PREFACE

“He only deserves to be remembered by posterity who treasures up and preserves the history of his ancestors.” Burke.

This book is not for the public but for the descendants of Oliver Teall and it is my hope that in the future when you have ceased to see visions and have come to dream dreams, that this roughly sketched picture of that little portion of long ago humanity, which by the accident of your birth involves your existence, may interest you.

I appreciate that the notes are meagre in some places and contain much dry statistical information which may reasonably bore you, but I think it was Beecher who said, “The dry branches of genealogical trees bear many pleasant and curious fruits for those who know how to search for them.”

TEALL FAMILY

The founder of the Teall family in America was Oliver Teall, who with Prudence his wife, came from England about 1723, and settled in New Haven, Conn., where Oliver Teall, his son, was born Feb. 10, 1724. Oliver 2nd was educated and studied medicine and surgery, and at the age of twenty-three married Ruth Hurd, who was in her twentieth year at the time. They settled in Killingworth, Conn., when soon after he entered the English army as a surgeon and served through the French war. Being a member of the Church of England and an officer in the English army, he very naturally remained loyal to his king and served him during the Revolution. Five of his six sons, however, left home and parents, "being inspired with the spirit of liberty", and joined the Revolutionary army and remained throughout the war, except Titus, who died of small-pox at Valley Forge, in Washington's army that memorable winter. Benjamin, the eldest son, having lost an eye in childhood, was the only son who did not enter the American army. Lines were drawn very sharply in those crucial days and the father considered himself disgraced by his sons being rebels, and the sons felt that they were disgraced by their father being a Tory and an English officer. At this late day we can hardly appreciate the very strained relations existing between father and sons, which must have been intense, and no record that they were ever re-united after the war has ever been found, or whether Surgeon Teall died in this country or went to England when the British army was withdrawn.

The aged mother of Surgeon Oliver Teall, Prudence, died at his house in Killingworth, Conn., June 24, 1780.

The medical profession seems to have been a favorite one in the early history of our family. Surgeon Oliver Teall's grandfather was "upwards of thirty years Apothecary-in-chief to his Majesty, William III, and Queen Anne's army and served under the Duke of Marlborough." For this service George I granted the family a coat-of-arms, Feb. 23, 1723.

Children of Oliver² and Ruth (Hurd) Teall:

Among the few remaining landmarks of early Syracuse is the home of Oliver son of Timothy Teall, 1788-1857 on

When Oliver Teall, one of the most prominent promoters of the industries in Central New York came to Syracuse to live 1819, the village was known as Corinth. He came from Eagle village near Manlius, where he had lived since he was four years old.

When Oliver Teall built his pretentious mansion, nine-tenths

OLIVER,³ b. Jan. 1, 1759.

Oliver born Jan. 1, 1759. He was called "Philemon" at first but as his father was then engaged with the English army, in the French war in order to perpetuate his name in the family, it was changed to Oliver and the three boys, Timothy, Titus and Oliver were baptised on the 10th of June, 1759 in Holy Trinity Church, Middletown, Conn., as can be seen today by the records of the church.

From his writings we learn that he saw a great deal of General Washington and General Putman during the Revolution, and his personal experiences are very interesting to read.

On the 18th of Nov. 1783 he married Susan, daughter of Col. Brinton Paine. He and his youngest brother Nathan, married sisters, Susan and Polly Paine.

Children of Oliver and Susan:

Sally born Oct. 27, 1784, died Mar. 2, 1795.

HORACE VALENTINE TEALL

This, the grand and great grandfather of so many of us, was an ordained minister of the Christian demonination, a very active, influential and unusually intellectual man. There were very few men of his time of keener mind and more pronounced views.

SARAH SHAW BUYSS

Sarah or Sally Shaw became the wife of Rev. Horace V. Teall and from all who rose up to give testimony must have been the loveliest soul of them all. Her children and their wives and husbands all worshiped her and when one of us late descendants feel the workings of a finer nature within us we may naturally attribute it to that current of kindness started by her.

The Rev. Horace V. Teall used to tell the story himself of espousing the Millerite faith and that the day being set for the Coming of the Lord and the end of the world he said to Sally his wife, who was about to bake and wash, "Sally, it will not be necessary this Monday morning to do these things for we will soon go up with the Lord in glory." Sally looked upon him placidly and said: "That may surely be Horace but if we go we will go with full stomachs and clean garments".

JULIANN TEALL WORDEN

Juliann Teall Worden was a daughter of Horace V. and Sally Buys Teall. Her record must be placed among the short and simple annals of the poor, but her mother's blood ran warm in her veins and under the final test of those who love their fellow men her blessed name will lead many, many others. She did all she could.
