After _____ Stewart married _____ Norris, they came to the United States and stopped a while in Pennsylvania and went from there to Kentucky. He was a Captain of a Company of Indian fighters called "Stewart's Spies," and founded one Stewart Station in Kentucky. After being in Kentucky a while he returned to Red Stone Country, Pennsylvania, where William, their son was born. They again left Pennsylvania and returned to Kentucky.

NORRIS

_____ Norris, Grandmother of James Stewart, was born in Scotland of a family noted for longevity, an Uncle of hers living to be 120 years old. Her father was a noted wrestler. It is said that a wrestler, hearing of him, made the journey to the home of Mr. Norris, purposely started a quarrel with him and in the encounter which followed was worsted by Norris, who had his coat torn in the struggle. After the battle was over, the stranger explained that he had come purposely to test the wrestling powers of Norris and the quarrel was made up, but Norris remarking, "As you tore my coat I'll tear yours," took the garment of the other and tore it apart. The family name of Norris was borne by one of the descendants of the union of Stewart and Norris as a given name, viz: William Norris Stewart, brother of James.

The noted Pioneer, Simon Kenton, remained at their home over night while on a trip east, when they were living in Kentucky or after they had gone to Ohio. William lived in Ohio until November 14, 1827, when he, with the family of one of his sons, went to Indiana and settled just west of Yorktown, Delaware County, where he lived until his death which occurred Jan. 7, 1836, at the age of 65 years. He is buried on the farm now (1903) owned by David Campbell, just west of Yorktown, Ind. He kept tavern part of the time during the 1812 war. It was a favorite place of the soldiers of that war for the reason that one of his rules was never to charge a soldier of an American army anything for what they got. JAMES STEWART

James Stewart, 4th child of William and Nancy Mayhall Stewart, was born December 28, 1801, in Mason Co., Kentucky.

He was nine years old when he went with the rest of the family to Clinton Co., Ohio, May, 1811. Worked for his father until about 24 years of age, when not at home on the Kanawha river. He has been attentively listened to by his grandchildren while relating many anecdotes of his youth, two of which most distinctly remembered are as follows:

“While working on the Little Kenawha river our rations became inferior to our tastes, the beans in particular, having mixed among them rather thickly a kind of worm that made them unpalatable. We called a council and sent the Overseer word that we would not work any more until we got better beans. Not much attention was given us until we refused to go to work, and as we were firm in the stand we had taken, we were given better rations immediately and then went to work." This was a small strike in early times although he never called it such. The other relating the nearest he ever came to fighting, was as follows:

"While working in the woods I had for a partner a big quick tempered Irishman to whom I gave a fall accidentally by cutting off a piece of timber on which he was standing. He blamed me, saying I did it intentionally, and immediately prepared to fight. As he was considerably larger than I, I stepped to a little higher position when he accused me of wanting to take advantage of him. I explained why I did it and he, seeing I was fair and his temper having somewhat cooled, offered peace and I quite willingly accepted."

When about 14 years old in leaping a fence he threw an ankle out of place and not being properly taken care of it was always after that somewhat crooked and caused him some trouble. He married Matilda McBeth March 16, 1826. She was born in Brown Co., Ohio, August 1, 1797, of Scotch parents named Alexander and Nancy McBeth. They had 3 children, Nancy Ann, Edwin Ruthven and Alexander. Matilda McBeth died October 18, 1832. He married Drusilla Reynolds, daughter of William and Elizabeth Tuggle Reynolds, November 5, 1833, in Clark Co., Ohio. They have nine children, viz: Matilda, Elizabeth Ann, Maria Rebecca, Malinda Ruth, William Henry Harrison, John Alexander, Mary Jone, James Marion, and Henry Reynolds.

He came on horseback to Indiana, visiting his father and brother who had gone to that state and he also intended locating there, but as he afterward said "at that time I would not have taken a farm there if it had been given me." However, he bought two lots on what is now Jackson St., Muncie, Indiana, and near High Street, paying for them $11.00 but sold them shortly afterward for $25.00, making what he thought a very good bargain. Deed recorded November 18, 1834. In 1843 he went with his family in wagons from Clark Co., Ohio, to Delaware Co., Indiana, starting the latter part of November on a nice day. The first night they stayed at a tavern, "The Sign of the Black Horse," near Springfield, Ohio. The second day was cold and snowy, a sudden change having taken place during the night. The second night was passed at a house near Troy, Ohio. The third near Greenville, Ohio, and the fourth near Winchester, Indiana. The fifth and last near Windsor, Indiana. The trip was very rough as the weather was very cold during the entire trip after the first day, and the roads very rough. They arrived in Delaware County, Indiana, either the last of November or the first of December without any serious mishap. He settled three miles east of Daleville, Delaware Co., Indiana, deed recorded Dec. 30, 1844. Engaged in farming, bricklaying and brick making. We very successful. The deed was transferred from Henry Miller to James Stewart Aug. 17, 1848. Many of the old brick houses in Delaware Co., are of his work. The original brick building on site of present Y. M. C. A., S. Jefferson, Muncie, Indiana, was built by him, also Stewart's Drug Store Building on East Main Street, Muncie, Indiana, across the alley from the new bank building (1925). He was County Commissioner Delaware County, 1874. He was an active member of the Disciples of Christ Church and contributed to its support both financially and with his work. He bought the ground upon which was built the first Christian Church of the City of Muncie, Indiana, on the northwest corner of Jackson and Council Sts. After the second battle of Bull Run was fought, he went to hospitals at Washington, D. C., and Annapolis, Md., and to all other hospitals to which the wounded from that battle had been removed in search of his son, Marion, who was shot in the Gainsville fight, but the search was futile and it is supposed that Marion was buried in the field or on the way from the battle ground to the hospital. He also visited his son, Henry, at Chicago, after said son was wounded in a skirmish at Oakolma, Miss., and had been transferred to a reserve corps doing duty guarding prisoners at that place. In 1881 he sold his farm and with his wife made his home with their different children by whom they were loved and revered as they were by all their descendants.

While at the home of their son-in-law, Wm. A. Shoemaker, two miles east of Daleville, Ind., Drussilla Reynolds Stewart died December 14, 1888, at the age of 84 years and 24 days. An upright member of the church of the Disciples of Christ and a worthy woman in every way. Among her good traits is remembered her kindness to her grandchildren. Always after this the children, grandchildren and great grandchildren would on his birthday gather at the home where he happened to be staying on such day and enjoy the day together, in which enjoyment the old gentleman seemed to take a great interest and pleasure. While at Wm. Shoemaker's in 1895 he, by a misstep, fractured one of his ankles to such an extent that he was for awhile unable to get around, but by June, 1895, he had so far recovered as to be able to walk with the assistance of crutches, and went to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Matilda Rader, 417 E. Jackson St., Muncie, Ind. He was elated at being able to get around so well and to show how well he could walk, he attempted to leave the house unaided. There were two steps leading from the door at which he went out, the first of these he stepped from without accident, but forgot about the other and set his crutches as though to walk on a level when the drop of the next step pitched him forward and he fell headlong, breaking his thigh. He did not realize how badly he was hurt and made his way back into the house unaided, but the injury he had sustained was too much for his advanced age, and after five days of intense suffering, through which he was very patient, he died July 3, 1895, aged 93 years, 6 months and 5 days. He was buried with his wife, Drusilla Reynolds Stewart, in the Saunders cemetery on the farm of Wm. A. Shoemaker, 1½ miles east of Daleville, Indiana. He fell the 28th day of June, 1895, the day he was 93½ years old.

JAMES MARION STEWART

James Marion Stewart, eighth child of James and Drusilla Reynolds Stewart was born August 22, 1842 in Clark County, Ohio. Went to Delaware County, Indiana, Nov. or Dec., 1843. He was the baby during the trip and occupied one wagon with his mother and sister, Jane, and on that account did not suffer much from the hardships of the journey. He lived with his father until 19 years old when he enlisted in Co. E. 19th Regt. Indiana Volunteer Infantry Capt. Luther B. Wilson, Aug. 21, 1861. Letters from him still in possession of the family show that he was at Ft. Baxler, Fairfax County, Va., Sept. 27, 1861 and at Arlington Heights, Ft. Craig, Fairfax County, Va. Oct. 16th. November 1st and December 8th 1861 and January 28th and February 26th 1862. After a year's service, his company was engaged at the fight of Gainsville, just preceeding the battle of 2nd Bull Run. As they were going to the front, Marion said to a comrad, "This is going to be a hard fight." He was shortly after seen to fall by this same comrade. In the retreat which followed, he was seen lying on his face by Capt. Wilson, who turned him over and questioned him as to how bad he was hurt. To this he made no reply but asked, "How is the battle likely to go?" These were, as far as is known the last words he ever uttered. Alexander Stewart, a son of John Stewart, who was a cousin of Marion, went back to the field to look for Marion's body. He could not find it and was captured by the Confederates while looking for it. The papers at the time gave an account of the battle and a list of the killed and wounded, among which was one reading, "James M. Stewart wounded in the breast severely." There was also an account of a man, name not given dying in an ambulance on the way from the battlefield to the hospital and being buried by the roadside. As his body was never seen among the dead on the field by anyone who knew him and as his father could find nothing of him in the hospitals to which the wounded from the battle were taken, all of which he visited, it has been supposed that he was mortally wounded and died in the ambulance and was buried by the roadside, as the man spoken of August 23, 1862, aged 20 years and 6 days.

After the commencement of the Civil War and after his brother, Marion had been killed, during the Morgan Raid in July 1863, they were cutting wheat at Jonas Shoemakers. Henry was binding and his father was driving the reaper, Uncle Jonas came and took his place and told him they had sent for him to go in the service. He went past where his father was, who gave him five dollars. He had enlisted at Middletown and went from there to Indianapolis under Capt. Fred Tykle, got as far as Cincinnati, was ordered back and mustered out, being gone only a week. On Aug. 1, 1863, he enlisted in Co. G, 7th Ind. Cavalry, Captain Walter K. Scott, who resigned in 1864. After that his Captain was William A. Ryan. Letters from him show that he was at Columbus, Kentucky, Dec. 8, 1863. At Memphis, Tenn. February 27 and March 14, 1864. Camp Douglas, Chicago, Ill. On Feb. 10th and 22nd, Apr. 27th and June 17, 1865. He was wounded in a skirmish at Okolona, Miss., Feb. 22, 1864. In a letter to his sister Jane, dated at Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 27, 1864, he thus describes it. "I left Hickman, Ky. and have been marching and fighting nearly all the time since I left there. We started on the march about two weeks ago, it was said at the time, for Mobile, Ala. We marched for about a week when we began to hear fighting occasionally and shortly after we started on the retreat. We retreated one day and night when we came into a small town the same time the Rebs came in on another road. We formed in line of battle and the Rebs did also. Our skirmishers kept firing occasionally but we soon fell back and retreated. We had not gone far until they were after us. We formed again and gave them a volley or two and then fell back. Our Company lost one man named Jacob Miller in the skirmish. We formed again in the evening and gave them a charge. We went into it right but lost six or eight men. There I got a slight pop in the shoulder and my horse was shot four times. He carried me about forty rods from the field before he fell. Alf was with me when he fell. He dismounted and let me take his horse. I rode all night and until noon the next day when I got in an ambulance and rode the rest of the way here. None of the boys of your acquaintance were hurt except me. Alf captured a rebel horse and marched the rest of the way. The ball that struck me entered down in my back and came out on the top of my shoulder without breaking any bones. I am at the Adams General Hospital, have a good bed and good grub here and I think I will soon be able to join my Regt." The "Alf" he speaks of Alfred Culbertson who had made his home at the home of James Stewart. The giving up of his horse to Henry when the latter was wounded, was an act of self-sacrifice for which he is always given praise when spoken of by any relative of Henry. It is fitting to note that he came through the war unharmed, and now (1896) lives at Anderson, Indiana.

After being wounded, Henry was transferred to Company E. 15th Veteran Reserve Corps at Chicago Illinois, and did duty as guard of prisoners. A letter from him dated at Camp Douglas, Chicago, Illinois, Nov. 22, 1865, says: "I have been transferred to the Veteran Reserve Corps on account of my shoulder. I took a piece of bone from my shoulder yesterday. It is doing very well but I don't think I will ever have the right use of my shoulders." He closes by saying, "Direct to Co. E. Veteran Reserve Corps."

While in Chicago, he was visited by his father. He served here until the close of the war. He came home and married and moved to Missouri, Sept. 4, 1871. Stayed there until Nov. 1873 when they returned to Indiana where they lived until March 19, 1881 when he went to Colorado. On March 26, 1888 a letter was received from him by Linden B. Moffett that he had been and was working in a smelter in Leadville, Colo., March 6, 1892, July 4, 1892, Sept. 9, 1892 Dec. 7, 1892 and April 30, 1893, letters were dated by him to the same person stating that he was still at the same work. From that time on until 1897, he was in that part of the country part of the time on a ranch, and at other times at other employment. He went to Crestone, Colorado, June 23, 1897, and began work on the ranch of George H. Adams, which was southwest of Crestone about seven miles. He worked at haying and teaming. He bought a horse, cart and harness of Peter Welsh for $15.00. He attended the "Carnival of Mountain and Plain," October, 1897. On Sunday, November 21, 1897 he intended to go to Moffat, Colorado, a railroad town about seven miles northwest of the ranch to send an order to Montgomery Ward and Company for some articles of wearing apparel. He hitched his horse to his cart but forgot to buckle the belly band and when he got on the cart to start, the shafts flew up causing the horse to kick. He jumped out and in alighting broke his right leg and sprained his left ankle. He managed to drag himself close enough to the house to be heard but in doing so, filled the wound with dirt and manure from the corral and when one of his fellow workman came to him the bone of the leg was protruding through the flesh and also through a heavy pair of corduroy pants. He was conveyed to the house and John Kinney, foreman under whom Henry was working, telephoned a doctor at Sagwache, Colorado, a distance of twenty-five miles, who gave him instructions to keep the leg bathed in hot water until he came which was three hours. He did so and when the doctor arrived the leg had not swol'en any and he got it set about eight o'clock p. m., Monday, November 22, 1897. Adams took him to the Soldiers' Home at Monta Vista, Colo., Wednesday the 24th. The doctor at the home at Monta Vista called in Dr. Gale for consultation and they decided to cut it off and it was done Thanksgiving Day Nov. 25, 1897, leaving about four inches of bone below the knee. He seemed to get along very nicely but the wound did not heal. He did not think but what he would soon be up and around again. He talked but little but was cheerful, smoked his pipe and read the papers. On December 4, 1897 he wrote a letter to Linden B. Moffett at Muncie, Indiana, which was the last he wrote so far as is known. It read as follows:

Monta Vista, Colorado

December 4th, 1897

Mr. L. B. Moffett,

Dear Nephew:

I will write you a few lines. I have met with bad luck and lost my right leg below the knee. I got it broke the 21st of November, had it set that night. Next morning Mr. Adams brought me here to the Soldiers' Home. After examination here they found they could not save the leg and it was cut off 25th Nov.

I have been flat on my back for two weeks and I don't know how much longer until I can get up. I have the best of attention, four nurses put on on my account, one for every six hours out of the twenty-four. They stay right at my bed. I don't feel much like writing.

Yours,

Address Soldiers' Home, Monte Vista, Colorado. H.
R. Stewart.

He got along very well but the wound would not heal and on December 7, 1897, lock-jaw set in, when he became insensible and continued in this state until he died at 10 o'clock p. m. Thursday, Dec. 9, 1897, aged 52 years and 19 days.
