

Genealogy of the Saxe Family

FOREWORD

"There is a moral and philosophical respect for our ancestors which elevates the character and improves the heart."

—DANIEL WEBSTER.

To a descendant of one Jacob Saxe or Sax, a Hessian soldier, who came to America at the time of the Revolutionary War, is due the existence of this Genealogy of the descendants of John. In January, 1929, Hon. William D. Morrow wrote me asking information as to the kinship to our Saxes of Edna Sophia Saxe Morrow, his wife. I communicated with several members of the family and, in the course of my inquiries, Horace Eugene Allen generously sent me a manuscript compiled for him by Hannah Saxe Drury, his grandmother, in her eighty-first year. It was her interesting manuscript, in turn, which suggested the idea of preparing some printed record of John Saxe and his descendants. During July to December, 1929, Mrs. Drury's manuscript has been edited and much information added, some as to the earlier generations, and a great deal as to the later ones. I gratefully acknowledge the active cooperation of many members of the family, including:

Frank J. Saxe.
Mrs. Clarence E. Allen.
Horace Eugene Allen.
Miss Lilian Elizabeth Saxe Colt.
Mrs. Louise E. Jennison.
Miss Mary S. Saxe.
James A. Saxe.
Charles William Saxe.
Herbert K. Saxe.
Howard A. Saxe.
J. Boardman Scovell.
Miss Fannie E. Wead.
Charles Miner Wead.

It is also interesting to record that Mr. Morrow and I, after being at very considerable pains to try to establish kinship between the two Saxe families, have been unable to do so—at least up to date. Also, that Jacob Saxe, Mrs. Morrow's ascendant, had a son, Elias Saxe (B. Stillwater, N. Y., July 29, 1794, D. Greenfield, N. Y., September 24, 1831, M. Sally Person); that Elias had six children, Jacob, Polly, Constantine, John (B. June 8, 1823, D. Feb. 27, 1897, M. Sally Sophia Person), Asa and Elias Jr.; that John had two children, Willard Elias Saxe and John Brayton Saxe, and that Mrs. Morrow is the latter's daughter.

This Genealogy, herewith presented to the descendants of John, supplies a printed record where none previously existed. In it is incorporated all material to be found in various records compiled by members of the family, and also all information which could be procured by correspondence during the comparatively brief time available. It may be said to be substantially accurate and fairly complete, "up to now".

J. G. S.

New York, January 1, 1930.

JOHN SAXE, son of Godfrey, was the first American representative of the family, which, as the name indicates, originated in Saxony. The name, originally "Von Sachsen", is an ancient Thuringian family name, probably, at one time, connected with one of the branches of the house of Saxony [Sachsen], the Ernestine line, which split up into various families that descended from the younger scions and located in the northern Dutchies of Sachse Coburg, Sachse Gotha, Sachse Weimer, Brunswick and the Kingdom of Hanover. Some family records give the original American spelling as "Sax", with the notation that John Sax subsequently changed the name to "Saxe". Other records give the original spelling as "Saxe" and explain that John later left off the "e", because the French Canadians pronounced the name "Sax-y". The second version finds corroboration in the statement attributed to the Poet Saxe, that: "It was all wrong for the natives to have deprived the old fellow of his 'ease' " and by John's will (post, pp. 10-11), written the year before his death, which spells the name without the "e". Ascendants, according to some records, may have included Hans Saxe, the German poet, born in Nuremburg in 1494, and Maurice Saxe, born in 1696, later Marshall of France (1746), died at Chambord, 1750.

Saxe was born in 1732 at Langensaltza, in the Kingdom of Hanover, Germany, a town nineteen miles north of Erfurt, on the Salza. It is enclosed in walls, defended by a castle and has manufactories of woolen fabrics, paper and salt petre. John was the youngest of a large family of children. His father was a man of influence and the owner of eight acres of land. The son was but ten years old at his father's death and so could give but little account of him except as a stern man of great strength and courage.

John attended school until thirteen years of age when it became necessary for him to engage in some occupation to secure a livelihood. The highest peaks of the Thuringian forest are found in Saxe Gotha and the grand mountain scenery, the beautiful valleys and forests of his native Duchy awakened his childish enthusiasm and lingered in his memory like a beautiful picture down to his latest days. At fourteen, he said farewell to his home and with a companion two years his senior went out to seek his fortune. More than three years were spent in their wanderings, when at last they made their way to Amsterdam, where they stayed six months. John, who was then eighteen, was one day visited by his comrade, who said, "John, I am going to America and I want you to go with me". The reply was "I have not money enough to pay my passage". "Well", said his friend, "I have more than enough for myself and putting our savings together there will be enough for both." This settled the matter, and they immediately engaged passage and after a voyage of fifteen weeks landed at Philadelphia, where they took the oath of allegiance to King George of England. John was heavily in debt to the Captain of the vessel, his companion having barely enough to pay his own bills. In accordance with the custom of the times, the Captain bound John out for three years' service to pay the passage money, which was advanced by his employer, a miller. The latter was an intelligent man taking a friendly interest in his apprentice, making him his companion and trusted friend. Besides acquiring a thorough knowledge of milling, John also learned to read, write and speak English. When, therefore, at the age of twenty-one, he had finished his apprenticeship, he was well prepared to begin the battle of life for himself. Later, he learned to speak French fluently.

John Saxe was a man of marked characteristics and under more favorable auspices would no doubt have achieved public distinction. He was a man of ability and perseverance in every way calculated to endure the hardship of an early settler and pioneer. He was five feet, eleven inches, in height, broad shoulders and tapering to his feet, which were small. He was long armed, active and athletic, possessed great physical strength and endurance and indomitable courage. In manly sports and in physical contests he was champion, had light brown hair, fair complexion and blue eyes, regular, well defined features, aquiline nose, a mouth and chin indicating great firmness and strength of character, a conscientious man of temperate habits, of a calm sense of justice and integrity. He continued to work at his trade, after leaving his employer, for some years in Philadelphia and vicinity, was superintendent of a flouring mill at Valley Forge. Afterwards his residence for some time was in New York City. While residing there, he was accustomed to travel on horseback to Rhinebeck to visit the lady who afterwards became his wife. On November 18, 1771, at Rhinebeck, when thirty-nine years of age, he married Catherine Weaver, then twenty-seven years old. She was born in Philadelphia, in 1744, of German parents and removed to Rhinebeck with them, where John and she were married. She is described as a beautiful woman, rather below medium height, fair complexion, black eyes and dark curling hair, an excellent housekeeper, a faithful wife and mother. Her sister Elizabeth married Conrad Barr, who moved to Highgate. Another sister married George Fellows. Their daughter married one Shrives.

John and Catherine lived in Rhinebeck and vicinity for nineteen years and had eight sons born to them there. John was a loyal subject to Great Britain and the breaking out of the Revolutionary War wrought no change to him in this regard. He said he had taken the oath of allegiance to the King and, as the King had done him no wrong, he could not in conscience violate his oath. He was arrested and thrown into prison at Esopus, New York, but he eventually was set at liberty or escaped. Some accounts state that he then joined the British standard at New York. According to a manuscript written by his son William in Quebec in 1824, he had assisted a Major Cautine of the British Army to penetrate through the lines of the American troops. In June, 1786, John moved with his family to Missisquoi Bay, on Lake Champlain, in Canada, just north of Vermont line. They proceeded by boat, he and his wife and eight sons, and a man servant, up to the Hudson to Glens Falls, then down Lake George and Lake Champlain. His youngest son was less than two years old, when, on November 15, 1786, was born his youngest child and only daughter, Hannah. After residing two years in Canada, John settled in Highgate, Vermont, where he built mills, which later gave to the settlement the name "Saxe's Mills" and cleared a large farm, making this his home until his death on March 13, 1808. Catherine, his beloved wife, had died on January 10, 1791, at the age of 47, and though Hannah was then only four years old, John never remarried. The following years were times of severe trial to the strong man, he struggled manfully against the harsh unfriendly influences incident to pioneer life in a new country and severe climate. He and his family had many difficulties to endure. They were harassed by Indians, and wild beasts. John, the eldest son, died on August 22, 1793, at the age of twenty-one. George was a hunter and drover. William was a surveyor. Matthew was a wheelwright; later a merchant and Town Clerk. Godfrey died at the age of twenty-eight. Peter remained on the homestead, a farmer, merchant and man of business. He represented the town in the Legislature, and the poorer classes always voted for him, for said they: "We all know Peter". Jacob was a merchant, Conrad a farmer.

Highgate, in the northwest part of Franklin County, was chartered August 17, 1763, by Governor Wentworth to Samuel Hunt and sixty-three others, six miles square. First settlers in 1785-6—Joseph Rycard, John Willaker, Jeremiah Brewster, Thomas Butterfield, John Stinchover, Abram Rycard, Conrad Barr, John Saxe, John Shelters, George Wilson, John Nagle, Peter Wagoner. John Saxe built the first grist mill on a small stream, Rock River, running into Missisquoi River, a mile north of Highgate Springs. The first Post Office was there. A carding mill was built next the mill, also a potashery. There were no other mills nearer than Burlington, thirty-five miles, or Plattsburg, hence the place with its little log mill and one run of stone was a great blessing and brought many settlers into town. Matthew, Godfrey and Peter Saxe kept the first store. The first settlers were Dutch, principally refugees who supposed they had settled in Canada until after the establishment of the boundary line on Latitude 45. At that time, there were no settlers between Highgate and Burlington. In 1786, with no guide but his pocket compass, John Saxe visited Burlington—the first town meeting was held at his house.

John was a member of the Lutheran Church and a careful reader of the Scriptures, which he made the rule of his life. He had a German Bible, from which his youngest children were accustomed to read to him in his old age. He gave his children the best education circumstances permitted, and endeavored to imbue them with a noble ambition. The best commentary is the success and elevated position in life which his children attained. His counsel was often sought in cases of dispute among his neighbors and his decisions were a finality. He lived to see his children grow to maturity. Prospered and respected, he died at Highgate at the age of seventy-six years. He and his wife are buried in the town cemetery of Philipsburg, Canada.

WILL OF JOHN SAXE.

In the name of God, Amen.

I, John Sax, of the Town of Highgate, in the County of Franklin and State of Vermont, being weak in body but sound in memory, Blessed be God, do this 28th day of March, in the year of our Lord Christ 1807, make and publish this my Last Will and Testament in manner following. Imprimis—I give and bequeath to my three sons, Mathew, Peter and Jacob, all my lands with the mills and buildings standing thereon which I hold and possess in the Town of Highgate aforesaid, under the following conditions that the premises herein demised to the said Mathew, Peter and Jacob to be held by them in equal shares, i. e. one third of the same to each, but subject nevertheless to pay the following legacies, that is to say, to my sons George, William and Conrad—unto George and William, fifty dollars each and unto Conrad one hundred and fifty dollars, and to my daughter Hannah one hundred and fifty, making in the whole four hundred dollars, to be paid by the said Mathew, Peter and Jacob as aforesaid within one year after my decease. Item. I give and bequeath to my son George, Lott No. 8 in the Township of Shefford and half of Lott No. 27 in the township of Clifton, in the Province of Lower Canada. Item. I give and bequeath to my son William, Lotts No. 25 and 26 in the said Township of Clifton in the Province of Lower Canada. Item. I given and bequeath to my son Conrad, Lott No. 7 in the Township of Shefford, Province of Lower Canada aforesaid. Item. I give and bequeath to my daughter Hannah all the lands which I hold and possess in the Signeiory of St. Armand and the buildings thereon standing, in the Province aforesaid. Item. I bequeath unto my grand son John Sax, a minor, son of my son George, the equal one half of Lott No. 27 in the Township of Clifton, in the Province of Lower Canada aforesaid; and as to my goods, chattels and personal estate, I will and ordain that it shall be disposed of in the following manner, that is to say, I give to my son George all the wearing apparel which I shall own at my decease, and as to the horse which I commonly ride I give the same, together with the saddle and bridle, to my son Conrad and also the sett of blacksmith tools which he now works with. I give to my daughter one feather bed, she having the choice out of all my feather beds, together with the bedding for the same, also the sett of bed curtains; and furthermore I give to my son William and Conrad and to my daughter Hannah one horse each worth forty dollars or the value thereof in some other property. As to the remainder or residue of my goods and chattels or personal estate, it is my will and I hereby give the same to all my children to be divided among them equally without sex or priority, and I hereby appoint, constitute and ordain my son Mathew and my friend Thomas Best, and Charles Miller executors of this my last will and testament.

In witness whereof, I, the said John Sax, have hereunto set my hand and seal, the day and year first above written.

JOHN SAX.

Signed, sealed and published as and for his last will and testament, in our presence, we here subscribe our names in his presence

30. WILLIAM SAXE, M. Mary Osiette Trembly, resided at Quebec, Canada.

William Saxe, according to his manuscript, left home in 1788 at the age of fourteen and joined M. S. Z. Watson, land surveyor, to learn his profession and science, and lived with him seven years, "during which we surveyed a number of seigniorys and townships". The manuscript continues as follows: "In the year 1792, after the division of the Province of Quebec into the two provinces of Lower and Upper Canada, the first considerable surveys were ordered by the government of Lower Canada, which were actual surveys to be made by a number of Provincial Land Surveyors, accordingly, in the month of March of that year, the River Sorel or Richelieu from its mouth to the Province line at Latitude 45. Accordingly, we set out from Quebec on the 12th of June 1792 in three batteaux, with provisions and necessaries, each surveyor having received an advance of £60 currency from the Government. In twelve days we arrived at the Basin of Chambly (having seen before our departure and during our journey two elections for members of Parliament). From Chambly we had our batteaux taken to St. Johns and thence, passing the Isle-aux-naix and rounding the tongue of Alburgh, we entered and ascended the Missisquoi River to the first falls, where, leaving our batteaux, we proceeded in birch canoes, which we had procured at St. Francois (as also an Indian for each party) to nearly the head of Missisquoi River by making many portages, where the surveyors parted company. Our party continued on eastward, the Indian carrying the birch canoe on his head to Lake Memphramagog and we our provisions on our backs, ascending and descending many mountains and ledges till we finally arrived at the Lake Memphramagog which was about the middle of July. We ferried ourselves across the Lake, about two miles wide, making three trips to cross the whole of the party and baggage and provision, with which we all landed safely on the Eastern shore, where we left the canoe covered by branches, and our party nine in number, continued our route Eastward on the Province line, measuring as we went the extent of the Township of Stansledd, Barnston, Barford and Hereford to the Western bank of Connecticut River and then proceeded to run the outlines of Barford, Hereford, Clifton, Ayckland and part of Barnston, Newport, Eaton and Compton. Our party was divided into two surveying parties one under Mr. Watson and the other under my immediate direction. I surveyed that part or branch of Connecticut River called Indian stream, wading in the water at times up to our necks and suffering all the hardships it was possible for human nature to sustain or bear up against. Also, having scaled the south shore of a small lake called Laachl in the Township of Hereford, which the Province line intersects, in fording the mouth of a brook which falls into the Lake, the party having crossed and being before me, I suddenly sank to the bottom, with the Theodolite in my hand, and would perhaps never have risen alive again, had not fortunately one of the party, seeing me go down, hastened to the spot and, putting the flag and staff he held in his hand down, I laid hold thereof and was drawn out of the water by him, having been under water upwards of three minutes and had taken in much water. Besides this disaster, I underwent all the fatigue it is possible to be conceived in this extensive wilderness of nature where no settlements of any kind were yet made or roads or paths even opened. The canopy of heaven being our only covering during the whole of this survey which terminated late in October, when, being fatigued and exhausted much for the want of provision of which we had scarcely any left, we set out on our return on foot carrying on our backs what little baggage remained. Arrived after eight days' march through the wilderness at the banks of Lake Memphramagog, found our canoe, and in the night crossed three different trips to the west shore, thence continued our march westward to the settlement of Missisquoi Bay, where we all arrived the latter end of October, having travelled about ninety miles westward carrying our baggage all the way on our backs; it would have been impossible from our exhausted state to have gone any farther without some repose. Thence we went to our winter quarters on the Isle-aux-noix. Before leaving on this trip, William saw on the fourth of the month on parade the Regiment of Prince Edward reviewed by himself—a "grand sight". From 1792 until 1824, in a lapse of about thirty-two years, he had assisted in the survey of about three million acres, in townships, laid out in the field which now contains a population of about 30,000 and in 1792 was a wilderness." Mrs. Drury in her hand written genealogy writes that this manuscript was among Priest Peter Saxe's papers (302), being his father's account of surveys. "The administrator of Rev. Peter kindly sent it to me. H. S. Drury" (copied June 4, 1905).

Father Saxe was a Roman Catholic priest, founder of a quaint little French parish, known as Sainte Romauld, on the south bank of the St. Lawrence, near Quebec. His mother was French, a native of Lacadie in Quebec Province. She is described by Abbe d'Emirs in La Parvisse de St. Romauld as "an extraordinary woman, full of virtue and merit, of whom Quebec has not yet lost the memory". Young Pierre studied at the Quebec seminary with his brother William, who died at twenty-one. He was a talented young man, and by reason of his intelligence, excellent memory, and a profound taste for reading serious and instructive works, gave much promise for the future. On October 1, 1846, he was ordained priest, and served for a time as Vicar at the Quebec Cathedral. In 1847, a scourge visited Quebec, a sort of ships' fever; thousands died; many children were orphaned. Some of them were placed in St. Bridget's Asylum in Father Saxe's charge and he himself contracted the terrible fever which endangered his life for many days. In September, 1850, he was designated to represent his diocese at Rome at the consecration of Grand Vicar C. F. Bailargeon as Bishop of Quebec. In October, 1854, he was named by the Bishop as priest of Sainte Romauld, and it is there, according to Abbe d'Emirs, "that Providence decreed that all the qualities of his fine intelligence and of his truly broad and judicial spirit, should flourish". Emirs continues: "From the first words that he addressed to his parishioners on October 8th, in an improvised chapel in which they found themselves tightly packed, he asked of them three things—courage, generosity and good will; courage to build a rectory and a church commensurate with the present and future needs of the new parish;—generosity, to face the very considerable expenses that were required from the small resources at hand, and, above all, good will was required, to overcome difficulties, to preserve harmony among all, and to direct every effort toward a common end. On coming from the chapel, after the first sermon, which the priest had delivered both in French and English with equal facility, a venerable old gentleman pronounced the truly prophetic words, 'We have just the priest that we need'".

Father Saxe built his church. The Canadian Government assisted his parishoners by contributing $20,000, and he himself contributed most of his own inheritance from his father and mother. Later, on one of several missions on which his Bishop sent him to Rome, he brough back with him a celebrated Munich artist, named Lamprich, who resided with him for three years and decorated the interior of the church. Both the church and its beautiful decorations, including a portrait of Father Saxe, still remain, a shrine frequently visited by tourists.

Pierre Saxe, follower after Pierre Marquette, is held in the affectionate memory of Canadians and of his family, who associate with his name the romanticism of all our early pioneers. Simple and courageous, he realized his great ambition, though it did not transcend a parish, and his work lives after him.

40. MATHEW, M. Charlotte Holt, Feb. 4, 1805, B. Jan. 8, 1787, D. Dec. 25, 1811, resided and died at Chazy, N. Y.

Matthew and Jacob (70) were brought up in Highgate, where they learned the iron business, there having been a deposit of iron ore in the town in the locality still known as "Furnace Lot". Later, they moved to Chazy, and engaged in the iron business there. For some years, they were prosperous, but a freshet swept away their dam and ruined their plant. Jacob returned to Vermont and settled at Sheldon, where he died. Matthew and his family remained, and descendants of his are still living at Saxe's Landing, near Chazy, on Lake Champlain.

Peter Saxe was one of Vermont's early statesmen (see, ante p. 8). His wife was a woman of great strength of character and fine intellect. She attained the age of ninety years, with her faculties wholly unimpaired. The Montreal Saxes have a very beautiful portrait of her. It is recorded that when she was a girl of eighteen she rode on horseback from her home in Weybridge to Troy, N. Y., with four servants as an escort, travelling the whole distance through a dense forest, inhabited by Indians, and accomplished the trip of one hundred miles in forty eight hours, and carrying with her a valuable consignment of silver coin.

6016-7. James and John Saxe

"The proverb says in sombre tone
'Misfortunes seldom come alone;'
But then, to recompense our cares,
Blessings, too, are sent in pairs;
Thus where a single babe was due,
The grateful father welcomes two.
God bless them, in this world of trouble,
May both find all their blessings double;
And to the joy of sire and mother,
Each prove an honor to his brother.

Dec. 4, 1863.

Jno. G. Saxe"

This poem accompanied a congratulatory letter from John Godfrey Saxe to his brother Charles on the birth of the "Twin Saxes".

James and John were born in Troy, N. Y. on December 2, 1863. James devoted himself, during his early days at school and college, to athletics; but devoted sufficient time on study to pass all examinations. John devoted himself to his books. Both were musical; James had a good voice and played the violin; John played the flute remarkably well. They matriculated at Wesleyan University in 1881 and graduated in 1885, when twenty-one, each receiving the decree of Bachelor of Arts. James was captain of the baseball and football teams, and John an honor student; both were members of the Xi Chapter of Psi Upsilon. After a year's travel in the West and another year in Europe, they entered the senior year at Harvard College. They graduated with the Harvard Class of 1888, Bachelors of Arts, and, attending also the Commencement at Wesleyan for their triennial, they there received Master's degrees.

James spent the following year in Germany studying music; John spent the year in a law office in Troy, N. Y. and attended the Albany Law School. The following summer, they spent walking in Switzerland, and then decided to graduate from the Harvard Law School and be admitted to the Massachusetts Bar. James spent the following year at Harvard Law School, John studied at the Albany Law School, received his Bachelor of Laws degree and was admitted to the New York Bar. The following year, he was admitted to the second year law at the Harvard Law School on examination, and both of them graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1892, Bachelors of Laws,—John an honor man,—and were admitted to the Massachusetts Bar. In 1890, the family has moved from Troy, N. Y. to Brookline, Mass. and occupied their grandfather Griggs' homestead. James married immediately after being admitted to the bar, and spent the year in Europe with his wife. On his return, he and John opened their offices in Boston, as Saxe & Saxe. A Harvard class-mate who was at the head of the Massachusetts Title Insurance Co. made James its head examiner in the Middlesex Registry and two years later the State sent him to Worcester, Mass. for special work. There he founded the Worcester County Abstract Co. John married at thirty-five and had a charming home and successful office practice. His daughter was graduated from Radcliffe College, an honor student in Art. His son, John, was graduated from Harvard, an honor student in electrical engineering. His son, James, was graduated from the Connecticut Agricultural School, and is now a realtor in Santa Barbara, California. When John's wife died, he moved to Worcester and became attorney for the Worcester County Abstract Company. He lived for a time with James. For the last ten years, John lived at the Worcester Country Club. There, he died on the night of March 24, 1929. He had made his best score at golf that day. He is buried in the family lot at Oakwood Cemetery at Troy, N. Y. He ever "proved an honor to his brother".

James "carries on". He and his wife spend their summers at Worcester, Mass., and their winters at the Isle of Pines, Cuba.

602. JOHN GODFREY SAXE, M. Sophia Sollace, Sept. 9, 1841.

The following sketch of the life of John Godfrey Saxe is based in part on an article in the Bookman of June, 1916, written by John, a grandson, and Mary Sollace Saxe, a niece, of Montreal.

Give me English, the aptest tongue to paint
A sage or dunce, a villain or a saint,
To lend fantastic Humour freest scope
To marshal all his laughter-moving troop
Give Pathos, power, and Fancy, lightest wings,
And Wit, his merriest whims and keenest stings.

Progress.

John Godfrey Saxe, State's attorney and twice candidate for Governor of Vermont, lawyer, editor, lecturer, and poet, still lives through the wit and humour which characterised his poems. He was born at Highgate, Vermont, then known as Saxe's Mills. The frame house in which he was born, built by his pioneer grandfather, is still standing, and the old mill-wheel is now used as its door step. Saxe's ballad, "Little Jerry, the Miller," is reminiscent of his boyhood days. It begins:

Beneath the hill, you may see the mill
With wasting wood and crumbling stone;
The wheel is dripping, clattering still,
But Jerry, the miller, is dead and gone.

Saxe's early studies were at the St. Albans Academy, and in 1839 he was graduated from Middlebury College. In 1850, when Middlebury College celebrated its semi-centennial, Saxe recited his "Carmen Laetum," celebrating his Alma Mater's refusal to accept Vermont University's offer to consolidate with it. In 1916, Middlebury College celebrated his centennary, by conferring the degree of doctor of laws on his grandson and namesake, who made an address, the subject of which was the grandfather and his writings. In 1843, he was admitted to the bar, but he soon developed his literary tastes and in 1846 published his first volume: "Progress; a Satirical Poem". In 1850, he assumed management of the Burlington Sentinel. During the next decade, he became a prominent figure in Vermont public life. He was Attorney General of the State and in 1859 and 1860 candidate for Governor. Later, he gave up politics and devoted himself wholly to writing and lecturing.

In 1853, Saxe was initiated into the Psi Upsilon Fraternity at the Alpha (Harvard) Chapter. In 1863, his son, John Theodore Saxe was initiated at the Theta (Union) Chapter, and in 1898, his grandson, John Godfrey Saxe, was initiated into the Lambda (Columbia), Chapter, becoming the first three-generation member of that Fraternity. Herbert K. Saxe and James A. and John W. Saxe were also Psi U's, Herbert at the Delta (New York University) and the "Twin Saxes" at the Xi (Wesleyan). As poet of the fraternity, Saxe, at its banquet in 1853, read a poem, the closing lines of which are read at nearly every Psi U. reunion:

Success to "Psi Upsilon!"—Beautiful name!
 To the eye and the ear it is pleasant the same;
 Many thanks to old Cadmus, who made us his debtors,
 By inventing, one day, those capital letters,
 Which still, from the heart, we shall know how to speak
 When we've fairly forgotten the rest of our Greek! . . .
 Remember 'tis blessed to give and forgive;
 Live chiefly to love, and love while you live;
 And dying, when life's little journey is done,
 May your last, fondest sigh, be Psi Upsilon!

In September, 1841, the young poet was married to Sophia Newell Sollace, a daughter of Judge Calvin Sollace. There were three intermarriages between the Saxes and the Sollaces. Calvin Sollace married Sophia Bascome, daughter of Susannah Stetson Bascome*; Calvin's sister, Hepsibeth, married Nathaniel Bosworth; Calvin's daughters Sophia Newell Saxe and Sarah S. Saxe married John Godfrey Saxe and James Saxe, respectively; Nathaniel Bosworth's son, Justice Joseph Sollace Bosworth, married Frances Pumpelly. John and Sophia's son, John Theodore, married Justice Bosworth's daughter, Mary Bosworth.

One of Saxe's early contributions to the Knickerbocker was the "Rhyme of the Rail," which was reprinted all over the United States, appeared in London Punch and was known to generations of school children. "In reading it," says one commentator on Saxe, "one can close his eyes and almost hear the varied sounds that form an undersong to the monotonous rumble of the cars." It ran thus:

Singing through the forests,
 Rattling over ridges,
 Shooting under arches,
 Rumbling over bridges,
 Whizzing through the mountains,
 Buzzing o'er the vale,—
 Bless me! this is pleasant,
 Riding on the Rail!

* Susannah Stetson; B. Hardwicke, Mass., Dec. 19, 1774, was a daughter of Robert and Lydia Rich Stetson. Francis Lynde Stetson, for many years one of the leaders of the New York Bar, always acknowledged with affection his kinship with the Saxes and Sollaces.

Men of different "stations"
 In the eye of Fame
 Here are very quickly
 Coming to the same.
 High and lowly people,
 Birds of every feather,
 On a common level
 Travelling together! . . .

Ancient maiden lady
 Anxiously remarks,
 That there must be peril
 'Mong so many sparks!
 Roguish-looking fellow,
 Turning to a stranger,
 Says it's his opinion
She is out of danger!

Singing through the forests,
 Rattling over ridges,
 Shooting under arches,
 Rumbling over bridges,
 Whizzing through the mountains,
 Buzzing o'er the vale,—
 Bless me! this is pleasant,
 Riding on the Rail!

Among Saxe's longer poems are "The Money King" and "The Proud Miss McBride." The latter is exceedingly humorous and full of satire upon the pretensions of would-be aristocrats in this country, as when he writes:

STANZA XIII.

Of all the notable things on earth,
 The queerest one is pride of birth,
     Among our "fierce Democracie"!
 A bridge across a hundred years,
 Without a prop to save it from sneers,—
 Not even a couple of rotten Peers,—
 A thing for laughter, fleers, and jeers,
 Is American aristocracy!

XV.

Depend upon it, my snobbish friend,
 Your family thread you can't ascend,
 Without good reason to apprehend
 You may find it waxed at the farther end
     By some plebeian vocation;
 Or, worse than that, your boasted Line
 May end in a loop of stronger twine,
     That plagued some worthy relation!

And also the following, peculiarly appropriate to November and December, 1929, and frequently printed in the press at that time:

XXIX.

"Alas! that people who've got their box
 Of cash beneath the best of locks,
 Secure from all financial shocks,
 Should stock their fancy with fancy stocks,
 And madly rush upon Wall Street rocks,
     Without the least apology;
 Alas! that people whose money affairs
 Are sound beyond all need of repairs,
 Should ever tempt the bulls and bears
     Of Mammon's fierce Zoölogy!

As early as May, 1853, William Cullen Bryant wrote of "Proud Miss McBride,"—"This delightful poem shows an uncommon facility of versification. You will not find a single nonsensical or slovenly line in the entire book, no slipshod English and no rough edges or loose ends. Saxe's heroic couplets, we are inclined to think, are the best of their kind that America has yet produced, and quite lately, with other of Saxe's measures, they have had much currency given them by the English and the Scotch papers."

When a candidate for Governor of Vermont on the Democratic ticket, Saxe, of course, had virtually no chance of election, and in accepting his first nomination he wrote a short letter closing with the words: "For further political views and opinions, I will refer you to my inaugural message." An incident of the campaign gave rise to the following:

When John was contending (though sure to be beat)
In the annual race for the Governor's seat,
And a crusty old fellow remarked to his face,
He was clearly too young for so lofty a place,—
"Perhaps so," said John; "but consider a minute
The objection will cease by the time I am in it!"

In or about 1860, Mr. and Mrs. Saxe moved to Albany, New York, and Saxe now devoted himself wholly to literature and lecturing.

Now I am a man, you must learn,
Less famous for beauty than strength,
And for aught I could ever discern,
Of rather superfluous length.
In truth, 'tis but seldom one meets
Such a Titan in human abodes,
And when I walk over the streets,
I'm a perfect Colossus of roads.

Thus he described his personal appearance, which was in reality most attractive, and, with his skill in speaking, won great popularity as a lecturer and reader of his own verses. In the palmy days of the old lyceum system he attracted brilliant and overflowing audiences and was popular everywhere.

It is chiefly as a poet that Saxe will be known to fame, and more especially as a humourous poet. He has often been styled the Tom Hood of America, and he resembled Oliver Wendell Holmes in the finish of his verse, but had the advantage over him in his faculty of punning.

You'll oft find in books, rather ancient than recent,
A gap in the page marked with "cetera desunt,"
By which you may commonly take it for granted
The passage is wanting without being wanted;
And may borrow, besides, a significant hint
That desunt means simply not decent to print!

Summer after summer, in the early sixties, the poet was to be seen at Saratoga Springs. One raconteur says, "There was Saxe, six foot tall, attired from head to foot in white duck, the centre of an admiring group. He was one of the most brilliant talkers of his day. His fine head with its brown flowing locks and deep-set blue eyes towered above his companions. It was during one of Saxe's twenty-three consecutive summers at Saratoga Springs that he answered the question, "Pray, what do they do at the Springs?" with his "Song of Saratoga," which was reprinted many a summer afterwards:

Imprimis, my darling, they drink
The waters so sparkling and clear,
Though the flavour is none of the best,
And the odour exceedingly queer;

But the fluid is mingled, you know,
 With wholesome medicinal things,
 So they drink, and they drink, and they drink,—
 And that's what they do at the Springs!

Now, they stroll in the beautiful walks,
 Or loll in the shades of the trees;
 Where many a whisper is heard
 That never is told by the breeze;
 And hands are commingled with hands,
 Regardless of conjugal rings;
 And they flirt, and they flirt, and they flirt,—
 And that's what they do at the Springs!

In short,—as it goes in the world—
 They eat, and they drink and they sleep;
 They talk, and they walk, and they woo;
 They sigh, and they laugh, and they weep;
 They read, and they ride, and they dance;
 (With other unspeakable things;)
 They pray, and they play, and they pay!
 And that's what they do at the Springs!

A time-worn clipping in Mrs. Drury's scrap-book, bearing neither date nor authorship, contains a poetical tribute to Saxe, which ends as follows:

“And the jokes grow better as they grow old,
 And so will continue; and I'll be bold
 To say that, a hundred years from now,
 Some weary soul, with an anxious brow,
 Will smile again, as his cares relax
 And thank the Lord for our brother Saxe.”

These “hundred years” in prospect doubtless seemed longer than they will in retrospect. The American press gave more than passing notice to Saxe's Centenary in June, 1916. An editorial of the New York Times of

June 4th is written in unusually happy vein, and is entitled and reads as follows:

“JOHN GODFREY SAXE.

The name John Godfrey Saxe, honorably borne by his grandson in this State, has a pleasant sound and savor in many memories. It brings back the scent of old pages of the Knickerbocker Magazine, some volume of Mr. Peter Parley Goodrich's annual "Token" lying by its side on the "centre table" of our not so remote ancestors who read Godey's Lady's Book and Graham's Magazine and The Democratic Review and Arcturus and Ballou's Drawing Room Companion and the New York Observer, venerated Mr. Willis and General Morris, had their backgammon boards solemnly bound as "The Complete Works of Flavius Josephus," Mr. Rollin's "History" on their shelves, admired "The Lamplighter" and "The Lofty and the Lowly", and too often swapped their fine mahogany old furniture for funereal horsehair and "whatnots". Age of innocence, in whose less innocent later days boys and girls, shy worshippers of Mr. Beadle, used to read Mr. Saxe's verses in "Readers and Speakers", and singsong them on "declamation days". Many of those amateur reciters remember them fondly still. They are worth remembering. In the humorous manner of Tom Hood, the sages tell us. A good manner, simple, clear, effective. Because Mr. Saxe had not the scholarly, clever felicities of Calverley, the taking bang-and-cymbal topsyturviness of Gilbert, shall he be patronized by superior persons? Just as there are multitudes of reactionaries who swear by humble folk like Whittier and Longfellow, no matter how industriously the Vorticists whirl and the Imagists make faces, so divers oldsters will continue to swear by Saxe, a man with "wit an' humor an' shrewd Yankee sense, more'n there is mosses on an old stone fence."

Some princoxes say he punned too much. Habit of the time, which will recur, like everything else, no matter how wearisome in the mouths of bunglers. One may pun beyond forgiveness, as Henry J. Finn did when he said:

‘If my punnish head were pun-i-shed for every pun I shed, I should not have a puny shed to hide my punnish head.’

This is debauchery. Saxe is a moderate punner. He doesn't offend. He sharpens carelessly antithesis. He is always neat, makes his point, gets his laugh. He must have been a lecturer worth hearing in the prime of "the Lyceum". He is often as clever in the humorous vein as Dr. Holmes. But he didn't live in the Boston Pale, though his works were published by its classic house. So he missed accelerated and imputed fame. After he left Vermont, he settled in Albany. So he was not in the Knickerbocker school, albeit his first verses appeared in The Knickerbocker Magazine in 1841. He was isolated, without a clique. Mr. Stedman left him out of that exceedingly catholic "American Anthology". The pious care of two of Saxe's grandchildren* is to be thanked for a charming essay in the June Bookman on "Saxe, the Vermont Poet". He would have been a hundred years old on June 2. A graduate of Middlebury College—one of those sound, ancient little colleges at the mere name of which you hear elms rustle and almost possess the Latin accidence—he read law, edited a paper, amused himself by running twice as the Democratic candidate for Governor, a test of humor in a State whose Democratic Party could be assembled in George Stearn's back garden. From 1860 till his death, in 1887, he resided in Albany. He was a brilliant and distinguished figure, a man of the world, of great social charm, a successful reader and lecturer. Oldsters brought up on him will be glad to find him so variously accomplished. Among the verses quoted by his grandchildren we miss the lines on Phaethon—we forget the title—son of the sun, joy-riding with papa's team. Papa Helios counsels in vain:

* * * 'The horses are wild,
And when their mettle is thoroughly riled,
Depend upon it, the coach will be spiled.'

It is a pleasure to many ancients to find that Mr. Saxe's frolic coach of verse is still driving, "unspiled", among the moderns."

6021. JOHN THEODORE SAXE, M. Jan. 18, 1876, Mary Bosworth. (See, ante, pp. 31, 32).

John Theodore was the senior member of the firm of Saxe Brothers, lumber merchants. He was educated at the University of Vermont and was a Psi U from Union College. For a time he was a professor at the Albany Academy. He married Mary Bosworth, daughter of Chief Justice Joseph Sollace Bosworth of the New York Superior Court. She died on April 27, 1881.

60211. John Godfrey Saxe, B. June 25, 1877, at Saratoga Springs.

60211. JOHN GODFREY SAXE, M. June 10, 1909, Mary Sands, daughter of Ferdinand and Mary Colender Sands.

John Godfrey Saxe is a lawyer, practicing since 1900 in New York City, and since 1909, as a member of the law firm of Worcester, Williams & Saxe, now Williams & Saxe. He was graduated from McGill University in 1897, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts and the Prince of Wales Gold Medal, and, in 1914, while President of the New York Graduates' Society, McGill conferred on him the honorary degree of Master of Arts. He was graduated from the Columbia Law School in 1900, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. He now holds the office of attorney for Columbia University. In 1910-1911, he was State Senator; in 1914, counsel to Governor Glynn; in 1915, a member of the Constitutional Convention and, during the World War, a member of the District Board for the hearing of appeals, of which Charles E. Hughes was Chairman.

For many years, he has been one of the leaders in the movement for simplified practice and lessening the law's delays. In the Senate, he fathered several useful laws. Later, he was Chairman of the Special Committee of the Bar Association of the City of New York to consider the proposed Practice Act. After that proposal had been enacted into law, he was the lawyer delegate from Manhattan and the Bronx to the Convention of Lawyers and Judges to frame the Rules of Civil Practice. He served from 1913 to 1923 on the Committee on the Amendment of the Law of the Bar Association of the City of New York. Later, he was appointed Chairman of the important State Commission to Investigate Defects in the Law and its Administration. From 1926-1929, he was a member of the Executive Committee of the Bar Association of the City of New York, and in 1928-1929 was Chairman of that Committee. He was also a member of the Joint Committee of all Bar Associations to investigate ambulance-chasing and one of the draftsmen who assisted the Appellate Division in preparing its new Rules to check ambulance chasing.

He is the author of a Manual on Elections, which is the leading work on New York election law. Some of his articles on governmental topics, which received extensive notice at the time of publication, are "The Finances of the State", published in the Times of March 21, 1915; "Taxation to cover Waste", published in the Sun of March 6, 1916, and "The Republican Constitution of New York from a Democratic Standpoint", published in the World of November 5, 1922.

For several years, he was a member of the Executive Council of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity. He has always been an active Democrat, and has served as Chairman of the New York Democratic State Law Committee and of the Tammany Hall Law Committee. He was President of the Manhattan Club in 1925-1927, and in April, 1929, was recalled to the Presidency. In 1916, on the Centennial of his grandfather, who had delivered the poem on Middlebury College's Semi-Centennial, Saxe delivered the commencement oration at Middlebury, and Middlebury conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Laws. President John M. Thomas, on that occasion, presented him with the following certificate accompanying his degree: "You bear, sir, a name familiar to every graduate of Middlebury College—a name they have ever held in high honor and deep affection. You have done credit to that name by your zealous study of the principles of government and by your distinguished services in the practice of the law. On this Centennial of the birth of the genial poet whose name sheds lustre on the roll of our Alumni, I confer upon you the degree of Doctor of Laws." On the following day, June 3, 1916, the Brooklyn Standard Union, in an editorial presumably written by the late Herbert L. Bridgman, long President of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity, said: "Whether ex-Senator Saxe goes down to posterity as a great poet or a great Democrat, his filial and eloquent tribute, yesterday, in connection with the Highgate (Vt.) honors to his distinguished ancestor, whose name he bears, demonstrates that his verse does not suffer by comparison and that his politics have the same originality and independence which marked his service at Albany. 'Blood will tell', and the better the blood the better the tale; there's something in the air and waters of the Green Mountains which keeps it pure and strong."

604. JAMES SAXE, M. Sarah Storrs Sollace (see, ante, p. 31), B. Dec. 9, 1828, D. May 20, 1921 at Montreal, Canada.

James Saxe lived at St. Albans, Vermont, and his family was born there. His residence was one of the outstanding places in the community and a picture of it was carried at one time on the official maps. He was a fine type of old country gentleman, distinguished in appearance, six feet, two inches in height, always dignified and courteous. When he died, Mrs. Saxe moved to Montreal, Canada, with her family, which included, John Godfrey Saxe, then an orphan. She bought a residence on St. Luke Street, where, in 1929, her three daughters, Lillian, Fanny and Mary (Mollie), and her son Charles still reside. She lived to be ninety-three years of age, and was very sweet and beautiful, both in youth and middle age, and as an old lady.

701. REV. ALFRED SAXE, M. Elizabeth Chase,

Rev. Alfred Saxe was a graduate of Wesleyan University, 1838. At fifteen, he matured his purpose to preach and worked industriously so as to get through school and college before he became of age. It was said of him that "from the moment he resolved upon the ministry, almost to the hour of his death, his energies were devoted to his work. Every hour was employed to its full extent to the accomplishment of some high purpose." Judged by his contemporaries, "he was a man of vigorous and active intellect, characterized by quickness of apprehension and soundness of judgment. Energy and perseverance were also striking traits of character". He bequeathed unto several of his descendants the noble aspirations of preacher and missionary.

George Godfrey Saxe was born at Plattsburg, N. Y. In 1848 he entered the ministry and became Pastor of the Methodist Church at Fairhaven, Vermont. In 1856, his health becoming impaired, he was constrained to retire from the active ministry. Later, he accepted a professorship in the Troy Conference Academy at Poultney, Vermont. In 1862, he came to New York City and entered business, forming partnerships of Saxe & Robertson and, later, Estey & Saxe. He was an active member of the latter firm at the time of his death. During the last thirteen years of his life, he and his family resided at Madison, N. J., he taking an active part in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, occasionally occupying its pulpit.

80. CONRAD SAXE, M. Feb. 5, 1816, Clarissa Dunning, B. Aug. 19, 1792, D. Dec. 18, 1875, at Highgate, Vt.

Conrad Saxe was the last survivor of his family. He lived to be over eighty. He was about 5 feet 7 inches in height—straight and finely built—remarkably strong and active. His head was not large, but symmetrical—and showed decided moral and intellectual development. He had brown, curly hair, regular features, and a very expressive black eye, commonly loving and humorous. In the early days of rough, muscular sports and combats, he was a champion; and a terror to much larger men who gave him just cause of offense. He had besides great muscular power, strong nerves and a steady eye, could, when necessary, endure or witness physical suffering without a quiver. He was for sometime Custom House officer in perilous times and his power over the rough and unscrupulous smugglers was said to have been marvelous. He would go quietly among them alone and in the night, and in spite of their threats and curses seize their contraband property and hold it—no one could tell how—but he did it, talking in a low firm tone of his duty and their peril in their unlawful deeds. He carried the charm of real bravery about him. He was eminently social in his nature, warm in his attachment, generous and hospitable. He was interesting in conversation and an inimitable story teller. He is said to have lived a careless, irreligious life till about thirty-five years of age, when he came deliberately to the conclusion that he ought to be a Christian. From that time on, to the close of life, he was an active and efficient official member of the church. His remarks in public were original and appropriate, and always interesting. He was free from formality. His nephews remember that in their boyhood, his reading of the Scriptures at family prayers always arrested their attention, by its naturalness and simplicity. A minister of our Church to whom he was much attached, becoming unsettled in his theological views, withdrew from the Church and joined the Unitarians. The first opportunity that occurred, Uncle Conrad sent him a kindly greeting, as usual, but added: "Ye have taken away my Lord and I know not where ye have laid him." It was a touching reproof, skillfully administered, and may have been among the influences that afterwards brought the man back to the Church of his early choice. He was beautiful in old age. When one of his nephews alluded to his infirmities after a long journey, he humorously replied: "Yes, I am pretty lame, but when I get aboard the cars I can travel as fast as anybody." A nephew writes: "The last time I saw him was not long before his death. He could not rise from his seat except with assistance. He could barely walk by the use of two canes, yet he exhibited the same cheerful, sunny spirit. Taking him for all in all, he was the best example of "Christian perfection" I have ever known."

805. HANNAH SAXE, M. Zephaniah Keith Drury,* Oct.
31, 1849.

Hannah Saxe Drury was born at Saxe's Mills, Highgate, Vermont. Throughout her long life, the members of the Saxe family rallied around her. She knew all of her relatives, even to the more remote ones. To the home which she and Zephaniah Drury established at the very edge of the States, a mile north of Saxe's Mills, came Saxes and Drurys from all points of the compass, from Quebec; Toronto; Montreal; Alton, Illinois; Lockport, New York; Boston and San Francisco. She corresponded with them all. Family records compiled by her have been extensively used in this Genealogy. With a district school beginning, she educated herself by much reading of books and periodicals. Few women read newspapers as she did. From the visitors to her hospitable home she learned constantly, for she preferred to talk of the more important affairs rather than the trivial. She traveled, too. As a little girl, with her father, she took a boat on the Erie Canal to visit her aunt, Mrs. Scovell, at Lockport. She went twice to St. Louis, the second time continuing her trip to Arizona and California. New York, Boston and Quebec she visited many times. Following her own schooling, she taught school for a number of terms. After her marriage, she kept the town records of the Town of Highgate for her husband, who was Town Clerk. Her well-rounded, painstaking hand-writing fills many a page of the old records. On one occasion, several people voted for her for Town Clerk, although at that time, it was an almost unheard of thing for a woman to be considered for public office. During the last seventeen years of her life, she lived with her daughter, Mrs. Clarence E. Allen, at Swanton, Vermont, and to the end, in her eighty-second year, her keen interest in the Saxe family continued.

90. HANNAH SAXE, M. March 5, 1813, Josiah Boardman Scovell, B. Nov. 6, 1786, D. 1859,

NOTE: The following record of the Scovell branch of the Saxe Family has been prepared for this Genealogy by Josiah Boardman Scovell of Lewiston, New York, a grandson of Hannah Saxe Scovell. His set-up by generations, instead of by families, is different from that used by J. G. S. for the eight earlier branches, but J. G. S. is so appreciative of Mr. Scovell's loyalty and industry that he has willingly accepted the different arrangement, rather than revise Mr. Scovell's painstaking history. Explanation of numbers, signs and abbreviations used by Mr. Scovell are as follows: The numbering conforms to the system used throughout the Genealogy. An asterisk (*) after the name of a descendant indicates that such descendant died unmarried and without issue. An obelisk or dagger (†) after the name of a descendant indicates that such descendant resides with parents. The letter B. is an abbreviation for born, D. for died, E. for educated, G. for graduated, M. for married, O. for occupation, P. for political offices held, R. for resides, and W. for war record.

Hannah Saxe was the only daughter and the ninth and youngest child of John Saxe. She was only four years of age when her mother died on January 10, 1791. She early became the hausfrau in her father's home and continued as such until his death on March 13, 1808, being his comfort and his closest confidant during his declining years. She was married at Highgate on March 5, 1813, to Josiah Boardman Scovell of Orwell, Vermont, who was an officer in the Vermont Militia during the War of 1812 and had met her while conducting military operations along the Canadian border in northern Vermont.

Her brother, Peter Saxe (60), in a post-script to his letter to Elizabeth Jewett, proposing their marriage, wrote: "Sister Hannah has just joined heart and hand with Colonel Scovell of Orwell; I guess it is a pretty good match." They had seven children, all born in Orwell, and all of their sons were named after naval heroes of the War of 1812. Her husband was the son of Thomas Scovell, Jr. who was a member of 1st Lieut. Samuel Nichols' Company in Colonel Benjamin Bellows Regiment. That Company marched from Lempster and Newport on the Alarm of June 29, 1877, to reinforce the garrison at Fort Ticonderoga. Her husband was a farmer at Orwell and in 1836 moved with his family to Cambria, Niagara County, New York, where he owned several farms and where he died December 17, 1855. He was buried in the Cambria Centre Cemetery, where, in the family lot, are also buried his mother, Rachael Boardman Scovell, his wife, Hannah Saxe Scovell, his daughter, Fidelia Scovell McCollum, and his brother-in-law, Peter Saxe. Her son, Thomas Scovell, inherited the farms in Cambria, and she resided with him in Cambria until her death there on March 20, 1859. She was brought up a Lutheran and after her marriage, united with the Congregational Church. All of her children were brought up as Congregationalists. Her daughter, Fidelia, married Hiram McCollum of Lockport, who later became a Roman Catholic; and all of his descendants, so far as learned, have been reared in the Roman Catholic faith. Her other descendants, so far as learned, have been protestants and many of them have held important spiritual and temporal offices, especially in churches of the Presbyterian and Congregational denominations. Her education was the best that the times and circumstances permitted. She spoke, read and wrote in German as fluently as in English. All of her children were educated at Lewiston Academy, where her nephew, John Godfrey Saxe (602) was one time principal; and her husband founded a family scholarship at Oberlin College where four of their grandchildren were educated. Her husband was a Whig in politics, but advised each of his sons as they attained majority to identify themselves with the Abolitionist Party. She was a loving, sensible and efficient mother, though a strict disciplinarian in her family. Her daughter, Juliette, frequently told of being punished by her for picking up a pear to eat on the Sabbath, which had fallen from a tree near the kitchen door, the rule being that only such pears as had been picked up before the Sabbath might be eaten on that day.

In 1861, her son, Oliver Perry Scovell (906), and her nephew, Charles Jewett Saxe (601), were both members of Assembly; and in the sketch of the former in "Biographical Sketches of the State Officers and Members of the Legislature of the State of New York in 1861," published that year, it is stated that "His paternal ancestors were genuine Yankees, and his maternal German, the latter having belonged to the Royal Family of Saxe-Gotha, Germany, from which Prince Albert of England and all the Saxons of this country—including John G. Saxe, the famous poet—are descended." This statement was based on what his mother had related to her children. Mr. Scovell, adds: "The descendants of Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, as shown in the Almanach de Gotha, published since 1764 at Gotha, have occupied the thrones as Kings or Queens of Great Britain, Germany, Russia, Spain, Belgium, Norway, Prussia, Bulgaria and Roumania, and as rulers of many principalities and dukedoms. The striking personal resemblances of Rev. Peter Saxe (302), Charles Jewett Saxe (601), Oliver Perry Scovell (906), Lilian Elizabeth Saxe Colt (4093), Erwin Scovell Jewett (9011), Josiah Boardman Scovell (9067), and Howard Atwell Saxe (60311), and other members of the family, to certain of the ruling descendants of the House of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, leads to the conclusion that the story of Hannah Saxe, as to her father's connection with that royal house, is more than mere tradition."

In the one hundred seventeen years since the marriage of Josiah Boardman Scovell and Hannah Saxe, they have had over one hundred eighty direct descendants; but the bearers of the Scovell name have not multiplied in that family line, for only three of their male descendants are now living who bear the Scovell surname, one each in the fourth, fifth and sixth generations of the Saxe Family in America, namely, Josiah Boardman Scovell of Lewiston, and Robert Jameson Scovell, and his son, Rolf Scovell, both of Antwerp, Belgium.
