THE SAHLER FAMILY.

Abraham Sahler, the founder of the family, in the United States of America, married Elizabeth du Bois, whose parents were the children of two of the sons of Louis du Bois, the ancestor of his branch, in this country. As all the Sahlers are descended from this union, and as Louis du Bois settled here much earlier than Abraham Sahler, I shall write of the former and his family down to the alliance of his great granddaughter, with Abraham Sahler, before writing of the latter and his descendants.

LOUIS DU BOIS

was born October 28th, 1626, at Wicres, a village near the city of Lille, in the province of French Flanders. He was the son of Chretien du Bois, a Huguenot gentleman, of landed estate, near Wicres, who belonged to the leading family of the name in that vicinity, the du Bois, Seigneurs de Beaufermes, and de Bourse, two old family estates. The du Bois are one of the most ancient, noble families of France, and the name is one of the oldest that has come down through the centuries unchanged.

Owing to the persecutions of the Huguenots, Louis du Bois left his native land and sought refuge in the Palatinate, or Paltz, of the Rhine, at its capitol, Mannheim, where he was married October 10th, 1655, in the French Church, to Catharine Blanchan, daughter of Matthew Blanchan, and their two eldest sons, Abraham and Isaac, were born there.

In 1661, Louis du Bois, with his wife and children, came to the New World, and proceeded to the Esopus country, the scene of their great trouble and prosperity, where they settled at the New Village, now Hurley, two and a half miles west of Wildwyck, now Kingston, where he acquired patent lands in 1662, and became the magistrate. Matthew Blanchan and his family came the preceeding year.

A few years after their arrival they passed through a terrible experience—the Second Esopus War—which, fortunately, was of untold benefit to them and their descendants.

On May 30th, 1663, the court at Wildwyck received an order from Governor Stuyvesant, to notify the Esopus Indians to be prepared to receive a visit from him for the renewal of peace, and on June 5th they were notified by Captain Thomas Chambers. They replied: "If peace were to be renewed with them, the Right Honorable Heer Director General should, with some unarmed persons, sit with them in the open field, without the gate; as it was their own custom to meet unarmed when renewing peace, or in other negotiations." This answer was to hide their murderous plot. On the morning of the 7th they visited Wildwyck, and scattered among the houses in a friendly way, pretending that they wished to sell some maize and beans. By this means they hoped to discover the number of men in the village without causing suspicion. When they had been in the place but a short time, some people, on horseback, from the New Village, rushed through the mill gate, calling out: "The Indians have destroyed the New Village." This served as a signal for them and they immediately made a general attack, murdering and wounding the people. They also seized as many women and children as possible, driving them as prisoners outside the gates, plundered the houses, and set the village on fire to the windward. Fortunately, however, when the flames were at their height, the wind changed from south to west, which checked the damage. Most of the men were in the fields, and consequently but few in the village, among whom were Dominie Hermanus Blom, Tjerck Claesen de Witt, Hendrick Jochemse Schoonmaker, Cornelius Barentse Slegt, Roeloff Swartwout, and Captain Thomas Chambers. However, the few, most of whom had neither guns or side arms, put the Indians to flight, apparently with Divine aid. Among the captives from the New Village were the wife and three young sons of Louis du Bois, who remained in captivity three months. By degrees the absent men returned, and some came from the New Village, so that by evening there was quite a number, all of whom did what was possible to guard against any further attacks. Soldiers and necessities were sent for, by the court at Wildwyck, to the council of New Netherland, at New Amsterdam, and the remainder of the summer was spent in negotiations and warfare, for the return of the captives, but without success. It was decided to make war on the Indians, at their new fort, near where the Shawangunk emptied into the Wallkill, early in September, and on the 3d, at about one o'clock in the afternoon, Captain Martin Kregier, of New Amsterdam, a skillful and fearless military leader, led a company of forty-six soldiers, seven citizens, including Louis du Bois, two slaves, and eight horses, under the guidance of a captured Wappinger, with Christoffel Davids, as interpreter, on their expedition. They arrived within sight of the fort, on the 5th, at about two o'clock in the afternoon. As they neared the fort, Louis du Bois pressed on too anxiously, and exposed himself to an Indian, who stood behind a tree, preparing to draw his bow, but from surprise, or fright, his hand trembled, and the arrow did not rest on the bow-string. Before he could shoot, Louis du Bois sprang forward and dispatched him with his sword, running him through with such force that the sword entered a log, and he was obliged to place his foot on the prostrate body, to withdraw it. As they approached nearer, their dogs ran on ahead, among the Indians, who raised the cry: "Swanekers and deers," "White man's dogs," and the soldiers were seen by a squaw, who gave a terrible scream, which thoroughly alarmed the Indians. When the rescuers found they were discovered, they instantly fell upon them. The Indians fought bravely, but not victoriously, and lost their chief, several warriors, women and children, and some were taken prisoners. Twenty-three captives were rescued, and but few of the rescuers were killed or wounded. When the rescuers arrived the Indians were preparing for the murder of the wife of Louis du Bois, who had been placed on a pile of wood, to be burned to death. For her consolation she sang Psalms, the music of which so interested the Indians that they urged her, by signs, to continue, and at the arrival of the rescuers, she was singing the one hundred and thirty-seventh, that of the Babylonish Captives. The rescuers arrived at Wildwyck on the 7th, about noon. The fine lands of the Wallkill Valley had favorably impressed Louis du Bois, and later he formed a company of twelve men, which, in May, 1677, bought from the Indians, a very large tract of land, including the beforementioned valley, the acreage of which has been variously estimated, one being ninety-two thousand one hundred and sixty acres. It extended ten miles on the west bank of the Hudson River, and from there to the Shawangunk Mountains, and included part of the present townships of New Paltz, Rosendale and Esopus, and the whole of Lloyd. "Paltz Rock," on the top of Shawangunk Mountain, was the southwest boundary. The purchase was confirmed by a patent deed from Governor Andross, on September 29th, of the same year. The "Twelve Patentees," as they have since been called, were: Louis du Bois, and his sons, Abraham and Isaac, Abraham Hasbrouck, and his brother, Jean, Christian Deyo, and his son, Pierre, Andre Le Fevre, and his brother, Simon, Louis Bevier, Anthoine Chrispel, and Hugo Frere. They, with their families, slaves, and so forth, removed in the spring of the following year to their new territory, which they named New Paltz, in remembrance of the Huguenot refuge in the "Old World." On the evening of their arrival they undoubtedly had Divine service, which included the reading of the twenty-third Psalm. Their first work was to make temporary shelter, divide the land, and establish the civil government, which was their own idea, and different than that of the Dutch settlements. The "Twelve Patentees," called the "Duzine," were the legislative and judicial body of the place, and this government continued for over one hundred years, until March 31st, 1785, when the township of New Paltz was incorporated. After building suitable houses on the east bank of the Walkill, to which they had removed, they erected a building, to be used as a school house and church, around which was their first burial ground. For a few years they conducted the services without the aid of a minister, but January 22d, 1683, the Reverend Pierre Daillie came to them, and formed the French Reformed Church, with Louis du Bois as elder. He was also Clerk of the Session. During the lives of the Patentees, the French language was used, but shortly after the death of the last, Abraham du Bois, it was succeeded by the Dutch, which was the common tongue, and the church became Dutch Reformed. After living at New Paltz for several years, Louis du Bois removed to Kingston, where he bought, in May, 1686, a house and lot, on the northwest corner of East Front and John streets, and spent his remaining years. He probably died in June, 1696, and was buried in the yard, or beneath the then standing edifice of the First Reformed Church, built in 1680, in the ancient style, with highly-colored windows, bearing the coats-of-arms of the principal families. This was the successor of the first church, which they attended when living at Hurley, built in 1659. In his will he says: "My wife shall have the ordering of the estates; that is to say, to have the profits and perquisites of the same, so long as she remaineth a widow; but in case she cometh to remarry, then she shall have the right half of the whole estate, either land, houses, or any other goods; and the other half shall be divided amongst the children, as above said, equally dealt, and so forth."

He was called in this country Louis the Walloon. In his will, a single tract in the Wallkill Valley, but not within the patent, called the Poughwanganonk property, containing three thousand acres, was given to his son, Cornelius du Bois, and judging from the whole tenor of the will, its value was about one-sixth of his estate. He was a prominent member and officer of the French, later the Dutch Church, at New Paltz, and was elected to civil offices for many years. He married, about 1692, Tryntje Gerritsen, daughter of Gerrit Cornelissen, and granddaughter of Cornelius van Nieuwkirk, and their eldest son,

He was one of the "Twelve Patentees" of New Paltz, and one of its most prominent men; successively lieutenant, captain and major of the militia of the Province of New York, in Ulster County; one the justices of the same county, and its Representative in the Colonial Assembly, in the sessions of 1698-1699 and 1700-1701, and on several other occasions, and was appointed by act of the Assembly, in 1703, commissioner to lay out roads in the said county. Hasbrouck Sahler, son of John Perrine Sahler and Maria Hasbrouck, born in the town of Rochester, Ulster County, New York, married, in Wayne County, Frances Augusta van Deusen, born in the town of Great Barrington, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, daughter of Cratus van Deusen and Marie Louise Wheeler, and they have one son, Louis Hasbrouck Sahler, born in the city of Rochester, Monroe County, New York.

Cratus van Deusen was the son of John van Deusen, III., later called John C. van Deusen, and Rebecca de Freese, daughter of Jacob de Freese and Mary Scott, sister of Colonel Matthew Scott, and granddaughter of Jacob de Freese and Rebecca van Loon.

Marie Louise Wheeler, wife of Cratus van Deusen, was the daughter of Isaac Wheelër and Catharine van Deusen, and granddaughter of Samuel Wheeler, of Plainfield, Windham County, Connecticut, and Olive Hall (daughter of Colonel John Hall,) and a descendant of the Wheelers, who settled at Concord, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, in 1639.

Catharine van Deusen, wife of Isaac Wheeler, was the daughter of Isaac van Deusen, III., later called Isaac I. van Deusen, and Christina Spoor, granddaughter of Isaac van Deusen, Junior, or II., and Katharine Spoor, (daughter of Jacob Spoor, and granddaughter of Captain John Spoor, of the Revolutionary Army,) and great granddaughter of Isaac van Deusen, I., of van Deusen Manor, Great Barrington.

John C. van Deusen was the son of Conrad van Deusen, of the "Stone House," and Rachel Hollenbeck, and grandson of Isaac van Deusen, I., of van Deusen Manor, and Fische Burghardt, daughter of Coonrod Hendrickse Burghardt and Gesie Hendrickse van Wie, (daughter of Hendrick Gerritse van Wie,) and granddaughter of Hendrick Coenraedtse Burghardt and Marya Janse Franse van Hoesen, daughter of Jan Franse van Hoesen and Volkje Jurriaanse.

Isaac van Deusen, I., of van Deusen Manor, was the son of Abraham van Deusen, of Albany, and Kingston, and Jacomyntje van Schoonhoven, (daughter of Guert Hendrickse van Schoonhoven and Maritie Cornelise,) grandson of Mattheus Abrahamsen van Deursen, of Albany, and Helena ———, and great grandson of Abraham van Deursen, of Deursen, North Brabant, Netherlands, and ——— van der Linde, sister of the Reverend Harmanus Antonides van der Linde, of Naerden.

Coonrod Burghardt was a prominent citizen of Kinderhook, Columbia County, New York, and extensively engaged in the fur trade with the Indians along the New England Path. In the spring of 1717 he and Elias van Schaick applied to the governor, for a license to purchase four thousand acres of land, near Kinderhook. The land was laid out in the fall of the same year by a Government surveyor, but was immediately claimed by Henry van Rensselaer, of Claverack Manor, on the strength of an alleged prior patent, and this led to a controversy, which continued many years, and finally resulted unfavorably for Burghardt and van Schaick. However, it was probably in consequence of this that Burghardt connected himself with the interests of the settlers in the Housatonic Valley, which alliance proved of great benefit to himself and his descendants. As he was familiar with the Indians, their language and customs, and fitted by natural qualities, he was employed by the Settling Committee of the Housatonic Colony, to purchase from them the land in the southwestern part of Massachusetts, now southern Berkshire County, for the formation of the Housatonic Townships, in which he was very successful, and was present at the completion of the transaction at Westfield, Hampden County, Massachusetts, acting as the interpreter, and one of the witnesses to the deed, which conveyed a very large tract, which included the present towns of Sheffield, Great Barrington, Mount Washington, and Egremont, the greater part of Alford, and large portions of West Stockbridge, Stockbridge and Lee. About 1730 he removed to the Townships, part of which were later formed into the town of Great Barrington, where he built a mansion, and acquired several thousand acres of land. Of him it was written: "He was a man of great intelligence, enterprise and public spirit, as well as of sturdy integrity, appearing to have been the most wealthy of all the settlers, and to have maintained an influential position among them, and may fairly be entitled to be called the founder of the Housatonic Colony."

His son-in-law, Isaac van Deusen, settled in 1735, in the Upper Housatonic Township, where he acquired a very large amount of the finest lands, some being on the banks of the Housatonic and Williams rivers, and on Monument Mountain, made famous by its majestic beauty, far-spreading views, Indian legends, and Bryant, and formed van Deusen Manor, on which he built the manor house, long since removed, after gradually falling into decay; the brick house, north of the van Deusen burial-ground; the brown stone house, at the western base of Monument Mountain; a house farther south, also near the base of the mountain, which was removed many years ago, and the white stone house, in that part of the Upper Township, called the Hoplands, which was later incorporated in the town of Lee. These houses were all of Dutch architecture, and beautifully located; the site of the manor house, south of the family and slave burial-grounds, is one of the finest in the region, commanding one of the most charming views in the Berkshire Hills,—of Monument Mountain and others, the valley, through which flows the graceful Housatonic, outlined by luxuriant trees, and a glimpse of the Dome of the Taconics. On his lands was also a house, built in 1759, by John Williams, one of the earliest and most prominent citizens, now in the village of Van Deusen, and the oldest house in the town of Great Barrington. He also owned lands in the neighboring towns of Stockbridge, Egremont and Richmond. His sons added largely to their inherited estates, and the van Deusens, together with Coonrod Burghardt, were the largest land owners in Western Massachusetts. Isaac van Deusen and his sons, were among the founders of Saint James Episcopal Church, in Great Barrington, and were liberal contributors to the first edifice, a very fine one for those days, built in 1764.

Louis Hasbrouck Sahler, son of J. Hasbrouck Sahler and Frances Augusta van Deusen, is descended from Louis du Bois, the Patentee, through his sons, Abraham, the Patentee, David and Solomon, and doubly from the latter, through two of his children, Isaac, and Sarah, wife of Symon van Wagenen; from Christian Deyo, the Patentee, through three of his children, Pierre, the Patentee, Marie, wife of Abraham Hasbrouck, the Patentee, and Margaret, wife of Abraham du Bois, the Patentee; from Isaac van Deusen, of van Deusen Manor, through his sons, Coonrod and Isaac, Junior or II.; from Coonrod Burghardt, the founder of the Housatonic Colony, the parent of Great Barrington, and neighboring towns; from Tjerck Claesen de Witt, Hendrick Jochemse Schoonmaker, and Cornelius Barentse Slegt, among the few who fought the Indians at the Kingston massacre, during the "Second Esopus War"; from Anthony de Hooges, Secretary of the Manor of Rensselaerwyck; from Jacob Aartsen van Wagenen, Daniel Perrine, and Jochem Schoonmaker, and from the families of Bruyn, Blanchan, Burgess, Bratt de Noorman, Clearwater, Ten Eyck, Esselsteyn, de Freese, Hoornbeek, Hollenbeck, Hall, Homes, Kortright, Pels van Steltyn, Roosa, Spoor, Scott, Thorell, Vernooy, Wheeler, Westbrook, Webber, van Breestede, van Hoesen, van Keuren, van Loon, van Rotmers, van Schoonhoven, and van Wie.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

SAMUEL E. GROSS.

As an active man in business, a promoter of municipal interests, an energetic worker for the advancement and growth of cities and suburban villages, Samuel E. Gross, of Chicago, occupies an extremely high rank. He is the eldest son of John C. Gross and Elizabeth Eberly, and great-grandson of John Gross, a Captain in the Revolutionary Army, and Elizabeth Sahler, and was born November 11th, 1843, in Middle Paxton Township, Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, on the ancestral estate, on the banks of the Susquehanna. In 1845 his parents removed from Pennsylvania to Illinois, settling first in Bureau and later in Carroll County. He received his early education in the district schools and in the Mount Carroll Seminary. On the breaking out of the Civil War, young Gross, then only seventeen years old, but filled with the desire for a soldier's life in the defense of his country, enlisted in the Forty-first Illinois Infantry and went with the regiment on its Missouri campaign. His parents made such strenuous objections on account of his youth that he was mustered out of service and sent home. The following year he entered Whitehall Academy, Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, where he remained until June, 1863. At that time the Confederate forces invaded the State, and so energetically did he act, in his determination to do his share in defending his native State, that on June 29th, he was commissioned First Lieutenant of Company D, in the Twentieth Pennsylvania Cavalry, thus becoming one of the youngest officers of that rank in the army. Active service followed. General Lee's army was pursued from Gettysburg to Virginia, and there were many spirited contests while following the retreating army. Lieutenant Gross was promoted February 17th, 1864, for meritorious services in the field, to the Captaincy of Company K, in the same regiment, and during 1864 and 1865 he campaigned, principally in Virginia. He was in the battles of Piedmont, Lynchburg, Ashby's Gap, Winchester, and many other engagements, being finally mustered out of the service July 13th, 1865, at Cloud's Mills, Virginia, on the close of the war. At that time the city of Chicago was enjoying a special reputation for energetic advancement, in both area and wealth, and Mr. Gross with youth and ambition, and with his previous successes, in looking about for a field of labor, and carefully deliberating on the merits of different cities, determined that this was the place for his work, and in September, 1865, became a resident of the city. Shortly after, he entered the Union College of Law, where he prosecuted his studies with such energy that he was admitted to the bar in 1866. He had, in the meantime, invested in the purchase of a few lots, and in 1867 he built upon them, and while active in the practice of his profession, laid the foundation for a large business. His investment produced such favorable results that he finally became interested in real estate operations as a business. In the winter of 1868-69 he engaged prominently in the establishment of the park and boulevard system for the beautifying of the city, and energetically aided in pushing it to its completion, thus securing to it one of its most attractive features. When the great conflagration of 1871 devastated the city, Mr. Gross seized as many of his valuable papers, deeds, abstracts of titles, etc., as he could, put them into a row boat, and, rowing out from the shore, stored them on a tug. When the conflagration had spent its fury, and nothing was left in the vast area swept by the flames but smoking debris, he returned to the pile of ashes, brick and twisted iron where his office had been, and began business anew. During the dull business period, embracing 1873 to 1879, he devoted himself to literary pursuits and to the study of politics and scientific questions. He also patented several inventions relating to street paving and maps and designed some valuable mathematical instruments. When business began to revive in 1879 and 1880, Mr. Gross decided on undertaking large real estate operations, and selecting, first, the territory lying to the southwest of the city proper, he laid out "New City." In 1882 he began on the northern boundary, and laid out what eventuated in the flourishing village of Gross Park. He secured a station from the Chicago and Northwestern Railway management and had the satisfaction of witnessing, in a very few years, a suburb with a population of five thousand people, on a section of land that had previously been devoted only to the raising of vegetables. In 1883 Mr. Gross began the work of building homes for people of moderate means, requiring only a small cash payment, and agreeing to receive monthly payments from the purchaser, until the amount was fully paid. It was the inauguration of a new system in Chicago, and won popular favor from the outset. During the first year of its operation he built and sold three hundred houses, and, during a few years succeeding he had built and disposed of more than three thousand; and the business steadily increased. His system was to build up districts hitherto undeveloped, and which would otherwise have remained unimproved. In this way a number of villages were established with graceful habitations, which are now solidly built up portions of the city. In 1886 he founded the town of Brookdale, on the Illinois Central Railway; in 1887 he established the villages of Calumet Heights and Dauphin Park, besides improving a forty-acre subdivision on Ashland Avenue. In 1888 his suburban venture, the opening of "Under the Linden," lying on the northwest of the city, was one of the largest undertaken. During the same year he also improved a large district, situated near Humboldt Park, and erected over three hundred houses near Archer Avenue and Thirty-ninth street. In 1889 the town of Grossdale, one of his most successful ventures, was located on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway, a mile west of Riverside, where a prairie farm of five hundred acres was transformed into a town of beautiful residences, and many fine public buildings, including churches, theater and schools. In 1893 he founded the beautiful suburb of Hollywood on the Des Plaines River. During the period from 1880 to the present year, 1894, Mr. Gross' transactions have been enormous; he has sold over thirty thousand lots; erected and sold over seven thousand houses, and located and established sixteen thriving towns and villages. In securing these grand results, Mr. Gross has confined his efforts entirely to his own methods. He purchases the land and becomes its owner, lays out streets and parks, and makes ornamental and useful improvements; erects railway stations and public buildings; builds substantial and attractive houses; sells at a moderate price to people who will build, and, when necessary, advances the money for the purpose. Notwithstanding the magnitude of his business, reaching to many millions of dollars, it is claimed that he has never foreclosed a mortgage. It is largely on his reputation for generous dealing that he has won the confidence of an enormous clientele, and secured such an immense business. He is now the owner of more than one hundred subdivisions in various parts of the city, containing some twenty-four thousand lots. His fortune is estimated at from four to five million dollars. His success is due primarily to his own natural qualities, and secondarily to his reliance on the desire which exists in every true American heart to possess a home. Although his reputation is that of a multi-millionaire, the United Working Men's Societies showed their confidence in him by nominating him to the mayoralty in 1889, an honor which, from press of private business, he was obliged to decline. Mr. Gross is a member of the Chicago, Union, Athletic, Iroquois, Marquette, Twentieth Century, and Washington Park Clubs, and a patron of the Art Institute, the Humane, and other benevolent societies. He is also a member of the Chicago Union Veteran Club, the Grand Army of the Republic (U. S. Grant Post No. 28), the Western Society Army of the Potomac, and the Sons of the American Revolution; and during the present year he was elected Captain of the newly-formed Chicago Continental Guard, composed of members from the last-mentioned society, and has become a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, of which he has been elected Chairman of the Council. He is also the President of the Chicago Bureau of Charities. In 1886 Mr. Gross made a few months' tour of Europe, during which he inquired extensively into methods of building and city development. In 1889 he visited Mexico, and the cities on the Pacific Coast, and in the latter part of the year made a second visit to Europe, devoting much attention to the Paris Exposition, and again, in 1892, he visited the principal cities of Europe and many in the Orient. So wide is his reputation as a successful operator in real estate that, while in Mexico and also while in Europe, he was solicited to undertake mammoth enterprises in the work of development in those countries; but his time being claimed by Chicago, he was obliged to decline the flattering offers made him. Mr. Gross is a man of robust constitution and a happy disposition, positive in character, but liberal in the reception of the views of others. He has great executive and administrative ability, and is thoroughly practical in all his doings. Highly cultivated in mind and refined in his tastes, he is also genial in temperament and companionable in association. He was married in January, 1874, to Miss Emily Brown, a descendant of an ancient English family. While he has been the architect of his own fortunes, he has, nevertheless, been apparently under the happy influence of a favoring star, for everything he has done has added not only to his own wealth, but has largely benefited the community in which he resides. He occupies a beautiful and commodious residence at the corner of the Lake Shore Drive and Division street, one of the most fashionable quarters of the city.

DANIEL W. GROSS.

Daniel Wustling Gross, son of Abraham Gross and Anna Maria Wustling, daughter of Dr. Samuel Christopher Wustling, a noted German physician, and grandson of Captain John Gross, of the Revolution, and Rachel Sahler, was born March 11th, 1810, at the Gross homestead, on the family estate, in Middle Paxton Township, Dauphin County, Pennsylvania. He was educated at the county schools, and the Harrisburg Academy, and studied the profession of Apothecary. In 1830 he commenced business as a druggist and apothecary, at Harrisburg, continuing very successfully until January 1st, 1894. In 1871 his eldest son, George A., became a partner. Mr. Gross became interested in Sunday Schools in 1828, and continued as teacher or superintendent of some of the departments until disabled by age, and has been since 1838 a ruling elder of the Salem Reformed Church. He has been a Trustee of the Franklin and Marshall College, at Lancaster, for forty-four years; was a Trustee of the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Church of the United States of America, for thirty-seven years, and its President for twenty-five; and for many years a member of the Board of Publication, of the same Church; a Trustee and Treasurer of the Pennsylvania State Lunatic Asylum; a Trustee of the Harrisburg Academy; and was for many years a School Director, and a member of the Town Council, and the first President of the City Council of Harrisburg. Mr. Gross married November 18th, 1841, Elizabeth Kunkel, daughter of George Kunkel, by whom he had several children. The eldest son, George A. was educated at the Harrisburg Academy, and Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, and is interested in real estate and investments. The second son, John Kunkel, was educated at the Academy, and Franklin and Marshall College, and is Agent of the Pennsylvania and Northern Central Railroad at York, Pennsylvania. The third son, Joshua Wustling, was educated at the Academy, and is engaged in the shoe business. The fourth son, Daniel W., died in infancy. The fifth son, Edward Zeigler, was educated at the Academy, and Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, and is engaged in the drug and prescription business. The sixth son, Henry Sahler, was educated at the Academy, and the Polytechnic Institute of Philadelphia, becoming a mechanical engineer, and is Superintendent of the Merchant and Billet Mills, owned by the Pennsylvania Steel Company, at Steelton.

Mr. Gross' successful business career of sixty-three years, and his many positions of trust and honor, all involving much ability, are evidences of the esteem in which he is held by his fellow-men, and the influences of his exemplary life will linger long after he has passed to the higher world.

ABRAHAM DU BOIS SAHLER.

Abraham du Bois Sahler, son of Daniel Sahler and Elizabeth van Wagenen, was born in 1795, in the town of Rochester, Ulster County. At an early age, after finishing his education, he removed to Kingston, in the same county, where he was Cashier of the Middle District Bank until 1830, when he retired to his farm a few miles from Kingston. In 1835 impaired health caused him to return to Kingston, where he resided until his death in 1839. Mr. Sahler married Eliza Hasbrouck, daughter of James Hasbrouck, of Kingston, a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families in the county, of which more particular mention is made in another part of this book, and they had, among other children, two sons—the Reverend Daniel du Bois Sahler and James Hasbrouck Sahler.

The Reverend Daniel du Bois Sahler was born July 7th, 1829, at Kingston, attended the Academy there, prepared for college at Perth Amboy, Middlesex County, New Jersey, and graduated from Princeton College and Theological Seminary. His first charge was over the Presbyterian Church at Red Bank, New Jersey, where he was ordained and installed by the Presbytery of Monmouth. In this place he remained seven years, his labors being much blessed and his church membership increased. From Red Bank he was called to the Congregational Church at Sheffield, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, and from there to the Gilead Presbyterian Church of Carmel, Putnam County, New York, where he ministered until his death, November 11th, 1882, his untimely departure being mourned by a large circle of devoted friends and parishioners. He was a man of broad culture, and always kept himself abreast with the wants of the times. Fitted by education and taste for the most varied associations, he gave himself wholly to his church and its neighborhood. His powers of adaptation made him successful with all. In the intellectual development of the young he was enthusiastic and untiring. He was an evangelist in the remote parts of Putnam County, and the helper of the friends of purity and temperance. He was a truly consecrated minister of Jesus Christ.

James Hasbrouck Sahler was born at Kingston, received his education at the Academy, and when quite young he entered a dry goods store to learn the business. In 1851 he went to New York and was with Booth and Tuttle until the War of the Rebellion caused their failure. He then accepted favorable proposals from Clark, Pardee, Bates and Company, dealers in silks and fancy dry goods, and remained with them until 1867, when he became a partner in the firm of Pardee, Bates and Company. In 1870, upon the retirement from business of Mr. Pardee, Mr. Sahler, with L. M. Bates and others, organized the firm of L. M. Bates and Company, which had the largest wholesale silk and fancy dry goods store in New York. The firm was dissolved by limitation in 1877. For several years he has been actively engaged with Tefft, Weller and Company. In 1884 Mr. Sahler removed from his home in New York, at 14 East Forty-first Street, to 123 Lefferts Place, Brooklyn, where he now resides.

JOHN PERRINE SAHLER.

John Perrine Sahler was born January 5th, 1805, near Kyserike, in the town of Rochester, Ulster County, on the estate of his father, Solomon Sahler, who was a landholder, slave owner and surveyor. The son was a remarkable surveyor, perhaps never surpassed in this country. In thirty-eight years of service a mistake was never discovered in his figures or surveys, and his re-establishing of lost or disputed lines could never be questioned and remain as he had marked them. In 1827 Governor De Witt Clinton, a relative of his wife, appointed him Ensign of the 130th Regiment of Infantry, and in 1831 Governor Throop appointed him Adjutant of the same regiment, which office he resigned in 1834. In 1833 he was appointed by Postmaster General Barry, under President Jackson, Postmaster at Accord, in the town of Rochester, which office he held until his resignation on removing to Western New York. He was also Deputy Clerk of Ulster County. In 1836 he removed to his lands, acquired from his father, in Western New York, in the town of Manchester, Ontario County, where he was for several years Commissioner of Highways. Later he removed to the village of Arcadia, in the town of Newark, Wayne County, and eventually to Clifton Springs, in the town of Manchester, where he died on his estate, June 27th, 1866, and was buried in Wiltwyck Cemetery, Kingston, where his widow erected a fine monument. He married Miss Maria Hasbrouck, daughter of Josaphat du Bois Hasbrouck, a land and slave owner, and surveyor, of Port Jackson, in the town of Rochester, and their son,

J. HASBROUCK SAHLER,

Attended school in the town of Manchester, and at Newark, studied law with Judge Sherwood, of Lyons, and Sedgwick, Andrews and Kennedy, of Syracuse, and at twenty-one was admitted at Oswego, to the bar of the State of New York, and at twenty-three was admitted as an Attorney at Law, and Solicitor in Chancery, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, in which State his father had large landed interests. Later he was admitted to practice at Washington, District of Columbia, by Chief Justice Carter, and by Secretary Lamar before the Pension Department.

DR. C. O. SAHLER.

Dr. Charles Oliver Sahler is the only son of Solomon Sahler and Caroline Winfield, and was born June 23rd, 1854, at Esopus, Ulster County, at the home of his maternal grandfather, Casper Winfield. When but a few months old he was removed to his father's farm near Kyserike, in the town of Rochester. He received a good education, which was finished under the guidance of John H. van Wageningen, at one time President of the University of Northern Pennsylvania, and to whom Dr. Sahler attributes much of his success. Deciding on the medical profession he took three courses at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, connected with Columbia College, New York, where he graduated with honor in 1878. When he returned to Kyserike he did not expect to locate there, but patients commenced and continued coming to such an extent that he was established in a few months, and has continued to be successful in his profession. In 1891 he removed to Kingston, where he now has a Sanatorium, a beautiful place, called Shadelawn, where the more subtle and complicated diseases are successfully treated. His ability in treating disease, and his skill in surgery have given him an extensive and varied practice, and he stands as one of the first physicians in the county. Dr. Sahler married in 1880 Miss Jennie Sahler, daughter of James Sahler, who has been a ready, competent and fearless assistant.

WILL OF ABRAHAM SAHLER, THE ANCESTOR.

In the name of God, Amen! I, Abraham Sahler, of Perkioming and Skippack Townships, in the County of Philadelphia, in the Province of Pennsylvania, Yeoman, being weak in health, but of sound and disposing mind, memory and understanding, praised be the Lord for the same, do hereby make my last will and testament, in manner following, to wit: First. I will that all my just debts and funeral expenses shall be duly paid and satisfied. And that in the inventory and appraisement of my personal estate, notice shall be taken of all such sums of money as I have advanced to my elder children, or, as from either of them is owing to me, whether on bond or note of hand, or charged in my book against them, in order to make my younger children equal with them in the distribution of my estate. And I give and bequeath unto my beloved wife, Elizabeth, one full equal third part of all my personal estate whatsoever, and the remaining two-third parts thereof shall be equally divided among my seven children, Isaac, Abraham, Elizabeth, the wife of Robert Pattin, Rachel, the wife of John Gross, Catherina, Daniel and John, and the shares of my younger children shall be put out at interest till they successively arrive at the age of twenty-one years. Item. I will that all my real estate whatsoever shall remain undivided until my son John shall arrive at the age of twenty-one years. In the meanwhile all my lands, tenements and hereditaments shall be let out on the best annual rents that can be obtained. So nevertheless that in the letting the plantation on which I now live, the southern part of my dwelling house, with the right of keeping a couple of cows, and the privilege of the yard water well, some room in the spring houses, and other reasonable conveniences be reserved for my wife during the minority of my son said John, if she so long remain my widow, and that the tenant or renter of the said plantation cut on my lands, and at her door deliver all the fire-wood she shall have occasion for, and of the rents arising from my said real estate during the minority of my youngest child, I give one full equal third part to my said wife, and the other two-thirds parts thereof shall be equally divided among my said seven children, so that the shares of my younger children in the said rents be put out at interest for their benefit till they arrive at the age of twenty-one years. I will and direct that if any of my two younger sons shall incline to learn a trade, he may be bound to a discreet master for a reasonable term, but always on condition that he learn to read and write and cyphering, at least so far as the Rule of Three. Item. I will and devise that when my youngest son is arrived at the age of twenty-one years, all my lands, tenements and hereditaments whatsoever shall be equally divided among my said seven children. And I give and devise to each of them one full equal seventh part thereof, to hold to him or her, his or her heirs and assigns forever. And I do hereby charge the several seventh parts of my children with the payment of one-third part of the value of the yearly rent to my said wife during all the term of her natural life, provided always that if any of my children before such partition made shall die leaving issue, such issue shall between themselves equally divide the share hereby intended for their deceased parent, in my personal estate, and in the inheritance of my real estate, provided also that if any of my younger children shall die in his or her minority, unmarried and without issue, that then the part or share of him or her so dying of and in my real and personal estate shall be equally divided among my surviving children and the issues of such of them as shall be then dead. Item. I do hereby nominate and appoint my said wife Elizabeth, and my son Abraham, and my trusty friend, Francis Gurney, late of the City of Philadelphia, Merchant, executors of this my last will and testament. Lastly. I do hereby revoke all other wills and testaments by me heretofore made and executed declaring this only to be my last will and testament. In witness whereof I have set my hand and seal this sixth day of April, in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight.

ABRAHAM SAHLER. [Seal.]

Patent Deed Given by Governor Andross to the Twelve Patentees of New Paltz.

Edmond Andross, Esquire, Lord of Saumarez, Lieutenant Governor General under his Royal Highness James, Duke of York, of Albany, and of all his territories in America,

Whereas, There is a certain piece of land at Esopus, which, by my approbation and consent, has been acquired from the Indian proprietors by Louis du Bois and his associates; the said land being situated on the south side of the redoubt called Creek, or Kill, being from [i. e., beginning at] the high mountain, called Maggonck, thence extending from the southwest side, near the Great River, to a certain point or hook, called the Jauffronc Hook, situated along the tract, called by the Indians Magaatramis, and from the north side ascending along the river to a certain island, which makes an elbow at the beginning of the tract, called by the Indians Raphoos; from the west side the high mountains to the place called Waratakac and Tauarataque, and continues along the high mountains from [on?] the southwest side to Waggonck, formerly so called; all which things have been certified to me by the magistrates of the said Esopus, to have been openly bought and paid for, in their presence, as appears by the return:

Be it known, to all whom it may concern, that, by virtue of letters patent of his Majesty, and by the commission and authority which is given me by his Royal Highness, I have given, ratified, and granted, to the said Louis du Bois, and his partners, that is, Christian Doyau (Deyo), Abraham Hasbroucq (Hasbrouck), André Le Febvre (Le Fevre), Jean Hasbroucq, Pierre Doyau, Louis Beviere (Bevier), Anthoine Crespel (Chrispel), Abraham du Bois, Hugue Frere, Isaac du Bois, and Simon Le Febvre, their heirs, and others having right from the said above-named persons, the said pieces of land, as well arable as [also] the forests, mountains, valleys, prairies, pasturages, marshes or ponds of water, rivers, rights of fishing, fowling, hawking, and hunting; and all other profits, commodities, and emoluments, whatsoever, of the said piece of land and appertaining acquisition, with all and singular the appurtenances and dependencies, to the said Louis du Bois and his associates, their heirs, and others having right of property according to usage.

In consequence of the foregoing, the said Louis du Bois and his associates, their heirs and others having rights in perpetuity [here the connection is at fault, perhaps from an omission], and that the plantations which shall be established on the said parcels of land shall together be considered to be a village, and the inhabitants thereof shall have liberty to make a highway between them and the redoubt Creek or Kill, for their convenience; and the said Louis du Bois and his associates, their heirs and others having right, shall render a faithful account of the survey, and make a legitimate use thereof, according to law; rendering and paying each and every year, to his Royal Highness, the rightful acknowledgment or rent of five bushels of wheat, payable at the redoubt at Esopus, to such officers as shall have power to receive it.

Given under my hand, and sealed with the seal of the province of New York, the 29th day of September, in the 29th year of the reign of his Majesty, and of our Lord, 1667.

ANDROSS.

Note.

This is the first genealogy of the Sahler family that has been written and published, although they have been in this country for several generations, and consequently it has involved much labor. It has not been my intention to mention all of the descendants of Abraham Sahler and Elizabeth du Bois, but only those of whom I had sufficient knowledge. I gratefully acknowledge the information derived from many persons and books.
