

A HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL REGISTER OF
JOHN WING, OF SANDWICH, MASS.
AND HIS DESCENDANTS, 1632-1888.

BY
REV. CONWAY P. WING, D. D.

Second Edition.

NEW-YORK : THE DE VINNE PRESS.
1888.

SPECIAL PREFATORY NOTE.

IT should here be recorded that after this volume was printed, and while it was awaiting the hand of the binder, its author, Rev. Conway Phelps Wing, D. D., passed to his final award. Dr. Wing's literary labor spent upon this book, including years of toil with occasional interruptions for ministerial duty, entitles him to the lasting gratitude of the family whose name he bore and honored. For two years preceding his departure, warned by the progress of disease, he greatly longed to see this family monument firmly set up, and by the favor of the printer this wish was gratified.

Assiduous in Christian work, though he had passed the limit of fourscore, he prepared new sermons, and preached until within a few months of his decease. He fell asleep in the midst of the people among whom he ministered, May 7, 1889. Funeral services were held in the church in which he had preached; a large concourse attended; addresses were made by Rev. E. L. Mapes, his successor in the pastorate, and Rev. Drs. Norcross, Robinson, Erskine, Crawford, Niles and Harman, emphasizing his rare gentleness, deep spirituality and evangelical faith, his scholarly attainments in the wide field of the classics and general literature, his masterly skill in Biblical exegesis, especially in the New Testament, his profound sense of personal responsibility for souls, and his effective ministry, prolonged during the exceptional period of nearly sixty years.

EXTRACTS

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

FROM necessity, as well as from a regard to the true design of the work, the following record is more genealogical than historical. Little else need be said of most persons than to specify the dates of their birth, marriage, and death; their parentage, children, removals, and places of residence; and their employments. The peculiar interest, however, which every family must feel with respect to its earliest progenitors, rendered it proper that our account should embrace everything which could be found in any quarter relating to John Wing of Sandwich, and his immediate connections. Those, also, who have been especially prominent in public, social, or commercial life might naturally be expected to have a more particular notice. After our best efforts, very little material for such a purpose has come to hand, and everything thus recovered has been recorded which was thought to have any possible interest to their descendants.

The arrangement which has been followed combines, to some extent, both methods of division—by generations, and by direct lineage. The three principal branches, which sprung from the original progenitor through his three sons, have been kept distinct through all the generations. Minuter divisions, according to widely separated localities or minor families, would have been difficult and perplexing. By means of the indexes, the numbers at the head of each paragraph, and the numbers included in parentheses, each branch of the family can be easily traced.

The 5th of June, 1882, will be the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the arrival of John Wing and his sons at Boston; and, although it may be too much to hope that any large number of his descendants will then assemble at Sandwich to revive historical recollections, to collect materials for a more perfect family record, and to promote a common family spirit, it would be an appropriate occasion for the exchange of personal and epistolary greetings, and for the contribution of additional history.

It was perhaps a rash moment for the writer when he exchanged his original plan of editing a diminutive pamphlet, in which a genealogy and brief notice might be given of the descendants of John Wing of Conway, for a volume embracing the entire family of the Wings in America. He had then no distinct conception of the labyrinth through which he would have to seek his way. It was not, indeed, very difficult to trace with tolerable clearness the lineages of the first four or five generations, for they were nearly all confined to a few towns in south-eastern Massachusetts, where all births, marriages, and deaths were to be found in the public records. But since the Revolution, when their children wandered off to the Province of Maine, western Massachusetts, Vermont, and the Middle and Western States, until there is scarcely a State or Territory of the American Union in which they are not distributed, there have been few such sources of information. In the midst of the activities and privations of frontier life, and sharing in the independent spirit which characterizes our countrymen generally, little was thought of ancestors; and hence even the records of individual families were frequently neglected. Invitations had to be sent to all whose names and residences could be ascertained, that they would report whatever they knew of their own family connections, and of others bearing the name. It soon became evident that the time had come for such an effort, and that many were prepared to appreciate its importance. A large amount of materials was returned, but the accounts were often so disconnected with each other, and with any part of the main stock of the family, that one of a much stouter heart might well have been dismayed. Few could give an intelligible account of their progenitors beyond their immediate parents, or, at best, their grandparents, and no small amount of patience and discrimination was requisite for finding the exact position of each one in the genealogical chain. We have taken much pains to avoid mistakes; we have not assumed to know with confidence where our way was not clear, and an entire chapter has been given to such disconnected branches as could not be located with certainty in the parent tree.

It would not be desirable, even if it were sure to be agreeable, to those concerned, were we to make acknowledgments in this place of our obligations to all who have contributed valuable aid in this work. Where their contributions extended no further than the records of their immediate connections, their names may be easily inferred from the details which are given. Among those, however, who have gone considerably beyond this, we take pleasure in mentioning: Dr. Henry Russell, of Sandwich; Josiah Paine, the editor of the "Harwich Independent"; Dr. A. W. Holden and Mrs. Halsey R. Wing, of Glens Falls; G. J. Wing, of Wayne, Paul and Edward Wing, of North Fairfield, and Lewis M. Wing, of North Livermore, in the State of Maine; Charles T. Wing, of New-York City, Henry F. Wing, of Brooklyn, and Christina Wing, of Albany, in the State of New-York; and E. Darwin Wing, of Maryville, Missouri. Among the books which have been of use may be mentioned: "Freeman's History of Cape Cod," 2 vols.; "Farmer's Register of N. E. Families"; "The N. E. Genealogical and Historical Register," 45 vols.; "Holden's History of Queensbury" (Glens Falls); "Walker's History of Old Plymouth"; "The Whitney Family," 2 vols.; "Bond's Genealogies of Watertown"; "Winsor's History of Duxbury"; "The Winslow Family," by D. D. and Frances K. Holton; "History of Lynn," by Alonzo Lewis and J. R. Newhall; "Thompson's History of Montpelier, Vt."; "History of Grafton, Mass.," and "Holland's History of Western Massachusetts."

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

LITTLE needs to be added here to what was contained in the preface to the first edition. As we anticipated, the original work had hardly been distributed before many, hitherto unknown to us or indifferent, began to express a desire to have the branches of the family with which they are connected represented in the register. A large amount of materials began to accumulate, and a considerable number of errors, into which for various reasons we had inevitably fallen, were pointed out. Hopeless as it must ever be to produce a work of this kind which would be absolutely complete or faultless, we yet saw that much which is desirable was within our power, and perhaps within ours alone for an indefinite time to come. And yet the labor which would be required for its preparation, and the certainty that it would be attended with financial loss, were sufficient to make us decline the attempt. At this juncture, a generous friend proposed to run all pecuniary risks, to print, bind, and publish the work in the best style of modern art, and to dispose of it to subscribers at cost. The labor of preparing the manuscript would thus be necessarily thrown upon the writer with no prospect of remuneration, and yet the proposal was gladly accepted. Some unavoidable delay has been encountered, which, however, we hope has been overruled for the ultimate advantage of the work. The period of life which the compiler has attained admonishes him that every postponement is hazardous.

The two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the landing of John Wing and his sons at Boston was celebrated in Sandwich by only a small company, probably in consequence of defective arrangements for it. An organization, however, was effected, which we hope will secure a more appropriate celebration, when a more fortunate concurrence of circumstances shall be brought about.

Among those who have contributed valuable assistance in the preparation of family histories for this edition may be mentioned :

Mrs. M. H. Husted, of Millbrook, Mrs. S. C. Wing, of Poughkeepsie, and Mr. Ebbe Wing, of South Dover, in Dutchess County, New-York; Hon. Alonzo Wing, of Jefferson, and Merrick P. Wing, of Lacrosse, Wisconsin; and Chauncey Wing, of Greenfield, Mass. Much information has also been received from Spooner's "Records of William Spooner, of Plymouth, Mass., and his Descendants," Vol. 1; and Howland's "Genealogy of the Howland Family." Other names of contributors and of genealogical works will be given in the notes on the pages where the respective contributions are incorporated.

By the numbers in parentheses after many names, it will be easy to trace the generations either backward or forward from any given point. The indexes, on which the convenience of such a work largely depends, have been much extended and carefully verified.

In taking leave of a work which has occupied so much of the toil and leisure of many years, the writer has satisfaction in the reflection that some gratification will be hereby afforded to what turns out to be a large connection, and that a pleasant intercourse has been opened with some intelligent and valued correspondents. We hope that these have not given us their last words.

INTRODUCTION.

I. INTEREST IN FAMILY HISTORY.

TO a man of cultivated and refined taste, it must seem appropriate for him to take a special interest in the history of his own family. In most families will be found some personages or incidents, adapted, when known to such a one, to produce in him self-respect and emulation. There need be nothing improper in such a result. If we should esteem virtue and good deeds in ourselves or others, why not value them in our families? This is a very different thing from an aristocratic pride which thinks only of the external advantages which a royal patent can bestow. It has reference to that real excellence which is often seen to be specially developed in some families. God has himself recognized the law by which good or bad influences descend, not merely through three or four but through a thousand generations. Every one now living has within himself forces and qualities which make him differ from all around him, but which have, perhaps, come down from remote ancestors. Whether these are due to those better habits and training which are maintained in certain families, and through which a special divine arrangement works through natural laws, or to a peculiar physical organization, the reality has always been acknowledged, and never more emphatically than in the decisions of advanced science at the present day. The most skeptical investigators of natural or divine laws are obliged to admit that there are influences silently operating in every life which are independent of the individual will. They impair no one's moral freedom, but only prescribe limits within which his powers may have their best action, and they naturally suggest the proper objects of his ambition. They open to each one the opportunity to reach higher ground than was accessible to his predecessors, inasmuch as he is the legitimate heir of all that they have been or done.

But even those families in whose history nothing extraordinary may be discoverable have yet abundant motives for gathering and studying their early records. The most insignificant object becomes interesting as soon as the details of its nature and history are made familiar to us. And nothing but such an acquaintance with the character and life of his progenitors would seem to be needful to interest every right-minded one in his family history. Could he be indifferent to those who have been the channels in which his own blood has come to him? Whether it has flowed in the veins of nobles or peasants, he has reason to desire a knowledge of them. He has indeed a duty which he owes them. If it be a mark of moral virtue to love the society and to honor the memory of the parents who are immediately connected with us, must not a portion of the same pious regard be due to those who share more distantly in the same relation? And do we not in fact find that a disrespect for ancestors is not unfrequently accompanied by a similar disregard for other moral relations? There may be some exaggeration, but we suspect there is a large amount of truth, in the motto of the American College of Heraldry: "He who careth not whence he came, careth little whither he goeth."

It is for this reason, we think, that there are instincts in human nature which prompt to this as to all moral duties. The common proverb, "Blood is thicker than water," expresses a truth which is almost universally felt, and implies an affection seldom appealed to in vain. It may at times need development, and often may be overborne by stronger passions, but such a fortune it shares with all other mental qualities. It is, therefore, one of those deep principles which are "the inspiration of the Almighty that giveth understanding."

We are not, however, prepared to concede that such studies are altogether without utility. The associations connected with a family tree may sometimes be perverted so as to foster a reliance upon family, to the exclusion of personal character, or a clannish rather than a national or cosmopolitan spirit, but such is not their appropriate tendency in a well-constituted mind. Every branch in that tree will appear to possess a life in common with every other. His sympathies will be likely to go forth to a larger circle, his consciousness of capabilities will be deepened by the suggestion of what his own flesh and blood has accomplished, and a respect for a common fellowship will prompt to a higher style of living. He can hardly fail of having his scheme of life enlarged when he becomes conscious of a larger community animated by "one blood." He will begin to regard himself, not as a mere accretion upon a dead and disordered mass, but as a member of a living organism, directed to a common end. For want of such a consciousness many men and many families have failed to attain the character and position appropriate to both, and the entire nation has lacked the unity and compactness which a common origin should give. The power of such a principle is well illustrated by its operation for indefinite ages in the heart of the Chinese nation. There the law of the family is the universal law, and filial piety or a veneration for ancestors is the sum of all virtues and the object of all instruction. To such an extreme has this doctrine been carried there that it has become a bar to all progress, and any attempt to surpass the wisdom or art of ancestors is looked upon as an impiety. But, whether for good or for ill, the power of the principle is thus exhibited. It is seen to be effective among all classes, rich or poor, noble or plebeian, and that an honored and virtuous ancestry may be quite as much a source of pleasure to those who have nothing else as to those who have ancestral titles or large estates.

But even apart from such direct utilities, why should such studies be despised? Certainly they have no right to cast a stone at us who contend zealously for amusements of which the best that can be said is that they do no harm, but which many regard as more than questionable. The attention of multitudes is given without a challenge to many pursuits whose avowed purpose is to divert or relax minds which have been overburdened with care. And then who can assert with confidence respecting any item of information that it will always remain without a useful application? Many an article, which when first gained appeared worthless, has proved quite convenient in an unexpected contingency. No small part of what we regard as our most important science or art had its origin in engagements that had no direct object but diversion. Information, originally sought for out of family pride or curiosity, has more than once served to identify relationship or property of great value in legal and historical affairs.

Americans have sometimes been tempted to speak contemptuously of family descent and family history. An interest in such matters has not unfrequently been reproached as if it were inconsistent with republican simplicity and the spirit of the age. And we have some sympathy with the spirit which prompts such remarks. It is the mission of our true democracy to trample down all those claims which are founded only on royal or aristocratic prescription. It may be that in the new era of the world's progress "the position of the family can never be what it was in the patriarchal and feudal stages of development, and that the units with which society now builds its institutions are individuals and not aggregations more or less fortuitous." The worthy character of the individual must be henceforth more, perhaps, than ever before his truest blazonry, for which he can devise neither substitute nor escape. And yet we discern not why an honest pride in the virtues and respectability of our ancestors, and especially why a keen interest in the history of our progenitors, should be looked upon as inconsistent with this. Neither of these has a tendency to relax one's self-respect or to enfeeble his desires for personal distinction. Are those who honor the names of their Revolutionary sires, or decorate the graves of "the martyrs for union," less inclined than would otherwise be the case, to practice the virtues they celebrate? On the other hand, does not this ancestral interest tend to make the members of these families feel that they have a stake in the national welfare and are bound together by a sacred brotherhood?

The aspiration to produce a respectable family history can hardly be considered a very presumptuous one, since the principal qualifications for such a work demand only diligence in research, a skillful arrangement of materials, and a simple statement of facts. The writer of the present volume can scarcely be said to have felt the stimulus of even such a motive. He began the collection of his materials prompted by no higher desire than to know something of his immediate connections, but, with the enlargement of his acquaintance with these, he came in contact with more than one correspondent with whom a valuable intercourse has since been maintained. He has thus been beguiled along until what might seem to many a dry and thankless toil, became a labor of real love. The idea of pecuniary profit would have been utterly visionary, and never entered into his sober calculations, as a moment's reflection showed that a circulation limited to a single family connection would hardly warrant a hope of even a remuneration. Equally baseless would have been the thought of a literary reputation, since even the moderate qualities needful for such a work would find appreciation only among the few who are interested in genealogical studies. As a result he has been induced to publish (as far as such a work can be called a publication), almost exclusively by the desire to put in a permanent form, the somewhat valuable collection of materials in his possession, in hope that it will afford some pleasure, and perhaps profit, to a small number of readers.

In these first attempts there must of course be considerable defect. Even so long after the publication of the first edition, there remain individuals and groups of persons whom it would have been desirable to embrace in it, and others of whom we desire to know more have resisted all our importunities to afford us the needful information. A postponement of the publication might perhaps have secured greater perfection, but, on the other hand, might have endangered the use of what we have collected.

More were found able and ready to coöperate in the work than we anticipated at the beginning. Persons of intelligence were brought into correspondence who delighted in the task and spared no pains to contribute as much material as possible. In some instances there are discrepancies in the book, and no doubt inaccuracies, arising not always from the fault of the compiler, but sometimes from inconsistencies in his authorities. He has done his best to relieve the monotony of the details by interesting and characteristic anecdotes, but in consequence of the absolute want of epistolary relics and private papers which are sometimes found in literary families, and the necessary confinement to the use of the public records of the towns or churches where each branch of the family resided, he had often no alternative but to present a simple array of names and dates. And yet a careful reader will discover some prominent characteristics which appear to have belonged to the family in all its generations and branches. From the first landing on the American shore to the present time, a disposition has been exhibited to take sides with the oppressed, and in favor of the utmost freedom in civil and religious affairs. At an early period two main branches of the family were to a great extent determined by this peculiarity in their social and ecclesiastical relations for all subsequent time. Probably not one of the connection has ever been found giving his support to men or measures which he regarded as opposed to popular liberty or to the freest expression of opinion. Such a liberty may not necessarily imply the highest and purest exercise of man's powers; but, ordinarily, it is favorable to their development and profitable action. We have, therefore, no regrets when we think it possible that a better consciousness of this characteristic trait may be promoted by the present work, and so may have some useful bearing upon the general progress. Our record may seem little more than a genealogical catalogue or a collection of monumental inscriptions, telling how

“ One generation comes,
Another goes and mingles with the dust,
And thus we come and go, and come and go,
Each for a little moment filling up
Some little space. And thus we disappear
In quick succession. And it shall be so,
Till time in one vast perpetuity
Be swallowed up.”

And yet the thoughtful mind finds here material for that scienza nuova which brings all knowledge into essential unity, and shows each generation moving into a brighter light and a perfect divine kingdom.*

II. THE PERIOD OF THE FIRST IMMIGRATION.

THE first emigrants to America bearing the name of Wing, like nearly all the New England colonists of that period, belonged to that portion of the English nation which began, near the close of the sixteenth century, to be called Puritans, because they contended that all civil and ecclesiastical affairs, as well as religious doctrines, should be strictly conformed to Scriptural models, and to the principles of modern liberty. They should, however, be distinguished from that portion of the same party which had settled at Plymouth, and which has usually borne the more specific appellation of "The Pilgrims," because they had for conscience' sake forsaken their native land, had sojourned for several years in the Low Countries, and had finally found a home on the shore of Massachusetts Bay, thirty-seven miles south of the present city of Boston. The two colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay were entirely distinct from each other in origin, governmental policy, and laws until the union in 1692. The former commenced their settlement (1620) eight years before the latter (1628), and for the first ten years were, for some reason, unable to obtain a royal charter, being organized under the authority of a commercial association, which, however, seemed to have very little zeal for its worldly prosperity. The emigrants also, though composed of some of the most enlightened and energetic men of the age, were less anxious to increase their numbers or their wealth than to provide for their spiritual harmony and edification. They had also been much impoverished by the necessities of a foreign pilgrimage, by repeatedly baffled and expensive attempts to embark for America, by the severities of a long voyage on the ocean, and by the hardships, famines, drouths, and sicknesses of their first settlement in the wilderness. The latter, on the other hand, were "men of rank, wealth, and legal acquirements." They left England when Puritanism was rapidly rising into power, and the emigrants were in many instances large proprietors, by no means separatists from the Established Church, but always remaining in full communion with it. Only three sparsely settled towns, viz., Plymouth, Duxbury, and Scituate, were organized during the first sixteen years. The colony of Massachusetts Bay, on the other hand, though established likewise with a prominent aim to construct a congenial religious community, was influenced in a much higher degree by the motives which ordinarily lead to new settlements. It was from the beginning favored with a charter of singular liberality, and had not only the direction and aid of an enterprising association in England, but a very large amount of popular favor. In the course of three or four years after the first settlement at Naumkeag (now Salem), more than 1500 persons, in 17 ships, were added to the original 300, and several towns were organized under the names of Boston (before called Shawmut), Charlestown, Watertown, Dorchester, Roxbury, Mystic, and Saugus. In each of these a church was established as soon as a sufficient number of persons could be collected for the purpose, on the same model with the churches of Salem and Plymouth, and generally with a full complement of pastor, elders, and other officers.

III. FIRST ARRIVAL.

JOHN WINTHROP, the first Governor of the colony of Massachusetts Bay, kept a journal, in which he gives an account of all public transactions down to the year 1649; * and when enumerating the vessels which conveyed immigrants, he makes this record under the date of June 5th, 1632: "Arrived, the William Francis, Mr. Thomas, master; which left London on the 9th of March, and reached this port after a voyage of 88 days, with about 60 passengers, whereof were Mr. Welde and old Mr. Batchelder (being aged 71), with their families, and many other honest men." In another place the Governor specifies that the company which came with Mr. Batchelder consisted of a small body of six or seven persons, who went to the same place and coöperated with him in his religious movements. The names of these persons are not given, but from incidental notices we learn that among them were John Wing and his wife, Deborah, a daughter of Mr. Batchelder, with three or four adult sons, and Edward Dillingham. There is no decisive indication in this or in any other known record of the precise place in England from which this company emigrated. Some expressions in the will of Edward Dillingham, showing that he was in intimate relations with several persons in Bitteswell, Leicestershire, render it probable that these were his former neighbors, from whom the whole company could not have been distant.* We have, however, evidence that one, at least, of the sons of John Wing resided, before his emigration, in Stroud, in the County of Kent. As he was the youngest, and probably had not lived apart from his parents, this leads to the conjecture that the entire family resided there or in the vicinity. Those who composed this company had evidently sympathized with each other in some peculiar religious views, as well as been united by various marriage and blood relations. The Rev. Benjamin Fessenden, of Sandwich, intimates that they had been "very much tainted with Antinomian and Familistical errors," but how much this signifies, when interpreted with a due regard to the prejudices of the religious party then in the ascendant, it is not easy to decide.† Nothing of the kind was ever objected against Mr. Batchelder by the civil or ecclesiastical authorities, before whom he was more than once, for other reasons, arraigned; and as held by the more recent advocates of these views, the sentiments and practices alluded to could not have been very obnoxious to the Puritan divines in Massachusetts. The town of Saugus (now Lynn) had been organized only three years before their arrival, and no church had been collected and no minister had been settled there. A few meetings had been held for prayer and exhortation, and some of the inhabitants had attended worship at Salem. The time of their arrival was eleven years and seven months after the landing at Plymouth Rock (Dec. 11, 1620, O. S.),* and three years and eight months after the arrival of the first settlers at Salem.

IV. REV. STEPHEN BATCHELDER.

THE leader in this company, the Rev. Stephen Batchelder, must have a special interest in our history, as the progenitor of the family on the mother's side.† He was born in England, in the year 1561, and was consequently, as Mr. Winthrop says, 71 years of age when he reached

* In reading the early history of New England, one needs to recollect that before 1752 the Julian method of reckoning time was in general use. By that method the equinox receded a day in about 130 years, and, consequently, by the middle of the seventeenth century more than ten days had been lost. By an act of Parliament all legal documents after 1752 were to be conformed to the Gregorian calendar. By this new style the year was made to commence with the 1st of January instead of the 25th of March, and each month began ten days earlier than by the old style. Nearly three months, therefore, were taken off from the end of the former year and prefixed to the succeeding one, and in each month the number of the day was set back ten days for the seventeenth century and a portion of the eighteenth century, the discrepancy continually increasing until the present time, when it amounts to about thirteen days. In our record we have indicated this variation, where it seemed important to historical accuracy by giving both years,—as January 10th, 1752-3. See Brande's Cyclop., art. "Style," and Appleton's Cyclop., art. "Calendar."

Boston, June 5, 1632. He had been well educated, had received orders in the Established Church, and had gained considerable reputation among his clerical brethren for learning and ability. From dissatisfaction with the rites and institutions of the Church, he had refused conformity with the requirements of his superiors and had been deprived of his ecclesiastical commission. Soon after this he left England, and went with his family to Holland, where he resided several years. He then returned to London, and sailed from there March 9, 1632. His eldest daughter had preceded him a few months, and settled in the new town of Saugus, to which he, with his six relatives and adherents, immediately made his way. He at once constituted them and some others in the place into a church, but without installation, and without observing the forms which were usual on such occasions and required by the civil authorities. Such an irregularity, however, was consistent with the primary principles of independency advocated by many, and, whether justified as a principle or excused as a neglect, his ministry was continued there for three years. Four children, born before his arrival, one of whom was Stephen, a son of his daughter Theodata Hussey, were baptized by him, but after four months complaints began to be heard of some irregularities in his conduct. He was arraigned before the Court, October 9th, and he was "required to forbear exercising his gifts as a pastor or teacher publicly in our patent (unless it be to those he brought with him) for his contempt of authority, and until some scandals be removed." In the course of a few months, however, he had so far succeeded in regaining the esteem of the people that the Court removed its injunction (March 4, 1633) and left him at liberty to resume his public services. The dissensions, nevertheless, were continued, and some began to question whether they were a church or not. On the withdrawal of certain persons from the communion, and their refusal to present their grievances in writing, he was about to proceed to their exclusion, when a council of ministers was called and decided that "although the church had not been properly instituted, yet the mutual exercise of their religious duties had supplied the defect." The difficulties, however, did not cease, but rather increased, until Mr. B., "perceiving no prospect of their termination, requested a dismissal for himself and his first members." This was granted under the expectation that he would desist from his ministry or remove from town; but when he renewed his covenant with those who came with him from England, and went on with his ministrations, the people complained that such a course would frustrate their calling another minister, and the magistrates forbade his proceeding. Finding that he disregarded their injunction and refused to appear before them, the magistrates sent the marshal and brought him before the Court of Assistants at Boston, by whom he was discharged on his engaging to leave the town in three months. On May 6, 1635, he was admitted a freeman, and removed first to Ipswich, where he received a grant of fifty acres of land and had the prospect of a settlement; but some difficulties having arisen he left the place and attempted, with some friends, to establish a colony at Mattacheese, on the shore of Barnstable Bay, where Yarmouth is now situated. In the extremely cold winter of 1637 he went on foot to that place, a distance of one hundred miles, but finding the enterprise impracticable for want of pecuniary resources he relinquished it and went to Newbury, where, on the 6th of July, 1638, the town made him a grant of land. The General Court also, on the 6th of September, gave him permission to settle a town at Hampton, a few miles north of Newburyport, in New Hampshire. In 1639 the inhabitants of Ipswich voted to give him sixty acres of upland if he would reside with them, but he did not accept of the proposal. On the 5th of July he and his son-in-law, Christopher Hussey, sold their houses and lands in Newbury for six^{ty} score pounds and removed to Hampton, where a town was planted and a church was gathered, of which Mr. B. became the minister. In 1640 the town granted him three hundred acres of land, and he presented them with a bell for their meeting-house. There he was treated for some time with great respect; but finally dissensions commenced, and the people were divided between him and his colleague, Rev. Timothy Dalton. He was also accused of an immorality before both the civil and the ecclesiastical courts, which he at first flatly denied, but finally acknowledged, and was excommunicated. Soon after his house took fire and was consumed, with all his property. In 1643 he was restored to communion but not to his ministerial office; and hence, in 1644, when the people of Exeter invited him to settle with them, the Court enjoined him against accepting the invitation. In 1647 he was at Portsmouth, where he remained three years. In 1650, being then eighty-nine years of age, and his second wife, Helena, being dead, he married Mary, a woman whose subsequent course caused him much trouble and scandal. They separated the first year, and both of them petitioned for a divorce, which was not granted. Soon after this (in 1651) Mr. B. left the country and returned to England, where he is said to have married his fourth wife; and in 1656 Mary again petitioned the Court to be freed from her husband, who she said had left her destitute with two diseased children. No record is given of the action of the Court on this petition; but before this, and about the time of her husband's departure for England, the records of York for October 15, 1651, show that she was condemned to be publicly whipped, and to be branded with the letter A. Mr. B. died at Hackney, near London, in the one hundredth year of his age. Freeman says of him: * "From all that we gather out of much that was written of him by his contemporaries, we infer that he was learned, and, in the judgment of charity, a good man, but that his whole life was singularly complicated with incidents of trial." In estimating his character we must take into consideration the peculiar spirit and agitations of the times, when the boldest innovations in opinion and practice were received on the one side with favor, and on the other, and especially on the side of the ruling powers, with intolerance and misrepresentation. Mr. Prince says that "Mr. B. was a man of fame in his day, a gentleman of learning and ingenuity, and wrote a fine and curious hand." †

He had four sons and three daughters. Theodata married Christopher Hussey, who removed to Hampton, and is probably the ancestor of the numerous family of that name in Rhode Island. ‡ Deborah had before leaving England married John Wing, and went now with him to Sandwich. The third daughter married John Sanborn, whose three sons are said to have come over with their grandfather. Two of the sons, Francis and Stephen, remained in London. Henry went to Reading and had a son Henry, of Lynn; and Stephen lived in Nantucket, and there died in 1718, aged 88. John became a preacher to the Friends and lived in Newcastle, Delaware.—"Farmer's Register," p. 155.

Nathanael removed to Hampton, where in 1656 he married, first, Deborah Smith, second, Widow Mary Wyman, and third, Elizabeth —, and had seventeen children. Susanna Batchelder, one of the descendants of this Nathanael, married, July 20, 1738, Ebenezer Webster (born at Hampton, October 10, 1714), the grandfather of Daniel Webster.* Farmer tells us that Nathanael's descendants are numerous in Rockingham County, N. H.,† and Freeman adds that among these is claimed the poet James G. Whittier.‡ In Morgan's "Sphere of Gentry"§ is the Batchelder coat-of-arms, "a plough beneath a rising sun, vert; a plough in fesse; and in base the sun rising, or." The editor then remarks that Batchelder was doubtless a man of serious faults, but that the church in Exeter could not have believed in his guilt at Hampton.

FIRST GENERATION.

JOHN WING OF SANDWICH.

1. John Wing was the original progenitor of nearly all who now bear the family name in America so far as they are known to us. Nothing is known of him before his arrival at Boston and his residence at Saugus (Lynn), except that he had married Deborah, the second daughter of Rev. Stephen Batchelder, and was one of that minister's company. Some have inferred that he had been with his father-in-law during his sojourn in Holland, and that he had some near connection with the Rev. John Wing, who we shall see was the pastor of an English congregation in Flushing, in the Province of Zealand, in Holland. He does not appear to have been, any more than his associates, possessed of pecuniary means much beyond what were requisite for his voyage. We are told that among the original emigrants to Plymouth there were only two or three persons possessed of capital or influence, these being altogether broken down during their previous migrations; and although those who came to Massachusetts Bay were, in numerous instances, men of property and standing, we have no reason to suppose that those who constituted the company of Mr. Batchelder were either wealthy or distinguished. They appear, however, to have been possessed of a comfortable independence, and to have effected their removals without inconvenience. Their object in leaving Saugus was, in the first place, to avoid the ecclesiastical difficulties in which they and their leader had become involved, but probably no less to find a suitable home and cheaper lands beyond the limits of the older settlements. John Wing was probably one of the number who performed the journey with Mr. Batchelder for the settlement of the Mattacheese; and though that enterprise failed, he probably then first became acquainted with the region afterward known as the Peninsula of Cape Cod. The land there was perhaps no more inviting for agricultural purposes than that which then generally engrossed attention within the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, but it had some advantages for fishing purposes, was not encumbered by heavy forests, was easy of cultivation, might be had free by all acceptable occupants, and the Indians in possession of it were remarkable for their uniform friendship for the English. It was within the jurisdiction of the Plymouth Colony, though beyond the limits of any organized town and beyond the jurisdiction of the authorities of Massachusetts Bay, with whom the entire company had come into unpleasant relations. Whatever may have been the private views of the Plymouth Pilgrims, they were in practice, at least in the earlier years, more tolerant than their northern neighbors.* About ten years before (1627), a trading-house had been located at a place called Manomet, at the head of Buzzard's Bay, with the view of maintaining commerce with the southern coast and of avoiding the dangerous navigation around the Cape; but for some reason the enterprise had been abandoned, or was confined to the business of mere transportation. In the year 1637, Mr. Edward Freeman * and nine others, who had been residents at Saugus, formed an association "to erect a plantation or town within the precincts of his Majesty's General Court at Plymouth," and near the neck of land between the opposite shores of Barnstable and Buzzard's Bay. The spot chosen for this first settlement was just where the shore begins to curve outward from the main-land on the Bay of Massachusetts, about sixty miles south of the present city of Boston. The face of the country is undulating, dotted with many small lakes, and traversed by numerous streams which are favorite resorts for fishing parties. The soil is very shallow and covered by a low growth of oaks, pine-trees, and shrubs, but it is easily fertilized by sea products from the shore, and then yields bountifully to careful cultivation.

On the third day of April, the same year, a patent was granted the original association giving it the right to form a plantation or town, "and to receive in more inhabitants to them according to order, and duly to dispose of said lands to such as were or should be orderly admitted to them in said township." They were soon on the ground, and with them about fifty others who were called "associates," chiefly from Saugus, Duxbury, and Plymouth. The names of Edward Freeman and Edward Dillingham appear among the original "Ten men of Saugus," and the name of John Wing occurs as the forty-fifth in the list of their first "associates." Nearly all those mentioned took families with them, and by the terms of the act granting them permission to settle, none were allowed to become housekeepers, or to build any cottage or dwelling to reside singly or alone, or if their characters were not acceptable to the Governor. Still higher qualifications were required from those who were admitted as freemen and entitled to take part in elections and the making of laws. In addition to the possession of a ratable estate of twenty pounds, it was demanded that they should be regular communicants at the Lord's Table and faithful attendants upon and liberal supporters of public worship at places authorized by law. The whole body of freemen in the town had the right to decide by vote whether any one should be admitted a member of their community,—subject, however, to the revision of the Governor and his assistants. A sufficient quantity of land was granted to the original association to provide liberally for three-score families, according to the number and ability of each householder's family, and also to dispose of to such as might afterward be admitted and unite with them. Under the direction of committees appointed by the Court the true bounds of every inhabitant's land were laid out and ordered. In 1638 the General Court deputed Mr. Alden and Captain Miles Standish "accurately to define the limits of each man's allotment of land with all convenient speed." In 1651, when the conditions on which the grant of the township was made had been complied with, a deed of the plantation was executed by the Governor to Mr. Freeman, who then made conveyances to his associates. For some reason the town was not incorporated for two or three years after its settlement. This was not probably for want of prosperity or for any nonconformity in the religious views of the associators. From the complaint which followed soon after their incorporation, we infer that it was indeed possible that some of them were not zealous for the rules of order in church or state then most prevalent. An act of incorporation was granted in 1639, and the Indian name of Shawme was exchanged for that of Sandwich. One difficulty which presented itself to the General Court was, perhaps, the distance of the new town from the main settlements. Hitherto the principal duties of freemen had been performed at Plymouth, making it necessary that each one should often take inconvenient and expensive journeys. This would, of course, become more difficult as the territory occupied by the people became extended. Accordingly, soon after the organization of Sandwich (1638) it was ordered that the business of legislation should be transacted by representatives to be elected by the towns, called at first committees, but afterward deputies. In addition to the private "holdings" originally assigned to the inhabitants of Sandwich, certain meadows or marshy lands on the shore near the town were left for the grazing of cattle, as town's commons, and controlled by the town as such. In time these became the property of the representatives of the original freemen. Other woodlands were at first free for every one to obtain from them timber and fuel for private use, but not for exportation.

The place where John Wing had his residence, and the home of the elder branch of the family for subsequent generations, was situated about a mile from the present village of Sandwich, near a stream of water between two beautiful ponds, and on a highland overlooking the lower sheet of water and the town. The farm included that which is now occupied by Stephen R. Wing, and the one next south of his. No more attractive location could be found in the vicinity. The limits of the lower pond have been much increased in later years by a dam thrown across its outlet, by which power has been gained for mills and other manufacturing establishments; but even before this enlargement the scenery from that point must have been more than commonly fine. A number of farms are situated upon the neck of land between the two ponds (formerly known as "Wolf-trap Neck"), some of which have been in the possession of John's descendants until the present time. The exact spot which has generally been regarded as the home of the progenitor is a slight eminence called "Old Cellar Hill," near the point where the stream from the upper pond falls into the lower, and since occupied as a factory for nails. Near the present building is an artificial cavity, about fifteen feet square and several feet deep, which must once have been a cellar, and is even now (1887) surrounded by a few very ancient fruit and ornamental trees. The buildings which once were over and near it are gone, with every other relic of them, and the mansion which has been the residence of his descendants is situated about two hundred rods southward. The farm connected with this homestead consisted of two or three hundred acres of valuable land up the stream and along the borders of the lower pond. Immediately before it, across the sheet of water which lies in the form of a semicircle, about a mile in length, and within the arc of the semicircle, is an ancient cemetery, where the earlier inhabitants were buried. On the outer and right margin of the lower end of the pond lies the main village, consisting of several streets along which are a grist mill, marble works, the town hall, an academy, several churches, a Masonic hall, and two or three hotels. This part of the town has remained without essential alteration from a very ancient period.

In 1638, almost immediately on the settlement of the town, a church was formed, and there can be no doubt that public worship was maintained there from the very first. A rude building for that purpose must have been at once erected, for as early as 1644 the one which was used for worship was called "the old meeting-house." The original place of worship is said to have been in West Sandwich, where is now a blacksmith shop. Tradition locates it at the junction of the Plymouth and Wareham roads in Scusset, about two miles from the present village of Sandwich. The ministers of that day in all the towns were invariably men of respectable talents and learning, such as everywhere commanded confidence and respect. There was something, however, in the disposition of the original inhabitants of Sandwich which was unfavorable to the harmony and growth of the original congregation. The experience which some of them had had at Saugus was perhaps ill-adapted to make them cordial in its support. Even if the strict laws in relation to communion and ministerial subsistence and attendance upon public worship were observed, it is evident that a considerable degree of laxness was from the very first allowed. The freemen of the town were more than once censured by the General Court for allowing persons to settle and reside among them whose views were looked upon as disorderly. The stipends were poorly paid and often were reluctantly collected; the minister complained that few attended upon his ministrations, and serious dissensions prevailed among the people. In one instance these are spoken of as caused by a party which had once been under the influence of Stephen Batchelder. The town authorities are said to have been unwilling, or from the state of public feeling unable, to enforce the laws relating to public worship, and what were called irregularities. Some of the most respectable inhabitants, like Mr. Edward Freeman and Edward Dillingham, among the original associates, were complained of before the Court and fined. An early record of the church shows only eleven male members, and neither in this nor in any subsequent notice of the business of the church does the name of John Wing nor of any of his sons for some years appear. They had probably all been communicants at Saugus, and they were doubtless decidedly religious people, but inclined to greater freedom in worship and in ecclesiastical affairs. We shall see that this spirit soon took a direction which led a large portion of the family to forsake the church and the forms of worship established by the civil authority.

Very little can be learned from the meager records of the town, the church, or the general colony regarding the family history of John Wing. He appears to have been a plain man of ordinary intelligence, never aspiring to political distinction, and only ambitious to cultivate his land and decently to bring up his family. In a few instances, however, his name occurs on the records of the General Court as one well qualified for public business. In 1641 he is allowed six acres for his share of the meadow lands, held at first in common, but divided afterward annually for the use of the inhabitants in severalty. On another occasion he was concerned in the construction of a road connecting Sandwich with the earlier settlements. For some time the people had been obliged either to reduce their corn to meal by the slow and laborious Indian process, by means of a mortar and pestle, or transport it all the way to Plymouth on their own shoulders or on the back of a horse or cow. Tradition points out the old Indian path by which the people on the Cape thus wearily conveyed their grist to and from Plymouth. In 1652 the Court appointed a jury of thirteen persons to lay out the most convenient track for a road from Sandwich to Plymouth. John Wing was the seventh on this list. The jury was empaneled three days afterward

(Feb. 27) and commenced their work; but two years from that time the road was not completed, and "both Plymouth and Sandwich were presented for not having the country highway between these places cleared so as to be passable for man and horse." Some apprehensions began early to be felt that the Indians of the West were hostilely inclined toward the settlers, and a law was enacted to prevent all Indians from having the use of fire-arms. A number of persons were complained of (about 1642) for allowing Indians to use such weapons even in hunting. Among these were the Assistant Governor Freeman and John Wing for lending guns to Indians. The date of John Wing's death is not recorded. It was probably as early as 1659. His wife is said to have lived till 1692, but probably this date has arisen from a misunderstanding of the record respecting the wife of John, of Yarmouth. The first part of the book of records of Sandwich was originally so defective that very little can be made of them.* The clerk of each town in the colony was by law required to keep a full register of all the births, marriages, and deaths, and, indeed, of all important affairs in the church or town, and these records form a valuable repository to which antiquarians and genealogists can now resort; but no public enactments could secure them against the negligence or the unskillfulness of the officials, the remissness of those who ought to have reported the facts, or the ravages of fire in later times. Even the wills of many of the older settlers, from which much information might have been gained, are not unfrequently unrecorded in the county records. A very good idea, however, may be obtained of the common life and manners of the people from the traditions and literature which have come down to us. The solemn scriptural style of speaking, the long beards and short hair, the singular fashion of dress for both men and women, the kind of houses,—of which a few specimens still remain on the Cape,—the large fires “kindled by fat pine” in the immense chimneys, the food consisting so much of fish and maize, the “meetings on the Lord’s Day,” the town and church meetings in which equality and liberty found their utmost expression, the quaint laws which, in solemn phrase, extended to the minutest details of social and moral conduct, the prolix style of preaching and the long public and private prayers, the public whippings in the pillory, confinement in the stocks and exposures in the public assemblies for private offenses, and the scarlet letter-markings on the garments, or the brandings in the face for shameful crimes, are all proofs of a state of society utterly passed away. The family of which we are treating was among the most advanced in its opposition to such excesses. But a visitor on the Cape even at the present day will easily discover better representatives of this singular race than can be found, perhaps, in any other part of the world. The streams of immigration which have swept by them on each hand have left here remnants of an original stock, whose influence has been deeply impressed upon the national character. Poor as the soil and severe as the skies may have been in that region, the men and women which it has sent forth have done much to shape the destinies of this nation. John and Deborah (Batchelder) Wing had at least four sons, viz., Daniel (2), John (3), Stephen (4), Matthew (5), the ages of whom

* The Rev. Benjamin Fessenden, a minister of Sandwich, soon after his settlement in 1722, writes: "The first book of records for the town is partly lost and the remains are very broken and scarcely legible." C. C. P. Waterman, for many years town-clerk of S., writes that "none of the leaves of the book have been lost, but that the details given are very meager." The church and town records were kept by the same persons, and were indeed for a long time identical. The first date is January 7, 1650.

or the dates and places of whose birth we are without the means of determining. They all probably came with their parents and grand-parents in the same vessel to America, and remained together until the final settlement in Sandwich. We have no evidence that they had any daughters.

SECOND GENERATION.

2. Daniel, the eldest son of John and Deborah (Batchelder) Wing (1), of Sandwich, came with his father from England, and accompanied him until he was settled at Sandwich. They resided near one another, and perhaps in the same house. In 1640, June 28th, Andrew Hallett, being about to remove to Yarmouth, conveyed certain landed property to Daniel Wing, the instrument being witnessed by John Wing and Edward Dillingham. This was, undoubtedly, a farm in the immediate neighborhood of the paternal mansion, about a mile on the road now leading southward from Sandwich to Falmouth. The house in which he resided was probably not far from the spot which we have supposed to be the residence of his father. With his brothers he was enrolled, in 1643, among those who were at that time between the ages of sixteen and sixty, and therefore liable to bear arms. Even at this early period "some apprehensions of hostile movements on the part of the Narragansetts, on the west of the bay which now bears their name, began to be entertained, and the people were called upon for military drills and equipments." In Sandwich, as well as in Plymouth and other places, twelve or more persons "were enjoined to bring their muskets with shot and powder every Lord's Day to the meeting, with their sword and furniture to every piece, ready for service if need should require." The taking of fish was an important matter in the commerce of the town, and the profits of the leases of the Herring River (North Sandwich), and the cutting up of whales and other large fish which had escaped after being wounded from their pursuers and been stranded upon the shores of the bay was no inconsiderable item in defraying the expenses of the schools. Accordingly, in 1652 "an agreement was made with Daniel Wing and Michael Blackwell for the taking of the fish in Herring River"; and it was ordered that Edmund Freeman, Daniel Wing, and four others who are named, "shall take care of all the fish that Indians shall cut up within the limits of the town, so as to provide safely for it, and shall dispose of the fish for the town's use; also, that if any man that is an inhabitant shall find a whale and report it to any of these six men, he shall have a double share; and that these six men shall take care to provide laborers and whatever is needful, so that whatever whales either Indian or white man gives notice of, they may dispose of the proceeds to the town's use, to be divided equally to every inhabitant."

An earlier building of a mill for the accommodation of the inhabitants having failed, in 1654 four persons were engaged to build one, "the town paying twenty pounds"; and this sum was at once voluntarily subscribed by Daniel Wing and twenty-one other inhabitants. This and another mill were soon after erected, and millers were appointed by the town "to grind and have the toll for their pains." *

It was during the year 1655 that the name of Daniel Wing and a number of the prominent citizens of Sandwich are first mentioned in connection with a serious religious dissension in the town. From the first settlement of the place, its inhabitants were looked upon by the authorities at Plymouth as more than commonly indifferent to the execution of the laws in favor of uniformity in worship. Many persons had been subjected to fines for speaking disrespectfully of the laws, and of the mode of conducting public worship. So great became the falling off of attendance upon the ministrations of Mr. Leverich, the first minister, that (about 1654) he concluded to leave the place,† and for nearly twenty years the people were destitute of a regular pastor. In the mean time, Mr. Richard Bourne and Mr. Thomas Tupper, persons "of a religious turn of mind, and possessed of some powers of public speaking but without a regular ordination," conducted the services on the Lord's Day. "Each of them had his party, and each

* In 1633 Stephen Deane was allowed to erect a water-mill "for beating corn," and it was provided that "in case the said Stephen can beat all the corn that is or shall be used in the colony, it shall not be lawful for any other to set up a work of that kind except it be for his own use, or freely, without toll, or any other consideration whatsoever, to give leave to others to make use of the same." It appears, therefore, that millers had to obtain a public license.

† Rev. William Leverich, graduated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, England, in 1625, and received the degree of A. M. there in 1629, came to Salem October 10, 1633, preached at Dover until 1635, was a member of the Church of Boston August 9, 1635, assisted Mr. Partridge, of Duxbury, a short time, and then removed to Sandwich. He is spoken of as "a man of great piety and meekness." The precise date of his arrival at, or departure from, Sandwich, is not given, but he was there in 1640 as a settled pastor, and probably some years before, and in 1654 his goods were in the process of removal to Oyster Bay, when the vessel which conveyed them was seized by some petty official of Rhode Island but was soon released. While at Sandwich he labored among the Indians as a missionary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in New England. In 1653 he removed to Huntington, Long Island, where he remained till 1662, when he removed to Middleburgh and died there in 1692.

was the occupant of the pulpit according as he might have the most adherents." The congregation had become much reduced in numbers, and was not formally divided, though distracted by factions. One portion of them are said to have been tinged with fanaticism, and were much blamed for driving away the late pastor. Another portion are said to have been disgusted with such a state of things and to have mainly withdrawn from public worship. These last are said by Rev. Mr. Fessenden, the minister of Sandwich, 1722-46, to have embraced "Antinomian and Familistical errors, under the ministry of Stephen Batchelder, the first minister of Lynn." And yet Daniel Wing's name appears, with eighteen others of the most respectable and conservative of the church members, attached to a call given about 1655-56 to some person engaged as a temporary supply. The call was entered upon the regular minutes of that time, though it is now without superscription indicating to whom it was addressed or its precise date.*

Such notices prepare us to appreciate the position of Daniel Wing and others who acted with him in political and religious affairs. As early as 1646 a general movement was made throughout the Plymouth Colony in behalf of toleration. A petition was extensively signed and presented to the General Court "to allow and maintain full and free tolerance of religion to all men that would preserve the civil peace and submit to government." It was supported by numbers of the deputies, and by a large portion of the inhabitants of Sandwich. It was, however, overruled by the arbitrary act of Governor Bradford. In 1654 it is recorded that "the people of both colonies began about this time to be indifferent to the ministry, and to exercise their own gifts, doubting the utility of public preaching." Up to this time Daniel acted with the church of Sandwich, and his contributions were given to the support of Mr. Leverich and in the repairs of the parsonage. His name does not appear among the opponents of that minister, and the probability is that he was one of those who were offended at the proceedings which resulted in the long vacancy. In 1657 "the people called Quakers" made their first appearance in Sandwich. In Bowden's "History of the Society of Friends in America" it is mentioned that two English Friends named "Christopher Holden and John Copeland came to Sandwich on the 20th of 6th month, 1657, and had a number of meetings," and that "their arrival was hailed with feelings of satisfaction by many who had long been burdened with a lifeless ministry and dead forms in religion." The strict laws against all who would not conform to the dominant churches and civil authorities of Massachusetts Bay had led many to leave that colony and to test the more tolerant spirit of the Plymouth Colony. As early as in 1641 an ordinance had passed the General Court at Plymouth that "no injunction should be put upon any church or church member as to doctrine, worship, or discipline, whether for substance or circumstances, besides the command of the Bible." When, however, the Quakers first made their appearance in the Plymouth Colony, and the people of Massachusetts Bay wrote earnest letters to their brethren in the height of their excitement "urging the Plymouth folk to adopt their policy," they at first prevailed. For some years intolerant laws were enacted which, though enforced with difficulty, produced much suffering. In Sandwich when attempts were made to hold religious meetings under the lead of these new-comers, whose doctrines and modes of worship not unfrequently were inconsistent with the ordinary views of propriety and a due respect to authority, the result was for a while disastrous. The town had its advocates of religious intolerance. The Governor issued a warrant for the arrest of the new-comers, but when a copy of the warrant was asked for by William Newland, at whose house the meetings had been held, it was refused, and its execution was resisted. A severe rebuke and a fine was then inflicted upon them. The two prisoners were sentenced to be whipped, but the selectmen of the town declined to act in the case and the marshal was obliged to take them to Barnstable to find a magistrate willing to comply with the order. After this no one ventured to open his house for the accommodation of the preachers, and they were compelled to betake themselves to the fields. Tradition reports that many meetings were held at a secluded spot in the woods which, from the preacher's Christian name, was afterward known as "Christopher's Hollow." * Numerous complaints were made against divers persons in Sandwich for "meetings at private houses and inveighing against magistrates"; and several men and women were publicly whipped for "disturbing public worship, for abusing the ministers," for "encouraging" others in holding meetings, for "entertaining the preachers and for unworthy speeches." Daniel Wing, with three others, was arrested for "tumultuous carriage at a meeting of Quakers," and severely fined, though there is no evidence that a single Quaker, beside the preachers, was present, and it is certain that neither of these persons professed at that time any adherence to the new sect.

* This spot is still much venerated, especially by the descendants of those ancient contenders for religious freedom. The late C. C. P. Waterman, in a public lecture delivered in Sandwich, 7th month, 19, 1881, gave an account of his visit to the place some time before. "Several different growths from the stately original trees have given place to a thrifty grove of young oaks, and the large rock in the center upon which the preacher once stood has been removed and devoted to other uses, but the two rows of flat stones on the rising ground in front, where his auditors sat, are still there as they were placed at first."

Daniel and Stephen Wing refused to take the "oath of fidelity," not on the ground that they declined all oaths, but because this particular oath pledged them to assist in the execution of an intolerant enactment. Indeed, so generally were the laws against free worship condemned in Sandwich that the constable was "unable to discharge his duty by reason of many disturbent persons there residing," and it was enacted that "a marshal be chosen for such service in Sandwich, Barnstable and Yarmouth." In 1658 a list was made out by the Governor and other magistrates of "certain persons who refused to take the oath of fidelity," and for that reason had no legal right to act as inhabitants. They were, therefore, each fined five pounds to the colony's use, and it was ordered that each and every one of them should henceforth have no power to act in any town meeting till better evidence appeared of their legal admittance, nor to claim title or interest in any town privileges as town's-men, and that no man should henceforth be admitted an inhabitant of Sandwich, or enjoy the privileges thereof, without the approbation of the church and of Mr. Thomas Prince (the Governor), or of the assistants whom they shall choose. Many were summoned to Plymouth to account for non-attendance upon public worship, and distrainments were exacted from these recusants in Sandwich to satisfy for fines to the amount of six hundred and sixty pounds. Of these fines Daniel Wing paid not less than twelve pounds.*

Up to this time Daniel Wing, with others who acted with him, appear simply as friends of toleration and opponents of an oppressive law. But it was not long before he and most of these sympathizers became active converts to the persecuted sect. "In 1658 no less than eighteen families in Sandwich recorded their names" in one of the documents of the Society. Writers of that period (1658-60) say: "We have two strong places in this land, the one at Newport and the other at Sandwich; almost the whole town of Sandwich is adhering towards them," and the Records of Monthly Meetings of Friends show that "the Sandwich Monthly Meeting was the first established in America." Its records extend as far back as 1672, which is earlier than any other known in this country. It was not until the accession of King Charles the Second (about 1660) that the proceedings against the Quakers were discontinued by the royal order, and the most obnoxious laws were repealed in the colony of Plymouth, when we are told that "the Quakers became the most peaceful, industrious and moral of all the religious sects." In the fervor of religious zeal, and while smarting under severe injuries, they doubtless, at this early period, provoked the authorities by indiscretions which none of their successors in the faith would attempt to justify; and yet every worthy descendant of the Pilgrims must regret that those who had themselves suffered so much for their conscientious convictions should have inflicted any severities upon dissenters from their own views.

In 1658 the true bounds of every inhabitant's lands were laid out and ordered by the General Court, so that all real estate might be brought to record. There were fifty-five such owners whose names were recorded, among whom Daniel and Stephen Wing are mentioned.

Daniel Wing was twice married. His first wife, whom he married (Dec.) 9th mo., 5, 1641, was Hannah, a daughter of William and Joan Swift. The family of Swifts were numerous in Scusset (West Sandwich), where an inn of extensive reputation was long kept by one or more persons of that name. She died (Jan.) 10th mo., 1, 1664, three days after the birth of her youngest child.* His second wife, whom he married 6th mo., 2, 1666, was Anna, a daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Learned) Ewer.† All his children, except the three youngest, belonged to his first marriage. The inventory of Daniel Wing's estate was taken by Stephen Wing and Stephen Skiffe, 5th mo., 3, 1659.‡

* William Swift died in 1643. In the Plymouth Colonial Records, it is recorded: "In Probate Court, Plymouth, William Swift, Sandwich, 1643; administration by Joane, his wife, Jan. 1643. The inventory was showed at Court." His wife, Joan, made her will "the 12th day of the 8th month, 1662." In this her name is written by the scribe (for she made her mark with a great J) "Jone." The witnesses were John Vincent and Benjamin Hammond. The inventory of her property was made by Richard Bourne and James Skiffe on the 25th of the 10th month, 1663. In this she is spoken of as "Mistress Joane Swift." In her will she gives "unto Daniel Wing, his two sons, Samuel and John, a mare foal of a year old," also to "Hannah Wing, the elder, my best hat, and forty shillings to her daughters to be divided amongst them. Item, I give unto Jedediah Allen and Experience Allen the third part of my estate, this house and garden being a part of the third. I give unto my son William's children each of them a mare foal; my debts being discharged and my funeral being paid, I give the rest of my estate to my son William, whom I make my executor." Joan was a prominent person in Sandwich, she being esteemed wealthy, and she united in calls to pastors and the like public business. Jedediah Allen, son of Ralph, who married, in 1645, Esther Swift (Hannah Wing's sister), wrote in the family Bible as follows: "Jone Swift, my grandmother, deceased ye 26th day" — the remainder is torn off with the leaf. As the inventory bears date Jan. 25, 1663-64, she probably died Nov. or Dec. 26, 1663. — MS. of Geo. H. Swift, of Amenia Union, Dutchess County, N. Y.

† Thomas Ewer was one of those who, with Stephen Skiffe, was fined by Plymouth Court for bringing into Sandwich the Quaker preachers in 1658 and "required to take them back from whence they were brought." In the same Court, in 1658, he, with Daniel Wing and others, was ordered to be arrested for tumultuous carriage at a meeting of Quakers and fined 20 shillings; and in 1659 he was sentenced "to lie neck-and-heels during the pleasure of the Court," but it appearing "that the said Ewer was an infirm man" the matter was compromised, "if he will be rid out of the colony." In subsequent years he was made an inhabitant of Barnstable and had lands assigned him by a vote of the town in Falmouth. He died in 1667.

‡ In the 18th volume of the N. E. History and General Register is mentioned the will of a certain Daniel Wing, in which the testator speaks of his sons, Samuel and Batchelder, John, Daniel, and Jashub (the last of whom is called his youngest), and of a daughter named Lydia Abbott. From the coincidence of names in these two lists we

The descendants of Daniel and Stephen Wing have nearly all been connected with the society calling themselves Friends. The place in Sandwich where they have from the first worshiped is near Spring Hill, about three miles eastward from the central village. There, in the midst of a thickly settled neighborhood of the same faith, now rises the neat and commodious house of worship, which has succeeded one or two less costly structures before it. It has no spire, but being on an eminence can be seen from afar. It is divided into two parts, for the men and women respectively, and a partition is so contrived that it can be let down between them on such occasions as require separate meetings. The seats which are occupied by the ministers are three in number, gradually ascending one above the other, extending on each side of this partition, and divided by it, so as to accommodate the male and female can hardly avoid concluding that this must have been the Daniel who was the son of John, of Sandwich. It adds, however, to the list of the latter's sons the name of Jashub; but as we not unfrequently find that the public records fail to have all the children of a particular family, and as we find that there was, according to the Sandwich records, a Jashub Wing who was admitted a townsman in 1700, and a Shearjashub Wing who was on the list of freemen there in 1702, we may accept of this list as complementary to the one given above.

preachers. In the days when the writer was present (1874), the house was well filled with intelligent worshipers, and the preachers' seats were occupied by about a dozen men and women of a venerable and devout aspect, inhabitants of Sandwich, and during each week engaged in ordinary employments. Here for generations this people have worshiped God according to their simple forms, little affected by the changes of the outer world, and sincerely witnessing for their original principles. Even during our first revolutionary and the late civil wars, though they showed in many ways on which side their warm sympathies were, they could not be induced to act inconsistently with their peculiar tenets. In 1692 the liberty of conscience which had been secured to them only by royal order was guaranteed by the new charter, and they were no longer called upon to support other establishments. Near the house of worship are two cemeteries, the oldest of which is now filled with graves, which, however, are invisible above the smooth green turf, in accordance with the principle generally entertained that monuments and inscriptions were too frequently expressions of an ostentatious and flattering spirit. In the more recently constructed graveyard low tombstones are allowed, on which may be inscribed only the names of the deceased, with the dates of their birth and death. We seek in vain, therefore, to identify the precise spot in which the dust of any one of the family in its earlier generations now reposes. We only know that within that ancient inclosure are probably buried more of the name than can be found in any other in America.*

* The records of the "Monthly Meeting of Sandwich" show that the Society in that place was probably the earliest and for many years the largest of the same denomination in America. Regular worship has been maintained there since 1656, which was about twelve years after the rise of the sect in England, and before it had been generally established there.

3. John, a son of John and Deborah (Batchelder) Wing (1), of Sandwich, was born in England, and came to America with his father in 1632. His age at that time is not known, and we have no means of learning it from any subsequent dates. He went with his father and brothers from Saugus to Sandwich on the first settlement of the latter town, but must have left home at an early period to form a new settlement on the Cape, eastward. The town of Yarmouth was incorporated in 1639, but in the last month of the same year Barnstable was set off between it and Sandwich. It extends from Barnstable Bay on the north to the sound on the south. A part of its northern shore was originally called Mattacheese, from an Indian tribe residing there, on whose lands his maternal grandfather, Rev. Stephen Batchelder, had, with a few friends, made a fruitless attempt to form a settlement.

The precise date of his removal cannot be determined, as the early records of the town of Yarmouth were, in 1674, destroyed by fire, and the first twenty pages of the Harwich* records are entirely lost. From incidental notices in the records of the Court at Plymouth and at Barnstable we gather a few items. The first reference of any interest to our history is under the date of March 1, 1659, as follows: "The Court, taking notice that John Wing is erecting a building in a place that is out of the bounds of the township, and conceiving that such practices if permitted may prove prejudicial to the whole, do order that the said John Wing, and others that have done or shall do so, be prohibited to persist therein until it be further cleared to what township such lands belong on which they build." This order refers to a requirement of that period, that no persons should settle upon lands which were not included within the chartered limits of towns, and under the permission of the Court and body of freemen incorporated by the government. There was some doubt whether Sautucket, the place at which John Wing had commenced building, was within the limits which had been given to Yarmouth township, and until that question had been decided it was deemed proper to prohibit its settlement. As, however, it was reputed to be, and was soon afterward proved to be, within the chartered limits of the township, John Wing had already begun to build and soon established himself there. Indeed, there are some indications that for an indefinite time before this he had purchased and lived upon a piece of land in the vicinity. It was in the northern part of the town, in the neighborhood of the sea-coast. The Indians were then and for some time afterward numerous in that region, but they were peaceable and never engaged in any hostile proceedings against the English. The precise spot on which John Wing settled is supposed to have been a high piece of land surrounded by swamp or meadow land, subsequently called "Wing's Island," about a mile north-east of the present town of Brewster. It was doubtless selected on account of its fertility and adaptation to the grazing of cattle. Freeman calls him and Lieutenant John Dillingham (also from Sandwich) "large land owners." The line on the east of Brewster, for a long time called "Wing's Line," was the base of future surveys, and indicates a tract of land extending across the peninsula, from the northern to the southern coast. A large pond also in Brewster bears the name of Wing to the present time. In 1677, at a town meeting, May 30th, "the townsmen of Yarmouth did forewarn John Wing and our neighbors of Sawtucket from purchasing any lands in the bounds of our township of any Indian, or to take any possession thereof from them as being contrary to Court orders." The order here referred to was one which prohibited any private purchases from the aboriginal possessors of the soil; in the first place, because no private Indian was really the owner of tribal lands in severalty, and in the second place, because advantage was often taken of Indians by selfish and dishonest persons. It appears, however, that some transactions of this kind were allowed, especially with certain chiefs or sachems who were actual owners of individual property. The very transaction here alluded to was subsequently allowed, and became the legal title to a large body of land. In the Book of Evidences of lands for the jurisdiction of New Plymouth there is recorded a deed of land, of which the following is the purport, viz.: On the 1st of March, 1676-77, John Wing and John Dillingham, in behalf of themselves and others associated with them (viz., Thomas Clarke, Kenelm Winslow, Paul Sears, and Ananias and Joseph Wing), purchased of Robin (Indian), of Mattacheese, and Sarah his wife, daughter of Nepaitan* sachem of Mattacheese, of Samson, of Nobscusset, and Panasamust his wife, and of Ralph of Nobscusset, and Menetatomust his wife, other daughters of Nepaitan, all that tract of land, both upland and meadow, which they had in common or partnership lying in

* The township of Harwich was set off the north. History of Barnstable County, from Yarmouth in 1694; in 1793, that of Mass., by Amos Otis, Esq., and a private Dennis from Yarmouth, on the east; and collection by Josiah Paine, of Harwich, in 1803, that of Brewster from Harwich, on Mass.

* Nepaitan was a chief under Massasoit, the principal sachem of the Wampanoags, a friendly tribe of Indians which had jurisdiction over all the Indians along the south shore of Massachusetts Bay. He belonged to a tribe which went by the name of Mattacheesetts, or Mattacheese. He, with another chief of the same tribe, with their heirs and assigns, had been guaranteed the possession of a large parcel of land "bordering to the seawards between Bound Brook and the Sautucket River; provided they should live upon the same, and if they should ever sell the same, should sell it to the inhabitants of Barnstable before any other." Freeman, Vol. I., pp. 159-60. The names of Robin and Samson frequently appear in the Indian history of those times, and always in acts of friendship toward the white settlers. See Drake's "Book of the Indians," Book II., p. 47.

Saquetucket in the liberties or constablerick of Yarmouth, containing all that land lying between the place commonly called Bound Brook on the west, and the middle of Saquetucket River on the east, from the North Sea to the South Sea. In this purchase John Wing was to have a third part of four shares, Dillingham two shares, Clarke one share, Winslow two shares, and Ananias and Joseph Wing each one-third of four shares. The division was made and the land was deeded to each April 16, 1677-78. The original deed is said to be in the possession of Amos Otis, Esq., but a copy of it in full has been taken by the writer. The land lies partly within the limits of the present township of Brewster, and is said to be among the most valuable in that vicinity. On the 15th of March, 1680, it appears from the town records that an agreement was made "with our neighbors, the purchasers or proprietors of the land between Stoney Brook and Bound Brook, subsequently signed by Ananias Wing, Paul Sears, Kenelm Winslow and John Dillingham, Jun., on the one part, and by John Thacher and others on behalf of the town." This was probably the final settlement of the question between the town and the association in the above-mentioned purchase.

The years 1675-76 were memorable for the war with the Indians commonly called Philip's war. In consequence of the friendly attitude which had always been maintained by the tribes on the Cape, the inhabitants there were not molested at their homes, but they were subjected to severe losses both of men and money for the supply of troops. John Wing was assessed in 1676, "towards the charge in the late war, five pounds, sixteen shillings and three pence."

No traces are now perceptible of the residence in which John Wing lived for more than forty years. His first wife's name was Elizabeth, and Savage thinks that he found her in Saugus (Lynn). She was the mother of all his children. She was probably the person meant in the record of Yarmouth, which says: "Jan. 31, 1692 — The last of January Old Goody Wing died." "In 1623 the pew No. 9 in the new meeting-house was assigned to John Wing, Sen.," for which he paid five pounds, ten shillings, this being the ninth according to the dignity and valuation of the pews. For his second wife he married Miriam the daughter of Stephen Deane, of Plymouth, one of the "old comers." * John Wing died in 1699. His will was dated May 2, 1696, and was witnessed by John Thacher, John Dillingham, and William Griffith. A codicil is dated Feb. 6, 1698-99. This will, which is very lengthy, was presented to probate August 10, 1699, and it is now on record at Barnstable. It makes mention of his wife Miriam, his three children, Ananias, Susannah Parslow, and Oseah Turner, his grandsons John and Elnathan, and the children of his deceased son Joseph. He probably never bore office in his town, although he appears to have been public-spirited and much respected. He was devoted rather to agriculture and the acquisition of land for himself and his children. His wife survived him for two or three years. She made a will, which was dated May 24, 1701, and was probated in January 1702-03. It gives the principal part of her property, inherited from her parents, to Deane Smith of Chatham, whose mother was "her sister Bethia Smith of Monomoth." The inventory of her personal property was taken in January, 1702-03, and its value was assessed at "seventy-eight pounds, twelve shillings and two pence."

* The "old comers" were certain of the colonists who came over in the three vessels which first arrived, viz.: the Mayflower, the Fortune, and the Anne. Freeman, Vol. I., p. 152.

4. Stephen, a son of John and Deborah (Batchelder) Wing (1), resided in Sandwich. It is contended by some that he continued to live with his father even after his marriage. Tradition, however, with considerable confidence and probability, fixes his precise location on a farm not far from Spring Hill, now in the possession of a descendant. A part of the house which he built in 1644 is said to be still in existence. From his business as a town official, we conclude that for a while at least he must have lived at the central village of Sandwich. In 1646-47, he was married to Oseah, the daughter of Edward Dillingham, one of the nine associates to whom the town had been granted April 3, 1637. In accordance with the laws of that period, and which were enforced against all, however high their position in society, objections were made against them for some irregularity "before contract of matrimony, which the said Wing, coming into the face of the Court, freely acknowledging, he was according to order of Court fined, and so was discharged." * He appears, however, to have been an earnest advocate of religion and of morality, for he was a strenuous supporter of religious meetings and of public order. Yet he, with many others of that period, came in conflict with the exclusiveness and intolerance to which both church and state were then committed. From the first the whole family of his father and his mother's father were inclined to a greater freedom in worship and life than the customs and laws of the colonies permitted. In this they had the sympathies of what seems to have been for many years a majority of the inhabitants of Sandwich.

The religious difficulties of the town by no means originated, as has been supposed, with the advent of the Quakers. Loud complaints were made respecting those who resisted the severe and arbitrary laws of the colony long before any meetings forbidden by law were set up, or the name of Quaker was known. And yet the prevalence of such a spirit and sentiment prepared the people of Sandwich to decline enforcing and even to resist the cruel laws against the Quakers when these people made their appearance. In 1657 when Nicholas Upsall visited Sandwich there was a great commotion. Public proclamation was made that for every hour's entertainment of him "a severe fine was to be exacted." In spite of such a law, several families, at that time not at all inclined to Quakerism, not only received him to their houses, but allowed him and others to hold meetings and attended upon them. Stephen, with his brother Daniel, began first with contending for tolerance, and soon their sympathy with suffering was exchanged for conversion to the faith of the sufferers. Severe fines were imposed upon him, imprisonment was threatened if not absolutely inflicted on him, and even the town privileges of a freeman were withdrawn from him and his friends because he declined for a time to take the oath of fidelity which bound him to assist in the execution of such laws. He had been admitted a freeman and enrolled among those

"liable to bear arms" in 1643, and had been assigned his proper proportion and boundary of land in 1658. So large, however, was the number of converts to the Friends, and so general the disposition to tolerate them among the people of Sandwich, that the laws against them could not be enforced, and if any punishments were inflicted it had to be done out of town. Stephen and his family became permanently connected with the Society of Friends, and his posterity have in all their generations remained true to his example.

In 1667 he, with William Griffith, presented to probate the will of his father-in-law, Edward Dillingham, and in 1669 he was chosen town-clerk. In 1675 the town voted to record his name with many others as having a just right to the privileges of the town. In 1678 he seems to have overcome his scruples about taking the oath of fidelity, for his name that year appears among those on the list of its receivers. On the 9th day of the 4th month, 1653-54, his wife Oseah died; and on the 7th of the 11th month of the same year he married Sarah, the daughter of John Briggs, who came to America in 1635, aged 20. She died 3d month, 26, 1689; but the period of his own death is uncertain. One account gives it as 2d month, 24, 1710 (old style). The will of one named Stephen Wing is given in the records, dated Dec. 2, 1700, and proved July 13, 1710; and it mentions sons Nathaniel, Elisha, and John, and daughters Sarah Gifford and Abigail Wing, and a grandson, Jeremiah Gifford. "Ebenezer Wing and Matthew Wing, sons of the deceased," were appointed by the judge to be executors of the will. From this date, we infer that Stephen continued to live through the first decade of the last century, although he must then have been not less than eighty-eight years of age.

5. Matthew, a son of John and Deborah (Batchelder) Wing (1), was probably the youngest of the brothers, and was born in England. From the copy of a document recently discovered by Mr. Wordell in old junk and paper-stock in New Bedford, Mass., and furnished the author of this work by R. C. Ingraham, of the Free Public Library of that place, we have derived all the information in our possession respecting him. This document purports to be a power of attorney given by William and Hannah Shanks, of Stroud (or Strood), Kent County, England, to Daniel Wing, of

* The names of Nathaniel and Elisha appear in the family records of one branch of Stephen's descendants. The list of his children taken from the Sandwich records, and commencing with Ephraim, in 1649, we know is defective, for the name of Nathaniel is mentioned in the Plymouth records of March 2, 1646-47. Nathaniel and Elisha are mentioned as sons in the will of Stephen.—N. E. Hist. and G. Register, Vol. 18., p. 68. The probability seems to be that the names of the first two children of Stephen and Oseah Dillingham Wing were never placed upon the town records, on account of the withdrawal of Stephen and others from the church established by law. "Thomas Wing, Senior," is mentioned in the town records as a constable in 1655, and as a representative of the town in 1672 in some transactions with "The Sachem of Manomet." The affix of Senior implies that there was yet another of the same name. We have no means of knowing the relationship of this Thomas, who, however, must have been a man of considerable distinction in the public affairs of that period.—Freeman's "Hist. of Cape Cod," Vol. II., pp. 67, 69.

Sandwich, to recover and receive in their name certain property which had been left by Matthew Wing in the care of said Daniel Wing, but which had been given into the possession of James Green, of Malden, Mass., and had by him been wrongfully kept back from the rightful heirs of said Matthew Wing. From the statements made in this paper it appears that Matthew Wing had accompanied his father and brothers in their emigration to America, and became the owner of an estate in what was, in 1680, the town of Malden, in the colony of New Plymouth, but that he soon returned to England and settled at Stroud, where he married Joan (or Joane), a daughter of Robert Newman, and had by her a son named John (22). Before this only child became of age Matthew died, and, during his son's minority, the widow gave to James Green, of Malden, Mass., who had married her sister Elizabeth, power to receive for her, and in her name, the estate which Matthew had left in the hands of Daniel, of Sandwich. On the death of Matthew, and the early death of his son, this estate had legally devolved to the three brothers, Daniel, John, and Stephen, but in consequence of representations of the claims of the relatives in England, they had resigned their rights in favor of Hannah Gresson, the daughter of the youngest sister of Matthew's widow (who had married William Shanks), and her heirs. In this paper Hannah (the widow), now Mrs. Shanks, and her husband William give power to Daniel to get possession of this property and pay over the proceeds to the English claimants. Among these claimants were, not only Joan (or Joane) Newman Wing (then the wife of William Shanks), her sister Elizabeth, who had married James Green, of Malden, Massachusetts Bay, and Anna, who had married Thomas Gresson, and had a daughter named Hannah, the wife of William Shanks. The result of this effort to obtain Matthew's property has not been ascertained. The document thus so singularly recovered is dated August 27, 1680, in the thirty-first year of the reign of Charles the Second, and is sealed and executed before James Almond, Esq., mayor of the city of Rochester, in the County of Kent.

8. John, a son of Daniel and Hannah (Swift) Wing (2), went with other inhabitants of Sandwich in 1680 to settle at Sippican on the western side of Buzzard's Bay, and at that time within the limits of Barnstable County. The place was originally incorporated under the name of Rochester, but was soon set off to Plymouth County and a part of it recovered the old Indian appellation.*

He married Martha, the third child of William and Hannah (Pratt) Spooner, of Acushnet in the new Dartmouth purchase. His death took place August 1, 1717. His will is dated March 25, 1717, and provides:

"Imp. I give and bequeath to my loving wife, Martha Wing, the eastern end of my new dwelling house, to be hers during her natural life; also one cow out of my stock at her choice; also two swine which is also to be at her choice; also twelve pounds money per year, yearly to be paid her by my son Samuel: and one cow and two swines' keeping yearly, both winter and summers during her natural life, upon condition that my son Samuel fails in maintaining her in all respects as hereinafter I shall will and order him to do.

"Item. I give and bequeath to my son Samuel Wing (upon condition herein expressed) and to his heirs and assigns forever, all my housing and lands, both uplands, meadows and swamps, divided and undivided, that I have and do own in the afores^d Rochester and elsewhere and all my moveable estate of all sorts and kinds whatsoever, excepting what I have heretofore and shall hereinafter in this instrument otherwise dispose of to be his, his heirs and assigns forever. That is to say he maintaining his mother Martha Wing during her natural life, with all things necessary to her comfortable subsistence in this life, at the judgment and discretion of my afores^d two sons Stephen and John Wing or to pay to her as afores^d.

* Sippican extended originally on the north-west coast of Buzzard's Bay, from Sandwich to Dartmouth. It was incorporated in 1686 under the title of "Rochester in the County of Barnstable," but it was soon set off to Plymouth County and has since been divided into several towns. In 1679 Joseph and Barnabas Lothrop, of Barnstable, acted as agents for its settlement, and between 1684 and 1689 Rev. Samuel Arnold, John and Samuel Hammond, Peter Blackman, Moses and Aaron Barlow, Samuel White, John Wing, Joseph Doty, Jacob Bumpas, Joseph Burgess, John Haskell, Abraham Holmes, Job Winslow and — Sprague became actual settlers.—Freeman's "History of Cape Cod," Vol. I., p. 312. Respecting the history of John, of Rochester, and descendants, we refer to the Rochester and Dartmouth records, and the "Records of William Spooner and his Descendants, by Thomas Spooner," Cincinnati, 1883.

His other children were equally provided for from his large landed estate. In another part of his will he makes mention of property due him from "the estate of his honored father Daniel Wing of Sandwich." It is not known how long his wife Martha lived after his death, but she was certainly living in 1717. He left a large property, and the reputation of having lived an honorable and industrious life. His occupation was that of a farmer and a cooper.

9. Daniel, Jun., the youngest son of Daniel and Hannah (Swift) Wing (2), was entered as townsman of Sandwich in 1691 and married, in 1686, Deborah, a daughter of Henry and Hannah Dillingham "in Friends' way." His residence was a short distance from his father's, near the outlet of the upper pond as it enters the lower. Daniel died in the third month of the year 1740. He appears to have been the owner of a considerable amount of property.

His name is mentioned with many others, and especially "Nathanael Wing," "Widdow Wing," and "Ebenezer Wing," in a "list of heads of families in Sandwich," made out by Rev. Benj. Fessenden in March, 1730. In June 23d, 1729, credit is given by the same writer to Daniel and Samuel Wing for three and a half days' work each in building the minister's house. "On the 13th of May, 1717, he deeded half of his undivided interest in some lands which he owned in Dartmouth, Bristol County, Mass.,* to his son Edward. In the deed Daniel speaks of himself as a cooper, and of Edward as a husbandman."—[Holden.]

By his will he gave and bequeathed "to his dearly beloved wife one feather bed and furniture to it at her election with all other my household

* Dartmouth was originally contracted for by thirty-six colonists, who met at Plymouth, March 7, 1652, though the confirmatory deed of purchase was not given till 1694, and then names fifty-six proprietors. The grant was intended to include an entire township known by the name of Dartmouth, thirteen miles square. It comprised the territory now embracing the towns of Dartmouth, New Bedford, Fair Haven, Westport, and Acushnet. I am not informed whether John Wing was one of the original proprietors, but he certainly was the owner of property in Dartmouth from its actual settlement, about 1660. The town was not incorporated till 1664.

II. CHILDREN OF JOHN, OF YARMOUTH.

12. Joseph, a son of John and Elizabeth Wing (3), married, April 12, 1676, Jerusha Mayhew, and thus formed a connection with the celebrated missionary family of the Mayhews of Martha's Vineyard. In the will of his father his sons are spoken of, but their names are not given. He was one of the shareholders in the land association which purchased the section between Privet Creek and Sauquacket River. He was buried May 31, 1679. He had at least one son whose name has come down to us, viz., John.

13. Ananias, a son of John and Elizabeth Wing (3), settled in that part of Yarmouth which has since been incorporated as Brewster, and the records of Harwich give his wife's name as Hannah, and her death as taking place Dec. 9, 1730. He was among the "inhabitants of Yarmouth who lost horses in the first expedition to Mount Hope against King Philip in 1675," and he was assessed three pounds, sixteen shillings for war expenses. He united with many others in petitioning Governor Josiah Winslow and the General Court on the subject of a war against the Narragansett Indians, and finally went as a private soldier under Captain John Gorham in the second expedition against that tribe in 1676, when the troops suffered so severely. In 1733 grants were made of lands to those who had served in the Indian wars, and Ananias was one of those mentioned in the act, but he did not live long enough to share in this tardy expression of gratitude.* He died Aug. 30, 1718, and his will, dated March 5, 1717, shows that he was possessed of a large landed estate. His widow Hannah lived many years after his death, and died Dec. 9, 1730.

* The town of Gorham, in what was then the Province but now is the State of Maine, was to a great extent settled originally by soldiers who served under Captain John Gorham in this Indian war, and those who inherited their claims. Gorham himself never married. He is said to have been an uncle to one of the Fullers, who removed to Winthrop the same year that Job Fuller went there (see art. 267), and had a legal claim to the property, though he was defrauded out of it.

14. John, Jun., son of John and Elizabeth Wing (3), married Mary —, and died about the year 1683. His widow, with the assistance of Jonathan Bangs* (whose son James married Bethia Wing in 1735-36), settled up his estate, the inventory of which was taken June 9, 1683. They left but one child, whose name was John (46).

15. Susannah, the youngest daughter of John and Elizabeth Wing (3), married William Parslow, and died August 2, 1717, aged about 70.

III. STEPHEN WING'S CHILDREN.

16. Nathanael, a son of Stephen and Oseah (Dillingham) Wing (4), was admitted a townsman in Sandwich in 1681, and is probably the one of that name mentioned by Rev. Benjamin Fessenden in his list of heads of families in Sandwich in 1730. His sons were Nathanael, Ebenezer (47) (born in 1696 or 1697), and Joseph.

20. Ebenezer, a son of Stephen and Sarah (Briggs) Wing (4), was doubtless the one of that name who was admitted a townsman in 1700, is mentioned on the list of freemen in 1702 and as the guardian of the younger children of Edmund Freeman in 1720, and in Fessenden's list of heads of families in 1730. In 1744 Ebenezer Wing, "with 23 others of Pocasset and Manomet, petitioned to be released from paying to the support of Rev. B. Fessenden, the regular minister of Sandwich and the town schools." This was probably on account of his connection with another congregation and with other schools than those which were sustained by law. He married, 2d month, 29, 1698-99, Elizabeth Backhouse, and died 12th month, 24, 1738, aged 67 years. His wife died 4th month, 21, 1757.

IV. MATTHEW WING'S SON.

22. John, a son of Matthew and Joan (Newman) Wing (5), resided with his parents at Stroud, County of Kent, England, but died before attaining his majority in age. The property in America, which his father left, was for some years in litigation, the result of which is not given in the papers which have come into our possession (5).

* J. S. Ryder, the town-clerk of Rochester, in 1878, says: "The Wings were among the more prominent citizens of the town (judging from the offices recorded in the records), and often were chosen to office of honor and trust by their fellow-citizens. The greater part of them have been located in the eastern part of the town, now Marion, where some of their descendants may now be found."

children were by his second marriage and his two youngest by his third. In some legal instruments now in the possession of the family of the late Asahel Wing of Fort Edward, are a number of receipts, notes, deeds and conveyances, from which we are able to infer what must have been the relations of the several parties. Among these is a certificate of marriage after the Friends' form, of "Edward Wing and Sarah Tucker, daughter of Abraham and Hannah Tucker, all of Dartmouth," dated, "First day of sixth month, 1714." Among the names appearing as witnesses to this document are: John, John jun^r, Joseph, Abraham, Henry, Ruth and Content Tucker; Jedediah Allen; Adam, Jacob, and Elizabeth Mott; Matthew, Edward, Sarah, Samuel and Dorcas Wing; Mary Lapham; Joseph, Joseph jun^r, John, and Benjamin Russell; Susannah Jenkins; and William and Isaac Wood. There is also a deed in which Daniel Wing, "a cooper," conveys to Edward Wing, "a husbandman," one-half of his undivided interest in his lands in Dartmouth; a Collector's warrant for the town of Dartmouth, dated March 21, 1725-26, in which Edward Wing is mentioned as a constable; two deeds, dated 1698, by which Daniel conveyed to Edward Wing two parcels of land, one of eighty-five and another of fifteen acres, in Dartmouth; two other deeds, dated respectively 1716 and 1727, in one of which Edward is styled an "innholder" and a "weaver."

In the year 1768, at a town meeting, 2d month, 20, "a petition was presented from the people called Quakers for their proportionate share of the ministerial lands." It was signed by Joshua Wing, George Allen, Barnabas Hoxie,

* Benjamin Swift was the grandson of the father of Hannah Swift, who married Daniel Wing, Sr. (No. 2). The wife of Benjamin Swift was Hannah Wing, married, Feb. 24, 1703-04. His three sons also married into the Wing family, viz.: Samuel, born Sept. 11, 1704, married, May 18, 1741, Mercy Wing of Sandwich; Zebulon, born April 15, 1712, married, Nov. 15, 1739, Rebekah, the daughter of Daniel (9); and Benjamin J., married, Sept. 4, 1741, Waitstill Bowerman, the daughter of Hannah, the daughter of John and Martha (Spooners) Wing (No. 8). Samuel Swift lived in Wareham, Plymouth County, Mass., where many of his descendants still live, and Zebulon's third son, Abraham, born in Falmouth, Mass., Dec. 31, 1745, married Johana Sisson, and removed to Dutchess County, N.Y., where his descendants reside in the town of Washington. Abraham's son Lemuel, however, went back to Falmouth, and married Mercy Wing, March 27, 1812.—MS. of Geo. H. Swift of Amenia Union, Dutchess County, N. Y.

Gideon Hoxie, Samuel Gifford, John Allen, Edward Wing, Edward Dillingham, Josiah Gifford, Daniel Allen, Zaccheus Wing, and Samuel Wing. The petition was unanimously referred to a committee "to confer with the petitioners and examine the foundation on which the town was settled, the manner and reasons of the grants of lands to the ministry, and whether the petitioners have any equitable right to the same and report." There were at this time "not less than sixty families of Friends or Quakers whose rates were not available for the support of the ministry." It appears then that collections were not enforced according to law, and that those who attended Friends' meeting even claimed that they had a just right to the ministerial lands. Both claims were, however, negated at the public meeting.

33. Daniel, a son of Jashub and Anna (Hoxie) Wing (11), married Elizabeth Wing.

34. Joseph, a son of Jashub and Anna (Hoxie) Wing (11), married Deborah Clifton, and died December 12, 1753.

II. JOHN'S GRANDCHILDREN.

37. Deborah, a daughter of Ananias and Hannah Wing (13), married George Weekes, of Harwich. A short distance beyond the new cemetery in Harwich, in an open field where there are a few ancient graves, is one with this inscription: "George Weekes, born in Dorchester, Mass., A. D. 1683, came to Harwich, married Deborah Wing October 15, 1714, preached to the Indians, and perished in a snow-storm when an old man in the hollow one hundred rods south of this spot. He was a grandson of George Weekes, a Huguenot, who fled to England, and came to America in 1630." It is said that this Mr. Weekes was an educated gentleman, and for some time a missionary to the Potanumquut Indians. "The circumstances of his death," says Mr. Freeman, "were painful. His last days were clouded by lunacy; and in his wanderings he perished by exposure to cold in the low grounds south of the Harwich Academy, which is known from this casualty as Weekes' Hollow to the present day. A sermon delivered by him on the occasion of Mr. Taylor, of Yarmouth, being buried in a well was published." He had a family of five daughters and two sons, one of whom died in infancy. His widow, Deborah, died Feb. 9, 1725-26.

38. Hannah, a daughter of Ananias and Hannah Wing (13), married February 7, 1711-12, Robert Astin, who was the first schoolmaster in Harwich of whom there is any record. He died February 25, 1718. She lived till September 13, 1723.

In 1725 "the town was divided into six removes for the purpose of giving all the families the benefit of a school during some portion of each year. Each of these removes was allowed to have the school kept up within it for a length of time proportioned to the number of families and of children belonging to it until the school went the whole circuit of the town." The first remove, within which Elnathan and his brother John resided, consisted of sixteen families with twenty-nine children, and was entitled to have the school for six months and one week; the second consisted of twenty-five families with fifty-five children, and was entitled to the school for eight months and three weeks; the third, which contained twenty-two families with fifty-six children, was entitled to the school for eight months and three weeks, and so on until the whole six removes had received their just proportion. According to this arrangement it would take three years, six months, and one week to go over the town. By his first wife Elnathan Wing had but one child, a daughter, who died May 14, 1722, when she was only eight days old. The mother died three days before this child, May 11, 1722. His second wife died September 22, 1763, aged sixty-nine years. He himself was dead in 1772.

He was a soldier in the war against the French. In his will he makes mention of some land which he owned near Amos Lawrence's house. As this will was probated in 1773, he probably died in or near that year. In the cemetery at Brewster there is an inscription on one of the tombstones, which reads: "John Wing—1768"; but as there were others of the name, this may not refer to him.

His will was dated Nov. 15, 1757, and was proved Aug. 15, 1758. Joseph Wing and his wife Rebecca were his executors, and

* These were probably "Tithingmen," whose office was first referred to in 1682 "with reference to the Indians for their better regulating, and that they may be brought to live orderly, soberly and diligently." Each one had under his charge ten families of Indians, and those of a town, collectively, formed a kind of court for the trial of Indian cases. In 1692 the duties of these officials had been extended, so that in common with justices and constables, they were required to take care that the law regarding "the observance of the Lord's Day," was obeyed "by all persons in all the particulars thereof," "on Saturday night after the sun is set, or on the Lord's Day, or the evening following." They were entirely distinct from the "Selectmen," who had charge of town affairs in general.—"Davis' Landmarks of Plymouth, in Franklyn Howland's Genealogy of the Howland Family," p. 77. Dane in Worcester's Dict. sub. v. * In Walker's "Hist. of the Walkers" it is said that Walter Walker (born December 10, 1749, and died in Macedon, Wayne Co., N. Y., March 16, 1844, in the 95th year of his age) married Thankful, the daughter of Jabez and Anna Wing; that this Thankful died in October, 1825; that her husband was a blacksmith, was a member of the Society of Friends, and came from Smithfield, R. meeting, December 28, 1772, he was one of a committee of seven "to consider of the approaching struggle and report at an adjourned meeting." Fourteen days afterward this committee reported, "That they were entitled to all the rights of natural-born subjects of Great Britain, and had not forfeited said rights, and that the acts of Parliament raising a revenue in America with the extended powers of the Board of Commissioners and Court of Admiralty, and the stationing a part of the many troops here are at variance of our rights established by charter."

The town, also, on the same date, further voted: "That if our representative, or any other person in this town, either has or shall basely desert the cause of liberty for the sake of being promoted to a post of honor or profit, or for any other mean view to self-interest, he shall be looked upon as an enemy to his country, and be treated with that neglect and contempt that he justly deserves."

He remained all his life zealously attached to the Society of Friends, but soon after the Revolutionary War (about 1790) he was induced to emigrate to the new State of Vermont. The place he selected for his future abode was then several days' journey from the earlier settlements, but has since become the town of Montpelier, the capital of the State. 5. John W., born December 25, 1774.

79. Abraham,* a son of Edward and Sarah (Tucker) Wing (29), married, about 1741, Anstis, the daughter of William Wood, of Dartmouth, who was born September 7, 1723. When he was about twenty-three years of age he removed to a place in Dutchess County, N. Y., called "The Oblong."† Among the legal papers mentioned above (No. 29) is a conveyance dated July 6, 1745, in which "William Wood, of Dartmouth, glasher," "for, and in consideration of

* In the following notices of Abraham and Edward Wing and their descendants, the writer has principally been indebted for his facts, and to a considerable extent for his language (he prefers generally when using original authorities to use, as far as convenient, the exact words of the writers), to A.W. Holden, M. D., of Glen's Falls, who, having relinquished his original design of publishing a history of the Wings of Glen's Falls and vicinity, generously placed his numerous manuscripts on the subject at the disposal of the present writer. We have also been much assisted by consulting "The History of the Town of Queensbury (Glen's Falls), in the State of New-York, with biographical sketches of its distinguished men, etc., by A. W. Holden, M. D., Albany, N. Y., 1874."

† In the disputes between the States of New-York and Connecticut respecting boundaries, there was a strip of land, 580 rods wide, which extended along the eastern side of the counties of Dutchess, Putnam, and a portion of Westchester, which was finally conceded to New York. From its shape it was called "The Oblong," and one district in Dutchess County soon appropriated and still bears the name. As the titles to these lands could be made the sum of six hundred and twenty pounds, current money of New England, old tennor, paid by Abraham Wing, of Oblong, in the County of Dutchess and Province of New York, Taylor," conveys to the latter a piece of land in the Oblong containing about one hundred and eighty acres. The precise spot at which Abraham Wing settled was on or near what has been generally called "Quaker Hill," a fertile plateau on a high hill, 1600 feet above tide-water, and commanding a view of several counties in three States. The Precinct in which it was situated was then called "Beekman's," and is four or five miles a little north of eastward from the present village of Pawling. It was included in the district called the Oblong, and was near the Connecticut line. It had been settled almost exclusively by Friends from Long Island and the Eastern States as early as 1630-40, and a Society of that order had been formed as early as 1744, which met alternately here and at some place in the "Nine Partners." A small framed building had been early erected, which was succeeded in 1767 by another building, costlier and larger, on the opposite side of the road, and still standing. This last was used by our soldiers during the Revolutionary War, and the oaken floor still shows marks of the crutches of the wounded who there found shelter. With Abraham and Jedediah Wing, who must have been on this ground before 1745, came such companions as John Hoag, David Akin, Moses Bowdish, Jesse Irish, and Nehemiah Merritt, whose families, we shall find, frequently intermarried with theirs.

On the 29th day of May, 1762, a patent was granted to twenty-three persons who had three months before petitioned the Provincial Council of New-York for a grant of a thousand acres of land for each petitioner, embracing a territory of six miles square, in what is now Warren County, N. Y., and then called Queensbury * in honor of the King's lately wedded consort. To prevent too great a monopoly of the wild lands, the King had wisely restricted individual grants of land to a thousand acres for each real occupier of the soil.† Within a month, however, so completely had the ownership of this patent been changed that only four of the original patentees remained in possession. Abraham Wing purchased for a nominal sum all the rights, titles, and interest of a number of these patentees, and at a meeting of the new proprietors in the shop of Nehemiah and Daniel Merritt on the Oblong in Dutchess County, N. Y., July 10, 1762, a vote was passed that the land should be divided by lot on the 24th of the same month, at the same place. At the drawing accordingly held, Abraham Wing was fortunate enough to draw three of what were afterward found to be the most valuable lots, comprising those on which the best portion of Glen's Falls is laid out. Abraham Wing was subsequently granted by the proprietors a lot of ten acres, containing the valuable water privileges at the Falls, on the north side of the river, in consideration of his erecting at that point a

* The name of Queensbury is still given to the township, but the name of the village, which was once "Wing's Corners," and afterward Pearlville, has since been changed to "Glen's Falls." The Falls themselves were originally "Wing's Falls," one of the four islands in the vicinity is still called "Wing's Island," and the bend of the river there is named "Wing's Eddy."

† By a vote of the original proprietors Abraham Wing was authorized to keep and preserve the certificate and patent which had been given them. These were preserved in a wooden case of very ancient-looking material one foot long, half a foot wide, and two inches deep. Among them are the original patent elegantly written in old English script, having the seal of King George the Third (of some kind of cement or stucco, very hard, and of a drab color, somewhat like that of Rogers' statuary), and two other papers. The seal has been photographed on both sides, as has also been the autograph of General Philip Schuyler, which he appended to a letter respecting the taking of iron from the machinery in the mills of Abraham Wing in the time of the Revolution. These pictures are in the possession of the family of Halsey R. Wing, of Glen's Falls.

grist-mill and a saw-mill. In 1766 he removed his family and dependents, and, with some pioneers, commenced the settlement of the town of Queensbury. The first town meeting was held in the following May, at which he was elected supervisor, an office which he filled for nearly twenty years, during which time he was the merchant, the lawyer, the minister, and the innkeeper of the place in one person. The first religious meetings in the place were held in his log residence. Permission was given him and his friend, James McKinney, "to have some care and oversight" of such meetings "once a week, on each First Day at twelve o'clock," by the Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends at Nine Partners, in Dutchess County, the 19th of the 3d month, 1767; and they were required "once in three months, or as often as they can, to make report to this Monthly Meeting how the meeting is kept up and conducted, and what satisfaction they have in meeting together in that great and necessary duty." The early meetings of the Friends at Glen's Falls were for some time under the superintendence of the Monthly Meetings at "The Oblong" and at "Nine Partners," in Dutchess County, but from a "removal certificate" which was granted to Abraham Wing, dated 1st month, 16, 1766, we infer that near that date this subordination was broken off. He, with his family, suffered serious losses during the struggle for Independence, chiefly through appropriations and requisitions made by the American army, and for which no adequate compensation was ever received. His patriotism was unquestionable, though he and many of like religious principles were not unfrequently misunderstood for not sustaining more actively the military movements. He remained a consistent and earnest member of the Society of Friends until the close of life, and his remains, with those of many first settlers of the town, repose in the little burial-ground where the old Quaker meeting-house stood, in accordance with the usage of the members of that sect in those times, without tablet or monument. He died at Glen's Falls, 5th month, 3, 1795. His will was dated "20th day of 9th month, 1794," and was proved May 27, 1795. It bequeathed a house and farm containing 342 acres, with stock, farming utensils, and household furniture. His wife, Anstis Wood, died 29th of 5th month, 1807.

80. Jemimah, a daughter of Edward and Sarah (Tucker) Wing (29), married Benjamin Shaw, who lived near Spring Hill, in Sandwich. After his death (1780) she removed to Oblong. She was a noted preacher among the Orthodox Friends. She had no children; but after the death of her brother Edward's first wife she took under her charge his son Thomas, who lived with her in Sandwich and at the Oblong.

81. Edward, a son of Edward and Sarah (Tucker) Wing (29), was born probably in Sandwich, July 27, 1727, though in some accounts he is said to have been born in Dartmouth. His first wife, named Content, was of the Wood family, in Dartmouth, and was born 9th month, 7, 1723. At an early period (before 1754) he removed to "Nine Partners" in Dutchess County, N. Y. His wife died there in giving birth to twins, and, according to the records of the Monthly Meeting at Oblong, the infant children were taken into the families of Friends. He was by occupation a saddle and harness maker. On the 23d of 8th month, 1758, he married Hannah, the daughter of David and Keziah Hoag, of Nine Partners. She was born Nov. 22, 1735. In 1793 he removed to Queensbury (Glen's Falls) in Warren County, N. Y., and erected a building, a portion of which is now occupied by James Sisson, near the Soldiers' Monument. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and died at Glen's Falls at an advanced age.

They had three daughters, viz.: (1) Phebe, who married Daniel Smiley, and had at least three children, viz.: Albert K., A. Christian character; his twin brother, Alfred Wing, who is the proprietor of a similar establishment about seven miles distant, at Lake Winnepesaukee, and conducted on the same principles; and their sister, Sarah F., formerly a well-known preacher among the Friends, but more recently a Protestant Episcopalian, residing at Saratoga, N. Y.: (2) Rebecca, who never married, and resided with or near her sister at Vassalborough, Me.: (3) Mercy, who married Henry Getchell.—"Howland's Genealogy," p. 47, and private letters.

* The mother of Hepzibah, the wife of Thomas Hathaway, was the daughter of Mary Starbuck, of the Island of Nantucket, who has generally been regarded as the first white person born on that Island, and the first who, in New England, professed that form of faith which was adopted by the Friends. She "was convinced" under the preaching of Thomas Chalkley and Thomas Storey. In "Macey's History of Nantucket" (p. 59) it is recorded: "There was in this Island one Nathanael Starbuck, whose wife was a wise, discreet woman, well read in the Scriptures, and not attached unto any sect, but in great reputation throughout the Island for her knowledge in matters of religion, and an oracle among them on that account, insomuch that they would not do anything without her advice and consent."—LIS. of Dr. Henry Russell, of Sandwich.

He was a merchant, and near the close of the war for Independence had valuable shipping destroyed by the British. Soon after these losses he removed, with his younger children, to Kentucky, and finally died, in 1815, at the age of 84 years, at the residence of his son, Charles F., in Greenville, Muhlenburg County. The records of Dartmouth give the names of some of his children. Of his daughters, one married a Mr. Allen, of Frankfort, Ky., another married Dr. Nelson, of Knoxville, Tenn., and another married a Mr. Hodge, of Tennessee.

100. Edward,* a son of Samuel Wing (40), married, Aug. 7, 1774, Elizabeth Miller, of Warren, R. I., who was born in Bristol, R. I., July 18, 1754. He was a sea-captain of more than ordinary skill and trustworthiness. For some years he went on whaling voyages, in which he endured much hardship, but was successful in accumulating a comfortable property. On one occasion, it is related of him that he was taken up into a whale's mouth, and barely escaped Jonah's three days' lodging by the exhaustion of the whale in its last struggles. When on land he resided in the family of his father-in-law, in Warren. His wife was twenty years younger, and died in Ashfield, September 1, 1839. During the revolutionary war his vessel, which, with its cargo, was valued at about $8000, was captured and confiscated by the British, when he renounced his seafaring life and became a farmer in Goshen, Hampshire County, Mass., where he died, February 7, 1814.

At an early period he removed to Conway, Berkshire County, Mass., where he must have been one of the earliest settlers. The precise date of his arrival there is not given, but from J. G. Holland's "History of Western Massachusetts," we learn that the town of Conway originally belonged to Deerfield, and had no settlers until 1763. It was first called Southwest, and was incorporated June 16, 1767. His first wife died soon after his settlement there, and not long afterward he married Abigail Isham. By her he had eight children, viz.: John, born April 24, 1768 (243); Peter, Peter again (244), William (245), Oliver (246), Abigail (248), and three who died in infancy. By a third wife, Jane Trescott, he had three more children, viz.: Lovina, Roxana, and Freeman (247), born Jan. 12, 1800. He resided about three miles from the village of Conway, on a farm of about one hundred and fifty acres, tolerably fertile, on a plateau on the summit of a hill. The places where his house and barn were situated are easily determined from the remnants of walls and ditches which once must have been at their base, and from some trees which remain from an orchard. The property has now passed out of the family. He, however, remained on it until his death, which took place Dec. ⁸~~12~~, 1822, when he was aged 90 years and 7 months. He possessed extraordinary health and activity, as he was said never to have been sick and to have been engaged on the day he died in hard work in severe winter weather.

106. James, the second son of John and Mary (Knowles) Wing (42), had four sons, viz.: John, Nathan, Benjamin, and Isaac.

107. Thomas, a son of John and Mary (Knowles) Wing (42), is mentioned in "a list of three sailors taken (Aug., 1758) by the enemy on board the sloop Dolphin, on their passage to Louisburg, Nova Scotia, John Thompson, master, and James Young, mate."

108. Barnabas, a son of John and Mary (Knowles) Wing (42), resided on his father's farm in Harwich (Brewster), a short distance east of the present village. The house in which he and one or two generations before him lived was a large, long, and unpainted building, a story and a half high, covered on each side, as well as on the roof, with shingles, and surrounded by a number of smaller buildings covered in like manner, and in the center of a large and beautiful farm. It was supposed to have been more than one hundred years old when it was demolished some years ago, having been built, probably, by John, the father of Barnabas. During the occupancy of the latter it was kept as an inn. He married Hannah Berry, and lived to be over 80 years of age. According to an inscription on a tombstone in the grave-yard at Brewster, his wife, "Hannah, died Nov. 28, 1795, aged 50 years and 6 days."

(born March 3, 1726, and died Feb. 25, 1808), and appears to have been prominent in the public affairs of his native town. At a public meeting, Nov. 11, 1774, the doings of the Provincial Congress were approved of, and Simeon Wing and four others were appointed "to consider the recommendations of the Provincial and Continental Congresses, and report at a future meeting." At another meeting, Feb. 1, 1775, he was chosen with others "to see that the recommendations of the Congresses were carried into execution"; and in 1780, March 8th, the town voted that he, with six others, "be a committee to take under consideration the Constitution agreed upon by the Delegates of the people, and transmitted to the towns for their acceptance." On the 9th of October, 1784, having lost his large estate in Sandwich in consequence of the depreciation of continental money and other calamities of the war, he followed his sons to the province of Maine. With his wife and his youngest son, William, he settled on a tract of land adjoining the north-western shore of the lake on which his other children were

4. Sylvanus, born 3d month, 5, 1789. (308)

131. Barnabas, probably one of Ebenezer's grandsons, but by which of his sons is still more uncertain, was born April 10, 1764 or 1765. He was known to be from some part of Cape Cod, when he came, about 1770, to what was then the "District of Maine." He was one of the original settlers of the town of Wayne, Kennebec County, and from the fact that the name of that town was originally Pocasset we infer with some probability that these first settlers were from the part of Sandwich, Mass., which bears that designation. According to his own account he had five brothers, viz.: Nathanael (or Nathan), Jesse, Noah, Judah, and Lemuel, and three sisters, viz.: Keziah, Olive, and Polly. Notwithstanding the rather vague tradition in the family that Barnabas "came from England," we think it almost certain that he came from Barnstable County, Mass. He had five sons, viz.: Joshua, born June 30, 1792 (309), Noah (310), Joel, Barnabas, and Isaac Dexter (311), and four daughters, viz.: Melissa, Asenath, Sarah, and Joanna. He died Jan. 20, 1825.

132. Jesse, a brother of the preceding Barnabas, died when he was 87 years of age, and had four sons, viz.: Jesse,

Seth, Jochebed, and —, and four daughters, viz.: Lucy, Sarah, Olive, and Isabel.

133. Noah, also a brother of the preceding, had three sons, viz.: Stephen, Ezekiel, and Bradford.

134. Keziah, a sister of the preceding, married Deacon Isaac Dexter, and they had seven sons, viz.: Constant, Stephen, Nathanael, Freeman, Gideon, Isaac, and Amaziah.

135. Olive, a sister of the preceding, married Enoch Swift, and had two sons and seven daughters, viz.: Elnathan, Nathanael, Betsey, Polly, Esther, Susan, Mercy, Olive, and Thankful.

136. Polly, a sister of the preceding, married Richard Handy, and had four sons, viz.: Abisha, Ebenezer, Jesse, and Richard.

137. Nathanael, probably a brother of the preceding, lived in Pocasset, Barnstable County, Mass. By his first marriage he had Nathanael (312), and Mehitable (313); and by his second, he had Lemuel (314), and Judah (315).

138. Edward, a son of Joseph and Catharine (?) Wing (63), removed at an early period (about 1765), to Nine Partners, in Dutchess County, N. Y., with his brother Daniel. He is said to have had four sons, viz.: Russell, Thomas, Joseph, and John, but of them I have no information.

139. John, a son of Joseph and Catharine Wing (63), married Jemima Shepherd "at the Friends' Meeting in Dartmouth," Mass., 10th month, 5, 1752. She died 11th month, 28, 1816.

140. Daniel, a son of Joseph and Catharine Wing (63), married, at Dartmouth, Lydia Shepherd, and removed at an early period to Dutchess County, N. Y. The place on which he resided is still pointed out two or three miles east of Wing's Station, in Dover township, with a large tract of land surrounding it, which he divided with his children. He was a farmer, and an adherent to the Society of Friends.

145. Thomas, a son of Benjamin and Rhoda (Rogers) Wing (64), married Hannah White, and removed soon after his brother Jonathan, and at an early age, to Dutchess County, N. Y. The place on which he settled was in the valley of the Ten Mile or Weebutook River. This valley is bounded on the east by the Taconic and on the west by the Matteawan hills, which often rise to the proportion of mountains, with the river meandering along its whole length and finally bending near where Thomas Wing settled, toward the east, and emptying into the Housatonic, in Connecticut. This valley is from two to three miles average width in that vicinity, and is composed of rolling land of great fertility and beauty. It is said that the land owned by Thomas Wing and his brothers had a continuous length of about four miles. His residence was on the north side of the road which runs eastward a half mile from the present Wing's Station in South Dover, and traces of the walls and cellar are still perceptible. He became, after his settlement in Dutchess County, a zealous Methodist, and he "was one of the original members who signed the first records on the books of a society of that order in Sharon, Connecticut, just across the eastern line of the State." A church was afterward organized near where he resided in Dover. He died in 1823, aged 82 years, and his wife in 1825, aged 83 years.

Her descendants claim that "her great-grandmother, Johanna Leg, was a direct descendant of Charles V., Emperor of Austria, and King of Spain. She was said to have possessed many personal attractions, and in her youth had many admirers. After the death of his wife, Anna, Jonathan Wing married Sarah Sherman. He went early to Dutchess County, N. Y., and settled on the Oblong,* but soon removed to a house yet standing near Russell's Mill, where he worked at scythe-making, a business then extensively followed by blacksmiths, and which he had learned in Boston. In 1797 he purchased two hundred and sixty acres of land in Stanford in the same county, where he became a prosperous farmer and was noted for reserving a portion of his annual crops for such neighbors as had not much land. He died in 1826 and his wife in 1833, both in Stanford, and each 84 years of age. Their farm continued in the family until 1853, and is now owned by a member of the Bowerman family.

* The families of Sherman and Kirby were early settlers on the Nine Partners. Benjamin Sherman came, in 1765, from New Bedford and purchased a farm at the foot of Quaker Hill, on the road to Pawling, since owned by John Kirby and now in the possession of Archibald Dodge. This "Kirby House" was at one time the headquarters of General Washington, and in it was held the trial by court-martial of General Schuyler in the summer of 1778. It was built by Reed Ferris in 1771, and was owned by him during the revolutionary war.

149. Prince, a son of Benjamin and Rhoda (Rogers) Wing (64), had his intention of marriage with Jemimah, the daughter of Thomas and Ruth (Wing)† Howland, entered on the records of Dartmouth on the 25th day of November, 1774: "attest, Benjamin Russell, Town Clerk." He died

* The spot where his house stood (now off from any public road and left by the straightening of highways in a meadow back of the cemetery in South Dover) is marked by a rather decayed Balm of Gilead poplar-tree, grown at first from a sprout used as a riding-whip by one of the family on their removal from the East to the Oblong.

† I can find no trace of this Ruth Wing, who, however, is said by Captain F. Howland to have married in Dartmouth, June 25, 1740, Thomas, the son of James and Deborah (Cook) Howland, who owned and lived on a farm at Westport, and was a manufacturer of spinning-wheels, foot-wheels, chairs, etc. He was also a surveyor of highways, tithing-man, and in other ways a public officer. They had Deborah, born 9th month, 25, 1740; Sophia, Ruth, born 9th month, 30, 1743; Catharine, born 12th month, 14, 1745; Thomas, born 3d month, 25, 1748; Matthew, born 1st month, 16, 1751; Cook, born 4th month, 4, 1755; John, born 11th month, 15, 1758; Charles, born 6th month, 4, 1764, and Jemimah (who married Prince Wing), 11th month, 25, 1774.

151. Gideon, a son of William and Mary Wing (66), resided at Duxbury, Mass., but followed a seafaring life, and at the commencement of the revolutionary war was on a voyage to England. He contrived, however, to find his way to America, and soon enlisted as a soldier in the Patriot Army. He was present at the Battle of Monmouth, N. J., and other battles, and was a prisoner for some years before his death. At the close of the war, or soon after, he settled first at Hallowell (now Augusta), Kennebec County, Maine, and afterward (1782) at Vassalborough, twelve miles up the Kennebec River. He, with his son Allen and Allen's father-in-law, Joseph Robinson, were among the original members incorporated as the First Baptist Church of Vassalborough. He died February 27, 1821, aged 76 years, 9 months, and 16 days. He married, February 25, 1767, on the road to Calais, near the old cemetery which once constituted a part of his property, and was sold by him for burial purposes, July 21, 1794. He was the first Justice of the Peace appointed on the nomination of the people, January 16, 1800.

160. Tabitha, a daughter of Jabez and Anna (Spooner, Tobey) Wing (74), married Jonathan, a son of Isaac and Sarah (Sherman) Handy, of New Bedford, Mass. Their children were Caleb, Jonathan, Mercy, Jane, Priscilla, and Eleanor.

161. Mary, a daughter of Jabez and Anna (Spooner, Tobey) Wing (74), married Edward, the son of Isaac and Sarah (Sherman) Handy, lived in New Bedford, and had thirteen children, viz.: Ansel, Joseph, Jabez, Isaac, John, Pardon, Sarah, Leonard (born July 10, 1807), Anna, Thankful, Polly, Edward, and Nye.

162. David, a son of David and Sarah Parker Wing (75), removed with his father when he was scarcely of age to Montpelier, in the new State of Vermont. The earlier settlers who had gone before and during the Revolution into that region, had scarcely penetrated so far north and west as the district to which the family now adventured. He, however, found a sufficient number to call for his services as a teacher. In his "History of Montpelier," Thompson writes of him: "David Wing had doubtless received a rather superior common-school education, though the educational accomplishments, which he almost at once exhibited after coming into the settlement, were probably mainly the fruits of his native tastes and scholarship, which are strikingly conspicuous in all the memorials, social or civil, that he has left behind him. He taught the second school of the town, which was opened, it is believed, in the same year in which he became one of its inhabitants. Within about two years after his arrival, he was elected Town Clerk, and during the next dozen years, the offices of Town Agent, Town Representative, Judge of the County Court and Secretary of State seem to have been crowded upon him in regular and rapid succession. As an evidence of his great popularity among his townsmen, the fact may be cited, that while he was holding the office of side judge and chief judge of the County Court (tenfold the best office held by any inhabitant of the town), he was elected the Town Representative four years previous to his election as Secretary of State ; and not content with that, for the several years during that time, they threw their entire vote for him as State Treasurer.

" He was elected Secretary of State in the Fall of 1802, and while still holding the office, and in the midst of his usefulness and high promise, was suddenly swept away by a malignant fever. And rarely indeed has ever a death occurred in this section of the State which produced so profound a sensation in community. His death was mourned as a great loss, not only to the town but to the whole State ; and the remark was then everywhere made that had he lived no man within its limits was more sure than he of soon being promoted to the highest offices within the gift of the people."

In 1792 he married Hannah, the second daughter of Colonel Jacob Davis, born at Charleston, Mass., April 8, 1774. She is said to have been a lady of unusual personal attractions and moral excellence.* "In person he was of a medium height, with a good form, fine head, shapely features, and an animated countenance, all made more attractive and winning by the dignified affability of his manners." It is said of him that "he would correctly and rapidly draw up any kind of document, report a dispatch or a legal instrument, and at the same time maintain a connected and lively conversation." The new charter of

* In Thompson's "History of Montpelier," an aged lady is said to have related a characteristic anecdote: "I well remember," she said, "the first silk dress that was ever purchased and brought into Montpelier. It was at a meeting late in the year 1803, held in a new barn owned by Colonel Davis, that Mrs. Wing, the wife of Judge David Wing, came in with it on, and made quite a sensation among us; but she being so good a woman, and putting on no airs about it, we did not go to envying her. We thought it extravagant, to be sure; but as her husband had just been elected Secretary of State, and might wish to take her abroad with him, we concluded at length that the purchase might be perhaps, after all, quite a pardonable act."

Montpelier was obtained from the Legislature of 1804 by his persistent efforts, and still exists as it was first drawn up in the beautiful chirography of Secretary David Wing, Jr. He died at forty years of age, Sept. 13, 1806. The names of his children indicate the classical tastes of the father and the estimation in which he held certain noted personages of history.

165b. Mattie, a daughter of Samuel and Joanna (Haskell) Wing (77), married Jesse Hinds, of Brandon, Rutland County, Vt., and had a numerous family, in which were Jesse; Sarah, who married a Congdon, had several children, and lived to 90 years of age; Lavia, who married an Adams; Mattie, who married a Baldwin; Mary, who married A. M. Weed, of Binghamton, N. Y.; Joseph Ganson and Wing. These are all dead, except perhaps the last, who was living recently at Binghamton.

166. Phebe, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), married, at Quaker Hill, Dutchess County, N. Y., Nehemiah, the eldest son of Nehemiah and Dinah Hopkins Merritt, of the Oblong, in Dutchess County, N. Y. They lived at Nine Partners, and had eleven children.

167. Sarah, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), married Ichabod, the second son of Nehemiah and Dinah H. Merritt, who went with Abraham Wing in the first settlement of Queensbury, was chosen Collector at the first town meeting there, filled various offices in that town, and erected the first framed house there, which was burned, with most of the houses and mills in town, during the advance of General Burgoyne. They then returned to Nine Partners, where they continued to reside. They had three children, viz.: Joseph (the first white child born at Glen's Falls), born 12th month, 17, 1766, died 11th month, 15, 1826; Deborah, died 3d month, 6, 1820 (unmarried), and Mary.

168. Hannah, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), married Daniel, the third of the sons of Nehemiah and Dinah H. Merritt; resided in Dutchess County, and had one daughter, who is said to have married Asa Lyon of that county. Dr. Holden thinks this is a mistake, and that there was really no issue of this marriage.*

169. Benjamin, a son of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), was born at Quaker Hill, Dutchess County,

* These three sons of Nehemiah Merritt were reputed to be descendants of Mr. Thomas Merritt, who was born about the year 1685, emigrated from England or Wales and settled at Rye, Westchester County, N. Y. He had three sons, Joseph, Thomas, and Nehemiah, of whom Joseph went to Nova Scotia, and left children; Thomas removed to Canada, and was the ancestor of the late Hon. William H. Merritt, one of the projectors of the Welland Canal, and of another of the name residing at St. Catharine, in Ontario, and a member of the Dominion Parliament; and Nehemiah, who settled at Quaker Hill, Dutchess County, N. Y., was a blacksmith, and a person of mark and consideration, especially among the Friends. Nehemiah is supposed to have been the agent of some persons who owned land in the vicinity, and to have lived at a spot high up on Quaker Hill, protected from the Western winds, and commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect. None of his descendants reside there now. Among his great-grandchildren, the grandchildren of Daniel, and the children of Nehemiah and Phebe (Thorne) Merritt are William T., of Poughkeepsie, Jacob T., of Tuckahoe, N. Y., and M. Franklin, of Stanford, Conn.

N. Y., married, at the Oblong Meeting House, Thankful, the daughter of Caleb and Mercy Lockwood of Westchester County, N. Y., who was born 10th month, 22, 1746, and died 10th month, 22, 1814. He was one of the original settlers of Queensbury in 1765, and his name appears on the records of that town in 1767. From that date onward for about forty years he was prominently active in all public affairs, and held some of its most important offices. He died June 19, 1824.

THEIR CHILDREN.

1. Hannah, born 10th month, 7, 1771. (367)
2. Rachel, born 7th month, 5, 1773. (368)
3. Nehemiah, born 5th month, 2, 1776. (369)
4. Sarah, born 3d month, 20, 1781. (370)
5. Richard, born 6th month, 26, 1783; died Dec. 16, 1861. (371)
6. Benjamin, born 8th month, 26, 1785; died Sept. 2, 1850. (372)
7. Mahala, born 7th month, 10, 1788; died June 4, 1867. (373)

170. Deborah, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), married Daniel Jones, a brother of David Jones, so famous in American history as the betrothed lover of the hapless Jane McCrea. Daniel was one of the earliest settlers in Queensbury, and contributed much to the development of its water power and resources. He was himself a millwright and a part owner of a grist and saw mill and of islands in the river, which he afterward conveyed to Abraham Wing, and one of which bears the name of Wing's Island to this day. At the outbreak of the Revolution he adhered to the royal party, and with other loyalists fled to Canada. The property which he left was confiscated and sold after the war. In a letter to his father-in-law he communicated the tidings of the death of his wife in child-bed, in Montreal, March 28, 1782, and of the infant four months afterward. After the war he settled at Brockville, Upper Canada, where he received from the Crown a large grant of land in compensation for his losses, and where his descendants still reside and are people of considerable influence. His son, Richard, was arrested during the war and imprisoned for a while at Albany as a Loyalist and Tory, but was released through the intercession of his more patriotic father-in-law, Abraham Wing.

171. Patience, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), married Phineas Babcock, one of the earliest settlers of Queensbury, who probably accompanied Abraham Wing when the latter first came to the town. For more than twenty years his name appears continuously on the town records as the bearer of various offices. He suffered much loss during the revolutionary war, for which, in spite of his unquestioned patriotism, he received no compensation. At one time he lived at the head of the lake, but not far from 1790 he removed to St. Albans, where, about one mile west of the present village, he erected the first framed house in that vicinity. His home was adorned with shrubs and flowers planted by the hands of his wife, "a woman of refined taste and culture." He died about the year 1820, but his wife survived him about fifteen years. She died at the house of her son-in-law, Willard Jewell, Esq., of St. Albans, in the month of February, aged 84. Their grandchildren and great-grandchildren are numerous in St. Albans. Their children were: (1) Benjamin, who married Salome Lane (had five children, viz.: Sidney, Morey, Henry, Jane, and Maria), and is now dead; (2) Polly, who married Francis Hogle, lived in Canada, had fifteen children, and died some years since; (3) Betsey, who married Martin Merritt, and had thirteen children; (4) Sarah, who, in 1805, married Willard Jewell, of St. Albans, who was living in 1871, but she died Feb. 26, 1870, aged 87 years, having had thirteen children ; (5) Harry, who married Rosina Huntoon, but died without issue ; (6) Wood, who married Sophia Peer, lived for some years at St. Albans, and removed to Troy, N. Y., where he died, having had four children ; (7) Abraham ; (8) Phebe, and (9) Patience.

172. Content, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), married, when she was but fourteen years of age, Jacob Hicks, who had the management of the mills belonging to Messrs. Jones & Wing. He died probably in the latter part of the year 1773, or the early part of 1774. He had two daughters, viz.: Sarah, who married Amos Baldwin, and had six children, and Anstis, who married, first, James Murray, and after his death Reuben Morgan, and had a numerous family. After the death of Mr. Hicks, she married James Hickson (commonly written Higson), a thorough patriot, who was taken prisoner with Andrew Lewis, his brother-in-law, and others, and taken to Canada. After running the gauntlet in the hands of the Indians they were rescued and confined for a while in prison, but through the influence of Loyalist kinsmen they were kindly treated, and sent home at the close of the war. After his return he purchased and lived upon a farm a mile north of Glen's Falls. He and his wife adhered to the Quakers, used their language, and one who knew well "Aunt Tenty," as her husband used to call her, says that she "was a very chatty, agreeable person." She was an intimate friend and confidante of Jane McCrea, often exchanged visits with her, and, after the massacre, the Indians exhibited at her father's house "Jenny's scalp with its long tresses of golden hair." Hickson had two daughters and one son, the last of whom removed west.

173. Abraham, a son of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), married, early in 1779, Polly McKee, of White Creek, and lived at Glen's Falls. In 1781, when Major Carlton (a nephew of Sir Guy), at the head of a motley force of Europeans, Tories, and some Indians, captured Forts Anne and George, word came across the river that they were destroying everything before them and sparing the lives of none. The inhabitants fled in great haste, but in the confusion Mrs. Polly Wing was left with two of her children alone. She is said to have taken these infant children and fled to the recesses of the Great Cedar Swamp, which still borders with its dense undergrowth and tangled vegetation the eastern boundaries of the village. In quite as much danger from the wild animals and reptiles which abounded in the forest, she spent the night in efforts to keep her children from making a noise. She is said to have been a native of Scotland, and to have come to this country when she was but seventeen years of age. She is described as "a woman of fine presence and rare personal attractions, as well as of great courage and fitness to encounter the rough scenes of border life." She died April 6, 1831, aged 78 years.

2. Daniel Wood, born July 25, 1780. (375)

6. Mary Ann, born Oct. 7, 1788. (379)
7. Abraham, born Aug. —, 1791. (380)

174. Mary, a daughter of Abraham and Anstis (Wood) Wing (79), some time before the Revolution married Andrew Lewis, who came to Glen's Falls from New Milford, Connecticut. He resided at one time on what was called Wing's Island, where he escaped being killed or taken prisoner by the Indians at the Parke Massacre (about 1777), on account of the absence of any boat by which they could reach the Island, and the fear of his rifle if they attempted to wade the river. He was, however, twice made a prisoner and taken to Canada, where the last time he remained till the close of the war. Numerous descendants of his still reside in the neighborhood. Their immediate children were: (1) Rachel, who married Jonathan Pitcher; (2) Russell; (3) Robert, who married a daughter of Nathanael Folsom; (4) Deborah, who married Hanmer Palmer; (5) Mary, who married Timothy Nye; (6) Andrew; (7) Jemima; (8) Jane, who married a Winston; (9) Abraham; (10) Charles.

175. Thomas, a son of Edward and Content (Wood) Wing (81), was born at the Oblong, in Dutchess County, N. Y., about 1750, but went, when only a child, after the death of his mother, to live with his aunt, Jemima Shaw, first at Sandwich and then at the Oblong. In early life he made some whaling voyages, married, Nov. 5, 1775, Mercy Dakin, of Fairfield, Connecticut, removed to Duanesburg, Schenectady County, N. Y.,* where he purchased and for the remainder of his life remained on a farm, was a much esteemed elder among his brethren of the Society of Friends, and died there at the age of 72 years. He had five sons and five daughters, viz.: Joseph Thomas (381), Benjamin, Edward (382), Abel, and David (383), Beulah, Phebe (384), Lydia (385), Mary (386), and Lucy (387).

* Some traditions have given occasion to the assertion that Thomas married, 11th month, 3, 1772, Beulah, the daughter of Jabez and Deborah Delins, of Rochester, Massachusetts, and that he removed from Sandwich to Dutchess County in 1779. The family records, which we have preferred to follow, give the facts as above.—Letters of Benjamin Wing, of Rochester, N. Y.

176. Abraham Thomas, a son of Edward and Content (Wood) Wing (81), after the death of his mother at his birth, was taken into the family of Abraham and Mary Thomas, was named from this foster-father, married, about 1781, Lydia, the daughter of Joshua and Martha (Peckham) Brownell (who was born at Little Compton, Rhode Island, near the commencement of the revolutionary war, and had removed with her father to Nine Partners, in Dutchess County, N. following obituary notice, slightly abridged, and taken from a newspaper published in Mount Vernon, Knox County, Ohio, gives the principal facts of his life: "Died, at the residence of his son-in-law, H. Sherwood, in Mount Vernon, on the 30th day of April, 1865, John Wing, Esq., in the 86th year of his age. The deceased was born at Quaker Hill, Dutchess County, N. Y. His father removed to Glen's Falls when he was only fourteen years of age, but in 1817 he came to Mount Vernon and resided there continuously until his death. He was married in 1802 to Phebe Terrell, of New Milford, Conn., who still survives. He was a man of most exemplary life and unblemished character. Possessed of a strong and vigorous intellect, his opinions were always respected and had much influence. In politics he was always liberal, but never fanatical. During the late rebellion he had a strong anxiety for the salvation of the Union, and a never failing confidence that it would be saved and the insurrection would be quelled. In the success of the Union army he seemed to feel that his highest earthly hopes were realized. He died, leaving five children, one son, residing about one mile from Mount Vernon, and four daughters." His wife died on the 25th of December, 1866, aged 87 years.

cuit and County Court from its organization in 1798 to 1856, fifty-eight years, at Greenville, Muhlenburg County, Kentucky, was a captain in the war of 1812, and served with distinction in the battles of the Thames and other places. He raised and equipped his company of 102 men and reported for duty at Newport, a distance of 250 miles, in thirty days from the date of the call for men. When he was buried, in 1861, it was with his old flag of 1812 around him, and, although an army of 4000 Confederate soldiers marched out of Greenville to pay respect to his memory, his wife declined the offer of their commander, General Buckner, to bury him with military honors. He had eight children, two sons and six daughters, viz.: William H. Campbell (411), Jane Merrihew (412), Samuel M. (413), Caroline, Anna, Lucy, and Lucelia (414). Henry was born at Dartmouth, 1st month, 1764, was a merchant, a member of the Society of Friends, for many years a resident of Providence, R. I., where he died in the fifty-second year of his age, near the close of the 6th month, 1815.

"In a family of eleven brothers and sisters she was an invalid but outlived them all, was a most devoted sister and an example of patience, kindness and motherly affection to all under her care and sweet influence." She died 10th month, 28, 1863.

196. Paul, a son of Paul and Abigail (Wing) Wing (89), married Anna Dennis, of Portsmouth, R. I. He was a farmer and lived on the paternal estate with his brothers and sisters until his death, 7th month, 27, 1849. "He was

* Of these children of Content and Henry Russell, (1) Lydia Wing married, 9th month, 28, 1851, at Sandwich, Nelson Crocker, of West Barnstable, born 2d month, 18, 1817, a captain of an East India merchant vessel, who died at Sandwich, 1st month, 23, 1884, aged 67 years, 8 months, and 10 days. She was for many years a teacher in Sandwich Academy, but her health failing, she relinquished this employment, remained for twenty years an invalid, and died at Sandwich 8th month, 18, 1872, leaving no children; (2) William Hussey was a merchant and a school-teacher in Sandwich, where he died unmarried 7th month, 22, 1848; (3) Henry, became a physician with an extensive practice in Sandwich, married, first, in Nantucket, 5th month, 5, 1842, Mary Mitchell, born 11th month, 22, 1813, and died in Philadelphia, Pa., 7th month, 1, 1851; and secondly, at West Farms, Hampshire County, Mass., Jan. 10, 1856, Louisa Jane Matthews, born at Pawtucket, R. an elder and sat at the head of the Friends' Meeting in Sandwich nearly forty years, one of the most loved and exemplary men the Society ever had."

197. Ebenezer, a son of Paul and Abigail (Wing) Wing (89), never married, and was "an overseer of the Society most of his mature life. His kindly nature made him beloved by all who knew him, especially the young, who were attracted to him by his cheerful, social temperament and by the interest he always shewed in their welfare." * He died at Sandwich, 8th month, 17, 1859, aged 69 years.

The family of Paul and Abigail (Wing) Wing (89) remained for some years unbroken at the paternal residence, near the spot which had been in the possession of Daniel Wing's descendants from the earliest settlement of Sandwich. There all their children had their home, and there they all died except Deborah, Beulah, Hepzibah, and Content, who were married. Before the door of the present building is a granite stepping-stone on which have been cut for several generations the initials of the name of the heads of the family. There is a notice of the family in the published journal of John Wigham, under the date of 10th month, 1797, which is worthy of transcription: "On the seventh day rode to Paul Wing's, where I lodged. In his family were five precious daughters, Hepzibah, Beulah, Content, Tryphosa and Lydia, and several sons who appeared hopeful, among whom with their worthy parents so sweet a spirit seemed to prevail that the house felt like a paradise."

* The extracts in the three last paragraphs of the members of the Society of Friends. are taken from the "American Annual Tract Association, 389 Broadway, New-York. Monitor" intended specially for obituaries

The members of this family can best be described in the words which the grateful piety of Dr. Henry Russell has used in a reply to inquiries respecting a home he so long enjoyed. We have no inclination to abridge the account in any essential particulars, or to separate the notice of each individual from its general connection: "In extreme old age Paul Wing (89) became much enfeebled in mind, yet in all his conversation and life he exhibited the benevolence and kindness which were prominent in his better days. His wife, Abigail, also gave evidence of impaired reason for several years before her death. She was short of stature but well developed, and with a high forehead. Her benevolence and deep interest in every person she knew were plainly seen. A little colored boy adopted in the family received from her the affection of a mother, and none were allowed to relieve her of the care of this child as long as she could walk. The Marshpee Indians, who often visited her and were employed about the house, speak of her even at this late period (1874) with warm gratitude for the many tokens of kindness she and her family bestowed upon them. Unlike her, her eleven children were of more than medium height and weight, with large features, prominent Roman noses, and strong, muscular development. The dignified carriage of Samuel, Paul, Jr., and Ebenezer, dressed in Friends' attire, with their broad-brimmed hats, white cravats and standing collars, and seated in the gallery of the Friends' Meeting-house, usually made a strong impression upon all, and especially upon strangers. Paul, Jr., Ebenezer, and Lydia lived together on the old homestead, and in the same house where they were born, making one family for nearly half a century. During this time neither of them was married, and the property was possessed in common. When one had a new garment, the other had one also, and usually of the same piece. Each had access to the same purse in great harmony and brotherly love. When Paul finally married Anna Dennis of Portsmouth, Rhode Island, the estate remained undivided, Lydia and Ebenezer making one family, and Paul and his wife another, the common dwelling-house having been reconstructed for two families. The Quarterly Meetings which were annually held in Sandwich were occasions for the exercise of a large hospitality. The writer has known twenty-one Friends from Nantucket, besides many from other parts, to lodge there in one night. For more than thirty years on such occasions they were in the habit of giving up their beds to strangers and sleeping on coverlets in the attics, etc. In those days, before railroads were constructed in this region, and when people came with horses and carriages, it was no small labor to provide for all. Everything, however, was cheerfully done, and even the boys were ambitious to outdo their neighbors and cousins. The great east room, with high-backed chairs filled with the erect forms of these many Friends, was my first impression of Quakerism. I was required by my Aunt Lydia to be with her at the door when these strangers arrived, and (though I could not have been more than four or five years old) to shake hands with every one. The separations caused by the death, the marriages, or the calls of business in this family of eleven children were occasions for much regret to the parents and the remaining portion of the household; and on the other hand, the family greetings and reunions of relatives of several generations were seasons of extraordinary joyousness. Those of them whose relationship was remote, it was often said by observers, seemed to love each other more tenderly than nearer connections in other families. Paul, Jr., was naturally reserved, sedate, and firm, but kind and beloved. It was said of him by a citizen of Sandwich, when he died, that his equal was not left in town. Ebenezer was of a different temperament. At twenty-five he was frequently complimented as the handsomest man in Sandwich. His cheeks were red, his eyes dark chestnut with a smiling expression that almost talked. He had large language, and was good at telling a story or giving a joke. His mirthfulness was so extreme that it was commonly said to be as good as a play to hear 'Uncle Eben' relate what he had seen and heard. Content Russell was of the same temperament, and much resembled him in person. Her mind was well cultivated and stored with much reading, especially of the writings of Friends, though she was the least sectarian of any of the family. Her strong maternal affection made her a Christian mother and sister. Lydia Hussey, the last survivor and the most feeble of the family, was more like her brother Paul. Though for many years an invalid, her slender frame and constitution encountered disease with remarkable energy and endurance. Her indefatigable labors in behalf of her aged mother, her two brothers, and the youthful writer can never be forgotten and are recorded in Heaven. Most of the connection were devoted to agriculture, and were noted for having good farms, large orchards, and a great variety of fruits. An order for twenty bushels of apples, of which no two half bushels should be of the same kind, was complied with without exhausting the variety of sorts. Many of the name, however, were distinguished for a mechanical genius. Ebenezer, at nineteen, while a journeyman at Pawtucket, was offered a salary of a thousand dollars a year if he would remain, but he chose rather to return to his parental home. His brother Samuel, also, and his children were remarkable for mechanical ingenuity. Most of the kindred have been much inclined to the acquisition of property, especially of landed estate. The earlier families usually had a large number of children. Each of three generations in one line had not less than eleven, but of late the average has been not more than three or four to a family. Most of the progenitors were also long lived, a characteristic which has been better kept up. A short time before his death (1844) Paul Wing, Jr., was visited at midday, and when he was wide awake, by what he looked upon as a remarkable vision of the Celestial City, which he was persuaded was no mere fancy, and which left in him an intense longing to depart. Ebenezer also, who was an overseer in the Society of Friends, at the age of sixty-nine, two weeks before his death, while in a harvest field and resting under a tree, dreamed that he was in Heaven and had communion with his deceased brother and sister. The effect upon him was overpowering, and the same night he was attacked by the illness which two weeks later terminated his life (8th month, 17, 1859). He was at once satisfied that he was not long for this world, and he could hardly wait for the symptoms of approaching death. Lydia Hussey, the last of the children of Paul, Sr., lived to the age 79 years and two and a half months, and died 10th month, 28, 1863." Her nephew, Dr. Henry Russell, the writer of the preceding account, who had seen her about ten days before, being in his bed at four o'clock in the morning, at his residence in New Bedford, dreamed that his room was illuminated and that he saw his mother, who had been deceased for more than ten years, meeting and greeting his Aunt Lydia. He awoke at once, noted the precise time, told his dream in the morning, and avowed his conviction that the two sisters were reunited in Heaven. A telegram soon informed him of the death of his aunt, and on going to the funeral (thirty miles distant) he found that she had passed away precisely at the hour he had noted of his dream.

198. Adam, a son of Benjamin and Peace (Gifford) Wing (90), was born April 7, 1771, and married Content, the daughter of Paul Wing, of Acushnet, Mass. (92). This daughter married Isaiah Frye and had John (who married Anna Allen, a granddaughter of Adam Wing), Susanna (who married Charles Winslow and had Edith and Walter), and Charles, who had Eugene and Clara.

203. Savory, whose immediate parentage is uncertain, but who must have belonged to this branch of the family about this time, is said by his descendants to have been the eldest of several brothers (among whom are mentioned John, William, and Joseph), to have gone near the beginning of the present century from Hancock, Hillsboro County, New Hampshire, to New Lisbon, Otsego County, N. Y., and to have died about 1819. He married Lydia Gorton, was a farmer, belonged to the Society of Friends, and had three sons and three daughters, viz.: Job, born March 18, 1794 (427), Isaac, born in New Hampshire, Jan. 25, 1797 (428), Stephen (429), Dinah, Hannah, and Polly. One of these daughters married a Davis and lived at Augusta, Kalamazoo County, Michigan.*

204. Savory, a son of Paul and Elizabeth (Hoxie) Wing (92), married Silvia Cornish.

* The name of Savory appears to have been common among the descendants of Joseph and Deborah (Clifton) Wing (34). One of their sons, however, could hardly have been the Savory above mentioned, whose brothers and sisters were so different and the birth of whose sons and whose death were so recent. Their grandson, the son of Paul and Elizabeth (Hoxie) Wing (92), also had no such brothers and sisters, and married Silvia Cornish. See Jesse Tucker's Extracts of Dartmouth Records, S. F. Hoxie's transcript of her father's memoranda, and Henry F. Wing's letter.

217. Elizabeth, a daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Sears) Wing (94), married Hull Abbott of Livermore, and died, leaving one son, Hull.

218. Reuben, a son of Samuel and Hannah (Sears) Wing (94), was but three years of age when he came to Readfield with his father from Harwich, Massachusetts. As the country was new and schools were few, his only opportunity for early education was an attendance of two winters on a distant school when he was fifteen or sixteen years old, and in the midst of many cares of a large household every day. He, however, early acquired a good business education, which he never ceased to improve by diligent reading and with the aid of an unusually strong and retentive memory; so that he became finally possessed of a knowledge of history and of current events, as well as of the Bible and religion, which is equaled by few in like circumstances. When he was in his eighteenth year, he took up land in Livermore and drove the first cart through the woods that ever entered the town. He was a man of more than ordinary vigor, and it was said that he could fell an acre of heavily timbered land in a day, and that none could excel him in teaming and lumbering. He was six feet in height and weighed in middle life one hundred and fifty pounds, but in later life, after he discontinued the use of tobacco, more than two hundred pounds. When he was about twenty years of age (1792) he married, in Livermore, Hannah, the daughter of Elisha and Susanna (Wing) Smith. This mother of his wife was the sister of his father (95). In the midst of great prosperity and after the birth of seven children, the canker-rash, or putrid sore throat, began to rage in the town, and after a terrible season of suffering in his family, his wife and three of his sons were taken away by death. Eleven years elapsed, when he married, at Livermore (1810), Lucy Carpenter, the daughter of Walter and Lucy (Carpenter) Weld, born at Cornish, New Hampshire, March 29, 1788. Her father was of Welsh extraction, and was then living in Greene, Androscoggin County, Me., and her mother was from Pomfret, Connecticut. In early manhood he became a member of the Baptist Church, then recently organized, and consistently maintained his profession for more than sixty-five years. His views of religious truth were scriptural and intelligent, and his fidelity to his convictions was always conscientious and unswerving. His excellent judgment and fairness of character were witnessed by the fact that more cases of arbitration were submitted to him for adjustment than to any other man in that region. He died at Livermore, May 28, 1862, and his wife, June 7, 1871.

236. Peter, the eldest son of John and Abigail (Snow) Wing (105), of Conway, became the captain of a vessel trading with the West Indies and was lost with his vessel on the coast of North Carolina, Dec. 29, 1798, on a return voyage. His brother Bani went a few weeks afterward to Havana for his effects and to settle up some business for him there.

237. James, the second son of John and Abigail (Snow) Wing (105), resided with his father until the revolutionary war, at the commencement of which he was nearly nineteen years of age. According to a record written by himself, he enlisted on the 1st of May, 1775, for eight months in the military service of the United Colonies, and went to Cambridge, near Boston, under Captain Robert Oliver, Major Moore, Lieutenant-Colonel Holden, and Colonel Ephraim Doolittle. He was in the Battle of Bunker's Hill from the commencement to the close. His regiment encamped on Winter's Hill in General Sullivan's brigade. When his time expired, Oct. 31, he enlisted for one month in Captain Barnes's company, in Colonel Nixon's regiment, stationed on the same hill as before. Some time in Feb., 1776, he enlisted for one year under Sergeant James Davis, was sent to New-Haven, thence on a sloop to New-York City, was connected with a company under Captain (afterward General) Wilkinson, and a regiment under Colonel James Reed. After a brief stay in New-York, his regiment was ordered to Canada, which it reached by water to Albany through Lakes George and Champlain, by St. John's to Montreal. Wilkinson was there promoted and sent down the St. Lawrence, where he was taken prisoner and sent to Quebec. The command of the company then devolved upon the second lieutenant, Thompson Maxwell, until the end of the campaign. In August of the next year (1777) he enlisted for three months in Captain Abel Dinsmore's company of militia, in Colonel Woodbridge's regiment, marched from Conway to Bennington, Vermont, where he arrived soon after the battle, thence to Whitehall, New-York, and to Brookfield, Massachusetts. At this place he was stationed to guard some British prisoners who had been taken at or near Mount Hope. He then rejoined his company at Albany, sailed down the river to Tarrytown, and marched to White Plains, New-York. At the close of his term of enlistment there, he was drafted to go to New London, Connecticut, for one month, which time he served out in Captain Abel Dinsmore's company, in the regiment of Colonel Porter, of Hadley. The whole time which he thus served during the war for independence was two years and one month. On Sept. 20, 1781, he married Lydia Allis, born Dec. 25, 1761, at Hatfield, Hampshire County, Mass., and removed to Hinsdale, Berkshire County, Mass., where he was engaged in farming during the remainder of his life. His wife died there Oct. 7, 1840, and he himself Aug. 11, 1841.

He married Ruth Potter, who survived him, and after his death, married S. S. Howland of Gill, in the same county, Nov. 19, 1839, and died at Leyden, Aug. 21, 1863, aged 82. He left no children but an adopted son, Eli Wing Packer, who was living, in 1873, at Brattleborough, Vermont.

Dear George -

Your welcome note of the 16 is at hand. Your apt for 79 ²⁰ has not in time it should have been acknowledged - I rate some errors in the doctor's book. He has Frank's home right in one place & wrong in the most important one. Your grandmother Clarie's father was not John I think but Joseph. I made the error at first, & afterwards wrote a correction which the editor failed to make. The exact date of the birth & death of John King of Conway is accessible & I think is given in the book, making his age at his decease 90+ years; yet in his account of him he gives an old tradition of Judge Nassau King's that grandfather was upwards of 98. It will be well to correct these things in our private copies, & I shall write him about them so that he can make the note in his own, as it is likely, if another edition is ever printed that it will be made up from his notes, in part -

The "introduction", which is about the only thing which could give a taste of the doctor's individuality, is modest & well written; don't you think so?
In his letters, & the pamphlets which I have seen, he uses the English language with remarkable precision & it likes to read them -

I wish you could come this way, when you visit Ohio.
He should be ~~delighted~~ to see you.
Mary will return to Cent; this week, for another term or two. She is developing an ambition to go to Vassar, which I am neither trying to stimulate, or discourage, but shall submit to if she is desirous of going when six children. In June, 1795, he purchased, for three hundred pounds, one hundred acres of land on the Deerfield River in Wilmington, Windham County, Vermont, to which he afterward made several additions. There six of his children were born and reared, and there his wife, Lucy, died, Nov. 15, 1819. On the 9th of October, 1821, he married Thirza, the widow of Joseph Upton, of Charlemont, Franklin County, Mass., and the daughter of Benjamin and Olive (Richardson) Flint, of North Reading, and granddaughter of Rev. Josiah Richardson, the first minister of Woburn, Mass. She was born March 10, 1778, had married Mr. Upton in 1797, and had been left by him with six children, when he died in 1811. By his marriage with her, Bani Wing had but one child, his youngest son. In 1837 he removed to Charlemont, Mass., where he died, April 2, 1847, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. His wife, Thirza, survived him twenty-seven years, during nineteen of which she resided with her daughter, Mrs. Judson Booth, in the full possession of all her faculties up to the day of her death, in Charlemont, March 7, 1874, when she had just completed her ninety-sixth year. On Decoration Day (May 30) of the preceding year, a laurel wreath was presented by the citizens of Charlemont to her as the only surviving relict of the revolutionary families in that town. Bani Wing was for more than half a century a communicant in the Congregational Church, and among the earliest to engage in the movements against intemperance and slavery. A pension was awarded him regularly for services in the revolutionary army, and was continued to his widow. He was fond of reading, had acute perceptive powers, and was full of genuine good humor. His character was unblemished, his authority in the family and his temper in general society were mild, and his judgment of others was always charitable. The clerk of the parish, in

242. Enoch, the seventh son of John and Abigail (Snow) Wing (105), lived for some years in Conway, where he married Mary, the daughter of Colonel Alexander Oliver,* who at that time resided in that town. While living there he had eight children, and then removed (in 1801) to Ohio, and purchased a considerable tract of land on the right bank of the Muskingum River, about twelve miles from its confluence with the Ohio. The place on which he settled was then a wilderness, but has since become the seat of a manufacturing town called Lowell. He himself, before he left it,

* Alexander Oliver belonged to a family in Conway, Mass., married Mary Warner, was a colonel in the revolutionary war, and is mentioned in J. G. Holland's "History of Western Massachusetts" as "one of a committee of thirteen with power to regulate mobs," in 1774. He was a member of the Society of Cincinnati, settled with a number of other officers at Belpre about 179-, and had four sons and seven daughters, viz.: (1) Mary, who married Enoch Wing; (2) Lucretia, who married Levi Mansell, who went first to Cincinnati but afterward to Marietta; (3) Betsey; (4) Launcelot, who married a Clark; (5) Sarah, who married a Mr. Austin, a lawyer in Lancaster, Ohio; (6) Lucinda, who married George Putnam, probably a farmer, and had a numerous family; (7) John, who lived first at Marietta, afterward at Adams, and finally at Piqua; (8) Alexander, who married Betsey Graham and lived at Piqua, and afterward in Illinois; (9) Electra, who married Oliver Spencer, who was stolen by the Indians and gave a narrative of his captivity, which was published as a Methodist Sunday-school book; he became a Methodist preacher, and still later was a judge in Cincinnati; his children, seven sons and a daughter, are of high respectability in that city, one of them having been its mayor for many years, and the daughter was the wife of Raphael Symmes, the Confederate admiral in the late Civil War; (10) Mahala, who married Calvin Shepherd, a brick-mason at Gallopis, Ohio; (11) David, a physician, first at Cincinnati and afterward at Blue Ball, Butler County, Ohio; (12) Elizabeth, who married Daniel Symmes, a judge of the Supreme Court of Ohio, who lived in Cincinnati, and with his brother Peyton and his near relative, John Cleves Symmes, was the owner of a large portion of land in and around that city at an early period of its settlement. He had no children, and his nephews inherited his property. His widow married a clergyman named Graham, and had a son who was also a clergyman.

gave a start to the village by setting up a store, some mills, and other manufacturing establishments. On the death of his wife, Mary (in 1812), he removed through an almost trackless forest in western Pennsylvania and New-York to Phelps, Ontario County, New-York, where he married the widow of John Newhall,* whom he had at an early day known as Beulah Stearns, in Conway, Mass. Both had families of children, but these were soon married and separated, and both had large estates which, however, were always scrupulously and satisfactorily kept apart. He there became an extensive farmer, but soon connected with that business merchandising in various kinds of goods, which proved unprofitable on account of the fall of prices at the close of the war with Great Britain. He then returned to his farm, about two miles from the village of Vienna, and in his declining years resigned his business to his son, Freeman, resided in the village, and died March 26, 1834, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He was a justice of the peace for many years in Ohio and in New-York, and an elder in the Presbyterian churches of Phelps and Vienna, three times a member of General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church, and almost constantly an attendant upon the meetings of the Presbytery and Synod of Geneva. His first wife was

* John Newhall died in Phelps, Oct. 4, 1810. He was among the earliest settlers in that town, arriving from Massachusetts in 1796, and taking up 350 acres of land which he purchased for a mere pittance and which he only half cleared of the forests. He left a widow and five children, viz. : (1) Cynthia, who married Francis Root and died 1807, leaving a daughter named Charlotte; (2) Elizabeth, who married David McNeil, for many years a postmaster, justice of the peace, and merchant; she died Feb. 22, 1833, aged 40 years, and he July 17, 1841, aged 53; (3) Sarah, who married Roswell Perry, a harness-maker, and died May 16, 1839, aged 45; he died Sept. 5, 1840, aged 48; they had a daughter who died in her eighteenth year; (4) Joel died in his middle age, having never married; (5) John married Mary E. Underhill, lived for a while on the paternal farm, but afterward removed to near the village of Orleans in the town of Phelps; his wife died May 16, 1839; they had Charlotte, who died June 30, 1841, aged four years, Charlotte Ann, who died Nov. 28, 1832, aged two years, and Mary E., who died Aug. 20, 1865, aged 23 years.

Among his children were Lydia, born April 9, 1775; Luther, born March 18, 1777, died Sept. 12, 1777; Martha, born Sept. 15, 1778; Rufus, born Jan. 17, 1781; Julina, born Feb. 8, 1783; David, born Oct. 12, 1785; Eunice, born Oct. 14, 1788; Polly, born Jan. 21, 1791.

one years of age, he married, Nov. 10, 1831, Catharine B., the eldest daughter of John Jones, a highly respected citizen of Pittsylvania County, and a soldier of the war of 1812. She was born Saturday, Dec. 22, 1810. In the following spring he turned his face to what was then the "Far West," and settled in Cooper County, Missouri. He made the entire journey with his young wife by wagon through the States of Indiana and Illinois. After purchasing and clearing two or three farms in different localities, he finally settled upon the place where he spent the most of his life, in Lamine, Cooper County. The tract of land on which he lived at first contained only four hundred and eighty acres, and was purchased from General Ashley; but to this he soon added other portions, until it included not less than 1500 acres. During his whole life he traded much in real estate, and at one time he had in his possession three thousand acres. Besides managing his own landed interests, he was for some years the agent of General Ashley, and after the death of the General he continued to manage for the widow, not only during her widowhood, but after her marriage with the Hon. J. J. Crittenden, of Kentucky. Before his death he made a division of his real estate among his children and retired from business. He was possessed of uncommon physical energy, acquired an excellent education by his own efforts, and, by his extensive intercourse with men, managed to obtain an extraordinary knowledge of human nature and habits of self-control. He was for many years a justice of the peace, and though called often to act in difficult cases in turbulent times, his decisions were seldom questioned. From circumstances he was almost compelled to familiarize himself with both law and medicine, and he prescribed extensively in both departments. In 1843 he became connected with the Christian Church, was and carrying her oldest child in her arms. It is said that after a year or more Mr. Fuller and his wife buried all their valuable articles to keep them from the Indians, and taking each a child in their arms, rode back to Sandwich, a distance of over one hundred and fifty miles, on a visit to their friends. She died Aug. 3, 1826, aged 80 years. They were the first white inhabitants of the town.

271. Thomas, a son of Simeon and Mary (Allen) Wing (118), married, first, Lydia, a daughter of Zechariah Perry (196), of Sandwich. She died in Livermore, Maine, and he then married Meribah Bowman. His father had a large interest in the timbered lands, and the coasting trade of the Province of Maine, and he therefore was engaged from the age of seventeen to twenty-five as the master of a vessel. When the continental army was in need of recruits, he was drafted, but his father being unwilling to lose his services, allowed his younger brother, Aaron, then a lad of sixteen, to take his place in the ranks. After peace was declared, Thomas settled in Wayne, Maine, bought a large tract of land and built a mill at the outlet of Wing's Pond, for himself and his brother Aaron. Later, he sold his property in Wayne, and settled in Livermore, Androscoggin County, Me., where he engaged in the work of building and operating mills and machinery, and in the construction of roads and bridges. After the death of his first wife, he removed to Fairfield, Somerset County, and assisted his son Abisha in the work of building and operating his mills and machinery. Here he became an active member of the Society of Friends, and married his second wife. Still later he removed to Mount Vernon, Kennebec County, where his son, Calvin, in company with his cousins, Greenlief and Silas B., sons of Aaron Wing, was engaged in the manufacture of lumber, meal, and flour, and in carding and cloth-dressing. There, in advanced age, he died, in Oct., 1835. His wife also died in the same place. 272. Sarah, a daughter of Simeon and Mary (Allen) Wing (118), married Judah Eldred and removed from Fal-mouth in 1800 to Pittston, Kennebec County, Me. At that early period the settlers were often in danger from famishing wild beasts. It is told of Sarah Eldred that one day, in the absence of her husband, she was returning on horseback with her grist until the evening, when she was startled by the howling of wolves on the road before her. She succeeded in passing them, but soon found that a whole pack were pursuing her. She, however, reached

* I find in a Detroit newspaper of July 1, 1886, a notice of the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birthday of John Batchelder, who resides five miles north of the city of Jackson, Michigan, with his son Ira. He was said to have been born July 1, 1786, and to have married, at the age of seventeen, Sophia Wing, by whom he had six sons and one daughter. Those living are Ira, aged 74; Royal, aged 72; Alvin, aged 70; Betsey, aged 68; and Isaac, aged 66. Betsey is now Mrs. Harrison Norton, of Earl, Illinois. Mr. Batchelder's wife, Sophia, died in 1855, and he came to Michigan in 1875. Although he has lost the use of his limbs by paralysis, he has seldom known sickness. The writer has been unable to locate this Sophia Wing in the family lineage, but he suspects she was closely connected with Thomas's family.

home, and gained time enough to unharness her horse and get with her grist within her door, while the horse ran for the woods. The wolves now climbed to the top of the log building, and soon made their appearance at an opening in the roof which had been left for the escape of the smoke, and were about to spring down to the room below. She hastily kindled a fire with the contents of her straw bed, and finding that this drove them back, she kept up a brisk fire all night, and when her straw and wood failed her she piled on the furniture and nearly everything combustible in the house, and thus succeeded in keeping the wolves at bay until morning, when they slunk away to the woods. She died in 1831, aged 74, having had nine children, viz.: Micah, born 1777; Mary, born in 1782 (married Joseph Colburn); Elizabeth, born in 1782 (married John Fuller); Matty, born in 1785; Sylvia, born in 1787; Hannah, born in 1789; Reuben, born in 1792; Emma, born in 1795; and Olive, born in 1798.

He was one of the selectmen chosen at the first town meeting, held in Wayne, April 2, 1798, and in later years was repeatedly chosen for the most responsible offices in the town. He was a man of intelligence, but was never connected with any of the religious denominations. Indeed, when called a Deist he never refused the title, though he professed his belief in a personal God and an immortal life. His wife was a member of the Baptist Church, respected and loved, from its organization to the close of her long and useful life. Much as he and she differed in their religious opinions, they heartily agreed in the moral and educational training of their children. This was strict, but gentle and indulgent. It is noteworthy that so large a family, brought up under religious instruction so widely different at home, and under so little apparent restraint, should have been so well established in all the moral virtues, and that no taint of dishonesty or intemperance should have been developed in any of its members. A number of his rules for his children are preserved by them with pious veneration, and indicate a high moral principle connected with profound affection and good sense. He died, April 18, 1841, aged 80, and his wife, Dec. 24, 1865, aged nearly 95 years. They had twelve children, nine of whom are living.

360. Marcus Tullius Cicero, the third son of Hon. David and Hannah (Davis) Wing (162), graduated at Middlebury College, in Vermont, in the class of 1820, studied medicine for eight months in Montpelier, taught school for a while in Maryland, commenced the study of divinity at Alexandria, Virginia, taught for a year or two in Bishop Chase's school, at Worthington, and was admitted to deacon's orders by Bishop Chase, June 17, 1827, at Delaware, Ohio. In June, 1828, when the number of pupils in elementary studies in the Theological School, at Worthington, had become much increased, an act of the Legislature was obtained by which the president and professors were constituted the faculty of a college under the name of Kenyon College, and the institution, thus modified and enlarged, was transferred from Worthington to Gambier, Knox County, Ohio, but remained in the same ecclesiastical connection. He was ordained a priest in 1829, and for a time had charge of St. James's parish, in Boardman, Mahoning County; but it was to the interests of the college that he now devoted himself with all his heart. Bishop McIlvaine said of him, that "To him, more than to any man living, the subsequent success of these institutions was due. On him the college relied for the conduct of its embarrassed and complicated interests. To his eminent faithfulness, wisdom, self-devotion, patience, and constancy the diocese and its college and seminary are deeply indebted. His outward labors were severe, but the interest and anxiety which he felt were greater than could be expressed. Not more than once in the history of any institution does a friend appear like him, entirely disinterested and thoroughly devoted to its welfare, willing to spend and actually spending his last and all his days in its behalf." For four years (1826-29) he was tutor in the college, a clerical trustee from 1831 to 1840, a professor of the Latin language and literature from 1838 to 1846, of ecclesiastical polity in the seminary from 1846 to 1856, and of ecclesiastical history from 1837 to 1863, and by an honorary appointment to the time of his death.

During nearly all this time he was the secretary, the treasurer, and the financial agent of the college, a post-master (1832), and the editor of the "Gambier Observer." He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from William and Mary College, in acknowledgment of his literary scholarship and profound theological learning. One who sat under his instruction says of him: "We well remember how much we admired the refined beauties of his style of composition in his sermons; everything was simple, polished, and graceful, breathing ever the most devout piety and Christian humility." His declining health compelled him a short time before his death to present his resignation of his professorship to the board of trustees, and their acceptance of it was accompanied with an honorary appointment which still secured his name and counsels for the seminary, and he lived long enough to rejoice in the success that attended the introduction of his successor. On the 9th of April, 1835, he married Frances Augusta, the daughter of Nathanael and Nancy (Fay) Evans,* who was born Feb. 11, 1811, at Royalton, Vermont, and died Dec. 9, 1879. He himself died Feb. 26, 1863, in the sixty-fifth year of his age.

* Nathanael Evans was a merchant and farmer, in Middlebury, Vermont. In his seventh year, he was taken captive with a number of other children at the burning of Royalton, Vermont. Among these was one belonging to the family of Mrs. Handy, who followed the Indians to their camp and pleaded so earnestly for them that their lives were spared. She then walked several miles with nine of these children before she could find a place to ford the river, forded White River five times, carrying them across on her back, and returned them all in safety to their homes. A brother of Frances Augusta, Charles T., went to Columbus, Ohio, and afterward to Texas, where, in 1838, he went from San Antonio on a trading party to New Mexico, from which no news was ever received, and they were all supposed to have been massacred by the Comanche Indians. An aunt of Frances Augusta, Mary Fay (born March 10, 1779), married (July 29, 1796) Rt.-Rev. Philander Chase, consecrated Bishop of Ohio Feb. 11, 1809, resigned in 1831, and Bishop of Illinois from 1835 until his death, Sept. 20, 1852.

He was but a babe in 1781, when, on Carleton's invasion, his mother fled with him to the swamp. In his youth he went to a Quaker school in the village, where he and the other children of the family probably received all the early education which was possible for them at the time. In 1802 the town records show that "he carried on a mixed business of merchandising and hotel-keeping for a number of years." In 1809 the family records show that he lived in Sandy Hill, where he also kept a tavern until about 1814, when he was residing in Queensbury. Soon after this he removed to Fort Edward and resided in the lower part of the village. There he engaged in mercantile and lumbering business, in which he amassed a large property. He was said to have been "a man of excellent judgment, energetic and tenacious of purpose."

He was for many years considered the leading man of the place." He married first, on the 25th of July, 1803, Rhoda Stewart, of Kingsbury, Washington County, N. 380. Abraham, a son of Abraham and Mary (McKie) Wing (173), like his brother, Daniel Wood, was educated at the school of his native village, and was early engaged as a partner in the mercantile business at Emerson's Corners, in the town of Wilton, Saratoga County, N. Y. He was afterward associated at various times and in different enterprises with Walter Geer, Jr., George Sandford, William McDonald, and others who have been distinguished for their thrift and energy in the affairs of the town. With the opening of the Northern Canal and the construction of the Glen's Falls feeder, the resources of the surrounding region were at once developed. Mr. Wing had the forecast and judgment to bring to market the splendid pines with which the tract around Brant Lake abounded. As the agent of the brothers Alanson and Norman Fox, he devised the present system of the river driving and booming by which the mills of this town have been supplied with materials for an immense manufacturing industry. The country in the immediate vicinity had been stripped of its original forests, and the water-power of the Falls was regarded as nearly worthless. He soon gave a new impulse to the whole lumbering business of the Hudson and its affluents. The obstructions in the outlet of Brant Lake were removed, a dam and sluiceway were constructed, and a new field of labor was opened. The immense forests of the northern part of the State were made tributary to the new enterprise of the capitalists. From a trusted business agent, Mr. Wing soon became a partner, and ultimately the sole proprietor of these large lumber interests. About the year 1853 he disposed of his business and retired from his more active employments. He was then accounted one of the wealthiest men of this region, and his time and talents found sufficient engagement in the management of his large estate. He was in politics an earnest and energetic leader of the Democratic party in his town and county, though he never seemed to seek office for himself. He was an untiring friend and an unyielding opponent, "opinionated, self-reliant, and determined. Public-spirited and liberal, every church and public enterprise received his generous contribution. At the outbreak of the civil war, he was among the heaviest subscribers to the fund for the relief of the families of the soldiers, and to the raising of bounties and recruits for the army." He was married three times. His first wife was Abigail Barnard, of Townsend, Vermont, who died Aug. 19, 1846; his second, Angeline B. Vail, the widow of

In 1825 he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine from Williams College, became a member of the Albany County Medical Society in 1816, and its president during the years 1826-27; and was made president of the New-York State Medical Society in 1843. In 1847 he was appointed one of the managers of the New-York State Lunatic Asylum, and continued in that office till his death. In 1848 he was elected a member of the Assembly from Albany County in the New-York Legislature. He occupied a prominent position in the medical profession, not only in the city, but throughout the State. He is said to have been particularly systematic in his business, scrupulously attentive to his patients, and remarkably social and hospitable to his friends. During the last years of his life he was very infirm and probably had a softening of the brain, which caused much mental and bodily suffering. He died Sept. 6, 1852, being at the time the oldest physician, with but one exception, in the city. At a meeting of the County Medical Society at the City Hall, Sept. 8, 1852, called especially to express regret at his loss, Dr. T. Romeyn Beck presented a preamble and four resolutions in which his eminent character as a man and as a physician of more than forty years' practice in the city is eulogized, and the members united with their brethren of the profession throughout the State in mourning his death. He was the father of seven children, two of whom were sons. One of his sons was named Matthew Gregory (896), born April 10, 1826, and another, James (898). He soon removed to what was then looked upon as far West, and settled in Butternuts, in the part which has since been known as Morris, Otsego County, N. Y. He there acquired an extensive practice, and was distinguished for many peculiarities of habit which have been much noted, even to the present time. He was public-spirited and a special friend of common schools. In 1824 he built a large two-storied brick house, and soon after gave up his practice to give almost all his attention to a drug-store, until the failure of his health compelled him to retire from active life. His wife died Aug. 5, 1818, but his own life was protracted until Aug. 10, 1855, when he was precisely sixty-nine years of age.

C. There he remained until the close of the war, and was honorably mustered out of the service, Aug. 10, 1865. The following copy of a letter on file in the War Department suggests the character of his services during the war, and the estimation of them by his corps commander and fellow-officers.

UNION PACIFIC R. R. CO., PRESIDENT'S OFFICE,
No. 20 Nassau Street, N. Y., Dec. 9, 1866.

HON. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

Sir: I have the honor to recommend for Brevet Brigadier-General, Captain J. K. Wing, A. Q. M.

Captain Wing served in my command for three years; first as Chief-Quartermaster of the District of Corinth, and finally as Chief-Quartermaster of the 16th Army Corps. For four months, while I was in middle Tennessee, we were entirely dependent upon his energy to supply the command of 15,000 men and 10,000 animals with forage from the country; and I desire to say that in his department he received the commendation of all the officers for the ability with which he discharged his duties and for his integrity and excellent habits. For his services as Chief-Quartermaster of the 16th Army Corps during the Atlanta campaign, he was specially recommended for promotion, but could not obtain it as the command was not a full corps. After leaving the Army of the Tennessee, he was assigned to the Department of North Carolina, in which he served until the surrender of Johnson and the close of the war.

I desire to most earnestly and emphatically recommend him for the pro-

REMARKS OF HON. L. B. WING.

President of the Board of Trustees, on Commencement Day, 1894.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It happens today that the oldest and the youngest man of this Board of Trustees meet upon the same platform, one as the outgoing and the other the incoming president. For myself, I realize that on this one day, which will be remembered by this class of 1894 in all the years to come, when only the brightest and best deserve a place among our speech-makers, that "leave to print" is the thing in order, and I hasten to gladden your hearts with the assurance that this roll of manuscript will not be unrolled today.

After the formal and magnificent address of Rev. Dr. Harper, to which we have just listened, to detain you with my own little speech would be most unseemly.

But in this fourteenth and closing year of service here, I feel that you will excuse me for using a single word of congratulation for the things of the present and of hope for the future.

We can hardly realize that at versity better than they ever have been managed. We will not disparage our own work in the past, and however good its management may have been, there is scarcely a limit to the improvement yet possible. Allow me to say to the trustees and graduates here today, that we elderly people have long ago discovered that the things which give us most pleasure are those which we have done remarkably well. If we have in all our lives done any one thing better than other people could do it, that one thing will give us pleasure as long as we live, while the ten thousand other things which we have done only tolerably well are forgotten.

With this thought, not entirely original with me, but which I realize as true, I gladly give place to my young colleague, whose gifts of ready speech and grace of oratory more nearly fill the requirements of the hour.

We can hardly realize that at the beginning of my term of service, the only buildings now here, which were then on the campus are the present Main hall and the Mechanical laboratory. The Botanical building, the Chemical laboratory, the Electrical building, the Experiment station, Hayes hall, the Geological museum and Library building have all been constructed and finished within the period.

We had the same grand auditorium then that we occupy today. Its soft and beautiful carpet has been renewed annually, and the rich wainscoting on the walls has each year been enlarged and improved without much change in the pattern. The roof remains the same, grand and beautiful in its structure, but not always reliable in its water-proof qualities. I will not trust myself to speak of the men I have met here—my associates, the faculty, the alumni and the students.

We speak sometimes of the fact that we serve the state wholly without compensation. But is it so? To have been associated with the illustrious Hayes—to have seen exemplified his wisdom, his gentleness, his unselfishness, has been to me a liberal education. There are living friends about the state whose friendship and interest in the University survives the severance of mere official ties, and whose zeal and patience in efforts in our behalf are beyond all praise. There is only one way for the trustees here to obtain satisfactory compensation, and that is to manage the affairs of the Uni-

LAW SCHOOL NOTES.

Charley Field, '94 Law, is with Judge Critchfield in the Hayden Block.

F. M. Macartney is with Holmes & Huling and will not be in college this year.

Pete Adams, Guy R. Williams and H. R. Wilson are all rooming near the University this year.

G. W. Rhodes, '93, and John L. Davies, '94, have opened an office in the Hayden Block.

The object of the latter is to accommodate business men who desire to acquire practical law without being admitted to the bar.

CAREER OF CHARLES M. WING, BANKER, IS ENDED BY DEATH

Succumbs to Brief Illness of Influenza — Was President of First National Bank Nine Years—Retired Year Ago to Assume Chairmanship of Board of Directors.

Charles M. Wing, aged 68, chairman of the board of directors of the First National bank, and former president of that institution succumbed at the family residence, 231 West Tenth avenue Sunday night, ark, Ohio, and it was there he entered the banking business when he became identified with his father, the late Lucius B. Wing, in the Franklin bank, of which his father was a trustee.

He received his education at Williston academy in Massachusetts, and at Ohio State university. He moved to Columbus in 1898 and from that time, until his death, with the exception of a brief interval when he engaged in the manufacturing business he was connected with the First National bank. He served as president for nine years. A year ago he resigned from the presidency to assume the duties of chairman of the board of directors.

Surviving Mr. Wing are two daughters, Mrs. Homer L. Dodge, wife of the dean of the graduate school of Oklahoma State university, and Mrs. A. R. Chandler, wife of Prof. Chandler of the department of philosophy Ohio State university; two sons, Dr. Lucius A. Wing of New York and Herbert C. Wing of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Charles H. Shields, also of this city. Members of his immediate family were with him at the time of his death, except Mrs. Dodge, who was unable to get here in time from Norman, Okla. Mr. Wing's wife preceded him in Mr. Wing's wife preceded him in year.

Mr. Wing was a member of First Congregational church and also held membership in Phi Kappa Psi, the Columbus club Columbus Country club and the Columbus Athletic club.

Funeral services will be held at the residence, Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. M. H. Lichtler officiating. Interment will be made in Green Lawn cemetery under the direction of the Edward B. Fisher company, 215 East Broad street.

following three days' illness of influenza.

cutting in on another and ~~traffic~~ will flow on without interruption.

In Ohio the principal highways must be widened during the coming years, as many are crowded now with wheel traffic and dangers will develop as the volume of business is increased. It is accepted by all traffic leaders that automobiles are certain to increase in numbers and the annual increase will be large. Cities must provide some wider streets, as main thoroughfares for handling through business, leaving the streets of ordinary width to care for miscellaneous traffic. The traffic engineering of the next few years will be directed in a large way to providing wider roads and streets. That improvement will be expensive, for state and city, but it is gradually being forced to the front by the developed needs. It will be made compulsory without long waiting.

End of a Good Life.

An honorable, useful, highly respected citizen is lost to Columbus by the death of Charles M. Wing, chairman of the board of directors of the First National Bank. For many years he was a prominent figure in financial circles in central Ohio. He was an able banker, a fine citizen, a good friend. He was a quiet man, not much in the public eye, content to go his honest and kindly way, doing his work, enjoying his companionships, meeting what sorrows came to him bravely like the man he was.

The influence for good of a good man is immeasurable and incalculable. Such a man's life, as is so often said, is like a pebble dropped in a pool. Its influence is felt very far. The best thing a man can do in this world, not only for himself but for all with whom he comes in contact, directly or indirectly, and they are more than he often realizes, is to make his own life good and upright, friendly and kind. Precept may be good but example is infinitely better and more powerful. The true reform movement is the life of a good man, or a good woman. By and by they come this way no more but they are not dead to us who are left. No good life is ever lost, no good man is really ever dead.

motion asked for, and trust his valuable services will now be acknowledged. I am confident it would have been done heretofore had his case not been overlooked.

I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant,

Although Judge Wing never reached high political office in the State, he exerted great influence for good in the region where he resided, was the chief mover in the organization of the county, and for seven years was the Ordinary (the most important official) therein. He was said to have been remarkably sympathetic and generous, and to have rendered much aid to the families of soldiers during the late war. He was liberal to religious objects, though not himself a communicant in any church. He died of paralysis at his residence in Moultrie, Colquitt County, Feb. 2, 1870, aged 57. Masonic honors were rendered at his grave by the lodge of which he was a demitted member. He left two daughters, viz.: Sallie L., born Aug. 14, 1857 (married Jan. 17, 1878, Joel Wootten, and had Nena E. and Laura J.), and Laura J., who died June 12, 1878. Clarke, of Sangerville, Piscataquis County, Me., held a captain's commission in the Aroostook war of 1840, and for some years afterward had the charge of the Block House and the State property at Fort Fairfield. For a while also he was a Deputy Land Commissioner, but in 1848 he went to Pennsylvania and built the first steam saw-mill at Lock Haven, Clinton County, in that State. He inaugurated a new era in the lumbering business of that region by being the first to use what is known as bracket dams in floating logs on the small tributaries of the Susquehanna River. In 1856 he was appointed on Governor Pollock's staff, with the commission of a lieutenant-colonel. In the late civil war, he served from May, 1861, first under General Banks in the Shenandoah Valley, where he contracted the inflammatory rheumatism which finally proved fatal to him. Being transferred, however, to the Quartermaster's Department, under General Sigel, he was able to keep in the service, though gradually failing, until the close of life. He died at Lock Haven, Feb. 17, 1865. His wife lives,

He married, July 14, 1814, Harriet, the daughter of Dea. Benjamin Skinner, of Williamstown, Mass., who was born May 31, 1794. Soon after leaving college he went to Michigan, then a territory recently formed from the region north-west of the Ohio, and there served as a sheriff at the difficult period soon after the war with Great Britain, when smuggling was prevalent along the Western lakes and borders. For several years he resided at Detroit, and was chosen twice as a delegate in Congress to represent the territory from 1827 to 1832. During his last term he removed to what was then French Town (now Monroe), near the mouth of the River Raisin. His wife, Harriet, died there Dec. 29, 1836. She was the mother of all his children, but after her death he married, in 1838, Mrs. Mary, the widow of a Mr. Stanley, of Tennessee. He died Aug. 25, 1849, at Cleveland, Ohio, where he had gone for medical treatment. His wife survived him many years, removed to the State of

New-York, and finally died at Erie, Pa., in April, 1870. He was much esteemed and useful in his public life, genial and remarkably social among his acquaintances, and much loved and respected in his family. His beautiful home on the left bank of the river was the favorite center of a large circle of friends. From an early period of life he was a communicant in the Presbyterian Church, and a constant attendant upon its ordinances.

6. Julia Larned, born at Monroe, June 25, 1830; died May 1, 1840.

512. Electra, a daughter of Enoch and Mary (Oliver) Wing (242), was married, about 1825, to Chauncey Deane, of Gates, Monroe County, N. Y., who, after about five years, died. She remained but a short time after his death in that town, and resided subsequently most of her time with her sister, Eliza Noble, in Monroe and Detroit. She married a second time a Mr. Bulkley, of Williamstown, Mass., but he soon died, and she returned to her former home and died at Detroit, Jan. 30, 1871, aged 77. Her children belonged to her first marriage, and were Walter and Austin, who grew to adult age, but died unmarried, the first at Elyria, Ohio, and the last at Louisville, Ky., Sept., 1849. She was for many years a communicant in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and much engaged in charitable work.

513. Mary, a daughter of Enoch and Mary (Oliver)

Wing (242), married, about 1815, Cyrus Spooner, a physician, in Marietta, Ohio, who, after his marriage, removed up the Muskingum River, and had one son, named Paul, born Jan. 7, 1818. She died soon after the birth of this son. Her husband married again and raised a numerous family. Paul studied and practiced medicine in Kentucky, was a member of the Baptist Church, married Eleanor J. McManama, born Oct. 15, 1833, and died in Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 18, 1859, leaving two sons, George Frank, born Nov. 18, 1854, and John Paul, born Oct. 19, 1856, and died Sept. 6, 1860. George Frank obtained a liberal education, became a physician, went to Texas, teaching in a number of places, and finally died in San Antonio, Jan. 21, 1884. The widow of Paul is now an assistant in an orphans' home in Louisville, Ky., but her home is at Hamilton, Boone County, Ky.

514. Eudocia, a daughter of Enoch and Mary (Oliver) Wing (242), married, about 1815, Oliver Dodge, of Marietta, Ohio. Though residing in that place, he was for many years the captain of a steamboat on the Ohio River. Both he and his wife died before 1830.

THEIR CHILDREN.

1. Mary, born March 5, 1815.
2. William Wallace, born Oct. 25, 1816.*

* William Wallace Dodge became a soldier in what was called the Patriot War on the Canada Frontier during the years 1837-38, in which he lost an eye, was taken prisoner, and was confined in a Canadian prison for some months. After his release he became, like his father, the captain of a steamboat on the Ohio River, married, in 1842, Harriet, the daughter of Joseph and Eliza (Hanaway) Holden, of Marietta, Ohio, born in Marietta, Sept. 23, 1820, resided in St. Louis, Mo., and after acquiring a competency for himself and family, died June 27, 1856. His widow resided at 2839 Morgan Street, St. Louis, until her death, Oct. 20, 1887 (aged 67), with their four children, viz.: William Holden, born Sept. 25, 1850 (a U. S. gauger, and married, but with no children); Fanny Holden, born May 15, 1852; Ella Deane, born Nov. 25, 1853; and Julia

515. Elizabeth Symmes, a daughter of Enoch and Mary (Oliver) Wing (242), married Charles Noble, a son of Deodatus and Betsey Noble, of Williamstown, Mass., born July 4, 1797. He graduated at Williams College in 1815, removed to Monroe, Mich., in 1818, was admitted to practice law there, and was married May 16, 1823. He was for some time a postmaster, a justice of the peace, a register of deeds, a member of the legislative council, surveyor-general of the North-west, and the first judge of the county court. He was also for nearly a quarter of a century an elder in the Presbyterian Church in Monroe, and the First Church, of Detroit. He was for a number of years the cashier of the Bank of the River Raisin, but in 1867 he removed to Detroit and became extensively interested in the sale of pine lands in Michigan. In May, 1873, they celebrated their golden wedding at their home in Detroit, when they were greeted by a large circle of relatives and friends. He died Dec. 25, 1874. His wife continued to reside in Detroit with her daughter (Mrs. George S. Frost) until June 7, 1885, when she died, a few days after completing the eighty-third year of her life. The testimony of her pastor was that "Her prominent characteristics were her strong Christian character, her remarkable loyalty to duty, her life of goodness, her beautiful unselfishness of purpose, and her devotion to exalted Christian principles. She had tender charity for all; a refined and shrinking delicacy of feeling, together with great firmness of character. She was the pattern of gentleness, yet most inflexible in all matters where conscience was concerned."

Trevor, born Oct. 24, 1856. The daughters are as yet unmarried, the eldest and the youngest being teachers. Mary, the daughter of Oliver and Eudocia Dodge, married, July 19, 1836, William, the brother of her brother's wife, and died Jan. 10, 1837, at her father's residence, in Marietta.

* Elizabeth Abbey was educated at the Utica Seminary, New-York, and married, Oct. 25, 1848, Rev. Hannibal Stanley, a step-son of her uncle, Austin E. Wing. He was settled at Leroy, Genesee County, N. Y., and she died in that place in August, 1849. Mr. Stanley married again, still lives, and is the father of a numerous family. Mygatt, and had one daughter, Julia Elizabeth, who was born Oct. 23, 1851, and died while attending the Female Seminary, at Troy, N. Y., June 17, 1867. After the death of his first wife, Charles Noble married Caroline G. Van Buren, at Penn Yan, N. Y., May 31, 1854. She died in Detroit, in 1867, and on the 21st of July, 1870, he married at White Plains, Westchester County, N. Y., Frances E. Martine. They have had four children, viz.: Stephen Martine, born Aug. 4, 1871, died Jan. 15, 1884; Frances, born Oct. 5, 1872; Eliza Wing, born Jan. 16, 1874; and Sarah Agnes, born March 11, 1876. Ellen Electra married, Oct. 12, 1852, George Smith Frost, of Detroit, and has had seven children, viz.: Lewis Cass, born Aug. 24, 1853, died Jan. 26, 1854; Charles Noble, born March 1, 1855, educated at Princeton and Edinburgh, Scotland, licensed as a preacher, and settled as a pastor of the Presbyterian Church, at Lapeer, Michigan, married, Sept. 3, 1885, at Attica, N. Y., Harriet M., a daughter of A. G. Ellinwood, M. D., of that place. They have one daughter, Ellen Arlotta, born July 19, 1886; Caroline Noble, born May 11, 1859; George Canfield, born Oct. 30, 1860, was educated at the college and the Theological Seminary at Princeton, N. J., at which last he graduated, May, 1885, and is now a pastor of the Presbyterian Church, at Three Rivers, St. Joseph County, Mich.; Eliza Wing, born July 28, 1862, died March 28, 1871; Conway Alonzo, born May 9, 1867; and Ellen Elizabeth, born Jan. 29, 1873, died May 9, 1874. Conway Whittier was educated at the University of Michigan, was admitted to the bar at Cleveland, Ohio, was, for a number of years, a successful lawyer in that city, and a professor of Legal Science in the Western Reserve College, at Hudson, Ohio. He married, at Norwalk, Ohio, Dec. 1, 1880, Ida Estelle, the daughter of Blake W. and Mary E. Hornbeck. They have no children.

the study of law in the office of Judge Woodbridge, and concluded his legal education at the Reeves Law School in Northampton, Mass. He settled in Monroe, and practiced law in the courts of Michigan until 1845, when he was appointed one of the justices of the Supreme Court of the State. In 1851 he was chosen chief justice, an office which he resigned in 1856, in order to enter upon the duties of a general counselor for the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad Company. In this employment he remained until the close of his life. Those who composed the Bar of Detroit when he filled the office of circuit judge, entertained for him an affection and reverence of the strongest character. In the capacity of chief justice, he was called upon to try the intricate and exciting conspiracy case of the burning of the Michigan Central Railroad depot, in which the patience, skill, learning, and courtesy he displayed were the admiration of all, and are spoken of with delight, even to the present day. Although, from a regard to his position on the Bench, he was seldom drawn into the more heated controversies of the political world, he was a firm adherent of the Democratic party, and his counsel had much to do in the management of its affairs in the State. Socially he was always lively, full of humor, and ready with an inexhaustible fund of anecdote; though high-toned and chivalrous in mixed society, his extreme diffidence made him shrink from the higher positions to which he was often urged to aspire. The illness which caused his death came upon him suddenly, and during more than a year of severe agony he exhibited the utmost fortitude. He died March 11, 1879, in the seventy-first year of his age. Representatives of the Bar from Detroit, Toledo, and various towns in the State of Michigan united with that of Monroe in attending his funeral, and the marks of respect which were shown at the meetings of lawyers in those places were of a character unprecedented in that region. In Detroit the resolutions reported by a committee composed of Governor Robert McClelland, Judge H. Emmons, D. Bethune Duffield, and William A. Moore were highly eulogistic. He was a member for many years of the Presbyterian Church of Monroe, and though well read in the scientific speculations of the day, he often avowed his unwavering faith in evangelical religion. He married, May 2, 1831, Eliza A., the daughter of Colonel John Anderson, a Scotchman, one of the original settlers of Monroe, Mich. She was born Dec. 17, 1808, and died Dec. 16, 1854, aged 46.

517. Freeman Snow, a son of Enoch and Mary (Oliver) Wing (242), was educated at Geneva Academy (since Hobart College), and commenced farming with his father about two miles south-west of what was then the village of Vienna (now Phelps), Ontario County, N. Y. Having been engaged in the independent management of the farm about three years, while out late at night with a sleighing party, March 4, 1828, he stopped for supper at a hotel in Hope-well, and while walking to the barn he fell into a new well which was unstoned and uncurbed, and was found a few moments afterward by his friends, quite dead.

518. Conway Phelps, a son of Enoch and Mary (Oliver) Wing (242), was born near Marietta, Ohio, was educated at Geneva Academy, graduated at Hamilton College (1828) and at Auburn Theological Seminary (1831), was licensed to preach, Feb. 3, 1831, when he was scarcely twenty-one years of age and installed as a pastor by the Presbytery of Geneva, over a Presbyterian Congregation in Sodus (Sept. 27, 1832). On the 10th of January, 1833, he married Prudence Maria, a daughter of Thomas Young, of Marion,* Wayne County, N. Y., who was born Aug. 10, 1811. After supplying a congregation in Ogden, and being extensively engaged in active service during the remarkable revivals in Western New-York, he accepted (June, 1839) a call from two congregations, which now became united, in Monroe, Mich. During his pastorate there he was compelled by failing health to spend some time at Santa Cruz, West Indies, and in Tennessee. Unwilling still to encounter a residence in a Northern climate, he now obtained a dismissal from his pastoral charge at Monroe, and accepted a call which had been repeatedly pressed upon him at Huntsville, Ala. Here he remained four years (1844-48) when he removed to the First Presbyterian Church, of Carlisle, Cumberland County, Pa. He entered upon his labors there April 28, and was installed Oct. 13, 1848. Here he was pastor for nearly twenty-eight years, and was dismissed at his own earnest request, Oct. 25, 1875. Soon after his settlement at Carlisle he was invited by the trustees of Dickinson College to fill

Soon after his settlement in Marion, he married, Feb. 9, 1809, Phebe, the daughter of Lemuel and Prudence (Hathaway) Durfee, of Palmyra, in the same county. The family of his wife were originally from Rhode Island, belonged to the Society of Friends, and were numerous in that vicinity. Thomas Young was born March 18, 1778, and died Aug. 9, 1866, aged 88 years and 6 months; and Phebe Durfee, his wife, who was born June 9, 1788, in Cambridge, N. Y., died in Marion, Nov. 27, 1875.

for one year the professorship made vacant by the election of William H. Allen, LL. D., to the presidency of Girard College. In connection with Dr. Charles E. Blumenthal, then a professor in Dickinson College, he published a translation of Hase's "Manual of Ecclesiastical History"; various articles for the "Presbyterian and Methodist Quarterly Review"; a number of articles for "McClintock's and Strong's Cyclopædia"; the commentary on Second Corinthians in Dr. Shaff's "American Edition of Lange's Commentary on the Bible"; a "History of the First Presbyterian Church of Carlisle," and, in 1879, a "History of Cumberland County, Pa." He was especially active in efforts for the reunion of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, being a member of the National Convention of Presbyterians in Philadelphia, in 1867, and of the General Assemblies in New-York and Pittsburg, when that union was effected, and was a member of the Joint Committee of Reconstruction by which arrangements were made for the reorganization of the Synods and Presbyteries of the reunited church. The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him in 1857, by the board of trustees of Dickinson College. He still remains pastor emeritus of the First Presbyterian Church of Carlisle.

and Mary A. (Brooks) Wing (359), married, first, in 1849, Rebecca Ann Remington, of Montpelier, Vt., settled at Milford, Mass., and had a daughter, Nettie A., who died when six years old. After his wife's death, in May, 1853, he married Cornelia Murphy, of Duxbury, Mass., and had a daughter, Nellie A. - After his first wife's death, he removed to East Montpelier, Vt., where he is now living. (Evans) Wing (360), graduated at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, in 1853, went to Columbus, Ohio, where he was in business until the breaking out of the civil war in 1861, when he entered the army of the United States, being appointed Captain and Assistant-Quartermaster of United States Volunteers. He was assigned to duty with the Army of the Cumberland and remained with that army all through the war, and until his resignation in January, 1866, serving both in the field and on post duty; was in the battles of Stone River and Chickamauga, and for the last two years of the war stationed at Nashville, Tenn., as the chief disbursing officer of the department. The following article from one of the principal periodicals in Nashville at that time, relating to him and the duties of his office, will be of interest:

“DISBURSING OFFICE, Q. M. DEPARTMENT.

“To those who are not familiar with the grand scale of military operations as carried on by the Quartermaster's Department of the army, a little information concerning the amount of work performed in a single office in this city, and the admirable order and system observed in its transaction, cannot fail to be of interest. Within the last year or two, the work of the Quartermaster's Department at this depot has been so immense as to require the service of one office to take charge of disbursements alone. Since the 15th of June, 1864, Captain Charles T. Wing, A. Q. M., has been the officer assigned to that duty, and every one who has the pleasure of his acquaintance will concur heartily in the opinion that an officer better adapted to the position, more watchful for the interests of the Government, and more courteous and obliging in the transaction of business, could not possibly be found.

“During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1865, the disbursements of his office were nearly $21,000,000, while the whole number of accounts, or vouchers, paid during the same time was 44,733. In the month of June last, the number of vouchers paid was 11,985, amounting in the aggregate to $4,740,540.11. The box of vouchers and abstracts, representing the work of the office for that month, weighed 198 pounds, and was probably the most bulky report ever sent to Washington of any one month's work. When it is considered that every voucher passes through the hands of no less than seven different clerks, in the various processes of auditing, registering, paying, filling up and endorsing, abstracting and revising, and that each of these 44,733 vouchers was made out in duplicate, the vastness of the work looms in grand dimensions, perceptible to even the dullest comprehension. A minute description of the various means adopted to prevent fraud would be too lengthy for the limits of this article. It is sufficient to state that the checks and safeguards are so complete that it seems almost impossible that any fraudulent or counterfeit voucher could be presented without detection. The system of registering every voucher audited in a book for that purpose, giving date of voucher, to whom given, and by whom, and date of auditing and of payment, was invented by Captain Wing himself, and to that system is owing much of the efficiency of the office and security against fraudulent vouchers.

"In this connection it is proper to mention the valuable services rendered by the corps of faithful and well-trained clerks which have contributed much to the efficiency of the office, and the enviable reputation which the captain has acquired among the officers of the army. 'Like master, like man,' is an adage verified by their bearing and conduct, and it has often been remarked by officers of the army, well aware of the truth of what they said, that Captain Wing always has good clerks. Not a stain or a shadow of a blot tarnishes the official reputation of Captain Wing. No officer stands higher in the estimation of his brother officers and commanding officer than he, and his claims for promotion have been strongly urged by friends in both civil and military life. There is a pretty well-founded rumor that he has been brevetted a colonel, but the appointment has not yet reached him, through official channels. 'The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind fine.' When the official mill at Washington grinds out and delivers the appointment of Colonel to Captain Wing, all will agree that although it has ground too slowly, yet the work is exceedingly fine."

He was accordingly, soon after, brevetted successively major, lieutenant-colonel, and colonel. After the war he engaged in banking, first at Nashville, Tenn., and afterward at 18 Wall Street, New-York City. He is a member of the Union League Club, of New-York City, of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Commandery of the State of New-York, of the New England Society, of the Masonic Fraternity, and of the Church Club, and one of the founders of the Ohio Society of New-York. Much of his time for a few years he has been compelled by the state of his health to spend in milder climates. The last winter was passed in the South of France and in Italy, where he had an opportunity to indulge his taste for the fine arts. Since his return he has given a liberal portion of his time and heart to the publication of the present edition of this "Genealogical and Historical Register." He married in Cincinnati, Feb. 7, 1865, Mary Louisa, the daughter of Stephen and Mary Ann (Hardie) Scanlan,* born at Montreal, Canada, Jan. 13, 1843.

Ill health then compelled him to resign his commission, and to return to his former occupation as a farmer, at Gambier, Knox County, Ohio. On the 1st of October, 1863, he married Sarah Sawyer.

THEIR CHILDREN.

1. Marcus Tullius Cicero, born Sept. 18, 1864.

* Stephen Scanlan, whose native town was Ross, County Wexford, Ireland, was a graduate of the University of Dublin, born Dec. 26, 1798. He was of a restless disposition with a longing to see the New World, which the wars of the Revolution and 1812 had brought into such prominence, and was gratified in his desire by a wealthy uncle, Mr. Richard Keilly, a large ship-owner, who sent him to America as supercargo on one of his vessels. The young man discharged his trust faithfully, so far as a disposal of his valuable cargo was concerned, but allowed the vessel to sail for Ireland without him, to the great indignation of Mr. Keilly, who, as a consequence, ignored him in his will. Mr. Scanlan was soon appointed private secretary to Bishop Carroll, of Nova Scotia, at Halifax, where he met and married Miss Fitzmaurice, daughter of Major Fitz-maurice, of the British army. From Halifax he moved to Montreal, and there established what speedily became the leading grammar school in Canada. He was of a literary turn of mind, and a frequent and welcome contributor to periodicals and papers of the day, notably the "Vindicator," then a powerful and spirited political journal. He possessed a great fund of humor, as became his origin, his mother having been a Miss Power, full cousin of Tyrone Power, one of the greatest comedians of his or any other age. At Montreal, Mr. Scanlan lost his wife, leaving him with an infant daughter. A few years later he married Mary Ann Hardie, a native of Montreal, and the mother of Mary Louisa, wife of Charles Tudor Wing. She is now living in New-York. He died in Montreal, Feb. 11, 1879.

He was a graduate of Kenyon College, but, when the civil war broke out, he enlisted at New Orleans, in the Washington Artillery of the Confederate army, was engaged in the fight at Fort Hudson, swam the Mississippi to escape the Union gun-boats the night before the surrender, soon after joined Lee's army in Virginia, and was finally taken prisoner at Petersburg, and held at Point Lookout, until the war closed. For some years past he has been the principal of Montgomery Bell Academy, in Nashville, Tennessee, and all his life interested in the education of the young; his love for the work being attested by the fact that for nineteen years he has been superintendent of the Christ Church parish Sunday-school, at Nashville.

753. Harriet Janette, third daughter of Rev. Dr. M. T. C. and Frances A. (Evans) Wing (360), married, Aug. 21, 1869, Rev. Charles Arthur, a son of Edward S. Rand, of Boston, Mass. He was, like his father, a graduate of Harvard College, and became an Episcopal minister, being first called to Mansfield, Ohio, then to Woburn, Mass., and finally to Trinity Parish, in Haverhill, Mass. In Dec., 1883, he was chosen Dean of the Episcopal Convocation, but, as his health had given way under the severity of his labors, he was immediately afterward granted, by his people, a six-months' vacation, which he determined to spend with a brother residing in Florida; his wife, who was an invalid, accompanying him. They accordingly took passage, Jan. 17, 1884, in the steamship Columbus, for Savannah, with their only daughter, Fanny, about nine years of age, accompanied also by his father, Mr. Edward S. Rand, of Boston, and his wife. On the first night of the voyage, about four o'clock in the morning of the 18th, during a severe gale, the vessel struck upon a submerged reef of rocks and sand near Gay's Head, on the extreme west end of Martha's Vineyard, and in about twenty minutes it sunk. Of the eighty passengers, only nine were saved, among whom were none of the women or children. The entire party of the Rand family was lost, and not a single memento of them was ever recovered, except a stray trunk. A fellow-passenger, in an account of the scenes witnessed, mentioned an incident which his friends are confident referred to them: "When a panic had seized others, and death was certain, a husband and wife were seen, at that supreme moment, with blanched faces which told that they realized their peril, but perfectly calm. They stood together, clasping each other's hands, and, when the wreck careened with the gale from one side to the other, and the spray and waves were drenching them every moment, the husband turned and imprinted a kiss upon the lips of the companion of his life, and while thus embracing, a heavy sea broke over the wreck, and both were washed away." His friend, Rev. E. L. Drown, rector of St. Paul's, Boston, on the next Sunday, pronounced, in his own pulpit, a fervent eulogium, in which he spoke in exalted terms of his virtues and talents, and said that in him were combined "the gentleness and tenderness of the most refined woman, and the manhood and bravery of a hero." He was, at his death, about forty years of age, having been born Nov. 4, 1843.

781. Halsey Rogers, the oldest son of Daniel Wood and Rhoda (Stewart) Wing (375), was born at Sandy Hill, Washington County, N. Y., at that time one of the most active and flourishing villages between Albany and Montreal. At Fort Edward, where his father subsequently resided, he enjoyed the advantages of a good education and an early employment in an extensive business. At the age of sixteen he was sent to an academy which then possessed a high reputation at Lenox, Mass. After a three-years' course he matriculated and remained a short time at Yale College, but soon transferred his studies to Middlebury College, Vermont, where he entered the Sophomore class, and graduated with the highest honors of his class, Aug. 15, 1832. Soon after this he pursued the study of law in the office of Judge Samuel Cheever, of Albany, and was admitted to practice at the October term of the Supreme Court in 1834. While pursuing these studies he served as an assistant district attorney for Albany County. About this time he was awarded a gold medal by the Young Men's Association, of Albany, for an essay of distinguished merit (which was afterward printed by that body). In December following he was licensed as a solicitor in Chancery, and removed to Brockport, Monroe County, N. Y. He remained there but a short time, and removed to Buffalo in the same State, where he formed a partnership in business with Hon. Frederick P. Stevens. On the 31st of August, 1835, he married Harriet N. Walton, of Montpelier, Vt., who was born Jan. 14, 1815. In 1841 he removed to Glen's Falls, and was admitted as a counselor in the Supreme Court, and the following year as counselor in Chancery, and admitted to practice in the United States District Court of Northern New-York, and also in the United States Circuit Court. In 1843-44 he acted as County Superintendent of Common Schools, and in 1845 he became the first Judge of the county of Warren. In 1851 he was induced to enter a firm called the Jointa Lime Company, and the next year he and his brother-in-law, Lansing G. Taylor, purchased of Abraham Wing the "Old Wing Mills," and the accompanying lumber interests. After Mr. Taylor's death, about 1856, he became the sole proprietor of this latter property, the care of which so absorbed his energies that he gradually withdrew from his legal practice. He was from the first a warm supporter of the Democratic party, an earnest friend and worker in the cause of temperance, and a cordial promoter of education in every department. He was a regular attendant upon the ministrations of the Presbyterian Church, and contributed much every way to its support, especially in a season of embarrassment. At the outbreak of the civil war he promptly identified himself with the movements for the National Union, and the record which he has left of munificent contributions, unwearied self-sacrifice and heroic devotion to his country is one of which his family may well be proud. His last appearance in public was at a general festival for the benefit of the poor. The disease to which he finally fell a victim had been for years preying upon his physical energies, and he finally yielded up his life to it Jan. 26, 1870. Numerous testimonials from various legal, educational, and moral institutions of the vicinity indicate how much he was esteemed and his death lamented. Four children, with their mother, survive him.

836. Edward Rumsey, a son of Samuel M. and Emily (Weir) Wing (413), was educated at Center College, Ky., was a law student in the office of Chief-Justice Robertson, of Kentucky, practiced law in Louisville until the breaking out of the civil war, and during that war served on the staff of General James S. Jackson in the United States Army, and distinguished himself for ability and bravery at the battle of Perryville and other engagements. After the war he returned to the practice of law at Louisville. In 1869 he was the candidate of the Republicans for State Treasurer, but as his party was much in the minority, he was defeated, and the next year (1870) was appointed by General Grant United States Minister to Ecuador, being only twenty-four years of age, the youngest, it was said, who had ever received the office of foreign minister. The affairs of our government were in a very low state in the State to which he was accredited, but in a brief period he succeeded in counter-acting foreign opposition, and was pronounced in an official document "the most popular minister of any country that had ever come to Ecuador." During his term and through his influence three treaties were negotiated, and all duties were removed from American machinery, in consequence of which Americans were able to undersell all other foreigners in the market. For some time before his death he was anxious to return home on account of some unfavorable indications of failure in health, but no serious alarm was felt by him or his friends up to the last day of his life. He awoke early on the morning of June 11, 1874, at his home in Quito, with a sense of fullness in his head, and at six o'clock sprang from his bed with a cry of intense agony and at once fell dead. A post-mortem examination revealed a profuse congestion and effusion of the brain, though he was in other respects in good health. His funeral was attended by the entire diplomatic corps, the government officials, the principal native citizens and foreign residents, and a guard of honor composed of military officers of high rank, and a regiment of soldiers. His remains were interred in the Protestant burying-ground, and by a singular law of the land were not allowed to be removed from there for two years. One thousand dollars were appropriated by Congress for their removal to Kentucky. They came by way of New-York, were met at Louisville by the father, mother, and widow, and were interred at Owensborough, his former home. A eulogy was pronounced in Congress upon his personal and diplomatic character by Hon. S. S. Cox, of New-York, and in his native State the expressions of esteem and sadness at his loss were of the most exalted kind. His most decided political opponents in the heat of their contest had pronounced him an honor to a party which they considered no honor to him, an orator of superior powers and eloquence, and the ablest Republican speaker in the State. His personal appearance was remarkably attractive, his manner peculiarly brilliant and effective, his culture much beyond that of most professional men, and his social qualities of the most winning nature. The universal feeling in his native State was that Kentucky had lost in him one of the most promising sons which she had ever sent into public life. He had married, in 1866, Louise R., a daughter of Robert W. Scott, Esq., of Frankfort, Franklin County, Ky., but left no children.

896. Matthew Gregory, a son of Dr. Joel Allis and M. Gregory Wing (485), was born in Albany, N. Y., April 10, 1826. His early studies were under the direction of Dr. T. Romeyn Beck until he entered the Sophomore class of Yale College, where he graduated in 1847, and continued for some time in the philosophical department of that institution. His health being delicate, he sought a milder climate in 1849, at one of the Bahama Islands, and the next year in Louisiana and other South-western States. In 1852 he was induced to try the effect of a longer voyage by sea, and he sailed from New-York on the 12th of July. On reaching Marseilles he found himself much prostrated by his sickness on shipboard, and he left for Smyrna, in Asia Minor. There he seemed so much improved that he entertained hopes of a thorough restoration. Readily adapting himself to Oriental customs, he continued to reside among the Greeks and Armenians for about a year, visiting, meanwhile, Ephesus, Alexandria, and other places of historical interest. The journey from Smyrna to Constantinople he performed on horseback, and was in the latter city when the Turkish army left it for the Crimea. After several months there he came to Rome, where, allured by its antiquities, he remained for a year, and then leisurely made the tour of Italy. He resided for some months in Florence and Paris, and traveled through Germany and England, but soon returned to Paris. His health was now so much improved that after an absence of nearly six years he returned to America. In December, 1858, he went to Geneva, Ontario County, N. Y., where a number of his friends resided, with a view of making it his home; but the disease which had threatened him from the very commencement of life began there to assume more alarming manifestations. Near the close of 1859 he went to Fort Leavenworth, in Kansas, where he was overcome by violent hemorrhages from the lungs. Feeble as he was, however, he determined to push forward to what he supposed to be "the more vitalizing air of the plains of New Mexico." On a bed, in an ambulance, with a pair of mules and a Mexican driver, he joined a military train for Santa Fé, and for not less than ten weeks endured severe fatigue, constant travel, and peril from hostile Indians. While crossing the spurs of the Rocky Mountains near Fort Union, at an elevation of more than six thousand feet, he was for three days exposed to a pelting rain. His former symptoms were now much aggravated, and he reached Santa Fé on the 30th of June in a dying condition. After several days of terrible suffering he died on the 5th of July, 1860, aged 34 years. His funeral, under the direction of Captain Wainwright, of the army, was attended with every demonstration of respect to a gentleman and a stranger. He is said to have been a man of peculiar habits both of mind and life, since these were necessarily controlled by his condition. "He had a quick perception and a keen appreciation of the beautiful in nature and art, and from the resources with which his ample opportunities supplied him his mind had become well stored. His eye was well skilled to observe whatever came before him of the beauties of natural scenery, of architecture, of paintings, and of statuary, and his ear was delicately trained to enjoy the harmonies and melodies of music. His knowledge of languages and of English literature, his taste and skill in composition, his versatility and intelligence in conversation, and his warmth of friendship made him, wherever he went, the object of an affectionate and admiring interest. Notwithstanding his extreme feebleness, he seemed never to have known fear, and his life was one of more than ordinary adventure; and those who ministered to him in his last hours learned to love him, though he was too feeble after his arrival to speak to them more than a word."*

897. Mary, a daughter of Dr. Joel Allis and M. Gregory

* This account of Dr. M. G. Wing is taken, substantially, from an obituary in the Albany Evening Journal of July 31, 1860, signed S. D. W.

Wing (485), married Edward Frost, of Rochester, Monroe County, N. Y., and died a number of years since. They had but one child, a daughter, who died in infancy.

899. Jane R., a daughter of Walter S. and Elizabeth (Bates) Wing (490), was named after her grandmother, received an excellent education at a high-school for young ladies at Hyde Park, Dutchess County, N. Y., and was a teacher, first in a select school in her native village, then in a noted school in Palestine, Montgomery County, N. Y., and finally, and for many years in Baltimore, Md., where her health failed her and she was compelled to return to her native village, and died there, March 26, 1859.

(Bates) Wing (490), married Louisa Wilcox, and has, all his life, been principally occupied with farming, living first on a small farm within a half mile of the village of Morris, which he soon exchanged for a larger one a little farther from town. On this he resided until his health failed, when he removed to the village where he now lives. He has always been a warm advocate of temperance, says that he never drank a glass of ardent spirits, wine, or beer in his life, nor in late years even of cider, and has always been a zealous worker in behalf of temperance organizations and prohibition. During the civil war he was an enrolling officer, and an ardent supporter of the Government in all their measures to put down the Rebellion. In Whig and Republican times he was an ardent politician, but his temperance principles have prevented his election to many political offices. He has, however, not unfrequently been a candidate for office and a writer in public papers in behalf of prohibition.

JOHN D. WING DEAD.

After a comparatively short illness John D. Wing, president of the Wing & Evans Company, died at his residence, 16 W. 49th street, New York, on January 1. Mr. Wing was born in Ulster County, N. Y., on June 22, 1834, and when a child, moved with his parents to Dutchess county, N. Y., where he attended the Quaker school "Nine Partners," then so well known at Mechanic, Dutchess county, N. Y., and now called Millbrook. In after years he purchased this entire property, on which now stands his country home "Sandanona."

The deceased gentleman was of Quaker origin, a direct descendant of John and Deborah Wing, of Sandwich, Mass., who landed there in 1638. His mother, Anna Maria Cornell, descended from Governor Winthrop of Massachusetts and Capt. John Underhill, who at one time commanded the British forces in New England.

After leaving school Mr. Wing went to New York and was graduated from the Anthon Grammar School in College place. Young Wing showed a remarkable aptitude for affairs, and when only twenty-two sailed from New York via Panama for San Francisco, where he founded the firm of John D. Wing & Co., his associate being Joseph S. Paxson, of San Francisco, who was at the time State Treasurer of California. Those were the stirring times when the maintenance of law and order devolved upon the famous Vigilant Committee, upon which Mr. Wing served and in whose operations he took an active part.

After spending three years on the coast, Mr. Wing returned to New York, and in 1858, in conjunction with John Henry Evans, established the chemical brokerage house of Wing & Evans.

In November, 1865, he made his first visit to England, where he made connections with the different manufacturers and traders in those chemical industries which afterwards were merged in the United Alkali Co. In 1876 his firm was appointed agents for the United States, of the Brunner, Mond & Co., Ltd., and was the first to introduce ammoniate alkali into America. After some years, or to be more specific, in 1884 the firm of Wing & Evans became agents of the Solvay Process Co., of Syracuse. They have remained agents of both concerns ever since. Mr. Wing has been most prominently identified with alkali interests from the time he began his business career, his marked ability being held in high esteem by scientific as well as commercial communities. His old time friend and partner, Mr. Evans, died in 1889, but the firm name has remained unchanged and the concern was incorporated in 1905.

In 1859 Mr. Wing married Adelaide W. Hinman, who with two sons and one daughter, John Morgan Wing, L. Stuart Wing and Mrs. Austin Flint, Jr., survive.

He was in the battles of the Wilderness, and those flank movements which resulted in the investment of Richmond and Petersburg, and was promoted to be first lieutenant. During the assault upon the latter place his regiment was sent, with two other picked regiments, as a forlorn hope against the almost impregnable works. He survived the terrific explosion of the "Burnside Mine," but the undertaking failed, and Henry was among the prisoners. An eight months' confinement in the prisons of Columbia, S. C., was terminated by the burning of the city and the arrival of General Sherman. He was, however, so enfeebled, that he was sent to Annapolis, and as this was about the close of the war, he was honorably discharged, and went home to Glen's Falls. Before this, he had been made a first lieutenant. He then began a course of study at a commercial college in Springfield, Mass., where he formed the acquaintance of Miss Annie Jane Brown, whom he soon afterward married. In the autumn of 1866 he went South, and engaged in the lumbering trade in the vicinity of Memphis, Tenn. On his way home to attend the wedding of his brother he was attacked, at Cincinnati, by a malignant form of the chronic complaint which had been contracted during his military life, and he was obliged to retire to Covington, Ky., where he died July 24, 1868. The late Moses B. Sears, when writing in the "Lewiston Journal" of the descendants of Simeon Wing, says that this "father of the Wayne Wings" came to this town with his ten surviving children, that his grandchildren were seventy-six in number, and that the race has always been made up of stalwart, iron-framed, strong-minded, moral, industrious, and long-lived people. He describes them as remarkably clear-minded thinkers for themselves, pinning their faith on no one's sleeve, giving character and tone from the earliest settlement to the manners, morals, and religion of the inhabitants, and from their enterprise, industry, and fecundity spreading over a large district of country.

Our account of this branch of the family may be appropriately closed by a description of the cemetery which has been laid out and constructed by these people for their own especial use. The description has been given us by G. J. Wing, to whose interest and diligence we are indebted for the materials used in the previous notices of the family in that region. "It is by the roadside, on a rise of ground overlooking the Wing Pond, and a large portion of the town.* It is one hundred and four feet square, with a slight inclination toward the rising sun and the lake. It is surrounded by a nice bankment wall built of split granite. The ground has been dug over three feet in depth, the stones have been all removed, and the entire area graded. In the center is a circular plat, fourteen feet in diameter, on which stands a monument of cut granite which cost four hundred dollars. It is an octagon with a base four feet in diameter and sixteen

* "About the year 1781, the three brothers, Aaron, Allen, and Simeon, made their journey to the wilderness of Maine, and after months of travel through the dense forests, they located their claim on the west side of a beautiful little lake (two miles in length), in what is now the town of Wayne. They built their shanty and lived and worked together on their claim, until they were able to obtain a lawful title to the land. They then divided in severalty, each taking possession of his separate allotment. When their brother Thomas had purchased a large tract of land, and the water-power at the south end of the lake; Dr. Moses, a lot on the south-east side; and Ebenezer, farther north on the eastern shore, the little lake was almost surrounded by the possessions of these six brothers, and it was properly named 'Wing's Pond.' The cemetery above described was 'on the south line of the father's property, and overlooking the clear water of the lake and much of the surrounding country.'" From a MS. of Prof. George Wing, of Jacksonville, Ill.

inches in height, and having a wash around the upper edge. Upon this rests a plinth three feet two inches in diameter and twelve inches in height, with a tasteful molding around the top. Above this is the die, which is two feet and four inches in diameter at the base, and two feet in diameter at the top. Above this is the shaft, eighteen inches in diameter at the bottom, and rising seven feet, making the full height of the whole twelve feet. The lettering is in raised capitals. On the side of the die fronting the entrance is the name "Wing," and beneath it, on the plinth, the date "1871." On the other seven sides, facing the lots of the seven sons of Simeon, are their names in the following order, passing around to the right: Simeon, Allen, Ebenezer, Aaron, Moses, Thomas, and William. Around the central plat is a circular walk five and a half feet wide, outside of which is a burial plat nine feet wide, divided into seven lots, occupied by the seven sons of Simeon. Next is another circular walk six feet wide, beyond which is another circular burial plat, seventeen feet wide, designed for two tiers of graves for the descendants of the original Wing family. Outside of this plat is a third circular walk, seven feet wide, touching the four sides of the cemetery. There is likewise a walk from the entrance to the monument plat, cutting the other walks. The plats are graded one foot above the walks, and many of the lots are curbed with cut granite, the remainder being sodded at the edges. The walks are all graveled, and kept clear of weeds and grass. There is also a lot in each corner of the cemetery outside the outer walk. The curbings of the lots next the walks are of cut granite, curved to the circle, fourteen inches wide and ten inches high. Upon this curbing rests the marble headstones giving the names of the descendants from the first family. Thus a stranger may easily trace the genealogy.

"It is a beautiful resting-place for the dead. The cost of curbing one of the lots was a hundred and forty dollars, and that of walling and grading the cemetery, including the iron gateway, was a little over seven hundred dollars. There is a permanent fund of two hundred dollars deposited in the town treasury, the interest of which keeps the cemetery in repair. A row of maple trees runs along the roadside for thirty or forty rods, and another of elm runs around the other outside walls. Such a cemetery is indicative of the moral and religious sentiments of the people, and proves that they highly esteem the memory of their fathers."

SOME FAMILIES WITH INCOMPLETE RECORDS.

THERE are some branches of the family whose connection with the original stock cannot be traced with certainty. In some instances only one or two links are needful to the completeness of their genealogy. We have, however, collected sufficient records and traditions of them all to give them an appreciable interest. They may thus meet the eye of some who possess the items needed for a more complete account, or the study of them under more favorable circumstances may suggest the fortunate conjecture which so often is successful in such inquiries.

I. JOSEPH'S DESCENDANTS.

1155. Three brothers, Joseph, Daniel, and Jashub, are said to have come from England in a ship called Susan White. Of the two last we have no accounts, but Joseph is said, in the family records of his descendants, to have married, either before or after his arrival in this country, a wife named Deborah, and to have settled in Fairhaven, Bristol County, Mass.

1156. His son, Jabez,² was born in Fairhaven, 11th month, 1, 1728, and died there 3d month, 14, 1810, aged 81 years, 4 months, and 13 days. He was a tanner, and married Anna —, born in Sandwich, Mass., 2d month, 8, 1726, and died 5th month, 31, 1797, aged 71 years, 3 months, and 23 days. After the death of his first wife, Jabez Wing married Mary —, who was born in 1736, and died 8th month, 4, 1827.

1157. Joseph,³ a son of Jabez and Anna Wing (1156), married in Vermont, lived at White Creek, Adams County, where he died. After his death his widow went with some of her kindred to Ohio. They had three sons.

1158. Deborah,³ a daughter of Jabez and Anna Wing (1156), married Jonathan Mowry, a preacher among the Friends, and had three sons and six daughters, viz.: Caleb, Robert, Peleg, Rebecca, Anna, Eurina, Deborah, Dorcas, and Abigail.*

* (1) Caleb Mowry married Nancy Mowry Philena Mowry and had five sons; and Urania, who married Charles Bowen, of North- and had one son, Barnabas, who married bridge, Mass.; (2) Robert Mowry married

* There is another account in which John Wing (born 3d month, 17, 1752) and Margaret Buffam are said to have had three children, viz.: Buffam, Don Carlos (a blacksmith), and Margaret. But as I can have no doubt that both accounts refer to the same persons, I assume that the above, taken from the records of the Buffam family, is correct. According to it, Robert Buffam came originally from Yorkshire, England, in or near 1634, is mentioned in the records of Salem, Mass., in 1638, and died in that town probably in 1679, as his property was divided among his heirs that year. His wife, Tamsin (Bacon), was born in 1606, and died in 1688, and their children were Joshua and Caleb, and four daughters. Caleb (born in 1650), married Hannah, the daughter of Joseph Pope (who came from England with Robert Buffam), and had Caleb, Joseph, Benjamin, Jonathan, Robert, Hannah, and Tamsin. Benjamin, born in 1686, lived in Smithfield, R. I., married a Buxton, and had Benjamin and Joseph, and five daughters. Joseph, born in 1717, and died in 1796, married Margaret Osborne (born in 1719), and had Jedediah, born in 1737, John, born in 1739, William, born in 1741, David, born in 1743, Comfort, born in 1745, Elizabeth, born in 1747, Hannah, born in 1749, Ann, born in 1751, James, born in 1753 or 1757, Joseph, born in 1753 or 1754, Margaret, born Nov. 28, 1755, Richard and Abigail (twins), born in 1760, Benjamin, born in 1762.

went to reside in Macedon, Wayne County, N. Y., where he died March 26, 1844, in the ninety-fifth year of his age. He was a blacksmith, and perhaps resided in Vermont before his removal to Macedon. He had seven children, including a daughter named Margaret.

Jashub Wing, after the death of his first wife, married Lilius Harris, and had two sons, viz.: Smith and Harris. He died 11th month, 7, 1814.

1163. Benjamin,³ a son of Jabez and Anna Wing (1156), married Sarah Mowry, lived at White Creek; Washington County, N. Y., and had David, Charles, George, and Avis (who married a wealthy farmer and had one daughter and eight sons). Benjamin Wing died in the 6th month, 1813.

He was a co-laborer with Gerritt Smith and Alvin Stewart, and was regarded as one of the most eloquent and earnest speakers of that region. He was, indeed, believed to have killed himself by overwork in the cause. He died about 1865, and a public monument was erected to his memory in Mexico, Oswego County, N. Y., bearing the inscription, "Erected by the Friends of Freedom." The oration at the unveiling of this monument was delivered by Frederick Douglass, and the entire proceedings and addresses were published in a pamphlet. VIII. ROBERT WING, OF BOSTON.

1292. Robert Wing. In April, 1634, we find recorded in the public records the arrival at Boston of the ship Francis, John Cutting, master, with a number of passengers, whose names and ages are given. Among these are mentioned Robert Winge, aged 60, and his wife, Judith, aged 43, who presented a certificate of which the following is the conclusion after giving their names: "These persons took the oath of allegiance and supremacy at his Majesty's Custom House before his Majesty's officers at Ipswich, in the county of Suffolk, England, according to the order of the Lords and others of his Majesty's most Honorable Privy Council, the 13th day of November, 1634. Ipswich Custom House. Thomas Clerc, Sec'y, Philip Browne, Pr. Custr., Ed^d Mann, Compt." This was one year and nine months later than the arrival of Stephen Batchelder and his company on the same ship, and probably from the same port. Whether there was any near relationship between this Robert and John Wing has not yet been ascertained. He settled at Boston, where his wife, Judith, soon died, and he married Joan or Johanna, who survived him. In 1647 he prayed the General Court for release from a fine which had for some reason been imposed on him, and for relief in his circumstances, inasmuch as he was "now above 80 years old, with nothing to live on, and having four small children." Savage suggests that according to this he had grown old rather rapidly since his arrival in America, and that one or two of his children must have died, since the births and baptisms of not less than six are mentioned in the public records. The latter suggestion is probable, but the other discrepancy may be accounted for by the fact that in public registers round numbers are frequently used and perfect accuracy is not always studied. On the 21st day of the ninth month, 1651, "Thomas Walker, of Boston, and Elizabeth Baker, wife to Alexander Baker, of Boston, deposed that Robert Winge, late of Boston, being on his death-bed, sent for them and said in their presence that he would leave all he had into his wife's hands, praying her to be good to his children; that this was three days before he died, and that this was his last will and testament. It was accordingly ordered that Johanna Wing, wife to Robert Wing, deceased, shall be responsible to the four children she had by him. Edward Rawson, Recorder." The inventory of his estate was found to be £124, 7s. 6d. The names of his children by Johanna were: John, born July 22, 1637; Hannah, born Feb. 14, 1640 (O. S.); Jacob, born July 31, 1642; all baptized Oct. 16, 1642; Elizabeth, born July 5, 1644; Joseph, born Oct. 13, baptized Nov. 1, 1646; and Benjamin, baptized Feb. 18, 1649, aged seven days.*

1293. John, the oldest son of Robert and Johanna Wing, was a shopkeeper and a sea captain in Boston, and appears to have been a very thrifty and energetic man. He was able, as early as 1674, to give a bond for £4200, secured by a mortgage on what was called the "Castle Tavern," a valuable property in Boston near the Common, which was discharged in three years. He was also the owner of a "mansion, brew-house, stable, and other buildings in Boston near the Castle Tavern." In his will, dated Feb. 24, 1701, probated March 12, 1702 or 1703, he styles himself "a mariner," and "gives, devises and bequeathes to his son, John, and to his heirs and assigns forever," some "housing and land lying near the town dock in Boston, together with a brick messuage thereon standing, formerly known by the name of the George Tavern, and all the edifices thereunto belonging which I have since built upon the said land, which in the whole cost me about £3400, and which have a charge or incumbrance upon them of £1000 due to Mr. William Brown, and is now possessed by William Pemberton." This latter property was made over by his son, John, by deed dated April 9, 1708, to said William Pemberton. The will also makes mention of his wife, Joshabeth, his sons, Robert, John, and Ebenezer, his daughters, Sarah Tomlin and Elizabeth Dowell, and his grandchildren, Sarah and Thomas Tomlin, and James Dowell. In the will of John Baker, John Wing is named the "master and commander of the ship Hercules" which was afterward lost. A street in Boston, now called Elm Street, was long called Wing's and still earlier Hudson's Lane, from the successive owners of the mansion, brew-house, etc., above mentioned, located upon this street. He was, in 1675, an ensign (under Captain Daniel Hinchman), a lieutenant in 1683, and a captain in 1684-85 in the Honorable Artillery Company, of Boston. He was probably the "Captain Wing who, assisted by Captain Bancroft, went through with the work of laying the foundations of a fort" which was pronounced by Cotton Mather to be "the finest thing which had been seen in these parts of America." This was Fort William Henry, at Penmaquid, on the coast of the Province of Maine. He was then captain of a company among the 450 men raised in the Province of Massachusetts Bay by its governor, Sir William Phips, under instructions from England. The fort was not long maintained, in consequence of the poverty of the country, but it was then looked upon as a work of more than ordinary skill, and the means of bringing the Indians to terms. In 1793 articles of agreement were subscribed by thirteen "Sagamores and chief Captains of all the Indians belonging to the several Rivers of Penobscote and Kennebeck, Amaroscogin and Saco, parts of the Province of Massachusetts Bay, that the war may be put to an end." On the part of the English this document was signed by three commissioners, of whom John Wing was the first in order.* He married Joshabeth, a daughter of James Davis, a mariner, a member of the church, and a freeman in Boston in 1635. His children were: John, born Aug. 14, 1660, died Aug. 26, 1660; Joanna, born Sept. 4, 1662; Sarah, born May 3, 1664 (these three died young); Sarah, again, born Feb. 9, 1666; Joshabeth, born Dec. 15, 1667; Ebenezer, born Oct. 15, 1669; Elizabeth, born Sept. 19, 1671; Robert, born Sept. 8, 1673; John, again, born Aug. 7, 1678; and Joanna, again, born Nov. 25, 1680.

John Langley, of Providence, R. I., in a record kept by himself, under date of 1810 says: "My grandmother whose maiden name was Mary King, was born Feb. 4, 1676. She married — Wing, and their first son, Robert, was born Dec. 20, 1699. I am satisfied that the descendants of said Wing have resided at Little Choptank, or vicinity, in Virginia, for nearly a century."† On the 18th of March, 1639, the court "allowed Goodman Winge sixpence for attendance at an inquest respecting the death of Peter Fitchew."‡

He was a farmer, and resided in Hinesburgh.

1301. Rhetta Wing was born at Big Flats, Chemung County, N. Y., Feb. 20, 1843, and was the daughter of Orren and Mary Maria (Deets) Wing (see 280). She married, at Big Flats, Nov. 3, 1867, Joseph Henry Barron, born at Norwalk, Conn., March 31, 1840. They settled at Elmira, N. Y., and were living there in 1874, doing business under the firm of White & Barron, boot and shoe makers.

1302. One by the name of Wing married Jane Lobdell, of North Salem, Westchester County, N. Y., a daughter of Daniel and Sally Lobdell of that place.

1303. Another of that name was living at Leeds, about twenty miles from Brockville, in Upper Canada, as late as 1873. He married a daughter of William and Clarissa (Whitney) Woolley, from Danbury, Conn., but at that time living in Leeds. He was said to have had two sons and a son-in-law named Redding, all living near the same place. "Whitney Family," Vol. I., p. 667.

Soon after his marriage, he enlisted as a soldier in the Revolutionary army, was killed, and his body was never found by his friends. There is probably an error in this tradition, and he was more likely one of the descendants of the original progenitor, John, of Sandwich, many of whom, just before the Revolutionary War, went from Cape Cod to the different new settlements in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, and New-York. After his death a son was born and named after his father Charles.

1308. Among those of the name of Wing besides those who have been mentioned, who have graduated at some college, are: Augustus, at Amherst, in 1839, ordained a preacher and died in 1876, aged 67; George M., at Dartmouth, in 1866, and master of arts; Zacharias P., at Bowdoin, in 1874, a physician, deceased.

Wythe, of Georgetown, Col., and himself. His father, Capt. Clifton, died when he was but eight years old. A son of his sister, Mrs. Briggs, of Marion, named Paul W., writes (Feb. 8, 1882) that his mother lately died there, and that her grandfather's name was Shubael.

1310. Charles Wing is a jeweler in New-York City, and says that his father, Stephen, went from Wethersfield, Conn., as a soldier in the war of 1812, but settled in Verona, Oneida County, N. He himself married a Miss Smith, of Scriba, Oswego County, N. Y.

1311. Frederick Wing has long done business as a builder in New Orleans, La., and is said to have accumulated a large property, and to be an intelligent and generous man.

APPENDIX.

I. SOME NOTICES OF THE WINGS OF ENGLAND.

FAMILY bearing the name of "Winge" is reported to have come from Wales at an early period, and to have settled, first, at Great Ponton near Grantham, county of Lincoln. One named Theodore Wing is mentioned among the retainers in the Court of Henry VII., A. D. 1485-1509; but the first (1) of whom we have any genealogical notice resided at Great Ponton, in the south-western part of Lincolnshire, called Kesteven. (2) A son of his is also said to have lived in North Luffenham, a parish in the neighboring county of Rutland. "The last [of one branch] of this family (Thomas and Anne, children of Thomas and Mary) left that vicinity about 1795, the small-pox being very fatal in the village." (3) Vincent Wing, a son of the second above mentioned, was baptized in the parish church of North Luffenham, March 24, 1587, where he continued to reside, and was buried Feb. 20, 1660, aged 73. His wife's name was Alice, and she was also buried there, Dec. 2, 1657. He had a brother John, who had a son named Mark, baptized in the same parish, Aug. 24, 1600. Vincent's children were: Vincent, born at North Luffenham, April 9, and baptized April 11, 1619; Solomon, baptized April 8, 1621, and married, in North Luffenham, to Anne Wiston, of the same place, Oct. 24, 1643; Samuel, baptized Jan. 5, 1625; and Moses, baptized Oct. 4, 1629, and living in 1668.

In the Fourth Generation, Vincent, the oldest son of Vincent Wing, was "the famous mathematician and astrologer," who is reputed to have "forecast his own death," which took place Sept. 20, 1668, when he was 49 years of age. He was buried at North Luffenham, Sept. 21, 1668. He was the author of many published works, principally relating to astronomy, which in that time was studied almost exclusively for its practical bearing upon astrology.* He resided at North Luffenham, and appears to have been highly esteemed in his day for learning and originality. A quarto volume, entitled "A Brief Relation of the Life and Death of the late famous Mathematician and Astrologer, Vincent Wing," was published by John Gadbury, at London, in 1670. He had two sons and five daughters, viz.: Vincent, baptized Sept. 7, 1656; James, of

S.," etc., 1665, 12mo (Thomas Streete replied by "Wing's" Exam. Examined, etc., 1667 quarto); "Ephemerides," from 1652 to 1658, quarto; "Ephemerides for 30 years with Computatio Catholica," 1669, 12mo; "Art of Surveying," as also "Scientia Stellarum," edited by his nephew, John, 1700, folio; A book and sheet almanac was published by him for the Stationers' Company, the latter of which has been continued annually under his name until near the present time. See Lowndes' "Bibliographer's Manual," published by Bohn, Vol. V., part II.; Johnson's "New Univ. Encyclo.," and Allibone's "Dict. of English and American Authors."

Stamford, baptized Sept. 29, 1661, and living in 1668; Elizabeth, Mary, Alice, Elizabeth, and Catharine. Moses, the third son, also had two sons, viz.: William and John, born in 1643.

In the Fifth Generation, Vincent, the son of Vincent, inherited his father's estate at North Luffenham, was living in 1675, and was the author of an almanac for 1670, which he entitled "Olympia Donata." William, the son of Moses, married Elizabeth —, resided at Pickworth, in the parish of Bridge Casterton, county of Rutland, and had William, John (baptized April 5, 1662), and Dorothy (baptized Dec. 5, 1665). John, the son of Moses, married Anne (? Mallory), was coroner, edited and much enlarged his uncle Vincent's "Art of Surveying," in 1700, edited an almanac in 1710, was buried in Pickworth, Nov. 26, 1726,* and had Vincent (buried June 27, 1734), Aaron (buried March 12, 1735), Moses, Jane (buried Dec. 10, 1729), and Katharine.

In the Sixth Generation, William, the elder son of William and Elizabeth, resided at Pickworth, married Anne —, and had William, baptized, Dec. 31, 1674; John, the younger son of William and Elizabeth, married, Sept. 1, 1687, Sarah Hyfield, of Osbournby, Lincoln County, was buried Sept. 2, 1746, and had Moses, buried at Pickworth,

* John Wing published also "Heptarchia Mathematica, or An Epitome of Arithmetic, Geometry," etc., London, 1693, 8vo. "Scientia Stellarum, or The Starry Science," was published by "John Winge Philomath, in folio, and republished by Vincent Wing in 1700." Allibone's Dictionary. For many years "Wing's Almanac" was one of the most popular annuals in London. The monopoly of the trade in almanacs was granted by James First to the Universities and the Company of Stationers in London, and few names have been held in higher honor by the latter society than those of Vincent and Tycho Wing. Their works and their portraits are preserved in the Society's hall, and their authority is often quoted at the present time in some departments of science cultivated by that company.

April 14, 1692; Seth, baptized at Pickworth, Jan. 29, 1703, and buried there, April 14, 1704; Sarah, baptized, Dec. 29, 1690; Priscilla, baptized, March 12, 1691-92; Elizabeth, baptized, March 2, 1694-95; Jane, baptized, Oct. 14, 1700, buried Aug. 28, 1712; Abigail, baptized, June 13, 1702; and Tycho, baptized at Pickworth, May 9, 1696.

In the Seventh Generation, Tycho, the younger son of John and Sarah (Hyfield) Wing, married, at Pickworth, April 18, 1722, Eleanor, the daughter of Conyers Peach, and became, like his relative Vincent, distinguished for his astronomical learning. Rev. Dr. Stukely, in his diary, says he "spent many agreeable hours at Stamford and Pickworth, with Mr. Tycho Wing, the great Lincolnshire Astronomer." A portrait of him by J. Vanderbank, dated 1731, is preserved with much respect in the Hall of the Stationers' Company, London.* He was coroner for Rutland County from 1727 to 1742, died on Easter Monday, April 16, 1750, and was buried at Pickworth, April 19. He had four sons and one daughter, viz.: John, baptized, Nov. 3, 1723; Tycho, baptized, April 22, 1726; Vincent, baptized, Dec. 10, 1727; Conyers, baptized, June 29, 1734, and buried March 15, 1734-35; Sarah (Dexter), baptized, Nov. 26, 1724. His wife died April 18, 1722, aged 63.

In the Eighth Generation, John, the son of Tycho and Eleanor (Peach) Wing, married, June 3, 1751, Anne, the

* The portrait of Vincent Wing, by T. Cross, in the "Astronomia Britannica," has been wrought in terra-cotta at full length by Bashfield, of Stamford, by order of William Wing, of Market Overton, and "represents him with very lively and expressive features which are well painted with considerable warmth of coloring, his right hand resting on a celestial sphere, his collar open, and a loose drapery over his shoulders." Photographs of his and Tycho Wing's portraits have been taken by William Wing, and some of these are in the possession of the writer of this work.

There are two parishes in England which are known by the name of Wing, and we may reasonably assume that they are in some way connected with branches of the family so named. Both of them contain a large population and are valuable livings. One of these is in the same county as that of the family just mentioned, viz.: Rutland, Uppingham, Diocese of Peterborough, population 302, value of living 340 pounds; and the other is in Bucks County, Leighton Buzzard, Diocese of Lincoln, population 1274, value of living 338 pounds. In the early part of the seventeenth century a minister named John Wing was pastor of an English congregation in Flushing, in the Island of Walcheren, Province of Zealand in Holland, and was the author of a number of religious publications.* The "Clergy List" gives the names of several clergymen besides those mentioned in our notices, and the London Directory for 1880 contains the names of George Wing, 120 Church Road, Islington, N.; Thomas William Wing, 83 Piccadilly, W., and 30 Brunswick Terrace, Brighton; and William Wing, 25 Amwell Street, Pentonville. In a "List of Pedigrees contained in William Pavor's Consolidated Visitation of Yorkshire," the name of Wing is given with the remark that "the generation in that region became extinct between 1584 and 1612.† In the British Museum are some memoranda relating to a family bearing the name of Wing, at Bury St. Edmund's, and Mildenhall, in the county of Suffolk, and a "copy of a letter from Mr. Frederick Wing to Dr. Jermyn, dated Bury St. Edmund's, June 11, 1840." As there are no pedigrees or dates given with anything approaching completeness, the accompanying names and memoranda are not here copied, but some extracts from the letter will be of interest.

* The preceding account of the twelve generations of the Wings of England is taken principally from a pamphlet, entitled "Pedigree of the Family of Wing, of North Luffenham and Market Overton, County of Rutland, and of Thorney in the Isle of Ely, County of Cambridge. Compiled by Everard Green, F. S. A., from documents in the possession of William Wing, of Market Overton, Esq." London, 1886, 12 pp.

by God's grace not one of them has ever been convicted at our assizes or sessions of any crime that I am aware of. I am the eldest son of Abraham Wing, who died in 1804; I am in my fifty-second year, and I was born at Mildenhall in this county, where my family have been settled ever since the reign of Queen Elizabeth and probably before that period, and where, as farmers, they have occupied and cultivated their own estates. They have also held occupations under the Banbury family, who are owners of about 10,000 acres of land in that extensive parish. The armorial bearings assigned them are [here is given the exact description copied hereafter from Sir John Bernard's "General Armory of England"]—but I am not aware that the crown ever made them any special grant of these bearings. I cannot, however, say, for I never searched the college of arms to find one. I still retain a small patrimonial estate at the hamlet of Beck Row in Mildenhall of the value of about £200 per annum of which my ancestors have been owners and cultivators for ages. I am an attorney at law and solicitor in this town, where I have practiced my profession for the last thirty years. I have one son and six daughters, none of whom are at present married. Several of my cousins occupy farms of their own at Mildenhall. I have two sisters, married and settled, one in Bedfordshire, from which county I also married my wife, she being one of the daughters of the late Mr. Richard Gresham, the old and confidential land-agent of the late Sir George Osborne, of Chicksands Priory; and my other sister is in Buckinghamshire. My youngest brother, Leonard Wing, was an attorney at Stow-Market, and died there aged about twenty-one in the year 1817 (a bachelor, greatly regretted and respected), from the burst of a blood-vessel. My brother, next older to him, was in the naval service of the East India Company, and died May 21, 1811, on board the Canton East Indiaman, of which ship he was the sixth officer on his return home from China. My other only brother, Abraham Wing, now living, next in in age to and about two years younger than myself, is living at Aylesborough in Buckinghamshire, and is a land-agent and valuer, and steward for Earl Stanhope Russell and other families in that county. He is married and has no family, but has, by his industry, talents, and success in life, become the owner of landed property in Bucks, and amongst the rest of an estate at Wing in that county which he has recently purchased. I trouble you at this length, not, I trust, from any ostentation, but because you require it of me. I send you at foot, a sketch of my family pedigree for six generations. Whether the Wings came originally from Wing in Bucks I do not know.

"I am, sir,

"FREDERICK WING."

To this last remark it may be added that we have equal reason to question whether they did not come from Wing, the other parish mentioned above, in Rutlandshire, next to North Luffenham, where Vincent Wing and a long line of descendants were born.

II. COAT OF ARMS.

IT has been said that a fondness for armorial bearings and family crests is general and increasing in this country. Many exhibit this by having them engraven on their plate, seals, carriages, and note-paper, as if they were entitled to them by any kind of kinship, however distant, with a titled family in Europe. Even the "differences" which distinguish the various branches of such a family from each other have been copied and thus appropriated. Such persons seem to forget that only those who are within certain degrees of relationship are entitled to such a distinction. It were better, perhaps, that all such tokens of gentility should in this country be disregarded. If, however, some notice be given to them as indications of historic truth, we see nothing objectionable. For many generations, we have no reason to believe that any persons bearing the name of Wing have been distinguishable among the titled gentry of England. And yet we have casually met with a "coat of arms" in slightly different forms, which professes to have been given to one bearing the family name. In Sir John Bernard's "Encyclopædia or General Armory of England, Scotland, and Ireland," we find what purports to be "The Wing Armour, County of Rutland," accompanied by the heraldic inscription: "ARMS—per pale, argent and vert—a maunch counter-changed. CREST—a maunch per pale, argent and vert, between two wings or." Two pictures of such a crest are in this country: one in the possession of Henry F. Wing, of Grafton, Mass., who received it from James Wing, of New-York, and he from a friend in England; and the other in the possession of the family of the late Hon. Warner Wing, of Monroe, Mich. The mottoes found on these crests, as they were altogether commonplace and not essential to the escutcheon, were omitted by the engraver. One of them was, "Tempus fugit," and the other, "Tout pour Dieu et ma patrie." The picture was indorsed: "The Arms of Wing, as borne by Theodore Wing, Warden of the Wards and Liveries to King Henry VII." The circumstances in which this crest has come to our notice were supposed to be a sufficient guarantee of its genuineness, and it has since been confirmed by letters from different persons in England. In explanation of the terms given in the description, we remark that in heraldic language, "arms" signifies the devices borne on shields or coat armor, and in the present instance they were of the class of concession, granted or permitted by sovereigns to individuals, which, in the next generation, became hereditary, and were borne formerly on the mantle or surcoat (hence the phrase coat of arms), or more recently on carriages and articles of furniture. In our description, the arms and crest are given. The arms were the figures or charge which was pictured on a shield. The phrase "per pale" (from palus, a stake) signifies that the field or charge is divided into two equal parts by a perpendicular line with a different field on each side of it. It is then said to be divided (or party) per pale. "Argent and vert" are the colors in which the field or the figures are depicted. They were designated either by "metals or colors." In the present instance the metal was argent or silver (white), and the color was vert or green. The metals and colors are usually indicated in a drawing or engraving by lines or dots; and in our engraving the silver is, according to the rule, plain, and the green is represented by diagonal lines from the right corner (the upper corner on the left of the reader) down to the opposite base corner. The left half of the shield is covered with lines to signify its green color, and diapered with small figures which have no signification but to relieve the monotony of so much surface. "A maunch" is a sort of old-fashioned sleeve with long-hanging ends; in our engraving it is the central figure, extending on both sides of the pale. "Counter-changed" signifies that the field is of two tinctures, metal and color, and that the charge or figure depicted upon it partakes of both; the part of the figure which is of metal lying upon the color, and the part which is of color lying upon the metal (since no metal was ever allowed to be placed upon metal, or color upon color). The "Crest" (from the Latin crista, a comb or tuft), which was worn usually on the top of the helmet, is in the present case "a maunch per pale, argent and vert, between two wings or—i. e., a sleeve, as in the shield, between two wings, which are of gold metal (yellow, represented in the engraving by dots). The dexter end of the sleeve has a tassel pendant, in or (gold metal).

Between the lower arms and the upper crest, the artist has presented us with the "wreath" (bandeau or torse), which was usually worn on the helmet, between it and the crest, supporting the latter. It was composed of two cords of silk or cloth twisted together, the one tinctured of the principal metal (in this case silver argent or white) and the other of the principal color (vert or green), as in the arms. Frequently a scroll was added to or put around the armor, on which was inscribed a motto or sentence which expressed the sentiment which some portion of the family especially cherished.

CORRECTIONS AND ADDITIONS.

The following corrections and additions were made and received too late to be incorporated in their proper places in the body of the work:

On pages 28 (twice) and 32, Edmund should be substituted for Edward.

On page 67, in the 8th and 9th lines of paragraph 21, for the numeral 62 substitute 63, and for 63 substitute 64.

On pages 102 and 104, in paragraphs 105, 106, and 107, instead of the numeral 42 put 43.

On p. 283, substitute for paragraph 561 the following, viz.:

He also built flour-mills and opened stores for general merchandise in Greenwich, Coleraine, N. H., and Walworth, N. H., established an extensive line of stage-coaches, invented and developed some ingenious and complicated machinery for manufacturing sheet-cards, formed a library association for the town, was a postmaster and a justice of the peace for a quarter of a century, was a prominent member of the Masonic Fraternity, was a graceful writer and a fluent speaker, was noted for his humor and power of acting and imitation, was generous in the use of his gains, and was very energetic in everything he undertook. In 1829 he lost heavily in his business and was obliged to make an assignment of his property. He then went to Waterford, N. Y., where he was an engineer and a superintendent of works. Finally he removed to St. Clair, Michigan, where he established some mills for which he invented the hydraulic motive power. In 1838 he was taken with gastric fever and died, aged 51 years. About the year 1816 he married Abigail, the daughter of Captain John White, of Barre, Mass.

merchant, an alderman, and a County Drain Commissioner in that city. He is now retired from active business.

938c. Ancil Allen, a son of Warren Perry Wing (561), married Ida Masch (born in 1839 and died June 9, 1873), and they have had Abigail M., born March 17, 1860, Ida J., born Feb. 19, 1862 (married, Jan. 25, 1883, to Charles Sutter, of Detroit), and Charles F., born Nov. 26, 1867 (a painter).

On p. 445, add at the end of paragraph 1137, He was married, April 17, 1888, to Bertha L. Hurlbut.

On p. 474, instead of the last sentence of paragraph 781, read thus: His wife, Harriet N., died in June, 1887.

On page 474, at the close of paragraph 1240, after the word "died," insert the word "unmarried"; at the close of paragraph 1241, add the words "he died April 23, 1839"; and among the names of the children change Elizabeth into Eliza.

On page 477, in the first line of paragraph 1245, insert, after (1240), "was born in 1775, and." In the fourth line of the same paragraph erase "a gentleman named," and substitute "Ambrose." In the fifth line of the same, after the word "son," insert "Henry in Jersey City, N. J., where she died May 21, 1853." Instead of the sentence beginning with the word "Henry," substitute the following, viz: "(1) Henry was born in Hartford, Sept. 10, 1799, and married; first, Nov. 5, 1829, Lucretia, the daughter of Elisha and Fanny (Boardman) Abel (who was born May 1, 1808, and died Feb. 13, 1835), and second, June 24, 1838, Adeline Matilda Wilmurt, of Middletown, Conn., who died in October, 1847. He died Dec. 25, 1863." In the same paragraph, for the remainder of the paragraph, after the words "His oldest son, Henry, died in New-York," read as follows, viz: "in November, 1868, leaving a daughter and two sons, who are still there and are all married. His eldest daughter, Mary, married George L. Bulkley, who lives in Hartford, Conn., and has had by her two sons and a daughter. His second daughter, Lucretia, married Stephen Terry, a lawyer, who resides in Hartford. Of his three children by his second marriage, George died unmarried; Adeline married Charles E. Bulkley (a brother of George L.), and died in New-York City, leaving one son, Frederick Stephen, who married, lives in New-York City, and has had two daughters; (2) Edward, the second son of Elizabeth, was born about 1803, and died in early childhood; (3) Elizabeth, a daughter of the same, was born about 1805, and married Asher Waterman Roberts, who lived in Hartford and afterward in Philadelphia, but died in Hartford, Conn., Jan. 23, 1870, leaving no children; (4) Mary, the youngest child of the same, was born about 1808, and died unmarried in Philadelphia, May 14, 1841."

The first word in paragraph 1247, on page 478, should read "Elmina"; the first word in paragraph 1248 should be "Eliza" instead of Elizabeth; and in the fourth line of the same erase the words "and removed to St. Louis, Mo."

In the same paragraph in the fifth line, after 1879, insert the words "and she died July 15, 1886," instead of the words "but she is still living in East Hartford."

In the same paragraph, after the words in the fourth line from the bottom of the page, 479, "Hartford, Conn.," let the sentence read thus: "Born Jan. 31, 1829, and after remaining a few years in Hartford, he removed to St. Louis, Mo.; their children were: Charles Elliott," etc., as on page 479.

On page 479, in the middle of the page, instead of the part of a sentence which begins with "where she still lives," and ends with "John W.," substitute the following, viz: "lives in Hartford, Conn., and has three children, viz.:

Lucy Deming (born about 1863, and living unmarried in Hartford), Charles Hodgman (born about 1865, married, and living in Caddo, Indian Ter.), and Edward William (born in 1876, and living with his mother); (4) Mary, born Oct. 24, 1834, married, Dec. 29, 1862, Oliver Hurd, of East Hartford, Conn., and died June 14, 1885, leaving one son, Charles; (5) Antoinette, born Feb. 9, 1837, and married, May 28, 1862, to Franklin Green Comstock, of East Hartford, where she died June 12, 1883, leaving two daughters and one son, viz.: Annie Tracy (who married, in November, 1882, Milton E. Ensign), Amy Green, and Harry Franklin; (6) Silvanus, born March 18, 1840, and died Sept. 2, 1843; and (7) John W." Add also to the same paragraph at the close, "he lives at Sweetwater, Texas."

IX. A FAMILY FROM ENGLAND.

There were three brothers who are thought to have come together from England, one of whom is said to have been the master of a whaling vessel, and one of the others had four sons, viz.: Turner, John, Ward, and Thomas; and two daughters, one of whom was named Phebe, and the other died early.

1. Turner was born probably in Rhode Island or eastern Massachusetts, married a Whitcomb, who died in 1824, was a farmer, lived for a time in Canada East, where all his children were born, and then in Rutland, Vt., where he died in 1830. He had (1) Jason, (2) Stephen Roe, (3) Thomas, (4) Turner, (5) Benjamin Dudley, (6) Lucy, who died very young, (7) Polly, who married Levi Stephens, of Canada East, who died recently, (8) Diana, who died when 14 or 15 years old, and (9) Lucena, who is probably now living with a nephew, Dr. A. D. Stephens, at Dunham Flats, Canada East.

Jason, a son of Turner Wing, married Sarah Pengo, of Mount Holly, Vt., lived awhile in Lower Canada, then in Michigan, and died Oct. 1, 1852. His wife died in Canada in 1848. His children were: (1) Polly, (2) Dolly, (3) Sylvester, (4) Turner G., (5) Diana, who died when she was but 14 or 15 years of age, (6) Charles, (7) Jason, (8) Lucy, (9) Rhoda, (10) Jane, (11) Phurina, and (12) Malvina. Of these Polly, Sylvester, Rhoda, and Jane are deceased.

Turner G., the fourth of Jason's children was born at Dunham Flats, Canada East, March 31, 1821, and has been married twice. His present wife is Louisa Kinker, of Pennsylvania. He is a butcher, and resides in Ogden, Boone County, Iowa. By his first marriage he had Anastasia, Ida, and Turner; and by his second, Floyd. One of his children is a painter in Chicago, and another married Rev. C. W. Russell, and resides in Chicago. A daughter resides in Nebraska.

2. John, a brother of Turner (1), had four sons and three daughters, viz.: (1) John, (2) Thomas, (3) Jarvis, (4) Richard, (5) Phebe, (6) Elnora, and (7) Sophia.

3. Ward, a brother of the same, had five sons and two daughters, viz.: (1) Hiram, (2) Bailey, (3) George, (4) Jonas, (5) Hosea, (6) Sarah, and (7) Ann.

4. Thomas, a brother of the same, had four sons and two daughters, viz.: (1) Orange, (2) Gardner, (3) Bailey, (4) Turner, (5) Atty [or Hattie], and (6) Elmira. One of these sons lives in DeKalb, Ill., and is about 72 years of age.

On page 495, the chapter entitled Miscellaneous Notices should be numbered X.

On page 498, fifth line from the top, the date 1874 should be 1834.

In Index I, on page 525, in the fourth line from the top of the first column, the name Almira should be erased; and on page 533, after the twelfth line from the bottom of the first column, insert Eliza (Deming) 1241, 1248; erase the fourth line from the bottom of the second column; and on page 534, after "Elmer E., 982," insert Elmina, 1247.
