THE ROBERTS FAMILY.

History that did not possess value to some one, and especial interest to those having a part in making the same commensurate with its scope, was never written, and a story of a genealogical character cannot be otherwise than important to its subjects and worthy of the earnest encouragement and support of an ancestry that is justified in a commendable pride in the deeds of its fathers and a name that has been made illustrious by some of its sons and daughters, while all of the race must have a common interest in a history that relates to themselves and the men and women from whom they sprung.

It is most rare for individuals to be found who are indifferent to their origin, yet it is equally rare that any incidents in the life of ordinary individuals not of unusual prominence in war, statesmanship, ecclesiastics or the sciences, is preserved and handed down to future generations.

We ordinarily make no efforts to trace the current of our blood back of our grandparents' day until the actors of earlier days who could supply so much that their posterity would greatly value have passed away forever.

These few pages are distributed among the numerous descendants of Joseph Roberts, formerly of New Hampshire, who died in Buckfield, Maine, about the beginning of the nineteenth century. Calling attention to the work of one of their number, who has devoted much time, labor and expense through correspondence and the examination of records, to the task of uniting the thousands whose first ancestor was Joseph Roberts, by the connecting links of a family record.

The descendants of Joseph Roberts are scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the present generation has a knowledge of comparatively small limit of the great number of those connected to them by the strong ties of blood.

The family is to be congratulated that a member, and that one a woman, has had the pride, ambition and enterprise to take upon herself the labor of gathering the names of all those, living and dead, of the stock which had Joseph Roberts for its progenitor, and it is to be regretted that some one early in the century had not commenced a work that could easily have given authentic details of vital historical interest that would probably have brought all of the New England Roberts' name under the branches of one genealogical tree.

The last twenty years has witnessed the passing away of several venerable members of this particular branch of the family whose interesting story of the honorable deeds of their ancestors in early days, with their trials, discouragements, privations and active part in creating our national history, would now be so intensely appreciated by their ancestry.

It is also to be regretted that a more extended history of the family, reverting to the ancient days before the first of the name landed on these shores, cannot be presented in this work, but no one has yet been found to undertake the gigantic task. Mrs. Amorena Grant, to whose patient labors this partial story is due, having had the greatest difficulties to encounter, and met the most discouraging indifference among so many members of the tribe in her efforts, by correspondence, to secure essential detailed facts of family history, in the gleaning of which every one should have a common interest and take pleasure in contributing a part.

This volume is an incomplete record of the descendants of Joseph Roberts, who married Hannah Young, and evidently lived in Windham, Maine, during the war of the revolution as is almost conclusively proven by the Windham town records, together with subsequent circumstances and incidental history.

They had seven children, of whom Joseph was the oldest, who was a soldier of the revolutionary war, having enlisted at Cape Elizabeth as appears by the National Muster rolls of that period. He married Esther Hamlin of Gorham, removed to Buckfield and was the first settler in the town of Brooks, Maine, about the year 1799.

The other children, sons and daughters of Joseph and Hannah Roberts, were:

Hannah, who married, in 1780, James Jordan, whose parents were James Jordan and Phoebe Philbrick of Standish.

Sarah, born in Windham, 1764; married Jotham Shaw, who was born in Weymouth, Mass.

Jonathan, who married, January, 1787, Prudence Willard, in Windham.

Elizabeth, born 1769; married Thomas Irish of Windham.

Mary, born 1773; married Richard Taylor.

John, born 1777; married Mirian Irish.

The family all removed to Buckfield, Maine, where the names of their children are all recorded and where the mother, Hannah, lived with her daughter, Elizabeth Irish, until 1815, and at the time of her death her sons Joseph, Jonathan and John were in Brooks, her daughter Hannah in Monroe and the other daughters were in Buckfield.

All of the above named children had large families.

Joseph Roberts had two wives and twenty-four children, twelve by each marriage.

Hannah Jordan had twelve children.

Sarah Shaw ten children.

Jonathan Roberts seven children.

Elizabeth Irish seven children.

Mary Taylor eight children.

John Roberts had six children born in the State of Maine and removed to Ohio, where other children were born to him, only one child remained in Maine, Sylvanus Roberts, who died in Stockton, Maine, April 25, 1872, having had two wives and four children by each.

That some particular branches of the various limbs to the main family tree have received more elaborate notice than others is due entirely to the interest taken by individual members, who have supplied the information, and surely through no design of the author, who has gladly welcomed everything of historical interest relating to any one connected, by ties of blood or marriage, with the descendants of Joseph Roberts, Jr., while at the same time inviting those of the other branches to take their share of space in the book. The extended notes of the Jonathan Roberts branch have been supplied by Prof. Thomas A. Roberts, his grandson.

The work has been a labor of love and family pride by Mrs. Grant, who has well and unselfishly performed her part for the benefit of future generations. She has given her time and labor to the task without expectation of financial reward and with little encouragement of receiving enough from sales of the book to meet the actual expense of publication. Mrs. Grant well says in offering an apology for the regretted incompleteness of the work: "I felt that I must save some of its history from oblivion and what I offer in these pages will help some future historian."

THE PUBLISHERS.

THE ROBERTS NAME.

The tradition that the Roberts families living in the state of Maine have their origin in New Hampshire, though originally from Wales, naturally leads us back to Dover, N. H., which was first settled by an Englishman named Hilton, in 1623. Others followed from the west of England, and the first meeting-house was built in 1633, on land occupied two hundred years later by one Aaron Roberts.

The first Roberts mentioned in Dover, N. H., town records was Thomas Roberts, whose signature to a document is recorded in 1640. This Thomas Roberts (emigrant) was married in England to Rebecca ——. He came to America in 1633 and settled in Dover, N. H., and was colonial governor for a short time. He had two sons, one of whom was the sheriff, who whipped the Quakers at the cart-tail out of town. After that, the father arose in church and publicly asked the pardon of God for having such sons, and immediately adopted the Quaker faith.

Whittier, the poet, is said to have descended from this same sheriff.

Thomas Roberts conveyed land to his sons John and Thomas in 1670, and the Roberts name is mentioned all the way down to the present time in Dover, N. H., and surrounding towns and states throughout the Union.

This ancestor may not be the one we are looking for, as there are said to be two distinct families of Roberts, not related—one coming from England, claiming to be English, the other from Wales. Probably they all originated from the same source—Roberts being distinctly a Welsh name.

Not being able to trace connection with the one coming over from Wales (and they are coming from Wales all the time), I have chosen to confine my present history to Joseph Roberts, the first settler of the town of Brooks, Me., and his immediate family, supplemented by one nearly as full of the descendants of his brother, Jonathan Roberts, and a brief notice of the family of his sisters, Hannah Jorden, Sarah Shaw, Elizabeth Irish, Mary Taylor, and brother, John Roberts.

On the Windham, Me., records is the copy of a deed which says: "Peter White purchased of Joseph Roberts and wife, Hannah, one hundred acres of land, at Standish, Me., August 29, 1787."

This Joseph Roberts and wife, Hannah, were undoubtedly the parents of our paternal ancestor Joseph. The family are known to have lived on this farm on Standish Neck, Me. It is now owned by Edwin White, a grandson of Peter White, who bought it, and who moved from Buckfield (Me.) there. It is occupied by A. M. Shaw, who has summer boarders, and is a delightful situation at the foot of Sebago Lake, Me., about six miles from Standish village, Me. From the house to Windham, Me., is but a few rods, and as the farm seems to have extended into Windham, Me., they used "Windham" as a home name.

Joseph Roberts, Senior, our ancestor, was living in Brentwood, N. H., in 1756, and is next known by the records extant in Windham, Me. He had a brother Jonathan, also living in Windham, Me., having been married there to Elizabeth Webb, in 1768. Their son Samuel was born in Windham, Me.

When they moved to Buckfield, Me., there were born to them: Susanna, George, Jonathan, James, Bethia, Judith, Betsey, Seth and Rebecca.

James, of this family, married Tabitha Roberts, the daughter of his cousin Joseph, and went to Brooks, Me., with them. Others of the family followed and settled in Brooks and Waldo, Me., and surrounding towns, where their descendants are to this day.

A Windham, Me., record says: "Jonathan Roberts, Jr., of Buckfield, bought land in Buckfield, Me., of Peter White, of Standish, Me., 1795." Another deed speaks of Jonathan Roberts (a trader), of Windham, Me., now residing in Buckfield, Me., January 15, 1801.

Joseph Junior's brothers and sisters were: Hannah, Sarah, Jonathan, Elizabeth, Mary and John.

When their father died is not known. The family tradition says he came from Wales to New Hampshire.

The mother, who was Hannah Young, died in 1816, while residing with her daughter Elizabeth.

JOSEPH ROBERTS, JR.

A Revolutionary Soldier.

JOSEPH ROBERTS was born in Brentwood, N. H. (a town near the Massachusetts line), on February 6, 1756. He died in Brooks, Me., January 10, 1843. Nothing is known of him from his birth till his enlistment in the militia at Cape Elizabeth, May 15, 1775. Being under age, he ran away from home to enlist. His father went to bring him home, but, as Joseph told it, he, too, caught the war fever, and enlisted, and they were both at Bunker Hill, fighting "behind the rail fence."

The common soldiers of this renowned battle were not recorded, so we cannot prove this illustrious service; but Joseph's name appears recorded at the state house and at Washington, D. C., as a Revolutionary soldier from 1775 to the end of 1779. In the meantime he found time to marry, for November 28, 1777, he was married to Miss Esther Hamlin, of Gorham, Me., a daughter of Joseph Hamlin, who was a soldier in the French war, and died soon after returning home, June 17, 1763.

Miss Hamlin's lineage has been traced back to Hamelin, who came over with William the Conqueror in 1066, and supposed to be of German ancestry. She is of the fifth generation in America. James came in 1639 and settled in Barnstable, Mass. His son Israel also lived there, while Jacob became one of the early settlers of Gorham, Me., about 1743.

(H. F. Andrews, in his "History of the Hamlin Family," gives a very vivid account of the stirring times the settlers had at this period with the Indians and French; also sickness and hardships almost incredible to believe now.)

Jacob was born in 1702. He married his cousin Content Hamlin, in 1731. He died in 1774. She lived almost to the year 1800. Joseph, the one child left to them, was born May, 173—, possibly in Barnstable, Mass. He married, April 15, 1755, Hannah Whitney, whose family came from York, Me. She died in 1797. Their children were: Jacob, Esther, Joseph, Sarah.

Esther Hamlin Roberts was born in Gorham, Me., June 30, 1758. She was married on November 28, 1777. She died in 1800 in Buckfield, Me.

Joseph Roberts is supposed to have settled in Standish, Me., the town adjoining Windham, Me., about the close of his Revolutionary services. All his children's names appear on the Buckfield, Me., records. The "Maine State Register" records that he was the first white settler in the town of Brooks, Me., in 1799. He probably was there several years before his family moved, as his wife died, in 1800, in Buckfield. In 1801 he married Margaret Hall, daughter of Hatevil Hall and Ruth Winslow. She was from the old English family of Wincelowe, from whom came Governor Winslow in the Mayflower, in 1620. His brother, Kenelm, born in 1599, came to Plymouth, Mass., in 1629. He married in 1634 the widow of John Adams, and settled in Marshfield, Mass.

To them was born Job. His son James, born 1687, settled in Falmouth, Me., 1728. He was the first Quaker in that town. He had a son Job, born 1715, and his daughter Ruth married Hatevil Hall, who was a descendant of Deacon John Hall, born in England, in 1617, and settled in Dover, N. H., about 1650. His grandson, Hatevil, went to Falmouth, Me., in 1750, and there his son Hatevil, born in Dover, 1736, married Ruth Winslow (fifth generation). They moved from Falmouth, Me., to Windham, Me., thence to Buckfield, Me., thence to Brooks, Me., where she died in 1798. He died in 1804.

He left thirteen children. The twelfth child, Margaret, of the sixth generation in America, was born in 1777, in Buckfield, Me. She married Joseph Roberts, and they had twelve children.

Shadrach Hall, the thirteenth child, and brother of Margaret, was born in 1779, and married Sarah, the daughter of Joseph Roberts by his first wife. She was born in 1782. They had ten children.

THE FIRST SETTLER OF BROOKS, MAINE.

Going into the wilderness of Brooks, Me., in 1799, Joseph Roberts first selected a spot about a mile north of the present village, and cleared the land for his first home. A family, Thorndike by name, from Beverly, Mass., owning a large grant of land, and wishing to secure the improvements made by Joseph, exchanged with him for a large tract of land about a mile west of the first farm, now called the "Thorndike Farm." Here Joseph and his boys cleared up another farm, built a log house, and here he lived a long life and died respected and lamented by all. He built the first saw mill, which developed the village around it and a few years later the grist mill, on the site where the "Page Mills" recently stood. He was a natural mechanic, and was a manufacturer of wooden ware, selecting woods with greatest care, and with a foot-lathe turning out bowls, mortars, etc. Some of his dishes are in existence now among his descendants. He taught his boys the wood-turners' trade, and the girls were taught spinning and weaving. The goods they manufactured were a source of revenue. While some were making articles, others would go out through the sparsely settled country and trade them for necessities of life.

The old soldier was an upright, moral and religious man, industrious and frugal. His descendants have inherited these traits in a great measure, as well as his consistent patriotism in time of war.

10. MIRIAM, tenth child, married Rev. Humphrey Small. She died childless in May, 1890.

Sarah and Shadrach's children all lived in Brooks, Me., except Eliza, who resided in Monroe, Me., and William P., who lived for many years in Winterport, Me., where he died.

ISAAC AND JACOB.

May 10, 1784, was a day of rejoicing in the home of the old soldier, Joseph Roberts, for, after nearly seven years of wedded life, unto him a son was given, and not only one, but two of those much-needed blessings in those days, when man was needed to till the soil and make the wilderness bloom.

These first boys they named Isaac and Jacob. Let us put Isaac first, in Bible fashion, for all of Esther's children were devoted Christians, and must have been brought up under Christian influences, which guided their whole lives. Isaac and Jacob grew to manhood on their father's farm, and when they became of age, feeling the need of a better education than could be obtained in the home school, they went to the Hebron Academy, and improved their advantages as few young men of that time could.

There was such a strong resemblance in the twins that when they were boys they had to dress them differently to distinguish them. This resemblance continued through life, and when grown to manhood they were frequently mistaken for each other, and it was hard to convince some who hailed Isaac on the street that he was not the Doctor. Their own children could not always tell them apart. Isaac never had his picture taken, but one of Jacob will easily answer for both.

Isaac was for many years a successful teacher. His specialty was English grammar, in which he became acknowledged authority throughout the country where he resided, when all went to him to settle disputed questions in parsing. With his farming he also held a responsible position as land agent in several towns in Waldo county (for a syndicate), with headquarters in Belfast, Me., from 1840 to 1850. He lived in Belfast three years, while in the business of turning machines, with his son Milton. After this he returned to Brooks, Me.

He was not active in politics, but had decided convictions as to right and wrong, and always voted as long as he was able to go to the polls. He was one of the first six voters in his town of Brooks, Me., who cast their ballots for the Anti-Slavery party, voting for "Birney" for President, in 1840.

From early childhood he was a total abstainer. It was the custom then to work out the highway taxes with the aid of New England rum. The first year Isaac paid his share, but instead of drinking his rum he poured it out beside the road, much to the disgust of the others. After that he never even contributed toward buying the rum.

He was an active member of the Freewill Baptist Church for some time, eventually uniting with the Quakers, in which faith he died, October 4, 1862.

Among his last words were, "I will arise and gird myself and go forth and serve them," which was characteristic of his whole life. After his fatal attack of paralysis, he could say but little, his very last words being, "Peace, great peace."

ISAAC ROBERTS' FAMILY.

ISAAC ROBERTS married first, in 1810, Abigail Merrill of Hebron, Me., who bore him seven children and died in 1834.

JUSTIN ROBERTS, the first child of Isaac and Abigail, was born in 1811 in Brooks, Me., and died April, 1846. He was married in 1836 to Mary Jane McLeod, who was born in 1813 and died in 1863.

They had three children—viz.: 1. Abigail Sarah, born August 10, 1838, married Corydon G. Ireland of St. Albans, Me., March 15, 1860. He was in the Civil War, enlisting in a California regiment. They live in Lewiston, Me. Their children were:

Benjamin Randall Ireland, born January 12, 1868; died November 27, 1872.

MILTON M. ROBERTS, second child of Isaac and Abigail, was born in Brooks, Me., January 4, 1815, and died in Minneapolis, Minn., April 28, 1895. He received his education in the district schools and Hebron Academy. He became a most successful teacher in Brooks, Me., and other towns, also in New York. At one time he had twenty-seven Roberts descendants among his scholars.

ELIZABETH ROBERTS.
Wife of Milton Roberts.

He was a wood-turner by trade, and invented an improved turning lathe, a steam plow and several useful improvements in machinery, some of which he patented. He was brought up in the religious belief of the Quakers. Was one of the first to vote the Abolition ticket. Was a Freemason, and was buried by them.

He went to Minnesota in 1864, and was one of the pioneers of Anoka and Minneapolis.

In August, 1843, he married Elizabeth Cates Roberts, daughter of Joseph Roberts of Brooks, Me. She was a cheerful, hopeful, energetic woman, and a great help and comfort to him in later years, when he, like Milton, the illustrious poet, became blind.

He was a kind husband and father and had all his mental faculties at the time of his death at the age of eighty. His wife did not long survive him. She died in Minneapolis, December 5, 1895.

Milton and Elizabeth had four children, viz.: 1. Victoria Elizabeth, who was born in Brooks, Me., April 29, 1844. She was a bright child, learning to read in the Bible and other books at such an early age that they had to be taken from her. She died in Levant, Me., July 5, 1849. 2. Milton M. Roberts, born in Levant, Me., April 22, 1847. He lives in Minneapolis, Minn. 3. Evelyn V., born in Levant, Me., November 5, 1849; married Frank Tippet in 1870. She is now a widow and keeps house for her brother and sister in Minneapolis. She had one child, Bertie, born in 1871, who died in childhood. 4. Jessie L., born June 12, 1862, in Jefferson, Wis., also lives in Minneapolis.

CLARKSON B. ROBERTS, third child of Isaac and Abigail, born about 1818, was a Methodist clergyman and died in Los Angeles, Cal., October, 1896. He married Mary Nickerson of Waldo, Me., who was living in California in the summer of 1901, but was very feeble. She was a very gifted woman, an excellent teacher and lived a life filled with good works. They had but one child, which died young.

ADDISON J. ROBERTS, fourth child of Isaac and Abigail, born about 1822, died in Brooks, Me., in 1867. He was unmarried.

ISAAC PENNINGTON ROBERTS, son of Isaac and Abigail, was born in Brooks, Me., October 18, 1826. He lived on the farm with his father and attended the district school till he was fourteen, when he was sent to China, Me., to "Friend" Elijah Winslow to learn the trade of shoemaker. After that he went to Lynn, Mass., and in 1855 became interested in religion and, feeling that he was called to the work of the ministry, he began the preparation, as best he could, attending a Conference Seminary in Charlotteville, N. Y., for that purpose. There was a pressing need for more ministers, and he was persuaded to begin work, entering the East Maine Methodist Conference in 1857. He gave thirteen years to the regular work of the ministry, and was then, on account of his health, obliged to retire for two years. In 1871 he took up the work again, in the Wisconsin Conference, where he continued for about twelve years. Then, feeling his health was not sufficient to enable him to do the full work of the ministry, he retired, and is now a superannuate in the Wisconsin Conference, residing on Fifth street, Milwaukee, Wis.

On November 25, 1852, Isaac P. Roberts married Miss Harriet Stanley, who was born in Harrison, Me., October 27, 1832. Four children were born to them, as follows: (1) Justin Everett Roberts, born October 10, 1855; died September 21, 1856.

Leslie Manter, son of Isaac P. and Harriet S. Roberts, was born in the town of Carmel, Me., March 28, 1857. He moved west with his parents, to Wisconsin, in 1868. He attended the district schools at the different places where his father was stationed as pastor, until 1876, when he entered Lawrence University at Appleton, Wis., as a preparing student. After two years' study he entered the freshman class, taking the scientific course. Here he pursued his studies until 1881, when he went to the Wisconsin State University at Madison, completed his course, and took his degree of A. B. in the following year. In 1884 he began the work of teaching as principal of high schools, which he continued for eight years. He taught also as professor of English literature in the South Side High School, Milwaukee, for one year, since which time he has been employed in mercantile pursuits, in which he is now engaged in the city of New York.

(3) Selwyn Prentice Roberts was born February, 1862, and died August 26, 1863. (4) Herbert Elwyn Roberts was born July 30, 1864, and died August 31, 1867. Two infant daughters died unnamed.

Abigail Merrill Roberts died in 1834 and Isaac married Sarah Cobb of Limerick, York County, Me. She was born July 16, 1799, and died June 20, 1884. They had two children, a daughter named Sophronia, who died about 1843, and one son, WARREN NORTON ROBERTS, born May 2, 1839, who lived at home in Brooks, Me., until he was twenty years of age, then he taught school in Brooks and other adjacent towns. In 1872 he went to Lowell, Mass., to work for the Locks and Canal Company. In 1876 he was employed by the city of Lowell as janitor for the high school and remained for seventeen years in that position. Then he went into the grocery business, but failing health compelled him to give up all business a few years ago. He still lives in Lowell. He was married to Mary E. Parsons in Brooks, Me., February 19, 1862. She died April 10, 1863, leaving a son, Willie M., born April 2, 1863, who died in Lowell, Mass., October 22, 1888. Warren married Lovisa, widow of Gilman Roberts, in Brooks, Me., October 29, 1864. She died in Lowell, Mass., January 11, 1891. On April 10, 1892, Warren married Georgia A. Robinson in Lowell, Mass. She died September 10, 1894, in Lowell, Mass.

We learn, as our forms are locked up for the press, of the death of Warren Norton Roberts, which occurred at his home in Lowell, Mass., January 1st, 1902.

JACOB ROBERTS' FAMILY.

JACOB ROBERTS, son of Joseph Roberts, the revolutionary soldier, was born in Buckfield, Maine, May 10, 1784, and died in North Vassalboro, Maine, March 15, 1856. He was a most remarkable man, who in his day was second to none in the State of Maine for knowledge and skill as a physician and surgeon.

He had no educational advantages and only commenced learning to read at the age of fifteen years, his father giving him his time at the age of eighteen. At the age of twenty-five he received his diploma to practice medicine, having paid all of his own expenses by working on his father's farm and in other pursuits, latterly having taught school during the winters. One year later, in 1810, he married Huldah Moulton Myrick, of Hebron, Maine, and located in Brooks, Maine, where his father had made the first settlement about twelve years previous, building him a log house a mile north of the small village and a half mile from any other resident, where he brought his young wife and infant son Hamlin, and was immediately called away to a patient twenty miles distant, the country being very sparsely settled and his field of practice extending a circle of 50 miles, which he covered on horseback with his saddlebags. A very severe snow storm arose in his absence, the huge drifts preventing his return home for several days. In the meantime his wife and child had a most narrow escape from perishing from the severe cold weather through lack of fuel, as the nearest neighbor, a Mr. Ham, was not aware of the arrival of his family from Buckfield, but saw some evidences that led him to go to their relief.

Dr. Roberts practiced his profession in Brooks for nearly forty years, passing the last ten years of his life in North Vassalboro, where he had a very large practice, to which he was succeeded by Dr. Henry J. Barrows, who married his daughter Jane, who in turn was succeeded by Dr. Francis Alton Roberts, a grandson.

Dr. Jacob Roberts was a man of great observation, with a liberal and broad mind. He was a close and progressive student and watched with intense interest the introduction of the Hahnemann system of practice by the brothers, Dr. Payne of

Son of Joseph and Esther.

Bath, Me., and Dr. Payne of Belfast, Me., the latter, whose success in dealing with some most serious cases within his circuit led Dr. Roberts to call upon him with the result that he became a speedy convert and the third practitioner of homeopathy in Maine, in which he achieved most eminent success.

He was the first to establish that system of practice in Kennebec County, and in the language of Dr. Bradford of Lewiston: "Dr. Roberts did more than any ten doctors ever did to establish and build up homeopathy in the state of Maine," for he was the most enthusiastic one that ever lived, and he was so well known all over the state, from having been the principal consulting doctor east of Portland so long, he was still sent for to counsel after he adopted homeopathy, and never lost an opportunity to convert a doctor when called as a last resort to a supposed hopeless case. But with his new method was in many instances able to effect a recovery, which made converts of old school physicians.

While closely confined to his extensive practice, he found time to devote to his farm and some large business interests.

His influence among his neighbors upon all public and political questions was most pronounced when disposed to exercise the same, which he rarely did, a notable exception being in the campaign of 1840, when he made a great effort as a Whig for William Henry Harrison for President (Tippecanoe and Tyler, too), the town of Brooks (in the overwhelming Democratic county of Waldo) giving his candidates 171 to 69 for Van Buren, a larger vote than was ever polled in Brooks at any one time previously or the following sixty years. His political work was all done quietly as he engaged in the regular practice of his profession, and the result was a surprise. One of his Democratic neighbors (Squire Morse), in explaining the abnormal Whig majority, said: "It was that old switch tail horse of Dr. Roberts that did the work for the Whigs." Dr. Roberts very soon thereafter enrolled himself a member of the abolition party, as he concluded that the southern wing of the Whig party would always prevent any action looking to the liberation of the slaves.

Dr. Roberts in religion early embraced the Quaker faith, and was a devoted follower of that church, using the language and wearing the broad-brimmed hat and plain garb of that sect, among whom, in the Quaker town of Vassalboro, he passed his latter years.

Dr. Roberts was a man of great benevolence and the number of his patients who contributed nothing to his financial support far outnumbered those who paid their family physician, yet so extensive was his practice that he accumulated a handsome property for those days, only to lose the greater part of the same through the incompetency of his active partners in a large land and timber speculation.

He left several sons who became prominent in the political, financial and professional world, the youngest, Dr. Wm. P. Roberts of Janesville, Wis., being the only survivor, with one daughter, Mrs. Jane Barrows of Boston, Mass.

He lived on the Roberts Hill, in Brooks, Me., till 1845, when he removed to North Vassalboro, where he died March 15, 1856.

He married twice—first, in 1810, to Huldah Myrick, daughter of Beezaleel and Huldah Moulton Myrick. She was born in North Yarmouth in 1793 and died April 6, 1845, of paralysis.

Jacob married Abby Jenkins of Vassalboro, Me., for his second wife, March, 1852. She died in August, 1852.

Jacob and Huldah had eleven children:

(1) Hamlin Myrick. (2) Jacob Wellington. (3) Amorena Deborah. (4) Barnabus Myrick. (5) Charles Linneus. (6) Forteus Beezaleel. (7) Emily Esther. (8) Phebe Young. (9) Huldah Jane. (10) Ellen Cecilia. (11) William Pinkney.

1. HAMLIN MYRICK ROBERTS, born in Buckfield, Me., 1811, died in Brooks, Me., June, 1856, at the old homestead of his father, having sold his residence and farm in South Jackson a few months before. He married Mary Ann Rich, daughter of Joseph Rich, in 1835. She died in 1877 in East Dixfield, Me., the wife of Rev. Dexter Waterman, whom she married in 1859 at Unity, Me.

All of their married life was passed on their farm, South Jackson, adjoining the farm of the father, Dr. Jacob Roberts, which was located in Brooks township, one mile north of the present village of Brooks.

Hamlin Roberts received the common school education of those days, was an industrious, hard-working farmer to the day of the sickness which resulted in his death. He was greatly respected by his neighbors and townsmen, and while taking a deep interest in public affairs always refused to accept the suffrages of his fellow-citizens, who repeatedly offered him local office.

He was an abolitionist from the foundation of that party in Maine, having, with a Mr. Gilman and one other gentleman, given the three votes to Birney for president in the town of Jackson in 1840. He retained his allegiance to the Quaker Church to the end and attended their simple service every Sunday morning with his wife, who was a member of the Free Will Baptist Church, giving the afternoon service to the church of his wife.

He was a charter member of the Waldo County Agricultural Society which held its annual fair and stock show at Belfast, the county seat, and was for several years a director in that organization, which many years ago lost its force and importance by reason of divided opinions and the formation of local societies in other parts of the county. The children of Hamlin and Mary Ann Rich Roberts—Allen Hamlin Roberts and Cassius Clay Roberts, living, who both reside in Chicago, Ill.; Dr. Frances Alton Roberts, who died in 1892; Emily Roberts, born in 1840, died in 1848; Nelson Roberts, born in 1842, killed in 1848, being crushed by a block of granite house foundation falling on him.

1. Allen Hamlin Roberts, the first child, was born February 22, 1836, in Jackson, Me., was educated at New Hampton Seminary, New Hampshire, and high school of Samuel Johnson, a noted educator of Waldo County, Me. Allen taught school in Maine, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, went to Illinois in 1857, located at Elmwood, where he was local agent for Peoria & Oquawka R. R., now a part of the Burlington system; was in the stock business there, Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Chicago, Ill., for many years. He married in 1863 Kate Weatherhead of Pawtucket, R. I. They had one daughter, Katie, who died in Chicago at the age of nine years. They reside in Chicago, Ill.

2. Francis Alton Roberts, son of Hamlin M. Roberts, was born in Jackson, Maine, Aug. 9, 1838, and died in Waterville, Maine, May 26, 1892. He was educated at the district school in South Jackson, the private fall schools taught by Samuel Johnson, and at New Hampton Seminary, New Hampshire. With his brothers he was put to the hard farm work at a tender age, only abandoning the same with the commencement of his medical studies. He attended lectures at Dartmouth College but decided to adopt the medical faith of his grandfather and took the course at Hahnemann Homeopathic College of Philadelphia, where he graduated in 1861. He commenced practice in China, Me., where he married Miss Mary F. Huzzy, December, 1861, by whom he had one child, Emily, who died in 1873 at the age of three years. He practiced his profession for a brief time at both Taunton, Mass., and Gardner, Maine, more than ten years at North Vassalboro, Maine, and the latter ten years of his life in Waterville, Maine. He was devoted strictly to his profession in which he achieved great success. Was an ardent lover of fine horses, having owned some of the best stock in the state, and was a man of most sterling qualities who had the sincere respect of all with whom he associated or wherever he was known.

3. Emily Roberts, born 1840, died 1848.

4. Nelson Roberts, born 1842, died 1848.

2. JACOB WELLINGTON, second son of Jacob, was born in Brooks, Me., November 29, 1813, and died December 18, 1849.

He acquired his education in the district schools and the "Friends School" in Providence, R. I., and became a successful teacher in the towns of Waldo and Knox counties.

On May 22, 1836, he married Phebe Susan, daughter of Isaac and Chloe Abbot of Jackson, Me. She was born on Sears Island, Me., May 24, 1818, and died in Brooks, Me., December 26, 1844, having had four children.

For four years after marriage, Wellington kept the village store at Brooks, Me., exchanging goods for produce which was shipped to and from Boston by packet. After this, he took a farm in Jackson, Me., for a few years, but the illness and death of his wife broke up the family and he returned to teaching.

Wellington was of pronounced literary tastes, a poet and prose writer of decided merit, who would have made a place in the literary world but for his untimely death. His intimate friend and opponent in many of the old-fashioned debates at the county school houses, was Prof. Ezra Abbott, then a neighbor and cousin to his wife, who for forty years previous to his death while in active work held a professorship at Harvard College. Wellington's mind was a storehouse of general information and he was a close reasoner without a waste of words. He was the chosen champion of the Free Soil party of his locality to meet all opponents, and his logic was most potent in creating a public sentiment that made Brooks poll a plurality for the Free Soil party at nearly every election for eight years before the formation of the Republican party.

He was a zealous party man, first a Whig, then an Abolitionist, and always a strong advocate for temperance.

While traveling in the west he was seriously poisoned with field mercury and consumption set in. For two years he was a book-keeper for the Vassalboro Woolen Mills.

In June, 1849, he married Jane Lippencott of South China, who cared tenderly for him till his death in December.

1. Edward Junius, his first child, was born February 8, 1837; died January 4, 1838, in Brooks, Me.

2. Edward Junius Roberts, the second son, was born in Brooks, Me., February 10, 1839. On the death of his father he went to live with his father's eldest sister, Amorena Manter. His uncle, Dr. Ezra Manter, took charge of him till he was eighteen. Soon after he began the study of dentistry, and, working his way upward, he graduated from Philadelphia Dental College, in 1865. He practiced in Vassalboro, Me., and surrounding towns, and, in 1870, opened an office in Augusta, Me., and became the leading dentist in the state. He was one of the founders and an active worker in the Maine Dental Association.

EDWARD JUNIUS ROBERTS,
Son of Jacob Wellington Roberts.

At the passage of the Maine dental law he was appointed by the governor as one of the Five Dental Examiners, and served as its chairman ten years.

He joined the Methodist church in 1862, and has always been an ardent church worker. He is also interested in music, being a fine singer. He has long been a Mason and Knight Templar.

On November 15, 1865, he married Emma Evans of Dixmont, Me. Their first child, (1) Arthur Wellington, was born in North Vassalboro, August 20, 1868. The next was (2) Lottie Adelia, born September 11, 1873. She died October 14, 1873. 3. Orville Leslie, born in Augusta, Me., October 21, 1874, still lives, and assists his father in his business in Augusta, Me.

3. Freeman Myrick Roberts, the third son, was born in South Jackson, December 21, 1840. When his parents died he went to live with his uncle, Barnabas Roberts. He afterward went to live with the family of Benjamin York, and remained with him during his life. Before he was twenty-one his country called "To arms!" and he enlisted in Company F, Fourth Maine Infantry, for three years, giving a continuous faithful service for that time, participating in all the engagements with his regiment from the first battle of Bull Run, through the battles of Gettysburg, The Wilderness and Cold Harbor, with all that came between. What was left of him started for home July 19, 1864, and contentedly settled down on the farm.

On February 1, 1866, he married Aurelia Julana York, and they had a happy life together for thirty-three years. She died September 11, 1899, aged fifty-five years. In 1868 they moved from Jackson, Me., to Newport, Me., where he still resides.

Their children were: 1. Ella Mabel, born February 14, 1870; married, December 8, 1896, Oscar R. Emerson, who was born April 12, 1872. He is a physician in Monson, Me.

Daughter of Jacob Wellington Roberts.

4. Amorena was the fourth child of Wellington Roberts, who named his one little girl, born November 5, 1842, for his beloved sister, Amorena Manter, and when he found himself nearing his last hours on earth, he sent her to live with her Aunt Amorena, in Brooks, Me, back to the home where he had started in life thirty-six years before.

The little one lost her new mother two and one-half years after this, but her uncle, mindful of his promise of adoption, kept her with him till she was twenty. She lived in Brooks, Me., four years, Searsport two years, and in Winterport till 1862, when she started out in the world for herself.

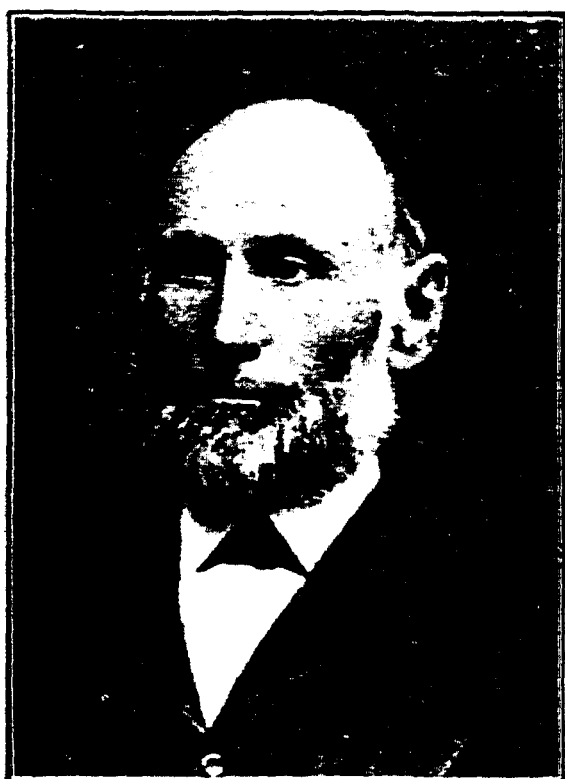

She married, May 3, 1869, Lemuel C. Grant, son of Joseph Grant, of Frankfort, Me. He served through the war, first in the Fourth Maine, reinlisting in Nineteenth Maine, and was appointed quartermaster sergeant in First Maine Regiment heavy artillery. He was discharged at the close of the war and took up the sailor's profession. He was the mate of the Bark Warren when she was lost with all on board in the summer of 1870.

Mrs. Amorena Grant, granddaughter of Dr. Jacob Roberts and great-grandchild of Joseph Roberts, Jr., the revolutionary soldier, is the author of this book. "THE PUBLISHERS."

He married at that time Emeline Rich, daughter of Joseph Rich, and sister to Mary Ann, wife of his older brother Hamlin. He afterwards went to Rhode Island and studied Latin with his uncle, Joseph Myrick, which he taught winters, working on the farm the balance of seasons.

after which he was in the mercantile business alone until his death.

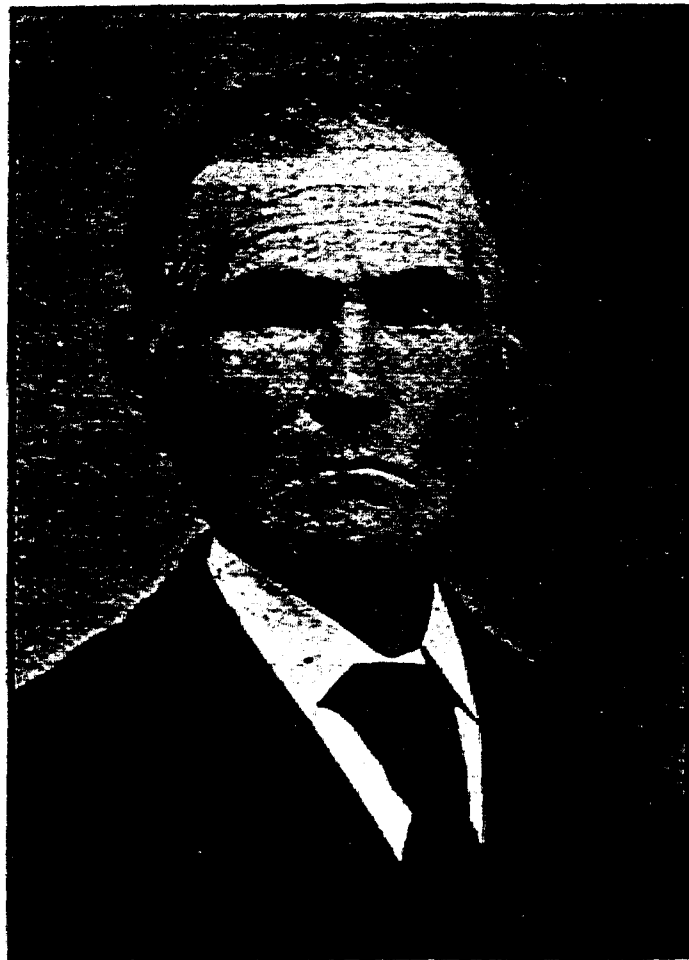

B. M. Roberts was state senator for two years during the war of rebellion from Waldo county, and representative to the legislature one year from Stockton. He was four years collector of customs for Belfast, Me., four years postmaster of Stockton, Me.

Politically he was originally a Whig, became an Abolitionist about 1844. Was one of the founders of the Republican party and always one of its trusted leaders in Waldo County. He was a man of great energy and determination, a ready debater and a prominent figure in the political arena of his county from 1855 until his death. He was the recognized leader of one faction of the Republican party, Truman Harmon of Thorndike being the head of the other. Their last great struggle was had in 1869, in the contest for U. S. senator between Hannibal Hamlin and Lot M. Morrill, Mr. Roberts supporting Hamlin.

He was a candidate for the congressional nomination in 1866, but was defeated by the sitting member, Frederick A. Pike.

He went to Illinois in the latter part of 1848, taught school and, with his young wife endured many hardships, living for a time on a farm in Lake County, which he soon abandoned and returned to teaching penmanship, for in his day he was one of the best in the country. County and taught school near the present village of Elmwood, Ill., where he built the first frame house there about 1853 or 1854. The preliminary survey was made at that time of the old Peoria and Oquawka railroad, where he secured employment as rodman. His abilities and mathematical knowledge soon received recognition and he was rapidly advanced by General A. C. Harding of Monmouth, the president, and was superintendent of the division when, after the road was completed to Burlington, Iowa, the great financial crash of 1857 compelled a lease of the same for ninety-nine years to the C., B. & Q. system. He also kept the leading hotel in Peoria, where he sold and went to Chicago, taking a lease in company with Colonel Frank Sherman of the New Sherman house. The war coming on with its great opportunities, he soon found other fields of action, and sold the Sherman house at a large advance to engage in street railroad building and large dealings in Western lands as also Chicago real estate. At one time he owned the township in Iowa, where Storm Lake is located. He owned the two lots where stood Central Music Hall in Chicago, and two hundred lots where the Rock Island shops at Fortieth and State streets now are. He built street railroads in Cincinnati, Ohio, and on Staten Island, New York: was a large operator in cotton when the war blockade was broken; was a broker in New York for several years and was financially ruined in the great crash of Black Friday through the failure of the Fisk and Gould combination to accept their contracts. At the time of his sudden death in March, 1888, he was actively promoting the construction of new railroad across the northern part of Arkansas.

Huldah Jane, when left with three small children when her husband passed away very suddenly, exhibited unusual business ability for one of her sex. Without any financial backing she assumed the fashionable boarding-house business in the city of Boston, where since 1872 she has been most successful as a caterer to the elite of the city of Boston winters and at some seashore resort during the summer months, notably for the last dozen years at the historical old Devereaux Mansion near Marble Head, Mass., where she will likely be found during the summer of 1902.

The children of Jane and Henry Barrows were:

1. Elizabeth Marion, born May 17, 1853, in Brooks, Me.; died in Boston, July 31, 1880. In July, 1878, she married Joseph Upham, of Weston, Mass., and had one son, Harold Barrows Upham, born in Boston, March 5, 1879.

2. Howard Fulton Barrows, born in Arlington, Mass., November 1, 1892. They reside in Newton, Mass.

ELLEN C. ROBERTS.

Daughter of Dr. Jacob Roberts.

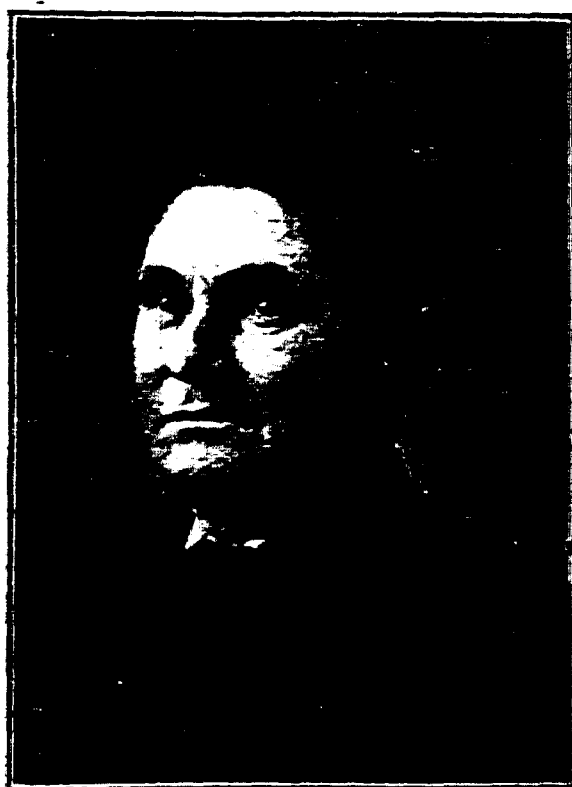

10. ELLEN CECILIA, the tenth child of Jacob and Huldah, was born May 27, 1833, in Brooks, Me. She married, December, 1852, Dr. Ezra Manter, from whom she was divorced and resumed her maiden name. In early life she became a member of the Congregational Church, of which she was a devoted member. For several years she was matron for the Home for Boys, Newton, Mass. She was matron of the Girls' Industrial School, Hollowell, Me., for twelve years, from which she resigned by reason of failing health. She was stricken with paralysis December 6, 1898, while visiting in Boston and after an illness of twenty months, died August 10, 1901, in Augusta, Me.

11. WILLIAM PINKNEY ROBERTS, the eleventh and youngest child of Jacob and Huldah, was born in Brooks, Me., January 25, 1836. The death of his mother when he was a mere youth left him without a regular home and his education was acquired largely through his own efforts and at various common schools. When eighteen years old he was given up to die as a hopeless case of consumption, by five as eminent doctors as could be found in Kennebec and Penobscot counties, Me. Reading that a change of climate sometimes restored such victims, he, by the help of an older brother, went West, recovered his health, returned East and went to the Friends School in Providence, R. I., one long term. The following year he taught a country school in Kennebec County, Me. Symptoms of consumption returned and he went west to Iowa, to settle down as a farmer. After six years he entered the Hahnemann Medical College of Chicago, and in two years passed satisfactory examinations, obtained his diploma and commenced the practice of his profession in Newaygo, Mich., where he adopted some original methods of treating the sick and made a phenomenal success. The following year, 1878, he was house physician in Hahnemann Hospital, Chicago. A few years later he began practice in Janesville, Wis. Soon after the Legislature of Wisconsin had voted to discard the Bible from the public schools Dr. Roberts drew up a bill to substitute the flag for the Bible, and through A. P. Lovejoy, then a state senator from Rock County, and who formerly was a school teacher in his native state, Maine, introduced the bill, and the first school flag law was passed without a dissenting vote.

In 1890 the doctor was an invalid from a severe accident, so was incapacitated from practicing his profession. In June of that year he started a movement which resulted in a chartered association called the American Health Resort Association of Chicago, Ill., and the doctor was appointed one of the special commissioners to investigate climatic conditions in the United States, since which time he has devoted nearly all his energy to that notable object. In 1892 he originated, and helped to organize the American Invalid Aid Society of Boston, through which a grand work has been accomplished. It has done two important things: First, through that work the fact has been established that more than 90 per cent of the victims of consumption can be cured by a wise use of climate; second, through the agitation, beginning with Dr. Roberts' article against the Koch cure in 1891, and the following up of the work, and keeping up the agitation, health boards and legislatures in New England have taken a deep and abiding interest in the cause of abolishing the scourge of consumption. In the far west Dr. Roberts was dubbed the "Lunger's Friend." Through the East he is known to many as the friend to consumptives.

No sooner had Dr. W. P. R. read of the startling declaration of Prof. Koch, viz., that tuberculosis of the bovine is not communicable to the human, than he communicated with the Secretary of the State Board of Health of Wisconsin and with the Evening Wisconsin, Janesville Gazette and several medical journals offering to be one of enough provers to take up and prove as to whether Koch is right. The doctor claims that "ignorance is a disease," and is one of those who believes in proving disputed propositions, especially every proposition relating to the general health of the whole people. In politics always a radical Republican until the split on the coinage of silver, when he voted with the free silver Republican branch of the old party. At the present time (December 27th, 1901) W. P. Roberts is actively trying to have the State Board of Health of Wisconsin take up, and with volunteer provers make a scientific test of Koch's theory, and thus settle once for all this much disputed health proposition. Further, Dr. Roberts is already agitating to have organized a national, or Universal Health Association, which is to be non-sectarian and non-partisan and entirely outside of church or politics. He already has much encouragement from prominent people. May the doctor live to realize all his good intentions for the benefit of suffering humanity!

Dr. Roberts married Susan A. Weeks of Vassalboro in 1859. He was again married April 14, 1888, to Cora B. Ferris of Janesville, Wis., where they now reside. No children.

FAMILY OF ELIZABETH ROBERTS CATES.

6. ELIZABETH ROBERTS, sixth child of Joseph and Esther, was born in Buckfield, Me., February 2, 1786. She married in 1804 John Cates and settled with him on what is called the Davis farm in Brooks. They removed to Jackson, Me., about 1812, where she died in June, 1832.

John Cates, in 1834, married Mary Woods.

John and Elizabeth had nine children.

1. ISAAC CATES, born in Brooks, Oct. 27, 1806, died in North Monroe, Me., Aug. 29, 1883. In 1834 he married Jane Higgins, daughter of Isaac Higgins, of Thorndike, Me. They had one child, Benjamin (now dead), who married Mary Leathers. They had one daughter, Mildred, who lives in Bangor, Me.

Isaac Cates married, Feb. 3, 1854, a second wife, Mary Ann Pattee (born Bixby, July 8, 1821). Their three sons were:

1. John Cates, born Dec. 9, 1855. He is an electrician in Minnesota University (where his half brother, William S. Pattee, is dean of the law school).

2. Lincoln Cates, born March 5, 1861, who married Carrie Stewart of East Cambridge, Mass., June 14, 1888. They live in Andover, Mass., and have three children as follows: Helen Mary Cates, born May 11, 1889; Harold Stewart Cates, born Oct. 17, 1894, and Howard Cates, born Jan. 1, 1896.

3. Willard B. Cates, born July 18, 1864, married Nellie Emery of Liberty, Me., Sept. 19, 1894. They have one child, Louis Goodwin Cates, born July 26, 1895.

2. DEBORAH, second child of John and Elizabeth, died in infancy.

3. JACOB, third child, born in Brooks, Me., in 1810, was a farmer and died in Parkman, Me., October, 1884. He married Harriet Cram of Knox, Me. She was born in Thorndike, Me., Aug. 7, 1816. They had three children—Emily, Nathan and Gardiner Cates, of whom we have no information.

Jacob married a second wife in the person of Olive Lewis of Anson, Me.

4. MERRILL CATES, born in Brooks, 1812, married Thirya Edwards of Jackson, Me.. Both died there.

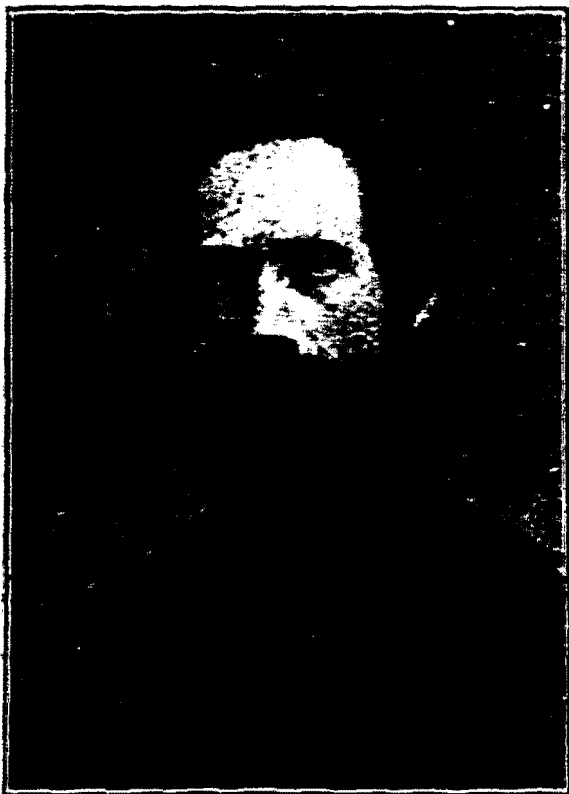

Their three children were Augustus, Washington Irving and Xanthe, all dead.

Xanthe married Alonzo Davis. She died in Lowell, Mass., in 1900. She left two children, Vesta and Eugene Davis.

Vesta Davis married a man named Roberts. They had one child and then separated. Eugene Davis did not marry.

5. THOMAS SKILLINGS CATES, fifth child of John and Elizabeth Cates, was born in Jackson Oct. 8, 1813, and died in Bangor, Me., June 27, 1867. He married, March 13, 1839, Charlotte Shaw of Buckfield, Me., daughter of Jotham and Sarah Roberts Shaw. Thomas' early years were passed in the country, where he had only such educational privileges as the brief terms of school afforded at that period. He had, however, a bright mind and an intense longing for knowledge, which he absorbed from every source. His favorite author was Shakespeare, which he read almost daily, and from which he often quoted the choicest passages. He had a deep interest in the public schools and all educational affairs. After leaving home he spent two or three years in New York city working in a piano factory. He was there during the great fire so destructive to the city. Soon after his marriage he removed to Bangor, Me., which was thereafter his home. He carried on the business of contractor and builder, and at one period that of sash and blind making. A bakery, also a fruit and confectionery store, occupied his time for a while. In 1854 he went to California, where he remained three years and a half, at first in the mines, but mostly in San Francisco. His horizon was greatly widened by this experience, and his letters, written on the way out and during his stay on the Pacific coast, were as full of interest as many of our best books of travel. His religious preference was Free Baptist. Some time in 1859 he joined the Essex Street Free Baptist Church in Bangor, where he kept his connection till death. He was a rigid temperance man, hating liquor so much he would not use it for a medicine nor allow it a place in his home. Rumsellers respected him while they feared his sturdy enmity. He was an equally strong anti-slavery man in the days when it cost something to be in their ranks. The fugitive slave found shelter in his home and help on his way to the goal of liberty—Canada. He was ever the friend of the poor and oppressed and shared his purse, however light it might be, with any one who needed it. He entered the civil war as first lieutenant of Company H, 7th Maine Infantry, Aug. 7, 1861, and resigned January 16, 1862, to accept a captain's commission in the 4th Louisiana Colored regiment of Ullman's Brigade, which was later changed to the 9th Regiment Corps d'Afrique, and still later to the 81st U. S. Regiment. During the siege of Port Hudson, La., he was at tacked with malarial fever, and after some time in hospital at Baton Rouge, returned home on furlough and was never able to rejoin his command. He was discharged for disability Dec. 8, 1863. He continued to decline and died two years after the close of the war from the effect of that service. He was a tireless worker, a man of strong physique, sturdy independence, of fearless speech and iron will, a true and typical Roberts of the Robertses.

Charlotte Shaw Cates, wife of Thomas, was a distant relative of her husband. She was the tenth child of Jotham and Sarah Roberts Shaw, her mother being the third child of Jotham and Hannah Young. She was born in Buckfield, Me., March 20, 1810, and died in Bangor Nov. 13, 1900. She went early to the district school and managed to become quite proficient in whatever was taught in that day. She had an instinct for grammar and always used good language. She could spell almost any word when a mere child. She was a great reader, but cared only for what was good. She inherited from her mother considerable skill with her pen, as shown in the charming letters she wrote to her friends throughout a long and busy life. Her stories of the pleasures and hardships of the early years of the century were delightful. She lived in Buckfield until her marriage with Thomas Cates, when they spent a period of time in Brooks and Monroe until their permanent home was made in Bangor. She was identified with her husband in all the generous and helpful things he did for others. Her house was always open to stranger and friend alike. She did not spare herself, but gave of her best every day and everywhere. She delighted to travel, to see the world, to meet people. One of her pleasantest recollections was that of the visit she paid to the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876. She never tired of telling of the marvels. Her childhood's home was a dear spot, which she visited whenever she could. She was ever most loyal to old-time friends and relatives. She was a true wife and mother, ever unwearied in this service. She was cheerful, even gay at times, with a ready wit that made her what is termed "good company." Her hands were ever busy for others, and it was a great grief to her when they would no longer do her bidding.

For the last three years of her life she grew feeble constantly, until she quietly fell asleep one morning, without pain or consciousness, and woke in that fair world where none grow old.

When a young girl she met Daniel Hamilton in Belfast, Me., who straightway fell in love with her, but she did not want him. His perseverance and persistence carried the day, and, on March 4, 1813, they were married. They settled in Swanville, Me., and had a long happy life together.

Daniel Hamilton came from Berwick, Me., and his grandfather was a son of the Duke of Hamilton, allied to the house of Stuarts. This grandfather and two of his brothers were fighting against Cromwell and were banished by him and sent over to America in irons on the good ship John and Sarah, from London, Eng. They settled in New Hampshire, and, like so many others, proceeded to work their way through the world. Daniel was in the War of 1812. He was taken prisoner and paroled. He came down through Maine to Belfast and selected a farm in Swanville, Me. He made a business of getting out timber for shipbuilding. He was a large, noble-looking man, with a dignified way that made his family stand a little in awe of him. He was a Free Baptist also. His death occurred first and his wife lived with her youngest daughter, until her own death in 1877.

In 1823 Joseph married Lydia, daughter of Nathaniel Knight, and Sarah Webb Knight. Lydia was born in Falmouth, Me., December 26, 1798, and died in Levant, Me., January 19, 1894. They lived in Jackson, Me., till 1827, then removed to Palmyra, Me., his business being to procure lumber to make oars, which he carted to Belfast, Me., to sell. After three years he moved to Brooks, Me., on a farm. Here he raised the first barn in Brooks, Me., without rum. The first temperance raising of the time. Here he and his good wife joined the Free Will Baptist Church. There was no schoolhouse in his district. By his perseverance he started one, and donated the lot to build it on. In 1844 he moved to Levant, Me., and lived there till he died, October 26, 1885. Politically he was first a Whig, then a Free Soiler and later a Republican.

Banks. His horse was killed and splinters of the shell penetrated his head and spine. He managed to crawl from under his horse and get to the woods, some distance away, and, by crawling, and with the help of other wounded soldiers, he got into the Union army line and was taken to a hospital. When a raid was expected in Washington he was hurried to Philadelphia, Pa. Here he was in such a destitute condition that T. S. Arthur, the temperance writer, took pity on him, carried him to his own home, gave him his parlor, and his family cared for him till he was able to travel. Then they procured his discharge and sent him home. He never recovered, however, and suffered intensely all the years he lived, which he bore with heroic patience, as becomes a brave soldier.

SYLVANUS IRISH ROBERTS was a man of great business activity and strength of character; a farmer, lumberman and millman, also owner of shipping. He was an early abolitionist, one of the organizers of the Republican party in his county and an uncompromising enemy of the sale of rum and runsellers. The following article from the graceful pen of Miss Faustina Hichborn, daughter of Hon. N. G. Hichborn, of Stockton, Me., appeared in the "Belfast Age" at the time of his death, and tells briefly the story of his life:

IN MEMORIAM.

Died in Stockton, April 25, 1872, Sylvanus I. Roberts, aged sixty-eight years and five months.

First in temperance, first in charity and first in honesty and moral character, none can fully realize the irreparable loss the community sustains in the removal of so prominent a citizen. Mr. Roberts was born in November, 1803, at Brooks, Me. When a child his father started for Ohio (then the far west), taking his entire family and possessions in one carriage; but, being overloaded, left "S. I." with friends in Oxford county. After several years he returned to Brooks, making this his residence until 1828, when he decided to join his father in Ohio. The slow and tedious modes of travel, as well as mail communication, of that date, are well shown in the fact of his mailing a letter before starting, going to New York by coasting vessel, from there by steamboat to Albany, thence by canal to Buffalo, and on foot over the mountains to the Allegheny river, down that in a log "dug-out" to the Ohio river, and from there on foot to within twenty miles of his father's home, where, calling to inquire his way at a postoffice, he found the letter forwarded before leaving Maine, and carried it to his parents. Not liking western life, he returned the following year to Brooks, where, a movement being soon made in the temperance reform, he commenced the labor of his life's devotion. Discarding all use of ardent spirits, he,

with a cousin, attempted raising a mill in Waldo Plantation without the aid of "rum." Topers threatened to bring their own supply, but ere they were aware of the beginning, the frame was in position by the labor of four strictly temperate men, this being the first "temperance raising" within the limits of Waldo. Nearly forty years ago he removed to the portion of Prospect now Stockton, purchasing and converting into a farm a lot of wild land upon the so-called "Turnpike," but subsequently becoming proprietor of an extensive adjacent mill property, transferred his family to the farm therewith connected, remaining there until his death. Untiring industry and strict economy brought a competency, which his liberal hand ever devoted to deeds of highest charity. To the needy he gave bread and clothing; to those seeking employment, abundant labor, encouraging, by precept and example, every honest endeavor. Few had lived more esteemed or died more lamented; and if charity covereth sins, surely his few human frailties are deeply hidden by his kindness to the widow, the orphan, the aged and the suffering. His great geniality—a peculiar elasticity and gentleness of nature—gave tone and charm to his personality, and rendered "Uncle Sill," as he was familiarly called, always a most welcome guest within the homes of his associates. In 1855 he served his county (Waldo) as sheriff, and at various times held offices of trust in his town. Other positions he did not seek, and once remarked: "I would rather be at the head of the Grand Division of Maine, Sons of Temperance, than hold the position of governor." Nearly twenty-five years since he assisted in organizing a "Division of Sons of Temperance" in his town, to which the ardor of young manhood and the constant devotion of after years were given. Ever in attendance, ever ready with labor, money or advice, his influence was widely instrumental in bringing his town to its present temperance condition. May his mantle of "Love, Purity and Fidelity," in the fullness of his measure, fall upon younger shoulders. And may the "Faith, Hope and Charity" of his life dwell with his descendants, to quicken every effort for the humane and noble cause to which his life was dedicated. Two sons, the older (Orpheus), a brave lieutenant in the "Fourth Maine," the younger (Laurens), a true sailor of a gunboat, sacrificed themselves on their nation's altar of "Liberty and Union." Three sons and three daughters, with his wife, survive him. May the sincere sympathy of friends and the belief of a final meeting of loved ones solace them in their grief for him who, as husband, father and citizen, acted ever upon the broad Christian principle, "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you." FAUSTINA HICHBORN.

THE ROBERTS NAME.

The investigations of the author in securing the data for the proposed abbreviated history of one branch of the big Roberts tree, disclosed the fact that the name is much more general in this country than was supposed. Yet we believe that the New England stock can all be traced back to the common head.

There is a large branch in Connecticut which extended to Pennsylvania, giving a distinguished Colonel Roberts to the war of 1861, the representatives of that family in large numbers residing in Ohio and Illinois.

Vermont gave a Colonel Roberts to the war of the rebellion.

A Colonel Roberts commanded the 1st Michigan Regiment, and the Roberts name is most common in that state.

Maine gave to the war, General Charles W. Roberts, colonel of the Second Maine Regiment, a young officer of great soldierly merit, son of Amos M. Roberts of Bangor, who sprung from Thomas Roberts of Dover, New Hampshire, who came to America in 1635.

Thomas A. Roberts of Portland was colonel of the Seventeenth Maine Regiment, and an excellent officer, his son, Lieutenant Charles W. Roberts, being adjutant of the same command, to which he was transferred from the Tenth Maine. Lieut. Roberts lost a leg at Gettysburg. Col. T. A. Roberts was born in Portland, where his father, Nathaniel Roberts, also appears to have been born. The Roberts name is found among the early settlers of Plymouth, Mass., where is buried Sylvanus Roberts, who died there during the seventeenth century.

There is much traditional evidence—fortified by town records of property changes—to prove that all of the Roberts name who settled in Maine prior to the revolutionary war, were from New Hampshire, all of which territory was then a part of Massachusetts.

This digression from or addition to the other pages is simply given as incidental matter of interest to all of the Roberts name.
