INTRODUCTION

Lt. Col. William Scott has been claimed by several descendents for membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution, because of his eight years and eight months service. Our own national number in the DAR is 494864. Several times a year we receive letters from persons trying to prove a line of descent from William Scott. Our sources of information have consisted of a SCOTT FAMILY RECORD, compiled by Thomas Seymour Scott, about 1898, and the work we have done in compiling and proving our own line. Since only one copy of Thomas Seymour Scott's record is known to be in existence, it seemed wise to revise and reissue it to make the information more readily obtainable. Thomas Seymour Scott was an able and careful genealogist, obviously working from actual records and the knowledge of older relatives then living. We have found no major errors in his work, although we have found from time to time additional information. In this book we have added to what we had in Thomas Seymour Scott's record and rearranged the book to give it a more modern format.

There were other Scotts in Saratoga Co., N. Y., unrelated to our Scotts. Thomas Seymour Scott does not mention them in his book. However various bits of information about them have come into our hands, so in the back of this book, in a special section, we have included the little we know of them.

To those who search in vain for their ancestry, we can only say that the name Scott was a common one. Many must descend from the other Scotts of Peterborough, and there were other Scott families that came to America.

We would be delighted to hear from anyone who can add to the information contained in this book and can supply additional copies for $<sup>5</sup>5.00 each. Write Mrs. Evans Harrell, 8445 Eustis Farm Lane, Cincinnati, Ohio, 45243.

ANCESTRY OF WILLIAM SCOTT

Thomas Seymour Scott had access to various family letters, which he quotes:

"Hugh Scott, Swatragh, May 16th. 1793 to William Scott, Esq., Milton, Saratoga, Co., N. Y.; Dear and loving Brother: I read with joy your letter. ... According to your advice I did endeavor to get in readiness, but times being so far altered I could not get off my concern for this year at the expiration of which, God willing I mean to be with you. I have conveyed my eldest son, John, to the ship ... My family consists of my wife, four boys, one daughter with me and all small ... The boy that is gone to you, if it pleases God he ever reaches you, I hope you will have a fatherly care over him. He is well advised to be obedient to you." Thomas Seymour Scott adds that Hugh's son John is said to have gone to Cincinnati, Ohio, and does not further refer to him. It also would seem that although Hugh Scott expressed his intention of coming to America, that his plans were probably not realized.

"Archibald Scott, Swatragh, June 27th. 1836. To his dear Cousin Col. Lewis Scott, Greenfield Center, Saratoga Co., N. Y. ... Often heard my father, when alive, saying that he had only one brother who emigrated to America ... I live in the town of Swatragh and hold a small piece of land, I have got six of a family, three sons and three daughters. I have two brothers yet alive, and one sister. My sister lives in Scotland, and my two brothers live in the Town of Swatragh. I can say nothing about your Mother's friends. I heard my Mother saying when alive that it was Rosannagh

Tait that they called my aunt by my Uncle William Scott who went to America, and that she was bred some place near Garvagh in the County of Londonderry, but there are no Tait's living there at this time. My Father died about 19 or 20 years ago. My Mother is dead about six years since. When you write direct to care of John Wallace post master, Garvagh to be forwarded."

"Archibald Scott, Swatragh, 17th May 1837. To his Cousin Col. Lewis Scott, Greenfield Center, Saratoga Co., N. Y. ... I occupy a small farm in Swatragh, live by my industry. I have six children, three boys and three girls. My eldest boy 15 years of age and the next other 13 who are also industrious."

"Archibald Scott, Swateragh, Garvagh, County Derry Ireland 8 June 1837. To Lewis Scott ... I am the son of Hugh Scott of Swateragh ... a blacksmith. And the son of old Archibald Scott ... a blacksmith also. And this Archibald was father to William, and your grandfather and mine also. He lived in the Parish of Aryhadaway and Macasquin (camus Benn) all in County Derry. ... I sent to you in Aug. 1836 and a second lately, but has not time to reach you yet, and having a favorable opportunity of my neighbor Mr. Scilly ... I have 3 sons and 3 daughters, all a thriving hardy race, bred to industry, and getting a share of education as they advance. I am 45 years of age, blessed with good health, my wife a frugal agreeable and attentive to her domestic concerns ... I have two brothers Alex. and William, each have their families, and one widow sister Jane who has a family, they are all living agreeably in the fear of God - the love of their acquaintances, and support themselves by their industry. My brother William is a blacksmith, and is a smart handy tradesman. Your Grandfather by your Mother was John Tate of Garvagh, he was a very respectable Woolen Merchant, he lived in good esteem among his fellow citizens, and died lamented."

"Archibald Scott to Lewis Scott, February the 16 1852. Sir: I take the liberty of writing to let you know that my name is Archibald Scott from the County Derry, Ireland, and I landed in America the third of June 1851, and I stop with a Mr. A. Baldwin of Yonkers, and my father's name is Archibald Scott, and he told me he had some friends in a place called Greenfield, Saratoga County, State of New York." Thomas Seymour Scott refers to, but does not quote, another letter from the same place, March 12th. 1852, which contained no additional information. He comments that this Archibald Scott is said to have returned to Ireland.

From the above it is evident that William Scott was one of two sons of Archibald Scott, a blacksmith of Aryhadaway and Macasquin, County Derry, Ireland.

Thomas Seymour Scott tells us that William Scott used a Crest upon the handles of the spoons in his camp chest, and that he used the same crest on the panels of his carriage after the Revolution. From this he deduces that the Scott family came from Hassendean (now Jedburgh), County of Roxburgh, Scotland. Between 1672 and 1743 they emigrated to Ireland.

In "The General Armory" by Sir Richard Burke Harrison, 59 Pall Mall, London, Eng. is recorded: "Adam Scott (Hassendean 1672) Or. on a bend Az. a star of six points between two crescents ar. In base a bow and arrow of the second. Crest: A hand holding a pole = ax ppr. Motto: Trustue and True" It was this crest which William Scott used.

William Scott "called Alexander Scott of Peterborough an uncle." We believe there may have been four brothers, John, Archibald, William and Alexander Scott. We emphasize that we have nothing to prove the following, but strongly suspect that it is so. They were all in Peterborough, except Archibald, and Archibald's son, William went to Peterborough to be with at least one uncle, Alexander. The ages of the men and the similarity of the names that they gave to their children makes it a strong possibility that they were related. For reference see History of Peterborough, N. H. by Albert Smith (1876), also Inscriptions on Gravestones in the two old Cemeteries on the East Hill in Peterborough, N. H.

Four brothers:

- i. John Scott, b. c. 1706 in Ireland, d. Peterborough, N. H., 6 June 1798, aged 92.
- ii. Archibald Scott, b. c. 1710, who had two sons, William and Hugh. William Scott was the progenitor of the family that is the subject of this book.
- iii. William Scott, b. c. 1713, d. Peterborough, N. H., 2 Nov. 1795, aged 82. He m. c. 1740, Margaret Gregg, b. c. 1717, d. Peterborough, 3 Oct. 1797, aged 80. He came to America from Colraine in Northern Ireland in 1736, settled in Hopkinton, Mass., then moved to Peterborough in 1739 or 1740. He was called by Albert Smith "son of William", which could be a clue to the father of all the brothers. Children: Ellen, Mary, David, Thomas, Hannah, William and Margaret.
- iv. Alexander Scott, one of the early settlers of Peterborough. He moved to Dublin, N. H. Children: William, David, Alexander, John.

1. William<sup>1</sup> Scott, b. Swateragh, Co. Derry, Ireland c. 1743, son of Archibald Scott, d. N. Greenfield, Saratoga Co., N. Y., 14 July 1815. He m. c. 1760, Rosannagh Tait (Tate). She was the daughter of John Tait, Woolen Merchant of Garvagh, Co. Derry. Possibly she was a descendent of Samuel Tate who died in Dunlandy, County Down in 1727 (Irish Genealogical Guides, vol. 1, Rev. William Clare (1930), p. 100). Sometime after 1783 she divorced William Scott and on 15 March 1786, in Colrain, Mass. Rosanna Scott and Andrew Dalrymple filed their intention to marry (V. R. of Colrain). Andrew Dalrymple was an uncle of Barbara Dalrymple who married Lewis Scott (see below). Andrew and Rosanna (Tait) (Scott) Dalrymple settled in Whittingham, Vt. and were living there in 1800 with two sons, aged 10-16. The sons were named Andrew and Luther. (1800 Vt. census). William Scott also married a second time, c. 1790, Charity Gilliland. She was related to William Gilliland of Essex Co., N. Y. and was said to have been quite well-to-do and to have several slaves. She was greatly esteemed by her step-children.

William Scott and his first wife came to America shortly after their marriage and settled in Peterborough, N. H. William Scott was a merchant. On hearing of the Battle of Lexington, he closed his store, melted his lead weights into bullets and raised a company of 60 men. On arriving at Boston he was transferred to the First New Hampshire Regiment, commanded by Col. John Stark, under the command of General Putnam. Capt. Samuel Cherry, in William Scott's pension application, said, "he crossed over to Nodley's Island and brought off a number of cattle and horses from under the enemies fire, and on the same evening a Brittish armed schooner, having been sent to annoy us, was so harrassed by the fire of our musquetry that they quit the decks and she drifted upon the ways of Winnesemit Ferry, the British barges being sent out to extricate her. William Scott, then a Captain, with a party of soldiers, proceeded into the water and mud, under a brisk fire from the enemy and set her on fire, whereby she was burned down to the water." William Scott also served at the Battle of Breed's Hill and was in the retreat from Ticonderoga. On 19 Sept. 1777 in the battle with General Burgoyne at Bean's Heights he became entitled to the rank of Major, and the command of the right wing of the regiment devolved upon him. In the course of the day he received a wound by a ball passing through his left thumb, cutting off the small sinews and bones of his hand. When he returned from the Plains of Monmouth and was trying to quell a mutiny he was stabbed by a soldier of the Pennsylvania line. The offender, McGonnagall, was sentenced to death by a Court Marshall, but he was pardoned by General Washington at the request of Major Scott. William Scott was with the western expedition under the command of General Sullivan as Major of the First New Hampshire Regiment. He was acting commander of the Brigade 1782-3. He became a Lieutenant Colonel by Brevet, 10 Oct. 1783. He had 36 battle scars from his eight years and eight months service in the Revolution. Both of his hands were drawn and misshapen from the wounds. His name appears many times in the New Hampshire Revolutionary Rolls. 12 March 1807 he was granted a pension of $25.00 a month.

When his regiment was dissolved in July 1784 he became a merchant in Schenectady, N. Y. In 1786 he moved to Ballston, now Greenfield, N. Y. The first land that he bought he sold to Gen. Samuel Bailey in 1790. He bought a second farm in N. Greenfield that became known as "the homestead". It had 100 acres. In 1793 he was first Supervisor of the town of Greenfield and was re-elected in 1796. 1798-1803 he was Justice of the Peace. In 1812 he built the family home that was in the family for over 100 years. He was buried with full masonic ceremonies in Bailey Cemetery.

His will, in brief, says: "I give my beloved wife Charity Scott the use, improvement and benefit of my Farm on which I now live in Greenfield ... also my personal property ... also the legal services of my black woman Nancy and her daughter Matilda ... I give my grandson John Scott my Fuzee or Musket" [which was taken from an Indian Chief in the expedition under Gen. John Sullivan] ... "my grandson William H. Scott my solver watch ... my grandson William S. Scott my wearing apparel ... my son Lewis Scott 50 acres of land in Greenfield on the road leading from Major Samuel Baileys to Northumberland ... rest divided between my son Lewis and the children of my son John ... to my son Lewis Scott nine elevenths part of my said farm at the decease of my wife Charity ... grandsons William H. Scott and Moses Scott, the two sons of my son, John, deceased to each of them one eleventh part of my said farm at the decease of my wife ... Lewis Scott, at his election shall have the privilege to purchase their two elevenths share ... Charity Scott, Lewis Scott Major Samuel Bailey executors ... signed 11 April 1815, witnessed by Joseph Deuel Jr., James Deuel, Joseph Blackleach." Jas. Allen and James Deuel swore to the appraisal before Samuel Bailey, Justice, 9 Oct. 1815. The appraisal filed 7 June 1816 had an evaluation of about $500.00. The inventory included one black woman 40 years of age and one young black 16 years of age, undoubtedly the slaves mentioned in his will. All of the above filed in the Surrogates Court, Saratoga Co.

Thomas Seymour Scott says that Barbara Dalrymple was slight and short in stature, of sweet disposition, and was considered very handsome.

During the Revolution it is thought that Lewis Scott stayed with a family at Athol, Mass. He settled at Greenfield, N. John Thomas Wilder and Martha Jane Stewart. She d. Wallingford, Pa., 19 July 1960 (Pa. death record). Both are buried at West Laurel Hill Cemetery in Bala, Pa.

Arthur Hoyt Scott graduated from Swarthmore College in 1895, where he had been a founding member of Swarthmore's chapter of Delta Upsilon Fraternity. Delta Upsilon had been his grandfather Hoyt's fraternity at Union College. He went to work for Scott Paper Company after graduating.

We must digress and speak of the history of Scott Paper Company. As related above Seymour Scott and his brother, Irvin, started a commission paper business in Philadelphia in 1867. Seymour was the inside man while Irvin, his younger brother, was salesman, shipper and delivery boy. Irvin had come to Philadelphia with five dollars in his pocket and a borrowed thousand dollars (from an aunt). In 1879 Irvin and his brother, Clarence, bought out Seymour's interest, and with $2,000, which Irvin borrowed from his father-in-law, they started what is now Scott Paper Company. By 1881 they were able to graduate from "push cart" selling to a horse and wagon and began to expand. Their main product was a straw paper wrapping used extensively by butchers. When they lost their exclusive franchise for the straw paper they changed to a manilla type paper, which was so superior that straw paper eventually lost its market. With the advent of modern plumbing, Irvin saw the opportunity to sell toilet tissue. The idea was a new one and only a limited market existed for it. In the Victorian nineties it was an "unmentionable" product of the first degree. Toilet tissue could not be advertised, nor even placed on public display. Irvin Scott proposed that they "ghost manufacture" the tissue for merchants that wished to carry the product. Each buyer could name his own specifications and label. As a private label converter Scott cut and packaged more than 2,000 different brands for their customers. They even tried diversifying into the bicycle business. But the "Great Scott" bicycle venture was dropped when bicycling lost its popularity. When Arthur Hoyt Scott joined the company in 1895, it was showing signs of being established and producing a profit.

Where Irvin Scott was an opportunist, with instincts of the conventional trader, Arthur Scott was a man of vision whose ideas embraced tomorrows rather than todays. His first proposal was that the company do away with the multitude of private labels and concentrate on just a few brands of high quality. To the older men in the company, this meant doing away with the greater part of their business and the idea was not met with enthusiasm. But Arthur Scott was tenacious and he kept promoting his ideas, that only with a few really good quality controlled products could the company ever become anything. In 1902 the company purchased from Descerna the exclusive right to produce Waldorf Tissue. It became in time the largest produced brand in the world and demonstrated what a quality controlled product could do. Other brands were added to the line. When Arthur Scott heard that a Philadelphia school teacher was cutting up paper and distributing it to her pupils to try and stop an epidemic of colds, he added a tissue towel to the line, incidently making use of an extra heavy roll of crepe paper which the company had received by mistake.

The panic of 1907 almost meant the end of the company, but Arthur Scott's mother, Sarah Frances (Hoyt) Scott appeared at a company meeting and with these words urged and inspired them to continue, "Winter lies ahead, our men have families to clothe and feed and keep warm. For them we must strive to find some way to carry on; then, if we must fail, we will all go down together." Prices were lowered and all thought of profit temporarily forgotten, but soon the company had more orders than they could handle and began to progress again. By 1910 they set out to establish their own pulp mill. A bond issue of $100,000 was issued and expansion of plant and equipment begun which continues to the present day. 1913 saw the end of the private brands. Arthur Scott continued to promote standardization and quality control. In 1919 Scott Paper Company appropriated more than $100,000 for advertising.

Arthur Hoyt Scott's business creed was "To produce in volume products of the highest possible quality, to sell these products at the lowest possible prices, and to tell the public about them through extensive advertising." But this was not the entire story of his success. He also believed that the company could not be greater than the men working for it. For many years he was in charge of the selling operations of the company. He was an inspiration to the men working under him. Not only kind, he was interested in their personal welfare as well as their business and professional progress. Every employee was urged to improve himself and Scott Paper Company encouraged them to take courses of study at company expense and made available speakers and programs to inspire them. He thought of his employees as a Scott Paper Company family, a feeling still observable in Christmas parties and the Scott Tissue Broadcast.

Thomas B. McCabe, who became president of Scott Paper Company soon after Arthur Scott's death, writing in 1967, says, "With the passage of years my regard for him has increased. I think he was one of the most interesting and remarkable men that I have ever met. He was greatly admired and loved by his friends and business associates because he was an idealist with the courage and determination to make his dreams come true. He was a very kind man and was always inquiring of the health of his friends and their families. He was constantly making suggestions to his friends about what they could do to improve their lives and their competence in their jobs. Even though he was a friendly and kind man, he could become very angry with people who resorted to shady deals, and he would wage a relentless fight against people who wanted to compromise with his standards of quality and excellence in business. In temperament he was very much like his mother, Mrs. E. Irvin Scott."

"I consider Arthur Scott to be one of the closest and best friends of my business career. He stimulated me constantly to excellence in every undertaking. He would assign me impossible tasks to perform and then smile if I protested my inability. Once I recall him saying to me, "Tom, I am disappointed because I thought you were ambitious. If you cannot reach the goal I have outlined, you are not the man I think you are."

In 1920 Arthur Hoyt Scott became president of Scott Paper Company, succeeding his father who became Chairman of the Board. When Arthur Scott died he left behind him a group of young men, well indoctrinated in his philosophy and well able to carry on the company to the even greater heights they have achieved since.

Arthur Hoyt Scott and his wife liked to travel. From their honeymoon trip to New Zealand and Australia, a trip of almost a year during which they were in parts of New Zealand that no other white woman had ever seen, Arthur Scott was inspired by the possibilities of selling paper products abroad. From Nova Scotia came the idea for the company to enter pulp producing of their own. His wife, Edith (Wilder) Scott continued to travel after his death, going to almost every point on the globe.

Very interested in horticulture, Arthur Hoyt Scott was one of the founders of the American Peony Society and was active in the American Iris Society. He hybridized many of his own varieties. The arboretum at Swarthmore College is dedicated to him and his theory that horticulture should be taught by visual demonstration. The arboretum features plants hardy to the Philadelphia area. Arthur Scott felt that if a person was interested in horticulture and loved flowers that he had to be a good man.

He was an antique collector at a time when antiques were considered just so much second hand furniture. His daughter remembers as a child being embarrassed by the old pieces he brought home, when all of her friends had matched suites! She and the rest of the family treasure these family heirlooms today.

Just another small example of his vision is the fact that he had one of the first Oldsmobile cars.

Owen Moon graduated from Swarthmore College in 1894 and lived in Trenton, N. J., where he established a suburban trolley line and was associated with the Essex Rubber Co. as president and treasurer. In 1900 he became principal owner and publisher of the Trenton Times. In 1924 he sold his holdings and in 1925 bought the Winston-Salem Journal in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Two years later he bought the Twin City Sentinel in Winston-Salem. He served as an interim president of Scott Paper Co. between the death of his brother-in-law in 1926 and the election of Thomas B. McCabe in 1927. In 1930 he established WSJS, Winston-Salem's first radio station. In 1909 he bought an old farm house for his summer home in South Woodstock, Vt., named it Upwey Farm, and eventually acquired most of the land around South Woodstock, turning Upwey into a show-place raising Morgan and Suffolk Punch horses, and Jersey cows. He organized the Vermont Trail Ride and the Morgan Horse Association. After he retired he made Vermont his permanent home, owning as well as the farms in South Woodstock, a city house on the green in Woodstock. His many enterprises around Woodstock included building the first ski tow in the United States on Suicide Six and an interest in the local theatre and Woodstock Inn. A promoter in every sense of the word, he lived well if precariously at times and was admired and loved by the ones who knew him. Although he was childless, he loved children and provided wonderful summers of houseparties for his niece, Eleanor Scott and her friends, and later for her children.

Philadelphia, Pa., 12 April 1901, son of Philip Ellsworth Guckes and Mary Rebekah Bainbridge. He d. Camden, Maine, 8 Nov. 1964.

In 1966 we produced a book about Philip Exton Guckes and his ancestry which has been placed in the New England Historic Genealogical Society library and also in the library of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, so we will not here repeat that account.

Eleanor Scott, as a child, suffered from measles and mastoid, which left her hearing impaired. As a consequence, she attended Mary Lyons School in Swarthmore, Pa., but did not graduate. However, her interest in reading and music has helped her become as well educated as if she had continued her schooling. Her many interests encompass travel all over the world and volunteer work. During the 2nd World War she was in charge of the Motor Corps in Wayne, Pa. Most recently she has become an accredited brailist and spends many hours transcribing books for the blind. Our purpose is not to give a discerning biography of someone living, who could be embarrassed or displeased by what is said, but to point out some of the accomplishments and let the record speak for itself.

OTHER SCOTTS OF SARATOGA COUNTY, NEW YORK

Side by side with the descendants of William<sup>1</sup> Scott were other unrelated Scott families in Saratoga County. There is of course the possibility that a relationship could be established before the families came to the United States, but the name Scott meant merely a man from Scotland and hence we doubt any real relationship. Our data of these other Scotts is far from complete, but we include what we have determined for interested descendants.

In Ancient Historical Records of Norwalk, Conn., Edwin Hall (1865), p. 268 is recorded the marriage of a William Scott and Abigail Belden, 1 Jan. 1757. Their children are also listed. As we mentioned above, Cora Estelle<sup>4</sup> Scott married Herbert Waring, a descendant of Daniel Scott of Saratoga County. Among her effects was a Bible, obviously from her husband's family, that contained the following:

The Holy Bible containing the Old and New Testaments with Original Notes, Practical Observations and Chronological Tables, in three volumes (only volume one was in Cora Waring's belongings), Thomas Scott D. D., Philadelphia, 1816. From the date of the Bible it is obvious that many of the entries were copied from an earlier family record.

In History of Ridgefield, Conn., Daniel W.
 Teller (1878) we find among the second purchase of land from the Indians, one of the proprietors, 18 March 1715, was David Scott. At the time of the third purchase,
 22 Nov. 1721, the proprietors include David
 Scott and James Scott. Both of these men were part of the fourth purchase, 4 July 1727.

Note: Mr. Waring informs <sup>Vol. 34-35</sup> us that according to the N.Y.
Gen. & Biog. Rec., Daniel Scott m. 1st Esther Gilbert. She d. 15 April 1802 according to her tombstone. His second wife was Esther Hickok

m. E. H.

It is possible that one of these men was the father of William Scott who married Abigail Belden, for William was of Ridgefield. On p. 48 of the same book, the name of William Scott is included on the muster roll of Capt. Gamaliel Northrup's Company in 1776.

From correspondence with Charles Raymond Waring, RFD #3, Ballston Spa, N. Y. we know that William and Abigail (Belden) Scott moved to Wilton, Conn. from Ridgefield and there Abigail died in 1810. In the Wilton Congregational Church records was found the marriage of William and Abigail "June 1, 1757", the month differing with the record printed by Hall from the Norwalk records. On 27 May 1759 their son, Daniel, was baptised. William Scott Jr. m. Susanna Stuart, 21 Jan. 1778, and had a son, Thomas. Daniel Scott's marriage is not of record in Wilton. In 1805 both William and Abigail (Belden) Scott were listed as members of the Wilton Church. Meanwhile, their son, Daniel, and possibly other children, had moved to Saratoga Co., N. Y.

Daniel Scott was married twice, the second time in 1803, but we do not have the names of his wives. In the early records of the Congregational Church of Greenfield, N. Y., published in the New York Genealogical Biographical Record, we find that Daniel Scott had two sons baptised 24 March 1799, named Thomas and Isaiah. 15 June 1800 he had another son baptised named William Belden. Daniel Scott's will is recorded in Saratoga County and mentions other children, but we have not seen the will. Mr. Waring tells us that William Belden Scott died young. We understand the will mentions sons William and Ira and deceased son, Thomas, and possibly others.

Daniel Scott's son, Thomas Ezra Scott, m. Rosetta Raymond, daughter of Stephen and Hannah Raymond who had come from Connecticut to Ballston, N. Y., where she was born. According to Rosetta Scott's obituary she died Milton, N. Y., at the home of her son-in-law, Aaron Gilbert Waring, 27 Aug. 1886, aged 88 years, 7 months, 27 days. The obituary reports that her husband, Thomas, died in 1827.

From notes of Cora Estelle (Scott) Waring, who died 2 May 1952, and from Mr. Waring's letters, Thomas Ezra Scott and Rosetta Raymond had a daughter, Mary Ann Scott, b. 1825, d. 1917. She married Aaron Gilbert Waring (1826-1891). He died at Splinterville, N. Y., 9 Nov. 1891. They had three children: Jennie Eliza Waring, b. Greenfield, N. Y., 24 Jan. 1851, d. unmarried at Saratoga Springs 25 Feb. 1886 (or 1887) aged 36; Charles Scott Waring, b. 1855, who married first Charlotte E. Bellenger, who died at childbirth, and he married second Gertrude E. Patrick; and Herbert Waring (1859-1941) who married Cora Estelle Scott, a descendant of William<sup>1</sup> Scott. Charles Raymond Waring was the son of Charles Scott Waring, and our correspondent who has supplied much of the information included here.

29 Dec. 1966, Mrs. Leon C. Johnson, Route 1, Box 104, Cygnet, Ohio, wrote us saying, "My great grandfather, John Winfield Scott was born in Saratoga County, 19 Dec. 1815." We have been unable to pinpoint his position in the Scott family. He married Sarah Fuller of Chatauqua, N. Y. and had children, Thomas B., William Hickock and Ira Winfield, also a daughter, Nancy Elizabeth. The names are similar to these other Scotts and we

note Thomas Ezra Scott d. 16 Jan 1827, aged 31 yrs
1 month, according to his tomb stone.

believe they are related. The daughter, Nancy Elizabeth, married Martin Luther Clark, a Lieutenant in the Civil War. Their six children were Maud Louise Clark, Mable Estelle Clark, Blanche Edna Clark, Ida Clark, Lola Clark, and Harley DeWitt Clark. Harley DeWitt Clark married Lucinda Titley of Chicago, Ill. and their only child was Carol Roberta Clark who married Leon Cornelius Johnson. The Johnsons have no children.

Perhaps someday a more complete genealogy of these other Scotts can be compiled.
