INTRODUCTION

The reader may rest assured that this is no money making scheme. The nature of the work is such that no full compensation for labor and expenses can be expected. The task to compile this record, just entering into the seventh generation, was found to be far greater than had been anticipated when the work was started many months ago. The amount of time, labor, and expenses involved in the preparation like this can only be imagined by those who have undertaken such work. The author, however, will consider herself well rewarded if the result of her labor will be appreciated by the many readers of this family.

While some people object to the writing of genealogies, many feel a deep interest in knowing the names, places of residence, and occupation of their lineal descendants and those related by intermarriage. Such feelings of respect and friendship are commendable. We are commanded to honor our father and mother, and it does not seem to be out of place to go a little farther and honor and cherish the memory of our forefathers, and their descendants. Those who care not for family ties and family friendship often care nothing for themselves.

Family registers, and records have been kept from the earliest ages, as may be seen in the Old and New Testaments, so we see no harm in genealogies.

Many letters have been written in order to collect the material from family records. Much time is necessary to arrange the matter correctly. Even with the greatest care mistakes can hardly be avoided on account of the great number of dates to be arranged. It often happened that letters of information were poorly written and names misspelled, so I would have to guess at them, even with the best intentions of the writer. A great amount of painstaking labor was necessary to check and recheck all records in an effort to eliminate all errors. I hope to have been successful to have errors reduced to a minimum but to have removed them all is far too much to hope for.

Some families have not answered. Why, I do not know unless they did not want their names in a family record. Some say, it is not right to waste your time with such work.

Nearly everything that is good and right can, however, be misused. I tried to do the best I could with the material I had, and the experience I had in this line of work. I have attempted to be fair and impartial in the treatment of this genealogy. More could have been written about everybody and much more historical background could have been given but was not considered as advisable for the limited number of copies which will be made of this book. The object in writing this book was not to exalt or humiliate anyone, and anything written which may seem otherwise is certainly unintentional. I humbly ask forgiveness for any error or omission which might have found its way into the work. Should any be detected, the compiler shall consider it a great favor if such would be reported at once. In a number of reports returned much important information was lacking and in some none was given. I did the best I could in such cases.

The author wishes to extend her hearty thanks to all who so willingly and generously contributed of their time, information and help in any form in the gathering and compiling of this work.

Trusting that this little volume, although not perfect, may be useful and interesting to the readers, as a work of this kind will often settle a dispute, rather than raise one.

THE AUTHOR

DEPARTURE FROM FRANCE

Johannes Schwartz was a native of Canton Bern, Switzerland. He died at Berne, Adams County, Ind., and is buried in the Peter Schwartz Cemetery, three miles north of Berne. Anna (Ramseier) Schwartz was born in France and died at Berne, Adams County, Indiana, and is buried on the Huser farm, west of Berne, Indiana.

Johannes' parents suffered much presecution and in an effort to escape it, they moved from Switzerland into Montbelir, France, where they had more freedom of worship. After persecution in Switzerland abated, they returned but within a short period of years again went to France, on an estate called Saur in Debardema Du Du. Johannes saw the clothes worn by the last martyr, Haszlibacher, and he drank water from the Bern town well which is said to have turned to blood during and after the execution of the man from Haszlibach. (See song No. 140, Ausbund Song Book.)

Johannes and Anna (Ramseier) Schwartz resided one and a half miles from Santigit, Department Dauchs, France. This was about six hours from the city of Montbelir and nine hours from Belford. On account of their conscientious objection to compulsory military training in their homeland they eventually decided to migrate to America. Their knowledge of the country to which they were about to migrate was unbelievably scant. What little they knew they had gathered from land and travel agents who told fabulous stories of the land across the "Western Sea," which possessed riches untold and offered glorious opportunities for all. So when they compared their poverty-stricken condition with the glamorous possibilities of the New World they finally decided to chance the great undertaking.

Leaving behind a comparatively well settled and somewhat developed region in their Fatherland, they little realized what fate had in store for them in the future. Of even greater propensities were the grief and sorrow incurred by departing from their friends and loved ones, their families and neighbors, all acquaintances and all the scenes of their childhood which were so dear to their hearts, to go to a land unknown to them and more than 3,000 miles away across the wild and stormy deep.

On December 2, 1852, John and Joseph, sons of Johannes, left their home in France for Paris, the first stage of their journey to America. On December 6, they sailed from Havre and arrived in New York on February 2, 1853, after a fifty-eight day voyage on the Atlantic Ocean. After leaving New York, Joseph became ill and was confined to a Buffalo, New York, hospital for several weeks. After his recovery, they continued on their journey to Starke County, Ohio. In the latter part of April, 1853, fifty-two persons with eleven teams and wagons started west for Allen County, Indiana.

In May, 1853, Johannes and the rest of the Schwartz family also left France and sailed for America. In the autumn of that year they arrived in Adams County, Ind., and settled in virtual wilderness. They had borrowed money to finance the trip to America and after long years of hard work and thriftiness were able to repay the loan.

The sad departure cannot very well be described in so many words, but the thought of leaving their native country, almost certain never to return to it again, and to leave behind all their friends and relatives, never to see them again, must have been heart-rending to say the least. Their bravery, courage and hope for something better than that which they were leaving must have been their only consolation. All this manifested their unquestionable, positive faith in God with whom all undertakings were entrusted.

When they boarded ship they did not step into a luxurious ocean liner as we see them today. Rather, it was a small wooden ship, 23 feet wide on deck, 99 feet long and 13 feet in the water. The masts supporting the sails were 125 feet high, and the wind in these sails was the only power available to propel that ship across the 3,000 miles of Atlantic Ocean. Although steamships had been in use on lakes and streams the sailship was still the favorite for ocean navigation.

Conditions aboard the ship were anything but agreeable. The eatables taken on board were not very good and not any too plentiful. Meat was salted and packed in barrels and even then some of it spoiled en route. Many kegs of drinking water were taken aboard together with wine and other staple beverages. Bread kept best after it had been double toasted. A few dried fruits were included to provide variety, as canned fruits were then quite unknown.

Living quarters became extremely crowded and sleeping conditions were very poor as well as rather unhealthful. Due to lack of proper food and sanitation facilities, sickness was prevalent and epidemics of contagious diseases could not be prevented as vaccines and medical care as we know them today were then unknown. It was not unusual that ten per cent of the people aboard a ship would die on a trip from Europe to America. For lack of embalming facilities, burial of loved ones had to be made immediately at sea.

When they encountered storms at sea their ship tossed and rolled furiously but there was a railing all around the deck to guard passengers from falling into the sea. These storms sometimes lasted 2 or 3 days causing plenty of confusion, anxiety, suffering, and seasickness. It was almost impossible to walk on the boat when such storms occurred and it often upset tables and rolled the seasick passengers from their berths. The little vessel with its massive sails was often tossed about like a feather; masts were broken and sails torn which had to be repaired before the ship could proceed on its hazardous journey. Occasionally a huge wave would roll right over the deck and cause plenty of anxiety for the moment.

There was no weather bureau and therefore no weather reports which might have aided the sailors to steer clear of storms. Even if there had been any weather stations there would have been no radio to carry the message to the ship.

After all this time on the ocean, the Schwartzs were still more than 800 miles from their final destination. They remained in New York for several days until all immigration requirements could be taken care of.

Coming to Adams County, the Schwartzs found this a very sparsely inhabited place. The Miami and the Pottawatomi Indians had been removed to Kansas about twenty years previously but, until 1837, they had not relinquished their title to this "Old Hunting Ground" of theirs, which they had so dearly loved. Therefore, white settlers were rather slow and cautious in occupying this newly acquired piece of land.

So far as is known, however, Indian hostilities had ceased at the close of the eighteenth century and the white settlers were seldom annoyed from then on with the exception of occasional horse thievery for which a few stray redskins were noted.

Roads throughout the county were very few and those which had been established were in very poor condition. It was not until the red man was permanently out of the way that improvements began on roads between Fort Wayne to the north, and Winchester to the south, which encouraged or actually stimulated immigration.

There were few towns of any size in the county at the time the Schwartzs made this their home. Decatur, according to reliable sources, had only three log cabins in 1840 and at the end of the next ten years had a population of forty-three families and a total of 231 inhabitants.

Monroe was not platted until 1847 while Berne did not appear on the map until 1871, or in other words, nineteen years after the Schwartzs came.

Railways were very few in the county as a whole in 1852 and none was within reach of this pioneer family until nineteen years later, in 1871, when the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad was built just a few miles from the Schwartz home.

There was a mail route running from Fort Wayne to Winchester through Adams County with five stops in the county in 1852. They were Monmouth, Decatur, Monroe Center, Canoper (located in a farm house somewhere southeast of Berne), and Limberlost, located in the vicinity of the present Geneva. It took the carrier five days to cover this route of approximately sixty or seventy miles. In this whole line of travel he would possibly see no more than a half dozen houses, which, of course, were two-room log cabins at the very best. The few clearings or fields, still full of stumps, were small, perhaps five to ten acres in size and surrounded by fences made of brush, poles, or rails.

The roads which now are unbroken ribbons of concrete or other hard material, smooth as a board, wide enough to accommodate two to four-lane traffic, and hundreds or even thousands of miles long, were then narrow, winding trails cut through the woods and underbrush and were almost impassable at certain seasons of the year. There were few bridges across the rivers and streams.

Generally speaking, Adams County was in a very wild state when the Schwartzs came here and the site which they selected for their new home, after their four thousand-mile journey from their dear old home in France, was no exception, indeed.

Family transportation on land is luxurious when compared with that of a hundred years ago. Almost every family in city, town or country has its automobile which travels at almost any speed desired from ten to a hundred miles per hour, on roads as smooth as any floor and as long as the country is wide. The trip which the Schwartzs made in five months could now be made by airplane in two days or by train and ocean liner in less than a week. Miraculous!

But what would he think of bloody, battle-torn France with its ghastly wounds of hate and strife as it is today? Or what if he saw the Selective Service Act in operation in this country? The same compulsory military training from which these pioneers had sought to escape by coming to this country.

Those of us who are inclined to think that progress is about ended, that inventions are about all made, that new things will no longer continue to be discovered, need only look at the statement made by a man in 1865, "There is no use living, all worth-while things have been invented, all important discoveries made and there is no hope for progress in the future." What all has been invented since 1865? Much is said and can be recorded of things which have gone by, which can only be looked back to now, but what the future holds in store for us no mortal can ever know. One generation will follow the other to the grave just as they have been doing for ages and ages in the past until the end of all time.

In the above chart each branch was credited with all children actually born into that branch. Inasmuch as there are 147 intermarriages among the various branches, some children appear as often as four times in the above chart, seventy-five children appear on the chart through second marriages, and there are eight adopted children, leaving 2,752, as the actual number of descendants. There are 44 pairs of twins, 23 boys and 21 girls.

Of the 2,752 Schwartz descendants listed in this book 2,406 are living today, 346 having died during a period of 120 years.

David Schwartz of family No. 305 is the oldest living grandchild of Johannes Schwartz, while Joel K. L. Schwartz (family No. 545) is the youngest grandchild living today.

More of the Schwartz descendants were born in March than in any other month. There were 273 births in March, 245 in December, 242 in January and April, 241 in October, 237 in February, 229 in September, 226 in August, 220 in May, 216 in November, 197 in July, and 184 in June.

1. JOHANNES SCHWARTZ: Berne, Indiana. Was born November 11, 1798, at Canton Bern, Switzerland, and died on December 30, 1883, at Berne, Indiana. He is buried in the Peter Schwartz Cemetery, three miles north of Berne.
