1894.

THIS publication is a reprint of an article in the New-England Historical and Genealogical Register for July, 1894, with additions, including the names of descendants of the fifth generation and the descendants of Ebenezer Savage of the fourth generation.

It owes its appearance to the zeal and labors of the late Charles W. Savage, LL.B., of Lowell, Mass., in the collection of matter pertaining to the family genealogy and history. The information contained in the varied and valuable material accumulated by him wholly during the last three years of his life, a part of which only is embodied herein, seemed worthy of a proper shape for preservation and circulation.

The compiler is much indebted to Thomas R. Savage, M.D., of New York city, a descendant of Josiah Savage of the fourth generation, for his aid in researches among the ancient records of Middletown, and also to Geo. A. Gordon, A.M., secretary of the N. E. Historic Genealogical Society, whose helpful suggestions and kind and courteous assistance in the preparation thereof are impressed upon these pages.

LOWELL, MASS., SEPTEMBER, 1894.

The authorities include: Connecticut Colonial Records; Hartford Town Records; Cromwell Church Records; Middletown Church Records; Middletown Land Records; Middletown Family Records; Cromwell Graves; Hartford Probate of Wills; Portland Conn. Graves; Berlin Graves; Chittenden Genealogy; Berkshire, Mass. Probate Records; Memorials John White and Descendants; N. E. Hist. and Gen. Reg., Vol. XXXII.; Goodwin's Gen. Notes, Conn.; Guilford N. Y. Church Records; Gen. "The Goodwins of Hartford, Conn."; Gen. "The Halls of New England"; Mass. State Archives; U. S. Pension Rolls; N. H. State Papers; Hist. Hartford, Vt., Tucker; "Connecticut Men in the War of the Revolution;" Miscellaneous (Public, Family and Memorial) Records.

FAMILY OF JOHN SAVAGE, MIDDLETOWN, CONN.
1652.

THE earliest information concerning John Savage, who settled in 1652 in Middletown, Conn.—then known by the Indian name Mattabesett or Mattabeseck.—is that contained in Hartford, Conn. records, as follows:

“John Savage of Hartford was married to Elizabeth Dubbin y^e tenth day of februr: one thousand six hundred and fifty two.”

The name of his wife is Dublin in Middletown Land Records and the Family Records; by the marriage record it appears as Dubbin. Presumably, this is a corruption of D'Aubin, to-day commonly written Aubin, one of the many patronymics derived from the name of Ste. Aubin (latine Albinus), bishop of Antwerp. In 1707, John Dublin petitioned the General Assembly of Rhode Island that he might receive some allowance for the shot he received in his head while engaged with Col. John Wanton, in the capture of French privateers. He alleges that by this wound he lost one of his eyes. The Assembly “seriously considering his condition and willing to encourage such that are willing to defend Her Majesty’s interest in this Colony” voted him four pounds a year for five years; and, in 1720, the Assembly voted him the same pension during his natural life. This is in evidence of the spelling of the name, as John was contemporary with Mrs. Savage, and might have been a nephew.

Whence John Savage came, where and when he landed in America, are alike unknown to his descendants. As few besides Englishmen were then in New England, it is probable that he came from England to the Massachusetts Bay Colony and thence removed to Hartford. The spelling of the name is various. Hon. R. R. Hinman, long Secretary of State in Connecticut, and well informed as to the early settlers, says: “Savage, Savidge, Savadge, John of Middletown was made free at Hartford, 18 May 1654.”

His will is signed “John Saudig” though, in the declaration with which that instrument opens, it is written “Saudg.” The same uncertainty exists elsewhere. In England, the common spelling is Savage, from the time of Henry V. In France, at Bayeux, Normandy, and at Poitiers, Sauvage prevails. In Canada, where a numerous population of aboriginal extraction exists, the French spelling is followed. Little significance, however, in this case, attaches to difference in spelling, as, in the seventeenth century, the name applied to members of the Massachusetts family, in the public records of that Colony, was written Savadge, Savidge, Savige, and Sauage, as well as Savage. A very old blazon of arms, whose history is unknown, identical with the arms of Savage, of Rock Savage, County of Chester, England, is preserved in the family, members of which, like the Massachusetts branch, have inherited a tradition of kinship to the titled family in Cheshire.

He was "mayd free" 18 May. 1654. In 1674, he possessed 1207 acres of land, 441 acres being on the east side of the Connecticut river. His name is seventh in the list of members, who organized, 4 September, 1668, the First Congregational Church of Middletown. He was one of three Townsmen of Middletown in 1657, and held the military rank of Sergeant, as appears by "An Inventory of the Estate of Sarg^{nt} John Sauidg. deceased March 6, 1684-5," filed with Hartford Probate Records, where his will may be found as follows:

REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS.

In the war between the United Colonies and Great Britain, which culminated in American independence, this family of Savage sustained an honorable part, which is worthy of mention and will be of interest to its present members. There were living at the opening of hostilities in 1775, as far as it appears of record, twenty-eight males between the ages of fifteen and sixty years, and thirty-nine males between the ages of eleven and sixty years. Of this latter number sixteen had not attained the age of twenty years. The State records of Connecticut, Massachusetts and Vermont and the United States pension rolls bear the names of twenty-eight, and published histories and family papers the names of three others, constituting a combined list of thirty-one members of the family, who were Revolutionary soldiers. Some may have rendered service to the American cause, concerning which no information has been obtained, and whereof, it may be, no public records exist; while others by age, infirmity, sickness or other cause may have been incapable of military duty. The list is prepared without special effort, from materials already at hand, and might doubtless be lengthened by further search and correspondence.

At Bunker Hill, Quebec, Long Island, the Evacuation of New York, White Plains, in the campaign against Burgoyne, at Brandywine, Germantown, Bemis Heights, Saratoga, Valley Forge, Monmouth and elsewhere during the struggle, the family was represented with a creditable record of service. Captain Abijah Savage, a soldier of the French and Indian War, was among the first to respond to the call to arms. As lieutenant, he was in Arnold's expedition against Canada, for a time commander of his company, was taken prisoner and exchanged, re-entered the army, was made captain, and served nearly to the end of the war refusing further promotion. He was an officer in the guard of Lafayette, and, on the visit of that illustrious general to this country, entertained him as his guest. Nathaniel Savage and Jacob Savage were both captured by the enemy; the former escaped from the Jersey prison ship across the ice on Long Island Sound. Josiah Savage, a mere youth, was also a prisoner and escaped, being aided and directed to the American lines by a compassionate British officer. The experience of Joel Savage was marked by thrilling adventure. After serving about three years, while on the way to Fort Stanwix up the Mohawk Valley, he was taken captive by the Indians in a fight wherein only two American soldiers escaped with life, and compelled to run the gauntlet. He was then made a prisoner by the British and carried to Canada, and kept fifteen months till the close of the contest. The journal of Corporal Gideon Savage at Valley Forge, in the possession of descendants; the exploits of Captain Samuel Stow Savage, who headed his countrymen against invaders in Vermont; the incidents of the ministry of Dr. Solomon Savage to the invalid and wounded; the narration of the duties, hardships, valor and patriotism of others; these would form an interesting chapter of the family story.

The names, with year of birth for identification, official rank and State service, are hereto appended. A star indicates pensioners.

FAMILY OF JOHN SAVAGE

OF MIDDLETOWN, CONN., 1652.

BY JAMES FRANCIS SAVAGE.

Boston: DAVID CLAPP & SON, Printers, 1894. 8 vo. pp. 26.

"The Family of John Savage is a reprint from the REGISTER for July last, with very large additions. One of the appended articles gives a list of Revolutionary soldiers of the family, their rank and service. The two brothers, Savage, of Lowell, who compile this monograph on their family history in America, have devoted a large amount of diligent and intelligent research to its accomplishment."

From The New England Bibliopolist.

Edited by JOHN WARD DEAN,
Librarian of the New England Historic Genealogical Society.

"Your index is excellent and the work does you credit."

AMOS PERRY, Librarian of the Rhode Island Historical Society.

The publication above referred to includes four generations of the family complete, the names, with date of birth, of members of the fifth generation, and the descendants of Ebenezer Savage of the fourth generation. It also contains the will of John Savage, and the inventory of his estate, reference to his civil and military titles, a valuable note concerning members of the family and others, a list of Revolutionary soldiers, and other matter germane to the subject. It is the only genealogy of the family in print, and is of interest and value to every member. This circular is sent to such as are akin.

Bound in cloth, $1.25, in paper covers, 75 cents.

Address JAMES F. SAVAGE,
99 Eleventh Street,
Lowell, Mass.

SUPPLEMENT
OF
MIDDLETOWN, CONN.

1652.

This supplement is issued by its compiler as an answer to inquiries, to correct a few errors in the former publication, to append additional matter, and, especially, to give to his daughter, in a concise and convenient form, some information concerning her New England ancestry. The labors in this special field, necessarily limited in their scope, of one who neither assumes nor aspires to be a genealogist must herewith end, and the preparation of the history and genealogy of the family, as a whole, be undertaken by a more competent hand, having inclination, ability and leisure for the work.

The ancient town, church and parish records of Middletown and neighborhood contain many entries referring to its members, some of which are given and may be of interest. The material in hand pertaining to the earlier generations is by no means exhausted, and much has been accumulated relating to later generations, some lines being nearly complete, all of which would be available to the genealogist.

This little volume, in two parts, an outline with little detail, the result of much research and labor, may, perhaps, be deemed worthy to be of service in the compilation.

J. F. S.

April, 1898.

THOMAS SAVAGE, of the ancient and noble Norman family of Savage, or Le Sauvage, as the Normans wrote it, came into England with the army of the Conqueror A. D. 1066 and settled in Derbyshire. His name appears in the lists of the Normans, who survived the Battle of Hastings. From Derbyshire the family branched out into several English counties, and, in 1177, into Ulster, Ireland, in the person of William Savage, one of twenty-two Knights in the train of De Courcy.

"In England the Savages became the owners of extensive estates, held high offices, contracted noble alliances, distinguished themselves at decisive political conjunctures, amassed great wealth, attached themselves to successive monarchs, were advanced to various dignities, and the Viscounts Savage and Earls Rivers transmitted royal blood to their descendants. The family contributed its share of illustrious men to the state, to arms, to the church, to literature. Their names are found among the Crusaders, among the warriors knighted at the Siege of Caerlaverock, among the Knights and Esquires who fought at Agincourt.

"Sir Arnold Savage, in Henry IV's time, was twice speaker of the English House of Commons; Sir John Savage, commanding the left wing of Richmond's army at the victory of Bosworth Field, helped very materially to establish the House of Tudor on the English throne; Thomas Savage, in the following reign, was Bishop of Rochester, of London, and ultimately Archbishop of York; and the world of letters has been enriched from the Savage stock by the poet, Richard Savage, the poet, Walter Savage Landor and the poet, Alfred Lord Tennyson."

"The armorial bearings of the family of Savage, (Scarcliffe, Stainesby and Rock Savage) were six lioncels (or lions) rampant sable, three, two and one, armed and langued gules, on a field argent." "The crest, a lion's jambe armed gules, ppr. rising out of a ducal coronet, or."

"The supporters of the Savage shield are, Dexter, a falcon billed, or; Sinister, an unicorn argent. These supporters are interesting, for, according to Sir Bernard Burke, Ulster King-of-Arms, the Savages of Cheshire are one of the few distinguished houses that, as commoners, are by prescriptive right entitled to use supporters to their coat of arms. The motto of the Cheshire Savages is 'A te pro te.'"

Dubbin is probably a corruption of D'Aubyn or D'Aubin. The name is also derived from D'Aubigné, or Daubeney. One D'Aubyn came to England with William the Conqueror in 1066 and settled in Gloucestershire. The surname appears in England and Ireland. The name Dublin, given on information, does not appear of public record and is manifestly an error.

Date of organization of church, 4—9th mo-1668 should be November instead of September.

"9—11th-77. Being y^e 4th day of y^e week y^e church met at Brother Savage his hous on a day of Humiliation Mary Parn (sometime Martyn) being convicted of gross breach of y^e 9th Commandment (as more fully appears in her examination in writing) by testimony of Isaac Johnson & Mary his wife and alsoe in an other case under y^e same head by testimony of sister White & hir son Nathaniel in a matter refering to expression in which she charged Sister Savage (denying y^e words in both, refusing to give honor to Testimony and suspect himself acknowledging, y^t if she soe said she spake very civilly) was (thereupon) laid under admonition."

First Cong. Ch. Rec. Mid.

Elizabeth Savage, widow, died, probably, about 1696, as the estate was divided 16 Nov., 1696, among the children as legatees.

John Savage in 1657 was one of two townsmen (selectmen), instead of three; also townsman in 1673-4.

John, Thomas and William, were household names in the Cheshire branch of the family, and John Savage, the emigrant, in the names of his children, doubtless remembered his English kindred.

John Drake, Esq., of Mt. Drake and Ashe, Devon, father of William, was an Oxford graduate, Member of Parliament and member of the Council of Plymouth, "for the planting, ruling, ordering and governing of New England in America." His parents were Sir Bernard Drake, a distinguished naval commander, knighted by Elizabeth, and Gertrude Fortescue, of the old Norman House of Fortescue, a descendant, in the fifth generation, of Sir John Fortescue, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench and Lord Chancellor of England. Sir Bernard Drake was son of John Drake, Esq., High Sheriff of Devon in the reign of Elizabeth, and Amy, daughter of Roger Grenville, ("Sir Roger Graynefield Kt.") whose father, Sir Thomas Grenville, married Elizabeth Gilbert, daughter of Otho Gilbert and sister of Thomas Gilbert, the grand-father of Sir Humphrey Gilbert. A sister of the last named John Drake married Walter Raleigh, father of Sir Walter Raleigh.

Mary, sister of William, m. Sir Henry Rosewell. His only brother was Sir John Drake, whose daughter, Elizabeth, married Sir Winston Churchill and was mother of John Churchill, the famous Duke of Marlborough.
