very ill. She sent her baby to grand-ma De P., and she stayed with her until she was four years old. She called grand-ma Mama Pattie. I have seen grand-ma wear the grey silk dress and long kid gloves which Dolly M. sent her."

"The last time I saw Dolly M. was in 1829, when I was at school in Richmond. She heard I was there and sent for me to Uncle Tom Richardson's. She kissed me and said 'this is mama Pattie's grand-child, and Polly's daughter.' She called my mother Polly."

"When Cornwallis invaded Virginia, my grandfather, John Richardson, was with Governor Nelson and the Virginia militia. Gov. Nelson thought Cornwallis was in his house and he turned the battery on his own home; but he was mistaken. Cornwallis was in grand-pa Richardson's house, making tubs of egg-nogg, and he offered grand-ma a glass. She was so frightened that she drank it. Her boys would tease her and say, 'Mother wont drink any unless with Royalty!'

"Now about the duel. Uncle Sammy was engaged to Miss D——. Mr. P——, who lived near grand-ma, was a married man with seven children. He moved in the first circle, and grand-ma thought a great deal of him and family. His daughters also visited her daughters and a great friendship sprang up between the two families, but alas for the end. Miss D—— discarded Uncle Sammy and he demanded the cause. He finally learned that Mr. P—— had told Miss D—— that young Richardson was a dissipated man. Uncle S. sent him a challenge, and the duel was fought on Doswell's race track. Sammy killed Mr. P——, and the only thing that saved him was that the ball was spent in a pocket book with a 1000 dollars in notes. My mother had the spent ball, also the linen cambric cravat that uncle Sammy wore. Uncle Billy had the overcoat. I don't know who had the flint lock pistol. I heard my mother say that the first time they met at church Miss P—— fainted. All that was very distressing to dear old grand-ma, who was a most devout Christian."

She says, further, that her aunt, Judy Richardson, often visited Mrs. Clement Biddle, in Philadelphia. Her mother was with aunt Judy in Philadelphia at a grand ball. "Aunt Judy lamented the next day about having to open the ball with some great man by dancing the minuet, and my mother said, 'Oh! if he had only asked me.' My mother was called the light of the house, so graceful and pleasant."

"When I met Dolly Madison at uncle Tom's I also met with uncle Robert's son, who had come to visit in Virginia. He was a splendid looking man." (This must have been Capt. Robert De Priest Richardson, of the U. S. Army, R. D. R.) "Now about grand-pa's brother, Col. Robert Richardson. I have forgotten who he married. But his son, Col. George Richardson, who married a Miss Payne (do not know if I spell her name right) I do remember coming to see my mother. Perhaps you can trace them up."

I have given these long extracts from the letters of Mrs. Duke as introductory to this family history for several reasons.

1st. Because they are interesting reading.

2nd. Because in every instance, except one, where I have found collateral evidence, her statements have been verified.

3rd. Because she is the most remarkable and intelligent personal link with the past I know of any where. Her grand-mother, Martha (De Priest) Richardson was born in 1743, died, 1829. Her mother, Mary, was born in 1770, died, 1869. She was born in 1812, and is now living, 1905, and twelve years of her early life were spent with her grand-mother.

Subject to correction I make the following tentative statement:

Joseph Richardson—came from England in 1730, and settled in Virginia. In 1736 he married Sarah Morris, of Hanover; issue:

John, born 1737.

Robert, known as Col.

And two other children, names unknown.

EXPLANATION.

Each child of John and Martha (De Priest) Richardson who was married, is given, together with all known descendants a separate chapter.

Numbers and numerals on the left of names show the order by birth in that family, and the numbers on the right signify the generation, to which each person belongs, counting down from John.

Where Richardson is the patronymic, it has been the rule to give only the Christian names of descendants, but when the patronymic has been changed by marriage of the female line the endeavor has been to give both Christian and surnames.

CHAPTER I.

JOHN RICHARDSON—b., 1737; d., 1804; m., 1760; MARTHA DE PRIEST, b., 1743; d., 1828.

John Richardson is said to have been a man of force, and of considerable wealth. He inherited a plantation from his father, and prospered so much that at the time of his death he possessed twelve plantations, well equipped with slaves, stock and other requisites. His wife, the daughter of a French Huguenot, was a most beautiful and accomplished woman, inheriting from her father, Robert (called Robin) De Priest, the estate "Westonville," in Hanover county, Virginia. This place became the family seat, where all of the following children were born.

The following letter to her from Dolly Madison, I copy from the original in my possession, as of general family interest:

———"I wrote you my dearest girl from my unkle's making many apology's for not calling on you or answering your welcome letter whilst in Richmond—and as I was assured of your kind friendship, I hoped for your indulgence,—I told you how delighted I had been with the society of Richmond and how I wished you to partake of the Party's given to your Bridal friends.

I was favored with invitations to 2 of them, so you may imagine my gratification on seeing so much respect paid to my beloved mama's son and daughter,—I am very anxious to hear from you all, particularly your father, whose health we trust is much mended. My sisters have not yet returned, tho I look for them every hour impatiently enuff.

My mother is with me and joins me in affectionate love to you all.—Mr. M— too, tho he has not seen you, is acquainted and highly respects a family so entitled to my affection.

Your most truly,

D. P. MADISON.

The "News" of Monroe, La., at his death said: "Judge Richardson was a very popular man—popular as a judge and popular as a citizen. His career of many years on the bench of the district court has been such as any man would feel proud of, and his taking away is a distinct loss to the judiciary of Louisiana. In his younger days he had no superior in the State on the district bench, and his decisions as a whole have been generally sustained by the Supreme court. He, at all times, ranked very high as a jurist. He was the oldest judge in Louisiana, and served longer than any other judge." He was a partner of Genl. Downes, afterwards U. S. Senator. In 1851 he was appointed judge. In 1852 was elected a member of the constitutional convention. He was Capt. of the first volunteer company (Pelican Grays) raised in the Parish, but the people would not allow him to serve, claiming that he could do more for the cause by remaining on the bench. During reconstruction days he was removed from the judgeship. In 1878 he was made a member of the constitutional convention. In 1880 was again elected judge and held the position to the time of his death; issue:

CHAPTER VI.

VI. WILLIAM² RICHARDSON—b., Oct. 10, 1773; d., Dec. 5, 1835; m. March 1, 1808, Harriot Robinson, b., Aug. 29, 1788; d., 1849. She was the daughter of Benjamin and Margaret B(anks) Robinson, of Spottsylvania.

Margaret Banks was a daughter of Gerard and Frances (Bruce) Banks. Frances Bruce was a daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Pannell) Bruce. Elizabeth Pannell was a daughter of William Pannell.

Harriot Robinson had two brothers, Charles Bruce Robinson and William Pannell Robinson.

We make the following extract from a Richmond paper, Dec., 1835:

“Departed this life on the 5th instant, William Richardson, the Just. of “Rosemount” Spottsylvania. After a long and protracted illness, which he bore with exemplary fortitude, he resigned his soul to God with that firmness and resignation which Christianity alone endows. The precepts and example of the Saviour he inculcated in his children, I speak of cardinal virtues. Like the great Wollaston, he thought "all human virtues reduced to the one test, that of truth" and on that principle he ever acted. As a philanthropist within the narrow confines of his county he was a Howard. His urbanity was of the old school, his hospitality was unbounded, his generous nature was alive to the deserving, and as a neighbor and citizen Spottsylvania must cherish his memory. * * * issue:

1. *Charles Bruce*³ Richardson—b. in Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 2, 1808; d., Feb. 10, 1886, in Henderson, Texas; m. Sarah E., daughter of David Bosworth, of Lexington, Ky.

The Henderson Times, at the time of his death, said: "Col. C. B. Richardson emigrated to La. in 1827. Ten years later he settled on Bayou Mason, in a dense cane brake, where he opened up a large farm and built the first cotton gin erected in that part of the State. To escape the ravages of a great army he moved his family (1863) to Henderson, where he remained after the war until his death.

"He followed the lead of his conscience and stood firm to the convictions of his noble intellect. Cool headed, unselfish, modest and dignified, he was always pushed to the front by the best citizens, and exerted a powerful influence in whatever section he lived. He loved the South with all his heart, and a more fearless advocate of Southern rights and principles never lived.

"At his charming home near Henderson, independence and genuine hospitality dominated; relatives and friends were welcomed there at any time with unfeigned cordiality, and strangers found there an asylum of rest. He was a man of preeminent intelligence. He possessed a fair knowledge of Botany, Geology, Anatomy and Physiology, and in the sciences of agriculture and horticulture he had no superior in East Texas and very few equals. His vast experimental knowledge, added to his research of books, on all subjects, eminently fitted him for a high sphere of usefulness, and drew around him a large circle of the most intelligent people of all classes and professions. He was in all things honest, without dissimulation or hypocrisy—a perfect gentleman—a public benefactor. He was a Mason." He died in Christ. Issue:

"Having occupied every position within the gift of the people that he would accept, he retired from public life and devoted himself to the duties of a Christian and private citizen, only consenting to serve his fellow citizens in the Texas Constitutional Convention of 1866, from which body he withdrew after becoming satisfied that its proceedings would result in untold evil to the State he helped to create." "He lives in the 'briefs' of his cases argued in the Supreme Court, and affectionate recollections of the elder members of the bar of Texas. His foresight of the greatness of Texas (and the country) was simply phenomenal, and he was looked on as a visionary theorist when he gave his time and his talents and his fortune towards a realization of his hopes and aspirations for the development of the railroad system of Texas, away back in the early fifties, others came after, and in post bellum days, reaped where he had sown." 6. *Robert Pollard*³ Richardson—b. Aug. 12, 1812; d. Dec. 29, 1892; unmarried.

From the Richmond “State” on the day of his death we compile the following: “He was a man very modest in all his habits, yet noble, kindhearted and true to every one. He was a man beloved of all who knew him, and when the great reaper came he left not an enemy on earth. He was one of the oldest native residents of the city. He received a good education and went into business with his brother in law, Jaquin P. Taylor, the largest wholesale dry goods establishment in Virginia. In 1841 he opened for himself a wholesale dry goods and carpet house. After the war he opened a large retail carpet, oilcloth and matting house. He had established such a character of integrity, that when the war closed his ante bellum friends in New York sought him out and offered unlimited credit for any thing he needed in his business.

"In 1824 he was a member of the boy company of military which escorted La Fayette, the honored and distinguished guest of the city from the wharf to the Eagle Hotel.

"When the war broke out Mr. Richardson was assigned to ambulance duty under Maj. John Doolley, and served in this capacity during the entire war.

Mr. Richardson was a communicant of St. Paul's church, from which his funeral took place.

The active pall-bearers were E. T. Crump, James T. Gray, L. D. Crenshaw, R. W. Maury, E. D. Price, J. L. Hill, J. B. Walthall and James Harvie.

The following acted as honorary pall-bearers—Governor McKinney, Judge W. W. Crump, James Pleasants, Jackson Guy, S. C. Greenhow, Dr. W. P. Palmer, James Gordon, William F. Gray, Major W. J. Johnson, Charles Ellis, T. Roberts Baker and John M. Nolting.

7. *Benjamin William*³ Richardson—b., March 12, 1814; d., July 15, 1898; unmarried. The following sketch from the Richmond Times is inserted in full, only because of its historic interest. Remembering that Maj. Richardson's father was in the war of 1812, it touches characters of four wars of the Republic, the Revolution, the war of '12, the Civil war, and the Spanish-American.

“FATHER OF THE BLUES” IS DEAD.

MAJOR B. W. RICHARDSON PASSES AWAY, AGED 84.

HIS LONG LIFE OF USEFULNESS.

A SPLENDID TYPE OF THE OLD VIRGINIA GENTLEMAN WAS HE—NEVER MARRIED AND RESIDED WITH HIS TWO SISTERS—HIS FAMILY.

After two weeks of extreme illness Major Benjamin W. Richardson closed his eyes upon all things mortal yesterday morning at 7:30 o'clock, and passed to the reward that is reserved for those whose lives are bright with good deeds done for others.

Eighty-four years, with their varying sorrows and joys had scattered their sunshine and shadows about the venerable man, yet his eye was bright and his heart warm in sympathy to all his fellow men. He was born in 1814 in the house at Second and Marshall streets, now occupied by Mr. Josiah Ryland, and all of his life was spent in this community.

Death came to him in the evening of life, when the heat and burdens of the day were passed, and when all the tumult and passions of eager life were sweetly softened and attuned to the blissful harmonies which his spirit heard in the land of rest beyond.

HIS LAST WORDS.

His mental vigor did not desert him in age or even in death, and only a few hours before the end came, he recognized and spoke to loved ones who watched about him and strove with tender ministries to cherish the spark of life so feebly burning on the altar of age.

It was at 4 o'clock yesterday morning when he aroused from a long period of seeming rest, and instantly willing hands were busy adjusting the shaded lights that burned beside his couch, and nourishment for the weary body came for his waiting lips.

A smile lit up his pallid face and the names of his loved watchers were spoken.

Then they told him of the fall of Santiago, and with a deep sigh of relief at the safety of our soldiers, he murmured "at last, at last," and sinking back upon his pillows his gentle spirit left its tenement of clay forever.

HIS FAMILY.

Major Richardson was never married, but lived with his two sisters, Misses Harriet and Lucy Ann Richardson. He was in the carpet business here for many years with his brother, Mr. Robert P. Richardson, who died a few years ago, but since that death he has not been engaged in any constant employment.

His nearest relatives are Mr. Thomas Booker, of this city, Mr. Lewis Booker, of California, his nephews, and Mrs. R. D. Roller and Miss Ellen Booker, two nieces who live in Charleston, W. Va.

Major Richardson was not identified as a member of any church, but was a constant attendant at St. Paul's, and all of his generous acts in behalf of the needy and distressed, his thoughtfulness of others, and his loving tenderness to those of his family all marked him as a man of genuine and admirable Christian spirit.

He was loved and venerated by all who knew him, and his death will be deeply lamented by a large circle of friends.

WITH THE SOLDIERS.

The military spirit was strong in Major Richardson.

Prior to leaving school, when it was known that the Marquis De Lafayette would visit this country, he, with about one hundred youths, joined a military company, organized expressly to remind the Marquis of "Morgan's Legion of Riflemen." The uniform of the company was a green hunting shirt and yellow buck-skin gaiters coming over the knees. They were admirably drilled by Major Turner, who kept the "Bell Tavern," on the corner of Main and Fifteenth streets, since known as the "St. Charles," and nearly every Saturday for months was spent at the Fairfield race course, near the city, that the instruction might embrace battalion as well as company movements, in which they became as proficient as any troops in the State. In October, 1824, the company took its position with the other troops on the Capitol Square, and marched to the boat-landing at Rocketts, where they joined in the escort of Lafayette to the Eagle Hotel, on Main street.

The Frenchman expressed himself as much pleased with the soldierly appearance and bearing of the boys. The fondness for, and appreciation of, the value of the military were never lost by Major Richardson, and the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, being then the crack company of the city and State, was an object of great pride and affection with him, and when in 1855, under peculiarly flattering circumstances, he was elected an honorary member of the company, the seal was placed upon his desire to serve the organization, sustain its high moral and military character, and further its lofty and noble aims, by all means in his power.

In 1861 he joined as a private in the First Regiment of Second-Class Virginia Militia, which was soon put by Governor Smith into the Confederate service. He was made first lieutenant of a company, then adjutant of the regiment, and was afterwards elected major of it. This regiment and that commanded by the late Colonel Evans, all under the command of Major Richardson, had charge of the railroad train by which the President of the Confederacy and some of his cabinet left the city in 1865.

THE BLUES PRESIDENT.

Major Richardson has been a member of the Blues Association since its formation in 1877, and for a number of years has been its honored and beloved president.

He was devoted to the Blues and the soldiers now at Jacksonville have been constantly on his mind since they left here. From time to time he has sent them tobacco and delicacies to eat, and they in return hold him in high esteem and loving remembrance for years of kindness.

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral will take place from St. Paul's church at 10 o'clock Monday morning and the interment will be made in Shockoe cemetery.

THE BLUES' SORROW.

The following telegram was received by Major Richardson's family yesterday:

Jacksonville, Fla., July 15, 1898.

To Misses Richardson, 1112 Capitol street, Richmond, Va.:

It is with the deepest regret that the members of Companies A and B of the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, now Companies H and M, Fourth Regiment, United States Volunteers, have learned of the untimely death of their beloved friend, Major Ben. W. Richardson, for many years the president of the Blues' Association. Major Richardson has been identified with the Blues more than any other citizen of Richmond, and he never missed an opportunity of being present at any assembly of the Blues unless sickness prevented him from doing so. He has proven himself a warm personal friend of even the humblest member of the organization and has shown his friendship on more than one occasion. It has been the sincere desire of the members assembled here at Camp Cuba Libre to see Major Richardson once more in their midst, and an invitation to that effect would have been tendered him in the name of the two companies had it not been for his recent illness.

Companies H and M, Fourth Regiment, assure the relatives of the late Major Richardson of their sincerest sympathy in their deep sorrow and sad bereavement.

(Signed) L. L. CHEATWOOD,
First Lieutenant Commanding Co. H.
WM. LAMB. DAUGHTREY, JR.,
First Lieutenant Commanding Co. M.
