PREFACE.

Mr. Paul Bourget laughs at the Americans, because they desire to know who were their grandfathers. Let him laugh. The desire is the indication of a wish to escape the unrest of American life. All intelligent people instinctively feel that, in a world where every thing changes—residence, fortune, occupation, friends—one thing can not change, namely, one's place in the social organization as shown by one's birth and family connections. Nor is the knowledge of one's family any less important in a republic than where rank is recognized. Indeed, it is in a sense more important. Its prospective is even greater than its present utility; and, if the record is not now made up, while the country is still young, while the traditions of the elders are fresh in our recollection and the ramifications of relationship are not yet too multiplied to be manageable, the origin of American families must be forever lost to those who come after us. Especially are we concerned to know how our life is connected with the life of the nations from which our ancestors emigrated, and what is the precise admixture of blood in our hereditary composition. The interest in genealogical research, under existing conditions, in the United States, is therefore not only natural but commendable. The notion that this interest has its origin in a desire to establish a claim to superior consideration on the ground of inherited rank, is absurd. It rests in fact upon family affection, which is no less strong in the humble than in the great.

This record of one family is, as will be seen, an international record, and in that respect it is somewhat unique. It is believed to be exceptionally complete. In its preparation the author has had posterity in mind, and he cherishes the hope that its publication will have the effect of stimulating the younger members of the family to greater emulation in the effort to achieve nobility of character. For, where rank does not exist, the only earthly honor is in self-conquest and achievement. The consciousness that the conduct of each individual member of a family necessarily reflects credit or discredit upon all its members, is a powerful stimulant to integrity and purity of life. The past we can not alter, but the future is measurably in our control, and our motto must be, Ad astra per aspera.

The family of which a list is given in this pamphlet is not the only family of the same name in the United States; but the connection, if any, between this and the others can not be traced. They may be connected through some remote ancestor in England. There were Stansburys here for at least a century before Joseph Stansbury landed in Philadelphia in 1767. Some of them can be named, as follows:

1678. In an "Act for paym't & assessing the publicke charges of this province," by the General Assembly of Maryland, November, 1678, three hundred pounds of tobacco were ordered to be delivered to John Stanbury, of Chester county. (Archives of Maryland).

1681. By a similar act, in September, 1681, two hundred and sixty pounds of tobacco are ordered to be delivered to Tobias Stanborrow. (Ibid).

1704. Nathan Stanbury or Stansbury (the name is spelled both ways) was appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Pennsylvania, April 4, 1704, justice of the county court; he was appointed, September 1, 1717, justice of the peace. (Colonial Records, v. 2, p. 159; v. 3, p. 28).

1750. Elisha Stansburry, a prisoner of war at Montreal, was surrendered, by the military authorities of New France, to Lieutenant Stoddert, of the New York Infantry (British colonial), and he left Montreal, June 26, 1750, for Fort St. Frederick. Presumably this is the same person reported as a member of Col. John Parker's company, on an expedition to Ticonderoga, who was missing, and probably killed, at Sabbath Day Point, July 26, 1757. (N. Y. Colonial Records, v. 10; Pennsylvania Archives, v. 3).

1750. Tobias Stansbury (son of Tobias Stanborrow?) was captain in the Baltimore militia. (Archives of Maryland).

1756. General Tobias E. Stansbury, born in 1756, was Speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates, Brigadier-General of Militia in the War of 1812 against England, and commanded a brigade in the battle of Bladensburg and the defence of Baltimore. He died in Baltimore county, October 25, 1849. (Drake's Dictionary of American Biography, p. 860).

——. Adonijah Stansbury, of Delaware, was a loyalist in the American Revolution, and is said to have become a settler at Wyoming, Pa., "where he was soon recognized as a disguised enemy." (Sabine's American Loyalists, p. 629).

To the names above cited may be added others of later date:

A soldier in the Revolution, William Stansberry, in the Fourth Company of the First Regiment of the New York Line, was made a corporal, November 21, 1776; taken prisoner of war, October 23, 1777; and deserted, November 25, 1780. (Pennsylvania Archives).

Joseph Stansbury and Benjamin Stansbury were ensigns in the Baltimore County Militia, in 1776, from the Back River Lower Country. (Archives of Maryland).

J. J. Stansbury was a privateer on the Chasseur, in the War of 1812. (Scharf's Chronicles of Baltimore, p. 372).

Charles Stansbury was commissioned in the Army, 1814. (Ibid. p. 346).

Daniel Stansbury was the author of Nautical Tables, New York, 1822.

Philip Stansbury, born at New York, 1802, (erroneously stated by Appleton to have been a son of Joseph Stansbury, of Philadelphia), was author of "A Pedestrian Tour of Two Thousand Three Hundred Miles in North America, to the Lakes, the Canadas, and the New England States," published in New York, in 1822, which was caustically handled by Edward Everett in the North American Review. He died about 1870.

William Stansberry, born in Essex county, N. J., was a Representative in Congress from Ohio, 1827-1833, where a personal assault was made upon him by Gen. Sam Houston, of Texas, for words uttered in debate.

James B. Stansbury was a Director of the Baltimore and Susquehanna Railroad, 1829. (Scharf's Chronicles, p. 431.)

John E. Stansbury was Mayor of Baltimore in 1849.

Smith Stansbury, born in Louisiana, was appointed cadet, from Maryland, at West Point, 1837; commissioned, 1841, brevet Second Lieutenant of Ordnance, U. S. A.; resigned, 1844; clerk in a Baltimore banking house, 1848-1861; served in the Confederate Army, during the Civil War; died, 1864, at St. John's, N. B.

Henry Stanbery, born at New York, February 20, 1803, was a son of Dr. Jonas Stanbery, who removed from New York to Zanesville, O., in 1814. He was made Attorney-General of the United States in 1866, and acted as counsel for President Andrew Johnson, when an attempt was made to impeach him before the Senate. He was an eminent member of the Ohio bar, and resided at Cincinnati, where he died, 1881.

The existence of more than one Stansbury family in England is shown by the following extract from the Encyclopedia of Heraldry:

"STANBERY. Per pale argent and or, a lion rampant, sable.

"STANBURY OR STANBERIE. (Stanberi in Morwinstow, County of Cornwall; the heiress of the elder line m. Manning; a younger branch was of West Stanberie, and another of Cliff; Richard Stanberie, bishop of Hereford, was a younger son of this family). Per pale azure and or, a lion rampant, counterchanged: crescent, a lion rampant.

"STANBURY. Per pale argent and or, a lion passant, between three torteaux.

"STANBURY OR STEYNBURY. Per pale argent and or, a lion rampant, per fess gules and sable."

The similarity in these coats of arms is striking. The four shields are divided per pale, that is, perpendicularly; three of them are argent and or, the fourth azure and or; three of them have a lion rampant, the fourth a lion passant. One of the lions is sable, one counterchanged. One shield bears in addition to a lion three torteaux, and one is divided both per pale and per fess. The near resemblance, however, suggests the probability of a blood connection between the four families.

The large family of Stansburys in the United States not connected, so far as known, with the American descendants of John of Leominster, is probably a branch of the Steynburys mentioned above. They have a tradition that they are of German origin, and that their German name was Steinberg. Prof. Recompense Stanbery, of Dallas, Texas, had, at the time of his death, collected a mass of material concerning them, numbering several thousand names, which, it is to be hoped, may be published at some future day. They trace back to Jonas Stanbery, whose tomb is in London. It is said that two hundred of his descendants were in the Federal Army during the Civil War.

There is a post-office in the Province of Quebec, named Stanberie; and one named Stanberry, in Gentry county, Missouri.

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN STANSBURY, OF LEOMINSTER.

FIRST GENERATION.

JOHN STANSBURY. Born about 1670. Mercer. Married Elizabeth ————. He resided at Leominster, Herefordshire, England, and was a freeholder in Draper's Lane; the freehold is now held by Alexander Stansbury, his descendant.

John Stanberie, whose name is in the "Historic Peerage of England," was Confessor to King Henry the Sixth, and the first Provost of Eton. He was consecrated Bishop of Bangor, May 4, 1448; translated to the see of Hereford, February 7, 1451; and died, May 11, 1474. The following sketch of his life is taken from "The Worthies of England:"

"John Stanbery was (saith Bale out of Leland) in Occidentali Regni parte natus. But, the Western parts being a wide Parish, thanks to our Authour, who hath particularized the place of his nativity, viz., the Farm of Church hill, within the Parish of Bratton or Broad Town, in this county (Devonshire), where some of his name and kindred remain at this day. He was bred a Carmelite in Oxford, and became generally as learned as any of his Order, deserving all the dignity which the University did or could confer upon him. King Henry the Sixth highly favoured and made him the first Provost of Eton, being much ruled by his advice in ordering that his new Foundation. He was by the King designed Bishop of Norwich; but William de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk (see the presumption of a proud Favourite, or Minion rather) got it from him for his own Chaplain; and Stanbery was forced to stay his stomack on the poor Bishoprick of Bangor, till, anno 1453, he was advanced Bishop of Hereford. Leland doth condemn him for his over-compliance with the Pope in all his intollerable taxes; and others commend him as much for his fidelity to his Master King Henry, whom he deserted not in all his adversity; so that this Bishop was taken prisoner in the Battail of Northampton. Say not to this Prelate, as Eliab to David, 'Why camest thou down hither? with whom hast thou left those few sheep in the Wildernesse? I know the pride and the malice of thy heart, for thou art come down to see the Battail.' For, Stanbery being Confessor to King Henry, he was tyed by his Oath to such personal attendance. After long durance in Warwick Castle, he was set at liberty; and, dying anno 1474, was buried in the Convent of Carmelites at Ludlow; where his barbarous and tedious Epitaph (ill suiting with the Authour of such learned and pithy Books) is not worth the inserting."

In Storer's "Cathedrals of Great Britain" he is said to have been "one of the most learned men of his age." The following notice is worth quoting here: "His ultimate beneficence in bequeathing a sum of money towards the restoration of our cathedral (Bangor) induces us to presume that he would have proved an efficient benefactor to that arduous task, if his attention had not been diverted to other objects by a promotion to the see of Hereford, after having presided here for five years."

His name is given in the "Worthies of Devon" in the Herald's Office, London, as Richard, but this must be an error. It will be observed, however, that the Encyclopedia of Heraldry, quoted in the Preface, falls into the same.

This learned and liberal Bishop built a chapel called by his name, and had his arms sculptured upon the walls in five different places, upon shields, namely: Within a bordure, two chevrons engrailed between three mullets, two in chief, one in base. Opposite to the chapel is his tomb—an altar of alabaster surrounded by an iron railing; affixed to the wall is a brass with a Latin inscription in quaint medieval text. He is represented, both in the chapel and on the tomb, in a recumbent posture, in his Episcopal robes, with a mitre upon his head. The colors on his armorial bearings have faded out. The tomb is on the right side of the main altar, in the Cathedral of Hereford. Two engravings by Basire, from drawings by Carter, in folio, of the Stansbury chapel have been published, of which one is an interior view, while the other shows the arms upon the wall and the effigies upon the tomb.

Another (manuscript) account represents him as having been born at Barnstaple. He was the son of Walter Stanberie, of Stanberie, in the parish of Morewinstow at the northern extremity of the county of Cornwall. Morewinstow is a village of 1,000 or 1,200 inhabitants, twenty miles from Bideford and six miles from Stratton. Stanberie is now a farmhouse. The pedigree of the family was, in 1867, in possession of the Rev. H. Stansbury, rector of Hinton St. George.

The heiress who married a Manning (see Encyclopedia of Heraldry) was the daughter and only child of John (?) Stanberie, eldest brother of the Bishop (?); this line is now extinct. The descending line of William Stanberie, fourth brother of John aforesaid, is traceable to the year 1620, the date of the last visitation of the king-at-arms. It is claimed that John Stansbury of Leominster was a descendant of William, but there is an unfilled gap of half a century between the two; this belief seems to rest upon a family tradition.

SECOND GENERATION.

THOMAS STANSBURY. A rich and childless widower, a man about town, of loose morals, who adopted and nearly ruined his nephew Joseph, son of Samuel. Thomas had one son, who died in infancy.

SAMUEL STANSBURY. Born, 1700, in London, England. Married, 1737, Sarah Porter. Married, March 23, 1765, Elizabeth Anne Sparrow. Died, June 13, 1793. Buried at Camberwell. He was a retail merchant in London, with a country seat of four acres at Holmer, which he sold in 1777 or soon afterward, and bought himself a place at Hereford.

Sarah, his first wife, died 1758.

Elizabeth Anne, his widow, died 1815.

BENJAMIN STANSBURY. Born, February 23, 1706. Baptized at Leominster, July 23, 1706. Buried at the Church of St. Botolph, London.

THIRD GENERATION.

Children of Thomas Stansbury.

A SON. Died in infancy.

Children of Samuel Stansbury and Sarah Porter.

SARAH STANSBURY. Born in London, 1737. Married William Trickett. Emigrated to America about 1776, and settled in Philadelphia, where her husband opened a stationery shop in Front street, opposite the London Coffee-House. He died in 1782, and his widow was taken by her brother Joseph to his house, and remained a member of his family until her death, which occurred in 1809. She was buried in the cemetery of the Baptist church in Gold street, New York. No issue.

MARY STANSBURY. Born in London, 1739. Married John or Thomas Collins, of London, whom she survived. Died at the age of 78 years.

JOSEPH STANSBURY. Born in London, January 9, 1742. Married, April 2, 1765, in St. Vedast church, in London, Sarah Ogier, daughter of Abraham Ogier and Martha Turquand. Embarked, August 11, 1767, in the Jane and Henry, Captain Sparks, for America, and landed, October 11, at Philadelphia. Died, November 9, 1809, at New York. Buried in Saint Paul's churchyard, Broadway.

Joseph Stansbury opened a shop for the sale of imported china, in Philadelphia, at the corner of Second and Market streets. He revisited England twice—in May, 1773, and December, 1783. In the War of American Independence he was a loyalist, and was twice thrown into prison. In 1780, he was ordered, in common with all other loyalists, to retire within the British lines, and went to New York, where his family followed him. He was there a great social favorite, and a writer of light tory verse, under the nom de plume of Roderick Random. Some of his poetical effusions may be found in "Loyal Verses of Joseph Stansbury and Dr. Jonathan Odell," by Winthrop Sargent, (Albany, N. Y., 1860). In June, 1783, supposing it then safe, he returned to Philadelphia and rented a cottage for his family at Moorestown, N. J., but was again arrested and committed to the Burlington jail, whence he was released, in nine days, on condition of leaving the state, which he did, August 13, for Nova Scotia. He returned to New York in October, and sailed in December, for England, where he remained, leaving his family at Moorestown, until the close of the war, when he again opened a china store in Philadelphia, and transferred his family to that city, where they resided on Second street. In May, 1793, they all removed to New York, where he was secretary of the United Insurance Company, 49 Wall street, until his death.

In the Pennsylvania Archives, Vol. 5, and in the Colonial Record, Vol. 11, may be found an account of his first arrest and release, in 1776. At a meeting of respectable citizens at the Indian Queen, on Fourth St., Nov. 25, 1776, "Mr. Smith attended, and informed that he thinks Jos. Stansbury sang God Save the King in his house*, and a number of persons present bore him chorus, on the 15th Oct., 1776." His arrest followed, Nov. 30. On the 6th December, Mr. Stansbury wrote from the "New Jail" to the Council of Safety, protesting that he had been made prisoner in his dwelling-house by a number of unauthorized persons, after having been already examined and dismissed by the Council: he asserted his innocence of this charge, and appealed to the Council for protection in his liberty and property. A second and more urgent appeal is dated December 10. On the same day a committee of six was appointed to examine him and the other persons held on the same charge. On the 13th December, he was discharged conditionally: he was required to confine himself to his own dwelling, and to bind himself "to hold no correspondence with, or give any intelligence to, the Enemies of the United States of America, nor do anything that will be any ways prejudicial to this State or to any of the United States America." This obligation he took. When Howe captured Philadelphia, it is said that he made Mr. Stansbury Captain of the Watch. The statement, in the Mott Genealogy, that he was a soldier and paymaster in the British Army does not appear to have any foundation; and the statement that, when the city was recaptured, he fled to "Morristown," is probably an error, growing out of the similarity in sound between Morristown and Moorestown. He was, however, in 1780, again in custody, and the Agent for Estates was ordered, November 27, to make an inventory of his property, evidently with the intention to confiscate the same. On the 13th December, his petition for permission to retire within the lines of the enemy was rejected by the Supreme Executive Council, "so far as it respects his going to New York." But he was given permission, December 18, to go to New York, "on condition that he go immediately, and use his utmost endeavors to have Abijah Wright and Caspar Geyer, now prisoners on Long Island, released and permitted to return home, and that he will not do anything injurious to the United States." His effects were restored to him, and he was liberated. A pass was granted, January 8, 1781, to his wife, for herself, six children, and a servant maid, with their clothing, bedding, etc. (Colonial Records, pp. 554, 568, 573, 595.)

Sarah Ogier, born in Austin Friars, London, February 25, 1746, was by descent a French Huguenot. So much as is known of her family history is here given, as follows: Pierre Ogier (b. 1655, d. 1697), of Sigournais, in Poitou, France, on the Grand Lay river, north of Fontenay and east of La Roche-sur-Yon, married (1678) Jeanne Bernandier, of Montcoulant, by whom he had a son Pierre Abraham (b. 1690, at Chassay-l'Eglise, d. 1757), who married (1712) Esther Dubrossey, of London (b. 1689, d. at Clapton, 1766), by whom he had a son Abraham (b. 1717, d. 1781), who married Martha Turquand (b. 1723, d. 1763), by whom he had a daughter Sarah, who married Joseph Stansbury. She died, January 10, 1820.

Abraham Ogier made two subsequent marriages, the first to Miss Mary Gaucherie, the second to Miss Charlotte Bauvin (b. 1711, d. January 4, 1800). He died, October 8, 1784, at Bath, of the effects of a fall from his carriage. He is buried beneath an old tower, still standing, in the ancient graveyard of Saint John's, at Hackney, north of Victoria Park and southwest of Hackney Common, not far from the French (Huguenot) Hospital; here his tomb may be seen. The church of Saint John's originally belonged to the Knights Templars, who dedicated it to Saint Augustine, but when they fell, their property passed into the hands of their rivals, the Knights Hospitallers, or Knights of Saint John of Jerusalem, who rededicated this church to their own patron saint. Hackney was recognized as a vicarage in 1292; the tower mentioned is therefore about six hundred years old.

Martha (Turquand) Ogier inherited an annuity left her by her grandmother, Mrs. Marin. She was but eighteen years old when she married, and had twelve children: James, Paul, Leonard, and six others died young; the three survivors were Lydia, who married Mr. Pye, a landscape painter, engraver, and drawing-master; Sarah, who married Joseph Stansbury; Joshua, who succeeded his father, Abraham Ogier, as notary in Popes-head Alley, Cornhill. Martha, the mother, died when Joshua was fourteen months old, and he was reared mainly by his elder sister Sarah, who was the fourth child. Joshua's wife's name was Sarah Sophia Charlotte, who is not known to have left any issue.

The name Ogier is one of the oldest in France. Ogier le Danois (Ogier the Dane), a paladin of Charlemagne and associate of Roland, is one of the legendary heroes whose adventures were sung by the ancient troubadours of Normandy. Adenez, in the thirteenth century, wrote a metrical romance entitled "L'enfance d'Ogier le Danois." A very rare old French poem is called "Les Visions d'Oger dans le Royaulme de Faerie." Ariosto alludes to him repeatedly; once in the lines

Fuor che l'elmo, che fu del Re Mambrino,
Che porta Uggier Danese Paladino.

(See Notes and Queries; also Dunlop's History of Fiction, Edinburgh edition, 1816, pages 392, 427). The word "Dane" does not necessarily imply that he was a Scandinavian. Dane is an old French word for forest; and the probability is that "le Danois" came from the borders of the forest of Ardennes. Under the name of Holger Danska, he has, however, become the national hero of Denmark.

The name seems also to have been spelled Ogyer, Oger, Augier, Aungier, Augière, Ausière, and Augire. Various persons of this name are mentioned in the publications of the Huguenot Society of London, as having lived at London, Canterbury, Southampton, and Dublin. When they respectively emigrated from France does not appear, nor their relationship, if any, to each other. A number of persons named Ogier, of whom Peter Abraham Ogier was one, signed the pledge given, September 26, 1745, by French manufacturers and merchants residing in London, at or near Spitalfields, to take up arms for England against France, if required. Among the signers is also René Turquand, who is elsewhere said to have been admitted to the Tabernacle, by abjuration, October 17, 1714.

A writer in Notes and Queries claims to have in possession a plaque in pottery, representing Saint Peter, signed Pierre Ogier, and dated 1749, which does not appear to be mentioned in any existing catalogue of ceramic art, nor his name in any list of well-known potters.

Mr. Thomas Louis Ogier, of West Chester, Pa., is at present preparing for publication a book of the Ogier family.

Réné Turquand, father of Martha (Turquand) Ogier, had a son John, who died in England, July, 1777; another son, the Reverend Paul Turquand, emigrated to the Carolinas in 1767, and became Rector of Saint Matthew's; a third son left a widow, mentioned as Mrs. Turquand of Stratford. He had besides Martha another daughter named Mary. Paul Leonard Turquand emigrated to New York in 1805; he was a grandson or great grandson of Réné Turquand, (possibly son of Leonard). Peter Turquand, whose relationship to Réné is not known, is said in Smiles' History of the Huguenots to have been a Protestant refugee from Châtel-herault, near Poitiers, where Paul Turquand, a member of the Parliament of Paris, was born, early in the sixteenth century; a son of this Paul Turquand was, after his father's death, made privy councillor.

MATILDA AMERICANA STANSBURY. Born, May 18, 1768, at Philadelphia. Sailed, with her father, May 1, 1773, for England, and taken, on arrival, to the home of her grandfather Ogier, at Clapton, who was then living with his third wife, Miss Bauvin, ex-principal of a large boarding-school, near London, for young ladies. She bequeathed her property to Matilda. Matilda attended a young ladies' school, kept by Madame Laborde, at Hackney. In August, 1786, she returned to America, but went back to England in 1790. Married, 1805, Joshua Harrison, of London. Died, April, 1841.

LYDIA PHILADELPHIA STANSBURY. Born, February 23, 1775, at Philadelphia. Married, April 27, 1795, Robert Mott, of Mamaroneck, N. Y. This marriage was opposed by James Mott, her husband's father, who was a sturdy Quaker, on the ground that she belonged to a fashionable family. He wrote to his son: "If thou art fully determined to leave the society in thy marriage, which thou knows how painful it is to me, and the reason why it is so, yet, as I said, if thou art determined, let it be accomplished in a way as little objectionable as may be, and with as little parade, avoiding all those customs thou knows I have an objection to, lest thou add afflictions to the trials of thy affectionate father." He received her with affection, and she was his favorite daughter-in-law. She joined the society, her husband followed her back, and she became a Quaker preacher. After her husband's death and that of her mother-in-law, she kept house for her husband's father, (from 1808), and opened, in an upper story of his residence in the city of New York, a small school for her own children and his other grand-children, to which a few of the neighbors' children were admitted. She also aided him later, in the Friends' boarding school near Poughkeepsie. In 1814 she was living on a farm at New Hartford, near Utica, N. Y., which she sold, and established in the town a boarding school, chiefly from a desire to aid friends to whom her name would be of service. In 1818 or 1819, she sold half of a tract of four hundred acres of land which she owned in Pennsylvania, near Lake Erie, and purchased a farm at Skaneateles, to which she removed, with her son and only surviving child, Arthur, who lived seven years after the death of his mother. Died, April, 1862, at Skaneateles, N. Y.

Robert Mott, son of James Mott, and grandson of Richbell Mott, was born in 1871, at New York; and died, of consumption, March 21, 1805. His father was a prosperous merchant in the city of New York, but removed, in 1776, to Mamaroneck, in the town of New Rochelle, Long Island. Robert was a flour merchant on Pearl street, and afterward flour inspector. Lucretia (Coffin) Mott, the celebrated Hicksite Quaker preacher, was his niece. Lucretia died in 1868, six years after Lydia.

ABRAHAM OGIER STANSBURY. Born, July 18, 1776, at Philadelphia. Married, January 17, 1799, Martha Kerwood, of Wales, but then of Trenton, N. J. Inventor, teacher, Presbyterian clergyman. In London, 1804-1807. Steward of the American Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb, Hartford, Conn., 1817-1818; teacher in the New York Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, 1818-1821. Except Mr. Gallaudet, the first principal of any American institution for the deaf. Died, April 30, 1829, without issue, at South East, Putnam county, N. Y. An illustrated description of his "inscrutable lock" is found in Gregory's Cyclopedia. The following mention of him is made in the first volume of "Histories of the American Schools for the Deaf, 1877-1893."

"On the twentieth of May, 1818, Mr. Abraham O. Stansbury, a gentleman of liberal education, who had been a year in the asylum at Hartford, in charge of the administrative department, occupied a room which the city authorities had kindly set apart in the almshouse, and whom, after writing in vain to hear from Europe, the directors of the New York Institution had engaged to take charge of their new school. Around him were grouped four young deaf-mutes, who had been brought to him that morning, and whom he was in the act of teaching the letters of the manual alphabet. They were to live at home and come to him every day. Before the close of the year 1818, thirty-three pupils had been gathered, and Miss Mary Stansbury had been engaged as an additional teacher. * * In the spring of 1819, Dr. Akerly, as secretary of the board of trustees, accompanied by Mr. Stansbury and eleven of his pupils, proceeded to Albany, and held an exhibition before the Legislature. * * Mr. Stansbury departed for Europe in May, 1821."

KITTY STANSBURY. Born, March 29, 1780, at Philadelphia. Died, September 6, 1780, at Philadelphia, in infancy.

ARTHUR JOSEPH STANSBURY. Born, October 28, 1781, at 42 Broad street, New York. Was graduated at Columbia College, October, 1799. Married, August 3, 1803, Susanna Brown, of Boston. In his earlier years a Presbyterian clergyman, he was in later life a Congressional reporter, before the days of stenography and the official printed record of the proceedings and debates. The reports made by him are contained in the twenty volumes of Gale's and Seaton's Congressional Debates. He knew personally nearly every public man of the formative period of our national life, and was full of entertaining reminiscences. He was a writer of verse, and an artist; a lithographic drawing made by him of John Quincy Adams, in death, had an extensive sale. Author of "Elementary Catechism on the Constitution," (Boston, 1828). He was a man of uncommon talent, but impulsive and erratic, very companionable and lovable, with an immense fund of anecdote and a turn for mechanics, which he indulged in making toys for children, of whom he was fond, and who were greatly attached to him. He left many pencil sketches of the Congressmen of his day, and was a famous hand at cutting silhouettes with scissors, out of black paper; a collector of autographs, etc. Died, instantaneously, of apoplexy, September 27, 1865, at Philadelphia. Buried in Woodland Cemetery.

Susanna Brown was a descendant of Chad Brown, who emigrated from England, in the ship Martin, to Boston, Mass., landing there July, 1638. He was exiled from Massachusetts, together with Roger Williams, the same year, on account of his religious belief, and was one of the twelve original proprietors of the Providence Purchase. He was ordained pastor of the First Baptist church in Providence, in 1642. His home lot was where the Court house now stands, and there he was buried, but his bones were afterward removed and a monument erected to his memory by the city. James Brown, his second son, married Elizabeth, daughter of Robert Carr, by whom he had a son, Esek Brown, who married Mercy, daughter of Caleb and Deborah (Sayles?) Carr, who was a descendant of Roger Williams(?). By her he had a son, Daniel Brown, whose son, Benjamin Brown, M. D., born in Swansea, Mass., was father of Susanna Brown, by Susanna Wells, his wife, (who was a grand-daughter of Francis Wells, whose daughter, Elizabeth, was second wife of "Samuel Adams, the Patriot"). Deborah, the great-grandmother of Susanna Brown, is believed to have been the daughter of Mary Williams, who was the daughter of Roger Williams. Dr. Benjamin Brown was a surgeon in the U. S. Navy, on the Boston and on the Thorne, 1778-1780, and a Member of the Fourteenth Congress, from Massachusetts, 1817-1819; he finally removed to Waldo-borough, Me., where he died. Susanna, his second daughter and third child, was born at Boston, May 29, 1784; died at Washington, D. C., of apoplexy, February 20, 1852.

CAROLINE MATILDA STANSBURY. Born, January 11, 1801, at New York. After her father's death in 1822, she removed to Clinton, N. Y., where she married, January 10, 1823, Professor William Kirkland, of Hamilton College. When, in 1842, they returned from Europe and settled themselves in New York, she established a school for girls in that city. She revisited Europe in 1848, 1850, and 1854. Died, April 6, 1864, in New York. The author of the "Memorial History of New York" says of her: "This charming woman and gifted writer, by her tireless and sincere devotion to the work of the Sanitary Fair, gave up her life to the cause of her country as completely as the soldier who fell at the cannon's mouth." Mrs. Kirkland was author of "A New Home, Who'll Follow," (New York, 1839); "Forest Life," (1842); "Western Clearings," (1846); an "Essay on the Life and Writings of Spencer," (prefixed to an edition of the first book of the Fairy Queen, 1846); "Holidays Abroad," (1849); "The Evening Book, or Sketches of Western Life," (1852); "A Book for the Home Circle," (1853); "Autumn Hours and Fireside Readings," (1854); "Garden Walks with the Poets," (1854); "Memoirs of Washington," (1857); "School Girl's Garland," (1864); and "The Destiny of our Country," (1864).

William Kirkland, son of Gen. Joseph Kirkland,* first mayor of Utica, N. Y., was born in 1800, at New Hartford, N. Y. Was graduated, 1816, at Hamilton College, where he was Professor of Latin, 1826-1828, a position for which he had qualified himself by studies pursued at the University of Göttingen. He resigned his professorship and established a seminary at Geneva, N. Y. He and his wife were in charge of the Detroit (Mich.) Female Seminary, 1834-1836. They resided for two or three years at Pinckney, Mich., and then went to Europe, but returned in 1842 to New York. Together with Rev. Henry W. Bellows, Mr. Kirkland founded "The Christian Enquirer," a weekly Unitarian journal. At the time of his death, near Fishkill, N. Y., October 19, 1846, he was editor of the "New York Evening Mirror." Hamilton College was founded in 1793, as "Hamilton Oneida College," by the Rev. Samuel Kirkland (or Kirtland), missionary to the Oneida Indians, and great uncle of William Kirkland. John Thornton Kirkland, son of the missionary, was President of Harvard College, 1810-1817. All these Kirklands are descendants of Nathaniel Kirtland, of Lynn, Mass., from Sherrington in Bucks., England, by the Hopewell, April 1, 1635.

JOSEPH STANSBURY. Born, August 3, 1802, in Wall street, New York. Was graduated, 1821, at Yale College. He taught for a year or two, after graduation, in North Carolina, but in 1824 was employed as a clerk in a bank at New Haven, Conn. The estate of his great grandfather, Samuel Stansbury, of London, was entailed. Joseph Stansbury, of Philadelphia and New York, was the lawful heir, but failed to prosecute his right. After his death, his son Samuel claimed this estate and recovered it, with all the back rents. Joseph, the oldest son of Samuel, went to England, in 1824 or 1825, to take possession, but the expenses connected with the litigation had eaten it up. He became a naturalized British subject, and for some years resided in Hackney and supported himself by taking private pupils. Married, 1835, in London, England, Harriet Greenthorpe Taylor, who died February 7, 1840. In 1836 he opened a boarding-school for boys, whom he prepared for the Universities. Married, April 13, 1841, Catherine Sophia Taylor, sister of his deceased wife. In 1851 he was appointed Secretary of the Marriage Law Reform Association, a position which he retained until incapacitated by illness, compelling his resignation in 1875. He removed, in 1854, to Lampton, near Hounslow, ten miles from London, and in 1860 to Sutton, where he died, March 3, 1880. His widow survived him ten years and died, November 3, 1890. The following notice of him is abridged from a London journal:

"Nearly the whole of Mr. Stansbury's public life was connected with the rise and progress of the Association for the Amendment of the Marriage Law of England. What the society aims at is to legalize marriage with a deceased wife's sister. Mr. Stansbury was originally a schoolmaster and a minister; he was also a gentleman of considerable scholastic attainments; but he gave the vigour and prime of his life to the removal of a prohibition on marriage, which, from the moment of its enactment in 1835, had evoked a wide-spread protest. He elicited and published the opinions of a large number of eminent men against the law, and was instrumental in creating such a feeling in favor of the views he and the society advocated as to secure the passing of a bill abrogating the obnoxious restriction seven times through the House of Commons. In 1875, however, this bill, which had been successful in more than sixty divisions in the Commons, although repeatedly thrown out by the Lords, was defeated by a small majority. So certain were the members of the society in Parliament street of an alteration being made in the law, that a testimonial to Mr. Stansbury was under consideration, but he died without realizing the fruition of his work. He was an upright man, indefatigable, of sound judgment, and a letter writer of rare excellence."

GEORGE ALEXANDER STANSBURY. Born, April 17, 1805, at New York. Was graduated from Hamilton College, 1825. Attorney-at-law, at Geneva, N. Y.; afterward (from about “Here what of late was youth and beauty lies,

Inspired in life with all that angels prize.
Fond human love strove long to keep her here,
But love divine prepared a brighter sphere;
And beaming on her spirit, ere its flight,
A foretaste of the pure and perfect light,
Gave peace which passes thought and grace to own.
Kind are thy chastenings, Lord! Thy will be done.”

He became acquainted with Judge Briggs while in his early manhood, teaching school in Berkshire county, Mass., and afterward read law with him in his office at Richmond. When he left Vermont, he became a broker in New York city, but afterward entered the service of an insurance company. Was a member of the New Jersey legislature. EMMA STANSBURY. Born, June 27, 1804, at New York. Married, June 14, 1832, at Washington, D. C., Enoch Cobb Wines. Died, June 13, 1881, at Springfield, Ill. Buried in Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia. Her intellectual force may be estimated by the fact of her learning the German language for her own amusement after she was sixty years of age; and her strength of character was equal to her mental power.

Rev. Enoch Cobb Wines, D. D., LL.D., (son of William Wines and Nellie Baldwin, of Shoreham, Vt.), was born at Hanover (near Morristown), N. J., February 17, 1806. He was a descendant of Barnabas Wines, (this name is also spelled Winnes, Wynnes, Wynes, Winds, and Windes), of Watertown, Mass., who was admitted a freeman by the General Court, May 6, 1635, but sold his lands and removed to Southold, Long Island, in 1644. E. C. Wines was graduated at Middlebury College, 1827; commissioned as a teacher of midshipmen in the U. S. Navy, 1829, (before the creation of the Naval Academy), and made a long cruise in the Mediterranean, in the Constellation. In 1832 he purchased the Edgehill school at Princeton, N. J. In 1837 or 1838 he became one of the four original professors in the Philadelphia High School. He established, in 1844 or 1845, a private school for boys near Burlington, N. J., which proved a failure, after three or four years of effort. Ordained a clergyman, and had charges at Cornwall, Vt., and East Hampton, N. Y. In 1853 elected professor of ancient languages in Washington College, Pa. President of the City University, Saint Louis, 1859-1861, when the Civil War broke out, and he removed to New York. Secretary of the New York Prison Association, 1862-1870. In 1870 he organized the Cincinnati Prison Congress, which resulted in the creation of the National Prison Association, of which he was made secretary, and held this position until his death. He was one of three commissioners appointed by the state of New York, in 1871, to investigate the relations of convict and free labor; the same year he was appointed by President Grant a special commissioner to visit Europe and organize the International Penitentiary Congress, which met in London in 1872. He was chosen President of the International Penitentiary Commission, a body ad interim; and he was Honorary President of the Second International Penitentiary Congress at Stockholm, in 1878. At the Rome Penitentiary Congress, Count di Foresta, an Italian senator, said of him: "It is to him, more than to any other individual, that we owe the initiation of the movement for the reformation of prisoners which is the glory of the latter half of the nineteenth century." Died suddenly, probably of angina pectoris, at Cambridge, Mass. Buried in Laurel Hill Cemetery, Philadelphia. Dr. Wines, in addition to numerous printed occasional reports, articles, pamphlets, sermons, and religious tractates, was the author of "Two and a Half Years in the American Navy," 2 vols., (published at Philadelphia, 1832, under the title of Wines' Journal, republished in England, and extensively quoted in Chambers' Encyclopedia); "A Trip to Boston," (Boston, 1832); "Hints on Popular Education" and "How Shall I Govern My School," (both at Philadelphia, 1838, and believed to have been the first American books upon this subject); "Letters to School Children," (Boston); "Commentaries on the Laws of the Ancient Hebrews," (New York, 1852); "The Prisons and Reformatories of the United States and Canada," (1867); and "State of Prisons and Child-Saving Institutions Throughout the World," (Cambridge, Mass., 1880).

HOWARD STANSBURY. Born, February 8, 1806, at New York. Married, September 1, 1827, Helen Moody, of Detroit. Entered the Army of the United States, July, 1838, with rank of First Lieutenant, in the Topographical Engineers. Promoted Captain, July 18, 1840; Major, August 6, 1861; retired September 28, 1861. Conducted the military exploring expedition to Great Salt Lake Valley, in 1849. Author of Stansbury's Report on Salt Lake. This was an official document, but two editions of it were published by Lippincott, Philadelphia, 1852 and 1853. It was praised by the Athenaeum and the Literary Gazette, of London, and is quoted in Darwin's "Descent of Man." Died, April 17, 1863, at Madison, Wis. At the time of his death, he was U. S. Mustering and Disbursing Officer for the State of Wisconsin. Buried at St. Paul, Minn.

ERSKINE STANSBURY. Born, August 24, 1807, at New York. Civil Engineer. Married, March 28, 1840, at Lexington, Ky., Abby Halsey Van Doren, (born December 1, 1820), daughter of Rev. Isaac Van Doren and Abby Halsey, of Hopewell, N. Y. Died, December 10, 1890, at Rochester, Minn., from the effects of a broken thigh, which produced paralysis, ending in pneumonia.

AUGUSTA STANSBURY. Born, March 27, 1810, at New York. Married, June 26, 1828, at Washington, D. C., John Oswald Dunn. Resides at Louisville, Ky.

John Oswald Dunn, son of Thomas Dunn and Rachel Ervin, was born, October, 1801. He died, March 14, 1818, at Reynosa, Mexico, from the explosion of a steam-boat boiler, while in command of a government boat on the Rio Grande. Thomas Dunn, his father, was, at the time of the removal of Congress from Philadelphia to Washington, in 1800, Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives. The father of Thomas Dunn, whose name was also Thomas, was born in the south of Ireland, emigrated to America, settled in Baltimore, died and is buried in Harford county, Maryland.

MASON HERBERT STANSBURY. Born, January 15, 1812, at Berry Hill, Orange County, N. Y. Civil engineer. Died, September 22, 1850, unmarried, at Philadelphia. Buried in Woodlands Cemetery.

JOSEPHINE STANSBURY. Born, December 10, 1813, at Montgomery, Orange county, N. Y. Married, January 3, 1832, Benjamin Franklin Nourse, of Washington, D. C. Married, September 14, 1846, at Burlington, N. J., by Bishop Doane, to James Morss, of Newburyport, Mass. Resides in the city of New York.

Dr. B. F. Nourse, son of Michael Nourse (Chief Clerk in the Register's Office of the U. S. Treasury) and Mary Rittenhouse, was born April 15, 1807, near Washington, D. C. He was graduated, 1825, at Jefferson College, Pa., and received his degree as physician, 1829, from the Medical Society of Washington (now the Medical Department of the Columbian University). He practised medicine at Washington, at Canonsburg, Pa., and at Springfield, O. Having been promised a commission in the U. S. Army as assistant surgeon, he went, after passing his examination at West Point, to the military post at Key West, Fla. While there, and before his actual appointment, war broke out with the Seminole Indians. Major Dade, then in command of the garrison, proceeded to Tampa Bay, to engage in the first campaign, where his detachment was massacred, and Dr. Nourse, who had volunteered to accompany the party, would have fallen with the rest, had his offer been accepted. His commission (date of January 1, 1836) having arrived, he accompanied the central column of the Florida army, March 10, in the capacity of senior medical officer and acting medical director. Both Gen. Gaines and Gen. Scott (whom he attended) complimented him on his skill and efficiency. The climate and the swamps, together with his indefatigable zeal in the discharge of his duty, laid the foundation for the attack of bilious fever which occasioned his death, which might have been prevented, had he not, when so weak as scarcely to be able to stand, heard of the illness of one of the Alabama volunteers, to whose relief he went, in spite of expostulation, and died the next day. At a meeting of citizens of Key West, May 20, 1836, it was resolved, "that the amity of his manners, the purity of his life, and his active usefulness have justly entitled the memory of the deceased to our affectionate regard," and "that, as a token of respect, we will attend the obsequies of Dr. Nourse and wear crape on the left arm for thirty days." Buried at Key West.

James Morss, son of James, (who was the son of Jonathan, who was the son of John, who was the son of Anthony, who was the son of Anthony, born 1635), was born, August 24, 1810, at Newburyport, Mass. His father, the Rev. Dr. James Morss, (born, October 25, 1779, at Newburyport; graduated at Harvard, 1800; D. D., Princeton, 1826; died, April 26, 1842), was for almost thirty-nine years rector of St. Paul's Church, Newburyport. He was for those days regarded as moderately wealthy, but gave practically all that he had to the poor; and the son went in his early manhood to St. Louis, then little more than a village, where he was employed as a mercantile agent to visit Indian trading posts as far as the head waters of the Mississippi river—a perilous pursuit, in which he displayed marked courage and sagacity. From St. Louis he removed to Peoria, Ill.; he was one of half a dozen communicants in the Protestant Episcopal Church who there united to form the Church of St. Paul's. Later, he went to Washington, D. C., and acted as a newspaper correspondent, but afterward established an American and foreign agency for soliciting patents, which maintained an office in London and another in Wall street, New York. He then became a resident of the city of New York. President Lincoln and Secretary Chase had promised him the appointment of General Appraiser in the New York Custom House, which would have been given him but for his death, ~~July 27~~, 1861. The following editorial notice, by Horace Greeley, appeared in the New York Tribune, August 4, 1861: "Mr. James Morss, a gentleman well known in literary circles, who died in our city some weeks since, aged 54, stood beside Elijah Lovejoy when (in 1835) he was murdered at Alton, Ill., while defending the third press which he had purchased and brought to that city whereon to print a religious paper which should be open to the discussion of slavery, along with other moral evils. Mr. Morss, a native of Newburyport, Mass., had been several years in the west, living mostly in Saint Louis, where he was engaged in mercantile pursuits. He afterwards lived for several years in Washington, and removed thence to this city, where he acted as correspondent for several leading journals, and where he witnessed and aided in resisting the shameful and formidable pro-slavery riots of last year. Having received the martyred Lovejoy in his arms, when he fell, pierced by the bullets of his murderers, he noted the operation of the same spirit in this emporium, where hundreds joined in the chase of one poor frightened boy, suspected of no crime but the color which God had seen fit to give him. Mr. Morss, therefore, though dying in the mature prime of life, may be said to have borne a part in the events which marked the beginning and almost the close of one of the greatest moral revolutions which any age or country has experienced."

GUSTAVUS STANSBURY. Born, January —, 1816, at Montgomery. Died, February 8, 1818, in infancy. all but LAURA ISABELLA STANSBURY. Born, June 20, 1819, at Albany, N. Y. Married, April 13, 1843, at Washington, D. C., Lieutenant Charles Nicholas Hagner, U. S. A. Died, October 19, 1888, at Buckner, Ky. Buried in Cave Hill Cemetery, Louisville.

Lieut. Charles N. Hagner, born, September 10, 1800, at Washington, D. C., was the eldest son of Peter Hagner and Frances Randall, of Annapolis, Md. He was graduated, 1830, from the College of New Jersey. Civil engineer. Commissioned, July 7, 1838, Second Lieutenant U. S. A., Topographical Engineers; First Lieutenant, March 3, 1847. Served in the Mexican War. Died, July 14, 1849, at Lavaca, Texas.

CHARLES FREDERICK STANSBURY. Born, October 13, 1821, at New York. Was graduated, 1842, from the College of New Jersey, where he was for some time an assistant to Prof. Joseph Henry, afterward at the head of the Smithsonian Institution. His association with this great physicist gave him a love for scientific study, which he retained through life. He aided his older brother, Capt. Howard Stansbury, in the survey of the harbor at Portsmouth, N. H. Married, March 9, 1845, at Portsmouth, Lucy Matilda, daughter of Lieutenant William Berry, U. S. N. Having taken a course in medicine and received his degree, he removed in 1846 to Marshall, Mo., intending to engage in the practice of his profession, but finding it distasteful to him, and having had the misfortune there to lose his wife and infant child, he returned to Washington, D. C., and secured an appointment in the U. S. Patent Office, a position for which his knowledge of physics admirably fitted him. While in this bureau he took an active part in the formation of the Mechanics' Institute. Married, February 5, 1850, Ellen Robinson Riley, daughter of Thomas Robinson Riley and Elizabeth Cropper Blackstone, of Washington, D. C. In 1851 he was sent to London to take charge of the American exhibit at the "Great Exhibition" in the Crystal Palace, that year. On his return to Washington, he began the practice of law as a solicitor of patents. He was a prominent Free Mason, and for many years Grand Master of the Order in the District of Columbia. He was also a member of the Washington Monument Association. By a journey in which he visited and addressed the leading masonic lodges throughout the country, he contributed materially to the completion of that monument. Married, April 30, 1879, by Rev. J. J. Joyce, at Saint John's church, Georgetown, D. C., to Irene, youngest and only surviving child of Hon. William Hunter, Assistant Secretary of State. No issue by third marriage.
